e-lec-tion (ē-lek'shōn), n. [L. electio(n-).] The act of electing; selection; choice; also, the selection of a person or persons for office by vote; by extension, a public vote upon a proposition submitted; in theol., the choice by God of particular individuals, as for a particular work, or for mercy or favor, esp. for salvation or eternal life; also, those elected by God.—e-lec-tion-a-ry (-ā-rī), a. Pertaining to election.—e-lec-tion-er' (-ēr), v. i. To work for the success of a candidate, party, ticket, etc., in an election.—e-lec-tion-er'er, n.

e-lec-tive (ē-lek'tiv), [F. électif.] I. a. Characterized by or dependent on election; selective; optional; specif., selecting for combination or action (as, elective attraction, tendency to combine chemically with certain substances in preference to others); also, pertaining to the principle of electing to office, etc. (as, the elective franchise); having the power of electing to office, etc., as a body of persons; appointed by election, as an officer; bestowed by or derived Elecampane.

Branch with inflorescence of Elder (Sambucus canadensis).—a, part of the inflorescence, b, fruits.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

from election, as an office. II. n. An optional study, as in a course at college; a study which a student may select from among alternatives.—e-lec'tive-ly, adv.

e-lec-tor (ē-lek'tor), n. [L.] One who elects or may elect, esp. a qualified voter; in the Holy Roman Empire, one of the princes entitled to elect the emperor; in the U. S., one of the persons chosen by the voters of the several States to form the body which elects the President and the Vice-President.—e-lec'tor-al, a. Pertaining to electors or election; consisting of electors; specif., pertaining to or holding rank as an elector of the Holy Roman Empire.—e-lec'tor-ate (-āt), n. The dignity or territory of an elector of the Holy Roman Empire; also, the body of persons entitled to vote in an election, or a particular division of them.—e-lec'tor-ship, n.—e-lec'tress, n. A female elector; also, the wife or widow of an elector of the Holy Roman Empire.

e-lec-tric (ē-lek'trik), a. [NL. electricus, < L. electru < Gr. ἤλεκτρον, amber (as a substance that develops electricity under friction): see electrum.] Having the property of developing electricity, as when excited by friction, as amber; pertaining to, consisting of, or containing electricity; producing, conveying, or operated or produced by electricity.—electric catfish, any of the large catfishes of the genus

Torpedo (or Malapterurus) of Africa, which have the power of giving an electric shock, esp. T. (or M.) electricus of the Nile.—electric eel, a fish, Electrophorus electricus, of eel-like form, having the power of giving strong electric discharges, which serve as a means of offense and defense. It is found in the fresh waters of northern South America, and sometimes attains a length of over 6 feet.—electric ray. See *ray*².—electric wave. See under wave, n.—e-lec'tric, n. A substance capable of exhibiting electricity when rubbed; also, a car operated by electricity; an electric railroad.—e-lec'tri-cal, a. Electric.—e-lec'tri-cal-ly, adv.—e-lec-tri-cian (ē-lek-trish'ān), n. One versed in the science of electricity; also, one who makes, repairs, installs, or operates electric devices.—e-lec'tri-ci-ty (-tris'i-ti), n. An agency producing various physical phenomena, as attraction and repulsion, luminous and heating effects, shock to the body, chemical decomposition, etc., which were originally thought to be caused by a kind of fluid, but are now regarded as being due to strains in the luminiferous ether or to the presence of electrons; also, the science dealing with this agency.—e-lec'trics, n. The science of electricity.

e-lec'tri-fi-a-ble (ē-lek'tri-fi-ā-bl), a. [See electrify.] Capable of being electrified.—e-lec'tri-fi-ca'tion (-fi-kā'shən), n. The act of electrifying, or the resulting state.—e-lec'tri-fi-er (-fi-ēr), n. One who or that which electrifies.

e-lec'tri-fy (ē-lek'tri-fi), v. t.; -fied, -fying. [See electric and -fy.] To charge with or subject to electricity; equip (a railroad, etc.) for the use of electric motive power; fig., to startle greatly, excite, or thrill (as, "The high-born Demosthenes electrified large assemblies by his indignant invectives against the Spanish Philip": Motley's "Dutch Republic," iii. 2).

e-lec-trize (ē-lek'triz), v. t.; -trized, -trizing. To electrify.—e-lec'tri-za'tion (-tri-zā'shən), n.—e-lec'triz-er (-triz-ēr), n.

electro, electr- Forms of Gr. ἤλεκτρον, amber, used to represent E. electric, electricity, in combination, as in electrochronograph, electro-engraving, electrogild, electromassage, electromechanics, electrotelegraphy.

e-lec-tro (ē-lek'trō), n.; pl. -tros (-trōz). Shortened form of electrotype.

e-lec-tro-a-nal-y-sis (ē-lek'trō-ā-nal'i-sis), n. [See electro-] Chemical analysis by electrolysis.

e-lec-tro-bi-o-l-o-gy (ē-lek'trō-bi-ol'ō-jī), n. [See electro-] The branch of biology that deals with electrical phenomena in living organisms.

e-lec-tro-cap-il-la-ry (ē-lek'trō-kap'i-lā-ri), a. [See electro-] Capillary and electrical, as capillary phenomena produced by electricity.—e-lec'tro-cap-il-lar'i-ty (-lar'i-ti), n.

e-lec-tro-cau-ter-y (ē-lek'trō-kā'tēr-i), n. [See electro-] A cautery heated by electricity; also, cauterization with such an instrument.

e-lec-tro-chem-is-try (ē-lek'trō-kem'is-tri), n. [See electro-] The branch of chemistry that deals with the chemical changes produced by electricity and the production of electricity by chemical changes.—e-lec'tro-chem'i-cal (-i-kāl), a.—e-lec'tro-chem'i-cal-ly, adv.—e-lec'tro-chem'ist, n.

e-lec-tro-cul-ture (ē-lek'trō-kul-tūr), n. [See electro-] The use of electricity to stimulate the growth of plants.

e-lec-tro-cute (ē-lek'trō-kūt), v. t.; -cuted, -cuting. [From electro + -cute in execute.] To execute (a criminal) by electricity; in general, to kill by electricity.—e-lec'tro-cu'tion (-kū'shən), n.

e-lec-trode (ē-lek'trōd), n. [See electro- and -ode¹.] Either of the two poles or terminals of a battery or other electric source; either end of an open electric circuit; a conductor by which a current enters or leaves an electrolyte.

e-lec-tro-de-pos-it (ē-lek'trō-dē-poz'it), v. t. [See electro-] To deposit (a metal, etc.) by electrolysis.—e-lec'tro-de-pos'it, n. A deposit, as of metal, produced by electrolysis.—e-lec'tro-dep-o-si'tion (-dep-ō-zish'ən), n.

e-lec-tro-dy-nam-ics (ē-lek'trō-dī-nam'iks), n. [See electro-] The branch of electricity that deals with the mutual action of electric currents and the interaction of currents and magnets.—e-lec'tro-dy-nam'ic, a.—e-lec'tro-dy-namom'e-ter (-nā-mom'e-tēr), n. A device in which the mutual or electrodynamic action of two adjacent circuits or coils is utilized to measure electric currents.

e-lec-tro-graph (ē-lek'trō-grāf), n. [See electro- and -graph.] A curve, automatically traced, forming a record of the indications of an electrometer; also, an instrument for recording atmospheric electricity.—e-lec'tro-graph'ic (-grāf'ik), a.

e-lec-tro-ki-net-ics (ē-lek'trō-ki-net'iks), n. [See electro-] The science of electricity in motion; the branch of electricity that deals with currents.—e-lec'tro-ki-net'ic, a.

e-lec-tro-li-er (ē-lek'trō-lēr'), n. [From electro + -lier in chandelier.] A chandelier or support for electric lamps.

e-lec-trol-o-gy (ē-lek'trol'ō-jī), n. [See electro- and -logy.] The science of electricity.

e-lec-trol-y-sis (ē-lek'trol'i-sis), n. [See electro- and -lysis.] The decomposition of a chemical compound by an electric current; in surg., the destruction of tumors, etc., by an electric current.—e-lec'tro-lyte (ē-lek'trō-lit), n. [See -lyte.] A compound that undergoes decomposition by electrolysis.—e-lec'tro-lyt'ic, e-lec'tro-lyt'i-cal (-lit'ik, -i-kāl), a. Pertaining to electrolysis or to an electrolyte.

e-lec'tro-lyt'i-cal-ly, adv.—e-lec'tro-lyze (-liz), v. t.; -lyzed, -lyzing. [See -lyze.] To decompose by electrolysis.

e-lec'tro-ly-za'tion (-li-zā'shən), n.—e-lec'tro-lyz-er (-li-zēr), n.

e-lec-tro-mag-net (ē-lek'trō-mag'net), n. [See electro-] A core of soft iron or the like, magnetized by the passage of an electric current through a wire coiled around it.—e-lec'tro-mag-net'ic, a. Pertaining to electromagnetism.—electromagnetic wave. See under wave, n.—e-lec'tro-mag-net-ism, n. The science that deals with the relation between electric currents and magnetism; the phenomena collectively which rest upon the relation between electric currents and magnetism.

Electromagnet.

e-lec-tro-met-al-lur-gy (ē-lek'trō-met'ā-lēr-jī), n. [See electro-.] Electrical metallurgy; the art of applying electricity to metallurgical processes.—e-lec'tro-met-al-lur-gi-cal (-jī-kāl), a.—e-lec'tro-met'al-lur-gist, n.

e-lec-trom-e-ter (ē-lek-trom'e-tēr), n. [See electro- and -meter.] In elect., an instrument for measuring differences of potential; also, an electroscope.—e-lec-tro-met-ric, e-lec-tro-met-ri-cal (ē-lek-trō-met'rik, -rī-kāl), a. Pertaining to electrometry.—e-lec-trom'e-try, n. [See -metry.] The measurement of electricity.

e-lec-tro-mo-tion (ē-lek'trō-mō'shon), n. [See electro-.] Motion of electricity; the passage of an electric current; also, mechanical motion produced by electricity.—e-lec'tro-mo'tive (-tiv). I. a. Pertaining to, producing, or tending to produce a flow of electricity: as, electromotive force (the force, due to differences of potential, that causes electric currents). II. n. An electric locomotive.—e-lec'tro-mo-tiv'i-ty (-mō-tiv'i-ti), n.—e-lec'tro-mo'tor, n. Anything producing an electric current, as a voltaic battery; also, an electric motor.

e-lec-tron (ē-lek'tron), n. [Gr. ἤλεκτρον: see electrum.] Electrum; also, in physics and chem., an extremely small particle, having about one thousandth the mass of a hydrogen atom, supposed to be or to contain a unit of negative electricity, and regarded as the ultimate particle of which all atoms are built up.—e-lec-tron-ic (ē-lek-tron'ik), a.

e-lec-tro-neg-a-tive (ē-lek'trō-neg'ā-tiv). [See electro-.] I. a. Containing negative electricity; tending to pass to the positive pole in electrolysis; hence, non-metallic or acid, as an element or radical; also, that may be used as the negative element of a voltaic cell. II. n. An electronegative body.

e-lec-tron-tube (ē-lek'tron-tüb), n. In wireless teleg. and teleph., a vacuum-tube.

e-lec-trop-a-thy (ē-lek-trōp'ā-thī), n. [See electro- and -pathy.] Electrotherapy.—e-lec-tro-path-ic (ē-lek-trōp'ā-thik), a.

e-lec-tro-phone (ē-lek'trō-fōn), n. [See electro- and -phone.] An instrument for producing sounds, resembling trumpet-tones, by electric currents.

e-lec-troph-o-rus (ē-lek-trof'ō-rus), n.; pl. -ri (-rī). [NL., < electro- (see electro-) + Gr. -φόρος, bearing (see -phorous).] An instrument for generating static electricity by means of induction, consisting of a disk of resin or other non-conducting material easily excited by friction and a polished metal disk with an insulating handle.

e-lec-tro-plate (ē-lek'trō-plāt), v. t.; -plated, -plating. [See electro-.] To plate or coat with a metal by electrolysis.—e-lec'tro-plat-e, n. Electroplated articles or ware. Volta's Electrophorus.

e-lec-tro-poi-on (ē-lek'trō-poi'on), n. [From electro- + Gr. ποιών, ppr. of ποιεῖν, make.] A solution consisting of potassium bichromate, sulphuric acid, and water, used in certain voltaic batteries.

e-lec-tro-po-lar (ē-lek'trō-pō'lār), a. [See electro-.] Having one end or surface positive and the other negative, as an electrical conductor.

e-lec-tro-pos-i-tive (ē-lek'trō-poz'i-tiv). [See electro-.] I. a. Containing positive electricity; tending to pass to the negative pole in electrolysis; hence, basic, as an element or radical; also, that may be used as the positive element of a voltaic cell. II. n. An electropositive body.

e-lec-tro-scope (ē-lek'trō-skōp), n. [See electro- and -scope.] A device for detecting the presence of electricity, its kind, etc., by means of electric attraction and repulsion.—e-lec-tro-scop'ic (-skop'ik), a.

e-lec-tro-stat-ics (ē-lek'trō-stat'iks), n. [See electro- and -static.] The science of static electricity.—e-lec'tro-stat'ic, a.

e-lec-tro-tax-is (ē-lek'trō-tak'sis), n. [NL.: see electro- and -taxis.] The orientation or locomotion of organisms or cells in relation to electric currents.—e-lec'tro-tac'tic (-tak'tik), a.

Simple form of Electroscope, in which pith-balls are suspended by silk threads.

e-lec-tro-tech-nics (ē-lek'trō-tek'niks), n. [See electro-.] The technics of electricity.—e-lec'tro-tech-nol'o-gy (-nol'ō-jī), n. The science dealing with the practical applications of electricity.

e-lec-tro-ther-a-peu-tics (ē-lek'trō-ther-a-pē'tiks), n. [See electro-.] That branch of therapeutics which deals with the curative use of electricity.—e-lec'tro-ther-a-peu'tic, a.—e-lec'tro-ther-a-peu'tist, n. One versed in electrotherapeutics.—e-lec'tro-ther-a-py (-ther'ā-pī), n. Treatment of disease by means of electricity.

e-lec-tro-ther-mal (ē-lek'trō-thēr'māl), a. [See electro-.] Pertaining to heat produced by electricity. Also e-lec'tro-ther'mic.

e-lec-tro-t-o-nus (ē-lek-trot'ō-nus), n. [NL., < electro- (see electro-) + Gr. τόνος, tension.] The altered state of a nerve during the passage of an electric current through it.—e-lec'tro-ton-ic (ē-lek-trō-ton'ik), a.

e-lec-tro-type (ē-lek'trō-tīp), n. [See electro- and -type.] A facsimile, for use in printing, of a block of type, an engraving, or the like, consisting of a thin shell of metal (usually copper), deposited by electrolytic action in a wax mold of the original, and backed with type-metal; also, a print from such a facsimile; also, electrotypy.—e-lec'tro-type, v. t.; -typed, -typing. To make an electrotype or electrotypes of.—e-lec'tro-type-r (-tī-pēr), n.—e-lec'tro-ty-py (-tī-pī), n. The electrotype process.

e-lec-trum (ē-lek'trum), n. [L., < Gr. ἤλεκτρον, amber, also an alloy of gold and silver: cf. ἤλεκτρον, the beaming sun, fire.] Amber; also, an amber-colored alloy of gold and silver, known to the ancients.

e-lec-tu-a-ry (ē-lek'tū-ā-rī), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). [LL. electuarium: cf. Gr. ἐκλεκτόν, electuary, < ἐκ, out of, + λεῖχειν, lick up, < ἐκ, out of, + λεῖχειν, lick.] A medicine composed usually of a powder mixed into a pasty mass with syrup or honey.

el-ee-mos-y-na-ry (el-ē-mos'i-nā-rī or el'ē-ē-), a. [ML. eleemosynarius, < LL. eleemosyna, alms: see alms.] Of or pertaining to alms, charity, or charitable donations; charitable; also, derived from or provided by charity (as, "Eleemosynary relief never yet tranquillized the working classes—it never made them grateful": C. Brontë's "Shirley," xvi.); also, dependent on or supported by charity.—el-ee-mos'y-na-ri-ly, adv.

el-e-gance (el'ē-gāns), n. Elegant quality; also, something elegant; an elegant characteristic; a refinement. Also el'e-gan-cy, pl. -cies (-siz).

el-e-gant (el'ē-gānt), a. [OF. élegant (F. élégant), < L. elegans (-ant-), fastidious, nice, fine, elegant, connected with eligere, pick out, choose: see elect.] Having or showing a nice or discriminating taste; tastefully fine or luxurious in dress, manners, appointments, etc.; gracefully refined, as in tastes, habits, literary style, etc.; polite, as arts or learning; nice, choice, or pleasingly superior in quality or kind, as a contrivance, preparation, or process; characterized by a graceful distinction in form or appearance; in general, nice; choice; fine.—él-é-gante (ā-lā-gānt), n. [F., fem. of élegant.] A woman of fashion.—el'e-gant-ly, adv.

e-le-gi-ac (e-lē'jī-ak or el-ē-jī'ak). [LL. elegiacus, < Gr. ἐλεγιακός.] I. a. Noting, pertaining to, or employing a meter consisting of a couplet ('elegiac distich') the first line of which is a dactylic hexameter and the second a (so-called) pentameter (imitated in the lines "In the hexameter rises the fountain's silvery column; In the pentameter aye falling in melody back": Coleridge's tr. Schiller's "Ovidian Elegiac Metre"), apparently used orig. in threnetic pieces, but early found in compositions of various kinds, as in the poems of Mimnermus and Callimachus among the Greeks and of Tibullus and Propertius among the Romans (as, elegiac verse, poetry composed in the elegiac meter; an elegiac pentameter or, sometimes, verse, the second line of the elegiac distich: see pentameter); also, of the nature of an elegy, or poem of mourning or lamentation; pertaining to or characteristic of such poems; mournful, melancholy, or plaintive; also, being a writer of elegiac poetry (as, an elegiac poet). II. n. An elegiac poet; also, an elegiac pentameter; pl., a succession of elegiac distichs, or a poem or poems in such distichs.—el-e-gi-a-cal (el-ē-jī'ā-kāl), a.

e-le-gi-ast (e-lē'jī-ast), n. Same as elegist.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

el-o-gist (el'ē-jist), n. The author of an elegy.

el-o-gize (el'ē-jiz), v.; -gized, -gizing. I. intr. To compose an elegy. II. tr. To lament in or as in an elegy: as, "the bard who soars to elegise an ass" (Byron's "English Bards").

el-e-gy (el'ē-jī), n.; pl. -gies (-jiz). [F. élégie, < L. elegia, < Gr. ἐλεγεία, prop. neut. pl. of ἐλεγεῖος, elegiac, < ἐλεος, song of mourning.] A mournful, melancholy, or plaintive poem, esp. a funeral song or a lament for the dead, as Milton's "Lycidas"; also, poetry or a poem written in elegiac meter.

e-lek-tron (ē-lek'tron), n. See electron.

el-e-ment (el'ē-ment), n. [OF. element (F. élément), < L. elementum, a first principle, element, rudiment; origin uncertain.] One of the simple substances, usually earth, water, air, and fire, early regarded as constituting the material universe; also, one of these substances regarded as the natural habitat of something (as, "Every animal has his element assigned him; the birds have the air, and man and beasts the earth": Johnson's "Rasselas," vi.); hence, the sphere or environment adapted to any person or thing (as, to be in one's element; "When they came to make boards, and pots, and such things, they were quite out of their element," Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe," ii. 4); pl., atmospheric agencies or forces; also, sing., a component or constituent part of a whole; pl., the bread and wine used in the eucharist; also, the rudimentary principles of an art, science, etc.; sing., in chem., one of a class of substances (of which more than eighty are now recognized) which cannot be separated into substances of other kinds, or, at least, have hitherto resisted analysis by any known chemical means; in elect., either of the two dissimilar substances which constitute a voltaic couple; also, a voltaic cell; in geom., one of the points, lines, planes, or other geometrical forms, by which a figure is made up; any straight line in a cylindrical or conical surface, corresponding to some position of the moving line by which the surface was generated; in astron., etc., one of the data required for the solution of a problem (as, the elements of a planetary orbit).—el-e-men'tal (-men'tal), a. Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of the four elements or any one of them; also, pertaining to the agencies, forces, or phenomena of physical nature; comparable to the great forces of nature, as with reference to their power; also, forming a constituent; of the nature of an ultimate constituent; simple; uncompounded; pertaining to chemical elements; sometimes, pertaining to rudiments or first principles; elementary.—el-e-men'tal-ly, adv.—el-e-men'ta-ry (-tā-ri), a. [L. elementarius.] Pertaining to the four elements or to the great forces of nature; elemental; also, constituent; of the nature of an ultimate constituent; simple or uncompounded; also, pertaining to or dealing with elements, rudiments, or first principles; of the nature of elements or rudiments.—el-e-men'ta-ri-ly, adv.—el-e-men'ta-ri-ness, n.

el-e-mi (el'ē-mī), n. [F. élémi = Sp. elemi; origin uncertain.] Any of various fragrant resins used in medicine, varnish-making, etc., as that yielded by Canarium commune, a balsameaceous tree cultivated in the Moluccas and elsewhere.

e-len-chus (ē-leng'kus), n.; pl. -chi (-kī). [L., < Gr. ἐλεγχος, < ἐλέγχειν, cross-examine, refute.] A questioning or cross-examination (as, the Socratic elenchus, Socrates's method of refutation by questioning an opponent); hence, a logical refutation; an argument which refutes another argument by proving the contrary of its conclusion; also, a false refutation; a sophistical argument.—e-len'-chic (-kik), a.—e-len-c-tic (ē-lengk'tik), a. [Gr. ἐλεγκτικός, < ἐλέγχειν.] Of, pertaining to, or engaged in cross-examining; also, of, pertaining to, or constituting an elenchus or refutation; refutatory.

Indian Elephant (Elephas indicus).

el-e-phant (el'ē-fant), n.; pl. elephants, sometimes (esp. collectively) elephant. [L. elephantus, also elephas (elephant), < Gr. ἐλέφας (ἐλεφαντ-), elephant, ivory.] Any of the large five-toed mammals, with long prehensile trunk or proboscis and long tusks of ivory, constituting the genus Elephas, comprising two existing species, E. indicus, of India and neighboring regions, with comparatively small ears (see cut in preceding column), and E. africanus, of Africa, with large, flapping ears (cf. mammoth, n.); also, fig., a burdensome or perplexing possession (as, to have an elephant on one's hands).

—white elephant.

See under white, a.

el-e-phan-ti-a-sis (el'ē-fan-tī'ā-sis), n. [L., < Gr. ἐλεφαντίασις, < ἐλέφας, E. elephant.] In pathol., a chronic disease, due to lymphatic obstruction, characterized by enormous enlargement of the parts affected and hardening and fissuring of the skin, which becomes like an elephant's hide.

el-e-phantine (el'ē-fan'tin or -tin), a. [L. elephantinus, < Gr. ἐλεφάντινος.] Pertaining to or resembling an elephant; hence, huge; great; ponderous; clumsy.

el-e-phant's-ear (el'ē-fants-ēr), n. A large-leaved foliage-plant. See caladium.

el-e-phant's-foot (el'ē-fants-fūt), n. A South African plant, Testudinaria elephantipes, having a large stem with a rough exterior and a fleshy edible interior.

el-e-phant-shrew (el'ē-fant-shrō), n. Any of the small, leaping, mouse-like insectivorous animals of the family Macroscelidæ, of Africa, which have a long snout suggesting the proboscis of an elephant.

El-eu-sin-i-a (el-ū-sin'i-ä), n. pl. [L., < Gr. Ἐλευσινία, < Ἐλευσίς, Eleusis.] In Gr. antiq., the famous mysteries and festival celebrated at Eleusis and elsewhere in ancient Greece, in honor of Demeter (Ceres).—El-eu-sin'i-an, a. Of or pertaining to ancient Eleusis, in Attica, Greece: as, the Eleusinian mysteries (certain religious mysteries, in honor of Demeter (Ceres), which originated there, celebrated esp. in Attica).

El-eu-the-ri-a (el-ū-thē'ri-ä), n. pl. [L., < Gr. Ἐλευθέρια, pl., < ἐλευθερος, free.] The feast of liberty, an ancient Greek festival celebrated at Plataea in commemoration of the great victory won there by the Greeks over the Persians in 479 B.C.

e-leu-the-ro-ma-ni-a (e-lū'thē-rō-mā'ni-ä), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐλευθερος, free, + μανία, E. mania.] A mad zeal for freedom.—e-leu'thē-ro-ma'ni-ac (-ak), n.

el-e-vate (el'ē-vāt), v. t.; -vated, -vating. [L. elevatus, pp. of elevare, < e, out of, + levare, lighten, lift, raise, < levis, light.] To lighten†; also, to move or raise from a lower to a higher place or position; hold up to view, as the host and chalice in the service of the mass; raise (the voice); direct upward, as the eyes; raise in rank or status; raise morally or intellectually; elate or exhilarate; intoxicate slightly (colloq.).—el'e-vate, a. Elevated; as, "An imperial city . . . With towers and temples proudly elevate On seven small hills" (Milton's "Paradise Regained," iv. 34). [Now poetic.]—el'e-vat-ed (-vā-ted), p. a. Raised up; raised above the ground or the general level; high; lofty; exalted in character or style.

African Elephant (Elephas africanus).

Elephant shrew (Macroscelides typicus).

el-e-va-tion (el-ē-vā'shən), n. [L. elevatio(n-).] The act of elevating, or the state of being elevated; specif., the lifting up of the host and chalice in the service of the mass; also, an elevated place; an eminence; also, the height to which anything is elevated; the angle at which anything, as a gun, is raised above a horizontal direction; a particular height above a given level; also, height or loftiness; grandeur or dignity; nobleness; in arch., etc., a drawing or design which represents an object or structure as being projected geometrically on a vertical plane, esp. one showing the exterior as seen from the front or the side; in astron., etc., altitude.

el-e-va-tor (el'ē-vā-tōr), n. [LL.] One who or that which elevates; a mechanical device for raising articles; a building for storing grain, the grain being handled by means of mechanical elevating and conveying devices ('grain-elevator'); a moving platform or cage for conveying goods, persons, etc., from one level to another, as in a building; a hinged horizontal plane on an aeroplane, etc., used to control the longitudinal inclination; in anat., a muscle that raises a part of the body; in surg., an instrument for raising a depressed part.—el'e-va-to-ry (vā-tō-rī), a. Serving to elevate.

e-lev-en (ē-lev'n). [AS. endleofan, endlufon, = D. elf = G. elf = Icel. ellífu = Goth. ainlif, eleven; from the Teut. stem represented by E. one, with a termination occurring also in E. twelve.] I. a. One more than ten. II. n. A number composed of eleven units, or a symbol, as 11 or xi, representing it; a set of eleven persons or things, as a football or cricket team.—e-lev'enth, a. [AS. endlyfta.] Next after the tenth; also, being one of eleven equal parts.—the eleventh hour, fig., the last possible hour for doing something; the time just before it is too late: in allusion to the parable of the laborers in the vineyard (Mat. xx. 1-16).—e-lev'enth, n. The eleventh member of a series; also, an eleventh part.

elf (elf), n.; pl. elves (elvz). [AS. ælf = Icel. álfr, elf, = G. alp, nightmare, incubus.] One of a class of imaginary beings with magical powers, given to capricious interference in human affairs, and usually imagined to be diminutive beings in human form; a sprite; a fairy; also, a mischievous, tricky, or spiteful person; a knave or rogue; also, a diminutive being, as a dwarf or a small child.—elf, v. t. To tangle (the hair), as in elf-locks. See Shakspeare's "King Lear," ii. 3. 10.—elf=child, n. A changeling.—elf'in. I. a. Pertaining to elves; elf-like. II. n. An elf.—elf'ish, a. Elf-like (as, "Thou strange and elfish child, whence didst thou come?" Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter," vi.); elfin; mischievous; spiteful.—elf'ish-ly, adv.—elf'ish-ness, n.—elf'land (-land), n. The land of the elves; fairyland: as, "the horns of Elfland faintly blowing" (Tennyson's "Princess," iv.).—elf'=lock, n. A lock of hair tangled as if by elves. See Shakspeare's "Romeo and Juliet," i. 4. 90.

e-li-cit (ē-lis'it), v. t. [L. elicitus, pp. of elicere, < e, out of, + lacere, entice.] To draw or bring out or forth; educate; evoke: as, to elicit truth by discussion; to elicit information by interrogation; to elicit applause or approval.—e-li-ci-ta-tion (ē-lis-i-tā'shən), n.—e-li'ci-tor, n.

e-lide (ē-lid'), v. t.; elided, eliding. [L. elidere (pp. elidus), < e, out of, + ludere, hurt by striking.] To crush† or destroy†; also, to suppress, or pass over in silence; specif., to omit, or slur over, in pronunciation (a vowel or syllable); in law, to annul or quash.

el-i-gi-ble (el'i-jī-bl). [F. éligible, < L. eligere, pick out, choose: see elect.] I. a. Fit or proper to be chosen; worthy of choice; desirable; specif., legally qualified, as for an office. II. n. A person or thing that is eligible: as, "Beautiful, accomplished, and an heiress, she had, of course, all the eligibles and non-eligibles of the other sex sighing at her feet" (Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," xv.).—el'i-gi-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-ti), el'i-gi-ble-ness, n.—el'i-gi-bly, adv.

e-lim-i-nate (ē-lim'i-nāt), v. t.; -nated, -nating. [L. eliminatus, pp. of eliminare, turn out of doors, < e, out of, + limen, threshold.] To thrust out of doors (obs. or archaic); hence, to expel; remove; get rid of; sometimes, to omit as irrelevant or unimportant; ignore; in math., to remove (a quantity) from an equation.—e-lim-i-na'tion (-nā'shən), n.

The act of eliminating, or the state of being eliminated; expulsion; removal.—e-lim'i-na-tive (-nā-tiv), a. Tending or serving to eliminate.—e-lim'i-na-tor (-nā-tōr), n.

el-i-quate (el'i-kwāt), v. t.; -quoted, -quating. [L. eliquatus, pp. of eliquare, < e, out of, + liquare, melt.] To separate (metal, etc.) by fusion.—el-i-qua'tion (-kwā'shən), n.

e-li-sion (ē-liz'hən), n. [L. elisiō(n-), < elidere: see elide.] A suppressing or omitting; the suppression of a vowel, syllable, or any part of a word, as for euphony or meter; often, as in poetry, the cutting off of a vowel at the end of one word when the next word begins with a vowel.

e-li-sor (ē-lī'zōr or el'i-zōr), n. [OF. elisour, < élire (F. élire), choose, < L. eligere: see elect.] In law, a person appointed in certain cases to return a panel of jurors, serve a writ, etc.

ē-lite (ā-lēt'), n. [F., < élire, choose: see elisor.] The choice or best part, as of a body or class of persons; [cap.] the active army of Switzerland.

e-lix-ir (ē-lik'sēr), n. [ML. elixir, < Ar. el, al, the, + iksīr, philosophers' stone, prob. < Gr. ἐξήριον, a drying powder for wounds, < ἐξηρός, dry.] An alchemic preparation for transmuting base metals into gold, or for prolonging life ('elixir vitæ,' or 'elixir of life'); hence, a sovereign remedy; also, a strong extract or tincture†; fig., the quintessence or absolute embodiment of anything; in phar., a tincture with more than one base, or some similar compound medicine; in modern pharmacy, an aromatic, sweetened alcoholic liquid containing medicinal agents, or for use as a vehicle for such agents.

E-liz-a-be-than (ē-liz-ə-bē'than or ē-liz'ə-beth-an). I. a. Of or pertaining to Elizabeth, queen of England from 1558 to 1603, or her period: as, Elizabethan architecture (later perpendicular or Tudor architecture, characterized by a combination of features of late Gothic and degenerate Italian styles). II. n. Elizabethan Architecture. — Hargrave Hall, England.

One who lived in England during the Elizabethan period, esp. a poet or dramatist.

elk (elk), n.; pl. elks or (esp. collectively) elk. [ME. elke: cf. AS. elch, elh, G. elch, Icel. elgr, also L. alces, Gr. ἄλκη, elk.] The largest existing European and Asiatic deer, Alces machilis, the male of which has large palmate antlers (cf. moose); in America, the wapiti.

ell¹ (el), n.

[AS. eln = D. el = G. elle = Icel. alín = Goth. aleina, ell; orig. meaning 'arm,' 'fore-arm' (see elbow), and akin to L. ulna, Gr. ὐλένη.] A measure of length, now little used, varying in different countries: in England equivalent to 45 inches.

Elizabethan Architecture. — Hargrave Hall, England.

European Elk (Alces machilis).

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

ell², el (el), n. The letter L, l; something shaped like an L; an extension to a building, at right angles to one end. See L².

el-lipse (e-lips'), n. [= F. ellipse, < L. ellipsis: see el-lipsts.] In gram., ellipsis; in geom., a plane closed curve such that the sum of the distances of each point in it from two fixed points (foci) is constant.

el-lip-sis (e-lip'sis), n.; pl. ellipses (-sēz). [L., < Gr. ἐλλειψις, ellipsis, ellipse, < ἐλλείπειν, leave in, leave out, fall short, < ἐν, in, + λείπειν, leave: cf. ellipse.] In gram., the omission from a sentence of a word or words needed to complete the construction or the sense; in printing, a mark or marks, as —, . . ., or * * *, to indicate an omission or suppression of letters or words; in geom., an ellipset.

el-lip-so-graph (e-lip'sō-grāf), n. [See ellipse and -graph.] An instrument for describing ellipses.

el-lip-soid (e-lip'soid), n. [See ellipse and -oid.] In geom., a solid figure all plane sections of which through one axis are ellipses and all other plane sections ellipses or circles. — el-lip-soi-dal (el-lip'soi'dāl), a. Pertaining to, or having the form of, an ellipsoid.

el-lip-tic, el-lip-ti-cal (e-lip'tik, -ti-kāl), a. [Gr. ἐλλειπτικός, defective, elliptic, < ἐλλείπειν: see ellipsis.] Pertaining to or marked by grammatical ellipsis; also, pertaining to or having the form of an ellipse. — el-lip'ti-cal-ly, adv. — el-lip-ti-ci-ty (el-lip-tis'i-ti), n. The quality of being elliptic; the degree of divergence of an ellipse from the circle.

elm (elm), n. [AS. elm, akin to Icel. álmr and L. ulmus, elm.] Any of the trees of the genus Ulmus, as U. campestris ('English elm'), U. americana ('white elm'), U. fulva ('slippery-elm'), etc., some of which are widely cultivated for shade and ornament; the wood of such a tree. — elm-en (el'men), a. Of or pertaining to the elm. [Archaic or prov. Eng.] — elm'y, a. Abounding in or consisting of elms.

el-o-cu-tion (el-ō-kū'shən), n. [L. elocutio (-n-), < eloqui, speak out: see eloquent.] Effective utterance or expression†; eloquence† or oratory†; in general, speech† (as, "Best of fruits . . . Whose taste . . . Gave elocution to the mute": Milton's "Paradise Lost," ix. 748); now, manner of speaking or utterance with reference to delivery, pronunciation, gesture, etc., esp. in public speaking or reading; the art of public speaking. — el-o-cu'tion-a-ry (-ā-rī), a. Of or pertaining to elocution. — el-o-cu'tion-ist, n. One versed in the art of elocution; one who gives public recitations or readings.

é-loge (ā-lozh), n. [F.] A eulogy; a funeral oration.

E-lo-him (e-lō'him or -hēm, or el'ō-him), n. [Heb. elōhīm, pl. of elōah, god.] A name of God, frequent in the Hebrew text of the Old Testament. — E-lo-hist (e-lō'hist or el'ō-hist), n. The writer (or writers) of certain parts of the Hebrew text of the Hexateuch in which God is spoken of as Elohim instead of Yahweh (Jehovah). See Yahwist. — El-o-his-tic (el-ō-his'tik), a. Of or pertaining to the Elohist; characterized by the use of Elohim instead of Yahweh (Jehovah).

e-loin, e-loign (ē-loin'), v. t. [F. éloigner, OF. esloignier, < L. ex, out of, + longe, long, far: cf. elongate.] To remove to a distance; also, to carry off; specif., in law, to remove out of legal jurisdiction, or conceal, as goods liable to distress.

White Elm (Ulmus americana).

e-lon-gate (ē-lōng'gāt or ē'lōng-), v.; -gated, -gating. [LL. elongatus, pp. of elongare, remove, prolong, < L. e, out of, + longe, long, far, longus, long.] I. tr. To remove to a distance†; also, to draw out to greater length; lengthen; extend. II. intr. To recede, as a planet (apparently) from the sun (see elongation); also, to increase in length; be comparatively long. — e-lon'gate, a. Elongated; in bot. and zool., comparatively or disproportionately long. — e-lon-ga-tion (ē-lōng-gā'shən), n. The act of elongating, or the state of being elongated; also, that which is elongated; an elongated part; an extension; in astron., the angular distance of a planet from the sun, or of a satellite from its primary.

e-lope (ē-lōp'), v. i.; eloped, eloping. [AF. aloper: cf. D. ontloopen (= G. entlaufen), run away, elope.] To run away from one's spouse with a paramour; also, to run away from home with a lover (whether with the expectation of marrying or not); in general, to run away from one's place or duty; abscond; escape. — e-lope'ment, n. — e-lop-er (ē-lō'pēr), n.

elo-o-quence (el'ō-kwēns), n. The quality of being eloquent; also, the action, practice, or art of using language with fluency, power, and aptness; also, eloquent language or discourse (as, a flow of eloquence).

elo-o-quent (el'ō-kwēnt), a. [OF. eloquent (F. éloquent), < L. eloquens (-ent-), ppr. of eloqui, speak out, utter, < e, out of, + loqui, speak.] Having or exercising the power of fluent, forcible, and appropriate speech, as an orator; characterized by forcible and appropriate expression, as a speech; movingly expressive, as looks or gestures. — el'o-quent-ly, adv.

else (els), adv. [AS. elles = OHG. elles, alles, otherwise, else; akin to Goth. aljis, L. alius, Gr. ἄλλος, other.] In another or a different case, under other circumstances, or otherwise (often preceded by or: as, "Strangle her, els she sure will strangle thee," Spenser's "Faerie Queene," i. 1. 19; "But speak fair words, or else be mute," Shakspeare's "Venus and Adonis," 208); also, in a different manner, respect, time, or place (as, how else? when else? anywhere else?); also (as a quasi-adjective), other than the person or thing mentioned (following the word or words with which it is used: as, somebody else; no one else; nothing else; little else); in addition; instead. When used after somebody, no one, etc., in the possessive case, else commonly takes the 's (as, somebody else's book; no one else's business). — else'-where, adv. Somewhere else; in or to some other place. — else'whith'er, adv. To some other place. — else'wise, adv. Otherwise.

e-lu-ci-date (ē-lū'si-dāt), v. t.; -dated, -dating. [LL. elucidatus, pp. of elucidare, < L. e, out of, + lucidus, light, E. lucid.] To make lucid or clear; throw light upon; explain: as, "Man's whole life and environment have been laid open and elucidated" (Carlyle's "Sartor Resartus," i. 1).

— e-lu-ci-da'tion (-dā'shən), n. — e-lu'ci-da-tive (-dā-tiv), a. Serving to elucidate; explanatory. — e-lu'ci-da-tor (-dā-tōr), n. — e-lu'ci-da-to-ry (-dā-tō-rī), a. Elucidative.

e-lude (ē-lūd'), v. t.; eluded, eluding. [L. eludere (pp. elusus), < e, out of, + ludere, play.] To avoid or escape by dexterity or artifice (as, to elude a blow, attack, seizure, pursuit, or pursuer); slip away from; evade (as, to elude vigilance, difficulties, requirements, laws, etc.); of things, to continue to be beyond the reach of (observation, inquiry, the inquirer, etc.); baffle. — e-lud-er (ē-lū'dēr), n. — e-lud'-ible, a. That may be eluded.

E-lul (e-lōl'), n. [Heb.] In the Jewish calendar, the twelfth month (29 days) of the civil year and the sixth of the ecclesiastical year, beginning in August or in the first part of September.

e-lu-sion (ē-lū'zhən), n. [ML. elusio (-n-).] The act of eluding; evasion.

e-lu-sive (ē-lū'siv), a. Tending to elude; dexterously evasive; often, eluding clear perception or complete mental grasp; hard to express or define. — e-lu'sive-ly, adv. — e-lu'sive-ness, n.

e-lu-so-ry (ē-lū'sō-rī), a. [ML. elusorius.] Elusive.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ", secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

e-lu-tri-ate (ē-lū'trī-āt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [L. elutriatus, pp. of elutriare, wash out, decant, < eluere: see eluvium.] To purify by washing and straining or decanting; separate the light and heavy particles of by washing. — e-lu-tri-a-tion (-ā'shən), n. — e-lu'tri-a-tor, n. An elutriating apparatus used in the analysis of soils, etc.

e-lu-vi-um (ē-lū'vi-um), n.; pl. -via (-vi-ā). [NL., < L. eluere, wash out or away, < e, out of, + luere, wash: cf. alluvium.] In geol., a deposit of soil, dust, etc., originating in the place where found through decomposition of rock, or drifted by winds: distinguished from alluvium. — e-lu'-vi-al, a.

elves (elvz), n. Plural of elf. — elv-ish, a. Elfish.

E-ly-sian (ē-liz'ian), a. Of or pertaining to Elysium (as, Elysian fields, Elysium); hence, resembling Elysium or what is in Elysium; blissful; delightful.

E-ly-sium (ē-liz'ium), n. [L., < Gr. Ἠλύσιον (πεδῖον), Elysian (plain or field).] The abode of the blessed after death, according to Greek mythology, conceived of as a place of perfect delight (often called Elysian fields); hence, any similarly conceived abode or state of the dead; also, any place or state of perfect happiness.

el-y-trum, el-y-tron (el'i-trum, -tron), n.; pl. -tra (-trā). [NL., < Gr. ἔλυτρον, cover, sheath, < ἔλβειν, roll round, wrap up.] One of the pair of hardened fore wings of certain insects, as beetles, forming a protective covering for the posterior wings. — el'y-tral, a.

El-ze-vir (el'zē-vēr or -vēr). I. a. Of or pertaining to the Elzevir (Elzevier, or Elsevier) family of Dutch printers and publishers, active chiefly between 1583 and 1680, and famous for their editions of classics and other works, and esp. for their small editions, which are notable for neatness and beauty; pertaining to the books or editions published by the Elzevirs. II. n. A book printed by one of the Elzevir family; also, a style of printing-type with firm hair-lines and stubby serifs (see type).

em¹ (em), n. The letter M, m; in printing, the square of any size of type (orig. the portion of a line occupied by the letter m), used as the unit of measurement for printed matter.

em², 'em (em), pron. [Orig. < ME. hem, dat. and acc. pl. of he, E. he, but now regarded as a reduced form of them.] Them. [Colloq.]

em- A form of the prefix en-, orig. meaning 'in,' 'into,' used before b, m, and p, as in embank, embed, embitter, embody, emmesh, empower, empurple.

e-ma-ci-ate (ē-mā'shi-āt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [L. emaciatus, pp. of emaciare, < e-, out, + macies, leanness, < macere, be lean.] To make lean by a gradual wasting away of flesh. — e-ma'ci-ate, a. Emaciated. [Now poetic.] — e-ma-ci-a-tion (-si-ā'shən), n.

em-a-nant (em'a-nānt), a. Emanating; issuing as from a source.

em-a-nate (em'a-nāt), v. i.; -nated, -nating. [L. emanatus, pp. of emanare, < e, out of, + manare, flow.] To flow out, issue, or proceed as from a source or origin; come forth; originate. — em-a-na-tion (-nā'shən), n. [LL. emanatio(n).] The act or fact of emanating; also, something that emanates, as a perfume, gaseous product (cf. radium emanation, under radium), quality, virtue, etc.; an effluence. — em'a-na-tive (-nā-tiv), a. Emanating; characterized by emanation. — em'a-na-to-ri-um (-nā-tō'ri-um), n.; pl. -riums or -ria (-ri-ā). A room or place equipped for the therapeutic treatment of patients by means of the radium emanation.

e-man-ci-pate (ē-man'si-pāt), v. t.; -pated, -pating. [L. emancipatus, pp. of emancipare, < e, out of, + manicipare, make over as property, < manus, hand, + capere, take.] Orig., in ancient Roman legal use, to free (a child) from the paternal power; hence, in general, to set free from control, esp. from servitude or bondage; liberate; free from restraint of any kind. — e-man'ci-pate, a. Emancipated: as, "Emancipate From passion's dreams" (Coleridge's "Picture"). [Now chiefly poetic.] — e-man-ci-pa-tion (-pā'shən), n. [L. emancipatio(n).] The act of emancipating, or the fact of being emancipated; liberation; [cap.] in Eng. hist., the freeing of Roman Catholics from civil disabilities by the act of Parliament passed in 1829 ("Catholic Emancipation Act"). — Emancipation Proclamation, in e-mar-gi-nate, e-mar-gi-nat-ed (ē-mār'ji-nāt, -nā-ted), a. [L. emarginatus, pp. of emarginare, deprive of the edge, < e, out of, + margo, E. margin.] Notched at the margin; in bot., notched at the apex, as a petal or leaf. — e-mar-gi-na-tion (-nā'shən), n. Emarginate condition; also, a notch at the margin; a notch at the apex, as of a petal or leaf.

U. S. hist., the proclamation by which, on Jan. 1, 1863, President Lincoln declared free all persons held as slaves within any State or part of a State then in armed rebellion. — e-man'ci-pa-tive (-pā-tiv), a. Serving to emancipate. — e-man'ci-pa-tor (-pā-tōr), n. — e-man'ci-pa-to-ry (-pā-tō-ri), a. Emancipative.

Emarginate Leaves and Petals.
a, a, emarginations.

e-mas-cu-late (ē-mas'kū-lāt), v. t.; -lated, -lating. [L. emasculatus, pp. of emasculare, < e, out of, + masculus, E. male.] To deprive of virility or procreative power; castrate; hence, to deprive of strength or vigor; weaken; render effeminate; specif., to destroy the force of (a book, etc.), as by undue expurgation or injudicious editing. — e-mas'cu-late (-lāt), a. Emasculated; unmanned; effeminate. — e-mas-cu-la-tion (-lā'shən), n. — e-mas'cu-la-tive (-lā-tiv), a. Tending to emasculate. — e-mas'cu-la-tor (-lā-tōr), n. — e-mas'cu-la-to-ry (-lā-tō-ri), a. Emasculative.

em-balm (em-bām'), v. t. [OF. F. embaumer, < em- (< L. in, in) + baume, E. balm.] To treat (a dead body) with balsams, spices, etc., (or now usually) with drugs or chemicals, in order to preserve from decay; hence, to preserve from oblivion; keep in memory; also, to impart a balmy fragrance to, or fill with sweet scent (as, "Here eglantine embalm'd the air": Scott's "Lady of the Lake," i. 12). — em-balm'er, n. — em-balm'ment, n.

em-bank (em-bāngk'), v. t. [See em-.] To inclose, confine, or protect with a bank, mound, dike, or the like. — em-bank'ment, n. The act of embanking, or the state of being embanked; also, a bank, mound, dike, or the like, raised to hold back water, carry a roadway, etc.

em-bar-ca-tion (em-bār-kā'shən), n. See embarkation.

em-bar-go (em-bār-gō), n.; pl. -goes (-gōz). [Sp., < embargar, arrest, restrain, seize, < L. in, in, + ML. barra, E. bar, n.] An order of a government prohibiting the movement of merchant vessels from or into its ports; hence, any restriction imposed upon commerce by law; fig., a restraint or hindrance (as, "She wanted to talk, but there seemed an embargo on every subject": Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," xliii.); a prohibition. — em-bar'go, v. t.; -goed, -going. To lay an embargo on; also, to seize or requisition (ships, etc.) for the service of the state.

em-bark (em-bārk'), v. [F. embarquer, < em- (< L. in, in) + barque, E. bark.] I. tr. To put or receive on board a ship; hence, to involve (a person) in an enterprise; venture or invest (money, etc.) in an enterprise. II. intr. To board a ship, as for a voyage; hence, to engage in an enterprise, business, etc. — em-bar-ka'tion (-bār-kā'shən), em-bark'ment, n. The act or process of embarking.

em-bar-rass (em-bar'ās), v. t. [F. embarrasser, < Sp. embazar or It. imbarazzare, < L. in, in, + ML. barra, E. bar, n.] To put obstacles or difficulties in the way of; impede; hamper; also, to beset with financial difficulties; burden with debt; also, to perplex mentally; confuse; disconcert; abash; also, to render difficult or intricate, as a question or problem; complicate. — em-bar'rass-ed-ly, adv. — em-bar'rass-ing-ly, adv. — em-bar'rass-ment, n. The act of embarrassing; embarrassed state; also, that which embarrasses; an impediment or hindrance.

em-bas-sa-dor (em-bas'ā-dōr), n. See ambassador.

em-bas-sage (em'bā-sāj), n. The mission or service of an ambassador; a message; a body of persons sent on a mission, as to a sovereign. [Archaic.] em-bas-sy (em'bā-si), n.; pl. -sies (-siz). [See ambassy.] The function or office of an ambassador; also, the sending of ambassadors; also, the message or charge intrusted to an ambassador (as, "Lastly came Ariel . . . Who bears all fairy embassies afar": Hood's "Midsummer Fairies," ix.); also, a body of persons intrusted with a mission to a fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, flect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; y, you;

sovereign or government; an ambassador and his retinue; also, the official residence of an ambassador.

em-bat-tle¹ (em-bat'le), v. t.; -tled, -tling. [OF. F. embatailler, < em- (< L. in, in) + bataille, *E. battle*¹, n.] To arrange in order of battle; prepare for battle; arm; also, to fortify (a town, etc.).

em-bat-tle² (em-bat'le), v. t.; -tled, -tling. [See em- and *battle*².] To furnish with battlements; hence, to form with square indentations: chiefly in embattled, p. a.—em-bat'tle-ment, n. A battlement.

Em battled Molding. — Cathedral of Lincoln, England.

em-bay (em-bā'), v. t. [See em-.] To put or force (a vessel) into a bay; detain within a bay; also, to inclose in or as in a bay; surround or envelop.—em-bay'ment, n. The act of embaying; the formation of a portion of water or coast into a bay; a bay or bay-like recess.

em-bed (em-bed'), v. t.; -bedded, -bedding. [See em-.] To fix or inclose in a surrounding mass; also, to lay in or as in a bed.—em-bed'ment, n.

em-bel-ish (em-bel'ish), v. t. [OF. F. embellir (embelliss-), < em- (< L. in, in) + bel, handsome, fine: see beau.] To beautify by or as by ornamentation; ornament; adorn; also, to enhance (a statement or narrative) with fictitious additions; embroider.—em-bel'ish-er, n.—em-bel'ish-ment, n. The act of embellishing, or the state of being embellished; ornamentation; also, that which embellishes; an ornament or decoration; also, a fictitious addition, as in a statement.

em-ber¹ (em'bër), n. [AS. æmerge = Icel. eimyrja.] A small live coal, brand of wood, etc.; pl., the smoldering remains of a fire (often fig.): as, "O joy! that in our embers Is something that doth live," Wordsworth's "Intimations of Immortality," ix.).

em-ber² (em'bër), n. [AS. ymbren, appar. < ymbryne, circuit, course, < ymb, around, + ryne, a running.] A quarterly season of fasting and prayer (the Wednesday, Friday, and Saturday after the first Sunday in Lent, after Whitsunday, after Sept. 14, and after Dec. 13) observed in the Roman Catholic and other Western churches: only in composition, as in ember-day, ember-eve, ember-week, embertide.

em-ber=goose (em'bër-gös), n. [From Scand.] The common loon, or great northern diver.

em-bez-zle (em-bez'le), v. t.; -zled, -zling. [AF. embeseiller, < em- (< L. in, in) + OF. besillier, maltreat, destroy, dissipate.] To make away with; also, to squander; dissipate; also, to appropriate fraudulently to one's own use, as money intrusted to one's care.—em-bez'zle-ment, n.—em-bez'zler, n.

em-bi-ot-o-cid (em-bi-ot'ō-sid), n. [NL. Embiotocidæ, pl., < Gr. ἐμβιος, in life (< ἐν, in, + βιος, life), + τίκτειν, bring forth.] Any fish of the acanthopterygian family Embiotocidæ, chiefly of the shallow waters of the Pacific coast of North America, notable for being viviparous.

em-bit-ter (em-bit'ër), v. t. [See em-.] To make bitter or more bitter (often fig.); render distressful or unhappy, as one's life; make hostile, or more violent or malignant, as persons or feelings.—em-bit'ter-ment, n.

em-blaze¹ (em-blāz'), v. t.; -blazed, -blazing. [See em-.] To blaze or blazon heraldically; emblazon.

em-blaze² (em-blāz'), v. t.; -blazed, -blazing. [See em-.] To set ablaze; cause to blaze, glow, or shine.

em-bla-zon (em-blā'zon), v. t. [See em-.] To portray or inscribe on or as on a heraldic shield; also, to adorn with heraldic devices; hence, to embellish or decorate; also, to proclaim; celebrate or extol.—em-bla'zon-er, n.—em-bla'zon-ment, n. The act of emblazoning; that which is emblazoned.—em-bla'zon-ry, n. The act or art of emblazoning; heraldic decoration; hence, brilliant representation or embellishment.

em-blem (em'blem), n. [L. emblemata, inlaid work, ornamentation, < Gr. ἐμβλημα, an insertion, < ἐμβάλλειν, throw in, < ἐν, in, + βάλλειν, throw.] An inlaid ornament† or inlaid work† (as, "The ground, more colour'd than with stone Of costliest emblem"; Milton's "Paradise Lost," iv. 703); also, an allegorical drawing or picture, often with explanatory writing; a fable or allegory capable of being expressed pictorially; also, an object, or a representation of it, symbolizing a quality, state, class of persons, etc.; a symbol; also, an object used symbolically as the distinctive badge of a person, family, nation, etc.—em'blem, v. t. To emblemize.—em-blem-at'ic (-ble-mat'ik), a. Pertaining to, of the nature of, or serving as an emblem; symbolic; typical. Also em-blem-at'i-cal.—em-blem-at'i-cal-ly, adv.—em-blem'a-tist (-a-tist), n. A designer, maker, or user of emblems.—em-blem'a-tize, v. t.; -tized, -tizing. To serve as an emblem of; represent by an emblem; symbolize.

em-ble-ments (em'ble-ments), n. pl. [OF. emblaement, < emblaer (F. emblaver), < ML. imbladare, sow with grain, < L. in, in, + ML. bladum, grain.] In law, the products or profits of land which has been sown or planted.

em-bod-i-ment (em-bod'i-ment), n. The act of embodying; the state or fact of being embodied; also, something embodied; that in which something is embodied; an incarnation. em-bod-y (em-bod'i), v.; -bodied, -bodying. [See em-.] I. tr. To invest with a body, as a spirit; incarnate; make corporeal; also, to give a concrete form to; express or exemplify (ideas, etc.) in concrete form; also, to collect into or include in a body; organize; incorporate; also, to embrace or comprise. II. intr. To unite in a body.

em-bog (em-bog'), v. t.; -bogged, -boggling. [See em-.] To cause to stick in a bog.

em-bold-en (em-bōl'dn), v. t. [See em-.] To make bold or more bold; hearten or encourage.—em-bold-en-er, n.

em-boi-ic (em-bō'ik), a. [See emboilus.] Inserted; intercalated; in pathol., pertaining to an embolus or to embolism.

em-bo-lism (em'bō-lizm), n. [LL. embolismus, < Gr. ἐμβόλη, throw in: see emblem.] Intercalation, as of a day in a year; a period of time intercalated; in pathol., the occlusion of a blood-vessel by an embolus.—em-bo-lis'mic (-liz'mik), a.

em-bo-lus (em'bō-lus), n.; pl. -li (-li). [L. embolus, piston, < Gr. ἐμβολος, peg, stopper, < ἐμβάλλειν, throw in: see emblem.] Something inserted, as a piston or a wedge; in pathol., a clot of fibrin, a globule of fat, or the like, carried by the blood-current and lodged in a blood-vessel so as to obstruct the circulation.

em-bon-point (ōn-bōn-pwān), n. [F., < en bon point, in good condition.] Plumpness; stoutness; corpulence.

em-bor-der (em-bōr'dër), v. t. [See em-.] To furnish with or form into a border. [Obs. or archaic.]

em-bos-om (em-büz'gm), v. t. [See em-.] To take into or hold in the bosom; embrace; cherish; foster; also, to infold, envelop, or inclose (as, "the masses of noble wood embosoming the villages": Kingsley's "Yeast," iii.).

em-boss¹ (em-bos'), v. t. [Cf. OF. bos, bois, wood, also E. ambush.] To shelter in a wood or thicket; also, to drive (a hunted animal) to exhaustion; cause to foam at the mouth; cover with foam (obs. or archaic).

em-boss² (em-bos' or -bōs'), v. t. [See em- and *boss*².] To cause to bulge out; make protuberant; cover or stud with protuberances; specif., to raise or represent in relief; also, to fashion relief work upon; also, to ornament with or as with bosses; decorate.—em-boss'er, n.—em-boss'ment, n. The act of embossing; also, a bulging or protuberance; also, an embossed ornament; embossed ornamentation.

em-bou-chure (ōn-bō-shür), n. [F., < emboucher, put to the mouth, discharge by a mouth or outlet, < em- (< L. in, in) + bouche, mouth, < L. bucca, cheek, mouth.] The mouth of a river, etc.; hence, the opening out of a valley into a plain; also, a mouthpiece, as of a wind-instrument; the adjustment of a player's mouth to such a mouthpiece.

em-bow (em-bō'), v. t. [See em-.] To bend or curve into the form of a bow; arch or vault. [Archaic.]

em-bow-el (em-bou'el), v. t.; -eled or -elled, -eling or -elling. [See em-.] To inclose in the bowels or innermost recesses; also, to disembowel.

em-bow-er (em-bou'ër), v. t. [See em-.] To shelter in or as in a bow; cover or surround with foliage: as, a house embowered among trees.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

em-brace¹ (em-brās'), v. t.; -braced, -bracing. [OF. F. embraser, set on fire, inflame, < em- (< L. in, in) + brase (F. braise), live coals: see braise.] In law, to attempt to influence corruptly, as a court or a jury.

em-brace² (em-brās'), v.; -braced, -bracing. [OF. embracier (F. embrasser), < ML. imbrachiare, < L. in, in, + brachium, arm.] I. tr. To take or clasp in the arms; press to the bosom; hug; hence, to take or receive gladly or eagerly; accept willingly; avail one's self of (an opportunity, etc.); also, to adopt (a profession, a religion, etc.); also, to undertake; also, to accept with resignation; submit to (adverse fortune, etc.); also, to encircle as if with arms (as, "You'll see your Rome embraced with fire": Shakspeare's "Coriolanus," v. 2. 7); surround; inclose; hence, to include, contain, or comprise (as, a subject embracing many topics); also, to take in with the eye or the mind. II. intr. To join in an embrace.—em-brace'², n. The act of embracing; a clasping in the arms.—em-brace'a-ble, a.—em-brace'ment, n.

em-bracer¹, em-brace-or (em-brā'sēr, -sōr), n. [OF. embraseur, < embraser: see *embrace*¹.] In law, one who attempts to influence a jury, etc., by any corrupt means.

em-bracer² (em-brā'sēr), n. One who embraces, as in the arms.

em-bracer-y (em-brā'sēr-i), n. In law, the offense of an embracer. See *embracer*¹.

em-branch-ment (em-brānch'mēt), n. [See em-.] A branching or ramification; also, a branch.

em-bran-gle (em-brang'gl), v. t.; -gled, -gling. [See em- and brangle.] To confuse; entangle; embroil.—em-bran'gle-ment, n.

em-bra-sure (em-brā'zhūr), n. [F. embrasure, < embraser, ébraser, to splay (an opening).] In arch., an enlargement of the aperture of a door or window, at the inside face of the wall, by means of splayed sides; in fort., an opening in a wall or parapet through which a gun may be fired, constructed with sides which flare outward; a loophole, crenel, or the like.

em-bro-cate (em'brō-kāt), v. t.; -cated, -cating. [ML. embrocatus, pp. of embrocare, < LL. embrocha, < Gr. ἐμβροχῆ, lotion, < ἐμβρέχειν, steep, foment, < ἐν, in, + βρέχειν, wet.] To moisten and rub with a liniment or lotion.—em-bro-ca'tion (-kā'shŏn), n. The act of embrocating a bruised or diseased part of the body; also, the liquid used for this; a liniment or lotion.

em-bro-glio (em-brō'lyō), n. Erroneous form of imbroglio.
em-broi-der (em-broi'dēr), v. t. [Appar. < em- + broider: cf. OF. embroder.] To decorate with ornamental needlework; execute (ornamentation) with the needle; fig., to adorn; embellish rhetorically, esp. with fictitious additions.—em-broi'der-er, n.—em-broi'der-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). The act of embroidering; also, embroidered work or ornamentation; fig., embellishment.

em-broil (em-broil'), v. t. [F. embrouiller, < em- (< L. in, in) + brouiller, *E. broil*¹.] To throw into a state of confusion; confuse; complicate; also, to bring into a state of discord; involve in contention or strife (as, "He has used all his efforts to render me uncomfortable, and embroil me with others": Marryat's "Peter Simple," lxii).—em-broil'er, n.—em-broil'ment, n.

em-brown (em-broun'), v. t. or i. [See em-.] To make or become brown or dark.

em-brue (em-brō'), v. t. Same as imbrue.

em-brute (em-brōt'), etc. Same as imbrute, etc.

em-bryo (em'bri-ō). [NL. embryon, < Gr. ἐμβρυον, embryo, < ἐν, in, + βρέειν, swell.] I. n.; pl. -os (-ōz). An organism in the earlier stages of its development, as before emergence from the egg; among mammals and other viviparous animals, a young animal during its earlier stages within the mother's body (cf. fetus); fig., the beginning or rudimentary stage of anything; in bot., the rudimentary plant contained in the seed, the result of the action of pollen upon the ovule. II. a. Being in the first or rudimentary stage of development; undeveloped; immature.—em'bryo-o-gen'e-sis (-ō-jen'e-sis), n. Embryogeny.—em'bryo-o-ge-net'ic (-jē-net'ik), a.—em-bryo-og'e-ny (-oj'e-ni), n. [See -geny.] The formation and development of the embryo, as a subject of scientific study.—em'bryo-o-gen'ic, a.

—em-bryo-ol'o-gy (-ol'ō-jī), n. [See -logy.] The science of the embryo, its genesis, development, etc.—em'bryo-o-log'ic, em'bryo-o-log'i-cal (-loj'ik, -i-kāl), a.—em-bryo-ol'o-gist, n.—em'bryo-o-nal (-ō-nāl), a. Of or pertaining to an embryo; embryonic.—em-bryo-n'ic (-on'ik), a. Pertaining to or in the state of an embryo; rudimentary; undeveloped.—em-bryo-on'i-cal-ly, adv.—em'bryo-o-sac (-ō-sak), n. In bot., the megaspore of a seed-bearing plant, being situated within the ovule, giving rise to the endosperm or supposed female prothallium, and forming the cell in which the embryo is developed.

e-meer (e-mēr'), n. See emir.

e-mend (ē-mend'), v. t. [L. emendare (pp. emendatus), < e, out of, + mendum, menda, fault, error: cf. amend.] To free from faults or errors; correct; now, usually, to amend (a text) by removing errors.—e-mend'a-ble, a. Capable of being emended.—e-men-date (ē-men-dāt), v. t.; -dated, -dating. [L. emendatus, pp. of emendare.] To emend (a text).—e-men-da-tion (ē-men-dā'shŏn or em-en-), n. [L. emendatio(n)-.] The act of emending, or the fact of being emended; a correction, as in a text.—e'men-da-tor, n. One who emends; esp., one who subjects a text to emendation.—e-men-da-to-ry (ē-men'dā-tō-ri), a. Serving to emend; also, of or pertaining to emendation.—e-mend'er, n.
em-e-rald (em'e-rāld). [OF. esmeralde (F. émeraude), < L. smaragdus, < Gr. σμάραγδος, a green precious stone.] I. n. A green variety of beryl, used as a gem when transparent; hence, its characteristic color, a clear, deep green; also, a printing-type (6½ point) of a size between nonpareil and minion (Eng.). II. a. Of a clear, deep green color.—Emerald Isle, Ireland: so called from its verdure.—em'e-rald-green', a. and n.

e-merge (ē-mér'), v. i.; emerged, emerging. [L. emergere (pp. emersus), < e, out of, + mergere, dip, E. merge.] To rise or come forth from, or as from, water or other liquid; also, to come forth into view or notice, as from concealment or obscurity; issue; also, to come up or arise, as a question or difficulty.—e-mer-gence (ē-mér'jens), n. The act or fact of emerging; also, something that emerges; an outgrowth, as a prickle, on the surface of an organ; sometimes, an emergency.—e-mer'gen-cy (-jen-si), n.; pl. -cies (-siz). Emergence; also, an unforeseen occurrence; a sudden and urgent occasion for action; an exigency.—e-mer'gent, a. Emerging; rising from a liquid or other surrounding medium; coming into view or notice; issuing; arising casually or unexpectedly; hence, calling for immediate action; urgent.—e-mer'gent-ly, adv.

e-mer-i-tus (ē-mér'i-tus). [L., pp. of emerere, serve out one's time, < e, out of, + merere, deserve, serve.] I. a. Retired or honorably discharged from active duty because of age, infirmity, or long service, but retained on the rolls: as, a professor emeritus. II. n.; pl. -ti (-tī). One honorably discharged from active service.

em-e-rods (em'e-rodz), n. pl. Hemorrhoids. See 1 Sam. v. 6. [Archaic.]

e-mersed (ē-mērs't'), a. [L. emersus, pp. of emergere: see emerge.] Having emerged; in bot., risen or standing out of water, surrounding leaves, etc.—e-mer-sion (ē-mēr'shŏn), n. The act or fact of emerging; in astron., the reappearance of a heavenly body after an eclipse or occultation.

em-e-ry (em'e-ri), n. [OF. emmery, esmeril (F. émeri), < It. smeriglio, < Gr. σμῆρις, emery.] A granular mineral substance consisting typically of corundum mixed with magnetite or hematite: used in a powdered, crushed, or consolidated form for grinding and polishing.—em'e-ry-cloth, n. Cloth prepared like emery-paper.—em'e-ry-pa'per, n. Paper coated with crushed or powdered emery: used for smoothing or polishing metallic surfaces, etc.—em'e-ry-wheel, n. A wheel for grinding or polishing, consisting mostly of or faced with emery.

em-e-sis (em'e-sis), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐμεσις, < ἐμεῖν, vomit, akin to L. vomere, E. vomit.] In pathol., vomiting.

e-met-ic (ē-met'ik). [L. emeticus, < Gr. ἐμετικός, < ἐμεῖν: see emesis.] I. a. Inducing vomiting, as a medicinal substance. II. n. An emetic medicine or agent.—em-e-tine (em'e-tin), n. An alkaloid with emetic and other medicinal properties, obtained from ipecacuanha.

e-meu (ē'mū), n. See emu.

fat, fāte, fār, fāll, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʌh, then; y, you;

é-moute (ā-mēt), n. [F.] A riot; a popular outbreak.

-emia, -æmia. [NL., also -hemia, -hæmia, < Gr. αἷμα, blood.] A noun termination occurring in pathological terms referring to the blood, as in anemia or anæmia, hydremia or hydræmia, hyperemia, leucemia, tozemia.

em-i-grant (em'i-grānt), I. a. Emigrating. II. n. One who emigrates, as from his native country.

em-i-grate (em'i-grāt), v.; -grated, -grating. [L. emigratus, pp. of emigrare, < e, out of, + migrare, migrate.] I. intr. To leave one country or region for the purpose of settling in another; migrate. II. tr. To cause to emigrate. — em-i-gra'tion (-grā'shən), n. [LL. emigratio(n-).] The act of emigrating; also, a body of emigrants; emigrants collectively. — em-i-gra'tion-al, a. — em'i-gra-tor, n.

é-mi-gré (ā-mē-grā), n.; pl. -grés (F. -grā). [F., pp. of émigrer, < L. emigrare: see emigrate.] In French use, an emigrant; esp., one of the royalists who became refugees from France during the revolution that began in 1789.

em-i-nence (em'i-nəns), n. The state or quality of being eminent; height; a high place or part; a hill or elevation; high station, rank, or repute; distinction; superiority; a superior or unusual degree; [usually cap.] in the Rom. Cath. Ch., the title of honor of a cardinal. — em'i-nen-cy, n. Same as eminence. [Now rare.]

em-i-nent (em'i-nənt), a. [L. eminens (-ent-), ppr. of eminere, stand out, < e, out of, + minere, project, akin to minari, jut out, threaten: see menace.] Lofty, or standing out above other things (now rare: as, "upon an high mountain and eminent," Ezek. xvii. 22); projecting (now rare); also, high in station, rank, or repute; distinguished; also, conspicuous, signal, or noteworthy (as, eminent services; eminent fairness); also, supreme or controlling (as, eminent domain: see domain). — em'i-nent-ly, adv.

e-mir (e-mēr'), n. [= amir.] An Arabian chieftain or prince; also, a title of honor of the descendants of Mohammed; also, the title of certain Turkish officials.

em-is-sa-ry (em'i-sā-ri). [L. emissarius, < emittere: see emit.] I. a. Sent forth, as on a mission; pertaining to one so sent forth. II. n.; pl. -ries (-riz). An agent sent on a mission or errand (as, "I am your grandmother's emissary. She could not come herself": Hardy's "Two on a Tower," xxxv.); often, an agent sent on a mission of a secret nature (commonly used in a bad or contemptuous sense); also, an outlet; a channel; a duct.

e-mis-sion (ē-mish'ən), n. [L. emissio(n-), < emittere: see emit.] The act of emitting, or the state of being emitted; also, that which is emitted; a discharge; an emanation; an issue, as of bank-notes.

e-mis-sive (ē-mis'iv), a. Serving to emit; pertaining to emission. — em-is-siv-i-ty (em-i-siv'i-ti), n.

e-mit (ē-mit'), v. t.; emitted, emitting. [L. emittere (pp. emissus), < e, out of, + mittere, send.] To send forth or give out or forth (liquid, light, heat, sound, etc.); discharge; also, to utter, as opinions; issue, as proclamations; issue formally for circulation, as bank-notes. — e-mit'ter, n.

Em-man-u-el (e-man'ū-ēl), n. See Immanuel.

em-men-a-gogue (e-men'a-gog), n. [Gr. ἐμμηνα, menses (< ἐν, in, + μῆν, month), + ἀγωγός, leading, < ἀγεῖν, lead.] A medicine that promotes the menstrual discharge.

em-mer (em'er), n. [G.] Same as amelcorn.

em-mesh (e-mesh'), v. t. Same as enmesh.

em-met (em'et), n. [AS. ēmete: see ant.] An ant: as, "The parsimonious emmet, provident Of future" (Milton's "Paradise Lost," vii. 485). [Archaic or prov.]

em-me-tro-pi-a (em-e-trop'i-ā), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐμμετρος, in measure (< ἐν, in, + μέτρον, measure), + ὤψ, eye.] The normal refractive condition of the eye, in which the rays of light are accurately focused on the retina and there is perfect vision. — em-me-trop'ic (-trop'ik), a.

e-mol-lient (ē-mol'yənt), [L. emolliens (-ent-), ppr. of emollire, soften, < e, out, + mollire, make soft, < mollis, soft.] In med.: I. a. Having the power of softening or relaxing living tissues, as a medicinal substance; soothing. II. n. An emollient medicine or agent.

e-mol-u-ment (ē-mol'ū-mənt), n. [L. emolumentum, emolumentum, < emoliri, bring out by effort, < e, out of, + moli, exert one's self, build: see demolish.] Profit arising from office or employment (as, "These men were accustomed, in addition to the large regular emoluments of the office, to exact heavy fees from the prisoners": Lecky's "Hist. of Eng. in the 18th Century," iii.); compensation for services, in the form of salary, fees, or perquisites; also, benefit or advantage†.

e-mo-tion (ē-mō'shən), n. [L. emovere (pp. emotus), move out, stir up, < e, out of, + movere, E. move.] A moving† or agitation† (as, "The winds of Heaven mix for ever With a sweet emotion": Shelley's "Love's Philosophy"); also, a disturbance; also, agitation or disturbance of mind; any agitated or intense state of mind; specif., an affective state of consciousness in which joy, sorrow, fear, hate, or the like, is experienced (distinguished from cognitive and volitional states of consciousness); any of the feelings of joy, sorrow, fear, hate, love, etc. — e-mo'tion-al, a. Pertaining to emotion or the emotions; also, appealing to the emotions; also, subject to or easily affected by emotion. — e-mo'tion-al-ism, n. Emotional character; appeal to the emotions; tendency to emotion, esp. morbid emotion; expression of emotion. — e-mo'tion-al-ist, n. One who appeals to the emotions, esp. unduly; also, one who bases theories of conduct, etc., on the emotions; also, one easily affected by emotion. — e-mo-tion-al-i-ty (-al'i-ti), n. Emotional state or quality. — e-mo'tion-al-ize, v. t.; -ized, -izing. To render emotional; treat as a matter of emotion. — e-mo'tion-al-ly, adv.*

e-mo-tive (ē-mō'tiv), a. [L. emotus, pp.: see emotion.] Characterized by or pertaining to emotion; exciting emotion. — e-mo'tive-ly, adv. — e-mo'tive-ness, e-mo-tiv-i-ty (ē-mō-tiv'i-ti), n.

em-pale (em-pāl'), etc. Same as impale, etc.

em-pan-el (em-pan'el), etc. Same as impanel, etc.

em-par-a-dise (em-par'a-dis), v. t. Same as imparadise.

em-pa-thy (em/pa-thi), n. [Gr. ἐν, in, + παθεῖν, suffer, feel: formed as an equivalent of G. Empfindung, lit. 'in-feeling'.] In psychol., mental entrance into the feeling or spirit of a person or thing; appreciative perception or understanding. — em-path'ic (-path'ik), a.

em-pen-nage (em/pē-nāj), F. œn-pē-nāzh), n. [F., < empenner, feather (an arrow), < em- (< L. in, in) + penne, < L. penna, feather.] In aeronautics, an equipment of small horizontal stabilizing planes at the tail of an aeroplane or the stern of a dirigible.

em-per-or (em/pēr-qr), n. [OF. empereor (F. empereur), < L. imperator, < imperare, command: see empire.] A commander; also, the sovereign or supreme ruler of an empire; in zool., any of various moths, butterflies, birds, etc., notable for their size, color, etc. — emperor of Japan, a large chætodont food-fish, Holocanthus imperator, of the seas of southern Japan, of oblong form and brilliant coloration. Also called emperor-fish. — em-per-or-ship, n.

Emperor of Japan.

em-per-y (em/pēr-i), n. [OF. empirie, var. of empire: see empire.] Empire; absolute dominion; also, the territory of an emperor. [Now poetic.]

em-pha-sis (em'fā-sis), n.; pl. emphases (-sēz). [L. emphas, < Gr. ἐμφασις, significance, < ἐμφαίνειν, exhibit, indicate, < ἐν, in, + φαίνειν, show.] Special and significant stress of voice laid on particular words or syllables; also, intensity or force of expression, action, etc.; also, stress laid upon, or importance or significance attached to, anything; also, prominence, as of outline. — em'pha-size (-siz), v. t.; -sized, -sizing. To give emphasis to; lay stress upon; stress.

em-phat-ic (em-fat'ik), a. [Gr. ἐμφατικός, < ἐμφαίνειν: see emphasis.] Uttered, or to be uttered, with emphasis; strongly expressive; also, forcibly significant; strongly marked; striking; also, using emphasis in speech or action. — em-phat'i-cal-ly, adv.

em-phy-se-ma (em-fī-sē'mā), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐμφύσημα, < ἐμφυσᾶν, inflate, < ἐν, in, + φυσᾶν, blow, < φύσα, bellows.]

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ˝, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

In pathol., abnormal distention of a part with air or other gas.—em-phy-sem'a-tous (-sem'a-tus or -sē'ma-tus), a.

em-pire (em'pir), n. [OF. F. empire, < L. imperium, a command, right of commanding, authority, sovereignty, realm, < imperare, command, < in, in, + parare, make ready, prepare, order.] Supreme command or authority; esp., supreme power in governing; sovereignty; absolute sway; also, a government under an emperor (as, the first French empire, 1804-15; the second French empire, 1852-70); also, a territory of greater extent than a kingdom ruled by a single sovereign; an aggregate of states ruled over by an emperor or other powerful sovereign or government.—Empire Day, May 24, the anniversary of the day of birth of Queen Victoria (1819-1901), observed throughout the British Empire.—Empire State, the State of New York.—Empire style, a style developed or in vogue under the first French empire (1804-15): applied esp. to certain characteristic styles of interior decoration, furniture, etc., and of women's dress (implying esp. a high waist-line, with undraped skirts hanging loosely).

em-pir-ic (em-pir'ik), [L. empiricus, < Gr. ἐμπειρικός, < ἐμπειρία, experience, < ἐμπειρος, experienced, < ἐν, in, + πειρά, trial, experiment.] I. a. Empirical. II. n. One of a sect of ancient Greek physicians who followed empirical methods; any one who follows an empirical method; also, a quack; a charlatan.—em-pir'i-cal, a. Pertaining to, derived from, or guided by experience or experiment; also, dependent upon experience or observation alone, without regard to science or theory, esp. in medical practice; hence, unscientific; charlatanic.—em-pir'i-cal-ly, adv.—em-pir'i-cism (-sizm), n. Empirical method or practice; esp., undue reliance upon experience; unscientific practice; quackery; in philos., the doctrine that all knowledge is derived from experience.—em-pir'i-cist (-sist), n.

em-pi-rism (em-pi-rizm), n. [= F. empirisme, < Gr. ἐμπειρος: see empiric.] Empiricism.—em-pi-ris'tic (-ris'tik), a. Empirical.

em-place (em-plās'), v. t.; -placed, -placing. [F. emplacer, < em- (< L. in, in) + place: see place.] To put in place or position; fix in or on an emplacement.—em-place'ment, n. [F. emplacement.] A putting in place or position; location; in fort., the space, platform, or the like for a gun or battery and its accessories.

em-ploy (em-ploi'), v. t. [OF. employer (F. employer), apply, employ, orig. infold, for empleier, var. of emplier: see imply.] To make use of (an instrument, means, etc.); use; apply; also, to occupy or devote (time, energies, etc.); also, to use the services of (a person); take, have, or keep in one's service; keep busy or at work; also, to infold; include; imply.—em-ploy', n. [F. emploi.] Employment; service; also, that on which one is employed; an occupation.—em-ploy'a-ble, a. That may be employed.—em-ploy-é (oh-plwō-yā), n. [F., pp. of employer.] An employee.—em-ploy-ee (em-ploi-ē'), n. A person who is in the employ or regular working service of another, as a clerk, workman, etc.—em-ploy'er, n. One who employs, esp., one who employs others for wages.—em-ploy'less, a. Without employment or occupation: as, "the long, employ-less days of dead darkness" (Kipling's "Light That Failed," xi).—em-ploy'ment, n. The act of employing, or the state of being employed; also, that on which one is employed; work; occupation; business.

em-poi-son (em-poi'zn), v. t. [OF. F. empoisonner, < em- (< L. in, in) + poison, E. poison.] To poison; taint; embitter. [Archaic.]

em-po-ri-um (em-pō'ri-um), n.; pl. -ums. [L., < Gr. ἐμπορίον, < ἐμπορος, traveler, merchant, < ἐν, in, + πορος, akin to poros, passage, way, E. pore.] A place of trade; a mart; a town or city of important commerce, esp. a principal center of trade; also, a shop or bazaar.

em-pow'er (em-pou'ér), v. t. [See em-.] To give power or authority to; authorize; license; also, to enable or permit.—em-pow'er-ment, n.

em-press (em'pres), n. [OF. emperesse, fem. of emperere, empereor, E. emperor.] The consort of an emperor; also, a woman ruler of an empire; fig., a supreme or sovereign mistress.

em-pres-se-ment (oh-pres-moñ), n. [F., < empresser, refl., be eager, < em- (< L. in, in) + presser: see press.] Eagerness; alacrity; display of cordiality: as, "He grasped my hand with a nervous empressment" (Poe's "Gold-Bug").

em-prise (em-priz'), n. [OF. emprise, < emprendre, undertake, < L. in, in, on, + prehendere, seize, take.] An undertaking, an adventurous enterprise; also, knightly daring or prowess (as, "giants of mighty bone and bold emprise": Milton's "Paradise Lost," xi. 642). [Archaic.]

emp-ti-er (emp'ti-ér), n. One who or that which empties.

emp-ty (emp'ti), [AS. æmetig, at leisure, unoccupied, empty, < æmetta, leisure.] I. a.; compar. emptier, superl. emptiest. Containing nothing; void of the usual or appropriate contents; without money; hungry (now only colloq.); destitute of some quality or qualities (followed by of); devoid (of); vacant, as a house; unoccupied; also, without burden or load, as a wagon; also, destitute of force, effect, or significance; unsatisfactory; meaningless; unsubstantial; also, destitute of knowledge or sense; frivolous; foolish. II. n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). Something empty, as a freight-car, wagon, box, sack, bottle, etc. [Colloq.]-emp'ti-ly, adv.—emp'ti-ness, n.—emp'ty, v.; -tied, -tying. I. tr. To make empty; deprive of contents; discharge the contents of; also, to discharge (contents). II. intr. To become empty; discharge contents, as a river.—emp'ty-hand'ed, a. Having nothing in the hands; bringing or taking nothing.—emp'ty-head'ed, a. Brainless; foolish.—emp'ty-ing, n. The act of one who or that which empties; also, something emptied out; pl., yeast prepared from the lees of beer, etc. (colloq., U. S.).

emp-ty-sis (emp'ti-sis), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐμπτυσίς, < ἐμπτύνειν, spit into, < ἐν, in, + πύειν, spit.] Expectoration, esp. of blood.

em-pur-ple (em-pér'pl), v. t.; -pled, -pling. [See em-.] To tinge or color with purple.

em-py-e-ma (em-pi-ē'mā), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐμπύημα, < ἐμπεύειν, suppurate, < ἐν, in, + πύον, pus.] In pathol., a collection of pus in some cavity of the body, esp. in the pleural cavity.—em-py-em'ic (-em'ik or -ē'mik), a.

em-pyr-e-al (em-pir'ē-al or em-pi-rē'al), a. [LL. empyreus, empyrius, < LGr. ἐμπύριος, Gr. ἐμπυρος, in fire, fiery, < ἐν, in, + πῦρ, fire.] Formed of pure fire or light; also, pertaining to the highest heaven, or empyrean (as, "Go, soar with Plato to th' empyrean sphere": Pope's "Essay on Man," ii. 23); hence, celestial.—em-py-re-an (em-pi-rē'an or em-pir'ē-an), I. a. Empyrean. II. n. The highest heaven, supposed by the ancients to contain the pure element of fire (as, "Divine interpreter . . . sent Down from the empyrean": Milton's "Paradise Lost," vii. 73); also, the visible heavens; the firmament.

em-py-reu-ma (em-pi-rō'mā), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐμπύρευμα, live coal, < ἐμπυρέειν, set on fire, < ἐμπυρος: see empyrean.] The disagreeable odor or taste of organic substances burned in close vessels.—em'py-reu-mat'ic (-mat'ik), a.

e-mu (ē'mū), n. [Cf. Pg. ema, ostrich, cassowary, orig. crane.] Either of two large, flightless, three-toed Australian birds of the ratite genus Dromæus (D. novæ-hollandiæ and D. irroratus), closely related to the ostrich, but smaller.—e'mu-ap'ple, n. An Australian tree, Owenia acidula, bearing an acid, edible fruit; also, the fruit.

Emu (Dromæus novæ-hollandiæ).

em-u-late (em'ū-lāt), v. t.; -lated, -lating. [L. æmulatus, pp. of æmulari, < æmulus, E. emulous.] To strive to equal or excel; imitate with effort to equal or surpass; hence, to rival with some degree of success; approach or attain equality with (as, "Thine eye would emulate the diamond":

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, ásk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, plne; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pùll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviary, flect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

Shakspere's "Merry Wives of Windsor," iii. 3. 58).—em-u-late, a. Emulous: as, "prick'd on by a most emulate pride" (Shakspere's "Hamlet," i. 1. 83).—em-u-la'tion (-lā'shən), n. [L. emulatio (n.).] Effort or desire to equal or excel others; also, jealous rivalry†; also, envy†.—em-u-la-tive (-lā-tiv), a. Inclined to or marked by emulation.—em-u-la-tor (-lā-tōr), n.—em-u-la-to-ry (-lā-tō-ri), a. Pertaining to or marked by emulation.

e-mul-gent (ē-mul'jənt). [L. emulgens (-ent-), ppr. of emulgere (pp. emulsus), 'milk out,' < e, out of, + mulgere, milk.] I. a. In anat., draining out, as a renal artery or vein. II. n. In anat., an emulgent vessel; in phar., a medicine or agent exciting the flow of bile.

em-u-lous (em'ū-lus), a. [L. emulus: cf. emulate.] Desirous of equaling or excelling (as, "The great School of Salerno . . . Where every emulous scholar hears . . . The rustling of another's laurels!" Longfellow's "Golden Legend," vi. 123); filled with emulation; arising from or of the nature of emulation, as actions, etc.; also, jealous†; envious†.—em-u-lous-ly, adv.—em'u-lous-ness, n.

e-mul-si-fi (ē-mul'si-fi), v. t.; -fied, -fying. [See emulsion and -fy.] To make into an emulsion.—e-mul'si-fi-ca'tion (-fi-kā'shən), n.

e-mul-sin (ē-mul'sin), n. [L. emulsus, pp.: see emulgent.] In chem., an enzyme present in almonds, etc.

e-mul-sion (ē-mul'shən), n. [F. émulsion, < L. emulgere (pp. emulsus), 'milk out': see emulgent.] A liquid preparation of the color and consistency of milk; in phar., a liquid preparation consisting of minute particles of an oily, fatty, resinous, or other substance held in suspension in an aqueous fluid by means of gum or other viscous matter; in photog., a sensitive silver salt suspended in a viscous substance, as gelatin, used for coating plates, etc.—e-mul'sion-ize, v. t.; -ized, -izing. To emulsify.—e-mul'sive (-siv), a. Of the nature of an emulsion; yielding an emulsion.

e-munc-to-ry (ē-mungk'tō-ri). [= F. émonctoire, < L. emungere (pp. emunctus), clear out the nose, < e, out of, + ungere, blow the nose: cf. mucus.] I. a. Excretory. II. n.; pl. -ries (-riz). A part or organ of the body, as the skin, a kidney, etc., carrying off waste products.

en (en), n. The letter N, n; in printing, half of the width of an em.

en-. [OF. F. en-, < L. in-, repr. in, prep., in, into, on, to: see in-, and cf. em-.] A prefix of Latin origin, meaning primarily 'in,' 'into,' first occurring in words from the French, but now used freely as an English formative, often serving to form transitive verbs from nouns or adjectives, as in enable, enact, encage, endear, enframe, engulf, enrobe, enshrine, enslave, entangle, enthroned, or, prefixed to verbs, to lend an intensive force (now scarcely felt) or merely to add a syllable, as for metrical purposes, as in engird, engird, engrave, enkindle, enshield, entwine. See in-, and cf. em- and im-.¹

-en¹. [AS. -an.] A suffix forming the plural of some nouns, as in brethren, children, oxen, and other words, now mostly archaic, as eyen, hosen.

-en². [AS. -en.] A suffix forming the past participle of strong verbs, as in beaten, gotten, sunken.

-en³. [AS. -nian.] A suffix forming verbs from adjectives, as in fasten, harden, sweeten, or from nouns, as in lengthen, strengthen.

-en⁴. [AS. -en.] A suffix of adjectives indicating material, appearance, etc., as in ashen, earthen, golden, oaken, waren.

en-a-ble (e-nā'bl), v. t.; -bled, -bling. [See en-.] To make able; give power, means, or ability to; render competent; authorize; also, to make possible or easy†.—enabling act or statute, an act or statute enabling a person or a corporation to do something which would otherwise be illegal.

en-act (e-nakt'), v. t. [See en-.] To make into an act or statute; hence, to ordain; decree; also, to represent on or as on the stage; act the part of (as, "I did enact Julius Cæsar": Shakspere's "Hamlet," iii. 2. 108); also, to perform, as a ceremony.—en-act'a-ble, a. That may be enacted.—en-ac-tion (e-nak'shən), n. Enactment.—en-ac'tive, en-ac'to-ry (-tō-ri), a. Of or pertaining to the enactment of a law; enacting.—en-act'ment, n. The act of enacting, or the state or fact of being enacted; also, that which is enacted; a law; a statute; a single provision of a law.—en-ac'tor, n.

e-nal-la-go (e-nal'a-jē), n. [L., < Gr. ἐναλλαγή, < ἐναλ-λάσσειν, interchange, < ἐν, in, + ἀλλάσσειν, change.] In gram., the substitution of one form, inflection, or part of speech for another, as in "It is me" for "It is I."

e-nam-el (e-nam'el), v. t.; -eled or -elled, -eling or -elling. [AF. enamailer, < OF. en- (see en-) + esmail (F. émail), enamel (from Teut., and akin to E. *smelt*²: cf. smalt).] To inlay or overlay with a vitreous composition (see enamel, n.); decorate or cover with enamel; also, to form an enamel-like surface upon; also, to decorate as with enamel; variegate with colors; also, to form (figures or ornaments) on a surface with or as with enamel.—e-nam'el, n. A glassy substance, usually opaque, applied by fusion to the surface of metal, pottery, etc., as for ornament or protection; hence, any of various enamel-like varnishes, paints, etc.; a coating applied to the skin to simulate a beautiful complexion; also, enameled work; an artistic work executed in enamel; were coated with enamel; in anat., the hard, glossy, calcareous outer layer of the teeth.—e-nam'el-er, e-nam'el-ler, n.—e-nam'el-ing, e-nam'el-ling, n. The act or work of one who enamels; a decoration or coating of enamel.—e-nam'el-ist, e-nam'el-list, n.

e-nam-or (e-nam'or), etc. See enamour, etc.

e-nam-our (e-nam'or), v. t. [OF. F. enamourer, < en- (see en-) + amour, < L. amor, love.] To inflame with love; charm; captivate: now usually in the passive and followed by of: as, "Rainscourt was reluctantly compelled to acknowledge to himself, that he was violently enamoured of his discarded wife" (Marryat's "King's Own," xxxvi).—e-nam'-our-ment, n.

en-ar-thro-sis (en-ār-thrō'sis), n.; pl. -throses (-thrō'sēz). [NL., < Gr. ἐνάρθρωσις, < ἐν, in, + άρθρωσις, E. arthrosis.] In anat., a joint, as at the shoulder, formed by the socketting of a convex end of one bone in a concavity of another; a ball-and-socket joint.

en-cæ-ni-a (en-sē'ni-ä), n. pl. [L., < Gr. ἐγκαίνια, < ἐν, in, + καῖνός, new.] Festive ceremonies commemorating the founding of a city or the consecration of a church; [cap.] ceremonies held at the University of Oxford, England, in June, in honor of founders and benefactors.

en-cage (en-kāj'), v. t.; -caged, -caging. [See en-.] To confine in or as in a cage; coop up.

en-camp (en-kamp'), v. t. or i. [See en-.] To settle or lodge in a camp.—en-camp'ment, n. The act of encamping; lodgment in a camp; also, the place or quarters occupied in camping; a camp.

en-car-nal-ize (en-kār'nāl-iz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. [See en-.] To invest with a carnal or fleshly form; also, to make carnal or sensual.

en-car-pus (en-kār'pus), n.; pl. -pi (-pī). [NL., < Gr. ἐγκάρπος, containing fruit, < ἐν, in, + καρπός, fruit.] In arch., a sculptured ornament in imitation of a festoon of fruits, leaves, flowers, or other objects, suspended between two points.

en-case (en-kās'), etc. Same as incase, etc.

en-cash (en-kash'), v. t.

[See en-.] To convert (drafts, etc.) into cash; also, to obtain (a sum, etc.) in the form of cash.—en-cash'ment, n.

en-caus-tic (en-kās'tik). [L. encausticus, < Gr. καυστικός, < ἐγκαίειν, burn in, < ἐν, in, + καίειν, burn.] I. a. Noting, pertaining to, or produced by a process of painting with wax colors fixed with heat, or any process, by which colors are burned in. II. n. The art, process, or practice of encaustic painting; also, material produced by an encaustic process.

en-cave (en-kāv'), v. t.; -caved, -caving. [See en-.] To inclose or hide in or as in a cave. See Shakspere's "Othello," iv. 1. 82.

-ence. [F. -ence, < L. -entia, < -ens, ppr. ending (see -ent), or directly from L. -entia.] A noun suffix equivalent to -ance, and corresponding to -ent in adjectives, as in abstinence, consistence, dependence, difference. Cf. -ency.

Encarpus.

(variable) đ as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; û, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

en-ceinte¹ (on-saî't), n. [F., < enceindre, < L. incingere, inclose as with a girdle, < in, in, + cingere, gird.] A wall or inclosure, as of a fortified place; also, the place inclosed.

en-ceinte² (on-saî't), a. [F., < ML. incincta, < L. in-, not, + cincta, pp. fem. of cingere, gird.] Of a woman, pregnant; with child.

en-ce-phal-ic (en-se-fal'ik), a. Of or pertaining to the encephalon or brain; also, situated in the head or within the cranial cavity.

en-ceph-a-li-tis (en-sef-a-li'tis), n. [NL., < encephalon: see encephalon.] In pathol., inflammation of the brain.—en-cephalitis lethargica (lē-thār'ji-kā). [NL., lethargic encephalitis.] In pathol., a form of inflammation of the brain characterized by extreme drowsiness or lethargy, sometimes followed by stupor or paralysis. Also called lethargic encephalitis and sleeping-sickness.—en-ceph-a-lit'ic (-lit'ik), a.

en-ceph-a-loid (en-sef'a-loid), a. [See encephalon and -oid.] Resembling the brain-substance: applied to a soft, rapidly growing, malignant form of cancer.

en-ceph-a-lon (en-sef'a-lon), n.; pl. -la (-lā). [NL., < Gr. ἐγκέφαλον, neut. of ἐγκέφαλος, within the head (as n., the brain), < ἐν, in, + κεφαλή, head.] The brain.

en-ceph-a-lop-a-thy (en-sef-a-lop'a-thi), n. [See encephalon and -pathy.] In pathol., disease of the brain.

en-chafe (en-chāf'), v. t.; -chafed, -chafing. [See en-.] To heat; irritate; chafe. [Obs. or archaic.]

en-chain (en-chān'), v. t. [OF. enchaîner (F. enchaîner), < en- (see en-) + chaîne, E. chain.] To fasten with or as with a chain or chains; fetter; restrain; hold fast, as the attention.—en-chain'ment, n.

en-chant (en-chānt'), v. t. [OF. F. enchanter, < L. incantare, chant a magic formula against, enchant: see incantation.] To subject to magical influence; cast a spell over; bewitch; also, to impart a magical quality or effect to; also, to influence as if by a charm†; delude†; also, to delight in a high degree (as, "Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear": Shakspeare's "Venus and Adonis," 145); charm.—en-chant'er, n. One who enchants; a magician.—en-chanter's nightshade, any of various low, white-flowered herbs (genus Circæa) found in shady woods.—en-chant'ing-ly, adv.—en-chant'ment, n. [OF. F. enchantement.] The act or art of enchanting; the state or fact of being enchanted; that which enchants.—en-chain'tress, n. A woman who enchants; a sorceress; also, a fascinating woman.

en-chase (en-chās'), v. t.; -chased, -chasing. [OF. enchasser (F. enchasser), < en- (see en-) + chasse, shrine, case, setting, < L. capsa, box: see *case*².] To place in a setting, as a gem; serve as a setting for; also, to ornament with precious stones; decorate with inlay; adorn with figures in relief; ornament with or as with engraved figures; also, to engrave (something) on a surface; also, to inclose†.

en-chi-rid-i-on (en-ki-rid'i-on or en-ki-), n.; pl. -ions or -ia (-i-ā). [LL., < Gr. ἐγχειρίδιον, < ἐν, in, + χέειν, hand.] A handbook; a manual.

en-chon-dro-ma (en-kon-drō'mā), n.; pl. -mas or -mata (-mā-tā). [NL., < Gr. ἐν, in, + χόνδρος, cartilage: see -oma.] In pathol., a tumor which consists essentially of cartilage.—en-chon-drom'a-tous (-drom'a-tus), a.

en-cho-ri-al (en-kō'ri-āl), a. [Gr. ἐγχώριος, < ἐν, in, + χώρα, place, country.] Belonging to or used in a particular country; native; domestic; esp., noting or pertaining to the demotic writing of the ancient Egyptians. Also en-chor'ic (-kor'ik).

en-ci-na (en-sē'nā), n. [Sp.] A species of live-oak, Quercus agrifolia, with hard, heavy wood.

en-ci-pher (en-si'fēr), v. t. [See en-.] To put (a letter, etc.) into cipher.

en-cir-cle (en-sēr'kl), v. t.; -cled, -cling. [See en-.] To form a circle round; surround; encompass; also, to make a circling movement about; make the circuit of.—en-cir'cle-ment, n.

en-clasp (en-klāsp'), v. t. [See en-.] To hold in or as in a clasp or embrace.

en-clave (en-klāv'), v. t.; -claved, -claving. [F. enclaver, < ML. inclavare, < L. in, in, + clavis, key (or perhaps clavus, nail).] To inclose (alien territory) within the territory of a country; surround (such territory), as a country does.—en-clave (en-klāv', F. on-klāv), n. [F.] A country, or, esp., an outlying portion of a country, entirely (or mostly) surrounded by the territory of another country. Cf. ex-clave.—en-clave-ment (en-klāv'ment, F. on-klāv-mon), n. [F.] The act or fact of encaving; the condition of being an enclave.

en-clit-ic (en-klit'ik). [LL. encliticus, < Gr. ἐγκλιτικός, < ἐγκλίνειν, lean on, < ἐν, in, on, + κλίνειν, incline.] In gram.: I. a. Of a word, so closely connected with a preceding word as to have no independent accent. Cf. proclitic. II. n. An enclitic word.—en-clit'i-cal-ly, adv.

en-close (en-klōz'), etc. See inclose, etc.

en-cloud (en-kloud'), v. t. [See en-.] To envelop in a cloud; becloud.

en-co-mi-ast (en-kō'mi-ast), n. [Gr. ἐγκωμιστής.] One who utters or writes an encomium; a eulogist.—en-co-mi-as'tic, a. Eulogistic; laudatory.—en-co-mi-as'ti-cal-ly, adv.
en-co-mi-um (en-kō'mi-um), n.; pl. -ums. [L., < Gr. ἐγκώμιον, laudatory ode, eulogy, prop. neut. of ἐγκώμιος, belonging to a Bacchic revel, < ἐν, in, + κῶμος, revel: cf. comedy.] A formal expression of praise; a eulogy; as, "I had often heard very extraordinary encomiums passed on the performances of Mr. T— . . . who paints landscapes" (Smollett's "Humphry Clinker," May 19).

en-com-pass (en-kum'pas), v. t. [See en-.] To form a circle about; encircle; surround; inclose; also, to go round, or make the circuit of (obs. or rare); also, to outwit† (see Shakspeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," ii. 2. 159); also, to compass, bring about, or accomplish (rare).—en-com'pass-ment, n.

en-core (ong-kōr', F. on-kōr), adv. [F., still, yet, further, besides, = It. ancora; origin uncertain.] Again; once more: used in calling for a repetition of a song, etc., or for an additional number or piece.—en-core (ong'kōr, F. on-kōr), n. A demand, as by applause, for a repetition of a song, etc., or for an additional number or piece; also, that which is given in response to such a demand.—en-core (ong-kōr' or ong'kōr), v. t.; -cored, -coring. To call for a repetition of (a song, etc.); call for an encore from (a performer).

en-coun-ter (en-koun'tēr), v. [OF. encontrer, < L. in, in, + contra, against.] I. tr. To meet (a person, a military force, etc.) in conflict; meet with or contend against (difficulties, opposition, etc.); face resolutely; also, to fall in with or come upon (a person or thing), esp. casually or unexpectedly; also, to oppose†; contest†. II. intr. To meet, esp. in conflict: as, "We had nations of savages to encounter with" (Defoe's "Captain Singleton," iv.).—en-coun'ter, n. [OF. encontre.] A meeting in conflict or opposition; a battle; a combat; also, a meeting with a person or thing, esp. casually or unexpectedly; also, a coming together or in contact; also, manner of encountering or meeting†; behavior†.

en-cour-age (en-kur'āj), v. t.; -aged, -aging. [OF. encoragier (F. encourager), < en- (see en-) + corage, E. courage.] To inspire with courage, spirit, or confidence; inspire; embolden; incite or induce; recommend or advise; also, to stimulate by assistance, approval, etc.; countenance; foster; abet.—en-cour'age-ment, n. The act of encouraging, or the state of being encouraged; also, that which encourages.—en-cour'ag-er (-ā-jēr), n.—en-cour'ag-ing-ly, adv.

en-crim-son (en-krim'zn), v. t. [See en-.] To make crimson; redden.

Encrinite. — Head and piece of stem on the left; a, a, parts of stem; b, b, separate joints.

Piece of Derbyshire Marble, showing Encrinites.

en-cri-nite (en'kri-nit), n. [F. encrinite, < Gr. ἐν, in, + κρίνον, lily.] A fossil crinoid. Vast strata of marble in fat, fate, fär, fall, ask, färe; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviäry, flect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actor, natüre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you; many parts of the world are composed chiefly of fragments of encrinetes.

en-croach (en-krōch'), v. i. [OF. encrochier, < en- (see en-) + croc, hook.] To trespass upon the property or rights of another, esp. stealthily or by gradual advances; make gradual inroads; advance beyond proper limits.—en-croach'er, n.—en-croach'ing-ly, adv.—en-croach'ment, n. The act of encroaching; also, anything taken by encroaching.

en-crust (en-krust'), etc. Same as incrusted, etc.

en-cum-ber (en-kum'bër), v. t. [OF. F. encombrer, < ML. incombrare, < L. in, in, + ML. combrus, obstruction, obstacle: cf. L. cumulus, heap.] To impede or hamper; retard; embarrass; also, to burden with obligations, debt, etc.; charge (an estate, etc.) with a mortgage; also, to load or fill with what is obstructive or superfluous; hence, to render difficult; complicate.—en-cum'ber-ment, n.—en-cum'brance (-brāns), n. Encumbered condition; also, that which encumbers; a burden; a hindrance; something useless or superfluous; an annoyance or trouble; a dependent person, esp. a child; in law, a burden or claim on property, as a mortgage.—en-cum'bran-cer (-brān-sēr), n. In law, one who holds an encumbrance.

-ency. A noun suffix, an extended form of -ence, as in consistency, dependency, exigency.

en-cyc-lic (en-sik'lik or -sik'lik). [NL. encyclīcus, for L. encykliōs, < Gr. ἐγκύκλιος, circular, general, < ἐν, in, + κύκλος, circle.] I. a. Encyclical. II. n. An encyclical letter.—en-cyc'li-cal. I. a. Intended for wide or general circulation; circular; general: applied chiefly to ecclesiastical epistles, esp. to letters issued by the Pope to all the bishops in communion with him. II. n. An encyclical letter.

en-cy-clo-pe-di-a, en-cy-clo-pæ-di-a (en-sī-klō-pē'di-ä), n. [ML. encyclopædia, < Gr. ἐγκυκλοπαιδεία, for ἐγκύκλιος παιδεία, general education, complete round or course of learning: see encyclic and cyclopedic.] The entire circle or range of knowledge; also, a work treating separately various topics from all branches of knowledge, usually in alphabetical arrangement; esp. [cap.], the great French work edited by Diderot and D'Alembert, published during the latter half of the 18th century, distinguished by the advanced or radical character of its doctrines regarding political, social, and religious matters; also [l. c.], a work treating exhaustively one art or science, esp. in articles arranged alphabetically; a cyclopedia.—en-cy-clo-pe'dic, en-cy-clo-pæ'dic, a. Covering a wide range of subjects; possessing wide and varied information; pertaining to an encyclopedic. Also en-cy-clo-pe'di-cal, en-cy-clo-pæ'di-cal.—en-cy-clo-pe'dism, en-cy-clo-pæ'dism, n. Encyclopedic learning; also, the writing or compiling of encyclopedias, or the method of presenting information characteristic of them; also [often cap.], the doctrines and influence of the French Encyclopedists.—en-cy-clo-pe'dist, en-cy-clo-pæ'dist, n. A compiler of or contributor to an encyclopedia; [often cap.] one of the collaborators in the Encyclopedia of Diderot and D'Alembert, or an adherent of its doctrines; also [l. c.], one possessing encyclopedic knowledge.

en-cyst (en-sist'), v. t. or i. [See en-.] To inclose or become inclosed in a cyst or vesicle.—en-cys-ta'tion (-sis-tā'shən), en-cyst'ment, n.

end¹ (end), n. [AS. ende = D. einde = G. ende = Icel. endi = Goth. andeis, end: cf. Skt. anta, border, limit, end.] An extremity of anything that is longer than broad; an extreme or furthestmost part of anything extended in space; a limit; a surface bounding an object at one of its extremities; also, termination or conclusion; the concluding part; termination of existence (as, "Of his kingdom there shall be no end": Luke, i. 33); death (as, he turned his thoughts to his approaching end); a cause of death, destruction, or ruin; also, ultimate state (as, "Mark the perfect man, and behold the upright: for the end of that man is peace": Ps. xxxvii. 37); also, event, issue, or result; also, a purpose or aim (as, to accomplish one's end; to gain one's ends); the object for which a thing exists (as, "I have considered the happiness of the people as the end of government": Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," xxiv.); also, a remnant or fragment (as, odds and ends: see odd, n.);

in football, etc., either of the players at the ends of the forward line.—end¹, v. [AS. endian.] I. tr. To bring to an end; conclude; finish; also, to put an end to; destroy; kill; also, to form the end of; also, to set on end. II. intr. To come to an end; terminate; cease; issue or result; sometimes, to die.

end² (end), v. t. [Origin uncertain.] To put (wheat, hay, etc.) into a barn, stack, etc.: as, "His shadowy flail hath thresh'd the corn, That ten day-labourers could not end" (Milton's "L'Allegro," 109). [Now only prov. Eng.]

en-dam-age (en-dam'āj), v. t.; -aged, -aging. [See en-.] To bring damage, harm, or detriment to; harm; injure.

en-dan-ger (en-dān'jēr), v. t. [See en-.] To expose to danger; imperil; also, to cause or incur the danger of.—en-dan'ger-ment, n.

en-dear (en-dēr'), v. t. [See en-.] To make dear, esteemed, or beloved; also, to win the affection of; attract.—

en-dear'ing, p. a. Inspiring affection; also, manifesting affection; caressing.—en-dear'ing-ly, adv.—en-dear'ment, n. The act of endearing, or the state of being endeared; also, something that endears; an endearing attribute; also, action or utterance manifesting affection; a caress; an affectionate term.

en-deav-or (en-dev'ər), v. [OF. F. en devoir, 'in duty,' se mettre en son devoir, apply one's self to one's duty, exert one's self, endeavor: see devoir.] I. tr. To exert (one's self) to do a thing; also, to try to achieve or effect (something: archaic). II. intr. To exert one's self to do or effect something; make an effort; strive; also, to direct one's efforts (after, at, or for something: archaic).—en-deav'or, n. The act of endeavoring; effort; a strenuous effort or attempt.—en-deav'or-er, n.

en-deav'our, etc. British preferred form of endeavor, etc.

endeca, etc. Erroneous form of hendeca, etc.

end-ed (en'ded), a. Having an end: as, blunt-ended; square-ended.

en-dem-ic (en-dem'ik). [F. endémique, < Gr. ἐνδημος, belonging to a people, < ἐν, in, + δῆμος, people: cf. epidemic.] I. a. Peculiar to a particular people or locality, as a disease. Cf. enzootic. II. n. An endemic disease.—en-dem'i-cal, a. Endemic.—en-dem'i-cal-ly, adv.—en-de-mi-ci-ty (-de-mis'i-ti), n. Endemic character.

end-er (en'dēr), n. One who or that which ends.

en-der-mic (en-dēr'mik), a. [Gr. ἐν, in, + δέρμα, skin.] Acting on or through the skin, as a medicine.

end-ing (en'ding), n. A bringing or coming to an end; termination; close; death; also, the final or concluding part; in gram., the terminating syllable or letter of a word; a termination, whether of inflection or of derivation.

en-dive (en'div or -div), n. [F. endive, < L. intibius, intybus.] A cichoriaceous plant, Cichorium endivia, of two main varieties or types, one with finely divided, much curled leaves and one with broad, fleshy leaves, both used for salads.

end-less (end'les), a. [AS. endeleās.] Having no end, limit, or conclusion (as, "the rolling flood of endless years": Cowper's "Conversation," 557); boundless; infinite; interminable; incessant; also, being without ends, or returning upon itself so as to exhibit neither beginning nor end (as, an endless chain, belt, or the like, one made continuous, as by joining the two ends of a single length).—endless screw, a short revolving screw whose thread engages with the teeth of a cog-wheel.—end'less-ly, adv.—end'less-ness, n.

end-long (end'lōng). [AS. andlang, along (see *along*²); later associated with E. *end*¹.] I. prep. Along; from end to end of. [Archaic or prov.] II. adv. At full length; lengthwise; from end to end; along; continuously. [Archaic or prov.]

end-man (end'man), n. A man at one end of a row or line; esp., a man at either end of the line of performers of a minstrel-troupe, who plays on the bones or the tambourine and carries on humorous dialogue with the middle-man, or interlocutor.

Endless Screw and Cog-wheel.

end-most (end'möst), a. superl. Furthest.

endo-, end- Forms of Gr. ἔνδον, within, used in combination. Cf. ento-.—en-do-blast (en'dō-blast), n. [+blast.] In embryol., the endoderm.—en-do-blas'tic (-blas'tik), a.—en-do-car'di-al (-kär'di-al), a. [+Gr. καρδία, heart.] Situated or occurring within the heart; also, pertaining to the endocardium.—en'do-car-di'tis (-di'tis), n. [NL.] In pathol., inflammation of the endocardium.—en-do-car'di-um (-di-um), n. [NL. (Gr. καρδία, heart).] In anat., the delicate serous membrane which lines the cavities of the heart and aids in forming the valves by its reduplications.—en'do-carp (-kärp), n. [+-carp.] In bot., the inner layer of a pericarp, as the stone of certain fruits.

en-do-crine (en'dō-kрін or -krin). [Gr. ἔνδον, within, + κρίνειν, separate.] In anat., physiol., etc.: I. a. Designating any of various glands or organs (as the thyroid gland, suprarenal bodies, pituitary body, etc.) which produce certain important internal secretions (that is, products given up directly to the blood or lymph that act upon particular organs, and which through improper functioning may cause grave disorders or death; of or pertaining to these glands or organs (as, endocrine function; endocrine disorders). Cf. ductless gland, under ductless. II. n. An endocrine gland or organ.—en-do-crin'ic (-krin'ik), a. Of or pertaining to the endocrine glands or organs; endocrine.—en'do-cri-nol'o-gy (-krinol'ō-jī), n. [See -logy.] The science that deals with the endocrine glands or organs, esp. in their relation to bodily changes and disease.—en'do-cri-no-log'i-cal (-nō-loj'i-kal), a.—en'do-cri-nop'a-thy (-nop'a-thi), n.; pl. -thies (-thiz). [See -pathy.] In pathol., disease, or a diseased condition, due to improper functioning of one or more endocrine glands or organs.—en'do-cri-no-path'ic (-nō-path'ik), a.

en-do-derm (en'dō-děrm), n. [See endo- and -derm.] In embryol., the inner primary layer of cells in the embryo of any metazoan animal: opposed to ectoderm.—en-do-der'mal (-dēr'mal), en-do-der'mic, a.

en-dog-a-mous (en-dog'a-mus), a. [See endo- and -gamous.] Marrying customarily within the tribe; pertaining to such marriage: opposed to exogamous.—en-dog'a-my, n.

en-do-gen (en'dō-jen), n. [F. endogène: see endo- and -gen.] In bot., any plant of the obsolete class Endogenæ, including the monocotyledons, whose stems were erroneously supposed to grow from within: opposed to exogen.—en-dog'e-nous (-doj'e-nus), a. Growing or proceeding from within; originating within; in bot., belonging to the endogens; of plants, as the monocotyledons, having stems which ordinarily have no distinction of pith or bark and do not show an annual ring structure; pertaining to plants having such stems.

en-do-lymph (en'dō-limf), n. [See endo- and -lymph.] In anat., the fluid contained within the membranous labyrinth of the ear.

en-do-morph (en'dō-mōrf), n. [See endo- and -morph.] A mineral inclosed within another mineral: opposed to perimorph.—en-do-mor'phic (-mōrf'ik), a.

en-do-par-a-site (en'dō-par'a-sit), n. [See endo-.] An internal parasite: opposed to ectoparasite.

en-do-phloe-um (en'dō-flō'um), n. [NL., < Gr. ἔνδον, within, + φλοῖος, bark.] In bot., the liber or inner bark of plants.

en-do-phil-lous (en'dō-fil'us), a. [See endo- and -phil-lous.] In bot., being or formed within a sheath, as the young leaves of monocotyledons.

Fruit of Peach.
—En, endocarp;
Ep, epicarp; Mes,
mesocarp.

Endoskeleton (a) and Exoskeleton or Dermoskeleton (b) of Pichia.

en-do-phyte (en'dō-fit), n. Same as entophyte.

en-do-plasm (en'dō-plazm), n. [See endo- and -plasm.] In biol., the inner portion of the cytoplasm in the cell of a protozoan; also, the granular inner layer of cytoplasm in a vegetable cell: opposed to ectoplasm.—en-do-plas'mic (-plaz'mik), a.

en-do-plast (en'dō-plast), n. [See endo- and -plast.] In biol., the nucleus of a protozoan.—en-do-plas'tic (-plas'tik), a.

en-do-plēu-ra (en-dō-plō'rā), n. [NL., < Gr. ἔνδον, within, + πλευρά, side: cf. pleura.] In bot., the inner integument of a seed; the tegmen. See cut at episperm.

end-or-gan (end'ōr'gan), n. In physiol., any specialized structure which forms the terminus of a path of nervous conduction, esp. when at the periphery of the body.

en-dorse (en-dōrs'), etc. See indorse, etc.

en-do-sarc (en'dō-särk), n. [See endo- and -sarc.] In biol., the endoplasm of a protozoan: opposed to ectosarc.

en-do-scope (en'dō-skōp), n. [See endo- and -scope.] In med., an instrument designed to give a view of some internal part of the body.—en-dos'co-py (-dos'kō-pi), n.

en-do-skel-e-ton (en'dō-skel'ē-tōn), n. [See endo-.] In anat., the internal skeleton or framework of the body of an animal: opposed to exoskeleton.

en-dos-mo-sis, en-dos- mose (en-dos-mō'sis or en-

doz, en'dos-mōs or en-

doz), n. [See endo-.]

Osmosis from without inward; in the phenomena of osmosis, the action or flow of that fluid which passes with the greater rapidity into the other: opposed to exosmosis.—en-dos-mot'ic (-mot'ik), a.

en-do-sperm (en'dō-spěrm), n. [See endo- and -sperm.]

In bot., a nutritive matter in the ovule of seed-plants, derived from the embryo-sac, supposed to represent the female prothallium, and serving eventually to nourish the embryo. See cut at episperm.

en-do-spore (en'dō-spōr), n. [See endo- and spore.] In bot., the inner coat of a spore; in bact., a spore formed within a cell.—en-do-spo'ri-um (-spō'ri-um), n.; pl. -ria (-ri-ā).

[NL.] In bot., an endospore.—en-dos'po-rous (-dos'pō-rus), a. In bact., forming spores within a cell.

en-dos-te-um (en-dos'tē-um), n.; pl. -tea (-tē-ā). [NL., < Gr. ἔνδον, within, + ὀστέον, bone.] In anat., the vascular membrane lining the medullary cavity of a bone.

en-dos-to-sis (en-dos-tō'sis), n. [NL., < endo- + -ostosis as in exostosis.] In anat., bone formation beginning in the substance of cartilage.

en-do-the-ci-um (en-dō-thē'shi-um), n.; pl. -cia (-shi-ā).

[NL., < Gr. ἔνδον, within, + θήκη, case.] In bot., the lining of the cavity of an anther.

en-do-the-li-al (en-dō-thē'li-al), a. Pertaining to endothelium.—en-do-the'li-oid, a. Resembling endothelium.

en-do-the-li-o-ma (en'dō-thē-li-ō'mā), n.; pl. -mas or -mata (-mā-tā). [NL., < endothelium: see -oma.] In pathol., a tumor (malignant or benign) originating from the endothelium.

en-do-the-li-um (en-dō-thē'li-um), n.; pl. -liums or -lia (-li-ā). [NL., < endo- + -thelium as in epithelium.] In anat., the tissue which lines blood-vessels, lymphatics, serous cavities, and the like: a form of epithelium (in the broad sense).

en-do-ther-mic (en-dō-thēr'mik), a. [Gr. ἔνδον, within, + θερμη, heat.] Noting or pertaining to a chemical change which is accompanied by an absorption of heat: opposed to exothermic.

en-dow (en-dou'), v. t. [OF. endouer, < en- (see en-) + douer, < L. dotare, endow: see dotation.] To provide with dower; also, to provide with a permanent fund or source of income; fig., to furnish, as with some gift, faculty, or quality, mental or physical; equip.—en-dow'er, n.—en-dow'ment, n. The act of endowing; also, that with which a person, institution, etc., is endowed, as property or funds; fig., an attribute of mind or body; a gift of nature.—endowment insurance, a form of insurance providing for the payment of a fixed sum to the insured person at a specified time, or to

Parts of an Endogen.

1. Section of the stem of a palm; e, e, remains of leafstalks; f, bundles of woody fiber. 2. Portion of stem, showing ends of bundles of woody fiber. 3. Endogenous leaf, showing its parallel veins. 4. Monocotyledonous seed, showing (a) its single cotyledon. 5. Germinating palm: b, albumen; c, cotyledon; d, plumule; e, radicle, issuing from a short sheath, the coleorhiza. 6. Flower of endogen.

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, êlect, agôny, intô, ûnite; (obscured) errant, operâ, ardent, actôr, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

his heirs, or a person designated, should he die before the time named.

en-due (en-dû'), v. t.; -dued, -duing. [Var. of indue.] To put on; assume; also, to clothe; also, to invest or endow (as, "The jungle . . . answered as if endued with life, by waving its boughs": Marryat's "King's Own," xlv.).

en-dur-a-ble (en-dûr'ä-bl), a. That may be endured; also, likely to endure or last. — en-dur'a-bly, adv.

en-dur-ance (en-dûr'äns), n. The act, fact, or power of enduring anything; something endured, as a hardship; also, duration; lasting quality.

en-dure (en-dûr'), v.; -dured, -during. [OF. F. endurer, < L. indurare, harden, ML. endure: see indurate.] I. tr. To harden; also, to hold out against; sustain without impairment or yielding; undergo or suffer; also, to bear without resistance or with patience; tolerate. II. intr. To hold out; support adverse force or influence of any kind; suffer without yielding; suffer patiently; also, to continue to exist; last. — en-dur'ing, p. a. That endures; lasting; permanent. — en-dur'ing-ly, adv. — en-dur'ing-ness, n.

end-ways, end-wise (en'dwāz, -wīz), adv. On end; with the end upward or forward; also, in the direction of the ends or end; lengthwise; also, end to end.

-ene. Noun suffix used in chemistry, in names of hydrocarbons, as anthracene, benzene, naphthalene, specif. those of the olefine or ethylene series, as butylene.

en-e-ma (en'g-mä or e-nē'mä), n.; pl. enemas, L. enemata (e-nem'ä-tä). [LL., < Gr. ἐνέμα, < ἐνέμαι, send in, inject, < ἐν, in, + ίέναι, send.] In med., a fluid injected into the rectum.

en-e-my (en'g-mi). [OF. enemi (F. ennemi), < L. inimicus, < in-, not, + amicus, friend: cf. inimical.] I. n.; pl. mies (-miz). One who cherishes hatred or harmful designs against another; an adversary or opponent; something harmful or prejudicial; an armed foe; an opposing military force; a hostile nation or state, or a subject of such a state; with the, the hostile or opposing force (construed as either sing. or pl.); the devil; time (colloq.: as, how goes the enemy? what is the time?). II. a. Inimical† or opposed†; belonging to or having the status of a hostile power, as in time of war.

en-er-get-ic (en-ér-jet'ik), a. [Gr. ἐνεργητικός, < ἐνεργεῖν, operate, effect, influence, < ἐνεργός, at work: see energy.] Operative†; also, powerful in action or effect; also, possessing or exhibiting energy; forcible; vigorous. — en-er-get'i-cal-ly, adv. — en-er-get'ics, n. The science of the laws of energy.

e-ner-gic (e-nér'jik), a. Characterized by, endowed with, or exhibiting energy.

en-er-gize (en'ér-jīz), v.; -gized, -gizing. I. tr. To impart energy to; rouse into energy or activity. II. intr. To be in operation; put forth energy: as, "The intellect of man . . . energizes as well as his eye or ear, and perceives in sights and sounds something beyond them" (J. H. Newman's "Idea of a University," i. 4). — en-er-giz-er (jī-zér), n.

en-er-gu-men (en-ér-gū'men), n. [LL. energumēnos, < Gr. ἐνεργούμενος, ppr. pass. of ἐνεργεῖν, operate, influence: see energetic.] One possessed by an evil spirit; a demoniac; also, a fanatical enthusiast.

en-er-gy (en'ér-ji), n.; pl. -gies (-jiz). [LL. energia, < Gr. ἐνέργεια, action, agency, force, energy, < ἐνεργός, earlier ἐνεργός, at work, active, < ἐν, in, + -εργός, working.] The actual exertion of power; operation; activity; also, power as exerted; also, vigor or intensity of action; vigor or forcefulness of expression; capacity or habit of vigorous activity; also, ability to produce action or effect; in physics, an attribute by virtue of which one portion of matter can produce changes in another; ability to do work; sometimes, according to advanced ideas, all that we observe in the universe.

en-er-vate (en'ér-vāt), v. t.; -vated, -vating. [L. enervatus, pp. of enervare, < e, out of, + nervus, sinew, E. nerve.] To deprive of nerve, force, or strength; weaken; destroy the vigor of; render ineffectual. — e-ner-vate (ē-nér'vāt), a. Enervated: as, "I observed . . . the enervate slightness of his frail form" (Bulwer-Lytton's "Caxtons," xi. 5). — en-er-va-tion (en-ér-vā'shən), n. — en-er-va-tor, n.

e-neuch, e-neugh (ē-nūch'), Scotch forms of enough.

en-face (en-fäs'), v. t.; -faced, -facing. [See en- and face, and cf. endorse, indorse.] To write, print, or stamp something on the face of (a note, draft, etc.); also, to write, print, or stamp (a mark or a form of words) on the face of a note, draft, etc. — en-face'ment, n.

en-fee-ble (en-fē'bl), v. t.; -bled, -bling. [OF. enfeblir, < en- (see en-) + feble, E. feeble.] To make feeble; weaken. — en-fee'ble-ment, n. — en-fee'bler, n.

en-feoff (en-fēf'), v. t. [AF. enfeoffer, OF. enfeffer, < en- (see en-) + feffer, E. feoff.] To invest with a fief or fee; also, to give as a fief; hence, to surrender (as, "The skipping king . . . Enfeoff'd himself to popularity": Shakspeare's "1 Henry IV," iii. 2. 69). — en-feoff'ment, n.

en-fet-ter (en-fet'ēr), v. t. [See en-.] To bind with or as with fetters.

en-fi-lade (en-fi-lād'), n. [F., an arrangement of things as on a thread, < enfiler, to thread, string, go through, rake with fire, < en- (see en-) + fil, a thread, E. *file*³.] Milit., a situation of works, troops, etc., rendering them subject to a sweeping fire from flank to flank; also, the fire thus directed; a raking fire. — en-fi-lade', v. t.; -laded, -lading. To attack, or be in position to attack, with an enfilade, or raking fire.

en-fleur-rage (en-flē-rāzh), n. [F., < enfleuruer, impregnate with the perfume of flowers, < en- (see en-) + fleur, flower: see flower.] A process of extracting perfumes by exposing inodorous oils or fats to the exhalations from the flowers: used when the flower oils are too delicate or fugitive to undergo distillation.

en-fold (en-föld'), etc. See infold, etc.

en-force (en-fōrs'), v. t.; -forced, -forcing. [OF. enforcier (F. enforcir, < ML. infortiare, < L. in, in, + fortis, strong.) To strengthen†; impress or urge (an argument, etc.) forcibly; lay stress upon; also, to drive by force† (as, "As swift as stones Enforced from the old Assyrian slings": Shakspeare's "Henry V," iv. 7. 65); use force upon† (as, "The flint . . . much enforced, shows a hasty spark": Shakspeare's "Julius Caesar," iv. 3. 112); compel, constrain, or oblige to do something (archaic); also, to produce or effect by force; obtain (payment, obedience, etc.) by force or compulsion; impose (a course of action) upon a person; support (a demand, etc.) by force; put or keep (laws or rules) in force; compel obedience to. — en-force'a-ble, en-for-ci-ble, a. That may be enforced. — en-for'ced-ly, adv. — en-force'ment, n. The act or process of enforcing; also, that which enforces, as a compelling influence (archaic: as, "Let gentleness my strong enforcement be," Shakspeare's "As You Like It," ii. 7. 118). — en-for'cer, n.

en-frame (en-frām'), v. t.; -framed, -framing. [See en-.] To inclose in or as in a frame.

en-fran-chise (en-fran'chīz or -chiz), v. t.; -chised, -chising. [OF. enfranchir (enfranchiss-), < en- (see en-) + franc, free, E. *frank*².] To set free; liberate, as from slavery; release from obligation; also, to grant a franchise to; admit to citizenship, esp. to the right of voting; fig., to naturalize, as foreign words. — en-fran'chise-ment (-chiz-mēt), n. — en-fran'chis-er (-chī-zér or -chī-zér), n.

en-free-dom† (en-frē'dqm), v. t. [See en-.] To set free. See Shakspeare's "Love's Labour's Lost," iii. 1. 125.

en-gage (en-gāj'), v.; -gaged, -gaging. [F. engager, < en- (see en-) + gage, pledge, E. *gage*¹.] I. tr. To pledge, pawn, or stake (now rare: as, "This to be true, I do engage my life," Shakspeare's "As You Like It," v. 4. 172); also, to bind as by pledge, promise, contract, or oath; make liable; specif., to betroth; also, to secure for aid, employment, use, etc. (as, to engage a workman; to engage a carriage or a room); hire; also, to urge, persuade, or induce (now rare); gain or win over (now rare); attract or please (as, "This humanity and good nature engages everybody to him": Addison, in "Spectator," 106); also, to attract and hold fast (the attention, interest, etc.); occupy the attention or efforts of (a person, etc.); entangle or involve (as, "O limed soul, that, struggling to be free, Art more engaged!" Shakspeare's "Hamlet," iii. 3. 69); also, to cross (weapons); bring (troops) into conflict; enter into conflict with (as, our army engaged the enemy at ten o'clock); in arch., to attach or secure (cf. engaged); in mech., to cause to become interlocked; interlock with. II. intr. To pledge one's word; enter into an agreement; take employment; also, to occupy one's self; become involved; also, to cross weapons; enter into conflict; in mech., to interlock. —en-gaged', p. a. Under engagement; pledged; betrothed; busy or occupied; involved; in arch., secured to, or (actually or apparently) partly sunk into, something else, as a column with respect to a wall; in mech., interlocked; of wheels, in gear with each other. —en-gage'ment, n. The act of engaging, or the state of being engaged; a pledge or promise; an obligation; an agreement; an appointment, as for a meeting; betrothal; employment, or a period or post of employment; occupation; an affair of business; partiality or bias; the crossing of weapons; an encounter, conflict, or battle; also, that which engages or induces to any course; in mech., the act or state of interlocking. —en-ga'ger (gā'jēr), n. —en-ga'ging-ly, adv. —en-ga'ging-ness, n.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ′, primary accent; ″, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

en-garb (en-gārb'), v. t. [See en-] To put into a garb; clothe; dress; garb.

en-gar-land (en-gār'land), v. t. [See en-] To encircle with a garland.

en-gen-der (en-jen'dēr), v. [OF. F. engendrer, < L. ingenerare: see *ingenerate*².] I. tr. To beget; procreate; hence, to produce, cause, or give rise to (as, "Violence naturally engenders violence": Macaulay's "Hist. of Eng.," i.). II. intr. To meet in sexual embrace; also, to be produced or caused; come into existence. —en-gen-der-er, n. —en-gen-der-ment, n.

en-gild (en-gild'), v. t. [See en-] To gild.

en-gine (en'jin), n. [OF. F. engin, < L. ingenium, nature, natural capacity, cleverness, an invention, LL. a mechanical contrivance, engine, < L. in, in, + gen-, beget, produce: see genius.] Innate or natural ability; ingenuity; also, an artifice (as, "Nor did he 'scape By all his engines": Milton's "Paradise Lost," i. 750); also, a means or agency; an agent; also, any mechanical contrivance; a machine or instrument used in warfare, as a battering-ram, catapult, piece of artillery, etc.; an instrument of torture, esp. the rack; any mechanism or machine designed to convert energy into mechanical work, as a steam-engine (which see), internal-combustion engine (which see), etc.; often, a steam-engine; in popular use, a locomotive engine, or locomotive, for moving cars on a railroad. —en'gine, v. t.; -gined, -gining. To contrive or plan; also, to furnish with an engine or engines. —en-gi-neer' (-ji-nēr'), n. [Obs. F. ingenier (F. ingénieur), OF. engineier, < ML. ingeniarius, < LL. ingenium.] One who contrives, plans, or invents; a constructor of military engines; a designer and constructor of military works ("military engineer"); one versed in the design, construction, and care of roads, bridges, canals, aqueducts, harbors, etc. ("civil engineer"); one versed in the design, construction, and use of engines or machines, or in any of the various branches of engineering (as, a mechanical engineer; an electrical engineer; a mining engineer; a structural engineer); an artisan who constructs or operates machines (Eng.); one who manages a stationary or locomotive engine; a member of a division or corps of men in the army or navy, trained to engineering work; fig., one who carries through any scheme or enterprise by skill or artful management; a skilful manager. —en-gi-neer', v. I. tr. To plan, construct, or manage as an engineer; fig., to arrange, manage, or carry through by skilful or artful contrivance (as, "A conspiracy was carefully engineered to replace the Directory by three 'Consuls'": H. G. Wells's "Outline of History," xxxviii. § 2). II. intr. To act as, or perform the work of, an engineer. —en-gi-neer'ing, n. The action, work, or profession of an engineer; the art or science of the engineer's profession; the design and construction of military works, of roads, bridges, canals, etc., of engines or machines, or of any structures or works requiring special knowledge and application of the principles of mechanics (see engineer, n.); fig., skilful or artful contrivance; maneuvering. —en-gi-neer'ship, n. —en-gin-er', n. Var. of engineer. See Shakspere's "Hamlet," iii. 4. 206. —en-gine-ry, n. The constructing of engines or machines, or the art or work of an engineer; also, engines or machines collectively; esp., engines of war; artillery; fig., skilful or artful contrivance; machinations; a system of contrivance or artifice. —en'gine=turn'ing, n. A kind of ornamental decoration, as on a watchcase, executed by means of a rose-engine.

en-gird (en-gērd'), v. t.; -girt or -girded, -girding. [See en-] To surround with or as with a girdle; encircle.

en-gir-dle (en-gēr'dl), v. t.; -dled, -dling. [See en-] To engird; encircle.

en-gla-cial (en-glā'shīəl), a. [See en-] In geol., being within a glacier.

Eng-land-er (ing'glān-dēr), n. A native of England.

Eng-lish (ing'lish), a. [AS. Englisc, < Engle, Angle, the Angles: see *Angle*².] Of, pertaining to, or characteristic of England or its inhabitants; also, belonging or pertaining to, or spoken or written in, the English language. —Eng-lish horn. See under horn, n. —Eng'lish, n. The English people collectively; also, the English language (divided into Anglo-Saxon or Old English, extending to about 1150; Middle English, from about 1150 to about 1500; and modern English, from about 1500); an English translation or equivalent, as of a foreign word; the sense in plain English, as of anything obscure; also, a printing-type (14 point) of a size between pica and Columbian (see type); [also l. c.] in billiards, a spinning motion imparted to a ball by a quick stroke on one side of its center (U. S.). —the king's (or queen's) Eng-lish, idiomatic or correct English. —Eng'lish, v. I. tr. To translate into English; express in plain English; adopt (a foreign word) into English; [also l. c.] in billiards, to impart English to (a ball: U. S.). II. intr. [Also l. c.] In billiards, to impart English to a ball. [U. S.] —Eng'lish-er, n. An Englishman; also, one who translates into English. —Eng'lish-ism, n. The characteristics, or a characteristic or mode (as of speech), peculiar to the English; also, attachment to what is English. —Eng'lish-man (-mān), n.; pl. -men. A native, or a naturalized citizen, of England; also, an English ship. —Eng'lish-ness, n. —Eng'lish-ry, n. The state of being English; also, a population that is English or of English descent. —Eng'lish-wom'an, n.; pl. -women (-wim'en).

en-globe (en-glōb'), v. t.; -globed, -gloping. [See en-] To inclose in or form into a globe. —en-globe'ment, n.

en-glut (en-glūt'), v. t.; -glutted, -glutting. [OF. englotir (F. engloutir), < ML. inglutire, < L. in, in, + glutire, swallow.] To swallow or gulp down; also, to glut or gorge. [Archaic.]

en-gorge (en-gōrj'), v.; -gorged, -gorging. [F. engorger, < en- (see en-) + gorge, E. gorge.] I. tr. To swallow greedily; also, to glut or gorge; in pathol., to congest with blood. II. intr. To feed greedily. —en-gorge'ment, n. The act of engorging, or the state of being engorged; in pathol., congestion with blood.

en-goue-ment, en-goû-ment (on-gō-mōn), n. [F., < engouer, choke as in gorging.] Infatuation; unreasoning fondness.

en-graft (en-grāft'), etc. Same as ingraft, etc.

en-grail (en-grāl'), v. t. [OF. engresler (F. engrêler), appar. < en- (see en-) + gresle, hail.] To ornament the edge of (a heraldic ordinary, etc.) with curved indentations; also, to give a serrated outline to (as, "over hills with peaky tops en-grail'd": Tennyson's "Palace of Art," 113); also, to adorn (poetic). —en-grail'ment, n. Indentation in curved lines; also, an engraved circle or a ring of dots round the edge of a coin, medal, etc.

en-grain (en-grān'), etc. Same as ingrain, etc.

en-grave (en-grāv'), v. t.; pret. -graved, pp. -graved (archaic -graven), ppr. -graving. [See en- and *grave*¹.] To carve (letters, designs, etc.) on a hard surface, as of metal, stone, or wood; represent by such carving; fig., to impress deeply; infix; also, to mark or ornament with incised letters, designs, etc. —en-grav'er (-grāv'ēr), n. —en-grav'ing, n. The act or art of one that engraves; the art of forming designs on a hard surface, as of metal or wood, for printing; also, the design engraved; an engraved plate or block; also, an impression from this; a print.

Specimens of Engine-turning.

Escutcheon with a Bend Engrailed.

en-gross (en-grōs'), v. t. [OF. engrossier, make big or bigger, AF. engrosser, write large, also OF. en gros, in large quantities, by wholesale; all < L. in, in, + LL. grossus, thick, E. gross.] To make large, thick, or gross†; also, to acquire the whole of (a commodity), in order to control the market; get exclusive control of; monopolize; also, to occupy wholly, as the mind or attention; absorb; also, to write or copy in a fair, large hand or in a formal manner for preservation, as a public document or record.—en-gross'er, n.—en-gross'ing, p. a. That engrosses; fully occupying the mind or attention; absorbing.—en-gross'ing-ly, adv.—en-gross'ment, n.

en-gulf (en-gulf'), v. t. [See en-.] To swallow up in or as in a gulf; cast into or as into a gulf.—en-gulf'ment, n.

en-hance (en-hāns'), v. t.; -hanced, -hancing. [AF. enhancer, OF. enhancier, < en- (see en-) + haucier (F. hausser), raise, < L. altus, high.] To raise or lift up†; also, to raise to a higher degree; intensify; make greater; increase.—en-hance'ment, n.—en-han'cer, n.

en-har-mon-ic (en-här-mon'ik), a. [LL. enharmonicus, < Gr. ἐναρμονικός, < ἐν, in, + ἀρμονία, E. harmony.] In music, noting or pertaining to a style of music, or a scale or instrument, employing intervals smaller than a semitone; esp., pertaining to a use of notes which differ in name and in position on the staff (as G# and Ab), but which refer to identical tones or keys on instruments like the piano-forte.—en-har-mon'i-cal-ly, adv.

en-heart-en (en-här'tn), v. t. [See en-.] To hearten; cheer.

e-nig-ma (ē-nig'mä), n.; pl. -mas. [L. ænigma, < Gr. αἰνίγμα, < αἰνιόσθαι, speak darkly, < ainos, tale, fable.] A saying, question, pictorial representation, or the like, containing a hidden meaning to be discovered; a riddle; fig., anything puzzling or inexplicable.—e-nig-mat-ic, e-nig-mat-i-cal (ē-nig-mat'ik, -i-kəl, or en-ig'), a. [LL. ænigmatiscus.] Containing or resembling an enigma; puzzling; perplexing; mysterious: as, "a most involved, self-secluded, altogether enigmatic nature" (Carlyle's "Sartor Resartus," i. 4).—e-nig-mat'i-cal-ly, adv.—e-nig-ma-tize (ē-nig'mā-tiz), v. t.; -tized, -tizing. To express enigmatically; make enigmatic.

en-isle (en-il'), v. t.; -isled, -isling. [See en-.] To make an island of; place on an island; isolate. [Poetic.]

en-jamb-ment (en-jamb'ment), n. [F. enjambement, < enjamber, stride over, project, < en- (see en-) + jambe, leg.] In pros., the carrying over from one verse (line) or couplet to the next of an essential portion of a phrase or other closely related sequence of words.

en-join (en-join'), v. t. [OF. F. enjoindre, < L. injungere (pp. injunctus), join into or to, impose, enjoin, < in, in, + jungere, join.] To join† or unite†; also, to impose (a penalty, task, etc.); prescribe (a course of action, etc.) with authority or emphasis; order or direct (a person, etc.) to do something; also, to prohibit or forbid.—en-join'er, n.—en-join'ment, n.

en-joy (en-joy'), v. t. [OF. enjoir, < en- (see en-) + joir, E. joy, v.] To experience with joy; take pleasure in; hence, to have and use with satisfaction; have the benefit of; possess or have (usually something desirable); also, to find or experience pleasure for (one's self).—en-joy'a-ble, a. That may be enjoyed; affording enjoyment.—en-joy'a-ble-ness, n.—en-joy'a-bly, adv.—en-joy'er, n.—en-joy'ment, n. The act or experience of enjoying; pleasure; a particular form or source of pleasure.

en-kin-dle (en-kin'dl), v. t.; -dled, -dling. [See en-.] To kindle into flame, ardor, activity, etc.

en-lace (en-lās'), v. t.; -laced, -lacing. [OF. enlacier (F. enlacer), < en- (see en-) + lacier, E. lace, v.] To wind or bind as with a lace or cord; also, to interlace; interweave; intertwine.—en-lace'ment, n.

en-large (en-lärj'), v.; -larged, -laring. [OF. enlarger, enlargir, < en- (see en-) + large, E. large.] I. tr. To make larger; increase in extent, bulk, or quantity; extend; add to; augment; magnify; increase the capacity or scope of; expand; also, to set at large (archaic). II. intr. To grow larger; increase; expand; also, to speak or write at large;

expatiate.—en-large'a-ble, a.—en-large'ment, n. The act of enlarging; increase; expansion; amplification; release, as from confinement (as, "Then shall there enlargement and deliverance arise to the Jews": Esther, iv. 14); also, enlarged state or form; also, anything, as a photograph, that is an enlarged form of something else; also, anything that enlarges something else; an addition.—en-lar'ger, n.

en-light-en (en-lī'tn), v. t. [See en-.] To shed light upon (archaic); fig., to supply with intellectual or spiritual light; instruct; inform.—en-light'ened, p. a. Intellectually or morally advanced; free from ignorance, prejudice, superstition, etc.—en-light'en-er, n.—en-light'en-ment, n. The act of enlightening, or the state of being enlightened; illumination of the mind; sometimes [also cap.], same as aufklärung.

en-link (en-link'), v. t. [See en-.] To link or chain together.

en-list (en-list'), v. [See en-.] I. tr. To enter on a list; enroll; specif., to engage for military or naval service; hence, to secure (a person, or his services, support, sympathy, etc.) in aid of some cause, enterprise, etc.; utilize (natural forces, etc.) for a special purpose. II. intr. To engage for military or naval service; hence, to enter into some cause, enterprise, etc.—en-list'er, n.—en-list'ment, n.

en-liv-en (en-lī'vn), v. t. [Cf. the earlier enlive, enlive, v., < en- + live.] To give life to†; hence, to make vigorous or active; invigorate; stimulate; also, to make sprightly, gay, or cheerful; brighten.—en-liv'en-er, n.—en-liv'en-ing-ly, adv.—en-liv'en-ment, n.

en-mesh (en-mesh'), v. t. [See en-.] To inclose or catch in or as in the meshes of a net; insnare; entangle.—en-mesh'ment, n.

en-mi-ty (en'mi-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [OF. ennemistie (F. inimitié), < L. inimicus, see enemy.] A feeling or condition of hostility; hatred; ill-will; animosity; antagonism; variance.

en-ne-ad (en'ē-ad), n. [LL. enneas (ennead), < Gr. ἐννέα (ēnnēad), < ēnnēa, nine.] The number nine; a group of nine persons or things.—en-ne-ad'ic, a.

en-ne-a-gon (en'ē-a-gon), n. [Gr. ἐννέα, nine, + γωνία, angle.] A plane figure having nine angles and nine sides.—en-ne-ag'o-nal (-ag'ō-nal), a.

en-ne-a-he-dron (en'ē-a-hē'drōn), n. [Gr. ἐννέα, nine, + ἔδρα, seat, base.] A solid figure having nine faces.—en'ne-a-he'dral, a.

en-no-ble (e-nō'bl), v. t.; -bled, -bling. [F. ennoblir, < en- (see en-) + noble: see noble.] To make noble; confer a title of nobility on; also, to impart nobility to; elevate in degree, excellence, or respect; dignify; exalt.—en-no'ble-ment, n.—en-no'bler, n.

en-nui (ōn-nwē), n. [F.: see annoy, n.] A feeling of weariness and discontent resulting from satiety or lack of interest; boredom.—en-nui (ōn'nwē), v. t.; -nued or -nuyed, -nuying. To affect with ennui; bore.—en-nuy-é (ōn-nwē-yā), a. [F. (fem. ennuyée), pp. of ennuyer: cf. annoy, v.] Affected with ennui; bored: as, "the constrained effort of the ennuyé man of the world" (Poe's "Fall of the House of Usher").

e-nol'o-gy, etc. See anology, etc.

e-norm (ē-nōrm'), a. [OF. enorme (F. énorme), < L. enormis, < e, out of, + norma, rule, E. norm: cf. enormous.] Abnormal†; extraordinary†; abnormally large (archaic); outrageous†.

e-nor-mi-ty (ē-nōr'mi-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [OF. enormie (F. énormité), < L. enormitas, < enormis, E. enorm, enormous.] Abnormal character†; also, enormous size or extent (now rare); also, outrageous or heinous character, as of an offense; atrociousness; also, something outrageous or heinous; a monstrous offense.

e-nor-mous (ē-nōr'mus), a. [L. enormis: see enorm.] Abnormal†; also, greatly exceeding the common size, extent, etc.; huge; immense; monstrous; also, outrageous or atrocious (as, enormous wickedness).—e-nor'mous-ly, adv.—e-nor'mous-ness, n.

e-nough (ē-nuf'). [AS. genōg, genōh, = D. genoeg = G. genug = Icel. gnōgr = Goth. ganōhs, enough.] I. a. Adequate for the want or need; sufficient for the purpose or to satisfy desire. II. n. An adequate quantity or number;

(variable) đ as d or j, š as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bombon; ′, primary accent; ¨, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

as much as is needed or desired; a sufficiency.—e-nough', adv. In a quantity or degree that answers a purpose or satisfies a need or desire; sufficiently; fully or quite (as, he is ready enough to accept the offer); tolerably or passably (as, "Thou singest well enough for a shift": Shakspeare's "Much Ado about Nothing," ii. 3. 80).

e-nounce (ē-nouns'), v. t.; enounced, enouncing. [F. ēnoncer, < L. enuntiare, < e, out of, + nuntiare, announce, declare, < nuntius, messenger.] To announce, declare, or proclaim; also, to state definitely, as a proposition; also, to utter or pronounce, as words.—e-nounce'ment, n.

e-now (ē-nou'), Archaic or prov. form of enough: as, "She has cause enow" (Swinburne's "Chastelard," v. 2).

en-quire (en-kwī'), etc. Same as inquire, etc.

en-rage (en-rāj'), v.; -raged, -raging. [OF. F. enrager, intr., < en- (see en-) + rage, E. rage.] I.† intr. To go mad; be maddened; become furiously angry; rage. II. tr. To affect with madness or rabies†; put into a rage; infuriate; exasperate.—en-raged', p. a. Maddened†; also, infuriated; furious; also, passionate†.—en-rage'ment, n.

en-rank (en-rangk'), v. t. [See en-.] To arrange in a rank or row, or in ranks.

en-rapt (en-rapt'), a. [See en- and rapt.] Rapt; transported; enraptured.

en-rap-ture (en-rap'tūr), v. t.; -tured, -turing. [See en-.] To move to rapture; delight beyond measure.

en-reg-is-ter (en-rej'is-tēr), v. t. [F. enregistrer, < en- (see en-) + registre, E. register.] To register; record.

en-rich (en-rich'), v. t. [OF. F. enrichir, < en- (see en-) + riche, E. rich.] To make rich or richer; supply with riches, wealth, abundant or valuable possessions, etc. (as, commerce enriches a nation; museums enriched by gifts); supply with abundance of anything desirable (as, to enrich the mind with knowledge); embellish, as with anything ornamental; make finer in quality as by supplying desirable elements or ingredients (as, to enrich a language with new words; to enrich food with cream or butter); fertilize (the soil).—en-rich'er, n.—en-rich'ment, n. The act of enriching, or the state of being enriched; also, something that enriches.

en-ridge (en-rij'), v. t. [See en-.] To form into ridges.

en-ring (en-ring'), v. t. [See en-.] To form a ring or circle about; encircle; also, to put a ring or rings on; adorn with a ring.

en-robe (en-rōb'), v. t.; -robed, -robing. [See en-.] To invest with or as with a robe; dress; attire.—en-robe'ment, n.

en-roll, en-rol (en-rōl'), v. t.; -rolled, -rolling. [OF. enroller (F. enrôler), < en- (see en-) + rolle, E. roll, n.] To write (a name), or insert the name of (a person), in a roll or register; place upon a list; enlist; also, to put in a record; record; also, to engross (a document)†; also, to roll or wrap up.—en-roll'er, n.—en-rol'ment, en-roll'ment, n. The act of enrolling, or the process of being enrolled; registration, as of a deed or a judgment; also, a roll, register, or record.

en-root (en-rōt'), v. t. [See en-.] To fix by the root; fig., to fix fast; implant deeply.

ens (enz), n.; pl. entia (en'shi-ä). [L., ppr. of esse, be.] Being, considered in the abstract; also, something that is; an entity.

en-sam-ple (en-sam'pl), n. [OF. ensample, for essample, example, E. example.] An example, or instance, pattern, or warning. [Archaic.]

en-san-guine (en-sang'gwin), v. t.; -guined, -guining. [See en- and sanguine.] To stain or cover with blood; color blood-red.

en-sate (en'sāt), a. [NL. ensatus, < L. ensis, sword.] In bot. and zool., sword-shaped; ensiform.

en-sconce (en-skons'), v. t.; -sconced, -sconcing. [See en- and sconce.] Orig., to furnish or protect with or as with a sconce or fort; also, to shelter within or as if behind a fortification (as, "Pedro de Vargas . . . alcaide of Gibraltar . . . lay ensconced in his old warrior rock as in a citadel": Irving's "Conquest of Granada," xi.); hence, later, to establish in any place affording concealment; settle securely or snugly (as, to ensconce one's self in an arm-chair).

en-seal (en-sēl'), v. t. [OF. enseeler, < en- (see en-) +

seel, E. seal.] To put a seal or stamp on (archaic); also, to close up with a seal; seal up.

en-seam† (en-sēm'), v. t. [OF. ensaimer (F. ensimer), < en- (see en-) + saim, E. seam.] To make greasy; befoul with or as with grease. See Shakspeare's "Hamlet," iii. 4. 92.

en-semble (on-soñbl), n. [F., < L. insimul, at the same time, < in, in, + simul, at the same time, together.] All the parts of a thing taken together, so that each part is considered only in relation to the whole; the united performance of the full number of singers, musicians, etc.; the general effect, as of a work of art.

en-sep-ul-cher, en-sep-ul-chre (en-sep'ul-kēr), v. t.; -chered, -chred, -chering, -chring. [See en-.] To entomb.

en-sheathe (en-shēth'), v. t. Same as insheathe.

en-shield (en-shēld'), v. t.; obs. pp. enshield. [See en-.] To shield.

en-shrine (en-shrīn'), v. t.; -shrined, -shrining. [See en-.] To inclose in or as in a shrine; cherish as sacred.—en-shrine'ment, n.

en-shroud (en-shroud'), v. t. [See en-.] To cover with or as with a shroud; shroud; conceal.

en-si-form (en'si-fōrm), a. [L. ensis, sword: see -form.] Sword-shaped; ensate; xiphoid.

en-sign (en'sin), n. [OF. F. enseigne, < L. insignia: see insignia.] A sign, token, emblem, or badge; esp., a badge of office or authority; also, a flag or banner, as of a nation; a body of troops serving under one banner†; a standard-bearer, formerly one in the British army; in the U. S. navy (also pron. en'sn), the lowest commissioned officer, ranking next below a lieutenant (junior grade).—en'sign-cy (-sī), en'sign-ship, n.

en-si-lage (en'si-lāj), n. [F., < ensiler: see ensile.] The preservation of green fodder in a silo or pit; also, fodder thus preserved.—en'si-lage, v. t.; -laged, -laging. To store by ensilage; ensile.

en-sile (en-sil' or en'sil'), v. t.; -siled, -siling. [F. ensiler, < Sp. ensilar, < en- (< L. in, in) + silo: see silo.] To preserve (green fodder) in a silo; make into ensilage.

en-sky (en-ski'), v. t.; -skied, -skying. [See en-.] To place in the sky. See Shakspeare's "Measure for Measure," i. 4. 34.

en-slave (en-slāv'), v. t.; -slaved, -slaving. [See en-.] To make a slave of; reduce to slavery.—en-slave'ment, n.—en-slav'er (-slāv'vēr), n.

en-snare (en-snār'), etc. See insnare, etc.

en-sor-cel, en-sor-cell (en-sōr'sel), v. t. [F. ensorceler, OF. ensorcerer, < en- (see en-) + sorcier: see sorcerer.] To use sorcery on; bewitch. [Archaic.]

en-soul (en-sōl'), v. t. [See en-.] To endow with a soul.

en-sphere (en-sfēr'), v. t.; -sphered, -sphering. [See en-.] To inclose in or make into a sphere.

en-steep (en-stēp'), v. t. Same as insteeep.

en-sue (en-sū'), v.; -sued, -suing. [OF. F. ensuivre, < L. insequi, < in, in, on, + sequi, follow.] I.† tr. To follow; pursue: as, "Let him seek peace, and ensue it" (1 Pet. iii. 11).

II. intr. To follow in order; come afterward, esp. in immediate succession; also, to follow as a consequence, or result (as, "That out of distance might ensue Desire of nearness doubly sweet": Tennyson's "In Memoriam," cxvii).

en-sure (en-shōr'), v. t.; -sured, -suring. [AF. enseurer, < OF. en- (see en-) + seur, E. sure.] To assure or convince (a person), as of a thing†; inform (a person) positively†; warrant (a thing) as sure or true†; engage or pledge, esp. in marriage†; guarantee against risk† (now insure); also, to make secure or safe, as from harm; render sure or certain to come, occur, etc. (as, measures to ensure the success of an undertaking); secure, or bring surely, as to a person (as, this letter will ensure you a hearing). See insure.—en-sur'er, n.

en-swathe (en-swāth'), v. t.; -swathed, -swathing. [See en-.] To swathe.—en-swathe'ment, n.

-ent. [F. -ent, < L. -ent, nom. -ens, ppr. ending, corresponding to E. -ing; or directly from L. -ent.] A suffix equivalent to -ant, in adjectives and nouns, as in ardent, crescent, dependent, different, expedient, orient. Cf. -ence.

en-tab-la-ture (en-tab'lā-tūr), n. [Obs. F. entablature, < L. in, in, + tabula, board, plank, E. table.] That part of a fat, fāte, fūr, fūll, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, argōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; tū, then; y, you; classic architectural order which rests horizontally upon the columns, and consists of the architrave, frieze, and cornice; hence, a similar part in other constructions.

Ensiform Leaf of
Iris.

en-tail (en-tāl'), v. t. [See en- and *tail*¹.] To limit the inheritance of (a landed estate) to a specified line of heirs, so that it cannot be alienated, or bequeathed at pleasure, by any one possessor; hence, to confer as if by entail; cause to descend to a fixed series of possessors; also, to impose as a burden upon some one; hence, to bring on or involve (as, a loss entailing no regret).—en-tail', n. The act of entailing, or the state of being entailed; the rule of descent settled for an estate; any predetermined order of succession, as to an office; the transmission as an inalienable inheritance of qualities, obligations, etc.; hence, necessary sequence; also, that which is entailed, as an estate.—en-tail'er, n.—en-tail'ment, n.

en-tame (en-tām'), v. t.; -lamed, taming. [See en-.] To tame. en-tangle (en-tang'gl), v. t.; -gled, -gling. [See en-.] To make tangled; complicate; also, to involve in anything tangled; insnare; involve in anything from which extrication is difficult; hence, to involve in difficulties; embarrass; perplex.—en-tan'gle-ment, n. The act of entangling, or the state of being entangled; also, that which entangles; a snare; an embarrassment; a complication.—en-tan'gler, n.—en-tan'gling-ly, adv.

en-ta-sis (en'tā-sis), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐντασις, a stretching, < ἐντείνω, < έν, in, + τείνω, stretch.] In arch., the swelling or outward curve of the shaft of a column.

Entasis. a, c, arcs of entasis. (The proportions and the amount of entasis are much exaggerated for the purpose of illustration.)

en-tel-e-chy (en-tel'e-ki), n.; pl. -chies (-kiz). [L. entelechia, < Gr. ἐντελέχεια, < έν τέλει έχειν, be in fulfilment or completion.] In philos., a realization or actuality as opposed to a potentiality: an Aristotelian term.

en-tel-lus (en-tel'us), n. [NL.; appar. named from Entellus, character (elderly man) in Virgil's "Æneid." The sacred monkey of India, Semnopithecus entellus, remarkable for its long tail, full beard, and cap-like growth of hair on the crown, peaked over the eyes.

en-tente (on-toñt'), n. [F.] Understanding; also, the parties to an understanding.—entente cordiale (kór-dyál). [F.] A cordial or friendly understanding, as between one government and another.

—Little Entente. See under little, a.—Triple Entente. See under triple, a.

Entellus.

en-ter (en'tér), v. [OF. F. entrer, < L. intrare, < intro, within: see intro-.] I. tr. To come or go into; pass within; break into; penetrate or pierce; make a beginning of or in, or begin upon; engage or become involved in; become a member of, or join; also, to put in or insert; cause to be admitted, as into a school, competition, etc.; initiate or introduce; make a record of, record, or register; report (a vessel, etc.) at the custom-house; place in regular form before a court, as a writ; file an application for (public lands).

II. intr. To come or go in; make an entrance, as on the stage; be admitted; make a beginning.—to enter into, to make a beginning in; engage in; assume the obligation of; become a party to; take up the consideration of (a subject); take an interest or part in; sympathize with (a person's feelings, etc.); also, to form a constituent part or ingredient of (as, lead enters into the composition of pewter).—en'ter-a-ble, a. That may be entered.

en-te-ral-gia (en-tē-ral'jā), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐντερον, intestine, + άλγος, pain.] In pathol., spasmodic pain in the intestines or abdomen; colic.

en-te-rec-to-my (en-tē-rek'tō-mi), n. [Gr. ἐντερον, intestine, + έκ, out of, + -τομή, E. -tomy.] In surg., removal of a portion of the intestine.

en-ter-er (en'tēr-ēr), n. One who enters.

en-ter-ic (en-ter'ik), a. [Gr. εντερικός.] Pertaining to the enteron; intestinal.—enteric fever, typhoid fever.

en-te-ri-tis (en-tē-rī'tis), n. [NL., < enteron.] In pathol., inflammation of the intestines.

en-te-ron (en'tē-ron), n.; pl. -ra (-rā). [NL., < Gr. ἐντερον, < έν, in.] In anat. and zool., the alimentary canal; the digestive tract.

en-te-rot-o-my (en-tē-rot'ō-mi), n. [See enteron and -tomy.] In surg., cutting or incision of the intestine.

en-ter-prise (en'tēr-priz), n. [OF. F. entreprise, < entreprendre, take in hand, undertake, < L. inter, between, + prehendere, seize, take.] A project undertaken or to be undertaken, esp. one that is of some importance or that requires boldness or energy; also, engagement in such projects; also, boldness or readiness in undertaking, adventurous spirit, or energy (as, "I had ultimately mustered enterprise enough to visit the theatre": Hawthorne's "Blithedale Romance," xviii.).—en'ter-prise, v. t. or i.; -prised, -prising. To undertake; venture: now chiefly as in enterprising, p. a.—en-ter-pris-ing, p. a. That undertakes; characterized by enterprise; ready to undertake projects of importance or difficulty, or untried schemes; energetic in carrying out any undertaking.—en'ter-pris-ing-ly, adv.

en-ter-tain (en-tēr-tān'), v. [OF. F. entretenir, < L. inter, between, + tenere, hold.] I. tr. To hold mutually; also, to maintain or keep up (archaic); take into or retain in one's service; also, to keep engaged or occupied, as a person's time or attention; while away (time); engage (an enemy's forces, etc.) in a contest or conflict; hold the attention of agreeably, divert, or amuse; also, to give admittance or reception to; specif., to receive as a guest, esp. at one's table; show hospitality to; also, to admit into the mind; consider; also, to hold in the mind; harbor; cherish; also, to deal with or treat. II. intr. To exercise hospitality; entertain company; provide entertainment for guests.—en-ter-tain'a-ble, a. That may be entertained.—en-ter-tain'er, n. One who entertains; esp., a person, as a singer, reciter, or the like, who gives, or takes part in, public entertainments.—en-ter-tain'ing, p. a. Affording entertainment; amusing; diverting.—en-ter-tain'ing-ly, adv.—en-ter-tain'ing-ness, n.—en-ter-tain'ment, n. The act of entertaining, or the state of being entertained; maintenance in service; employment; pay; agreeable occupation for the mind, diversion, or amusement; something affording diversion or amusement, esp. an exhibition or performance of some kind; the reception of guests; hospitable provision for the wants of guests; a feast or banquet; consideration, as of a question; a harboring or cherishing, as of a notion or design.

en-thet-ic (en-thet'ik), a. [Gr. ἐνθετικός, fit for implanting, < έν τέθει, put in, < έν, in, + τίθειναι, set.] Introduced from without, as diseases propagated by inoculation.

en-thrall, en-thral (en-thrāl'), v. t.; -thrall'd, -thralling. [See en-.] To put or hold in thralldom; subjugate; captivate: now usually fig.—en-thrall'er, n.—en-thral'ment, en-thrall'ment, n.

en-throne (en-thrōn'), v. t.; -throned, -throning. [See en-.] To place on or as on a throne; invest with sovereign or episcopal authority; exalt.—en-throne'ment, n.

en-thuse (en-thūz'), v. t. or i.; -thused, -thusing. [From enthusiasm.] To move to or show enthusiasm. [Colloq.]

en-thu-si-asm (en-thū'zi-azm), n. [Gr. ἐνθουσιασμός, < ἐνθουσιάζειν, be divinely inspired, < ἐνθεός, possessed by a god, < ἐν, in, + θεός, god.] Possession or inspiration by a god (archaic); a belief or conceit of being divinely inspired or commissioned (archaic); hence, extravagant religious emotion (archaic); now, usually, absorbing or controlling possession of the mind by any interest or pursuit; passionate zeal; ardor; lively interest.—en-thu'si-ast (-ast), n. [Gr. ἐνθουσιαστής.] One possessed or inspired by a god (archaic); one who believes himself to be divinely instructed or commissioned; hence, one who holds extravagant and visionary religious opinions, or is characterized by excessive religious fervor; also, one who is filled with enthusiasm for some principle, pursuit, etc.; a person of ardent zeal.—en-thu-si-as'tic, a. [Gr. ἐνθουσιαστικός.] Pertaining to or of the nature of enthusiasm; also, full of or characterized by enthusiasm; ardent.—en-thu-si-as'ti-cal-ly, adv.

en-thy-meme (en'thi-mēm), n. [L. enthymema, < Gr. ἐνθύμημα, < ἐνθυμίσθαι, consider, infer, < ἐν, in, + θυμός, mind.] In logic, a syllogism in which one premise is unexpressed.

en-tice (en-tis'), v. t.; -ticed, -ticing. [OF. enticier, incite, < L. in, in, + titio, firebrand.] To incite or instigate; also, to draw on by exciting hope or desire; allure; inveigle.—en-tice'a-ble, a. That may be enticed.—en-tice'ment, n. The act or practice of enticing, esp. to evil; the state of being enticed; also, that which entices; an allurement.—en-ti'cer (-ti'sér), n.—en-ti'cing-ly, adv.

en-tire (en-tir'). [OF. F. entier, < L. integer, untouched, whole: see integer.] I. a. Whole; complete; having all the parts or elements; also, full or thorough (as, entire freedom of choice); also, not broken, mutilated, or decayed; intact; not gelded (as, an entire horse); unimpaired or undiminished; also, being wholly of one piece; undivided; continuous; hence, having an unbroken outline; without notches or indentations, as leaves, shells, etc.; also, wholly of one kind; unmixed or pure; also, unblemished or blameless (as, "Daughter of God and man; immortal Eve! For such thou art; from sin and blame entire": Milton's "Paradise Lost," ix. 292); genuine or sincere (as, "I have often heard Of your entire affection to Bianca": Shakspeare's "Taming of the Shrew," iv. 2. 23); also, noting a kind of malt liquor (see entire, n.). II. n. The whole (as, "That one hour of misery and disgrace influenced the entire of a future life": Lover's "Handy Andy," xxxv.); entirety; also, an entire horse; a stallion; also (Eng.), a kind of malt liquor; porter.—en-tire'ly, adv. Wholly or fully; completely or unreservedly; solely or exclusively; heartily or sincerely.—en-tire'ness, n.—en-tire'ty (-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [OF. entierete, < L. integritas: cf. integrity.] The state of being entire; completeness; also, that which is entire; the whole.

en-ti-tle (en-ti'tl), v. t.; -tled, -tling. [OF. entituler (F. intituler), < ML. intitulare, < L. in, in, + titulus, E. title.] To call (a book or other thing, or a person) by a particular title or name; name; style; often, to designate (a person) by an honorary title; also, now esp. of qualities, actions, circumstances, etc., to give (a person or thing) a title, right, or claim to something; furnish with grounds for laying claim.

en-ti-ty (en'ti-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [ML. entitas, < L. ens: see ens.] Being or existence; also, essential nature; essence; also, something that has a real existence; a thing.

ento-, ent-. Forms of Gr. ἐντός, within, used in combination. Cf. endo-.

en-to-derm (en'tō-děrm), etc. Same as endoderm, etc.

en-toil (en-toil'), v. t. [See en-.] To take in toils; insnare. [Archaic.]

en-tomb (en-tōm'), v. t. [See en-.] To place in a tomb; bury; inter; also, to serve as a tomb for.—en-tomb'ment, n.

en-tom-ic (en-tom'ik), a. [Gr. ἐντομον, insect, prop. neut. of ἐντομος, cut in pieces, < ἐντέμνειν, cut in, < ἐν, in, + τέμνειν, cut: cf. insect.] Of or pertaining to insects.

entomo-. Form of Gr. ἐντομον, insect (see entomic), used in combination.

en-tom-o-lite (en-tom'ō-lit), n. [See entomo- and -lite.] A fossil insect.

en-to-mo-log-ic, en-to-mo-log-i-cal (en'tō-mō-loj'ik, -i-kal), a. [See entomology.] Of or pertaining to entomology.—en-to-mol'o-gist (-mol'ō-jist), n. One versed in entomology.—en-to-mol'o-gize (-jīz), v. i.; -gized, -gizing. To study entomology; gather entomological specimens.

en-to-mol-o-gy (en-tō-mol'ō-jī), n. [See entomo- and -logy.] The branch of zoology that treats of insects; also, a treatise on this subject.

en-to-moph-a-gous (en-tō-mol'ā-gus), a. [See entomo- and -phagous.] Feeding on insects; insectivorous.

en-to-moph-i-lous (en-tō-mol'ī-lus), a. [See entomo- and -philous.] Insect-loving: applied to plants in which fertilization is effected by insects.

en-to-mos-tra-can (en-tō-mos'tra-kān). [NL. Entomostraca, pl., < Gr. ἐντομος, cut in pieces, + στρακον, shell.] I. a. Belonging to the Entomostraca, a subclass of crustaceans which have a moderately simple organization, including the cirripeds, etc. II. n. An entomostracan crustacean.

en-to-phyte (en'tō-fit), n. [See ento- and -phyte.] In bot., a plant living within an animal or another plant, usually as a parasite.—en-to-phyt'ic (-fit'ik), a.

en-top-tic (en-top'tik), a. [See ento- and optic.] Pertaining to or originating in the interior of the eye.

ent-or-gan-ism (ent-ōr'gan-izm), n. [See ento-.] An internal parasite.

en-tot-ic (en-tot'ik), a. [See ento- and otic.] Pertaining to or originating in the interior of the ear.

en-tou-rage (ōn-tō-rāzh), n. [F., < entourer, surround, < en (< L. in), in, + tour, turn, circuit: see tour.] Surroundings; environment; esp., those habitually about a person; attendants, as of a person of rank.

en-to-zo-ōn (en-tō-zō'ōn), n.; pl. -zoa (-zō'ā). [NL.: see ento- and -zoön.] An internal parasite, as an intestinal worm: opposed to ectozoön.—en-to-zo'an, a. and n.—en-to-zo'ic, a.

en-tr'acte (ōn-trākt), n. [F., 'between-act.'] The interval between two consecutive acts of a theatrical or operatic performance; a performance, as of music or dancing, given during such an interval; a piece of music or the like for giving during such an interval.

en-trails (en'trālz), n. pl. [OF. F. entrailles, < ML. intalia, < L. intra, within: see intra-.] The internal parts of the trunk of an animal body; esp., the intestines or bowels; hence, the internal parts of anything.

en-train¹ (en-trān'), v. t. or i. [See en-.] To put or go aboard a train.

en-train² (en-trān'), v. t. [F. entraîner, < en- (< L. inde, thence) + trainer, draw, E. *train*².] To draw away or on; carry along.—en-train'ment, n.

en-tram-mel (en-tram'el), v. t.; -meled or -melled, -meling or -melling. [See en-.] To trammel; hamper; restrain.

en-trance¹ (en'trans), n. [OF. entrance, < entrer: see enter.] The act of entering, as into a place or upon new duties; beginning or commencement; also, power or liberty of entering; admission; also, a point or place of entering; an opening or passage for entering; naut., the bow or forepart of a vessel under the water-line.

en-trance² (en-trāns'), v. t.; -tranced, -trancing. [See en-.] To put into a trance; hence, to ravish with delight or wonder, or enrapture (as, "poets whose effusions entranced my soul, and lifted it to heaven": Mrs. Shelley's "Frankenstein," letter i.).—en-tran'ced-ly (-trān'sed-li), adv.—en-trance'ment, n.—en-tran'cing-ly, adv.

en-trant (en'trant). [F. entrant, ppr. of entrer: see enter.] I. a. Entering. II. n. One who enters; a beginner; a new member.

en-trap (en-trap'), v. t.; -trapped, -trapping. [OF. entraper, < en- (see en-) + trape, trap.] To catch in or as in a trap; insnare; bring unawares into difficulty or danger; draw into contradiction or damaging admission.—en-trap'ment, n.—en-trap'per, n.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, elect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

en-treas-ure (en-trehz'ūr), v. t.; -ured, -uring. [See en-.] To lay up in or as in a treasury.

en-treat (en-trēt'), v. [OF. entraitier, < en- (see en-) + traitier, E. treat.] I. tr. To treat, or deal with (archaic); while away (time)†; also, to ask earnestly for (something); also, to make supplication to (a person); beseech; implore; also, to persuade by entreaty†. II. intr. To treat of a subject†; also, to negotiate†; also, to make an earnest request or petition.—en-treat'ing-ly, adv.—en-treat'ment, n. Treatment (archaic); also, something entreated, as a favor†.—en-treat'y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). Treatment†; also, earnest request or petition; solicitation; supplication.

en-tre-chat (on-trē-shā), n. [F.] In dancing, a leap during which the feet are struck together a number of times.

en-trée (on'trā, F. on-trā), n. [F.: see entry.] Entry; entrance; also, a made dish such as is served at dinner before the roast or between the regular or principal courses.

en-tre-mets (on-trē-mā), n.; pl. -mets (F. -mā). [F., 'between-dish.'] A dish served at dinner between the principal courses or with the roast; a side-dish.

en-trench (en-trench'), etc. Same as intrench, etc.

en-tre-pôt (on'trē-pō, F. on-trē-pō), n. [F., < L. interpositum, neut. pp. of interponere: see interposition.] Temporary deposit or storage of goods; also, a building or place for such deposit; a warehouse; also, a commercial center to which goods are sent for distribution (as, "Antwerp . . . had now become the principal entrepôt and exchange of Europe": Motley's "Dutch Republic," Introd., xiii.).

en-tre-pre-neur (on-trē-prē-nēr), n. [F., < entreprendre, undertake: see enterprise.] One who undertakes to carry out any enterprise; a contractor; an employer of productive labor.

en-tre-sol (en'tēr-sol, F. on-trē-sol), n. [F., 'between-floor.'] A low story between two other stories of greater height, usually one immediately above the ground floor; a mezzanine.

en-tro-pi-on, en-tro-pi-um (en-trō'pi-on, -um), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐν, in, + τροπή in ἐκτροπή, E. ectropion.] In pathol., an abnormal turning or rolling inward of the eyelid, so that the lashes come in contact with the eyeball. Cf. ectropion.

en-trust (en-trust'), v. t. See intrust.

en-try (en'tri), n.; pl. -tries (-triz). [OF. entree (F. entrée), < entrer: see enter.] The act of entering; entrance; a formal entrance; beginning†; a place of ingress or entrance, esp. an entrance-hall or vestibule, or (in England) an alley, or passageway between houses; the act of entering or recording something in a book, register, list, etc.; the statement, etc., so entered or recorded; the giving of an account of a ship's cargo at a custom-house, to obtain permission to land the goods; in law, the act of taking possession of lands or tenements by entering or setting foot on them; also, the act of intrusion into a building, essential to complete the crime of burglary.—double entry, in bookkeeping, a method in which each transaction is entered twice in the ledger, once to the credit of one account, and once to the debit of another.—single entry, in bookkeeping, a method in which each transaction is entered in the ledger in but one account.—en'try-man (-man), n.; pl. -men. One who enters upon a tract of public land with intent to acquire it under the provisions of the law.—en'try-way, n. A passage for affording entrance; an entry.

en-twine (en-twin'), v. t. or i.; -twined, -twining. [See en-.] To twine together or about.—en-twine'ment, n.

en-twist (en-twist'), v. t. [See en-.] To twist together or about.

e-nu-cle-ate (ē-nū'klē-āt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [L. enucleatus, pp. of enucleare, < e, out of, + nucleus, kernel, E. nucleus.] To remove (a kernel, tumor, eyeball, etc.) from its enveloping cover; fig., to bring out; disclose; in biol., to deprive of the nucleus.—e-nu'cle-ate, a. Having no nucleus.—e-nu-cle-a'tion (-ā'shōn), n.

e-nu-mer-a-ble (ē-nū'mē-rā-bl), a. That may be enumerated.

e-nu-mer-ate (ē-nū'mē-rāt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [L. enumeratus, pp. of enumerare, < e, out, + numerare, count, E. number, v.] To count; ascertain the number of; more commonly, to mention separately as if in counting; name one by one; specify as in a list.—e-nu-mer-a'tion (-mē-rā'shōn), n. [L. enumeratio(n)-.] The act of enumerating; a census; a specifying of things one by one, as in a list; also, a catalogue or list.—e-nu'mer-a-tive (-mē-rā-tiv), a. Serving to enumerate; enumerating.—e-nu'mer-a-tor (-mē-rā-tōr), n.

e-nun-ci-ate (ē-nun'si-āt), v.; -ated, -ating. [L. enuntiatus, pp. of enunciare: see enounce.] I. tr. To announce or proclaim; also, to state or declare definitely, as a theory; enounce; also, to utter or pronounce (words, etc.), esp. in a particular manner. II. intr. To utter or pronounce words, etc., in a particular manner.—e-nun-ci-a'tion (-ā'shōn), n. [L. enunciatio(n)-.] The act or the manner of enunciating; announcement; statement; utterance or pronunciation.—e-nun'ci-a-tive (-ā-tiv), a. Serving to enunciate; declaratory; also, pertaining to vocal utterance.—e-nun'ci-a-tor (-ā-tōr), n. One who or that which enunciates.—e-nun'ci-a-to-ry (-ā-tō-ri), a. Enunciative.

en-ure (en-ūr), etc. Same as inure, etc.

en-veil (en-vāl'), v. t. [See en-.] To veil.

en-vel-op (en-vel'op), v. t.; -oped, -oping. [OF. envoluper (F. envelopper), < en- (see en-) + voluper, voloper, wrap: cf. develop.] To wrap up in or as in a covering; inwrap; also, to serve as a wrapping or covering for; also, to surround entirely.—en-vel-op, en-ve-lope (en-vel'op, en've-lōp), n. [F. enveloppe.] That which envelops; a wrapper; an integument; a surrounding cover; esp. (sometimes, when spelled envelope, pron. on've-lōp), a cover for a letter or the like, usually so made that it can be sealed or fastened; in bot., a surrounding or inclosing part, as of leaves (see floral envelop, under floral); in astron., a surrounding nebulous mass, as the coma of a comet; specif., a vaporous bow or shell (regarded as part of the coma) partly surrounding the nucleus of a comet on the side next the sun; in geom., a curve or surface touching a continuous series of curves or surfaces.—en-vel'op-er, n.—en-vel'op-ment, n. The act of enveloping, or the state of being enveloped; also, a wrapping or covering.

en-ven-om (en-ven'om), v. t. [OF. F. envenimer, < en- (see en-) + (OF.) venim, E. venom.] To impregnate with venom; make poisonous; hence, to embitter; also, to corrupt or vitiate.

en-vi-a-ble (en'vi-ā-bl), a. That is to be envied; worthy to be envied.—en'vi-a-ble-ness, n.—en'vi-a-bly, adv.

en-vi-er (en'vi-ēr), n. One who envies.

en-vi-ous (en'vi-us), a. [OF. envieux (F. envieux), < L. invidiosus, < invidia, E. envy: cf. invidious.] Spiteful† or malicious†; also, full of, feeling, or expressing envy (as, to be envious of a person's success; an envious attack); also, grudging† or sparing†; also, emulous† (as, "She saw the young Corinthian Lycius Charioting foremost in the envious race": Keats's "Lamia," i.); also, enviable† (as, "He to him leapt, and that same envious gage Of victors glory from him snatch away": Spenser's "Faerie Queene," i. 4. 39).—en'vi-ous-ly, adv.—en'vi-ous-ness, n.

en-vi-ron (en'vi-rōn), v. t.; -roned, -roning. [OF. F. environner, < environ, around, about, < en (< L. in), in, + viron, a round, circuit, akin to vire, turn, E. *veer*².] To form a circle or ring round; surround; envelop; inclose; beset.—en-vi'ron-ment, n. The act of environing, or the state of being environed; also, that which environs; the aggregate of surrounding things, conditions, or influences.—

House in Paris. — E, E, entresol.

Envelops of Comets.

en-vi-ron-men'tal (-men'tal), a. — en-vi-rons (en-vi'ronz or en-vi'ronz), n. pl. [F.] Surrounding parts or districts, as of a city; outskirts; suburbs: as, "Roland . . . fixed his abode in the environs of Paris" (Bulwer-Lytton's "Caxtons," xvi. 4).

en-vis-age (en-viz'aj), v. t.; -aged, -aging. [F. envisager, < en- (see en-) + visage, E. visage.] To look in the face of; face; contemplate or regard; in philos., to perceive by intuition. — en-vis'age-ment, n.

en-voy¹ (en'voi), n. [OF. envoy (F. envoi), < envoyer (F. envoyer), earlier enveier, send, < L. in, in, on, + via, way.] A postscript to a poetical or prose composition, sometimes serving as a dedication; esp., a short stanza concluding a poem in certain archaic metrical forms.

en-voy² (en'voi), n. [F. envoyé, prop. pp. of envoyer, send: see *envoy*¹.] A diplomatic agent; specif., a diplomatic agent of the second rank, next in dignity after an ambassador (called, in full, 'envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary'); also, any accredited messenger or representative. — en-voy-ship, n.

en-vy (en'vi), n.; pl. -vies (-viz). [OF. F. envie, < L. invidia, < invidus, envious, < invidere, look at with ill-will, envy, grudge, < in, in, on, + videre, see.] Ill-will; also, odium or ill repute; also, a feeling of discontent or mortification, usually accompanied with some degree of ill-will, excited by the contemplation of another's superiority, advantages, or success; a covetous desire for some advantage possessed by another; also, an object of envious feeling. — en'vy, v.; -vied, -vying. I. tr. To regard with envy; be envious of; also, to begrudge. II. † intr. To be affected with envy: as, "I envy at their liberty" (Shakspeare's "King John," iii. 4. 73). — en'vy-ing-ly, adv.

en-wheel (en-hwēl'), v. t. [See en-.] To encircle.

en-wind (en-wind'), v. t.; -wound, -winding. [See en-.] To wind or coil about; encircle: as, "The moony vapour rolling round the King . . . Enwound him fold by fold" (Tennyson's "Guinevere," 599).

en-womb (en-wōm'), v. t. [See en-.] To inclose in or as in the womb.

en-wrap (en-rap'), v. t. Same as inwrap.

en-wreath (en-rēth'), v. t. Same as inwreath.

en-zo-öt-ic (en-zō-ot'ik). [= F. enzootique, < Gr. ên, in, + ζῶον, animal: cf. epizootic.] I. a. Prevailing among or afflicting animals in a particular locality: said of diseases. Cf. endemic. II. n. An enzoötic disease.

en-zy-me (en'zim or -zim), n. [MGr. ἐνζυμος, leavened, < Gr. ên, in, + ζύμη, leaven.] Any of various complex organic substances, as pepsin, originating from living cells, and capable of producing by catalytic action certain chemical changes in organic substances; a chemical, unorganized, or soluble ferment. — en-zym'ic (-zim'ik), a.

E-o-cene (ē'ō-sēn). [Gr. ἥως, dawn, + καινός, new.] In geol.: I. a. Noting or pertaining to the earliest principal subdivision of the Tertiary period or system. II. n. The Eocene subdivision of the Tertiary.

E-o-li-an (ē-ō'li-an), etc. See *Æolian*¹, etc.

e-o-lith (ē'ō-lith), n. [Gr. ἥως, dawn, + λίθος, stone.] A rude stone implement characteristic of the earliest stage of human culture. — e-o-lith'ic, a. Noting or pertaining to the earliest stage of human culture, characterized by the existence of the most primitive stone implements.

e-on (ē'ōn), etc. See æon, etc.

E-os (ē'os), n. [L., < Gr. Ἥως, personification of ἥως, dawn: see east.] The Greek goddess of the dawn, identified with the Roman Aurora.

e-o-sin (ē'ō-sin), n. [Gr. ἥως, dawn.] A coal-tar product, used for dyeing silk, etc., rose-red.

e-o-zo-ic (ē-ō-zō'ik), a. [Gr. ἥως, dawn, + ζῶή, life.] In geol., characterized by the earliest traces of life, as found in fossiliferous rocks.

ep-. See epi-.

e-pact (ē'pakt), n. [F. épacte, < LL. epacta, < Gr. ἐπακτή, prop. fem. of ἐπακτός, verbal adj. of ἐπάγειν, bring on, add, < ἐπι, on, + αἶγειν, lead.] The excess in days of a solar year over a lunar year; also, the age in days of the calendar moon at the beginning of the year (Jan. 1).

ep-arch (ep'ark), n. [Gr. ἐπαρχος, < ἐπι, on, + ἀρχεω, lead, rule.] The prefect or governor of an eparchy; in the é-pa-tant (ā-pā-tān), a. [F. (fem. épátante), pp. of épater, break off the foot of (a dog, a goblet, etc.), knock down, amaze.] Amazing; startling.

Gr. Ch., a metropolitan or bishop of an eparchy. — ep'ar-chy (-ār-ki), n.; pl. -chies (-kiz). [Gr. ἐπαρχία.] In ancient Greece, a province; in modern Greece, one of the administrative subdivisions of a province; in the Gr. Ch., a diocese or archdiocese.

e-paule (e-pāl'), n. [F. épaule, shoulder, < L. spatula, broad piece: see spatula.] In fort., the shoulder or angle where the face and flank of a bastion meet.

ep-au-let, ep-au-lette (ep'ā-let), n. [F. épaulette, < épaule: see epaule.] An ornamental shoulder-piece worn on uniforms, chiefly by military and naval officers; also, a similar ornamental piece in women's dress; also, in armor, any of various pieces or coverings for protecting the shoulder.

— ep'au-let-ed, ep'au-let-ted, a.

e-paul-ment, e-paule-ment

(e-pāl'ment), n. [F. épaulement, < épauler, protect by an epaulment, < épaule: see epaule.] In fort., an earthwork or other screen for protecting a battery, troops, or the like, as from flanking fire.

ep-ax-i-al (ep-ak'si-āl), a. [See epi- and *axis*¹.] In anat., above or posterior to an axis. — ep-ax'i-al-ly, adv.

ep-ei-rog-e-ny (ep-i-roj'e-ni), etc. See epirogeny, etc.

ep-en-ceph-a-lon (ep-en-sef'ā-lon), n.; pl. -la (-lā). [NL.: see epi- and encephalon.] In anat., the part of the brain behind the mesencephalon, consisting of cerebellum and pons Varolii; the hindbrain. — ep'en-ce-phal'ic (-se-fal'ik), a.

e-pen-the-sis (e-pen'the-sis), n.; pl. -theses (-the-sēz). [LL., < Gr. ἐπιθεσις, < ἐπιτιθέναι, insert, < ἐπι, on, to, + τιθέναι, put in: see enthetic.] In gram., the insertion of a letter or syllable in the midst of a word, as to facilitate pronunciation; also, the transposition of a semivowel to the syllable preceding that in which it originally occurred. — ep-en-thet-ic (ep-en-thet'ik), a.

e-pergne (ē-pēr'n or e-pār'n'), n. [Cf. F. épargne, saving, economy, also formerly treasury or exchequer.] An ornamental piece for the center of a dinner-table, consisting of a dish or receptacle, often elaborate in design, with several tiers, branches, or divisions, for holding fruit, flowers, etc.

ep-ex-e-ge-sis (ep-ek-sē-jē'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐπεξηγησις, < ἐπεξηγέσθαι, explain in addition, < ἐπι, on, to, + ἐξηγέσθαι: see exegesis.] In rhet., the addition of a word or words to explain a preceding word or sentence; the word or words so added. — ep-ex-e-get'ic, ep-ex-e-get'i-cal (-jet'ik, -i-kāl), a. — ep-ex-e-get'i-cal-ly, adv.

e-phah (ē'fā), n. [Heb.] A Hebrew dry measure, equal to about a bushel. See Ezek. xlv. 11.

e-phebe (e-fēb' or ef'ēb), n. [L. ephebus, < Gr. ἐφηβος, < ἐπι, on, + ἥβη, youth, youthful prime: cf. Hebe.] Among the ancient Greeks, a youth just entering upon manhood or just enrolled as a citizen. — e-phe-bic (e-fē'bik), a. [Gr. ἐφηβικός.] Of or pertaining to ephebes: as, the ephebic oath (the oath by which ephebes bound themselves to the service and defense of their country; hence, any solemn promise made by young men to become good citizens).

eph-e-drine, eph-e-drin (ef'e-drin, also e-fed'rin), n. [NL. Ephedra (see def.; in L. the plant horsetail, < Gr. ἐφέδρα, < ἐπι, on, + ἔδρα, seat) + *-ine*².] In phar., a crystalline alkaloid, C₁₀H₁₅NO, found in species of Ephedra (a genus of jointed, nearly leafless, equisetum-like desert shrubs): used esp. for colds, asthma, and hay-fever.

e-phem-e-ra (e-fem'e-rā or ē-), n.; pl. -ras or -ræ (-rē). [ML. (the fever) and NL. (the insect), < Gr. ἐφήμερος, of or for a day, short-lived, daily, < ἐπι, on, + ἡμέρα, day.] A fever lasting but a day or a very short time; also, an ephemeral or May-fly; hence, anything short-lived or transitory. — e-phem'e-ral, a. Lasting but a day or a very short time; short-lived; transitory. — e-phem-e-ral-i-ty (-ral'i-ti), n. — e-phem'e-ral-ly, adv.

Epaulets, 15th and 16th centuries.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, flect, agōny, into, qūite; (absured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

ephem-e-rid (e-fem'ē-rid or ē-), n. [NL. Ephemeridæ, pl., < ephemera: see ephemera.] Any of the Ephemeridæ, a family of winged insects having the fore wings much larger than the hind wings and dying soon after reaching the adult stage; a May-fly.

ephem-e-ris (e-fem'ē-ris or ē-), n.; pl. ephemerides (ef-ē-mer'i-dēz). [L., < Gr. ἐφημερίς, diary, calendar, record, < ἐφήμερος: see ephemera.] A diary†; also, an almanac† or calendar†; also, a table showing the daily positions of a heavenly body; an astronomical almanac containing such tables.

ephem-e-ron (e-fem'ē-ron or ē-), n.; pl. -rons or -ra (-rā). [Gr. ἐφήμερον, neut. of ἐφήμερος: see ephemera.] An ephemerid; hence, anything short-lived or ephemeral.

ephem-e-rous (e-fem'ē-rus or ē-), a. Ephemeral.

E-phes-ian (e-fē'zhī-ən or ē-), I. a. Of or pertaining to Ephesus, an ancient city of Asia Minor, famous for its temple of Artemis (Diana). II. n. A native or inhabitant of Ephesus; a boon companion† (see Shakspeare's "2 Henry IV.," ii. 2. 164); pl., the book of the New Testament called in full "The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Ephesians."

eph-od (ef'od), n. [Heb.] A kind of Jewish priestly vestment, esp. that worn by the high priest.

eph-or (ef'or), n. [L. ephorus, < Gr. ἐφορος, < ἐφορᾶν, oversee, < ἐπι, on, + ορᾶν, see.] One of a body of magistrates in various ancient Dorian states, esp. at Sparta, where a body of five was annually elected by the people.—eph'-or-al, a.

epi-, ep-. [Gr. ἐπι-, ἐπ-, repr. ἐπί, prep. and adv.] A prefix of Greek origin, meaning 'on,' 'upon,' 'to,' 'against,' sometimes used as an English formative, chiefly in scientific words, as epazial, epiblast, epicalyx, epizoön.

ep-i-blast (ep'i-blast), n. [See epi- and -blast.] In embryol., the ectoderm.—ep-i-blas'tic (-blas'tik), a.

ep-ic (ep'ik). [L. epicus, < Gr. ἐπικός, < ἐπος, word, tale; see epos.] I. a. Noting or pertaining to that form of poetic composition (examples of which are Homer's "Iliad" and "Odyssey" and Virgil's "Æneid") in which, in elevated style, a series of heroic achievements or events is dealt with at length as a continuous narrative and a poetic whole; hence, resembling or suggestive of such poetry; of heroic character; imposing. II. n. An epic poem; any epic-like composition; something worthy to form the subject of an epic poem (as, "That life was a noble Christian epic": Motley's "Dutch Republic," vi. 7).—ep'i-cal, a. Epic.—ep'i-cal-ly, adv.

ep-i-ca-lyx (ep-i-kā'liks), n. [See epi-.] In bot., an involucre resembling an outer calyx, as in the mallow.

ep-i-car-di-um (ep-i-kār'di-um), n.; pl. -dia (-di-ā). [NL., < Gr. ἐπί, on, + καρδία, heart.] In anat., the inner serous layer of the pericardium, lying directly upon the heart.—ep-i-car'di-al, a.

ep-i-carp (ep-i-kārp), n. [See epi- and -carp.] In bot., the outermost layer of a pericarp, as the rind or peel of certain fruits. See cut at endocarp.

ep-i-ce-di-um (ep-i-sē'di-um), n.; pl. -di-ums or -dia (-di-ā). [L., < Gr. ἐπικηδεῖον, prop. neut. of ἐπικηδεύς, of or for a funeral, < ἐπί, on, + κηδος, care, funeral.] A funeral song; a dirge.

ep-i-cene (ep'i-sēn), a. [L. epicænus, < Gr. ἐπικαινός, < ἐπί, on, to, + καινός, common.] Belonging to, or partaking of the characteristics of, both sexes; hence, of no definite sex or kind; in gram., of nouns, having but one form of gender to denote both sexes.

ep-i-cen-ter, ep-i-cen-tre (ep'i-sen-tēr), n. [NL. epicentrum, < Gr. ἐπικέντρος, on the center, < ἐπί, on, + κέντρον,

An Ephemerid.

*E. center*².] A point from which earthquake waves seem to go out, situated directly above the true center of disturbance. Also ep-i-cen'trum (-trum).

ep-i-cist (ep'i-sist), n. A writer of epic poetry.

ep-i-cot-yl (ep-i-kot'il), n. [From epi- + cotyl(edon).] In bot., in the embryo of a plant, that part of the stem above the cotyledons.—ep'i-cot-y-le'don-a-ry (-i-lē'don-ā-ri), a. In bot., above the cotyledons.

ep-i-cure (ep'i-kūr), n. [From Epicurus, the Greek philosopher (342?-270 B.C.).] [cap.] An Epicurean†; [l. c.] one given up to sensual enjoyment, esp. eating†; a glutton†; also, one who cultivates a refined taste in eating and drinking.

Ep-i-cu-re-an (ep'i-kū-rē-ān). I. a. Of or pertaining to the Greek philosopher Epicurus, or his system of philosophy, the chief doctrines of which were that the external world resulted from a fortuitous concourse of atoms, and that the highest good in life is pleasure, which consists in freedom from disturbance or pain; devoted to the pursuit of pleasure as the highest good in life (as, "Nothing to mar the sober majesties Of settled, sweet, Epicurean life": Tennyson's "Lucretius," 218); hence [l. c.], given or adapted to luxury, or indulgence in sensual pleasures; of luxurious tastes or habits, esp. in eating and drinking; also, fit for an epicure. II. n. A disciple of Epicurus, or a person holding similar views; [l. c.] one devoted to the pursuit of pleasure or luxury; an epicure.—Ep'i-cu-re-an-ism, n. The philosophical system of Epicurus, or attachment to his doctrines; [l. c.] epicurean indulgence or habits.

ep-i-cur-ism (ep'i-kūr-izm), n. The habits or tastes of an epicure; sensuality†; also [cap.] (pron. ep-i-kū'rizm), Epicureanism (now rare).

ep-i-cy-cle (ep'i-sī-kl), n. [LL. epicyclus, < Gr. ἐπικυκλος, < ἐπί, on, + κύκλος, circle.] A small circle the center of which moves round in the circumference of a larger circle (used chiefly in ancient astron.); also, a circle which rolls (exteriorly or interiorly) around the circumference of another circle.—ep-i-cyc'lic (-sik'lik or -sī'klik), a. Of or pertaining to an epicycle.—epicyclic train, in mach., any train of gearing the axes of the wheels of which revolve around a common center.—ep-i-cy'cloid (-sī'kloid), n. In geom., a curve generated by the motion of a point on the circumference of a circle which rolls upon the convex side of a fixed circle.—ep'i-cy-cloi'dal (-kloi'dal), a.

ep-i-deic-tic (ep-i-dik'tik), a. See epidictic.

Epicycloid.

ep-i-dem-ic (ep-i-dem'ik). [F. épidémique, < Gr. ἐπίδημος, ἐπιδήμιος, prevalent, epidemic, < ἐπί, on, + δῆμος, people: cf. endemic.] I. a. Affecting at the same time a large or relatively large number of persons in a locality, but not permanently prevalent there, as a disease; generally diffused or prevalent. Cf. epizootic. II. n. A temporary prevalence, as of a disease; an epidemic disease.—ep-i-dem'i-cal, a. Epidemic.—ep-i-dem'i-cal-ly, adv.

ep-i-de-mi-ol-o-gy (ep-i-dē-mi-ol'ō-jī), n. [Gr. ἐπιδήμιος, epidemic: see -logy.] That branch of medicine which treats of epidemics.—ep-i-de'mi-o-log'i-cal (-ō-loj'i-kal), a.—ep-i-de-mi-ol'o-gist, n.

ep-i-der-mis (ep-i-dēr'mis), n. [LL., < Gr. ἐπιδερμῖς, < ἐπί, on, + δέρμα, skin.] In anat., the outer, non-vascular, non-sensitive layer of the skin, covering the true skin or cutis; in zool., any of various outer integuments or coverings, as the chitinous covering of the shells of many mollusks; in embryol., the ectoderm; in bot., a thin layer of cells forming the outer integument in spermatophytes and pteridophytes.—ep-i-der'mal, ep-i-der'mic, a.—ep-i-der-mi-za'tion (-mi-zā'shon), n. In surg., skin-grafting.—ep-i-der'moid, a. Resembling epidermis.

ep-i-dic-tic, ep-i-deic-tic (ep-i-dik'tik, -dik'tik), a. [L. epidicticus, < Gr. ἐπιδεικτικός, < ἐπιδεικνύναι, display, < ἐπί, on, to, + δεικνύναι, show.] Serving for exhibition or display, as a certain type of oratory.

ep-i-did-y-mis (ep-i-did'i-mis), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐπιδιδυμῖς, < ἐπί, on, + δίδυμος, twin, pl. testicles.] In anat., an elongated oblong body, chiefly convoluted tubes, resting upon and alongside the testicle.—ep-i-did'y-mal, a.

ep-i-dote (ep'i-dōt), n. [F. épidote, < Gr. ἐπιδιδόναι, increase, < ἐπί, on, to, + διδόναι, give.] A complex native silicate of aluminium, iron, and calcium, commonly of a yellowish-green color.

ep-i-fo-cal (ep-i-fō'kal), a. [See epi-.] Above the focus, or true center of disturbance, of an earthquake.

ep-i-gæ-ous (ep-i-jē'us), a. See epigeous.

ep-i-gas-tri-um (ep-i-gas'tri-um), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐπιγαστριον, prop. neut. of ἐπυγαστρος, over the belly, < ἐπί, on, + γαστήρ, belly, stomach.] In anat., the upper and median part of the abdomen, lying over the stomach.—ep-i-gas'tric, a.

ep-i-gene (ep'i-jēn), a. [Gr. ἐπί, on, + -γενής, produced.] In geol., formed or originating on the earth's surface: opposed to hypogene.

ep-i-gen-e-sis (ep-i-jen'e-sis), n. [See epi-.] In biol., a theoretical process of generation in which the embryo is formed by a series of new formations or successive differentiations, resulting from fertilization: opposed to preformation.—ep'i-g-e-net'ic (-jē-net'ik), a.

e-pig-e-nous (e-pij'e-nus), a. [See epigene.] In bot., growing on the surface, esp. the upper surface, as fungi on leaves. Cf. hypogenous.

ep-i-ge-ous (ep-i-jē'us), a. [Gr. ἐπίγειος, ἐπίγειος, < ἐπί, on, + γῆ, earth.] In bot., growing on or close to the ground; of cotyledons, borne above ground in germination.

ep-i-glot-tis (ep-i-glot'is), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐπιγλωττίς, < ἐπί, on, + γλῶττα, γλῶσσα, tongue.] In anat., a thin, valve-like cartilaginous structure that covers the glottis during deglutition, preventing the entrance of food and drink into the larynx.

e-pig-na-thous (e-pig'na-thus), a. [Gr. ἐπί, on, + γνάθος, jaw.] In ornith., having the end of the upper mandible decurved over and beyond that of the lower one, as a bird of prey, a parrot, etc.

ep-i-gram (ep'i-gram), n. [F. épigramme, < L. epigramma, < Gr. ἐπίγραμμα, < ἐπιγράφειν, inscribe, < ἐπί, on, + γράφειν, write.] An inscription; also, a short poem dealing concisely with a single subject, usually ending with a witty or ingenious turn of thought, and often satirical; hence, any witty, ingenious, or pointed saying tersely expressed; also, epigrammatic expression.—ep'i-gram-mat'ic (-gra-mat'ik), a. [L. epigrammaticus.] Of or like an epigram; given to epigrams; terse and ingenious in expression.—ep'i-gram-mat'i-cal-ly, adv.—ep-i-gram'ma-tism (-gram'a-tizm), n. Epigrammatic character or style.—ep-i-gram'ma-tist, n. [LL. epigrammatista.] A maker of epigrams.—ep-i-gram'ma-tize, v. t. or i.; -tized, -tizing. [Gr. ἐπιγραμματίζειν.] To express by epigrams, or make epigrams.—ep-i-gram'ma-tiz-er, n.

ep-i-graph (ep'i-gráf), n. [Gr. ἐπιγραφή, < ἐπιγράφειν, inscribe: see epigram.] An inscription, esp. on a building, statue, or the like; also, a short quotation or other passage placed at the beginning of a book, chapter, or the like, as a motto.—ep-i-graph'ic, ep-i-graph'i-cal (-graf'ik, -i-kal), a. Pertaining to epigraphs or epigraphy.—ep-i-graph'i-cal-ly, adv.—e-pig-ra-phist (e-pig'ra-fist), n. One versed in epigraphy.—e-pig'ra-phy, n. The study or science of epigraphs or inscriptions; also, inscriptions collectively.

e-pig-y-nous (e-pij'i-nus), a. [Gr. ἐπί, on, + γυνή, woman, female.] In bot., situated on the edge of the receptacle, immediately above the ovary, as stamens, etc.; having stamens, etc., so arranged, as a flower.—e-pig'y-ny, n.

ep-i-lep-sy (ep'i-lep-si), n. [F. épilepsie, < LL. epilepsia, < Gr. ἐπιληψία, < ἐπιλαμβάνειν, seize on, attack, < ἐπί, on, + λαμβάνειν, take.] In pathol., a nervous disease characterized by recurrent attacks of more or less severe convulsions, usually attended with loss of consciousness.—ep-i-lep'tic. [F. épileptique, < LL. epilepticus, < Gr. ἐπιληπτικός.] I. a. Of, pertaining to, or affected with epilepsy. II. n. One affected with epilepsy.—ep-i-lep'ti-form, ep-i-lep'toid, a. Resembling epilepsy.

Epignathous Bill of Gull.

Epigynous Stamens and Petals.

e-pil-o-gist (e-pil'ō-jist), n. The writer or speaker of an epilogue.

ep-i-logue (ep'i-log), n. [F. épilogue, < L. epilogus, < Gr. ἐπίλογος, < ἐπιλέγειν, say in addition, < ἐπί, on, to, + λέγειν, speak.] A concluding part added to a literary work; an appendix; specif., a speech, usually in verse, addressed to the audience by one of the actors after the conclusion of a play (as, "No epilogue, I pray you; for your play needs no excuse": Shakspeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," v. 1. 362).

ep-i-nas-ty (ep'i-nas'ti), n. [Gr. ἐπί, on, + ναστός, pressed close, compact, < νάσσειν, press close.] In bot., increased growth along the upper surface of an organ or part, causing the part to bend downward.—ep-i-nas'tic, a.

ep-i-neu-ri-um (ep-i-nū'ri-um), n.; pl. -ria (-ri-ā). [NL., < Gr. ἐπί, on, + νεῦρον, nerve.] In anat., the dense sheath of connective tissue which surrounds the trunk of a nerve.

e-piph-a-ny (ē-pif'a-ni or e-), n.; pl. -nies (-niz). [Partly < Gr. ἐπιφάνεια, appearance, < ἐπιφαίνειν, show forth, < ἐπί, on, to, + φαίνειν, show; partly < OF. epiphanie (F. Épiphanie), < LL. epiphania, < LGr. ἐπιφάνια, pl., the Epiphany, < Gr. ἐπιφαίνειν.] An appearance or manifestation, esp. of a deity; [cap.] a Christian festival, observed on Jan. 6, commemorating the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles in the persons of the Magi.

ep-i-phe-nom-e-non (ep'i-fē-nom'e-non), n.; pl. -ena (-e-nā). [See epi-.] A secondary phenomenon; in pathol., a secondary or additional symptom or complication arising during the course of a malady.

ep-i-phy-lous (ep-i-fil'us), a. [Gr. ἐπί, on, + φύλλον, leaf.] In bot., growing upon a leaf: said of certain parasitic fungi and of the floral parts of some plants.

e-piph-y-sis (e-pif'i-sis), n.; pl. -yses (-i-sēz). [NL., < Gr. ἐπιφύσις, < ἐπιφύσσειν, grow on, < ἐπί, on, + φύειν, produce.] In anat., a part or process of a bone which is separated from the main body of the bone by a layer of cartilage, and which finally becomes united with the bone through further ossification; also, the pineal body of the brain.—ep-i-phys-i-al (ep-i-fiz'i-al), a.

ep-i-phyte (ep'i-fit), n. [Gr. ἐπί, on, + φυτόν, plant.] In bot., any of various plants, as certain mosses, lichens, orchids, etc., growing upon another plant for mechanical support, but not parasitic; an air-plant or aërophyte; in pathol., a vegetable parasite living on the surface of the body.—ep-i-phyt'ic (-fit'ik), a.—ep-i-phyt'i-cal-ly, adv.—e-pip-lo-ön (e-pip'lō-on), n.; pl. -loa (-lō-ā). [NL., < Gr. ἐπιπλοον, caul.] In anat., the great omentum.

ep-i-rog-e-ny (ep-i-roj'e-ni), n. [Gr. ἡπειρος, land, mainland, continent: see -geny.] The production of a continent; the wide changes of level which give rise to continental elevations, oceanic depressions, etc.—e-pi-ro-gen-ic (ē-pi-rō-jen'ik), a.

e-pis-co-pa-cy (ē-pis'kō-pa-si), n. Government of the church by bishops; that form of church government in which there are three distinct orders of ministers, namely bishops, priests or presbyters, and deacons; also, the order of bishops; also, the office or incumbency of a bishop.

e-pis-co-pal (ē-pis'kō-pal), a. [LL. episcopalis, < episcopus, bishop: see bishop.] Pertaining to a bishop; based on or recognizing a governing order of bishops: used [cap.] in the titles of various churches (as, the Methodist Episcopal Church), and esp. to designate the Anglican Church or some branch of it (as, the Protestant Episcopal Church in the U. S.).—episcopal stork, a black stork, Dissoura episcopus, found in Africa, India, and elsewhere, characterized by white neck and under tail-coverts. See cut on following page.—e-pis-co-pa'lian (-pā'lian). I. a. Pertaining or adhering to the episcopal form of church government, or [cap.] to the Episcopal Church (of the Anglican communion). II. n. An adherent of the episcopal system; [cap.] a member of the Episcopal Church.—e-pis-co-pa'lian-ism, n.— e-pis/co-pal-ism, n. The theory of church polity according to which the supreme ecclesiastical authority is vested in the episcopal order as a whole, and not in any individual except by delegation.

Right Femur of a Youth.

E, E, epiphyses; gtr, litr, greater and lesser trochanter; h, head; el, il, external and internal tuberosity; ec, ic, external and internal condyle; n, neck.

—e-pis/co-pal-ly, adv.

e-pis-co-pate (ē-pis'kō-pāt), n. [LL. episcopatus, < episcopus, E. bishop.] The office, dignity, incumbency, or see of a bishop; also, the order or body of bishops.

Episcopal Stork.

ep-i-sode (ep'i-sōd), n. [Gr. ἐπεισόδιον, a parenthetic addition, prop. neut. of ἐπεισός, coming in besides, < ἐπί, on, to, + εἰσός, entrance, < εἰς, into, + ὁδός, way.] A part in an old Greek tragedy between two choric songs; also, an incidental narrative or digression in the course of a story, poem, or other writing; also, an incident in the course of a series of events, in a person's life or experience, etc.; in music, an intermediate or digressive passage, esp. in a contrapuntal composition.—ep-i-sod'ic, ep-i-sod'i-cal (-sod'ik, -i-kāl), a. Pertaining to or of the nature of an episode; incidental: as, "In an episodical way, he had studied and practised dentistry" (Hawthorne's "House of the Seven Gables," xii).—ep-i-sod'i-cal-ly, adv.

ep-i-spas-tic (ep-i-spas'tik). [Gr. ἐπισπαστικός, < ἐπισπᾶν, draw on or to, < ἐπί, on, to, + σπᾶν, draw.] In med.: I. a. Raising a blister when applied to the skin. II. n. A blistering agent; a vesicatory.

ep-i-sperm (ep'i-spér-m), n. [Gr. ἐπί, on, + σπέρμα, seed.] In bot., the outer integument of a seed; the testa.

ep-i-stax-is (ep-i-stak'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐπιστάξω, drop on, < ἐπί, on, + στάξω, drop, drip.] In pathol., bleeding from the nose.

ep-i-ste-mol-o-gy (ep'i-stē-mol'ō-jī), n. [Gr. ἐπιστήμη, knowledge (< ἐπίστασθαι, know); see -logy.] The theory or science of the origin, nature, and limits of knowledge.—ep'i-ste-mol-log'i-cal (-stē-mō-loj'i-kāl), a.—ep'i-ste-mol-o-gist, n.

e-pis-tle (ē-pis'l), n. [OF. epistlē (F. épître), < L. epistola, < Gr. ἐπιστολή, message, letter, < ἐπιστέλλω, send to, < ἐπί, on, to, + στέλλω, send.] A written communication directed or sent to a person; a letter, esp. one of formal or didactic character; often, a literary work, usually in verse, written in the form of a letter; specif. [usually cap.], one of the apostolic letters constituting books of the New Testament; also [often cap.], eccles., an extract, usually from one of the Epistles of the New Testament, forming part of the eucharistic service in certain churches.—e-pis-tler (ē-pis'lēr), n. A writer of an epistle; eccles., the one who reads the epistle in the eucharistic service.—e-pis-to-la-ry (-tō-lā-rī), a. [L. epistolaris.] Of or pertaining to epistles or correspondence; contained in or carried on by letters.—e-pis-to-ler, n. [F. épistolier.] Same as epistler.—e-pis-to-log'ra-phy (-log'ra-fī), n. [See -graphy.] Letter-writing.

e-pis-tro-phe (e-pis'trō-fē), n. [LL., < Gr. ἐπιστροφή, < ἐπιστρέφω, turn on or to, < ἐπί, on, to, + στρέφω, turn.] In rhet., a figure in which successive clauses or sentences end with the same word (as in 2 Cor. xi. 22).

ep-i-style (ep'i-stīl), n. [L. epistylum, < Gr. ἐπιστύλιον, < ἐπί, on, + στυλος, pillar, column.] In arch., an architrave.

ep-i-taph (ep'i-tāf), n. [L. epitaphium, < Gr. ἐπιτάφιος, neut. of ἐπιτάφιος, over or at a tomb, < ἐπί, on, + τάφος, tomb.] A commemorative inscription on a tomb or mortuary monument; any brief writing resembling such an inscription.—ep'i-taph, v. t. To commemorate in an epitaph: as, "After he is dead and buried, And epitaphed" (Lowell's "On Planting a Tree at Inveraray").—ep-i-taph'ic (-taf'ik), a.—ep'i-taph-ist, n. A writer of epitaphs.

e-pit-a-sis (e-pit'a-sis), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐπίτασις, < ἐπιτείνω, intensify, < ἐπί, on, + τείνω, stretch.] In the ancient drama, the part of the play (following the protasis) in which the action is developed, leading up to the catastrophe.

ep-i-tha-la-mi-on (ep'i-thā-lā-mi-on), n. Same as epithalamium.

ep-i-tha-la-mi-um (ep'i-thā-lā-mi-um), n.; pl. -miums or -mia (-mi-ā). [L., < Gr. ἐπιθαλάμιον, neut. of ἐπιθαλάμιος, nuptial, < ἐπί, on, + θάλαμος, bridal chamber.] A nuptial song or poem; a poem in honor of a bride and bridegroom, or of either.

ep-i-the-li-al (ep-i-thē'li-āl), a. Pertaining to epithelium.—ep-i-the'li-oid, a. Resembling epithelium.

ep-i-the-li-o-ma (ep'i-thē-li-ō'mā), n.; pl. -mas or -mata (-mā-tā). [NL., < epithelium: see -oma.] In pathol., a malignant growth or variety of cancer consisting chiefly of epithelial cells.

ep-i-the-li-um (ep-i-thē'li-um), n.; pl. -liums or -lia (-li-ā). [NL., < Gr. ἐπί, on, + θήλη, nipple.] In anat., the tissue forming the superficial layer of mucous membrane; hence, broadly, any tissue which covers an external or internal surface, or lines a cavity or the like, and which performs protective, secreting, or other functions, as the epidermis, the lining of blood-vessels, etc. (cf. endothelium); in bot., a delicate layer of cells lining certain internal cavities; also, the thin epidermis of petals.

ep-i-thet (ep'i-thet), n. [L. epitheton, < Gr. ἐπίθετον, prop. neut. of ἐπίθετος, added, < ἐπιτίθεσθαι, put on, < ἐπί, on, + τίθεσθαι, set.] An adjective or other term applied to a person or thing to express an attribute (actual or ascribed); a descriptive expression applied; hence, an appellative; a name; also, a phrase or expression (see Shakspeare's "Much Ado about Nothing," v. 2. 67).—ep-i-thet'ic, ep-i-thet'i-cal, a.

e-pit-o-me (ē-pit'ō-mē or e-), n. [L., < Gr. ἐπιτομή, < ἐπιτέμνω, cut into, abridge, < ἐπί, on, + τέμνω, cut.] A condensed account of the contents of a literary work, an abstract; an abridgment; a summary, or condensed account, of anything; a compendium; hence, a condensed representation of something (as, "A man so various that he seemed to be Not one, but all mankind's epitome": Dryden's "Ab-salom and Achitophel," i. 546).—e-pit'ō-mist, n. One who makes an epitome.—e-pit'ō-mize, v. t.; -mized, -mizing. To make an epitome of; abridge; summarize; also, to contain in small compass.—e-pit'ō-miz-er, n.

ep-i-trite (ep'i-trīt), n. [L. epitritus, < Gr. ἐπίτριτος, containing a unit and one third, < ἐπί, on, to, + τρίτος, third.] In pros., a foot consisting of three long syllables and one short one: called first, second, third, or fourth epitrite, according as the short syllable is the first, second, third, or fourth.

ep-i-zeug-is (ep-i-zūk'sis), n. [LL., < Gr. ἐπιζευγίς, < ἐπιζευγύναι, join to, < ἐπί, on, to, + ζευγύναι, yoke, join.] In rhet., immediate or almost immediate repetition of a word or phrase for the sake of emphasis.

ep-i-zo-ōn (ep-i-zō'ōn), n.; pl. -zoa (-zō'ā). [NL.: see epi- and -zoōn.] An external parasite; an ectozoön.—ep-i-zo'ic, a.

ep-i-zo-ōt-ic (ep'i-zō-ōt'ik). [= F. épizootique, < Gr. ἐπί, on, + ζῶον, animal: cf. enzootic.] I. a. Of diseases, prevalent temporarily among animals. Cf. epidemic. II. n. A temporary prevalence of a disease among animals; an epizootic disease. Also ep-i-zo'ō-ty (-zō'ō-tī), n.

ep-och (ep'ok or -ok, or ē'pok), n. [ML. epocha, < Gr. ἐποχή, check, pause, position, epoch, < ἐπέχειν, hold on, check, < ἐπί, on, + ἔχειν, have, hold.] A point of time from which succeeding years are numbered, as at the beginning of a system of chronology; hence, the beginning of any distinctive period in the history of anything; also, a point of time distinguished by a particular event, or state of affairs, or the event itself as distinguishing the time of its occurrence; also, a particular period of time as marked by distinctive character, events, etc. (as, "We enter on an epoch of constitutional retrogression": Green's "Short Hist. of the Eng.

People," vi. 3); in astron., an arbitrarily fixed instant of time or date (usually the beginning of a century or half-century) used as a reference in giving the elements of a planetary orbit or the like; also, the longitude of a planet as seen from the sun at such an instant or date.—ep'o-chal (-ô-kal), a. Of or pertaining to an epoch or epochs; of the nature of an epoch.—ep'och-mak'ing, a. Making or fixing an epoch; opening a new era, as in human history, thought, or knowledge: as, an epoch-making discovery or book.

ep-ode (ep'ôd), n. [L. epodos, < Gr. ἐπὶδός, < ἐπαιδεῖν, sing. to, < ἐπῖ, on, to, + αἰδεῖν, sing.] In anc. pros., a kind of lyric poem, invented by Archilochus (about 650 B.C.), in which a long verse is followed by a short one; also, the part of a lyric ode following the strophe and antistrophe.

ep-o-nym (ep'ô-nim), n. [Gr. ἐπώνυμος, given as a name, giving one's name to something, < ἐπῖ, on, to, + ὄνυμα, name.] A person, real or imaginary, from whom a tribe, place, institution, etc., takes, or is supposed to take, its name; the name of such a person; also, an Assyrian official whose name was used to designate his year of office.—ep-o-nym'ic, a.—e-pon-y-mist (e-pon'y-mist), n. An eponymous ancestor or founder.—e-pon'y-mous, a. Giving one's name to a tribe, place, etc.—e-pon'y-my (-mi), n.; pl. -mies (-miz). The derivation of names from eponyms; also, the year of office of an Assyrian eponym.

ep-o-pee (ep'ô-pē), n. [F. épopée, < NL. epopœia, < Gr. ἐποποιία, epic poetry, an epic, < ἐπος (see epos) + ποιεῖν, make.] An epic. Also (NL.) ep-o-pœ'ia (-pē'ia).

ep-opt (ep'opt), n. [Gr. ἐπόπτης, lit. 'beholder,' < ἐπῖ, on, + ὁρ-, see: see optic.] A seer or beholder; specif., one fully initiated into the Eleusinian mysteries; hence, an initiate in any secret system.—e-pop-tic (e-pop'tik), a.

ep-os (ep'os), n. [L., < Gr. ἔπος, word, tale, song, pl. epic poetry, akin to εἰπεῖν, speak, say: see voice.] An epic; also, epic poetry.

é-pris (â-prē), a. [F., pp. of éprendre, OF. esprendre, seize, kindle, inflame, < L. ex-, out, + prehendere, seize.] Enamoured; in love.—é-prise (â-prēz), a. [F.] Fem. of épris.

ep-si-lon (ep'si-lon), n. [LGr. εἰς λόν, 'simple e.'] The fifth letter (Ε, ε, = English short E, e) of the Greek alphabet.

Ep-som (ep'som) salt. [So called because first prepared from the water of the mineral springs at Epsom, town in Surrey, southern England.] Hydrated magnesium sulphate, used as a cathartic, etc.

ep-u-la-ry (ep'û-lā-ri), a. [L. epularis, < epulum, feast.] Of or pertaining to a feast or banquet.

ep-u-lo-sis (ep'û-lô'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐπούλωσις, < ἐπουλῶν, heal over, cicatrize, < ἐπῖ, on, + οὔλων, heal, < οἶλος, whole.] In med., cicatrization.—ep-u-lot'ic (-lot'ik), a.

e-qua-ble (ē'kwā-bl or ek'wā-), a. [L. æquabilis, < æquare: see equate.] Free from inequalities or variations; uniform in character, as motion or temperature; uniform in operation or effect, as laws; tranquil, even, or not easily disturbed, as the mind.—e-qua-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-ti), e'qua-ble-ness, n.—e'qua-bly, adv.

e-qual (ē'kwāl). [L. æqualis, < æquus, level, even, equal, equitable, just, equable, calm.] I. a. Like or alike in quantity, degree, value, etc.; of the same rank, ability, merit, etc.; as great as another (followed by to or with: as, the velocity of sound is not equal to that of light); also, adequate or sufficient in quantity or degree (as, the supply is equal to the demand); having adequate power, ability, or means (as, he was not equal to the task); also, evenly proportioned or balanced (as, an equal mixture; an equal contest); uniform in operation or effect (as, equal laws); impartial or equitable (archaic: as, an equal judge); even or regular, as motion; level, as a plain; tranquil or undisturbed (archaic: as, an equal mind). II. n. One who or that which is equal; also, a state of equality (chiefly colloq.).—e'qual, v. t.; equaled or equalled, equalling or equalling. To make equal; equalize; also, to compare; also, to be or become equal to; match; also, to make or do something equal to; also, to recompense fully.

e-equal-i-ta-ri-an (ē-kwōl-i-tā'ri-an). I. a. Pertaining or adhering to the doctrine of equality among men. II. n. One who adheres to the doctrine of equality among men.—e-equal-i-ta'ri-an-ism, n. The opinions or principles of equalitarians; the doctrine of the equality of mankind: as, "The dominant liberal ideas were freedom and a certain vague equalitarianism" (H. G. Wells's "Outline of History," xxxix. § 3).

e-equal-i-ty (ē-kwōl'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [L. æqualitas.] The state of being equal; correspondence in quantity, degree, value, rank, ability, etc. (as, the sign of equality, the sign =, read 'equals' or 'is equal to,' as used in 6 + 5 = 11, or in the etymology of the word epizootic in this book); uniform character, as of motion or surface.

e-equal-ize (ē'kwāl-iz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. To make equal; also, to render uniform; also, to be or become equal to;—e"qual-i-za'tion (-i-zā'shōn), n.—e'qual-iz-er (-i-zēr), n. One who or that which equalizes; any of various devices or appliances for equalizing strains, pressures, etc.

e-equal-ly (ē'kwāl-i), adv. In an equal manner or measure; to an equal extent or degree; in uniform manner or degree.—e'qual-ness, n.

e-equa-nim-i-ty (ē-kwā-nim'i-ti or ek-wā-), n. [L. æquanimitas, < æquanimis, having an even mind, < æquus (see equal) + animus, mind.] Evenness of mind or temper; calmness; composure; self-possession.—e-equan-i-mous (ē-kwān'i-mus), a. [L. æquanimis.] Of an even temper; not easily elated or depressed.

e-equate (ē-kwāt'), v. t.; equated, equating. [L. æquatus, pp. of æquare, < æquus: see equal.] To make equal; also, to reduce to an average; make such correction or allowance in as will reduce to a common standard of comparison; also, to state the equality of or between; put in the form of an equation; also, to regard, treat, or represent as equivalent; also, to be equal to (rare).—e-equa-tion (ē-kwā'shōn, also -zhōn), n. [L. æquatio(n).] The act of making equal; equalization; equally balanced state; equilibrium; reduction to a mean or a normal value; in astron., a correction or allowance in an observation or computation to compensate for a known cause of error; in math., an expression of, or a proposition asserting, the equality of two quantities, employing the sign = between them; in chem., a symbolic representation of a reaction.—equation of payments, the process of ascertaining a mean time for the equitable payment of a whole debt which is due in a number of parts payable at different times.—equation of time, the difference between mean solar time and apparent solar time.—personal equation. See under personal, a.—e-equa'tion-al, a. Pertaining to or involving equations.

e-equa-tor (ē-kwā'tōr), n. [ML. æquator, lit. 'equalizer' (of day and night, as when the sun is in the equator), < L. æquare: see equate.] A great circle of the celestial sphere the plane of which is perpendicular to the axis of the earth ('celestial equator'); also, the great circle of the earth (in the plane of the celestial equator) everywhere equidistant from the two poles (as, "October 1st. Crossed the equator . . . I now, for the first time, felt at liberty . . . to call myself a son of Neptune": Dana's "Two Years before the Mast," iv.); hence, a similarly situated circle on any heavenly or spherical body; in aeronautics, the horizontal circle about a balloon at the place of its greatest width.—magnetic equator. See under magnetic.—e-equa-to-ri-al (ē-kwā-tō'ri-āl). I. a. Of, pertaining to, or near an equator, esp. the equator of the earth. II. n. A telescope having two axes of motion, one parallel to the earth's axis, and the other at right angles to it.—e-equa-to'ri-al-ly, adv.

e-quer-ry (ek'wē-ri or ē-kwer'i), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). [F. écurie, OF. escurie, < ML. scuria, stable; from Teut. (cf. G. schuer, barn.)] A stable; the stable department of a royal or other great household; an officer of a royal or similar household, charged with the care of the horses, or with accompanying the carriage of the sovereign or other personage on certain occasions.

e-ques-tri-an (ē-kwes'tri-an). [L. equester (equestr-), < eques, horseman, < equus, horse.] I. a. Of or pertaining to horsemen or horsemanship; mounted on horseback; representing a person on horseback (as, an equestrian statue); also, of, pertaining to, or composed of knights. II. n. A rider or performer on horseback.—e-ques'tri-an-ism, n. The art or practice of an equestrian; horsemanship.—e-ques-tri-enne' (-en'), n. [Appar. spurious F.] A female rider or performer on horseback.

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, ásk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, flect, agôny, intô, ûnite; (obscured) errânt, operâ, ardent, actôr, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

equi- Form of L. æquus, equal, used in combination.

e-qui-an-gu-lar (ē-kwi-ang'gū-lār), a. [See equi-.] Having all the angles equal.

e-qui-dis-tant (ē-kwi-dis'tant), a. [LL. æquidistans (-ant-); see equi- and distant.] Equally distant.—e-qui-dis'tance, n.—e-qui-dis'tant-ly, adv.

e-qui-lat-er-al (ē-kwi-lat'ē-rāl), a. [LL. æquilateralis; see equi- and lateral.] Having all the sides equal.—e-qui-lat'er-al-ly, adv.

e-qui-li-brate (ē-kwi-li'brāt), v. t.; -brated, -brating. [LL. æquilibratus, in equilibrium, < L. æquus, equal, + libra, balance.] I. tr. To balance equally; keep in equipoise or equilibrium; also, to be in equilibrium with; counterpoise. II. intr. To balance.—e-qui-li-bra'tion (-brā'shən), n. The act of balancing evenly; the state of being evenly balanced.—e-qui-li'bra-tor, n. A mechanical device for securing equilibrium, as in a balloon.—e-qui-li'bra-to-ry (-brā-tō-rī), a.

e-qui-i-brist (ē-kwil'i-brist), n. [F. équilibriste, < équilibre, < L. æquilibrium, E. equilibrium.] One who practices balancing in unnatural positions and hazardous movements, as a rope-dancer.—e-qui-i-bris'tic (-bris'tik), a.

e-qui-lib-ri-um (ē-kwi-lib'ri-um), n. [L. æquilibrium, < æquus, equal, + libra, balance.] Equal balance between opposing forces; a state of rest due to the action of forces that counteract each other; specif., the state of a chemical system when no further change occurs in it; also, in general, equal balance between any powers, influences, etc.; equality of effect; due or just relationship; mental balance.

e-qui-li-brize (ē-kwil'i-briz), v. t.; -brized, -brizing. [From equilibrium.] To bring into equilibrium; balance.

e-qui-mul-ti-ple (ē-kwi-mul'ti-pl), [See equi-.] I. a. Produced by multiplication by the same number or quantity. II. n. One of the products obtained by multiplying two or more numbers or quantities by the same number or quantity.

e-quino (ē'kwīn or ē'kwīn). [L. equinus, < equus, horse.] I. a. Of, pertaining to, or resembling a horse. II. n. A horse.

e-qui-noc-tial (ē-kwi-nok'shāl), [L. æquinotialis.] I. a. Pertaining to an equinox or the equinoxes, or to the equality of day and night (as, the equinoctial line, the celestial equator, so called because when the sun is on this line night and day are of equal length all over the earth; equinoctial point, either of the two points in which the celestial equator and the ecliptic intersect each other, that is, the point reached by the sun's center at the vernal equinox and that reached by it at the autumnal equinox); occurring at or about the time of an equinox (as, an equinoctial storm); also, pertaining to the celestial equator, or to the regions or climate of the terrestrial equator; in bot., of a flower, opening regularly at a certain hour. II. n. The equinoctial line; also, the terrestrial equator (now rare); also, an equinoctial gale or storm.

e-qui-nox (ē'kwīn-oks), n. [F. équinoxe, < L. æquinoctium, < æquus, equal, + nox (noct-), night.] The time when the sun crosses the plane of the earth's equator, making night and day all over the earth of equal length, occurring about March 21 ('vernal equinox') and Sept. 22 ('autumnal equinox'); also, either of the equinoctial points.

e-quip (ē-kwīp'), v. t.; equipped, equipping. [F. équiper, OF. esquiper: cf. Icel. skipa, put in order, arrange, man (a ship, etc.).] To fit out, as a ship; furnish or provide with whatever is needed for service or for any undertaking; fit up, dress out, or array.—e-qui-page (ek'wi-pāj), n. [F. équipage.] The act of equipping, or the state of being equipped; also, outfit, as of a ship, an army, or a soldier (sometimes denoting persons: as, "He . . . equipped three small ships . . . Eighty sailors and 100 arquebusiers formed the équipage": Besant's "Coligny," vii.); an equipment; accoutrements or habiliments; a set of small household articles, as of china, glass, or earthenware; a collection of small articles for personal ornament or use; also, the appurtenances of rank or position; a retinue or following; a completely equipped carriage, with horses and attendant servants; sometimes, a carriage alone.—e-quip'ment, n. The act of equipping, or the state of being equipped; also, anything used in or provided for equipping; outfit.

e-qui-poise (ē'kwī-poiz), n. [See equi- and poise.] An equal distribution of weight; equality of weight or force; even balance; equilibrium; also, a counterpoise.

e-qui-pol-lent (ē-kwi-pol'ent), [L. æquipollens (-ent-), < æquus, equal, + pollens, ppr. of pollere, be strong.] I. a. Equal in power, validity, effect, etc.; equivalent. II. n. Something equal in power, effect, etc.; an equivalent.—e-qui-pol'lence, e-qui-pol'len-cy, n.

e-qui-pon-der-ant (ē-kwi-pon'dēr-ant), a. [See equiponderate.] Of equal weight or importance; evenly balanced.—e-qui-pon'der-ance, n.

e-qui-pon-der-ate (ē-kwi-pon'dēr-āt), v.; -ated, -ating. [ML. æquiponderatus, ppr. of equiponderare, < L. æquus, equal, + pondus, weight.] I. tr. To equal or offset as to weight, force, importance, etc.; counterbalance. II. intr. To be of equal weight, importance, etc.—e-qui-pon-der-a'tion (-ā'shən), n.

e-quip-o-tent (ē-kwīp'ō-tent), a. [L. æquus, equal, + potens, E. potent.] Equal in power.

e-quip-per (ē-kwīp'ēr), n. One who equips.

e-qui-ro-tal (ē-kwi-rō'tal), a. [L. æquus, equal, + rota, wheel.] Having wheels all of the same size or diameter, as a vehicle.

e-qui-se-ta-ceous (ek'wi-sē-tā'shius), a. [See equisetum.] Belonging to the Equisetaceæ, or horsetail family of plants.

e-qui-se-tum (ek-wi-sē'tum), n. [NL., for L. equisetum, < æquus, horse, + sæta, bristle.] Any plant of the genus Equisetum; a horsetail. See horsetail.

e-qui-ta-ble (ek'wi-tā-bl), a. [F. équitable, < équité: see equity.] Characterized by equity or fairness; according to the principles of equity; just and right; fair; reasonable; in law, of, pertaining to, or valid in equity, as distinguished from the common and statute law.—e-qui-ta-ble-ness, n.—e-qui-ta-bly, adv.

e-qui-tant (ek'wi-tant), a. [L. equitans (-ant-), ppr. of equitare, ride: see equitation.] In bot., straddling or overlapping, as certain leaves whose bases successively overlap the leaves above or within them.

e-qui-ta-tion (ek-wi-tā'shən), n. [L. equitatio(n-), < equitare, ride, < equus, horseman, < equus, horse.] The act or art of riding on horseback; horsemanship.

e-qui-ty (ek'wi-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [OF. equite (F. équité), < L. æquitas, < æquus, equal, just: see equal.] The quality of being fair or impartial; fairness; impartiality; also, that which is fair and just; justice or right; in law, the application of the dictates of conscience or the principles of natural justice to the settlement of controversies; a system of jurisprudence or a body of doctrines and rules as to what is equitable and fair, serving to supplement, and remedy the defects of, the common and statute law; any system of jurisprudence analogous to this; also, an equitable right or claim.

e-quiv-a-lence (ē-kwīv'a-lens), n. The state or fact of being equivalent; equality in value, force, significance, etc.; in chem., the quality of having equal valence; also, valence. Also e-quiv'a-len-cy (-lən-sī).

e-quiv-a-lent (ē-kwīv'a-lent), a. [LL. æquivalens (-ent-), ppr. of æquivalere, have equal power, < L. æquus, equal, + valere, be strong, be worth.] Equal in value, measure, force, effect, significance, etc.; tantamount; corresponding in position, function, etc.; in geom., having the same extent, as a triangle and a square of equal area.—equivalent weight, in chem., an equivalent.—e-quiv'a-lent, n. That which is equivalent; something equal, tantamount, or corresponding to something else; in chem., the parts by weight in which an element will combine with or displace 8 parts of oxygen or 1.008 parts of hydrogen (also called equivalent weight).—e-quiv'a-lent-ly, adv.

e-quiv-o-cal (ē-kwīv'ō-kāl), a. [LL. æquivocus, ambiguous, < L. æquus, equal, + vox (voc-), voice, sound, word, speech.] Having different meanings equally possible, as a word or phrase; susceptible of double interpretation; ambiguous; hence, of uncertain significance (as, an equivocal proof); doubtful; also, of doubtful nature or character (as, "Unfinished things, one knows not what to call, Their generation's so equivocal": Pope's "Essay on Criticism," 43); questionable; dubious; suspicious.—e-quiv'o-cal-ly, adv.—e-quiv'o-cal-ness, n.

e-quiv-o-cate (ē-kwiv'ō-kāt), v. i.; -cated, -cating. [ML. æquivocatus, pp. of æquivocare, call by the same name, < LL. æquivocus, ambiguous: see equivocal.] To use equivocal or ambiguous expressions, esp. with a view to misleading; prevaricate. — e-quiv'o-cat-ing-ly, adv. — e-quiv-o-ca'tion (-kā'shən), n. The use of equivocal or ambiguous expressions, esp. in order to mislead; prevarication; in logic, a fallacy depending on the double significance of a word. — e-quiv'o-ca-tor, n. — e-quiv'o-ca-to-ry (-kā-tō-ri), a. Indicating, or characterized by, equivocation.

e-qui-voke (ek'wi-vōk), n. See equivogue.

e-qui-vogue (ek'wi-vōk), n. [F. equivogue, < LL. æquivocus: see equivocal.] An equivocal term; an ambiguous expression; a play upon words; a pun; also, ambiguity of speech; double meaning; also, equivocation.

-er¹. [AS. -ere.] A suffix (a) forming nouns designating persons from the object of their occupation or labor, as in hatter, tiler, tinner, moonshiner, or from their place of origin or abode, as in Icelander, southerner, villager, or designating either persons or things from some special characteristic or circumstance, as in six-footer, three-master, teetotaler, fiwer, tenner; also (b) serving as the regular English formative of agent-nouns (being attached to verbs of any origin), as in bearer, creeper, distributor (beside distributor), employer, harvester, poker, ruler, teacher, theorizer. Cf. -or² and -ee.

-er². [OF. -er, -ier, < L. -arius, neut. -arium: see -ary.] A suffix of nouns denoting persons or things concerned or connected with something, as in butler, grocer, officer, garner.

-er³. [AF. or OF. -er, -re, ending of infinitives used also as nouns.] Termination of certain nouns, mostly law-terms, denoting action or process, as in dinner, rejoinder, remainder, trover.

-er⁴. [In adjectives, AS. -ra; in adverbs, AS. -or.] A suffix forming the comparative degree of adjectives and adverbs, as in better, faster, harder, sooner.

-er⁵. [AS. -rian.] A suffix forming frequentative verbs, as flicker, flutter, glimmer, patter.

e-ra (ē'rā), n. [LL. æra, number or epoch by which reckoning is made, era, prob. the same word as L. æra, counters, pl. of æs, copper, bronze.] A point of time from which succeeding years are numbered, as at the beginning of a system of chronology; an epoch; hence, a date or an event forming the beginning of any distinctive period; a point of time noted for some occurrence, etc.; also, a system of chronologic notation reckoned from a given date, or a period during which years are numbered and dates reckoned from a particular point of time in the past (as, the Christian era: see under Christian, a.); also, a period of time marked by distinctive character, events, etc. (as, an era of progress); a major division of geological time, usually regarded as of the highest rank; also, the period of time to which anything belongs or is to be assigned (as, "Twas in November, but I'm not so sure About the day—the era's more obscure": Byron's "Don Juan," i. 121).

e-rad-i-ca-ble (ē-rad'i-kā-bl), a. That may be eradicated.

e-rad-i-cate (ē-rad'i-kāt), v. t.; -cated, -cating. [L. eradicatus, pp. of eradicare, < e, out of, + radix (radic-), root.] To pull up by the roots; hence, to remove utterly; destroy utterly; extirpate. — e-rad-i-ca'tion (-kā'shən), n. — e-rad'i-ca-tive (-kā-tiv), a. Tending to eradicate. — e-rad'i-ca-tor (-kā-tōr), n.

e-ras-a-ble (ē-rā'sā-bl), a. That may be erased.

e-rase (ē-rās'), v. t.; erased, erasing. [L. erasus, pp. of eradere, < e, out of, + radere, scrape.] To scrape or rub out, as letters or characters written, engraved, etc.; efface; expunge; obliterate. — e-rase'ment, e-ra-sion (ē-rā'zhən), n. — e-ras-er (ē-rā'sēr), n. One who or that which erases; an instrument, as a sharp-pointed knife, or a piece of rubber or cloth, for erasing marks made with pen, pencil, chalk, etc.

E-ras-tian (e-ras'chən). I. a. Pertaining to Thomas Erastus (1524–83), a Swiss-German theologian, a follower of Zwingli, or to his doctrines; pertaining to or advocating the doctrine of state supremacy in ecclesiastical matters, which has been attributed to Erastus. II. n. An advocate of the doctrines held by or attributed to Erastus. — E-ras'tian-ism, n.

e-ra-sure (ē-rā'zhūr), n. The act of erasing; a scraping or rubbing out; obliteration; also, a place from which something has been erased.

Er-a-to (er'a-tō), n. [L., < Gr. Ἐρατώ, 'lovely,' < ἐρα-, love.] The Muse of lyric and amatory poetry.

er-bi-um (ēr'bi-um), n. [NL.; named from (Ytter)by, in Sweden: see ytterbium.] Chem. sym., Er; at. wt., 167.7. A rare metallic element.

ere (ār). [AS. ær, adv. (also prep. and conj.), a compar. form (= D. eer = G. ehér), earlier, sooner, before (also as positive, early), akin to Icel. ār, Goth. air, early: cf. erst and early.] I. adv. Early (now chiefly Sc.); also, formerly; at an earlier time. II. prep. Before (in time): as, he will be here ere night. III. conj. Before (as, "How long will it be ere they believe me?") Num. xiv. 11); also, sooner than; rather than.

Er-e-bus (er'e-bus), n. [L., < Gr. Ἑρεβος.] In Gr. myth., a place of nether darkness through which the shades of the dead pass on their way to Hades: as, "dark as Erebus" (Shakspeare's "Merchant of Venice," v. 1. 87).

e-rect (ē-rekt'), v. t. [L. erectus, pp. of erigere, set upright, raise up, build, < e, out of, + regere, direct.] To raise and set in an upright or perpendicular position; also, to raise, as a building; build; construct; hence, to set up or establish, as an institution; found; also, to form (into: as to erect territory into a state); also, to elevate or lift up, exalt, or direct upward (archaic); in geom., to draw or construct (a line or figure) upon a given line, base, or the like; in optics, to change (an inverted image) to a normal position.

— e-rect', a. Upright in position or posture (as, to stand or sit erect); raised or directed upward (as, a dog with ears erect); fig., attentive or alert, as the mind. — e-rect'a-ble, a. That may be erected. — e-rect'er, n. — e-rect-tile (ē-rek'til), a. [F. érectile.] Capable of being erected or set upright; also, susceptible of being distended with blood and becoming rigid, as tissue. — e-rec-til-i-ty (ē-rek-til'i-ti), n. — e-rec-tion (ē-rek'shən), n. [L. erectio (n-).] The act of erecting; the state of being erected; something erected, as a building or other structure; in physiol., a turgid and rigid state of an organ or part into which erectile tissue enters. — e-rec'tive, a. Tending to erect. — e-rect'ly, adv. — e-rect'ness, n. — e-rec'tor, n.

ere-long (ār'lōng'), adv. Before long; soon.

er-e-mite (er'e-mīt), n. [LL. eremita, < Gr. ἐρημίτης, < ἐρημία, a solitude, desert, < ἐρημος, desolate: cf. hermit.] One who has withdrawn from the world to lead a solitary life, from religious motives; a religious solitary; a hermit.

— er-e-mit'ic, er-e-mit'i-cal (-mīt'ik, -i-kəl), a. Pertaining to or characteristic of an eremite. — er'e-mit-ish (-mīt-ish), a. Like or befitting an eremite. — er'e-mit-ism, n. The condition or mode of life of a hermit.

er-e-mu-rus (er-ē-mū'rus), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐρήμος, desolate, solitary, + ὀψά, tail (with reference to the flower-stalk).] Any plant of the liliaceous genus Eremurus, native in Asia, and including species cultivated for their tall flower-stalks (sometimes 8 feet high) topped with a spike of white, yellow, pink, or red flowers.

ere-now (ār'nou'), adv. Ere now; before this time.

er-e-thism (er'e-thizm), n.

[Gr. ἐρεθισμός, < ἐρεθίζω, excite, irritate.] In physiol., an unusual or excessive degree of irritability or stimulation in an organ or tissue.

ere-while (ār'hwil'), adv.

A while before: as, "all his armour stain'd, erewhile so bright" (Milton's "Paradise Lost," vi. 334). [Archaic.]

erg (erg), n. [Gr. ἔργον, work:

see work, n.] In physics, the unit of work in the centimeter-gram-second system, being the amount of work done by one dyne acting through a distance of one centimeter. — er-gal (ēr'gal), n. [G., < Gr. ἔργον.] In physics, potential energy. — erg'me'ter (-mē'tēr), n. An apparatus for measuring work or energy in ergs.

er-go (ēr'gō), adv. [L.] Therefore.

Eremurus (E. spectabilis).

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, flect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

ergo-. Form of Gr. ἐργον, work, used in combination.—er-go-gram (ēr'gō-gram), n. [+ -gram.] A record made by an ergograph.—er'go-graph (-gráf), n. [+ -graph.] An instrument for measuring and recording muscular work done, rate of fatigue, etc.—er-gom'e-ter (-gom'e-tèr), n. [+ -meter.] In physics, an instrument for measuring work done.

er-gon (ēr'gon), n. Same as erg.

er-got (ēr'got), n. [F. ergot, OF. argot, cock's spur.] A disease of rye and other cereals, due to a fungus (in rye, the fungus Claviceps purpurea) which develops in the ovary and replaces the grain by a hard, dark-colored body, usually resembling a cock's spur in form; also, one of the bodies so produced, esp. those of rye, used in medicine as a hemostatic, etc.—er'got-ed, a. Diseased by the attack of ergot, as rye.—er'got-ine (-in), n. An alkaloid contained in ergot; also, any of various extracts of ergot used in medicine.—er'got-ism, n. The diseased condition of rye, etc., due to ergot; also, a disease due to eating food prepared from rye, etc., affected with ergot.—er'got-ize, v. t.; -ized, -izing. To affect with ergot.

er-i-ca-ceous (er-i-kā'shius), a. [NL. Erica, the heath genus, < Gr. ἐρείκη, heath.] Belonging to the Ericaceæ, or heath family of plants, which includes the heath, arbutus, azalea, rhododendron, American laurel, etc.

e-rig-e-ron (ē-rij'e-ron), n. [L., < Gr. ἑριγέρων, groundsel, < ἥρι, early, + γέρων, old man; with allusion to the hoary down.] Any plant of the asteraceous genus Erigeron, with flower-heads resembling those of the asters but having narrower and usually more numerous (white or purple) rays.

Er-in (er'in or ē'rin), n. [OIr. Erinn, dat. of Eriu, later Éire, Ireland.] An ancient name of Ireland. [Now poetic.]

er-i-na-ceous (er-i-nā'shius), a. [L. erinaceus, hedgehog.] Of the hedgehog kind or family.

e-rin-go (ē-ring'gō), n. See erungo.

E-rin-ys (e-rin'is or e-rin'is), n.; pl. Erinyes (e-rin'i-ēz). [L., < Gr. Ἐρινύς.] In Gr. myth., an avenging female deity; a Fury. Also E-rin-nys (e-rin'is).

e-ris-tic (e-ris'tik). [Gr. ἐριστικός, < ἐρίειν, wrangle, < ἐρις, strife, debate.] I. a. Pertaining to controversy or disputation; controversial. II. n. A controversialist; also, the art of disputation (see Encyc. Brit., 11th ed., XXV. 418).

erl-king (ēr'king), n. [Tr. G. erlkönig, < Dan. ellekonge, elverkonge, king of the elves.] In German and Scandinavian mythology, a spirit or personified natural power which devises and works mischief, esp. to children.

er-mine (ēr'min), n. [OF. ermine (F. hermine); prob. from Teut.] A small, slender quadruped, Putorius ermineus, of the weasel kind, of northern regions, esp. when in winter pelage, which is pure white except for a black-tipped tail (also called stoat, esp. when in brown summer pelage); any of various allied species; also, the white fur of the ermine, esp. when having the black of the tails arranged at regular intervals, used for making garments and trimmings, and for lining and facing certain official and ceremonial garments, as the robes of English judges; hence, the office or dignity of a judge; in her-, one of the furs, represented with its peculiar spots black on a white ground.—er'mine, v. t.; -mined, -mining. To clothe, cover, or adorn with or as with ermine: chiefly in ermined, pp.

erne (ēr'n), n. [AS. earn = Icel. örn, eagle: cf. G. aar, bird of prey, eagle, also Gr. ὄρνις, bird.] An eagle, esp. a sea-eagle. [Now chiefly poetic or prov.] e-rode (ē-rōd'), v. t.; eroded, eroding. [L. erodere (pp. erosus), < e, out of, + rodere, gnaw.] To gnaw or eat out or away; wear away as by gnawing; destroy by slow consumption; also, to form (a channel, etc.) by eating or wearing away: used esp. in geology, of the action of water, etc., on the earth's surface.—e-rod-ent (ē-rō'dēnt), a. Eroding; erosive.—e-rod'i-ble, a. Subject to erosion.

E-ros (ē'ros), n. [L., < Gr. Ἔρως, personification of ἔρως, love, < ἐρᾶν, to love, be in love with.] The Greek god of love, identified by the Romans with Cupid.

e-rose (ē-rōs'), a. [L. erosus, pp. of erodere: see erode.] Uneven as if gnawed away; having the margin irregularly incised as if gnawed, as a leaf.

e-ro-sion (ē-rō'zhon), n. [L. erosio(n), < erodere: see erode.] The act of eroding, or the state of being eroded; esp., in geol., the process by which the surface of the earth is worn away and sculptured by the action of water, glaciers, etc.—e-ro-sive (-siv), a. Serving to erode; causing erosion.

e-rot-ic (e-rot'ik). [Gr. ἐρωτικός, < ἔρως, love: see eros.] I. a. Of or pertaining to sexual love; amatory. II. n. An erotic poem or other composition.—e-rot'i-cal-ly, adv.—e-rot'i-cism (-sizm), n. Erotic character or tendency.

err (ēr), v. [OF. F. errer, < L. errare, wander, err.] I. intr. To wander† or roam† (as, "Around your house the greedy Grecians err": Dryden's tr. Virgil's "Æneid," ii. 814); also, to deviate from the true course, aim, or purpose; also, to go astray in thought or belief; be mistaken; be incorrect, as a statement; also, to go astray morally; sin. II. † tr. To miss or mistake; also, to make a mistake in.

er-rand (er'and), n. [AS. ærende = OHG. ārunti = Icel. eyrendi, errand, message: cf. AS. ār, Icel. arr, messenger.] A special business entrusted to a messenger; a commission; hence, the purpose of any trip or journey; also, a trip to convey a message or execute a commission; a journey for a specific purpose.

er-rant (er'ant), a. [OF. F. errant, prop. ppr. of OF. errer, journey, travel (< ML. iterare, < L. iter, way, journey), but confused with OF. F. errant, ppr. of errer, wander, E. err.] Journeying or traveling, as a medieval knight in quest of adventure; roving adventurously; also, wandering or straying; deviating from the regular or proper course; erring; also, arrant†.—er'rant-ly, adv.—er'rant-ry, n.; pl. -ries (-riz). Errant condition or deed; conduct or a performance characteristic or suggestive of a knight-errant.

er-ra-ta (e-rā'tā), n. Plural of erratum.

er-rat-ic (e-rat'ik). [L. erraticus, < errare, wander, E. err.] I. a. Wandering; not fixed (as, an erratic star, a planet); also, having no certain course; also, deviating from the proper or usual course in conduct or opinion; eccentric; queer; in med., irregular; changeable; moving from point to point, as rheumatic pains; in geol., of boulders, etc., transported from the original site to an unusual location, as by glacial action; also, pertaining to such boulders, etc. II. n. A wanderer; also, an erratic or eccentric person; in geol., an erratic boulder or block.—er-rat'i-cal-ly, adv.

er-ra-tum (e-rā'tum), n.; pl. -ta (-tā). [L., prop. pp. neut. of errare, E. err.] An error in writing or printing.

er-rhine (er'in or -in), n. [Gr. ῥήνιον, < ῥῆν, + ῥῆς (ῥῆν-), nose.] A medicine to be snuffed up the nostrils to promote sneezing and increased nasal discharges.

err-ing (ēr'ing or er'-), p. a. Wandering†; going astray; in error; wrong; sinning.—err'ing-ly, adv.

er-ro-ne-ous (e-rō'nē-us), a. [L. erroneus, < erro(n), wanderer, vagrant, < errare, wander, E. err.] Wandering†; also, straying from the right (obs. or archaic); also, containing error; mistaken; incorrect.—er-ro'ne-ous-ly, adv.—er-ro'ne-ous-ness, n.

er-ror (er'qr), n. [OF. error (F. erreur), < L. error, < errare, wander, E. err.] A wandering or roving (archaic: as, "the damsel's headlong error thro' the wood," Tennyson's "Gareth and Lynette," 1184); also, the belief of what is not true; false beliefs collectively, or a false belief; also, deviation from accuracy or correctness; an unintentional inaccuracy, as in speaking or writing; a mistake, as in action or procedure; also, departure from moral right; wrong-doing; a moral offense; in math., etc., the difference between the Erosion. — Section showing the erosion of the summit of a mass of stratified rock bent into a low anticline.

Erose Leaf.

Ermine (Putorius ermineus), in winter pelage.

Heraldic Ermine.

observed or approximately determined value and the true value of a quantity; in baseball, any faulty play (except certain misplays by the pitcher or catcher, as a wild pitch or a passed ball) which prolongs a batsman's time at bat, leaves a runner safe when he should have been put out, or allows him to advance one or more bases.—er'ror-less, a. Free from error.

er-satz (er-zäts'), n. [G.] A substitute.

Erse (ers). [Var. of Irish.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the Celts in the Highlands of Scotland, or their language; sometimes, Irish. II. n. The Erse language; the Gaelic of the Scottish Highlanders; also, Irish.

erst (erst), adv. [AS. ærest, superl. of ær: see ere.] First; at first; also, before the present time (archaic); long ago (archaic); a little while ago (archaic).—erst'while, adv. A while before; at one time; once; formerly; heretofore. [Archaic.]

er-u-bes-cent (er-ö-bes'ent), a. [L. erubescens (-ent-), ppr. of erubescere, redder, < e, out, + rubescere, become red: see rubescere.] Becoming red or reddish; blushing.—er-u-bes'cence, n.

e-ruct (ē-rukt'), v. t. [L. eructare (pp. eructatus), < e, out of, + ructare, belch.] To belch forth, as wind from the stomach; emit violently, as matter from a volcano. Also e-ruc-tate (ē-ruk'tāt).—e-ruc-ta-tion (ē-ruk-tā'shən), n. [L. eructatio(n-).] The act of eructing; a belch, as of wind from the stomach or of matter from a volcano; also, that which is eructed.

er-u-dite (er'ö-dit). [L. eruditus, pp. of erudire, instruct, < e, out of, + rudis, unwrought, untaught, E. rude.] I. a. Learned or scholarly; characterized by erudition: as, an erudite professor; "an erudite commentary on certain points of law" (Parkman's "Oregon Trail," v.). II. n. An erudite person.—er'u-dite-ly, adv.—er'u-dite-ness, n.

er-u-di-tion (er-ö-dish'gn), n. [L. eruditio(n-), < erudire: see erudite.] Learning; scholarship; acquired knowledge, esp. in literature, languages, history, etc.

e-rum-pent (ē-rum'pent), a. [L. erumpens (-ent-), ppr. of erumpere: see erupt.] Bursting forth; in bot., prominent, as if bursting through the epidermis.

e-rupt (ē-rupt'), v. [L. eruptus, pp. of erumpere, < e, out of, + rumper, break.] I. intr. To burst forth, as volcanic matter; of teeth, to break through the skin of the gums; of a volcano, geyser, etc., to eject matter. II. tr. To cause to burst forth; force (teeth) through the gums; of a volcano, etc., to eject (matter); belch.—e-rupt-ion (ē-rup'shən), n. [L. eruptio(n-).] A bursting forth; a violent emission; an issuing forth suddenly and violently; an outburst; an outbreak; also, that which bursts forth; in geol., the ejection of molten rock, etc., as from a volcano; the ejection of water, etc., from a geyser; in pathol., the breaking out of a rash or the like; a rash or exanthema.—e-rupt-ive. I. a. Bursting forth, or tending to burst forth; pertaining to or of the nature of an eruption; in geol., of rocks, formed by the eruption of molten material; in pathol., causing, or attended with, an eruption or rash. II. n. In geol., an eruptive rock.—e-rupt-ive-ly, adv.

-ery. [OF. F. -erie, < -ier (*E. -er*²) + -ie (*E. -y*³); sometimes, also, from *E. -er*¹ + *-y*³.] A suffix of nouns denoting occupation, business, calling, or condition, place or establishment, goods or products, things collectively, qualities, actions, etc., as in archery, bakery, cutlery, fishery, grocery, munnerly, pottery, finery, foolery, prudery, scenery, tracery, trickery, witchery.

Ery-man-thi-an (er-i-man'thi-an), a. Of or pertaining to Erymanthus, a mountain in ancient Greece: as, the Erymanthian boar (a savage beast fabled to have infested Arcadia and to have been caught by Hercules).

e-ryn-go (ē-ring'gō), n.; pl. -goes (-gōz). [L. eryngion, < Gr. ἔρυγγιον, dim. of ἔρυγγος, eryngo.] Any plant of the apiaceous genus Eryngium, consisting of coarse herbs with toothed or spiny leaves and heads or spikes of small white or blue flowers, esp. E. maritimum, the sea-holly, whose root was formerly candied as a sweetmeat.

er-y-sip-e-las (er-i-sip'ē-lās), n. [L., < Gr. ἐρύσιπelas.] In pathol., an acute, febrile, infectious disease, due to a specific streptococcus, and characterized by a diffusely spreading, deep-red inflammation of the skin or mucous membranes.—

er'y-si-pel'a-tous (-si-pel'ā-tus), a.—er-y-sip'e-laid, n. In pathol., an infectious disease of the skin resembling erysipelas but not attended with fever.

er-y-the-ma (er-i-thē'mä), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐρύθημα, < ἐρυθθαίνω, redden, < ἐρυθρός, red.] In pathol., abnormal redness of the skin due to local congestion, as in inflammation.—er'y-the-mat'ic (-thē-mat'ik), er-y-them'a-tous (-them'ā-tus), a.

er-y-thre-an, er-y-thræ-an (er-i-thrē'an), a. [L. erythraeus, < Gr. ἐρυθραῖος, < ἐρυθρός, red.] Red: as, the Erythrean Sea (in anc. geog., the Indian Ocean between Africa and India, with the Red Sea and the Persian Gulf; also, later, the Red Sea).

o-ryth-rin (e-rith'rin), n. [Gr. ἐρυθρός, red.] In chem., a crystalline compound, C₂₀H₂₂O₁₀, obtained from certain lichens; also, a coal-tar color used to dye silk a fluorescent red.

o-ryth-rism (e-rith'rizm), n. [Gr. ἐρυθρός, red.] Abnormal redness, as of plumage or hair.—er-y-thris-mal (er-i-thriz'mäl), a.

o-ryth-rite (e-rith'rit), n. [Gr. ἐρυθρός, red.] Cobalt bloom (see *bloom*¹, n.); in chem., a crystalline compound, C₄H₆(OH)₄, obtained from various lichens.

e-ryth-ro-cyte (e-rith'rō-sit), n. [Gr. ἐρυθρός, red, + κύτος, a hollow.] One of the red corpuscles of the blood.

er-y-throp-si-a (er-i-throp'si-ä), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐρυθρός, red, + ψις, sight.] In pathol., defective vision in which all objects appear to be tinged with red.

-es¹. Earlier form of *-s*¹, plural suffix of nouns, now used chiefly after a sibilant, as in asses, bushes, foxes, witches, or (in some cases) after o, as in mosquitoes, potatoes, tomatoes, and regularly in the plural of nouns ending in -y preceded by a consonant, as in dandies, duties, rubies (plural of dandy, duty, ruby).

-es². Form of *-s*², ending of the third person singular present indicative of verbs, used after a vowel, as in does, goes, hurries, magnifies.

es-ca-drille (es-kā-dril', F. es-kā-drē-y'), n. [F., dim. of escadre, squadron, < It. squadra: see squadron.] A small naval squadron; also, a squadron or divisional unit of aéroplanes.

es-ca-lade (es-kā-lād'), n. [F., through Sp. or It. < ML. scalare, climb by ladder, scale, < L. scala, flight of steps, ladder, *E. scale*³.] A scaling or mounting by means of ladders, esp. in an assault upon a fortified place.—es-ca-lade', v. t.; -laded, -lading. To mount, pass, or enter by means of ladders: as, "The Spaniards, by battering a breach in the wall . . . and then escalading the inner works . . . found themselves masters of the place" (Motley's "Dutch Republic," iii. 5).—es-ca-lad'er (-lād'ēr), n.

es-ca-la-tor (es'kā-lā-tor), n. [L. e, out of, from, + scala, flight of steps.] An apparatus consisting of a series of movable steps or corresponding parts joined together into an endless belt, which is so operated as to form a stairway or incline of which the steps or parts ascend or descend continuously. [Proprietary name.]

es-cal-lop (es-kol'op or es-kal'-), n. and v. Same as scallop.

es-cap-a-ble (es-kā-pā-bl), a. That may be escaped.

es-ca-pade (es-kā-pād'), n. [F., < It. scappata, < scappare: see escape.] An escape from confinement or restraint; a breaking loose from rules; a reckless or freakish proceeding, performance, or adventure; a wild prank.

es-cape (es-kāp'), v.; -caped, -caping. [OF. escaper, eschaper (F. échapper), = It. scappare, appar. orig. 'slip out of one's cloak,' < L. ex, out of, + ML. capa, cloak, *E. cape*².] I. intr. To slip or get away, as from confinement or restraint; gain or regain liberty; issue from a confining inclosure, as a fluid; also, to slip away from pursuit or peril; avoid capture, punishment, or any threatened evil. II. tr. To escape from (prison, etc.)†; slip from (a person) inadvertently, as a remark; also, to slip away from or elude (pursuit, etc.); succeed in avoiding (any threatened or possible evil); also, to elude (notice, search, etc., or one's memory); fail to be noticed or recollected by (a person).—es-cape', n. The act of escaping, or the fact of having escaped; a slipping or getting away from confinement or restraint; leakage, as of water, gas, etc.; avoidance of capture, punishment, injury, notice, etc.; preservation from harm; also, a means of escaping (as, a fire-escape); also, fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, ásk, fáre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nór; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, êlect, agôny, intô, ûnite; (obscured) errânt, operâ, arđent, actôr, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you; something that has escaped, esp. a plant escaped from cultivation and growing wild; also, an escapade† (as, "Rome will despise her for this foul escape": Shakspeare's "Titus Andronicus," iv. 2. 113); or, an inadvertence† or blunder†.—es-cape-ment, n. The act of escaping; also, a way of escape; an outlet; specif., the contrivance in a timepiece by which the pressure of the wheels and the vibratory motion of the pendulum or balance-wheel are accommodated the one to the other.—es-cap'er (-kā'pér), n.

es-car-got (es-kär-gō), n. [F.] A snail.

es-ca-role (es'kä-röl), n. [F., < It. scariola.] A broad-leaved kind of endive, used for salads.

es-carp (es-kärp'), n. [F. escarpe, < It. scarpa: cf. scarp.] In fort., the inner slope or wall of the ditch surrounding a rampart; in general, any similar steep slope.—es-carp', v. t. To make into an escarp; give a steep slope to; furnish with escarps.—es-carp-ment, n. Ground cut into the form of an escarp or steep slope; also, the precipitous face of a ridge of land, extent of rock, or the like; a cliff.

-esce. [L. -escere, with inceptive or inchoative force.] A suffix of verbs meaning 'to begin to be or do something,' 'become,' 'grow,' or 'be somewhat' (as indicated by the rest of the word), as in convalesce, deliquesce, putresce. Cf. -escence and -escent.

-escence. [L. -escentia.] Suffix of nouns denoting action or process, change, state or condition, etc., and corresponding to verbs ending in -esce or adjectives ending in -escent, as in convalescence, deliquescence, luminescence, recrudescence.

-escent. [L. -escent, nom. -escens, ppr. ending.] A suffix of adjectives meaning 'beginning to be or do something,' 'becoming' or 'being somewhat' (as indicated), as in convalescent, deliquescent, flavescent, lutescent, recrudescant; often associated with verbs ending in -esce or nouns ending in -escence.

esch-a-lot (esh-ä-lot'), n. Same as shallot.

es-char (es'kär), n. [LL. eschara, < Gr. ἐσχάρα, hearth, scar from a burn: cf. scar']. In pathol., a hard crust or scab, as from a burn or caustic.—es-cha-rot'ic (-kä-rot'ik). [LL. escharoticus, < Gr. ἐσχαρωτικός.] I. a. Producing an eschar, as a medicinal substance; caustic. II. n. An escharotic substance or agent.

es-cha-tol-o-gy (es-kä-to-l'ō-jī), n. [Gr. ἐσχάτος, uttermost, last: see -logy.] The doctrines of the last or final things, as death, the judgment, the future state, etc.; the branch of theology dealing with them.—es'cha-to-log'i-cal (-tō-loj'i-kāl), a.—es-cha-tol'o-gist, n.

es-cheat (es-chēt'), n. [OF. eschete, < eschivoir (F. échoir), fall to one's share, < L. ex, out of, + cadere, fall.] In law, the reverting of land to the lord of the fee, or to the crown, as in England, or to the state, as in the U. S., through failure of persons legally qualified to inherit; in Scotland, confiscation or forfeiture of property; also, property or a possession which reverts by escheat; also, the right to take property subject to escheat.—es-cheat', v. I. intr. To revert by escheat, as to the crown or the state: as, "The lands must escheat, unless the present owner made a will" (Cooper's "Two Admirals," xii). II. tr. To make an escheat of; confiscate.—es-cheat'a-ble, a.—es-cheat'age (-āj), n. The right of succeeding to an escheat.—es-cheat'or, n. Formerly, in England, an officer in charge of escheats.

es-chew (es-chō'), v. t. [OF. eschuer, eschiver, also eskiuwer (see skew); from Teut. (cf. G. scheuen, shun, fear), and akin to E. shy']. To escape† (as, "What cannot be eschew'd must be embraced": Shakspeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," v. 5. 251); also, to abstain from; shun; avoid.—es-chew'al, n. An eschewing; avoidance.—es-chew'er, n.

esch-scholt-zia (e-shōlt'si-ä), n. [NL.; named from J. F. Eschscholtz (1793–1831), Russian naturalist.] Any plant of the papaveraceous genus Eschscholtzia, native in the western U. S., with finely divided glaucous leaves and showy yellow or orange-colored flowers, as E. californica, the California poppy.

Two forms of Escape-ment.

es-clandre (es-kländr), n. [F.: see slander.] Scandal; unpleasant notoriety; a scandalous occurrence; a scene.

es-cort (es'kört), n. [F. escorte, < It. scorta, < scorgere, guide, < L. ex, out of, + corrige, set right, E. correct.] A body of persons, or a single person, accompanying another or others for protection, guidance, or compliment; specif., an armed guard; also, protection, safeguard, or guidance on a journey.—es-cort', v. t. To attend or accompany as an escort.

es-cot' (es-kot'), v. t. [OF. escoter, < escot: see scot']. To pay for; support: as, "What, are they children? who maintains 'em? how are they escoted?" (Shakspeare's "Hamlet," ii. 2. 362).

es-cri-toire (es-kri-twor'), n. [F. (now écritoire), < ML. scriptorium: see scriptorium.] A writing-desk.

es-crow (es-krō'), n. [AF. escrowe, OF. escroe, piece of parchment, scroll (F. écrou, entry in a jail register); from Teut., and akin to E. shred: cf. scroll.] In law, a writing fully executed by the parties, but deposited with a third person, by whom it is to be held until the fulfillment of some condition, when it is to be delivered to the grantee.

es-cu-do (es-kō'dō, Sp. -thō), n.; pl. -dos (-dōz, Sp. -thōs). [Sp. and Pg., < L. scutum, shield: cf. écu and scudo.] Any of various gold and silver coins of Spain, Chile, etc.; also, the gold monetary unit (established in 1911) of Portugal, divided into 100 equal parts called centavos, and equivalent in value to about $1.08; a Portuguese gold or silver coin of this value.

es-cu-lent (es-kū-lent). [L. esculentus, < esca, food, < edere, eat.] I. a. Suitable for use as food, esp. human food; edible. II. n. Something edible, esp. a vegetable.

es-cutch-eon (es-kuch'qn), n. [OF. escuchon (F. écusson), < escu, < L. scutum, shield.] The shield, or shield-shaped or other surface, on which armorial bearings are depicted or displayed; a hatchment; also, something resembling an escutcheon or a shield, as the panel on a ship's stern bearing her name, or the protective metal plate around a keyhole, or a marking on the rump of a deer, antelope, etc.—es-cutch'eoned, a.

-esse. [OF. -eis (F. -ois, -ais), < L. -ensis.] A suffix of adjectives and nouns having reference to locality, nationality, language, literary style, etc., as in Bengalese, Chinese, Japanese, Johnsonese, journalese.

es-kar, es-ker (es'kär, -kër), n. [Ir. eiscir.] In geol., a serpentine ridge of gravelly and sandy drift, believed to have been formed by streams flowing under or in glacial ice.

Es-ki-mo (es'ki-mō). [Algonquian name for the people, meaning 'eaters of raw flesh': by themselves called Innu.] I. n.; pl. -mos (-mōz) or -mo. One of a race or people, characterized by short or medium stature, stout build, light-brown complexion, and broad, flat face, inhabiting the arctic coasts of America from Greenland to Alaska and a small part of the adjacent Asiatic coast; also, their language. II. a. Of or pertaining to the Eskimos or their language.—Eskimo dog, one of a breed of strong dogs used by the Eskimos to draw sledges.—Es-ki-mo'an, a.

es-ne (ez'nē), n. [AS.] One of a class of domestic slaves among the Anglo-Saxons: as, "the esne or slave who works for hire" (Stubbs's "Constitutional Hist. of Eng.," v. § 37).

e-soph-a-gus, œ-soph-a-gus (ē-sōf'ā-gus), n. [NL. œsophagus, < Gr. οἰσοφάγος, perhaps < οἶσιν, fut. used with φάγειν, bear, + φάγειν, eat.] In anat. and zool., the muscular tube in man and the higher animals which extends from the pharynx to the stomach; the gullet; also, an analogous tube in the lower animals, as insects.—e-so-phag-e-al, œ-so-phag-e-al (ē-sōf'āj'ē-āl), a.

es-o-ter-ic (es-ō-ter'ik). [Gr. ἐσωτερικός, < ἐσω, within, < ἐς, εἰς, into.] I. a. Belonging or pertaining to an inner or select circle, as of disciples; communicated to or understood by the initiated only, as a doctrine; hence, private or secret; profound or recondite. Cf. exoteric. II. n. An esoteric doctrine (usually in pl.); also, one initiated or believing in esoteric doctrines.—es-o-ter'i-cal, a. Esoteric.—es-o-ter'i-cal-ly, adv.—es-o-ter'i-cism (-sizm), n. Esoteric doctrine or tendency. Also es-ot-er-ism (e-sot'ē-rizm).

es-pal-ier (es-pal'yēr), n. [F., < It. spalliera, lit. 'shoulder support,' < spalla, shoulder, < L. spatula, broad piece:

cf. epaule.] A trellis or framework on which fruit-trees or shrubs are trained to grow in flattened form, as to secure for the plant freer circulation of air or better exposure to the sun; also, a tree or plant so trained (as, "The long-tied espaliers . . . had grown so stout, and cramped . . . that they had pulled their stakes out of the ground": Hardy's "Mayor of Casterbridge," xii.). —es-pal'ier, v. t. To train on or furnish with an espalier.

es-par-to (es-pär'tō), n. [Sp., < L. spartum, < Gr. σπάρτον, σπάρτος.] Any of several grasses, esp. Stipa tenacissima, of southern Europe and northern Africa, used for making paper, cordage, etc. Also es-par'to=grass.

es-pe-cial (es-pesh'al), a. [OF. especial (F. spécial), < L. specialis: see special.] Special, of a particular kind, or peculiar to a particular one (archaic: as, "rend'ring general that which is especial," Byron's "Don Juan," xv. 25); also, having a particular function, purpose, etc.† (as, an especial messenger); also, distinguished from what is ordinary; exceptional; now, usually, exceptional in amount or degree (as, especial care; especial regret; of no especial value or importance). —es-pe-cial-ly, adv. In an especial manner or degree; particularly; principally.

es-pe-rance† (es'pe-rans), n. [OF. esperance (F. espérance), < esperer, < L. sperare, hope.] Hope.

Es-pe-ran-to (es-pe-rän'tō), n. [From Esperanto, pseudonym of L. L. Zamenhof (1859–1917), Russian physician, who in 1887 proposed this language.] An artificial language designed as an international medium, based on words and forms common to the principal European languages. — Es-pe-ran'tist, n.

es-pi-al (es-pi'al), n. The act of spying, or the fact of being espied; discovery; also, the act of keeping watch; observation; also, a spy†.

es-piè-gle-rie (es-pye-glè-rè), n. [F.] Roguishness; a roguish or playful trick.

es-pi-er (es-pi'ér), n. [See espy.] One who spies.

es-pi-o-nage (es'pi-ō-nāj), n. [F. espionnage, < espionner, spy upon, < espion, < It. spione, aug. of spia, spy, = E. spy, n.] The practice of spying on others; the employment of spies.

es-pla-nade (es-plā-nād'), n. [F., through Sp. or It. < L. explanare, flatten out: see explain.] The glacis of a fortification; also, the open space between the glacis of a citadel and the first houses of the town; also, any open, level space, esp. one serving for public walks or drives.

es-pou-sal (es-pou'zāl), n. [OF. espousaille, usually pl. espousailles (F. épousailles), < L. sponsalia, neut. pl. of sponsalis, pertaining to betrothal, < sponsus, betrothal, < spondere: see espouse.] The ceremony of betrothal or of marriage (usually in pl.); also, the act of espousing; adoption or advocacy, as of a cause or principle.

es-pouse (es-pouz'), v. t.; -poused, -pousing. [OF. espouser (F. épouser), < LL. sponsare, betroth, espouse, < L. spondere (pp. sponsus), promise, betroth: cf. sponsor.] To promise, engage, or bestow in marriage; betroth; also, to take in marriage; marry; hence, to make one's own, adopt, or embrace, as a cause. — es-pous'er, n.

es-prit (es-prē), n. [F., < L. spiritus, E. spirit.] Spirit; mind; intelligence; wit. — es-pirit de corps (dè kôr). [F., 'spirit of body.'] A sense of union and of common interests and responsibilities, as developed among a body of persons associated together. — es-pirit fort (fôr). [F., 'strong spirit.'] A strong-minded person; a freethinker.

es-py (es-pi'), v.; -pied, -pying. [OF. espier (F. épier): see spy, v.] I. tr. To see at a distance; catch sight of; see or discover suddenly after some effort, or unexpectedly as by chance; also, to inspect narrowly†; spy upon† (as, "Now question me no more; we are espied": Shakspeare's "Titus Andronicus," ii. 3. 48). II. intr. To look narrowly; keep watch; spy: as, "Stand by the way, and espy" (Jer. xlviii. 19). [Archaic.]

-esque. [F. -esque, < It. -esco, from Teut., and akin to E. -ish¹.] A suffix of adjectives indicating style, manner, or distinctive character, as in arabesque, grotesque, picturesque, Dantesque, Düreresque, Juno-esque, Romanesque.

Es-qui-mau (es'ki-mō), n.; pl. -maux (-mōz or -mō). [F.] See Eskimo.

es-quire (es-kwīr'), n. [OF. esquier (F. écuyer), < LL. scutarius, shield-bearer, < L. scutum, shield.] A shield-bearer†; a squire, or aspirant to knighthood, attendant upon a knight; any of various officials in the service of a king or nobleman; also, a man belonging to the order of English gentry ranking next below a knight; a landed proprietor (archaic); [usually cap.] a title orig. belonging to esquires of the English gentry, but later applied to other persons considered to be of equivalent rank, particularly to lawyers in the U. S., and commonly to any man as a mere mark of respect, as in the addresses of letters (written after the surname preceded by the Christian name or initials and with no title, as Mr., prefixed, and commonly abbreviated Esq. or Esqr.: as, John Smith, Esq.); also [l. c.], a gentleman who attends or escorts a lady in public. — es-quire', v. t.; -quired, -quiring. To raise to the rank of esquire; also, to address as 'Esquire'; also, to escort (a lady) as an esquire.

ess (es), n. The letter S, s; something shaped like an S. — collar of esses. See under collar, n.

-ess. [F. -esse, < L. -issa, < Gr. -ισσα.] A noun suffix forming distinctively feminine terms corresponding to nouns of masculine (or common) gender, as in abbess, countess, governess, hostess, poetess.

es-say (es'ā), n. [OF. F. essai, < LL. exagium, a weighing, < L. ex, out, + agere, drive, do, act: cf. assay, also ex-amen, exact.] A testing† or experiment† (as, "I hope . . . he wrote this but as an essay or taste of my virtue": Shakspeare's "King Lear," i. 2. 47); a trial specimen†; also, an effort to perform or accomplish something; an attempt or endeavor; also, a tentative effort†; a rough copy or draft, as of a letter; also, a literary composition, usually of no great length, on a particular subject. — es-say (e-sā'), v. t. [OF. essaier (F. essayer), < essai.] To put to the test; make trial of; also, to try to accomplish; attempt. — es-say'er, n. — es-say-ette (es-ā-et'), n. A short essay. — es-say-ist, n. One who makes essays or trials; also, a writer of essays.

es-sence (es'ens), n. [OF. F. essence, < L. essentia, < esse, be.] Being† or existence†; something that is, esp. a spiritual or immaterial entity (as, "Her honour is an essence that's not seen": Shakspeare's "Othello," iv. 1. 16); substance (as, "Spirits . . . Can either sex assume, or both; so soft And uncompounded is their essence pure": Milton's "Paradise Lost," i. 425); an elementary ingredient or constituent (cf. quintessence); also, that by which a thing is what it is; intrinsic nature; hence, the distinctive characteristic or specific difference of a thing; the important elements or features of a thing; also, a substance obtained from a plant, drug, or the like, by distillation or other process, and containing its characteristic properties in concentrated form; an alcoholic solution of an essential oil; specif., a perfume; also, gasoline, as used in operating automobiles, etc. — es'sence, v. t.; -senced, -sencing. To perfume; scent.

Es-sene (e-sēn'), n. [L. Esseni, pl., < Gr. Ἐσσηνοί.] One of a brotherhood or monastic order of Jews in ancient Palestine, first appearing in history in the 2d century B.C., characterized by asceticism, celibacy, and the strict observance of the non-Levitical portion of the Mosaic law. — Es-se-ni-an (e-sē-ni-ān), a. — Es-se-nism (-nizm), n.

es-sen-tial (e-sen'shāl), a. [ML. essentialis.] Existing† or actual†; also, being such by its essence or very nature, or in the highest sense (as, essential happiness; essential poetry); also, pertaining to, constituting, or entering into the essence or nature of a thing; important, as affecting the essence of a thing; hence, absolutely necessary; indispensable; also, of the nature of an essence of a plant, etc. (as, an essential oil: see below); in med., idiopathic. — essential oil, any of a class of oils obtained from plants, possessing the odor and other properties of the plant, and fat, fâte, fâr, fâll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, ðlect, agôny, intö, ðnite; (obscured) errânt, operâ, ardënt, actör, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; then, then; y, you;

Esparto. — 1, 4, stalk and fruit of Stipa tenacissima; 2, 3, 5, stalk, flowering stem, and fruit of Lygeum spartum.

volatilizing completely when heated: used in making perfumes, flavors, etc.—es-sen'tial, n. Something belonging to the essence or nature of a thing; something indispensable; a chief point.—es-sen-ti-al'i-ty (-shi-al'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). The quality of being essential; essential character; also, an essential element or point.—es-sen'tial-ly, adv.—es-sen'tial-ness, n.

-est¹. [AS. -est, -ost.] A suffix forming the superlative degree of adjectives and adverbs, as in eldest, fastest, hardest, soonest.

-est², -st. [AS. -est, -ast, -st.] Ending of the second person singular present and preterit indicative of verbs, as in doest or dost, diddest or didst, hast, hadst: now occurring only in archaic forms or used in solemn or poetic language.

es-tab-lish (es-tab'lish), v. t. [OF. establis (establis) (F. établir, < L. stabilire, < stabilis, firm, E. *stable*².] To make stable or firm; confirm; strengthen; also, to appoint or ordain for permanence, as a law; fix unalterably; also, to set up on a firm or permanent basis, as a government or a business; institute; found; also, to fix or settle stably, as in a position; install; set up in business; settle (one's self) as if permanently; also, to set up or bring about permanently, as liberty or order; cause to be permanently accepted, as a custom; also, to show to be valid or well grounded, as a claim or an accusation; prove; also, to make (a church) a national or state institution.—es-tab'lish-er, n.—es-tab'lish-ment, n. The act of establishing, or the state or fact of being established; settlement; institution; substantiation; also, fixed or settled allowance or income; also, something established; a constituted order or system; a permanent civil, military, or other force or organization; the quota of men in an army, regiment, etc.; an organized business concern, or the building occupied by it; an institution; a household; a place of residence with everything connected with it; also, the recognition by a state of a church as the state church; the church so recognized.

es-ta-cade (es-tā-kād', F. es-tā-kād'), n. [F., < Sp. estacada, < estaca, stake.] A dike or barrier of piles or the like set in the sea, a river, etc., to check the approach of an enemy or protect against floating objects.

es-ta-fette (es-tā-fet'), n. [F., < It. staffetta, dim. of staffa, stirrup; from Teut.] A mounted courier.

es-ta-mi-net (es-tā-mē-nā), n. [F.] A café in which smoking is allowed.

es-tan-cia (es-tān'syā), n. [Sp., < ML. stantia, < L. stare, stand.] In Spanish America, a landed estate; a stock-farm.

es-tate (es-tāt'), n. [OF. estat (F. état), < L. status: see state.] State or condition of being (as, to attain to man's estate); condition or circumstances with reference to worldly prosperity, estimation, etc.; social status or rank; sometimes, high rank or dignity; a person of high rank; pomp or state (archaic); also, a class or order in a community or nation (as, "We know your tenderness of heart . . . to all estates": Shakspeare's "Richard III." iii. 7. 213); one of the great classes or orders ("estates of the realm") constituting the body politic and participating in the government, as, now, in England, the lords spiritual, lords temporal, and commons; also, interest, ownership, or property in land or other things; hence, property or possessions; esp., property left at a person's death; the property of a deceased person, a bankrupt, etc., viewed in the aggregate as a legal person (as, to buy from the estate of John Smith); also, a piece of landed property, esp. one of large extent.—fourth estate, the public press; the newspapers, or the body of journalists.—es-tate', v. t.; -tated, -tating. To establish in or as in an estate; also, to bestow as an estate† (as, "All my right of her I do estate unto Demetrius": Shakspeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," i. 1. 98).

es-teem (es-tēm'), v. [OF. estimer, < L. æstimare: see estimate, and cf. aim.] I. tr. To set a value on; value; rate; hold in estimation; esp., to regard as valuable; prize; regard highly or favorably; feel regard for; respect; also, to form a judgment concerning the number, extent, etc., of; form an opinion of; consider, think, or hold (as, "Conversation, in its better part, May be esteem'd a gift and not an art": Cowper's "Conversation," 4). II. † intr. To have an opinion (of): as, "We have always truly served you, and beseech you So to esteem of us" (Shakspeare's "Winter's Tale," ii. 3. 149).—es-teem', n. An estimate† or appraisal; also, opinion or judgment of merit or demerit; estimation; esp., favorable opinion or judgment; respect or regard; also, reputation†; standing†; worth†.

es-ter (es'tēr), n. [Coined by L. Gmelin (1788-1853), German chemist.] In chem., a compound formed by replacing the hydrogen of an acid by a hydrocarbon radical: often regarded as a salt of the hydrocarbon radical.

Esth (esth), n. An Estonian.

es-the-sia (es-thē'ziā), etc. See æsthesia, etc.

es-the-si-om-e-ter, æs-the-si-om-e-ter (es-thē-si-om'e-tēr), n. [Gr. αἰσθησιόμετρον, perception, sensation: see -meter.] An instrument for determining the degree of tactile sensibility, esp. by finding how close two points pressed against the skin can be to each other and yet be felt as distinct points.

es-thete, æs-thete (es'thēt), n. [Gr. αἰσθητής, one who perceives, < αἰσθάνεσθαι, perceive.] One in whom the artistic sense or faculty is highly developed; commonly, one affecting an extravagant love of the beautiful.—es-thet'ic, æs-thet'ic (-thet'ik). [Gr. αἰσθητικός, < αἰσθάνεσθαι.] I. a. Pertaining to the sense of the beautiful, or the science of esthetics; having an appreciation of or a love for the beautiful; conforming to the principles of the beautiful.

II. n. The science of the beautiful; esthetics.—es-thet'i-cal, æs-thet'i-cal, a.—es-thet'i-cal-ly, æs-thet'i-cal-ly, adv.

—es-the-ti'cian, æs-the-ti'cian (-thē-tish'an), n. One versed in esthetics.—es-thet'i-cism, æs-thet'i-cism (-sizm), n. The principles of esthetics; attachment to esthetics; appreciation of the beautiful.—es-thet'ics, æs-thet'ics, n. The doctrines or philosophy of taste; the science of the beautiful; the theory of the fine arts.

Es-tho-ni-an (es-thō'ni-an). I. a. Of or pertaining to Esthonia (on the eastern coast of the Baltic Sea, south of the Gulf of Finland), or the Estonians, or their language. II. n. One of a Finnic people inhabiting Esthonia and neighboring regions; also, the language of this people.

es-ti-ma-ble (es'ti-mā-bl), a. [L. æstimabilis.] Capable of being estimated; also, valuable† (as, "A pound of man's flesh . . . Is not so estimable . . . As flesh of muttons, beefs, or goats": Shakspeare's "Merchant of Venice," i. 3. 167); also, worthy of esteem, regard, or good opinion.—es'ti-ma-ble-ness, n.—es'ti-ma-bly, adv.

es-ti-mate (es'ti-māt), v.; -mated, -mating. [L. æstimatus, pp. of æstimare, judge the value of, rate: cf. esteem.] I. tr. To set a value on† or appraise†; value† or esteem†; also, to form an approximate judgment or opinion regarding the value, amount, size, weight, etc., of; calculate approximately; also, to form an opinion of; judge. II. intr. To submit approximate figures, as of the cost of work to be done.—es'ti-mate (-māt), n. An appraisal† or valuation†; appraised value†; also, an approximate judgment or calculation, as of the value, amount, etc., of something; an approximate statement of what would be charged for certain work to be done, submitted by one ready to undertake the work; also, a judgment or opinion, as of the qualities of a person or thing; estimation or judgment.—es-ti-ma'tion (-mā-shn), n. [L. æstimatio (n.).] The act of estimating or appraising†; valuation†; estimated value†; also, valuation in respect of excellence or merit; esteem; hence, account or worth in the opinion of others; repute; consequence; also, approximate calculation; also, judgment or opinion; manner of judging.—es'ti-ma-tive (-mā-tiv), a. Pertaining to or capable of estimating.—es'ti-ma-tor (-mā-tōr), n.

es-stip-u-late (ē-stip'ū-lāt), a. Same as exstipulate.

es-ti-val, æs-ti-val (es'ti-vāl), a. [L. æstivalis, < æstivus, of summer, < æstas, summer, akin to æstus, heat: see estuary.] Pertaining or appropriate to summer.

Esthesiometer.

es-ti-vate, æs-ti-vate (es'ti-vāt), v. i.; -vated, -vating. [L. æstivatus, pp. of æstivare, < æstivus: see estival.] To spend the summer; in zool., to pass the summer in a dormant or torpid condition.—es-ti-va'tion, æs-ti-va'tion (-vā'shən), n. The act of estivating (used esp. in zool.); in bot., the disposition of the parts of a flower in the bud.—es'ti-va-tor, æs'ti-va-tor, n. An estivating animal.

es-toile (es-toil'), n. [OF. estoile (F. étoile), < L. stella, star.] In her., a star-shaped figure, commonly having six points and wavy rays. Cf. *mullet*².

es-top (es-top'), v. t.; -topped, -topping. [OF. estoper (F. étouper), stop up, AF. estopper (in law), < ML. stupare, stop, orig. with tow, < L. stuppa, tow: cf. stop.] To stop, bar, or obstruct (archaic); in law, to hinder or prevent by estoppel.—es-top'-pel (-top'el), n. [Cf. OF. estoupail, stopple, stopper.] In law, a bar or impediment preventing one from asserting a fact or claim, arising from a previous action, or a failure to act, by which one has admitted, implied, or established the contrary.

Estoire.

es-to-vers (es-tō'vēr), n. pl. [OF. estover, estovoir, necessity, a necessary, noun use of estovoir, inf., be necessary.] In law, necessities allowed by law, as wood and timber to a tenant, alimony to a wife, etc.

es-trade (es-trād'), n. [F., road, highway, later raised platform, through Pr. or It. < LL. strata, paved way: see street.] A raised platform; a dais: as, "I mounted the estrade (a low platform, raised a step above the flooring), where stood the teacher's chair and desk" (C. Brontë's "Villette," viii.).

es-trange (es-trānj'), v. t.; -tranged, -tranging. [OF. estrangier (F. étranger), < L. extraneare, < extraneus, that is without, foreign: see extraneous, and cf. strange.] To cause to be strange or as a stranger; remove to or keep at a distance; also, to divert from the original use or possessor (as, "They . . . have estranged this place, and have burned incense in it unto other gods": Jer. xix. 4); also, to turn away in feeling or affection; alienate the affections of.—es-trange'ment, n.—es-tran'ger (-trān'jēr), n.

es-tray (es-trā'), v. i. [OF. estrayer: see stray.] To stray. [Archaic.]—es-tray', n. A domestic animal, as a horse or a sheep, found wandering or without an owner; hence, anything strayed away.

es-treat (es-trēt'), n. [AF. estrete, OF. estraitte, < estraire, < L. extrahere: see extract.] In Eng. law, a true copy or extract of an original writing or record, as of a fine.—es-treat', v. t. To make an estreat of (a fine, etc.) for prosecution; also, to levy (fines) under an estreat; exact (anything) by way of fine or levy.

es-tu-a-ry (es'tū-ā-ri), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). [L. æstuarium, < æstus, heat, heaving motion, surge, tide, akin to Gr. αἶθω, kindle: see ether.] An arm or inlet of the sea indenting the land; an arm of the sea at the mouth of a river; that part of the mouth or lower course of a river flowing into the sea which is subject to marked tidal effects.—es'tu-a-rine (-ā-rin), a.

e-su-ri-ent (ē-sū'ri-ēnt), a. [L. esuriens (-ent-), ppr. of esurire, desire to eat, < edere, eat.] Hungry; greedy.—e-su'ri-ence, e-su'ri-en-cy, n.

-et. [OF. -et (F. -et), masc., -ete (F. -ette), fem.] A noun suffix having properly a diminutive force (now lost in many words), as in bullet, facet, islet, mallet, midget, owlet, plummet. Cf. -ette.

e-ta (ē'tā or ā'tā), n. [Gr. ἑτα.] The seventh letter (H, η, = English long E, e) of the Greek alphabet.

e-tæ-ri-o (e-tē'rī-ō), n. Erroneous form of hetærio.

é-ta-gère (ā-tā-zhār), n. [F., < étage, story, = E. stage.] An ornamental cabinet of open shelves suitable for bric-à-brac.

et-a-mine (et'ā-min), n. [F. étamine, OF. estamine, < L. stamen, warp, thread: see stamen.] A dress-fabric of wool, cotton, silk, etc., with an open, canvas-like weave.

é-tape (ā-tāp), n. [F.; akin to *E. staple*².] Formerly, a mart; a storehouse, as of provisions for troops; an allowance of provisions for troops on the march; in modern use, a place at which troops halt for the night; the distance marshed by them during the day; in Russia, a stockaded prison-like building used to confine and shelter at night prisoners in transit.

é-tat-ma-jor (ā-tā-mā-zhōr), n. [F.] The staff of an army, regiment, etc.

et cet-e-ra (et set'ē-rā). [L. et cetera (sometimes cætera).] And others; and the rest; and so forth: often abbreviated etc. or &c.—et-cet'e-ra, n.; pl. -ras. A number of other things or persons unspecified; pl., extras or sundries (as, "The hall itself was strewn . . . with trunks, imperials, and . . . the hundred etceteras of travelling baggage": Lever's "Harry Lorrequer," vii.).

etch (ech), v. [D. etsen, < G. ätzen, feed, corrode, etch; akin to E. eat.] I. tr. To cut, bite, or corrode with an acid or the like; engrave (metals, etc.) by the corrosive action of an acid or the like, esp. so as to form a design or picture in furrows which when charged with ink will give an impression on paper; also, to produce or copy by this method, as on copper. II. intr. To practise etching.—etch'er, n.

—etch'ing, n. The process or art of one who etches; a process for forming a design or drawing on a metal plate from which an ink impression on paper can be taken, the method consisting of the coating of the plate with a kind of varnish, the drawing of the design on this with a sharp instrument, and the eating out of the exposed metal with acid; also, a design or plate so produced; an impression, as on paper, taken from an etched plate.

e-tern (ē-tēr'n'), a. See eterné.

e-ter-nal (ē-tēr'nəl). [OF. eternal (F. éternel), < LL. æternalis, < L. æternus: see eterné.] I. a. Without beginning or end of duration (as, "The eternal God is thy refuge": Deut. xxxiii. 27); independent of time-conditions; also, of endless duration; everlasting (as, the Eternal City, Rome); imperishable; immutable; hence, perpetual; ceaseless; continued without cessation. II. n. That which is eternal; eternity; [cap.] with the, God.—e-ter'nal-ly, adv.—e-ter'nal-ness, n.

e-terne (ē-tēr'n'), a. [OF. eterne, < L. æternus, for æwiter-nus, < æwum, eternity, age, akin to Gr. αἰών, E. æon.] Eternal; everlasting. [Archaic.]

e-ter-ni-ty (ē-tēr'ni-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [OF. eternité (F. éternité), < L. æternitas, < æternus: see eterné.] Eternal duration or continuance; eternal existence, esp. as contrasted with mortal life (as, "All that lives must die, Passing through nature to eternity": Shakspeare's "Hamlet," i. 2. 73); infinite time (as, "those thoughts that wander through eternity": Milton's "Paradise Lost," ii. 148); also, an endless or seemingly endless period or extent.

e-ter-nize (ē-tēr'nīz), v. t.; -nized, -nizing. [F. éterniser, < L. æternus: see eterné.] To make eternal; perpetuate; immortalize: as, "Men's monuments, grown old, forget their names They should eternize" (Lowell's "Under the Old Elm," ii. 1).

e-te-sian (ē-tē'zhan), a. [L. etesius, < Gr. ἐτήσιος, < ἔτος, year.] Recurring annually: applied to certain Mediterranean winds.

eth (eθ), n. See edh.

-eth, -th³. [AS. -eth, -ath, -th.] Ending of the third person singular present indicative of verbs, as in doeth or doth, hath, hopeth, sitteth: now occurring only in archaic forms or used in solemn or poetic language. Cf. -s².

eth-ane (eθ'an), n. [From ether.] In chem., an odorless, gaseous hydrocarbon present in illuminating gas and crude petroleum.

e-ther (ē'thēr), n. [L. æther, < Gr. αἰθήρ, upper air, sky, akin to αἶθω, kindle, light up, Skt. idh-, kindle: cf. estuary.] The upper regions of space; the clear sky; the heavens; also, the medium anciently supposed to fill the upper regions; in physics, an extremely tenuous and elastic medium ('luminiferous ether') supposed to be diffused through all space, and to transmit light, electric waves, etc.; in chem., a highly volatile and inflammable colorless liquid ('ethyl ether'), obtained by the action of sulphuric acid on alcohol, and used chiefly as an anesthetic; any of the class of compounds (oxides of hydrocarbon radicals) to which ethyl ether belongs.—ether wave. See under wave, n.

e-the-re-al (ē-thē'rē-āl), a. [L. æthereus, for ætherius, < Gr. αἰθέριος, < αἰθήρ: see ether.] Of or pertaining to the ether or upper regions of space; hence, heavenly or celestial (as, "Go, heavenly guest, ethereal messenger, Sent from whose Sovran Goodness I adore!" Milton's "Paradise Lost," viii. 646); also, resembling the ether; light, airy, or tenuous; also, intangible; impalpable; extremely delicate or refined; in physics, pertaining to or of the nature of luminiferous ether; in chem., pertaining to or resembling ethyl ether.—e-the-re-al-i-ty (ə-thē'rē-āl-i-tī), n. Ethereal quality.—e-the-re-al-ize (-īz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. To make ethereal; refine; spiritualize; give an ethereal appearance to.—e-the-re-al-i-za-tion (-ī-zā'shən), n.—e-the-re-al-ly, adv.—e-the-re-al-ness, n.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; tē, then; y, you;

e-the-re-ous (ē-thē'rē-us), a. Ethereal.

e-the-ri-al (ē-thē'rī-āl), etc. See ethereal, etc.

e-ther-ic (ē-ther'ik), a. Of or pertaining to the ether, or the chemical substance ether.

e-ther-i-fy (ē'thēr-i-fī or ē-ther'-), v. t.; -fied, -fying. [See -fy.] To convert into ether.—e-ther-i-fi-ca-tion (ē'thēr-i-fī-kā'shən or ē-ther'-), n.

e-ther-ize (ē'thēr-īz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. In chem., to convert into ether; in med., to put under the influence of ether.—e-ther-i-za-tion (-ī-zā'shən), n.—e-ther-iz-er (-ī-zēr), n.

eth-ic (eth'ik). [L. ethicus, < Gr. ἠθικός, < ἦθος, custom, disposition, character.] I. a. Pertaining to morals; ethical. II. n. Ethics.—eth'i-cal, a. Pertaining to morals or the principles of morality; pertaining to right and wrong in conduct; also, in accordance with the rules for right conduct or practice.—ethical dative, in gram., the dative of a personal pronoun introduced into a sentence to indicate a person to whom the idea expressed is of some degree of interest, as me in "He plucked me ope his doublet and offered them his throat to cut," or mihi in Quid mihi Celsus agit? (How does my Celsus?)—eth'i-cal-ly, adv.—eth'i-cal-ness, n.—eth'i-cize (-siz), v. t.; -cized, -cizing. To make ethical; regard or treat as ethical.—eth'ics, n. The principles of morality, or the science of morals or right conduct; a treatise on this science; also, a particular ethical system; the rules of conduct recognized in respect to a particular class of human actions (as, medical ethics, the laws of the duties of medical men in regard to the practice of their profession); moral principles, as of an individual; also, the whole field of the moral sciences; natural jurisprudence.

E-thi-op (ē'thi-op), n. and a. [L. Æthiops, < Gr. Αἰθίοψ.] Same as Ethiopian.

E-thi-o-pi-an (ē'thi-ō'pī-ən). I. a. Pertaining to Ethiopia, an ancient region of Africa south of Egypt; also, negro; in zoögeog., belonging to Africa south of the tropic of Cancer. II. n. A native of Ethiopia; also, a negro.

E-thi-op-ic (ē'thi-op'ik). I. a. Ethiopian. II. n. The language of ancient Ethiopia, a Semitic tongue having a Christian literature.

eth-moid (eth'moid). [Gr. ἠθμοειδής, < ἠθμός, strainer, sieve, + εἶδος, form.] I. a. Sieve-like; in anat., noting or pertaining to a bone of the skull situated at the root of the nose, and containing numerous perforations for the filaments of the olfactory nerve. II. n. In anat., the ethmoid bone.—eth-moi'dal, a.

eth-narch (eth'närk), n. [Gr. ἔθναρχης, < ἔθνος, race, nation, + ἀρχεῖν, lead, rule.] The governor of a nation or a province.—eth'nar-chy (-när-ki), n.; pl. -chies (-kiz). [Gr. ἔθναρχία.] The government or jurisdiction of an ethnarch.

eth-nic (eth'nik), a. [LL. ethnicus, < Gr. ἠθνικός, national, gentile, heathen, < ἔθνος, race, nation.] Of, pertaining to, or peculiar to a race; pertaining to races, their origin, characteristics, etc.; ethnological; also, pertaining to nations not Jewish or Christian; heathen or pagan (as, "These are ancient ethnic revels, Of a faith long since forsaken": Longfellow's "Drinking Song"). Also eth'ni-cal.—eth'ni-cal-ly, adv.

eth-no. Form of Gr. ἔθνος, race, nation, used in combination.
eth-nog-e-ny (eth-noj'e-nī), n. [See ethno- and -geny.] The genesis or origin of races, as a subject of scientific study.

eth-nog-ra-phy (eth-nog'ra-fī), n. [See ethno- and -graphy.] The scientific description and classification of the various races of mankind.—eth-nog'ra-pher, n.—eth-no-graph'ic, eth-no-graph'i-cal (-nō-graf'ik, -i-kāl), a.—eth-no-graph'i-cal-ly, adv.

eth-nol-o-gy (eth-nol'ō-jī), n. [See ethno- and -logy.] The science that treats of the various races of mankind, their origin, distinctive characteristics, customs, institutions, etc.

—eth-no-log'ic, eth-no-log'i-cal (-nō-loj'ik, -i-kāl), a.—eth-no-log'i-cal-ly, adv.—eth-nol'o-gist, n.

eth-nos (eth'nos), n. [Gr. ἔθνος.] A race, tribe, or nation.

e-thol-o-gy (ē-thol'ō-jī), n. [Gr. ἔθος, character: see -logy.] The science of human character.—eth-o-log-i-cal (eth-ō-loj'i-kāl or ē-thō-), a.

e-thos (ē'thos), n. [Gr. ἦθος.] Character or disposition; characteristic spirit, as of a people or an institution.

eth-yl (eth'il), n. [From ether.] In chem., a hydrocarbon radical, C₂H₅, occurring in ordinary alcohol ('ethyl alcohol'), ether ('ethyl ether'), etc.—eth'yl-ate (-i-lāt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. In chem., to introduce one or more ethyl radicals into (a compound).—eth'yl-ene (-i-lēn), n. In chem., a colorless, poisonous gas with an unpleasant odor, forming one of the constituents of illuminating gas: the first member of a homologous series of hydrocarbons.—e-thyl-ic (ē-thil'ik), a.

e-ti-o-late (ē'ti-ō-lāt), v. t. or i.; -lated, -lating. [F. étioier, blanch: cf. éterule, stubble, < L. stipula, stalk, straw.] To make or become white through loss of normal color, as from lack of sunlight; blanch.—e-ti-o-la-tion (-lā'shən), n.

e-ti-ol-o-gy (ē'ti-ol'ō-jī), etc. See ætiology, etc.

et-i-quette (et'i-ket), n. [F. étiquette, OF. estiquette, label, ticket, billet, < estiquer, fix, stick; from Teut., and akin to E. stick.] Prescribed or accepted code of usage in matters of ceremony (as at a court), in official or other formal observances, or in polite society generally; conventional requirements as to social behavior; proprieties of conduct as established in any class or community or for any occasion.

et-na (et'nä), n. [From Mount Etna, volcano in Sicily.] A small vessel for heating water or other liquid, consisting of a cup for the liquid, with a fixed saucer surrounding it in which alcohol is burned.

E-ton (ē'ton) jack'et. A boy's short jacket reaching only to the waist-line, such as is worn by students at Eton College, England; also, a similar short jacket worn by women.

E-tru-ri-an (ē-trō'rī-ən), a. and n. Same as Etruscan.

E-trus-can (ē-trus'kən). [L. Etruscus.] I. a. Pertaining to Etruria, an ancient country in central Italy, or its inhabitants, or their language: as, Etruscan art (the art of an ancient Etruria, believed to have grown up independently from the same root as the art of Greece, though in its later stages influenced by the latter, the best works of its sculpture being strongly colored terra-cotta statues and sarcophagi of terra-cotta bearing reclining figures on the lid). II. n. A native of Etruria; also, the language of Etruria.

Etruscan Art. — Etruscan sarcophagus in terra-cotta, from Chiusi.

—ette. [F. -ette: see -et.] A noun suffix, the feminine form of -et, occurring esp. (a) with the original diminutive force, as in chemisette, cigarette, pianette, statuette, (b) in trade-names of imitations or substitutes, as in leatherette, or (c) as a distinctively feminine ending, as in brunette, coquette, suffragette, and various colloquial or humorous formations, such as conductorette, farmerette, printerette, usherette.

et-tle (et'l), v.; -tled, -tling. [Icel. ætla.] I. tr. To intend or purpose; endeavor or attempt; also, to destine or ordain; also, to direct or aim. [Sc. and north. Eng.] II. intr. To direct one's course; aim (at). [Sc. and north. Eng.] —et'tle, n. Intent or purpose; endeavor or attempt; aim: as, "Nannie . . . flew at Tam wi' furious ettle" (Burns's "Tam o' Shanter," 213). [Sc. and north. Eng.]

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; à, F. bonbon; ˈ, primary accent; ˚, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

é-tude (ā-tüd), n. [F.: see study, n.] A study; in music, a composition intended mainly for the practice of some point of technique.

e-tui (e-twē', F. ā-twē), n. [F. étui: see *stew*².] A small case, esp. one of ornamental character, for containing small objects, as needles, toilet articles, etc.

et-y-mo-log-ic, et-y-mo-log-i-cal (et'i-mō-loj'ik, -i-kəl), a. [L. etymologicus, < Gr. ἐτυμολογικός.] Of or pertaining to etymology. — et-y-mo-log'i-cal-ly, adv.

et-y-mo-log-i-con (et'i-mō-loj'i-kon), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐτυμολογικόν.] An etymological dictionary.

et-y-mol-o-gist (et-i-mol'ō-jist), n. One versed in etymology.

et-y-mol-o-gize (et-i-mol'ō-jiz), v.; -gized, -gizing. I. tr. To trace or give the origin or history of (words). II. intr. To study etymology; also, to give or suggest the etymology of words.

et-y-mol-o-gy (et-i-mol'ō-ji), n.; pl. -gies (-jiz). [L. etymologia, < Gr. ἐτυμολογία, < ἐτυμον (see etymon) + λέγειν, speak.] Explanation of the origin and history of words; an account of the origin of a particular word; the derivation of a word; the branch of philology concerned with the origin and history of words.

et-y-mon (et'i-mon), n.; pl. -mons or -ma (-mä). [L. etymon, < Gr. ἐτυμον, the original sense, form, or element of a word, prop. neut. of ἐτυμος, true, real.] The original sense or root meaning of a word (obs. or rare); the primitive form of a word†; a primary word, from which derivatives are formed.

eu-. [Gr. εὖ, repr. έβς, adj., good, brave, noble, neut. εὖ, used as adv., well.] A prefix of Greek origin, meaning 'good,' 'well,' occasionally used as an English formative, as in eucaine. Cf. dys- ('ill').

eu-ca-ine (ū'kā-in or ū'kān), n. [From eu- + (co)caine.] A crystalline organic compound used, in the form of a salt, as a local anesthetic ('alpha-eucaine'); also, a similar but less used compound ('beta-eucaine').

eu-ca-lypt (ū'kā-lipt), n. A eucalyptus.

eu-ca-lyp-tol (ū'kā-lip'tol or -tōl), n. In chem., a colorless liquid compound with an aromatic odor, obtained from certain essential oils, as that of eucalyptus.

eu-ca-lyp-tus (ū'kā-lip'tus), n.; pl. -tuses or -ti (-ti). [NL., < Gr. εὖ, well, + καλυπτός, covered, < καλύπτειν, cover (with allusion to the cap covering the buds).] Any member of the myrtaceous genus Eucalyptus, including many tall trees, as E. globulus (the blue-gum), which yield a valuable timber and bear leaves containing an oil used in medicine in the treatment of various diseases: native in Australia and neighboring regions and cultivated elsewhere.

eu-cha-ris (ū'kā-ris), n. [NL., < Gr. εὐχαρίς, pleasing, < εὖ (see eu-) + χαρίς, grace.] Any of the amaryllidaceous plants constituting the South American genus Eucharis, some of which are cultivated for their large, fragrant white flowers.

eu-cha-rist (ū'kā-ris), n. [LL. eucharistia, < Gr. εὐχαριστία, gratefulness, thanksgiving, the eucharist, < εὖ -χαρίστος, grateful, < εὖ (see eu-) + χαρίς, grace, favor, gratitude.] [Also cap.] The sacrament of the Lord's Supper; the communion; also, the consecrated elements of the Lord's Supper, esp. the bread; [l. c.] the giving of thanks; thanksgiving. — eu-cha-ris'tic, a. — eu-cha-ris'ti-cal-ly, adv.

eu-chre (ū'kēr), n. [Origin uncertain.] A game of cards played usually by two, three, or four persons, with the 32 (or 28 or 24) highest cards in the pack; also, an instance of euchring or being euchred. — progressive euchre. See progressive, a. — eu'chre, v. t.; -chred, -chring. To get the better of (an opponent) in a hand at euchre by his failure to win three tricks after having made the trump; hence (colloq.), to outwit; get the better of, as by scheming.

Eu-clid (ū'klid), n. [From Euclid (about 300 B.C.), the Greek geometer.] The works of Euclid, esp. his treatise on geometry; hence, geometry. — Eu-cli-de-an (ū-klī-dē'an or ū-klīd'ē-an), a. Of or pertaining to Euclid or his principles: as, Euclidean geometry. Also Eu-clid'i-an.

eu-de-mon, eu-dæ-mon (ū-dē'mon), n. [Gr. εὔ, good (see eu-), + δαίμων, tutelary divinity (see demon).] A good demon or spirit; an agathodemon.

eu-de-mon-ic, eu-dæ-mon-ic (ū-dē-mon'ik), a. [Gr. εὐδαιμονικός, < εὐδαίμων, blessed with a good genius, fortunate, happy, < εὖ + δαίμων: see eudemon.] Pertaining to or conducive to happiness; pertaining to eudemonics. — eu-de-mon'ics, eu-dæ-mon'ics, n. The science of happiness; also, eudemonism. — eu-de-mon-ism, eu-dæ-mon-ism (ū-dē-mon-izm), n. [Gr. εὐδαιμονία, happiness, < εὐδαίμων.] The system of ethics which holds that the basis of moral obligations lies in their relation to the production of happiness. — eu-dē-mon-ist, eu-dæ-mon-ist, n.

eu-di-om-e-ter (ū-di-om'e-tēr), n. [Gr. εὐδός, fine, clear, as weather: see -meter.] A device used in the analysis and volumetric measurement of gases: orig. employed for ascertaining the purity of air or the quantity of oxygen contained in it. — eu'di-o-met'ric, eu'di-o-met'ri-cal (-ō-met'rik, -ri-kəl), a. — eu-di-om'e-try, n. [See -metry.] The measurement and analysis of gases with the eudiometer.

eu-gen-ic (ū-jen'ik), a. [Gr. εὖ, well, + γεν, bear, produce.] Pertaining to or bringing about improvement in the type of offspring produced. Cf. dysgenic. — eu-gen'i-cist (-i-sist), n. One versed in eugenics; an advocate of eugenic measures. — eu-gen'ics, n. The science of improving the qualities of the human race; the science or art of bringing about an improved type of offspring, esp. of the human race. — eu-ge-nist (ū'jē-nist), n. A eugenicist.

eu-ge-nol (ū'jē-nol or -nōl), n. [NL. Eugenia, genus of myrtaceous plants.] In chem., a colorless, aromatic, oily compound contained in certain essential oils, as that of cloves.

eu-he-me-rism (ū-hē'mē-rizm or ū-hem'e-), n. [From Euhemerus (4th century B.C.), Greek writer.] The method or system of interpretation which derives myths from traditional accounts of actual history. — eu-he'me-rist, n. One who follows the method of euhemerism. — eu-he-me-ris'tic, a. — eu-he-me-ris'ti-cal-ly, adv. — eu-he'me-rize, v. t. or i.; -rized, -rizing. To treat or explain (myths) by the method of euhemerism.

eu-la-chon (ū'lā-kon), n. Same as oolakan.

eu-lo-gism (ū'lō-jizm), n. A eulogy; praise. — eu'lo-gist, n. One who eulogizes. — eu-lo-gis'tic, a. Eulogizing; laudatory. — eu-lo-gis'ti-cal-ly, adv.

eu-lo-gi-um (ū'lō'ji-um), n.; pl. -giums, L. -gia (-ji-ā). [ML.: see eulogy.] A eulogy; eulogistic language.

eu-lo-gize (ū'lō-jiz), v. t.; -gized, -gizing. To pronounce or write a eulogy upon; commend highly; laud. — eu'lo-giz-er, n.

eu-lo-gy (ū'lō-ji), n.; pl. -gies (-jiz). [ML. eulogium, for eulogia, < Gr. εὐλογία, good language, praise, blessing, < εὖ (see eu-) + λέγειν, speak.] A speech or writing in praise of a person or thing, esp. a set oration in honor of a deceased person; also, eulogistic speech or writing (as, "A long period of unqualified depreciation has been followed by a reaction of extravagant eulogy": Lecky's "Hist. of Eng. in the 18th Century," i.); praise; commendation.

Eu-men-i-des (ū-men'i-dēz), n. pl. [L., < Gr. Εὐμενίδες, < εὖ, good (see eu-), + μένος, disposition: see *mind*².] 'The gracious ones': in class. myth., a euphemistic name for the Furies or Erinyes.

eu-mi-to-sis (ū-mī-tō'sis), n. [NL.: see eu- and mitosis.] In biol., true or typical mitosis.

eu-nuch (ū'nuk), n. [L. eunuchus, < Gr. εὐνοῦχος, chamber attendant, < εὐνή, bed, + εχειν, have, hold, keep.] A castrated male person, in the East often employed as a harem attendant or in affairs of state; sometimes, a chamberlain or court officer in general.

eu-pa-to-ri-um (ū-pā-tō'ri-um), n. [NL., < Gr. εὐπατόριον; named from Mithridates Eupator, king of Pontus

Flowering Branch of Blue-gum Tree (Eucalyptus globulus).

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʔ, then; y, you;

120?-63 B.C.] Any plant of the large asteraceous genus Eupatorium, mostly native in America, with heads of white or purplish flowers, as thoroughwort and joe-pye-weed.

eu-pat-rid (ū-pat'rid), n. [Gr. εὐπατριδής, < εὐ, good (see eu), + πάτρις, father.] One of the hereditary aristocrats of ancient Athens and other states of Greece, in whom exclusively, in primitive times, were vested the powers of making and administering the law; hence, in general, an aristocrat or patrician (as, "noblemen, merchants, attorneys, tradesmen, stock-jobbers—the Eupatrids and the commonplaces of society": Poe's "Man of the Crowd").—eu-pat'ri-dæ (-ri-dē), n. pl. [NL., < Gr. εὐπατρίδαι, pl.] The eupatrids.

Flowering Branch of Eupatorium (E. triplinerve).

eu-pep-sia (ū-pep'siā), n. [NL., < Gr. εὐπεψία, < εὐ, having good digestion, < εὐ (see eu) + πέπτειν, cook, digest.] Good digestion: opposed to dyspepsia.—eu-pep'tic, a. Pertaining to or having good digestion; easy of digestion.

eu-phe-mism (ū'fē-mizm), n. [Gr. εὐφημισμός, < εὐ, φημίζω, use fair words, < εὐφμος, fair of speech, < εὐ (see eu) + φήμη, voice, speech, < φάναι, say.] In rhet., the substitution of a mild or indirect word or expression for one unpleasant or offensive though more accurate, as of 'to pass away' for 'to die'; the word or expression so substituted.—eu-phe-mist, n. One given to the use of euphemisms.—eu-phe-mis'tic, eu-phe-mis'ti-cal, a. Pertaining to, of the nature of, or characterized by euphemism.—eu-phe-mis'ti-cal-ly, adv.—eu-phe-mize, v. t. or i.; -mized, -mizing. [Gr. εὐφημίζω.] To speak of by or speak by a euphemism.

eu-phon-ic (ū-fon'ik), a. Pertaining to or characterized by euphony.—eu-phon'i-cal-ly, adv.

eu-pho-ni-ous (ū-fō'ni-us), a. Characterized by euphony; well-sounding; agreeable to the ear.—eu-pho'ni-ous-ly, adv.—eu-pho'ni-ous-ness, n.

eu-pho-nism (ū'fō-nizm), n. The use of euphonic or well-sounding words or combinations of words.—eu-pho-nis'tic, a. Characterized by euphonism.

eu-pho-ni-um (ū-fō'ni-um), n. [NL., < Gr. εὐφώνιος, well-sounding: see euphony.] A musical instrument consisting of a set of glass tubes, connected with graduated steel bars, to be put in vibration by the moistened finger; also, a bass instrument of the saxhorn class.

eu-pho-nize (ū'fō-nīz), v. t.; -nized, -nizing. To make euphonic.

eu-pho-ny (ū'fō-ni), n. [LL. euphonia, < Gr. εὐφωνία, < εὐφωνος, well-sounding, < εὐ (see eu) + φωνή, sound, voice.] Agreeableness of sound; pleasing effect to the ear, esp. of speech-sounds as uttered or as combined in utterance; in philol., a tendency to greater ease of utterance (not, as formerly supposed, to a more pleasing effect of sound) causing modification in the pronunciation and hence in the form of words, as shown in the change of Latin adfero to affero.

eu-phor-bi-a (ū-fōr'bi-ā), n. [NL., for L. euphorbea, an African plant; named from Euphorbia, a Greek physician.] Any of the plants of the widespread genus Euphorbia, which vary greatly, but consist mostly of herbs and shrubs with an acid milky juice having medicinal or poisonous properties; a spurge. See cut in next column.—eu-phor-bi-a'ceous (-ā'shius), a. Belonging to the Euphorbiaceæ, or spurge family of plants, which includes the spurges, the cascarilla, croton-oil, castor-oil, and cassava plants, several that yield caoutchouc, and many others.

eu-phra-sy (ū'frā-si), n. [ML. euphrasia, < Gr. εὐφράσια, delight, < εὐφραίνω, gladden, < εὐ (see eu) + φρήν, heart, mind.] The plant eyebright, Euphrasia officinalis.

eu-phroe (ū'frō), n. See uphroe.

eu-phu-ism (ū'fū-izm), n. An affected style in imitation of that of

Top of Stem of Euphorbia (E. resinifera).—a, involucre with incised flowers; b, section of same.

John Lyly's works

"Euphuës, the Anatomy of Wit" (1579) and "Euphuës and His England" (1580), which was fashionable in the writing and speaking of English about the end of the 16th century, and was characterized chiefly by long series of antitheses, frequent similes relating to fabulous natural history, and alliteration; any similar ornate style of writing or speaking; high-flown language; also, an instance of such style or language.—eu-phu-ist, n. One given to euphuism.—eu-phu-is'tic, a.—eu-phu-is'ti-cal-ly, adv.

eu-plas-tic (ū-plas'tik), a. [Gr. εὐπλαστός, easy to mold, < εὐ (see eu) + πλάσσειν, form, mold.] In physiol., capable of being transformed into permanent organized tissue.
eu-pno-a (ū-pnē'ā), n. [NL., < Gr. εὐπνοία, < εὐπνοω, breathing well, < εὐ (see eu) + πνέω, blow, breathe.] In pathol., easy or normal breathing: opposed to dyspnoea.

Eur-af-ri-can (ū-raf'ri-kan). I. a. Pertaining to Europe and Africa taken together; also, of mixed European and African descent. II. n. A person of a theoretical Eurafian division of mankind; also, a person of mixed European and African descent.

Eur-a-sian (ū-rā'shian or -zhian). I. a. Of or pertaining to Europe and Asia taken together; also, of mixed European and Asiatic descent. II. n. A person of mixed European and Asiatic (esp. Indian) descent.

eu-re-ka (ū-rē'kā). [Gr. εὕρηκα.] 'I have found (it)': the reputed exclamation of Archimedes on his discovery of a method of determining (by specific gravity) the amount of base metal in King Hiero's crown, hence an exulting exclamation at any discovery.

eu-rhyth-mic (ū-rīth'mik or -rīth'-), a. [Gr. εὐρυθμός, in good rhythm, < εὐ (see eu) + ρυθμός, E. rhythm.] Characterized by a pleasing rhythm; harmoniously ordered or proportioned.—eu-rhyth'mics, n. The art of interpreting in graceful bodily movements the rhythm of musical compositions: applied to a method invented by Emile Jacques-Dalcroze, a Swiss composer, which aims to develop the sense of rhythm and of symmetry in general.—eu-rhyth'my, n. [Gr. εὐρυθμία, < εὐρυθμός.] Pleasing rhythm; rhythmic movement or order; harmonious proportion, as in architecture.

eu-ri-pus (ū-rī'pus), n.; pl. -pi (-pī). [L., < Gr. εὐριπός, < εὐ (see eu) + ῥιπή, impetus, rush.] A strait, esp. one in which the flow of the water in both directions is violent, as that between the island of Eubœa and Bœotia in Greece, specifically called Euripus.

Eu-ro-pe-an (ū-rō-pē'an), a. Of or pertaining to Europe or its inhabitants.—European plan, that method of conducting a hotel according to which the fixed charge per day covers only lodging and service. Cf. American plan.—Eu-ro-pe'an, n. A native or inhabitant of Europe; more generally, a person of European descent or connections.

—Eu-ro-pe'an-ism, n. European characteristics, ideas, methods, sympathies, etc.; a European trait or practice.—Eu-ro-pe'an-ize (-īz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. To make European; conform to European ways.—Eu-ro-pe'an-i-za'tion (-i-zā'shon), n.

eu-ro-pi-um (ū-rō'pī-um), n. [NL., < L. Europa, Europe.] Chem. sym., Eu; at. wt., 152. A rare metallic element.

eu-ry-ce-phal-ic (ū'ri-se-fal'ik), a. [Gr. εὐρύς, broad, + κεφαλή, head.] Broad-headed.

eu-ryg-na-thous (ū-rig'na-thus), a. [Gr. εὐρύς, broad, + γνάθος, jaw.] Having broad upper jaws and cheek-bones. — eu-ryg'na-thism, n.

eu-ryp-te-rid (ū-rip'te-rid), n. [NL. Eurypterida, pl., < Gr. εὐρύς, broad, + πτερόν, wing.] In paleon., any of the Eurypterida, a group of Paleozoic arthropods resembling in some respects the king-crabs.

eu-ryth'mic, etc. See euryhythmic, etc.

Eu-stach-i-an (ū-stā'kī-an), a. Pertaining to Bartolommeo Eustachio (died 1574), an Italian anatomist (as, the Eustachian tube, a canal extending from the cavity of the tympanum of the ear to the pharynx); also, pertaining to the Eustachian tube.

eu-tec-tic (ū-tek'tik), [Gr. εὐτηκτος, easily melted, < εὐ- (see eu-) + τήκεν, melt.] I. a. Of greatest fusibility: said of an alloy or mixture whose melting-point is lower than that of any other alloy or mixture composed of the same ingredients. II. n. A eutectic substance. — eu-tec'toid, a.

Eu-ter-pe (ū-tēr'pē), n. [L., < Gr. Εὐτέρπη, 'well-pleasing,' < εὐ- (see eu-) + τέρπειν, please, delight.] The Muse of music and lyric song. — Eu-ter'pe-an (-pē-an), a.

eu-tha-na-sia (ū-thā-nā'ziā), n. [NL., < Gr. εὐθανασία, < εὐ- (see eu-) + θάνατος, death.] An easy and tranquil death; the means of bringing it about; the putting of a person painlessly to death. Also eu-than-a-sy (ū-than'a-sī).

eu-then-ics (ū-then'iks), n. [Gr. εὐθηνία, plenty, prosperity, well-being.] The science of bettering the environment or living conditions, as for improvement of the race.

eu-tro-phy (ū'trō'fī), n. [Gr. εὐτροφία, < εὐ- (see eu-) + τρέφειν, nourish.] In physiol., healthy nutrition. — eu-troph-ic (ū-trof'ik), a.

oux-o-nite (ūk'se-nit), n. [Gr. εὐξενος, hospitable (in allusion to its many constituents): see Euxine.] A brownish-black mineral found in Norway, containing the elements yttrium, columbium, titanium, uranium, etc.

Eux-ine (ūk'sin or -sīn), [L. Euxinus, < Gr. Εὐξείνους, Ionic form of εὐξενος, hospitable, < εὐ- (see eu-) + ξένος, guest.] I. a. Noting the sea between Russia and Asia Minor otherwise known as the Black Sea. II. n. The Black Sea.

e-vac-u-ant (ē-vak'ū-ant), I. a. Evacuating; promoting evacuation, esp. from the bowels; purgative. II. n. An evacuant medicine or agent, esp. a purgative.

e-vac-u-ate (ē-vak'ū-āt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [L. evacuatus, pp. of evacuare, < e, out of, + vacuus, empty, E. vacuus.] To make empty, or expel the contents of (as, to evacuate the stomach by an emetic; to evacuate the bowels); fig., to deprive of something essential; also, to leave empty; vacate; withdraw from or quit (a town, fort, etc., occupied); also, to make void† or nullify†; also, to discharge or eject, as through the excretory passages, esp. from the bowels; remove (troops, wounded soldiers, inhabitants, etc.) from a place. — e-vac-u-a'tion (-ā'shən), n. [LL. evacuatio (-n-).] The act or process of evacuating, or the condition of being evacuated; a making empty of contents; expulsion, as of contents; discharge, as of waste matter through the excretory passages, esp. from the bowels; clearance by removal of troops, etc. (as, "The first scene in the withdrawal of the troops had been the evacuation of the citadel of Antwerp": Motley's "Dutch Republic," v. 1); the withdrawal or removal of troops, wounded soldiers, etc.; nullification†; also, that which is evacuated or discharged. — Evacuation Day, the anniversary of the day on which the British troops evacuated the city of New York, Nov. 25, 1783. — e-vac'u-a-tor, n.

e-vad-a-ble (ē-vā'dā-bl), a. That may be evaded.

e-vade (ē-vād'), v.; evaded, evading. [L. evadere (pp. evasus), < e, out of, + vadere, go.] I. intr. To get away or escape (now rare); also, to employ elusive methods; practise evasion. II. tr. To get away from by dexterity or artifice; contrive to avoid; elude. — e-vad-er (ē-vā'dēr), n. — e-vad'-ing-ly, adv.

e-vag-i-nate (ē-vaj'i-nāt), v. t.; -nated, -nating. [L. evagi- natus, pp. of evaginare, < e, out of, + vagina, sheath.] To unsheathe†; also, to turn inside out, or cause to protrude by eversion, as a tubular organ. — e-vag-i-na'tion (-nā'shən), n. The act of evaginating, or the state of being evaginated; also, that which is evaginated.

e-val-u-ate (ē-val'ū-āt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [F. évaluer, OF. esvaluer, < es- (< L. ex, out of) + value, E. value.] To ascertain the value or amount of; appraise carefully; in math., to ascertain the numerical value of. — e-val-u-a'tion (-ā'shən), n.

ev-a-nesce (ev-ā-nes'), v. i.; -nesced, -nescing. [L. evanesce, < e, out of, + vanescere, vanish, < vanus, empty, E. vain.] To vanish away; disappear gradually; fade out. — ev-a-nes'cence (-nes'ens), n. The act or process of evanescing; also, the quality of being evanescent. — ev-a-nes'cent, a. Evanescing; vanishing; passing away; not permanent, as a biological character; tending to become imperceptible, as a distinction; scarcely perceptible; in math., infinitesimal. — ev-a-nes'cent-ly, adv.

e-van-gel (ē-van'jel), n. [OF. evangile (F. évangile), < LL. evangelium, < Gr. εὐαγγέλιον, good tidings, gospel, < εὐάγγελος, bringing good tidings (hence E. sense 'evangelist'), < εὐ- (see eu-) + ἀγγέλλειν, bear a message.] The good tidings of the redemption of the world through Jesus Christ; often, the gospel, or [usually cap.] any of the four Gospels; hence [L. c.], a principle or the like taken as a guide or regarded as of prime importance (as, "that great doctrine . . . which is our ultimate Political Evangel": Carlyle's "Sartor Resartus," ii. 8); also, in general, good tidings (as, "We wait for thy coming, sweet wind of the south . . . For the yearly evangel thou bearest from God": Whittier's "April"); also, an evangelist.

e-van-gel-ic (ē-van-jel'ik or ev-an-), a. [LL. evangelicus, < Gr. εὐαγγελικός.] Evangelical. — e-van-gel'i-cal, I. a. Of or pertaining to the gospel or the four Gospels; also, pertaining to or in accordance with gospel precepts or the Christian faith; specif., adhering to the doctrines of the gospel, or, esp., to an interpretation of it, held to in a section of the Protestant churches, in which distinctive prominence is given to the doctrines of the corruption of man's nature by the fall, atonement by the life, sufferings, and death of Christ, salvation by faith, etc.; pertaining to or in accordance with the school of Protestantism emphasizing these doctrines; also, spiritually minded; zealous for practical Christian living; also, seeking the conversion of sinners; evangelistic. II. n. An adherent of evangelical doctrines; a member of an evangelical church or party, as of the Low-church party of the Church of England. — e-van-gel'i-cal-ism, n. Evangelical doctrines or principles; adherence to them, or to an evangelical church or party. — e-van-gel'i-cal-ly, adv. — e-van-gel'i-cal-ness, n. — e-van-gel'i-cism (-izm), n. Evangelicalism.

e-van-gel-ism (ē-van'jel-izm), n. The preaching or promulgation of the gospel; the work of an evangelist; also, evangelicalism.

e-van-gel-ist (ē-van'jel-ist), n. [LL. evangelista, < Gr. εὐαγγελιστής, < εὐαγγελίζεσθαι, E. evangelize.] [Often cap.] Any of the writers (Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John) of the four Gospels; [L. c.] one of a class of teachers in the early church, next in rank after apostles and prophets; also, a preacher of the gospel, as one who brings it to a heathen nation; an occasional or itinerant preacher; a revivalist. — e-van-gel-is'tic, a. Of or pertaining to the four evangelists; also, pertaining to evangelists, or preachers of the gospel; esp., seeking to evangelize; striving to convert sinners; designed or fitted to evangelize; evangelical.

e-van-gel-ize (ē-van'jel-iz), v.; -ized, -izing. [LL. evangelizare, < Gr. εὐαγγελίζεσθαι, < εὐάγγελος: see evangel.] I. intr. To preach the gospel; act as an evangelist. II. tr. To bring as good tidings†; also, to preach the gospel to; convert to Christianity by preaching. — e-van'gel-i-za'tion (-i-zā'shən), n. — e-van'gel-iz-er (-i-zēr), n.

E-van-ish (ē-van'ish), v. t. [OF. esvanir (esvaniss-), esvanuir (F. évanouir), formed with es- (< L. ex for e) after L. evanescere: see evanesce.] To vanish or disappear (as, "Or like the rainbow's lovely form Evanishing amid the storm": Burns's "Tam o' Shanter," 66); also, to cease to be. [Now chiefly poetic.] — e-van'ish-ment, n.

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nór; up, lûte, pùll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, ãlect, agôny, intô, ûnite; (obscured) errânt, operâ, ardënt, actor, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ƞh, then; y, you;

e-vap-o-ra-ble (ē-vap'ō-rā-bl), a. Capable of being evaporated.

e-vap-o-rate (ē-vap'ō-rāt), v.; -rated, -rating. [L. evaporatus, pp. of evaporare, < e, out of, + vapor, E. vapor.] I. tr. To convert into vapor; convert into a gaseous state; vaporize; drive off or extract in the form of vapor; fig., to dissipate; also, to extract moisture or liquid from, as by heat, so as to make dry or to reduce to a denser state (as, to evaporate fruit). II. intr. To change into vapor; pass off in vapor; fig., to pass off without effect; be dissipated; also, to exhale moisture. — e-vap-o-ra'tion (-rā'shən), n. [L. evaporatio(n).] The act or process of evaporating, or the state of being evaporated; also, matter, or the quantity of matter, evaporated or passed off in vapor. — e-vap'o-ra-tive (-rā-tiv), a. Serving to evaporate; pertaining to evaporation. — e-vap'o-ra-tor (-rā-tōr), n. One who or that which evaporates; an apparatus for driving off superfluous moisture, as in concentrating liquids, drying fruits, etc. — e-vap-o-rim'e-ter (-rim'e-tēr), n. Same as evaporometer. — e-vap-o-rom'e-ter (-rom'e-tēr), n. [See -meter.] An atmometer.

e-va-sion (ē-vā'shən), n. [LL. evasio(n), < L. evadere: see evade.] The act of evading; escape (now rare); avoidance by dexterity, artifice, or stratagem; the avoiding of an argument, accusation, interrogation, or the like, as by a subterfuge or by shuffling; also, a means of evading; a subterfuge; a shift.

e-va-sive (ē-vā'siv), a. Tending or seeking to evade; characterized by evasion; shuffling; sometimes, elusive or evanescent. — e-va'sive-ly, adv. — e-va'sive-ness, n.

eve (ēv), n. [= *even*¹.] The evening (chiefly poetic); also, the evening, often the whole day, before a church festival, and hence before any date or event; also, the period just preceding any particular event, etc. (as, the eve of a revolution).

e-vec-tion (ē-vek'shən), n. [L. evectio(n), < evēhere, carry forth or up, < e, out of, + vehere, carry.] Elevation†; in astron., a periodical disturbance by the sun of the eccentricity of the moon's orbit. — e-vec'tion-al, a.

e-ven¹ (ē'vn), n. [AS. æfen = D. avond = G. abend, evening.] Evening; eve. [Archaic or prov.]

e-ven² (ē'vn), a. [AS. efen = D. even = G. eben = Icel. jafn = Goth. ibns, even.] Level or flat, as ground; in a level or horizontal position, as a keel; free from inequalities, or smooth, as a surface; free from variations or fluctuations, as motion; uniform in character, as color; equable or unruffled, as the temper; equitable, impartial, or fair, as actions; direct† or straightforward† (as, "Be even and direct with me": Shakspeare's "Hamlet," ii. 2. 298); also, on the same level (as, even with the ground); in the same plane or line; parallel, as a course, etc.; coincident or accordant, or exactly adjusted, as one thing with another; in a state of equilibrium, as a balance; leaving no balance of debt on either side, as accounts; square, as one person with another; on an equality, as persons; equal in measure or quantity (as, even quantities of two substances; letters of even date, letters of the same date); divisible into two equal integers, as a number (opposed to odd); denoted by such a number (as, the even pages of a book); exactly expressible in integers, or in tens, hundreds, etc., without fractional parts (as, an even mile; an even hundred). — e-ven², adv. In an even manner; evenly; also, exactly or precisely (as, it was even so); just (as, even now); fully or quite (as, even to death); also, used as an intensive, as for stressing the identity or truth of something (now archaic: as, "I swear to thee, even by thine own fair eyes," Shakspeare's "Merchant of Venice," v. 1. 242), for intimating that something mentioned, or stated, or suggested as a possibility, constitutes a case of extreme character, as one that might not be expected (as, the slightest noise, even, disturbs him; a tree that still flourishes even when 300 years old; even if he goes, he may not take part), and for emphasizing a comparative (with the sense of 'still' or 'yet': as, this one is even more suitable than the other). — e-ven², v. I. tr. To make even; level; smooth; also, to place in an even state as to claim or obligation, as accounts; balance; also, to treat as equal; also, to compare; also, to equal, or come up to (now rare). II. † intr. To be or become even. — e-ven=Chris'tian[†], n. A fellow-Christian. See Shakspeare's "Hamlet," v. 1. 32. — e'ven-er, n. e-ven-fall (ē'vn-fāl), n. The beginning of evening.

e-ven-hand-ed (ē'vn-han'ded), a. Impartial; equitable: as, "even-handed justice" (Shakspeare's "Macbeth," i. 7. 10). — e'ven-hand'ed-ness, n.

e-ven-ing (ēv'ning). [AS. æfnung, < æfnian, draw toward evening, < æfen, E. *even*¹.] I. n. The latter part of the day and early part of the night; hence, any concluding or declining period, as of life. II. a. Of or pertaining to evening; occurring or seen in the evening: as, "O, thou art fairer than the evening air Clad in the beauty of a thousand stars" (Marlowe's "Doctor Faustus," xiv.). — e-vening primrose. See primrose. — e-vening star, a bright planet, as Venus (Hesperus) or Jupiter, seen in the west after sunset. — e-ve'ning=snow[†], n. A delicate polemoniaceous herb, Linanthus dichotomus, of California, with white flowers that open about four o'clock in the afternoon, closing in the morning, and are so abundant on open slopes as to whiten the ground.

e-ven-ly (ē'vn-li), adv. In an even manner; smoothly; uniformly; impartially; equally.

e-ven-mind-ed (ē'vn-min'ded), a. Having an even mind; not easily ruffled, disturbed, prejudiced, etc.; calm; equable. — e'ven=mind'ed-ness, n.

e-ven-ness (ē'vn-nes), n. The state or quality of being even.

e-ven-song (ē'vn-sōng), n. [AS. æfensang.] A church service said or sung at evening; vespers; also, any song sung at evening; also (archaic), the time of evensong; evening.

e-vent (ē-vent'), n. [L. eventus, < evenire, come out, happen, turn out, < e, out of, + venire, come.] The fact of happening (as, resources available in the event of war); also, anything that happens or is regarded as happening; an occurrence; esp., an occurrence of some importance; also, the outcome, issue, or result of anything; in sports, something on the outcome of which money is at stake; also, each of the items in a program of races, etc. — at all events, whatever happens; in any case. — e-vent'ful, a. Full of events or incidents, esp. of a striking character (as, an eventful period); also, having important issues or results; momentous. — e-vent'ful-ly, adv. — e-vent'ful-ness, n.

e-ven-tide (ē'vn-tid), n. [AS. æfentīd.] Evening. [Now poetic.]

e-vent-less (ē-vent'les), a. Uneventful.

e-ven-tu-al (ē-ven'tū-āl), a. [F. éventuel, < L. eventus: see event.] Pertaining to the event or issue; consequent; ultimate; also, depending upon uncertain events; contingent. — e-ven-tu-al'i-ty (-al'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). The state or fact of being eventual; contingent character; also, a contingent event; a possible occurrence or circumstance; in phren., the faculty of noting and remembering events. — e-ven'tu-al-ly, adv. In the event or issue; finally.

e-ven-tu-ate (ē-ven'tū-āt), v. i.; -ated, -ating. [L. eventus: see event.] To have issue; result; also, to be the issue or outcome; come about. — e-ven-tu-a'tion (-ā'shən), n.

ev-er (ev'ēr), adv. [AS. æfre, prob. akin to ā, ever: see *ay*¹.] Throughout all time (as, "Let me live here ever": Shakspeare's "Tempest," iv. 1. 122); continuously (as, ever since); at all times, or on all occasions (as, you will find me ever at your service); constantly or incessantly (as, he was ever complaining); also, at any time (as, "Was there ever man had such luck?" Shakspeare's "Cymbeline," ii. 1. 1); hence (with emphatic force, in various idiomatic constructions and phrases), in any possible case; by any chance; at all; also, in any degree. — ever and again, ever and anon, every now and then; continually. — for ever, for eternity; eternally; always; continually: commonly as one word, forever.

Evening-snow.

ev-er-glade (ev'ér-glād), n. [Appar. < ever + glade.] A tract of low, swampy land more or less covered with tall grass.—the Everglades, an extensive marshy region in Florida.

ev-er-green (ev'ér-grēn). I. a. Always green; of trees, shrubs, etc., having green leaves throughout the entire year, the leaves of the past season not being shed until after the new foliage has been completely formed; of leaves, belonging to such a tree, shrub, etc. II. n. An evergreen plant; pl., evergreen twigs or branches used for decoration.

ev-er-last-ing (ev-ér-lās'ting), a. Lasting forever; eternal; also, lasting or continuing indefinitely; also, incessant; constantly recurring; hence, wearisome.—everlasting pea, any of various plants of the fabaceous genus Lathyrus, as L. latifolius, a hardy species much cultivated for its flowers, and L. venosus, also with handsome flowers.

—ev-er-last'ing, n. Eternal duration; eternity; also, a strong woolen cloth (see last-ing, n.); also, any of various plants or flowers which retain their shape, color, etc., when dried, as certain species of the asteraceous genus Helichrysum, whose dried flowers are much used in mortuary decorations, and various species of cudweed (genus Gnaphalium); also [cap.], with the, the Eternal Being; God.—ev-er-last'ing-ly, adv.—ev-er-last'ing-ness, n.

ev-er-more (ev'ér-mōr'), adv. Throughout all future time; also, at all times; continually; also, at any future time; ever again: often preceded by for (for evermore or forevermore).

e-ver-sion (ē-vér'shən), n. [L. eversio(n), < evertere: see vert.] Overthrow; also, a turning or being turned outward, or inside out.

e-vert (ē-vért'), v. t. [L. evertere, < e, out, + verttere, turn.] To upset; overthrow (obs. or archaic); turn outward, or inside out.

ev-er-ry (ev'ri). [AS. æfre ælc, 'ever each': see ever and each.]

I. a. Each, as referring one by one to all the members of an aggregate. II. pron. Every one of a number of persons or things. [Obs. or legal.]—ev-er-ry-bod'y, n. Every person.

—ev-er-ry-day, a. Of or pertaining to every day; daily; also, of or for ordinary days as contrasted with Sundays or gala days (as, everyday clothes); also, such as is met with every day; ordinary; commonplace.—ev-er-ry one. Every person; everybody: often as one word, everyone.—ev-er-ry-thing, n. Every thing or particular of an aggregate or total; all; sometimes, something extremely important (as, this news means everything to us).—ev-er-ry-way, adv. In every way; in every direction, manner, or respect.

—ev-er-ry-when, adv. At all times.—ev-er-ry-where, adv. In every place or part; in all places.—ev-er-ry-whith'er, adv. To every place; in every direction.

e-vict (ē-vikt'), v. t. [L. evictus, pp. of evincere, overcome completely, recover (property) by judicial decision, prove, < e, out, + vincere, conquer: cf. evince.] To recover (property, etc.) by a judicial process or by virtue of a superior title; also, to expel (a person) from land, etc., by such means; eject (a tenant); hence, to expel by force; turn out in any compulsory way.—e-vic-tion (ē-vik'shən), n. [LL. evictio(n).] The act or process of evicting, or the fact of being evicted.—e-vic'tor, n.

ev-i-dence (ev'i-dēns), n. [OF. evidence (F. évidence), < L. evidētia, clearness, LL. a proof, < L. evidens: see evident.] The quality of being evident; clearness; also, something that makes evident or manifest; an indication; also, ground for belief; that which tends to prove or disprove something; specif., information, in the form of personal testimony, contents of documents, etc., presented in a legal investigation or trial to make clear the fact or point in question; that part of such information which is properly receivable by the court; also, one who bears testimony or witness (now chiefly in to turn state's, or king's or queen's, evidence, said of an accomplice in a crime who becomes a witness for the prosecution against the others involved).—evidences of Christianity, the proofs of the divine origin of Christianity.

—in evidence, in a situation to be readily seen; plainly visible; conspicuous.—ev'i-dence, v. t.; -denced, -dencing. To make evident or clear; show clearly; manifest; also, to support by evidence.

ev-i-dent (ev'i-dēnt), a. [OF. evident (F. évident), < L. evidens (evident-), clear, evident, < e, out, + videns, pp. of videre, see.] Plain or clear to the sight or the understanding; obvious; manifest; also, certain or conclusive.

ev-i-den-tial (ev-i-dēn'shəl), a. [L. evidētia: see evidence.] Pertaining to, based on, or of the nature of evidence.—ev-i-den'tial-ly, adv.—ev-i-den'ti-a-ry (-shi-ē-rī), a. Evidential.

ev-i-dent-ly (ev'i-dēnt-lī), adv. In an evident manner; clearly; obviously; apparently.—ev-i-dent-ness, n.

e-vil (ē-vī), a. [AS. yfel = D. ewel = G. übel = Goth. ubils, evil.] Effecting or apt to effect injury, mischief, trouble, or pain; bad; harmful; also, characterized or accompanied by misfortune or suffering; unfortunate; disastrous; also, violating or inconsistent with the moral law; sinful; wicked; also, due to (actual or imputed) bad character or conduct (as, evil repute).—evil eye, a faculty, superstitiously attributed to certain persons, of inflicting injury of bad luck by a look.—the evil one, the devil; Satan.—e'vil, n. That which is evil; evil quality, intention, or conduct; harm; mischief; misfortune; sin; also, something evil; anything causing injury or harm (as, the social evil, prostitution); a disease (as, king's evil, scrofula, sometimes called simply the evil; see under king).—e'vil, adv. In an evil manner; badly; ill.—e'vil-do'er, n. One who does evil.—e'vil-do'ing, n.—e'vil-eyed, a. Looking with malice or envy (see Shakespeare's "Cymbeline," i. 1. 72); also, supposed to possess the evil eye.—e'vil-ly, adv.—e'vil-mind'ed, a. Having an evil mind; malignant; wicked.—e'vil-ness, n.

e-vince (ē-vins'), v. t.; evinced, evincing. [L. evincere, overcome completely, prove, demonstrate: see evict.] To overcome or conquer; also, to convince; also, to show clearly; make evident or manifest; prove; also, to reveal the possession of (a quality, trait, etc.): as, "Rip's son and heir . . . evinced an hereditary disposition to attend to anything else but his business," Irving's "Sketch-Book," Rip Van Winkle; exhibit.—e-vince'ment, n.—e-vin-cive (ē-vin'siv), a. Serving to evince; indicative.

ev-i-rate (ev'i-rāt or ē'vi-), v. t.; -rated, -rating. [L. eviratus, pp. of evirare, < e, out of, + vir, man.] To deprive of virility; castrate; emasculate.—ev-i-ra'tion (-rā'shən), n.

e-vis-ce-rate (ē-vis'ē-rāt), v. t.; -rated, -rating. [L. evisceratus, pp. of eviscerare, < e, out of, + viscera, entrails: see viscus.] To remove the viscera from; disembowel; fig., to deprive of vital or essential parts.—e-vis-ce-ra'tion (-rā'shən), n.

ev-i-ta-ble (ev'i-tā-bl), a. [L. evitabilis, < evitare: see evite.] Avoidable. Cf. inevitable.

e-vite (ē-vīt'), v. t.; evited, eviting. [L. evitare (pp. evitatus), < e, out of, + vitare, shun.] To avoid; shun. [Archaic.] Also ev-i-tate (ev'i-tāt).—ev-i-ta'tion (-tā'shən), n.

ev-o-ca-ble (ev'ō-kā-bl), a. [L. evocare: see evoke.] That may be evoked.

ev-o-cate (ev'ō-kāt), v. t.; -cated, -cating. [L. evocatus, pp. of evocare: see evoke.] To evoke. [Now rare.]—ev-o-ca'tion (-kā'shən), n. [L. evocatio(n).] The act of evoking; a calling forth; in law, the evoking of a cause from an inferior to a superior tribunal.—e-voc-a-tive (ē-vok'ā-tiv), a. Tending to evoke.—e-voc'a-to-ry (-tō-rī), a. Having the function of evoking.—ev'o-ca-tor (-kā-tōr), n. [L.] One who evokes; esp., one who calls up spirits.

e-voke (ē-vōk'), v. t.; evoked, evoking. [L. evocare (pp. evocatus), < e, out of, + vocare, call.] To call or summon forth; in law, to summon or remove (a cause) from an inferior to a superior tribunal.—e-vok'er (ē-vō'kēr), n.

fat, fāte, fār, fall, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ōnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

ev-o-lute (ev'ō-lūt). [L. evolutus, pp. of evolvere: see evolve.] I. a. Evolved; developed. II. n. In geom., a curve which is the locus of the center of curvature of another curve (called the involute), or the envelop of the normals to the latter; the curve from which an involute is formed by the unwrapping of a flexible and inextensible string. Cf. involute.

ev-o-lu-tion (ev'ō-lū'shən), n. [L. evolutio(n)-, < evolvere: see evolve.] The act or process of evolving; an unrolling or unfolding; development; any process of formation or growth; continuous progress from unorganized simplicity to organized complexity; an evolving or giving off of gas, heat, etc.; also, something evolved; a product; also, a movement, or one of a series of movements, of troops, ships, etc., as for disposition in order of battle or in line on parade; any similar movement; in math., the formation of an involute; also, the extraction of roots from powers; in biol., development from a rudimentary to a mature or complete state; also, preformation (now only historical); also, in modern use, the fact or doctrine of the descent of all living things from a few simple forms of life, or from a single form.

—ev-o-lu'tion-al, ev-o-lu'tion-a-ry (ā-rī), a. —ev-o-lu'tion-ism, n. The theory of evolution or development, as in biology, or with reference to the gradual progress of the universe from simplicity to complexity (cf. creationism). —ev-o-lu'tion-ist, n.

e-volv-a-ble (ē-vol'vā-bl), a. That may be evolved.

e-volve (ē-volv'), v.; evolved, evolving. [L. evolvere (pp. evolutus), roll out, unroll, unfold, < e-, out, + volvere, roll.] I. tr. To unroll or unfold; open out or expand; disclose gradually to knowledge; also, to bring out gradually (something contained, involved, latent, or potential in a thing); educe, as a result or conclusion; develop, as from materials, data, etc.; produce by elaboration; sometimes, to develop or produce as a natural consequence; give off or emit, as odors, vapors, etc.; also, to develop, as by a process of growth, to a more highly organized condition. II. intr. To unfold; open out, as to view; come forth gradually into being; develop; undergo evolution. —e-volve'ment, n. —e-volv'er, n.

e-vul-sion (ē-vul'shən), n. [L. evulsio(n)-, < evellere, pluck out, < e-, out, + vellere, pluck.] The act of plucking or pulling out; forcible extraction.

ewe (ū), n. [AS. eowu = D. ooi, ewe; akin to L. ovis, Gr. ōis, Skt. avi, sheep.] A female sheep. —ewe's-neck, n. A neck like that of a ewe, hollowed rather than arched: said with reference to horses. —ewe's-necked, a.

ew-er (ū'ēr), n. [OF. esviere, aiguere (F. aiguère), < L. aquaria, fem. of aquarius, pertaining to water, < aqua, water.] A pitcher with a wide spout, esp. one to hold water for ablutions; in decorative art, a vessel having a spout and a handle, esp. a tall and slender vessel with a foot or base.

ex (eks), prep. [L.: see ex-.] In commerce, out of; free out of (used in phrases, as ex elevator, ex ship, etc., which mean 'free of charges until the time of removal out of the elevator, ship, etc.').; in finance, without, not including, or without the right to have (used in phrases, as ex coupon, ex dividend, ex interest, which are often abbreviated simply ex or x). Cf. cum.

ex-. [L. ex-, repr. ex-, also e, prep., out of, from, beyond, = Gr. ἐξ, ἐκ, out of, from.] A prefix of Latin origin, meaning primarily 'out of,' 'from,' and hence 'out,' 'utterly,' 'thoroughly,' and sometimes serving to impart a privative or negative force or to indicate a former title, status, etc.: freely used as an English formative, as in exalbuminous, exstipulate, exterritorial, and esp. in such combinations as ex-president (former president), ex-member, ex-pugilist, ex-wife.

ex-a-cer-bate (eg-zas'ēr-bāt or ek-sas'), v. t.; -bated, -bating. [L. exacerbatus, pp. of exacerbare, < ex-, utterly, + acerbus, sour, bitter, harsh.] To increase the bitterness or violence of (pain, disease, ill feeling, etc.): as, "if those differences are exacerbated by religious disputes," H. G. Wells's "Outline of History," xxxviii. § 7); aggravate; embitter; also, to embitter the feelings of (a person); irritate; exasperate. —ex-a-cer-ba'tion (bā'shən), n.

ex-act (eg-zakt'), v. [L. exactus, pp. of exigere, drive out, force out, require, complete, measure by a standard, < ex-, out, + agere, drive, do, act.] I. tr. To force or compel the payment, yielding, or performance of; extort; also, to call for, demand, or require (as, his generosity exacts admiration). II. † intr. To practise exactions: with on or upon: as, "The enemy shall not exact upon him" (Ps. lxxxix. 22).

—ex-act', a. Conforming perfectly to the requirements or conditions of the case; strictly accurate or correct (as, an exact likeness, description, or translation); precise, as opposed to approximate (as, the exact sum due; the exact moment or date); also, characterized by or using strict accuracy or precision (as, the exact sciences; exact instruments; an exact thinker or mind); also, admitting of no deviation, as laws, discipline, etc.; strict or rigorous; also, perfect†, consummate†, or finished†. —ex-act'a-ble, a. That may be exacted. —ex-act'er, n. —ex-act'ing, p. a. Given to or characterized by exaction; extortionate; also, severe, or unduly severe, in demands or requirements, as a person; requiring close application or attention, as a task. —ex-act'ing-ly, adv. —ex-act'ing-ness, n. —ex-act-ion (eg-zak'shən), n. [L. exactio(n)-.] The act of exacting; extortion; also, something exacted. —ex-act'i-tude (ti-tūd), n. [F.] The quality of being exact; exactness. —ex-act'ly, adv. —ex-act'ness, n. —ex-act'or, n.

ex-ag-ger-ate (eg-zaj'ē-rāt), v.; -ated, -ating. [L. exaggeratus, pp. of exaggerare, < ex-, out, + aggerare, heap up, < agger, heap, mound.] I. tr. To heap up; also, to magnify beyond truth or reason; overstate; represent disproportionately; also, to increase or enlarge abnormally. II. intr. To employ exaggeration, as in speech or writing. —ex-ag-ger-at-ed, p. a. Unduly magnified; abnormally increased or enlarged; in zool., more conspicuous than is normal. —ex-ag-ger-at-ed-ly, adv. —ex-ag-ger-at-ing-ly, adv. —ex-ag-ger-a-tion (eg-zaj'ē-rā'shən), n. [L. exaggeratio(n)-.]

The act of exaggerating, or the state of being exaggerated; an exaggerated statement or representation; an exaggerated form of something. —ex-ag-ger-a-tive (eg-zaj'ē-rā-tiv), a. Given to or characterized by exaggeration. —ex-ag-ger-a-tor (eg-zaj'ē-rā-tōr), n. —ex-ag-ger-a-to-ry (eg-zaj'ē-rā-tō-rī), a. Characterized by exaggeration; exaggerative. —ex-al-bu-mi-nous (eks-al-bū'mi-nus), a. [See ex-.] In bot., destitute of albumen, as seeds.

ex-alt (eg-zālt'), v. t. [L. exaltare, < ex-, out, + altus, high.] To raise up or elevate (now rare in literal use); fig., to elevate in rank, honor, power, character, quality, etc.; dignify; glorify; ennoble; stimulate, as the imagination; elate, as with pride or joy; also, to attribute exaltation to; praise; extol; also, to raise in degree; intensify; heighten; in chem., to purify† or refine†. —ex-al-ta-tion (ek-sāl-tā'shən), n. [LL. exaltatio(n)-.] The act of exalting, or the state of being exalted; elevation, as in rank, power, character, etc.; elation of mind or feeling, sometimes abnormal or morbid in character; abnormal intensification of the action of an organ; in astrol., that situation of a planet in the zodiac where it is supposed to have the most influence. —ex-alt'ed, p. a. Elevated, as in rank or character; of high station; dignified; lofty; noble; sometimes, rapturously excited (as, "When the music was strong and bold, she looked exalted": Steele, in "Spectator," 503). —ex-alt'ed-ly, adv. —ex-alt'ed-ness, n. —ex-alt'er, n.

ex-a-men (eg-zā'men), n. [L., a weighing, consideration, < ex-, out, + agere, drive, do, act: cf. essay and exact.] An examination; an investigation or inquiry.

ex-am-in-a-ble (eg-zam'i-nā-bl), a. That may be examined; subject to examination.

ex-am-i-nant (eg-zam'i-nānt), n. [L. examinans (-ant-), pp.†.] One who examines, or conducts an examination.

ex-am-i-nate (eg-zam'i-nāt), n. [L. examinatus, pp.†.] A person undergoing examination.

ex-am-i-na-tion (eg-zam-i-nā'shən), n. [L. examinatio(n)-.] The act of examining, or the state of being examined; inspection; inquiry; investigation; formal interrogation; a testing of pupils, candidates, etc., as by questions; also, the statements, etc., made by one examined.—ex-am-i-na'-tion-al, a.

Ewer of silver-gilt in the Pitti Palace, Florence.

ex-am-i-na-tor (eg-zam'i-nā-tor), n. [LL.] One who examines; an examiner. [Now rare.]—ex-am'i-na-to'ri-al (-nā-tō'ri-āl), a.

ex-am-ine (eg-zam'in), v. t.; -ined, -ining. [OF. F. examiner, < L. examinare (pp. examinatus), < examen, a weighing, consideration: see examen.] To test or assay (ores, etc.); try by a standard or rule (obs. or rare); inspect or scrutinize carefully; inquire into or investigate; test by questioning; interrogate (a witness, etc.) as to conduct or as to knowledge of facts; test the knowledge or qualifications of (a pupil, candidate, etc.), as by questions.—ex-am-in-ee' (-i-nē'), n. One who undergoes an examination.—ex-am'in-er, n. One who examines.—ex-am'in-ing-ly, adv.

ex-am-ple (eg-zam'pl), n. [OF. ex-ample (F. exemple), < L. exemplum, < eximere, take out: see exempt.] One of a number of things, or a part of something, taken to show the character of the whole; an instance serving for illustration; a specimen; an instance illustrating a rule or method, as a mathematical problem proposed for solution; also, something to be imitated; a pattern or model; conduct inducing imitation; also, a precedent; a parallel case; also, an instance, esp. of punishment, serving for a warning; a warning.—ex-am'ple, v. t.; -pled, -pling. To give or be an example of; exemplify; also, to justify by an example or precedent; also, to set an example to; instruct by example.

ex-an-i-mate (eg-zan'i-māt or ek-san'-), a. [L. exanimatus, pp. of exanimare, deprive of breath, life, or spirit, < ex-priv. (see ex-) + anima, air, breath, life.] Inanimate or lifeless; lifeless in appearance; spiritless; disheartened.

ex-an-them (ek-san'them), n. Same as exanthema.

ex-an-the-ma (ek-san-thē'mā), n.; pl. -themata (-them'a-tā). [LL., < Gr. ἐξανθήμα, < ἐξανθεῖν, blossom out, break out, < ἐξ, out, + ἀνθεῖν, blossom, < ἄνθος, a flower.] In pathol., an eruption or rash on the skin; also, an eruptive disease, esp. one attended with fever, as smallpox or measles.—ex-an-the-mat'ic (-thē-mat'ik), ex-an-them'a-tous (-them'a-tus), a.

ex-arch (ek'sārk), n. [LL. exarchus, < Gr. ἐπαρχος, < ἐξ, out, + ἀρχεῖν, lead, rule.] The ruler of a province in the Byzantine Empire; also, in the Eastern Church, orig. a patriarch, later a bishop ranking below a patriarch and above a metropolitan, now a patriarch's deputy.—ex-ar-cha-te (ek'sār-kāt or ek-sār'-), n. [ML. exarchatus.] The office, jurisdiction, or province of an exarch.

ex-as-per-ate (eg-zas'pe-rāt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [L. exasperatus, pp. of exasperare, < ex, utterly, + asper, rough.] To make rough or harsh; increase the intensity or violence of (disease, passions, etc.): as, "tribes whose native ferocity was exasperated by debasing forms of superstition." De Quincey's "Revolt of the Tartars"; make (pain, etc.) more grievous; embitter (feeling, etc.); irritate to a high degree, or enrage, as a person.—ex-as-per-at-ed-ly, adv.—ex-as-per-at-ing-ly, adv.—ex-as-per-a-tion (-pe-rā'shən), n. [L. exasperatio(n-).] The act of exasperating, or the state of being exasperated; exacerbation; great irritation; intense anger.—ex-as-per-a-tor, n.

ex ca-the-dra (eks kə-thē'drā or kath'ē-), [L., 'from the chair.'] From the seat of authority; with authority: a phrase sometimes used adjectively (as, an ex cathedra judgment).—ex-ca-the'dral, a.

ex-ca-vate (eks'kə-vāt), v. t.; -vated, -vating. [L. excavatus, pp. of excavare, < ex, out, + cavare, make hollow, < cavus, hollow.]

To make hollow by removing the inner part; make a hole or cavity in; form into a hollow, as by digging; also, to make (a hole, tunnel, etc.) by removing material; also, to dig or scoop out (earth, etc.); also, to expose or lay bare by digging; unearth.—ex-ca-va'tion (-vā'shən), n. [L. excavatio(n-).] The act of excavating; also, a hole or cavity made by excavating.—ex'ca-va-tor, n. One who or that which excavates; a machine used in excavating (see cut in preceding column).

Excavator.

ex-ceed (ek-sēd'), v. [OF. excedere (F. excéder), < L. excedere (pp. excessus), < ex, out of, beyond, + cedere, go.] I. tr. To go beyond (a boundary, limit, or point: now usually fig.); go beyond the bounds or limits of (as, to exceed one's powers; to exceed propriety or truth); go beyond in quantity, degree, rate, etc. (as, incomes exceeding $5,000; to exceed a given age, weight, or height; to exceed the authorized speed); go beyond in rank, excellence, effectiveness, etc.; surpass or excel; be superior to. II. intr. To go beyond fixed or proper limits, as in conduct; exaggerate, as in statement; be greater, as in quantity or degree; surpass others, excel, or be superior.—ex-ceed'er, n.—ex-ceed'ing. I. p. a. Surpassing in quantity or degree; unusually great; extraordinary; excessive. II. adv. Exceedingly: as, "My heart is exceeding heavy" (Shakspeare's "Much Ado about Nothing," iii. 4. 25). [Archaic.]—ex-ceed'ing-ly, adv. To an unusual degree; extremely.

ex-cel-sus (ek-sel'), v.; -celled, -celling. [L. excellere (pp. excelsus), < ex, out of, beyond, + cellere, rise: cf. column.] I. intr. To surpass others in some quality, attainment, performance, etc.; be superior in some respect. II. tr. To surpass; be superior to; outdo.

ex-cel-lence (ek'se-lens), n. [OF. F. excellence, < L. excellētia, < excellens: see excellent.] The fact or state of excelling; superiority; eminence; also, an excellent quality or feature; also [often cap.], a title of honor (now usually excellency, which see).—ex'cel-len-cy (-lən-si), n.; pl. -cies (-siz). Excellence; also [often cap.], a title of honor given to certain high officials, as governors and ambassadors; a person so entitled.

ex-cel-lent (ek'se-lent), a. [OF. F. excellent, < L. excellens (-ent-), ppr. of excellere: see excel.] Excelling; possessing excellence or superior merit; remarkably good; also, extraordinary† or consummate† (as, an excellent hypocrite).—ex'cel-lent-ly, adv.

ex-cel-si-or (ek-sel'si-ōr), a. [L., compar. of excelsus, high, prop. pp. of excellere: see excel.] Higher: used as a motto, as by the State of New York ('the Excelsior State') and, as by Longfellow in his poem "Excelsior," as an expression of aspiration toward greater heights.—ex-cel'si-or (-ōr), n. A kind of fine wood-shavings, used for stuffing, packing, etc.; also, a printing-type (3 point) smaller than brilliant.

ex-cept (ek-sept'), v. [L. exceptus, pp. of excipere, < ex, out of, + capere, take.] I. tr. To take or leave out from a number or an aggregate under consideration; leave out of account; exclude, as from the scope of a statement, rule, etc. II. intr. To make objection; object; take exception.—ex-cept'. [Orig. pp.] I. prep. With the exclusion of; excluding; save; but. II. conj. With the exception that (now usually with that expressed: as, "Parted without the least regret, Except that they had ever met," Cowper's "Pairing Time Anticipated"); also, if it be (or were) not that, if not, or unless (as, "Except the Lord build the house, they labour in vain that build it"; Ps. cxxvii. 1); also, otherwise than, save, or but (as, "Nor do I know how to prevent the course of justice, except by paying the money myself"; Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield," xxiv.).—ex-cept'er, n.—ex-cept'ing. [Orig. ppr.] I. prep. Excluding; barring; saving; except. II. conj. Unless; unless; save.

ex-cep-tion (ek-sep'shən), n. [L. exceptio(n-).] The act of excepting, or the fact of being excepted; exclusion, as from the scope of a statement, rule, etc.; also, something excepted; an instance or case not conforming to the general rule; also, an objection, as to a ruling of the court in the course of a trial; in general, an objection or demur; an adverse critifat, fāte, fār, fall, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; y, you;

Seal of the Excelsior State.

cism, esp. on a particular point; expressed opposition of opinion, or demurral (as, a statement liable to exception). — to take exception, to make objection (esp. with to); demur with respect to something; also, to take offense (often with at). — ex-cep'tion-a-ble, a. Liable to exception or objection; objectionable. — ex-cep'tion-a-ble-ness, n. — ex-cep'tion-a-bly, adv. — ex-cep'tion-al, a. Forming an exception or unusual instance; unusual; extraordinary. — ex-cep'tion-al-ly, adv. — ex-cep'tion-al-ness, n.

ex-cep'tious (ek-sep'shus), a. [From exception.] Disposed to take exception or make objection; captious.

ex-cep'tive (ek-sep'tiv), a. That excepts; making an exception; also, disposed to take exception; inclined to object.

ex-cep'tor (ek-sep'tor), n. One who excepts.

ex-cerpt (ek-sérpt'), v. t. [L. excerptus, pp. of excerpere, < ex, out of, + carpere, pick.] To cull out or take out (a passage) from a book or the like; extract. — ex-cerpt (ek'sérpt or ek-sérpt'), n. [L. excerptum (pl. excerpta), prop. pp. neut.] A passage taken out of a book or the like; an extract. — ex-cerp-tion (ek-sérp'shən), n. [L. excerp-tio(n).] The act of excerpting; also, an excerpt.

ex-cess (ek-ses'), [OF. exces (F. excès), < L. excessus, < excedere: see exceed.] I. n. A going beyond ordinary or proper limits, as of authority; an overstepping the limits of moderation; immoderate indulgence, esp. of physical appetites; intemperance; also, exuberance or superabundance; superfluity; an extreme or excessive amount or degree; also, the fact of exceeding something else in amount or degree; preponderance; also, the amount or degree by which one thing exceeds another. II. a. Being more than or above what is necessary, usual, or specified. — ex-ces-sive (ek-ses'iv), a. Exceeding the usual or proper limit or degree; characterized by excess; immoderate; extravagant; unreasonable. — ex-ces'sive-ly, adv. — ex-ces'sive-ness, n.

ex-change (eks-chān'), v.; -changed, -changing. [OF. eschangier (F. échanger), < ML. exambiare, < L. ex-, out, + ML. cambiare, E. change, v.] I. tr. To part with for some equivalent; give up (something) for something else; sometimes, to replace by another or something else (as, please exchange this purchase for me; no goods will be exchanged during the holiday season); also, to give and receive (things) reciprocally; give to and receive from each other (things of the same kind: as, to exchange blows, gifts, etc.); interchange. II. intr. To make an exchange; also, to pass or be taken in exchange or as an equivalent. — ex-change', n. [OF. eschange (F. échange).] The act of exchanging; a parting with a thing in return for some equivalent; the giving up or resigning of something for something else (as, the exchange of a crown for a cloister); the replacing of one thing by another or something else; return (as, to receive gold in exchange for silver); also, the act of giving and receiving reciprocally (as, an exchange of blows, gifts, etc.); interchange; specif., the mutual transference of equivalent sums of money, as in the currencies of two different countries; the business of a money-changer; the varying rate or sum, in one currency, given for a fixed sum in another currency (also called course, or rate, of exchange); the amount of the difference in value between two or more currencies, or between the values of the same currency at two or more places; also, the method or system by which debits and credits in different places are settled without the actual transference of money, by means of documents representing money-values ('bills of exchange'); the discharge of obligations in different places by the transfer of credits; sometimes, a bill of exchange; also, the amount or percentage charged for exchanging money, collecting a draft, etc.; also, that which is given or received in exchange or substitution for something else; a copy of a newspaper or periodical sent to the office of another newspaper or periodical in return for a copy of the latter; also, a place for exchanging commodities, services, etc.; a place where merchants, brokers, bankers, etc., meet to transact business; a central office, central station, or the like (as, a telephone exchange, where telephone lines come together and connections are made between lines). — ex-change editor, an editor who reads the exchanges sent to his office and selects from them extracts for reproduction in his own publication. — ex-change'a-ble, a. Capable of being exchanged. — exchangeable value, the value of a thing measured by what may be procured in exchange. — ex-change-a-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-ti), n. — ex-chan'ger (-chān'jēr), n.

ex-che-quer (eks-chek'ér), n. [So called with reference to the table-cover marked with squares on which accounts were reckoned with counters, < OF. eschiquier, chess-board: see checker.] [cap.] Formerly, in England, an office which administered the royal revenues and determined all cases affecting them; later, a court of law ('Court of Exchequer') deriving from this office, now merged in the King's Bench Division of the High Court of Justice; [cap. or l. c.] in Great Britain, the governmental department in charge of the public revenues; the national treasury; in general [l. c.], a treasury, as of a state or nation; also (colloq.), pecuniary resources; finances.

ex-cide (ek-sid'), v. t.; -cided, -ciding. [L. excidere (pp. excisus), < ex, out of, + cadere, cut.] To cut out; excise.

ex-cip-i-ent (ek-sip'i-ent), n. [L. excipiens (-ent-), pp. of excipere, take out: see except, v.] One who or that which takes up or receives; in phar., a more or less inert substance, as sugar, jelly, etc., used as the medium or vehicle for the administration of an active medicine.

ex-cis-a-ble (ek-si'zā-bl), a. Subject to excise duty.

ex-cise¹ (ek-siz'), v. t.; -cised, -cising. [L. excisus, pp. of excidere: see excide.] To cut out or off, as a tumor; expunge, as a passage or sentence.

ex-cise² (ek-siz'), n. [Prob. < MD. excijz, < OF. acceis, a tax, ult. < L. ad, to, + censere, tax.] An inland tax or duty on certain commodities, as spirits, tobacco, etc., levied on their manufacture, sale, or consumption within the country; also, a tax levied for a license to carry on certain employments, pursue certain sports, etc.; also, that branch of the civil service charged with the collection of excise duties (British). — ex-cise'², v. t.; -cised, -cising. To impose an excise on. — ex-cise'man (-mān), n.; pl. -men. An officer who collects excise taxes and enforces excise laws: as, "Of all the manifold ills in the train of smuggling, surely the excisemen are the worst" (Galt's "Annals of the Parish," xix.). [British.]

ex-ci-sion (ek-siz'hən), n. [L. excisio(n), < excidere: see excide.] The act of excising, or cutting out or off; the state of being excised; hence, exclusion, as from a religious society; excommunication; also, extirpation or destruction.

ex-cit-a-ble (ek-si'tā-bl), a. Capable of being excited; also, easily excited. — ex-cit-a-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-ti), ex-cit'a-ble-ness, n.

ex-cit-ant (ek-si'tānt), [L. excitans (-ant-), ppr.] I. a. Exciting, or tending to excite; stimulating. II. n. Something that excites, esp. to increased vital activity; a stimulant; in elect., the exciting liquid in a voltaic cell.

ex-ci-ta-tion (ek-si'tā'shən), n. [LL. excitatio(n).] The act of exciting, or the state of being excited; excitement. — ex-ci-ta-tive, ex-ci-ta-to-ry (ek-si'tā-tiv, -tō-ri), a. Tending to excite; characterized or produced by excitement.

ex-cite (ek-sit'), v. t.; -cited, -citing. [L. excitare (pp. excitatus), freq. of excitare, call forth, rouse, < ex, out of, + ciere, move, excite, call.] To call into action; stir up; incite; rouse; hence, to induce or occasion; also, to agitate or perturb mentally; also, to stimulate to activity, as the nervous organism; in elect., to produce electric activity or a magnetic field in. — ex-cit-ed-ly (ek-si'ted-li), adv. — ex-cite'ment, n. The act of exciting; excited state or condition; mental agitation; also, something that excites. — ex-cit'er, n. One who or that which excites; in elect., a dynamo, battery, or other apparatus, which supplies the current for producing a magnetic field in another machine; also, a device for producing Hertzian waves. — ex-cit'ing, p. a. That excites; calling into action; stirring; producing excitement. — ex-cit'ing-ly, adv. — ex-cit-o-mo-tor (ek-si'tō-mō'tor), a. In physiol., exciting muscular action; pertaining to reflex action. — ex-ci-tor (ek-si'tor), n. An exciter; in physiol., a nerve whose stimulation excites greater action in the part supplied. — ex-cit'o-se-cre'to-ry (-sē-krē'tō-ri), a. In physiol., causing increased secretion.

ex-claim (eks-klām'), v. [L. exclamare (pp. exclamatus), < ex-, out, + clamare, cry, shout.] I. intr. To cry out or speak suddenly and vehemently, as in surprise, strong emotion, protest, etc. II. tr. To cry out; say loudly or vehemently.—ex-claim', n. An exclamation or outcry: as, "cursing cries and deep exclaims" (Shakspere's "Richard III." i. 2. 52). [Archaic.]—ex-claim'er, n.—ex-cla-ma-tion (eks-kłā-mā'shŏn), n. [L. exclamatio(n-).] The act of exclaiming; an outcry; a sudden and vehement utterance; a loud complaint or protest; also, a punctuation-mark (!) used after an exclamation ('exclamation-mark' or 'exclamation-point'); in gram., an interjection.—ex-clam'a-tive (-klam'ā-tiv), ex-clam'a-to-ry (-tō-ri), a. Using, containing, or expressing exclamation; pertaining to exclamation.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; °, primary accent; ˘, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

ex-clave (eks'klāv), n. [L. ex, out of, + E. -clave as in enclave.] An outlying portion of a country, entirely (or mostly) surrounded by foreign territory, considered in relation to the country to which it belongs. Cf. enclave.

ex-clude (eks-kłōd'), v. t.; -cluded, -cluding. [L. excludere (pp. exclusus), < ex, out of, + cludere, claudere, shut, close: cf. sluice.] To shut or keep out (something already outside); prevent the entrance of; allow no room or part to; shut out from consideration, the scope of a privilege or grant, the application of a term or proposition, etc.; also, to expel and keep out; thrust out; eject.—ex-clud'a-ble (-klōd'ā-bl), a.—ex-clud'er, n.

ex-clu-sion (eks-kłō'zhŏn), n. [L. exclusio(n-).] The act of excluding, or the state of being excluded; a debarring or debarment; expulsion.—ex-clu'sion-a-ry (-ā-ri), a. Pertaining to or characterized by exclusion.—ex-clu'sion-ism, n. The principle, policy, or practice of exclusion, as from rights or privileges.—ex-clu'sion-ist, n. One who favors exclusion; one who would exclude another from some right or privilege.

ex-clu-sive (eks-kłō'siv), a. [ML. exclusivus.] That excludes; not admitting of something (as, mutually exclusive ideas, neither of which admits of the other); excluding from consideration or account (often used adverbially: as, from 100 to 121 exclusive, that is, excluding 100 and 121, and including from 101 to 120); excluding all except what is specified (as, an exclusive proposition or particle); shutting out all others from a part or share (as, an exclusive grant); in which no others have a share (as, exclusive information); limited to the object or objects designated (as, exclusive attention to business); single or sole (as, the exclusive means of communication between two places); also, disposed to resist the admission of outsiders to association, intimacy, etc.; fastidious as to the social rank of associates.—ex-clu'sive-ly, adv.—ex-clu'sive-ness, n.

ex-cog-i-tate (eks-kŏj'i-tāt), v. t.; -tated, -tating. [L. excogitatus, pp. of excogitare, < ex, out, + cogitare, think, E. cogitate.] To think out; contrive; devise.—ex-cog-i-ta'tion (-tā'shŏn), n. The act of excogitating; reflection; mental contrivance; also, something excogitated; a plan; a contrivance.—ex-cog'i-ta-tive (-tā-tiv), a. Of or pertaining to excogitation.—ex-cog'i-ta-tor (-tā-tŏr), n.

ex-com-mu-ni-ca-ble (eks-kŏ-mū'ni-kā-bl), a. Liable or deserving to be excommunicated, as a person; punishable by excommunication, as an offense.

ex-com-mu-ni-cant (eks-kŏ-mū'ni-kānt), n. An excommunicated person; an excommunicate.

ex-com-mu-ni-cate (eks-kŏ-mū'ni-kāt), v. t.; -cated, -cating. [LL. excommunicatus, pp. of excommunicare, < L. ex-priv. (see ex-) + communicare, E. communicate.] To cut off from communion or membership; esp., to exclude (a member) by ecclesiastical sentence from the sacraments and fellowship of the church.—ex-com-mu'ni-cate. I. a. Excommunicated. II. n. An excommunicated person.—ex-com-mu-ni-ca'tion (-kā'shŏn), n. [LL. excommunicatio(n-).] The act of excommunicating, or the state of being excommunicated; the ecclesiastical sentence by which a person is excommunicated.—ex-com-mu'ni-ca-tive (-kā-tiv), a. Disposed or serving to excommunicate.—ex-com-mu'ni-ca-tor, n.—ex-com-mu'ni-ca-to-ry (-kā-tŏ-ri), a. Pertaining to excommunication.

ex-co-ri-ate (eks-kŏ'ri-āt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [L. excoriatus, pp. of excoriare, < ex-priv. (see ex-) + corium, skin.] To strip off or remove the skin from (as, "The corpse . . . was much bruised and excoriated": Poe's "Murders in the Rue Morgue"); also, to strip off (the skin); abrade.—ex-co-ri-a'tion (-ā'shŏn), n. The act of excoriating, or the state of being excoriated; an excoriated place on the body.

ex-cor-ti-cate (eks-kŏr'ti-kāt), v. t.; -cated, -cating. [ML. excorticator, pp. of excorticare, < L. ex-priv. (see ex-) + cortex, bark.] To strip off the bark, rind, etc., from.—ex-cor-ti-ca'tion (-kā'shŏn), n.

ex-cres-ment¹ (eks'krē-mēnt), n. [LL. excrementum, < L. excrecere: see excrecent.] A natural outgrowth or excrescence, as hair or feathers. See Shakspere's "Comedy of Errors," ii. 2. 79.

ex-cres-ment² (eks'krē-mēnt), n. [L. excrementum, < excernere: see excrete.] Waste matter discharged from the body; esp., the feces.—ex-cres-men'tal (-men'tal), ex'-cres-men-ti'tious (-tish'us), a. Pertaining to, consisting of, or of the nature of excrement.

ex-cres-cence (eks-kres'ēns), n. [L. excrecentia, < ex-crescens: see excrecent.] A growing forth; abnormal growth or increase; also, an outgrowth; a natural appendage; esp., an abnormal or unsightly outgrowth on an animal or vegetable body; hence, any disfiguring addition.

ex-cres-cent (eks-kres'ēnt), a. [L. excrecens (-ēnt-), ppr. of excrecere, grow out, < ex, out of, + crecere, grow.] Growing out from something else; esp., growing abnormally out of something else; superfluous; in philol., arising, as a sound in a word, as a mere euphonic addition, as the t in against.

ex-cres-cen-tial (eks-kre-sen'shāl), a. Pertaining to or of the nature of an excrescence.

ex-cre-ta (eks-krē'tā), n. pl. [L., neut. pl. of excretus: see excrete.] Excreted matters; the excretions of the animal body, as sweat, urine, etc.—ex-cre'tal, a.

ex-crete (eks-krē't'), v. t.; -creted, -creting. [L. excretus, pp. of excernere, sift out, discharge, < ex, out of, + cernere, separate, sift.] To separate and eliminate from an organic body; separate and expel from the blood or tissues, as waste or harmful matters.—ex-cre'tion (-krē'shŏn), n. The act of excreting; also, the substance excreted, as sweat or urine, or certain plant juices.—ex-cre'tive, a. Excreting, or serving to excrete.—ex-cre-to-ry (eks'krē-tŏ-ri or eks-krē'-), a. Pertaining to or concerned in excretion; having the function of excreting: as, excretory organs.

ex-cru-ci-ate (eks-krŏ'shi-āt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [L. excruciatuus, pp. of excruciare, < ex-, utterly, + cruciare, torture, crucify, < crux (cruc), E. cross.] To inflict severe pain upon; torture; hence, to distress or annoy exceedingly (as, "Her presence used to excruciate Osborne": Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," xxix.).—ex-cru'ci-at-ing, p. a. Extremely painful; torturing; agonizing; hence, distressing in extremeness, elaborateness, etc. (as, excruciating politeness).—ex-cru'ci-at-ing-ly, adv.—ex-cru-ci-a'tion (-ši-ā'shŏn), n.

ex-cu-bi-to-ri-um (eks-kū-bi-tŏ-ri-um), n.; pl. -ria (-ri-ā). [ML. use of L. excubitorium, guard-house, < excubitor, guard, watchman, < ex-cubare, keep watch.] In arch., in some churches, a gallery for watchers on the eve of a festival, within view of the shrines.

ex-cul-pate (eks'kul-pāt or eks-kul'-), v. t.; -pated, -pating. [L. ex-priv. (see ex-) + culpa, fault, blame.] To clear from a charge of guilt or fault; free from blame; vindicate.—ex-cul-pa'tion (-pā'shŏn), n. The act of exculpating; also, something serving to exculpate; a vindication.—ex-cul'pa-to-ry (-pā-tŏ-ri), a.

ex-cur-rent (eks-kur'ēnt), a. [L. excurrēns (-ēnt-), ppr. of excurrere: see excursive.] Running out or forth; also, admitting of or affording exit; in bot., having the axis prolonged so as to form an undivided main stem or trunk, as the stem of the spruce; also, projecting beyond the apex, as the midrib in certain leaves.

Excubitorium, St. Albans Cathedral, England.

fat, fāte, fār, fall, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actŏr, natŭre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; v, you;

ex-curse (eks-kêrs'), v. i.; -cursed, -cursing. [L. excursus, pp. of excurrere, run out, make an excursion, < ex, out of, + currere, run.] To run out or off; digress; make an excursion.

ex-cur-sion (eks-kêr'shən), n. [L. excursio(n), < excurrere: see excuse.] A running out or forth; fig., an outburst; also, a sally or raid; also, an expedition or journey; a short journey, jaunt, or trip from a place with the intention of returning; a trip undertaken for pleasure or health; a pleasure-trip taken by a number of persons; sometimes, the persons themselves; also, deviation or digression; in physics, the departure of a body from its mean position or proper course; in mach., the range of stroke of any moving part.—excursion ticket, a ticket, as for persons going on an excursion, enabling the holder to travel to a particular point and back again, usually at a reduction from the regular fare; a round-trip ticket.—excursion train, a train intended to carry persons making a pleasure-trip, usually at a reduced fare.—ex-cur'sion, v. i. To make an excursion.—ex-cur'sion-al, ex-cur'sion-a-ry (-ā-rī), a. Of or pertaining to an excursion.—ex-cur'sion-ist, n. One who goes on an excursion.—ex-cur'sion-ize, v.; -ized, -izing. I. tr. To make excursions through. II. intr. To make excursions or an excursion.

ex-cur-sive (eks-kêr'siv), a. [See excuse.] Given to making excursions; wandering; digressive; also, of the nature of an excursion; rambling; desultory.—ex-cur'sive-ly, adv.—ex-cur'sive-ness, n.

ex-cur-sus (eks-kêr'sus), n.; pl. -suses, L. -sus. [L. excursus, n., < excurrere: see excuse.] A digression; also, a detailed discussion of some point in a book, inserted at the end of the book or of a division of it.

ex-cus-a-ble (eks-kū'zā-bl), a. [L. excusabilis.] That may be excused; pardonable.—ex-cus'a-ble-ness, n.—ex-cus'a-bly, adv.

ex-cu-sal (eks-kū'zāl), n. The act of excusing.

ex-cu-sa-to-ry (eks-kū'zā-tō-rī), a. Serving or intended to excuse. Also ex-cu'sa-tive.

ex-cuse (eks-kūz'), v. t.; -cused, -cusing. [OF. F. excuser, < L. excusare, < ex, out of, + causa, cause, judicial proceeding: cf. accuse.] To offer an apology for; apologize for; seek to remove the blame of; also, to serve as an apology or justification for; justify; also, to regard or judge with indulgence; pardon or forgive; overlook (a fault, etc.); also, to seek or obtain exemption or release for (as, to excuse one's self from duty); also, to release from an obligation or duty (as, "Your ladyship must excuse me; I'm called away by particular business": Sheridan's "School for Scandal," ii. 2); also, to refrain from exacting (as, to excuse a fine); remit; dispense with.—ex-cuse' (-kūs'), n. [OF. F. excuse.] The act of excusing; also, that which is offered as a reason for being excused; a plea offered in extenuation of a fault, or for release from an obligation, etc.; sometimes, a pretext or subterfuge; also, something serving to excuse (as, "My nephew's trespass may be well forgot; It hath the excuse of youth": Shakspeare's "1 Henry IV.," v. 2. 17); a ground or reason for excusing.—ex-cuse'less, a. Having no excuse; also, admitting of no excuse; inexcusable.—ex-cus'er (-kū'zēr), n.—ex-cus'ing-ly, adv.

ex-o-cra-ble (ek'sē-kṛā-bl), a. [L. execrabilis.] Deserving to be execrated; detestable; abominable; also, very bad, or wretched (as, an execrable pun).—ex'e-cra-ble-ness, n.—ex'e-cra-bly, adv.

ex-e-crate (ek'sē-kṛāt), v.; -crated, -crating. [L. execratus, pp. of execrari, for exsecrari, < ex-, out, + sacrare, consecrate, also declare accused: see sacre.] I. tr. To curse; imprecate evil upon; hence, to detest utterly; abhor; abominate. II. intr. To utter curses.—ex-e-cra'tion (-krā'shən), n. [L. execratio(n).] The act of execrating; imprecation of evil; the utterance of curses; utter detestation, or abhorrence; also, a curse or imprecation; also, a thing execrated (see Jer. xlv. 12).—ex'e-cra-tive (-krā-tiv), ex'e-cra-to-ry (-tō-rī), a. Pertaining to or of the nature of execration.—ex'e-cra-tor (-krā-tōr), n.

ex-e-cut-a-ble (ek'sē-kū-tā-bl), a. That may be executed.

ex-ec-u-tant (eg-zek'ū-tānt), n. [F. exécutant.] One who executes or performs; esp., a musical performer.

ex-e-cute (ek'sē-kūt), v.; -cuted, -cuting. [OF. executer

(F. exécuter, < L. executus, pp. of exequi, for exsequi, < ex-, out, + sequi, follow.) I. tr. To follow out or through to the end; carry into effect, as a purpose, plan, command, or order; accomplish; give effect or force to (a law, decree, judicial sentence, etc.); carry out the terms of (a will); also, to do (something planned, commanded, or ordered, or requiring skill or care); perform (an action, maneuver, feat, etc.); also, to produce in accordance with a plan or design (as, to execute a statue or a picture); render (a piece of music); also, to transact or carry through (a contract, mortgage, etc.) in the manner prescribed by law; complete and give validity to (a legal instrument) by fulfilling the legal requirements, as by signing, sealing, etc.; also, to fulfil or discharge, as an office or function; also, to inflict capital punishment on; put to death by form of law; rarely, to kill. II. intr. To execute or perform something; perform a piece of music.—ex'e-cut-er (-kū-tēr), n. One who executes.—ex-e-cu'tion (-kū'shən), n. [OF. exécution (F. exécution), < L. executio(n).] The act or process of executing, or the state or fact of being executed; mode or style of performance; technical skill, as in music; effective action, esp. of weapons (as, "His brandish'd steel, Which smok'd with bloody execution": Shakspeare's "Macbeth," i. 2. 18); destructive work or effect, as of guns in warfare; the infliction of capital punishment, or, formerly, of any legal punishment; in law, a judicial writ (writ of execution) directing the enforcement of a judgment.—ex-e-cu'tion-er, n. One who executes; esp., an official who inflicts capital punishment in pursuance of a legal warrant.

ex-ec-u-tive (eg-zek'ū-tiv), a. [Cf. F. exécutif.] Pertaining to or suited for executing or carrying into effect; charged with or pertaining to execution of laws or administration of affairs.—Executive Mansion [also l. c.], in the U. S., the official residence of the President at Washington (the "White House"), or of the governor of one of the States.—ex-ec'utive, n. The executive branch of a government; esp., the person or persons in whom the supreme executive power of a government is vested; also, any person or body charged with administrative work; also, a person skilled in such work.—ex-ec'u-tive-ly, adv.

ex-ec-u-tor (eg-zek'ū-tōr, in first sense now ek'sē-kū-tōr), n.

[OF. executor (F. exécuteur), < L. executor, < exequi: see execute.] One who executes, or carries out, performs, fulfils, etc.; specif., a person appointed by a testator (or by a court) to carry out the provisions of his will; also, an executioner† (see Shakspeare's "Henry V.," i. 2. 203).—ex-ec-u-to'ri-al (-tō'rī-āl), a.—ex-ec'u-tor-ship, n. The office of an executor.—ex-ec'u-to-ry (-tō-rī), a. Executive; also, in execution or operation; operative; in law, intended, or of such a nature as, to take effect on a future contingency.—ex-ec'u-trix (-triks), n.; pl. executrices or executrices (eg-zek'ū-trī'sēz). [ML.] A female executor.

ex-e-dra (ek'sē-drā or ek-sē-), n.; pl. -dræ (-drē). [L., < Gr. ἐξέδρα, < ἐξ, out of, + ἔδρα, seat.] In class. antiq., Exedra, Street of Tombs, Asoos, in the Troad (in north-western Asia Minor).

used for conversation, lectures, meetings, etc.; in modern arch., an outdoor seat or bench, usually of semicircular or nearly semicircular form, esp. one of considerable size and elaborateness.

ex-e-ge-sis (ek-sē-jē'sis), n.; pl. -geses (-jē'sēz). [NL., < Gr. ἐξήγησις, < ἐξηγεῖσθαι, explain, < ἐξ, out of, + ἡγεῖσθαι, lead.] Critical explanation or interpretation, esp. of Scripture; also, an explanatory note; a gloss.—ex'e-gete (-jēt), n. [Gr. ἐξηγητής.] One skilled in exegesis.—ex-e-get'ic, ex-e-get'i-cal (-jēt'ik, -i-kāl), a. [Gr. ἐξηγητικός.] Of or pertaining to exegesis; expository.—ex-e-get'i-cal-ly, adv.—ex-e-get'ics, n. The science of exegesis.

ex-em-plar (eg-zem'plār), n. [L. exemplar, < exemplum: see example.] A model or pattern to be copied or imitated (variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ˊ, primary accent; ˋ, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

(as, "He is indeed the perfect exemplar of all nobleness": Jane Porter's "Scottish Chiefs," xxxviii.); also, the model or original after which something is made; also, an instance or example; often, a typical instance; a specimen; also, a copy of a book, etc.

ex-em-pla-ry (ek'sem-plā-ri or eg-zem'plā-ri), a. [LL. exemplaris, < L. exemplum: see example.] Serving for a model or pattern; hence, worthy of imitation (as, "Her exemplary conduct is cried up as without a parallel": Malkin's tr. Le Sage's "Gil Blas," vii. 7); commendable; also, such as may serve for a warning, as punishment, a penalty, etc.; also, serving for an illustration or specimen; illustrative; typical. — ex'em-pla-ri-ly, adv. — ex'em-pla-ri-ness, n.

ex-em-pli-fi-ca-tion (eg-zem'pli-fi-kā'shən), n. [ML. exemplificatio(n).] The act of exemplifying; also, that which exemplifies; an illustration or example; also, an attested copy of a document, under official seal. — ex-em'pli-fi-ca-tive (-kā-tiv), a. Serving to exemplify.

ex-em-pli-fy (eg-zem'pli-fi), v. t.; -fied, -fying. [ML. exemplificare, < L. exemplum, example, + facere, make.] To show or illustrate by example; furnish, or serve as, an example of; also, to transcribe or copy; make an attested copy of (a document) under seal. — ex-em'pli-fi-er (-fi-ēr), n.

ex-empt (eg-zempt'), [L. exemptus, pp. of eximere, take out, release, deliver, < ex, out of, + emere, take, buy.] I. a. Taken away† or removed† (as, "And thus our life exempt from public haunt Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks": Shakspeare's "As You Like It," ii. 1. 15); also, excepted†; also, released from, or not subject to, an obligation, liability, etc. II. n. One who is exempt from, or not subject to, an obligation, duty, etc.; also, an exon. — ex-empt', v. t. To take out or away†; remove†; also, to except†; also, to free from an obligation or liability to which others are subject; grant immunity to; dispense. — ex-emption (eg-zemp'shən), n. [L. exemptio(n), < eximere.] The act of exempting, or the state of being exempted; dispensation; immunity.

ex-en-to-rato (ek-sen'tē-rāt), v. t.; -rated, -rating. [L. enteratus, pp. of enterare, < Gr. ἐξ, out of, + ἔντερον, intestine.] To disembowel; eviscerate. — ex-en-to-ra'tion (-rā'shən), n.

ex-e-qua-tur (ek-sē-kwā'tēr), n. [L., 'let him execute.'] A written recognition of a consul or commercial agent by the government to which he is accredited, authorizing him to exercise his powers; also, an authorization granted by a secular ruler for the publication of papal bulls or other ecclesiastical enactments.

ex-e-quy (ek'sē-kwī), n.; pl. -quies (-kwiz). [L. exequi, pl., < exequi, exsequi, follow out: see execute.] A funeral rite or ceremony; also, a funeral procession: now only in pl.

ex-er-cis-a-ble (ek'sēr-sī-zā-bl), a. Capable of being exercised.

ex-er-cise (ek'sēr-sīz), n. [OF. F. exercice, < L. exercitium, < exercere, drive on, keep active or busy, < ex, out, + arcere, keep.] A putting into action, use, operation, or effect; the state of being in use or operation; use; practice; performance; also, bodily or mental exertion for the sake of training or improvement; also, that which affords practice or training; something done or performed as a means of practice or training, or as an exhibition or test of proficiency; also, a performance, procedure, or ceremony (as, graduating exercises); specif., a religious observance or service. — ex'er-cise, v.; -cised, -cising. I. tr. To put (faculties, powers, rights, skill, etc.) into action, practice, or use; exert (authority, influence, etc.); use (an instrument, weapon, etc.)†; employ or busy (a person: used reflexively or in the passive); put through exercises, or forms of practice or exertion, designed to train, develop, keep in due condition, etc. (as, to exercise troops; to exercise a horse; to exercise the limbs, voice, or mind); also, to occupy the attention of; tax the powers of; hence, to perturb or worry (as, to be much exercised about one's health); also, to perform or discharge (functions, etc.); do or practice acts of (justice, severity, oppression, etc.); use or display (care, caution, forbearance, etc.) in one's action or procedure. II. intr. To go through exercises; take bodily exercise. — ex'er-cis-er (-sī-zēr), n.

ex-er-ci-ta-tion (eg-zēr-sī-tā'shən), n. [L. exercitatio(n), < exercitare, exercise diligently, practise, freq. of exercere: see exercise.] Exercise or exertion, as of faculties or powers; also, practice or training; also, an exercise or performance; also, an exercise, or display of skill; esp., a disquisition or discourse.

ex-ergue (eg-zèrg' or ek'sèrg), n. [F., < Gr. ἐξ, out of, + ἐργον, work.] In numis., the small space below the main device on the reverse of a coin or medal; anything inscribed in this space (as, "stamped upon memory in lines as vivid, as deep, and as durable as the exergues of the Carthaginian medals": Poe's "William Wilson"). — ex-ergual (eg-zèrg'al or ek-sèr'-), a.

ex-ert (eg-zèrt'), v. t. [L. exertus, pp. of exerere, for exserere, put forth, < ex, out of, + serere, join.] To thrust forth†; also, to exhibit† or reveal†; also, to put forth, as power; exercise, as ability or influence; put into vigorous action. — to exert one's self, to put forth one's powers; use one's efforts; strive. — ex-er-tion (eg-zèr'shən), n. The act of exerting; exercise, as of power or faculties, or an instance of this; esp., vigorous action, or effort; an effort. — ex-er'tive, a. Having power or tendency to cause exertion.

ex-e-unt (ek'sē-unt). [L.] 'They (or the persons named) go out': used in the text of plays, with reference to actors. Cf. exit. — exeunt omnes (om'nēz). [L.] 'All go out.'

ex-fo-li-ato (eks-fō'li-āt), v.; -ated, -ating. [LL. exfoliatus, pp. of exfoliare, < L. ex-priv. (see ex-) + folium, leaf.] I. intr. To throw off scales; come off in scales; split into scales, or become scaly at the surface, as minerals. II. tr. To throw off in scales; also, to remove the surface of (a bone, etc.) in scales or laminae. — ex-fo-li-a'tion (-ā'shən), n. The act or process of exfoliating; the state of being exfoliated; also, that which is exfoliated, or scaled off. — ex-fo-li-a-tive (-ā-tiv), a. Having power or tendency to cause exfoliation.

ex-hal-a-ble (eks-hā'la-bl), a. Capable of being exhaled.

ex-hal-ant (eks-hā'lant), a. Exhaling; emitting.

ex-ha-la-tion (eks-hā-lā'shən), n. [L. exhalatio(n).] The act of exhaling; also, that which is exhaled; a vapor; an emanation; an effluvium; also, a body or portion of vapor†; a meteor†.

ex-hale (eks-hāl'), v.; -haled, -haling. [L. exhalare, < ex, out of, + halare, breathe.] I. tr. To breathe out; emit (vapor, etc.); also, to give off as vapor; also, to draw out as a vapor or effluence; evaporate. II. intr. To emit breath or vapor; also, to pass off as vapor (as, "Thy clear fount Exhales in mists to heaven": Keats's "Endymion," ii.); pass off as an effluence. — ex-hale'ment, n.

ex-haust (eg-zāst'), v. [L. exhaustus, pp. of exhaurire, < ex, out of, + haurire, draw, drain.] I. tr. To draw out or drain off; draw or drain off completely; hence, to use up or consume completely; expend the whole of; also, to empty by drawing out the contents; specif., to create a vacuum in; also, to deprive of ingredients by the use of solvents, as a drug; also, to deprive wholly of useful or essential properties, as soil; drain of possessions, resources, etc., as a person or a country; drain of strength or energy, wear out, or fatigue greatly, as a person; also, to draw out all that is essential in (a subject, topic, etc.); treat or study thoroughly. II. intr. To pass out or escape, as spent steam from the cylinder of an engine; also, to discharge contents (as, an engine which exhausts directly into the air).

— ex-haust', n. In engin., etc., the act or process of exhausting, as the drawing off of air from a vessel, etc.; the escape of the spent steam or working fluid from the cylinder of an engine after completing its work; also, an exhausting apparatus, as a pump for removing air from a building; also, a passage through which exhausted material, as spent steam, escapes; also, exhausted material, as spent steam. — ex-haust'ed-ly, adv. — ex-haust'er, n. — ex-haust'i-ble, a. That may be exhausted. — ex-haust'ing-ly, adv. — ex-haus-tion (eg-zās'chən), n. The act or process of exhausting, or the state of being exhausted; esp., extreme weakness or fatigue. — ex-haus'tive, a. Tending to exhaust or drain, as of resources or strength; also, exhausting a subject, topic, etc.; comprehensive; thorough. — ex-haus'tive-ly, adv. — ex-haus'tive-ness, n. — ex-haust'less, a. Inexhaustible. — ex-haust=steam, n. Steam which has

fat, fāte, fār, fāll, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

performed its work, as that allowed to escape from the cylinder of a steam-engine after it has moved the piston.

ex-he-dra (ek'sē-drā or ek-sē'), n. See exedra.

ex-her-e-date (eks-her'ē-dāt), v. t.; -dated, -dating. [L. exheredatus, pp. of exheredare, < ex-, out, + heres, heir.] To disinherit. — ex-her-e-da'tion (-dā'shən), n.

ex-hib-it (eg-zib'it), v. [L. exhibitus, pp. of exhibere, < ex-, out, + habere, have, hold.] I. tr. To hold forth, offer, or present; provide or furnish; administer (a remedy, etc.); also, to offer or expose to view; present for inspection; submit (a document, etc.) in evidence in a court of law; present (a petition, charge, etc.) for consideration; set forth or represent in words, figures, etc.; manifest or display (as, to exhibit anger); place on show (as, to exhibit paintings). II. intr. To provide maintenance; also, to make or give an exhibition; present something to public view. — ex-hib'it, n. An exhibiting or exhibition; also, that which is exhibited; a document or other object exhibited in court and referred to and identified in written evidence; an object or a collection of objects shown in an exhibition, fair, etc. — ex-hib'it-a-ble, a. That may be exhibited. — ex-hi-bi-tion (ek-sibish'on), n. [L. exhibitio(n)-.] Maintenance or support; an allowance of money for maintenance; an allowance given to a student in an English college or university, usually upon the result of a competitive examination; also, administration, as of a remedy; also, an exhibiting, showing, or presenting to view; a show; a display; esp., a public display, as of works of art, manufactures, etc., or of feats of skill, etc. — ex-hi-bi'tion-al, a. — ex-hi-bi'tion-er, n. One who provides maintenance; a student who receives an exhibition or allowance at an English college or university; also, an exhibitor. — ex-hi-bi'tion-ism, n. The making or giving of exhibitions; specif., in pathol., a form of sexual perversion marked by the practice of making indecent exposure of the person. — ex-hi-bi'tion-ist, n. One who gives, or takes part in, exhibitions; one characterized by a desire to make an exhibition of himself or his powers, personality, etc.; specif., in pathol., one affected with exhibitionism. — ex-hi-bi'tion-ist-ic, a. — ex-hib-i-tive (eg-zib'i-tiv), a. Serving for exhibition; tending to exhibit. — ex-hib'i-tor, n. — ex-hib'i-to-ry (-tō-ri), a. Pertaining to or intended for exhibition or display.

ex-hil-a-rant (eg-zil'a-rant). I. a. Exhilarating. II. n. Something that exhilarates.

ex-hil-a-rate (eg-zil'a-rāt), v. t.; -rated, -rating. [L. exhilaratus, pp. of exhilarare, < ex-, utterly, + hilaris, cheerful: see hilarious.] To make cheerful or merry; cheer; enliven. — ex-hil'a-rat-ing-ly, adv. — ex-hil-a-ra'tion (-rā'shən), n. [LL. exhilaratio(n)-.] The act of exhilarating; exhilarated condition or feeling. — ex-hil'a-ra-tive (-rā-tiv), a. — ex-hil'a-ra-to-ry (-tō-ri), a. Tending to exhilarate. — ex-hil'a-ra-tor (-rā-tor), n.

ex-hor-tate (eg-zōrt'), v. [L. exhortari, < ex-, out, + hortari, urge.] I. tr. To urge, advise, or caution (a person, audience, etc.) earnestly, esp. in a formal manner, as to conduct (often with to or an infinitive or clause); admonish urgently; also, to recommend (something) earnestly (as, "designing or exhorting glorious war": Milton's "Paradise Lost," ii. 179).

II. intr. To make exhortation; give admonition: as, "With many other words did he testify and exhort" (Acts, ii. 40). — ex-hor-ta-tion (ek-sōr-tā'shən), n. [L. exhortatio(n)-.] The act or process of exhorting; urgent advice or admonition as to conduct; an utterance, discourse, or formal address conveying urgent advice or recommendations. — ex-hor-ta-tive (eg-zōrt'ā-tiv), a. — ex-hor'ta-to-ry (-tō-ri), a. Serving or intended to exhort; of or pertaining to exhortation. — ex-hort'er, n. One who exhorts; specif., a person appointed to deliver religious exhortations.

ex-hume (eks-hūm'), v. t.; -humed, -huming. [ML. exhumare, < L. ex, out of, + humus, earth, ground.] To dig (something buried, esp. a dead body) out of the earth; disinter. — ex-hu-ma-tion (eks-hū-mā'shən), n. — ex-hum'er (-hū'mēr), n.

ex-i-geant (eg-zē-zhān), a. [F., ppr. of exiger, < L. exigere: see exact.] Exacting. — ex-i-geante (-zhānt), a. Fem. of exigeant.

ex-i-gen-cy, ex-i-gence (ek'si-jen-si, -jens), n.; pl. -gencies (-jen-siz), -gences (-jen-sez). Exigent state or character; urgency; also, a case or situation which demands prompt action or remedy; an emergency; also, a circumstance or feature of a case, occasion, etc., that renders prompt action necessary; a need, demand, or requirement (now commonly in pl.).

ex-i-gent (ek'si-jent), a. [L. exigens (-ent-), ppr. of exigere: see exact.] Requiring immediate action or aid; urgent; pressing; sometimes, making demand (of: as, "But now this body, exigent of rest, Will needs put in a claim," Sir H. Taylor's "Philip van Artevelde," ii. 1. 2); also, requiring a great deal, or more than is reasonable; exacting. — ex-i-gent-ly, adv.

ex-i-gi-ble (ek'si-jī-bl), a. [L. exigere: see exact.] That may be exacted; requirable.

ex-ig-u-ous (eg-zig'ū-us), a. [L. exiguus, < exigere, measure: see exact.] Scanty; small; slender; diminutive. — ex-i-gu-i-ty (ek-si-gū'i-ti), ex-ig'u-ous-ness, n.

ex-ile¹ (ek'sil), a. [L. exilis; origin uncertain.] Thin; slender; meager; poor; also, fine-spun; overrefined. [Archaic.]

ex-ile² (ek'sil), n. [OF. F. exil, < L. exilium, exsilium, banishment, akin to exul, exsul, banished person; perhaps < ex-, out, + salire, leap.] Expulsion from one's native land by authoritative decree; the fact or state of being banished; banishment; hence, prolonged separation from one's country or home, as by stress of circumstances; also, a person banished from his native land; hence, any one separated from his country or home. — the Exile, the Babylonian captivity of the Jews in the 6th century B.C. — ex-ile², v. t.; -iled, -iling. [OF. exilier (F. exiler), < ML. exiliare, < L. exilium.] To expel or banish (a person) from his country; expatriate; hence, to separate from country, home, etc. — ex-ile-ment, n. — ex-il-i-an (eg-zil'i-an or ek-sil'-), ex-il'ic, a. Pertaining to exile, as that of the Jews in Babylon. — ex-il-i-ty (eg-zil'i-ti), n. [See *exile*¹.] Thinness; meagerness; tenuity; subtlety. [Archaic.]

ex-im-i-ous (eg-zim'i-us), a. [L. eximius, < eximere, take out: see exempt.] Distinguished; eminent; excellent. [Now rare.]

ex-in-an-i-tion (eg-zin-a-nish'on), n. [L. exinanitio(n)-, < exinanire, empty out, < ex, out of, + inanire: see inani-tion.] A complete emptying; exhaustion or enfeeblement as from being emptied; abasement or humiliation.

ex-ist (eg-zist'), v. i. [L. existere, for existere, stand forth, arise, be, < ex-, out, + sistere, stand.] To have actual being; be; also, to have being in a specified place or under certain conditions; be found; occur; also, to have life or animation; live; also, to continue to be or to live. — ex-ist'ence, n. The state or fact of existing; being; life; continuance in being or life (as, a struggle for existence); also, mode of existing (as, "Other existences there are, that clash with ours": M. Arnold's "Empedocles on Etna," i. 2); also, all that exists; also, something that exists, an entity, or a being (as, "all the fair Existences of heaven": Keats's "Hyperion," ii.). — ex-ist'ent. I. a. Existing; having existence; sometimes, esp., now existing; of the present time. II. n. Something that exists. — ex-is-ten-tial (ek-sis-ten'shəl), a. Pertaining to existence. — ex-ist'er, n.

ex-it (ek'sit). [L.] 'He (or she, or the person named) goes out': used in the text of plays, with reference to an actor. Cf. exeunt. — ex'it, n. The departure of a player from the stage; hence, any departure, or any passing out or away; sometimes, death; also, opportunity to pass out; also, a way or passage out; an outlet.

ex-li-bris (eks li'bris). [L., 'from the books.'] From the library (of): a phrase inscribed in or on a book, before the name of the owner. — ex-li'bris, n.; pl. -bris. An inscription or device in or on a book, to indicate the owner; a book-plate. — ex-li'brism, n. The collecting of book-plates. — ex-li'brist, n.

exo-, ex-. Forms of Gr. ἐξω, outside, without, used in combination.

ex-o-carp (ek'sō-kārp), n. [See exo- and -carp.] In bot., the epicarp.

ex-o-dus (ek'sō-dus), n. [LL., < Gr. ἐξόδος, < ἐξ, out of, + ὁδός, way.] A going out; a departure or emigration, usually of a large number of people; [often cap.] the departure of the Israelites from Egypt under Moses; [cap.] the second book of the Old Testament, containing an account of this departure.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

ex of-fi-ci-o (eks ô-fish'i-ô). [L., 'from office.'] By virtue of office or official position: a phrase also used adjectively (as, ex officio authority).

ex-og-a-mous (ek-sog'a-mus), a. [See exo- and -gamous.]

Marrying customarily outside of the tribe; pertaining to such marriage: opposed to endogamous.—ex-og'a-my, n.

ex-o-gen (ek'sô-jen), n. [F. exogène: see exo- and -gen.]

In bot., any plant of the obsolete class Exogenæ, including the dicotyledons, whose stems grow by successive concentric layers on the outside: opposed to endogen.—ex-og-e-nous (ek-soj'e-nus), a. Growing by additions on the outside; in bot., belonging to the exogens; of plants, as the dicotyledons, having stems which grow by the addition of an annual layer of wood to the outside beneath the constantly widening bark; pertaining to plants having such stems.

Parts of an Exogen.

—ex-og'e-nous-ly, adv.

ex-on (ek'son), n. [Earlier exant, for exempt: cf. F. exempt, subordinate officer (exempt from ordinary service).] In England, each of four officers (orig. corporals) of the yeomen of the royal bodyguard who in turn command in the absence of their superior officers.

ex-on-er-ate (eg-zon'g-rât), v. t.; —ated, —ating. [L. exoneratus, pp. of exonerare, < ex- priv. (see ex-) + onus (oner-), burden.] To remove a burden from (obs. or rare); fig., to relieve, as from an obligation, duty, or task; now, usually, to clear, as of a charge; free from blame; exculpate.—ex-on-er-a'tion (g-râ'shon), n. [LL. exoneratio(n-).] The act of exonerating, or the state of being exonerated.—ex-on'er-a-tive (g-râ-tiv), a.—ex-on'er-a-tor (g-râ-tor), n.

ex-o-path-ic (ek-sô-path'ik), a. [Gr. ἔξω, outside, + παθεῖν, suffer.] In pathol., pertaining to or resulting from pathogenic factors external to the organism, as a disease.

ex-oph-thal-mi-a (ek-sof-thal'mi-ä), n. [NL., < Gr. ἐξοφθαλμος, with prominent eyes, < ἔξω, out, + ὀφθαλμός, eye.] In pathol., protrusion of the eyeball from the orbit, caused by disease.—ex-oph-thal'mic, a.

ex-o-ra-ble (ek'sô-râ-bl), a. [L. exorabilis, < exorare, persuade by entreaty, < ex-, out, + orare, pray.] Susceptible of being persuaded or moved by entreaty. Cf. inexorable.—ex'o-ra-bil'i-ty (bil'i-ti), n.

ex-or-bi-tant (eg-zôr'bi-tant), a. [LL. exorbitans (-ant-), ppr. of exorbitare, go out of the track, < L. ex, out of, + orbita, track, E. orbit.] Deviating from the right or usual path, course, or rule; hence, exceeding the bounds of custom, propriety, or reason, esp. in amount or extent; in law, being outside of the intended scope of the law; anomalous.—ex-or'bi-tance, ex-or'bi-tan-cy, n.—ex-or'bi-tant-ly, adv.

ex-or-cise (ek'sôr-siz), v. t.; —cised, —cising. [LL. exorcizare, < Gr. ἐξορκίζειν, < ἔξω, out of, + ὀρκίζειν, adjure, < ὅρκος, oath.] To seek to expel (an evil spirit) by adjuration or religious or solemn ceremonies; expel by or as by such means (as, "I . . . wandered up and down, like an exorcised spirit that had been driven from its old haunts": Hawthorne's "Blithedale Romance," xxiii.); also, to seek to deliver, or deliver, thus from evil spirits or malignant influences; also, to adjure, conjure, or conjure up (a spirit).—ex'or-cise-ment, n. The act of exorcising; exorcism.—ex'or-cis-er (-sî-zér), n.—ex'or-cism (-sizm), n. [LL. exorcismus, < Gr. ἐξορκισμός.] The act or process of exorcising; the ceremony or the formula used.—ex'or-cist, n. [LL. exorcista, < Gr. ἐξορκιστής.] One who exorcises; in the Rom. Cath. Ch., a member of the second of the minor orders, next below that of acolyte.—ex-or-cis'tic, a.

ex'or-cize, etc. See exorcise, etc.

ex-or-di-um (eg-zôr'di-um), n.; pl. -di-ums or -dia (-di-ä). [L., < exordiri, lay a warp, < ex-, out, + ordiri, begin to weave.] The beginning of anything; esp., the introductory part of a discourse, treatise, etc.—ex-or'di-al, a.

ex-o-skel-e-ton (ek-sô-skel'g-ton), n. [See exo-.] In anat., an external protective covering or integument, esp. when hard, as the shell of crustaceans, the carapace of turtles, the scales and plates of fishes, etc.: opposed to endoskeleton. See cut at endoskeleton.

ex-os-mo-sis, ex-os-mose (ek-sos-mô'sis or ek-soz-, ek'sos-môs or ek'soz-), n. [See exo-.] Osmosis from within outward; in the phenomena of osmosis, the action or flow of that fluid which passes with the lesser rapidity into the other: opposed to endosmosis.—ex-os-mot'ic (-mot'ik), a.

ex-os-to-sis (ek-sos-tô'sis), n.; pl. -toses (-tô'sēz). [NL., < Gr. ἐξόστωσις, < ἔξω, out of, + ὀστέον, bone.] In pathol., the morbid formation of bone, or a morbid bony growth, on a bone.

ex-o-ter-ic (ek-sô-ter'ik). [L. exotericus, < Gr. ἐξωτερικὸς, < ἐξωτέρω, compar. of ἔξω, outside: see exotic.] I. a. Pertaining to the outside; external; also, not belonging or pertaining to the inner or select circle, as of disciples; communicated to or suitable for the general body of disciples or the general public, as a doctrine; hence, popular; simple; commonplace. Cf. esoteric. II. n. An exoteric doctrine (usually in pl.); also, an uninitiated person; an outsider.—ex-o-ter'i-cal, a. Exoteric.—ex-o-ter'i-cal-ly, adv.

ex-o-the-ci-um (ek-sô-thē'shi-um), n.; pl. -cia (-shi-ä). [NL., < Gr. ἔξω, outside, + θήκη, case.] In bot., the outer covering of an anther.

ex-o-ther-mic (ek-sô-thēr'mik), a. [Gr. ἔξω, outside, + θερμῶν, heat.] Noting or pertaining to a chemical change which is accompanied by a liberation of heat: opposed to endothermic.

ex-ot-ic (eg-zot'ik). [L. exoticus, < Gr. ἐξωτικός, < ἔξω, outside, < ἔξω, out of.] I. a. Of foreign origin or character; not native; introduced from abroad, but not fully naturalized or acclimatized. II. n. Anything exotic, as a plant.—ex-ot'i-cal-ly, adv.—ex-ot'i-cism (-sizm), n. Tendency to adopt what is exotic; also, exotic quality or character; anything exotic, as a foreign word or idiom.—ex-ot'i-cist, n.

ex-pand (eks-pand'), v. [L. expandere (pp. expansus), < ex-, out, + pandere, spread, extend.] I. tr. To spread out, or unfold (as, "Expand thy sails . . . and catch the nimble gales": Pope's tr. Homer's "Odyssey," xii.); spread out to view, or display (as, a great stretch of country lay expanded below him); also, to express in fuller form or greater detail; develop, as a statement; also, to increase in extent, size, volume, etc.; dilate; distend; enlarge; make broader in scope, or more comprehensive. II. intr. To spread out; unfold; develop; also, to increase in extent, bulk, etc.; become dilated or enlarged; increase in scope.—ex-pand'ed, p. a. Spread out; extended; also, increased in area, bulk, or volume; enlarged.—expanded type, a kind of type somewhat wider than is usual for its height. See type.—ex-pand'er, n.—ex-pand'ing-ly, adv.

ex-panse (eks-pans'), n. [L. expansum, neut. of expansus, pp. of expandere: see expand.] That which is expanded; an uninterrupted space or area, esp. one of considerable extent; a wide extent of anything; also, expansion or extension.

ex-pan-si-ble (eks-pan'si-bl), a. [Cf. F. expansible.] Capable of being expanded.

ex-pan-sile (eks-pan'sil), a. Capable of expanding; such as to expand; pertaining to expansion.

ex-pan-sion (eks-pan'shon), n. [LL. expansio(n-).] The act of expanding, or the state of being expanded; spreading out; increase in size, volume, etc.; dilatation; distention; enlargement; also, the amount or degree of expanding; also, anything spread out; an expanse; also, an expanded, dilated, or enlarged portion or form of a thing; in math., the development at length of an expression indicated in a contracted form.—ex-pan'sion-ism, n. A policy of expansion, as of territory or currency.—ex-pan'sion-ist, n.

ex-pan-sive (eks-pan'siv), a. Tending to cause expansion (as, the expansive force of heat); tending to expand, or capable of expanding (as, "No more The expansive atmosphere is cramped with cold": Thomson's "Seasons," Spring, 28); pertaining to or characterized by expansion; fig., effusive, as persons, feelings, or utterance; also, expanding over a large area; extensive; having a wide range; comprehensive. — ex-pan'sive-ly, adv. — ex-pan'sive-ness, n.

fat, fâte, fâr, fâll, fâsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, nôre; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, ðlect, agôny, intô, ûnite; (obscured) errant, operâ, ardant, actor, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

ex par-te (eks pār'tē). [L., 'from a part.'] From or on one side only, as in a controversy or suit; in the interest of one party: a phrase also used adjectively (as, ex-parte testimony).

ex-pa-ti-ate (eks-pā'shi-āt), v.; -ated, -ating. [L. expatiatus, pp. of expatiari, for expatiari, < ex-, out, + spatiari, walk about, < spatium, E. space.] I. intr. To move or wander about without restraint; also, to enlarge in discourse or writing (as, "With some forbearance . . . the beauty of the prospect was not expatiated upon by the obsequious landlord": Marryat's "King's Own," ix.); be copious in description or discussion. II. tr. To expand; develop. [Obs. or rare.] — ex-pa-ti-a'tion (-ā'shən), n. — ex-pa'ti-a-tor, n.

ex-pa-tri-ate (eks-pā'tri-āt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [ML. expatriatus, pp. of expatriare, < L. ex-, out of, + patria, fatherland: see patrial.] To banish (a person) from his native country; also, to withdraw (one's self) from residence in one's native country; esp., to withdraw (one's self) from citizenship in one country to become a citizen of another. — ex-pa'tri-ate. I. a. Expatriated. II. n. An expatriated person. — ex-pa-tri-a'tion (-ā'shən), n.

ex-pect (eks-pekt'), v. [L. expectare, for expectare, < ex-, out, + spectare, look at or to: see spectacle.] I. tr. To await or wait for; also, to look forward to in thought; regard as likely to happen; anticipate the occurrence or the coming of; sometimes, to look for with reason or justification (as, we cannot be expected to submit to such treatment); count upon as due or right (as, to do more than is expected of one); require expectantly (as, to expect obedience); also, to suppose or surmise (colloq.). II.† intr. To wait. — ex-pect'ance, ex-pect'an-cy, n.; pl. -ances (-an-sez), -ancies (-an-siz). The act or state of expecting, or the state of being expected; expectation; also, an object of expectation; something expected. — ex-pect'ant. I. a. Expecting; having expectations; also, characterized by expectation; also, expected or anticipated. II. n. One who expects; one who waits in expectation. — ex-pect'ant-ly, adv. — ex-pec-ta'tion (-pek-tā'shən), n. [L. expectatio (n.).] The act or state of expecting, or the state of being expected (as, to wait in expectation; a sum of money in expectation); anticipation; a preconceived idea about what will take place; expectant mental attitude; also, ground for expecting something; a prospect of future good or profit (as, "I have a devilish rich uncle . . . from whom I have the greatest expectations": Sheridan's "School for Scandal," iii. 3); also, something expected; a thing looked forward to; also, the degree of probability of the occurrence of something or of the receiving of something. — expectation of life, the duration of life which may be expected by persons who have reached a particular age, being the average age at which persons who have lived beyond it have died, as shown by mortality tables. — ex-pec'ta-tive (-tā-tiv), a. Of or pertaining to expectation; characterized by expectation. — ex-pect'er, n. — ex-pect'ing-ly, adv.

ex-pec-to-rant (eks-pek'tō-rant). I. a. Promoting expectation. II. n. An expectorant medicine.

ex-pec-to-rate (eks-pek'tō-rāt), v.; -rated, -rating. [L. expectoratus, pp. of expectorare, < ex-, out of, + pectus (pector-), breast.] I. tr. To eject or expel (phlegm, etc.) from the throat or lungs by coughing or hawking and spitting; spit. II. intr. To spit. — ex-pec-to-ra'tion (-rā'shən), n. The act of expectorating; the ejection of phlegm or mucus from the throat or lungs by coughing, etc. — ex-pec-to-ra-tor, n.

ex-pe-di-ence (eks-pē'di-əns), n. [ML. expedientia, < L. expediens: see expedient.] The quality of being expedient; expediency; also, expedition or despatch (as, "The French . . . will with all expedience charge on us": Shakspeare's "Henry V.," iv. 3. 70); an expedition or enterprise (as, "I shall break The cause of our expedience to the queen, And get her leave to part": Shakspeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," i. 2. 185). — ex-pe'di-en-cy (-ən-si), n.; pl. -cies (-siz). The quality of being expedient; advantageousness; advisability; also, regard for what is expedient; prudential wisdom; policy; also, something expedient.

ex-pe-di-ent (eks-pē'di-ənt). [L. expediens (-ent-), pp. of expedire: see expedite.] I. a. Conducive to some end or result (as, measures expedient for the public welfare); advantageous or advisable under the circumstances (as, "All things are lawful unto me, but all things are not expedient": 1 Cor. vi. 12); sometimes, conducive to advantage or interest, as opposed to right (as, "too fond of the right to pursue the expedient": Goldsmith's "Retaliation," 40); of persons, acting in accordance with expediency; also, expeditious (as, "Expedient manage must be made": Shakspeare's "Richard II.," i. 4. 39). II. n. A means to an end; a means devised or employed in an exigency; a resource; a shift.

ex-pe-di-en-tial (eks-pē'di-en'shəl), a. Pertaining to or regulated by expediency. — ex-pe-di-en'tial-ly, adv.

ex-pe-di-ent-ly (eks-pē'di-ənt-li), adv. In an expedient manner; as may be expedient.

ex-pe-dite (eks-pē'dit), v. t.; -dited, -diting. [L. expeditus, pp. of expedire, extricate, help forward, send off or despatch, orig. 'free the feet of,' < ex-, out of, + pes (ped-), foot: cf. impede.] To facilitate the motion or progress of; hasten; also, to accomplish promptly, as a piece of business; despatch; also, to issue officially, as a document. — ex-pe-dit'er (-di-tēr), n. — ex-pe-di'tion (-dish'ən), n. [L. expeditio (n.).] The act of expediting; promptness or speed in accomplishing something; despatch; haste; also, an excursion, journey, or voyage made for some specific purpose, as of war or exploration; the body of persons or ships, etc., engaged in it. — ex-pe-di'tion-a-ry (-ā-ri), a. Pertaining to or composing an expedition: as, an expeditionary force. — ex-pe-di'tious (-dish'us), a. Characterized by expedition or prompt despatch; quick. — ex-pe-di'tious-ly, adv. — ex-pe-di'tious-ness, n.

ex-pel (eks-pel'), v. t.; -pelled, -pelling. [L. expellere (pp. expulsus), < ex-, out of, + pellere, drive.] To drive or force out or away; discharge or eject (as, to expel air from the lungs); compel to depart from a place (as, to expel a traitor or an invader from a country); also, to cut off from membership or relations (as, to expel a member from a club; to expel a student from a college). — ex-pel'la-ble, a. That may be expelled. — ex-pel'lent, ex-pel'lant. I. a. Expelling; serving to expel. II. n. An expellent medicine. — ex-pel'ler, n.

ex-pend (eks-pend'), v. t. [L. expendere (pp. expensus), weigh out, pay out, < ex-, out, + pendere, weigh.] To pay out; disburse; spend; also, to consume by use; use up. — ex-pend'a-ble, a. That may be expended. — ex-pend'er, n. — ex-pen-di-ture (-pen'di-tūr), n. The act of expending; disbursement; consumption; also, that which is expended; expense.

ex-pense (eks-pens'), n. [ML. expensa, prop. fem. of L. expensus, pp.: see expend.] The act of expending; expenditure; occasionally, undue expenditure; extravagance; also, that which is expended; an outlay, esp. of money; also, cost or charge; loss or injury due to any detracting cause (preceded by at: as, quantity at the expense of quality); pl., charges incurred by a person in the execution of an undertaking or commission; also, money paid to a person to reimburse him for such charges (as, to receive a salary and expenses); sing., a cause or occasion of expenditure. — ex-pen'sive (-pen'siv), a. Entailing great expense; costly. — ex-pen'sive-ly, adv. — ex-pen'sive-ness, n.

ex-pe-ri-ence (eks-pē'ri-əns), n. [OF. experience (F. expérience), < L. experientia, < experiens (-ent-), pp. of experiri (pp. expertus), try, undergo, < ex-, out, + per-, occurring also in peritus, experienced, skilled: see fare.] Trial or testing; an experiment; proof derived from trial; also, the process or fact of personally observing, encountering, or undergoing something (as, to have had experience of a person's ways, or of the business world; long experience in teaching or with pupils); a particular instance of personally encountering or undergoing something (as, to have a strange experience); sometimes, a process of feeling forming a part of one's spiritual or religious life; also, the observing, encountering, or undergoing of things generally as they occur in the course of time (as, to learn wisdom from experience; things beyond the range of human experience); also, knowledge or practical wisdom gained from what one has observed, encountered, or undergone (as, men of ripe experience). —ex-pe'-ri-ence, v. t.; -enced, -encing. To test† or try†; also, to have experience of; meet with; undergo; feel; sometimes, to learn by experience; also, to give experience to, or teach by experience (now chiefly or only in pp.). —to experience religion, to become converted to religion; as, "He promised his mother, if she would not whip him, he would experience religion" (Longfellow's "Kavanaugh," xii.). [Colloq., U. S.] —ex-pe'-ri-enced, p. a. Taught by or having experience; wise or skillful through experience. —ex-pe'-ri-ence-less, a. Without experience. —ex-pe'-ri-en-cer, n. —ex-pe'-ri-en'-tial (-en'shəl), a. Pertaining to or derived from experience. —ex-pe'-ri-en'-tial-ly, adv.

ex-per-i-ment (eks-per'i-ment), n. [OF. experiment, < L. experimentum, < experiri, try: see experience.] A test or trial; a tentative procedure; an act or operation for the purpose of discovering something unknown or testing a principle, supposition, etc.; also, the conducting of such operations; experimentation; also, experience†. —ex-per-i-ment station, an establishment in which experiments in a particular line of research or activity, as agriculture or mining, are systematically carried on. —ex-per'i-ment (-ment), v. i. To make experiment or experiments. —ex-per-i-men'-tal (-men'təl), a. Pertaining to, derived from, or founded on experiment (as, experimental philosophy); also, of the nature of an experiment; tentative; also, based on or derived from experience (as, experimental religion); empirical. —ex-per-i-men'-tal-ist, n. One who makes experiments. —ex-per-i-men'-tal-ize, v. i.; -ized, -izing. To make experiments; as, "hired . . . to go into fits and be experimentalized upon . . . or to do something or other to promote the great science of medicine" (Dickens's "Pickwick Papers," xlviii.). —ex-per-i-men'-tal-ly, adv. —ex-per'i-men'-ta'-tion (-tā'shən), n. The act or practice of experimenting. —ex-per'i-ment-er, n.

ex-pert (eks-pert'), a. [OF. F. expert, < L. expertus, pp. of experiri, try: see experience.] Taught or trained by experience; practised; skillful; skilled; also, of or pertaining to an expert (as, expert testimony). —ex'pert, n. One who is expert; an authority; a specialist. —ex-pert'ly, adv. —ex-pert'ness, n.

ex-pi-a-ble (eks'pi-ā-bl), a. That may be expiated.

ex-pi-ate (eks'pi-āt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [L. expiatus, pp. of expiare, < ex-, out, + piare, appease, atone for, < pious, devout, E. pious.] To atone for; make amends or reparation for; also, to purge from guilt or moral stain†; also, to avert (evil)†. —ex-pi-a'-tion (-ā'shən), n. [L. expiatio(n)-.] The act of expiating, or the state of being expiated; also, the means by which atonement or reparation is made. —ex'pi-a-tor, n. —ex'pi-a-to-ry (-ā-tō-ri), a. Serving to expiate.

ex-pi-ra-tion (eks-pi-rā'shən), n. [L. expiratio(n)-.] The act of expiring, or breathing out; emission of air from the lungs; also, the last emission of breath, or death (obs. or rare); also, a coming to an end; termination; close. —ex-pir'a-to-ry (-pir'ā-tō-ri), a. Pertaining to the expiration of air from the lungs.

ex-pire (eks-pir'), v.; -pired, -piring. [L. expirare, for expirare, < ex-, out, + spirare, breathe.] I. tr. To breathe out; emit (air) from the lungs; also, to give off†, emit†, or eject†; also, to bring to an end†. II. intr. To emit the breath; also, to emit the last breath; die; hence, to die out, as a fire; also, to come to an end; terminate; also, to be breathed out†; rush forth†. —ex-pir-ee' (-pī-rē'), n. A convicted person whose term of punishment has expired. [Australia, etc.] —ex-pir'er, n. —ex-pi-ry (eks-pi'ri or eks'pi-), n. Expiration.

ex-plain (eks-plān'), v. t. [L. explanare (pp. explanatus), flatten out, make plain, explain, < ex-, out, + planus, flat, E. *plain*².] To spread out flat†; unfold†; also, to make plain; make clear to the mind; render intelligible; also, to assign a meaning to; interpret; also, to make clear the cause or reason of; account for. —to explain away, to dispel (difficulties, etc.) by explanation; nullify the significance, or the apparent significance, of (words, facts, occurrences, etc.) by explanation. —ex-plain', v. i. To give an explanation. —ex-plain'a-ble, a. That may be explained.

—ex-plain'er, n.

ex-pla-na-tion (eks-plā-nā'shən), n. [L. explanatio(n)-.] The act or process of explaining; elucidation; interpretation; also, that which explains, or is adduced as explaining; also, a mutual declaration of the meaning of words spoken, actions, motives, etc., with a view to adjust a misunderstanding or reconcile differences; a reconciliation. —ex-plan'a-to-ry (-plan'ā-tō-ri), ex-plan'a-tive (-tiv), a. Serving to explain. —ex-plan'a-to-ri-ly, adv.

ex-ple-tive (eks'plē-tiv), [LL. expletivus, < L. explere (pp. expletus), fill out, < ex-, out, + plere, fill.] I. a. Serving to fill out; of words, etc., added merely to fill out a sentence or line, give emphasis, etc. II. n. Something that fills out; esp., an expletive syllable, word, or phrase; often, an interjectory word or expression, frequently profane, used for emphasis, etc. (as, "What do you mean?" asked Lancelot, with a strong expletive" : Kingsley's "Yeast," x.); an exclamatory oath. —ex'ple-tive-ly, adv.

ex-ple-to-ry (eks'plē-tō-ri), a. Expletive.

ex-pli-ca-ble (eks'pli-kā-bl), a. [L. explicabilis.] Capable of being explicated or explained.

ex-pli-cate (eks'pli-kāt), v. t.; -cated, -cating. [L. explicatus, pp. of explicare, unfold, display, set forth, < ex-, out, + plicare, fold.] To unfold† or unroll†; also, to develop (a principle, etc.); also, to make plain; make clear the meaning of; free of difficulties or obscurities; explain; interpret.

—ex-pli-ca'-tion (-kā'shən), n. [L. explicatio(n)-.] The act of explicating; an explanation; an interpretation. —ex'pli-ca-tive (-kā-tiv), ex-pli-ca-to-ry (-tō-ri), a. Serving to explicate; explanatory; interpretative.

ex-pli-cit (eks-plis'it), a. [L. explicitus, var. of explicatus, pp. of explicare: see explicate.] Free from folds or wrinkles; smooth†; also, clearly developed or formulated, as knowledge or belief; of statements, etc., clearly expressed; leaving nothing merely implied; express; unequivocal; of persons, definite and unreserved in expression; outspoken. —ex-pli'cit-ly, adv. —ex-pli'cit-ness, n.

ex-plode (eks-plōd'), v.; -ploded, -ploding. [L. explodere (pp. explosus), < ex, out of, from, + plodere, plaudere, clap: cf. applaud.] I. tr. To drive (a player, play, etc.) from the stage by loud expressions of disapproval†; also, to reject or discard (an opinion, custom, etc.: now only in the passive); cause to be rejected, destroy the repute of, discredit, or disprove; also, to drive forth violently†; also, to cause (gunpowder, etc., or a boiler, etc.) to explode (also fig.). II. intr. To expand with force and noise because of rapid chemical change or decomposition, as gunpowder, nitroglycerin, etc.; also, to burst, fly into pieces, or break up violently with a loud report, as a boiler from excessive pressure of steam; hence, in general, to burst forth violently, esp. with noise; often, to burst forth into laughter, violent speech, etc. —ex-plod'ent (-plō'dent), n. In phonetics, an explosive. —ex-plod'er, n.

ex-ploit (eks'ploit or eks-ploit'), n. [OF. exploit (F. exploit), < L. explicitum, neut. of explicitus, pp. of explicare, unfold, display: see explicit and explicate.] A deed of striking or notable character; a feat; an achievement; a spirited or heroic act. —ex-ploit', v. t. [OF. exploitier (F. exploiter).] To achieve†; perform†; also, to turn to practical account; utilize for profit; work (a mine, etc.); use (persons, etc.) selfishly for one's own ends. —ex-ploit'a-ble, a. That may be exploited. —ex-ploit'age (-āj), n. Exploitation. —ex-ploi-ta'-tion (-ploi-tā'shən), n. [F.] The act or process of exploiting; utilization for profit; selfish utilization. —ex-ploi'ta-tive (-tā-tiv), a. Concerned with or pertaining to exploitation. —ex-ploit'er, n.

ex-plor-a-ble (eks-plōr-ā-bl), a. That may be explored.

ex-plo-ra-tion (eks-plō-rā'shən), n. [L. exploratio(n)-.] The act of exploring; the investigation of unknown regions. —ex-plor'a-tive (-plōr'ā-tiv), ex-plor'a-to-ry (-tō-ri), a. Pertaining to or concerned with exploration; inclined to make explorations.

ex-plore (eks-plōr'), v.; -plored, -ploring. [L. explorare, search out, seek to discover, investigate, appar. < ex-, out, + plorare, cry out, wail.] I. tr. To search for†; search out†; also, to seek to ascertain or learn (as, "Let some fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, flect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you; prophet . . . Explore the cause of great Apollo's rage": Pope's tr. Homer's "Iliad," i.); also, to look into closely; scrutinize; examine; esp., to traverse or range over (a region, etc.) for the purpose of discovery. II. intr. To engage in exploration.—ex-plor'er, n. One who or that which explores; esp., one who investigates unknown regions.

—ex-plor'ing-ly, adv.

ex-plo-si-ble (eks-plō'zi-bl), a. Capable of being exploded; liable to explode.—ex-plo-si-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-ti), n.

ex-plo-sion (eks-plō'zhon), n. [L. explosio(n)], < explodere: see explode.] The act of exploding; a violent expansion or bursting with noise, as of gunpowder or a boiler; the noise itself; any violent bursting forth; a violent outburst of laughter, anger, etc.

ex-plo-sive (eks-plō'siv), [L. explodere (pp. explosus), E. explode.] I. a. Tending or serving to explode; pertaining to or of the nature of an explosion; in phonetics, involving a slight explosion of the breath in pronunciation, as the consonants p, b, t, d, etc. II. n. An explosive agent or substance, as gunpowder; in phonetics, an explosive consonant.—explosive D. See dunnite.—ex-plo'sive-ly, adv.

—ex-plo'sive-ness, n.

ex-po-nent (eks-pō'nent), [L. exponens (-ent-), ppr. of exponere: see expound.] I. a. Expounding; explaining. II. n. One who expounds or explains; that which serves to explain or interpret; also, one who or that which stands as a representative, type, or symbol of something; in alg., a symbol placed above and at the right of another symbol to denote to what power the latter is to be raised.—ex-po-nen'tial (-pō-nen'shal), a. Of or pertaining to an exponent or exponents; involving unknown or variable quantities as exponents.

ex-port (eks-pōrt'), v. t. [L. exportare, < ex, out of, from, + portare, carry.] To carry or take away; specif., to send (commodities) to other countries or places for sale or exchange.—ex'port, n. The act of exporting; exportation; also, that which is exported; an article exported.—ex-port'a-ble, a. That may be exported.—ex-por-ta'tion (-pōrt-tā'shon), n. [L. exportatio(n).] The act of exporting; the sending of commodities out of a country in trade; also, something exported.—ex-port'er, n.

ex-po-sal (eks-pō'sal), n. Exposure; exposition.

ex-POSE (eks-pōz'), v. t.; -posed, -posing. [OF. F. exposer, < ex (-< L. ex-), out, + poser, put (see pose), but associated with derivatives of L. exponere: see expound.] To put out or expel; put out into an unsheltered or open place, as a child abandoned to the mercy of chance; uncover or bare to the air, cold, etc., as the neck or chest; lay open to danger, attack, harm, etc. (as, to expose one's self in battle); often, to lay open to something specified (as, to expose one's self to danger, contagion, attack, ridicule, or misunderstanding); subject, as to the action of something (as, to expose a sensitized photographic plate to the action of the actinic rays of light); also, to present to view, exhibit, or display (as, "the beggar who exposes his sores": Steele, in "Spectator," 280); show or offer publicly for sale, as goods; make known, disclose, or reveal, as intentions, secrets, etc.; unmask (crime, fraud, an impostor, etc.); hold up to public reprehension or ridicule (fault, folly, a fool, etc.).—ex-po-sé (eks-pō-zā'), n. [F., orig. pp. of exposer.] A statement or recital, as of facts; an exposition; also, an exposure, as of something discreditable.—ex-posed', p. a. Left or being without shelter or protection; also, laid open to view; unconcealed.—ex-pos'ed-ness (-pōz-ed-nes), n.—ex-pos'er, n.

ex-po-si-tion (eks-pō-zish'on), n. [OF. F. exposition, < L. expositio(n)], < exponere, put out, expose, set forth, explain: see expound.] The act of putting out or abandoning in an unsheltered place (as, the exposition of children); also, the act of presenting to view; display; a public exhibition; also, the act of expounding, setting forth, or explaining; a detailed statement or explanation; an explanatory treatise; in the Rom. Cath. Ch., the public exhibition of the eucharist, or consecrated bread, in a monstrance, for the adoration of the faithful.—ex-pos'i-tive (-poz'i-tiv), a. Expository.—ex-pos'i-tor, n. [LL.] One who expounds, or gives an exposition: as, "a period when the national mind . . . would seek in him a powerful expositor of its convictions" (Disraeli's "Coningsby," ii. 4).—ex- pos'i-to-ry (-tō-ri), a. Serving to expound, set forth, or explain; explanatory.—ex-pos'i-tress, n. A female expositor.

ex post fac-to (eks pōst fak'tō). [For LL. ex postfacto, 'from what is done afterward.'] From or by subsequent action; subsequently; retrospectively: a phrase often used adjectively (as, an ex post facto law, one made after an offense but operative with respect to it).

ex-pos-tu-late (eks-pōs'tū-lāt), v.; -lated, -lating. [L. expostulatus, pp. of expostulare, demand urgently, complain, expostulate, < ex-, out, + postulare, demand, E. postulate.] I. t. r. To ask for or demand; also, to complain of; remonstrate about; also, to argue or debate. II. intr. To reason earnestly with a person against something he intends to do or has done; remonstrate.—ex-pos'tu-lat-ing-ly, adv.

—ex-pos-tu-la'tion (-lā'shon), n. [L. expostulatio(n).] The act of expostulating; remonstrance; an earnest and kindly protest; an expostulatory remark or address.—ex-pos'tu-la-tive (-lā-tiv), a. Expostulating; expostulatory.—ex-pos'tu-la-tor (-lā-tor), n.—ex-pos'tu-la-to-ry (-lā-tō-ri), a. Expostulating; conveying expostulation.

ex-po-sure (eks-pō'zhūr), n. The act of exposing, or the state of being exposed; a putting out without shelter or protection, as of an abandoned child; a laying open or subjecting to the action or influence of something (as, exposure to the weather, to danger, or to ridicule; the exposure of a sensitized photographic plate to the action of the actinic rays of light); presentation to view, esp. in an open or public manner; disclosure, as of something private or secret; unmasking, as of crime, fraud, an impostor, etc.; also, something exposed, as to view; an exposed surface; also, situation with regard to access of sunlight or wind (as, a southern exposure); aspect.

ex-pound (eks-pound'), v. t. [OF. espondre, < L. exponere (pp. expositus), put out, expose, set forth, explain, < ex-, out, + ponere, place, put.] To set forth or state in detail, as theories, principles, etc.; hence, to explain; interpret; also, to expose to view† (as, "First he expounded both his pockets, And found a watch, with rings and lockets": Butler's "Hudibras," ii. 3).—ex-pound'er, n.

ex-press (eks-pres'), v. t. [L. expressus, pp. of exprimere, press out, form by pressure, represent, indicate, express, < ex-, out, + premere, press.] To press or squeeze out (as, to express the juice of grapes); extort or elicit as by pressure; press out the contents of (fruit, etc.); exude or emit (a liquid, odor, etc.) as if under pressure; also, to make (an image, picture, etc.) or represent (a person or other subject) by sculpture, painting, or the like (obs. or archaic); represent by a symbol, character, figure, or formula, or as a symbol or the like does; show, manifest, or reveal (as, to express feeling in one's countenance or tone; to express one's personality or one's self in one's work); set forth (thoughts, meaning, facts, etc.) in words; couch (well, ill, etc.) in words; set forth the thoughts, meaning, etc., of (one's self) in words; denote, signify, or import, as words do; sometimes, to set forth or state explicitly (opposed to imply); specify† (as, "these men which are expressed by their names": Num. i. 17); also, to send by express.—ex-press', [OF. expres (F. exprès), < L. expressus, pp.] I. a. Fully or exactly formed or represented, as an image or likeness; also, clearly indicated, or distinctly stated or expressed (rather than implied); definite; explicit; plain; also, designed or intended for special use, service, etc.; special, or specially direct or fast, as a messenger or a railroad-train. II. n. A messenger or a message specially sent; hence, a system or company for the transmission of parcels, money, etc.; also, an express-train; also, an express-rifle.

—ex-press', adv. Specially; for a particular purpose; also, post-haste, or with speed (as, "He started off express for Pierre's Hole": Irving's "Captain Bonneville," vi.); now, esp., by express.—ex-pres'sage (-pres'āj), n. The business of transmitting parcels, money, etc., by express; also, the charge for such transmission.—ex-press'er, n.—ex-press'i-ble, a. Capable of being expressed.

ex-pres-sion (eks-pres'hon), n. [L. expressio(n).] The act of expressing or pressing out (as, the expression of juices or oils from plants); also, the act of expressing or representing, as by symbols; a symbol or a combination of symbols serving to express something, as an algebraic quantity; also, the act of showing, manifesting, or revealing; esp., indication of feeling, spirit, character, etc., as in the countenance or voice, or in artistic or musical execution; a look or intonation as expressing feeling, etc. (as, a sad, weary, or triumphant expression); quality or power of expressing feeling, etc. (as, a face that lacks expression); also, the act of expressing or setting forth in words (as, the expression of ideas, opinions, wishes, facts, etc.); the manner or form in which a thing is expressed or couched in words (as, "Expression is the dress of thought, and still appears more decent, as more suitable": Pope's "Essay on Criticism," 318); wording, phrasing, diction, or phraseology; a particular word, phrase, or form of words, used to express something (as, colloquial, archaic, or pedantic expressions); power of expressing in words (as, joy beyond expression; ideas that baffle expression). — ex-pres'sion-al, a. Of or pertaining to expression. — ex-pres'sion-ism, n. [= G. expressionismus.] The tendencies, doctrines, and methods of certain painters, sculptors, architects, musicians, writers, etc., of Continental Europe, attracting general attention first shortly after the close of the World War, and bound together by the common desire for expression untrammelled by traditions, and holding that art should represent the artist's subjective and emotional reaction to natural objects, etc. — ex-pres'sion-ist, n. — ex-pres'sion-is'tic, a. — ex-pres'sion-less, a. Destitute of expression, as the face or voice. — ex-pres'sion-less-ness, n.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; †, primary accent; ‡, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

ex-press-ive (eks-pres'iv), a. [F. expressif.] Serving to express; indicative (of); full of expression, as the face or voice; pertaining to or concerned with expression. — ex-press-ive-ly, adv. — ex-press-ive-ness, n.

ex-press-less (eks-pres'les), a. Inexpressible. [Archaic.] ex-press-ly (eks-pres'li), adv. In an express manner; explicitly; plainly; also, for the express purpose; specially.

ex-press-man (eks-pres'man), n.; pl. -men. One engaged in the express business; a man in charge of an express-wagon.

ex-press-ness (eks-pres'nes), n. The quality of being express; definiteness; explicitness.

ex-press-ri-fle (eks-pres'ri'fl), n. A sporting-rifle taking a large charge of powder and a light bullet: adapted for killing large game at short range.

ex-press-train (eks-pres'trān), n. A railroad-train which travels at a high speed and makes few or no stops between terminal stations.

ex-press-wag-on (eks-pres'wag'on), n. A wagon used for collecting and delivering articles transmitted by express.

ex-pro-pri-ate (eks-prō'pri-āt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [ML. expropriatus, pp. of expropriare, < L. ex-priv. (see ex-) + proprius, one's own, E. proper.] To take out of the owner's possession; esp., to take for public use by the right of eminent domain; also, to dispossess (a person) of ownership. — ex-pro-pri-a'tion (ā'shən), n. — ex-pro-pri-a-tor, n.

ex-pulse (eks-puls'), v. t.; -pulsed, -pulsing. [L. expulsum, pp. of expellere: see expel.] To drive out; expel: as, "For ever should they be expulsed from France" (Shakespeare's "1 Henry VI.," iii. 3. 25). [Obs. or archaic.] — ex-pul-sion (-pul'shən), n. [L. expulsio(n).] The act of driving out or expelling; the state of being expelled. — ex-pul-sive (-siv), a. Tending or serving to expel; effecting expulsion: as, "a passion so potent . . . so expulsive of other loves" (J. H. Newman's "Callista," xix.).

ex-punc-tion (eks-pungk'shən), n. [LL. expunctio(n).] The act of expunging; an erasure.

ex-punge (eks-punj'), v. t.; -punged, -punging. [L. expungere (pp. expunctus), prick out, strike out, < ex-, out, + pungere, prick, pierce.] To strike or blot out; erase; obliterate; hence, to efface; wipe out or destroy. — ex-pung-e'ment, n. — ex-pun-ger (-pun'jēr), n.

ex-pur-gate (eks'pēr-gāt or eks-pēr'-), v. t.; -gated, -gating. [L. expurgatus, pp. of expurgare, < ex-, out, + pur-gare, E. purge.] To purge or cleanse; esp., to amend (a book, etc.) by removing offensive or objectionable matter. — ex-pur-ga'tion (-gā'shən), n. [L. expurgatio(n).] The act of expurgating; esp., the elimination of offensive or objectionable matter from a book, etc. — ex-pur-ga-tor, n. One who expurgates (esp. books, etc.). — ex-pur-ga-to-ri-al (-gā-tō'ri-āl), a. Pertaining to an expurgator or to expur-gation. — ex-pur'ga-to-ry (-tō-ri), a. Serving to expurgate; of or pertaining to expurgation: as, the Expurgatory Index (see index).

ex-qui-site (eks'kwi-zit). [L. exquisitus, pp. of exquirere, seek out, < ex-, out, + quærere, seek.] I. a. Carefully sought out, chosen, ascertained, devised, etc.† (as, "I have no exquisite reason for 't, but I have reason good enough": Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," ii. 3. 157); of exceptionally choice quality, as food, wines, laces, fabrics, etc.; of rare excellence of production or execution, as works of art, workmanship, or the artist or worker; of peculiar refinement or elegance, as taste, manners, etc., or persons; of peculiar beauty or charm, or rare and appealing excellence, as a face, a flower, coloring, music, poetry, a conception, etc.; in general, extraordinarily fine or admirable, or consummate, as skill, nicety, care, gentleness, purity, etc.; sometimes, with words of ill meaning, extraordinary, extreme, utter, or complete, as ignorance, malice, torture, or (formerly) a villain or traitor; also, intense, acute, or keen, as pleasure, pain, etc.; keenly or delicately sensitive or responsive to impressions (as, an exquisite ear for music; the exquisite sensibility of the eye to light). II. n. A person, esp. a man, who is overnice in dress, etc.; a dandy; a coxcomb. — ex'qui-site-ly, adv. — ex'qui-site-ness, n.

ex-san-gui-nate (ek-sang'gwi-nāt), v. t.; -nated, -nating. [L. exsanguinatus, rendered bloodless, < ex-priv. (see ex-) + sanguis (sanguin-), blood.] To render bloodless. — ex-san-gui-na'tion (-nā'shən), n.

ex-san-guine (ek-sang'gwin), a. [L. ex-priv. + sanguis (sanguin-): see exsanguinate.] Bloodless; deficient in blood; anemic. — ex-san-guin'i-ty (-gwin'i-ti), n.

ex-scind (ek-sind'), v. t. [L. exscindere, < ex-, out, + scindere, cut.] To cut out or off.

ex-sect (ek-sekt'), v. t. [L. exsectus, pp. of exsecare, < ex-, out, + secare, cut.] To cut out. — ex-sec-tion (ek-sek'shən), n.

ex-sert (ek-sért'), v. t. [L. exsertus, pp. of exserere, put forth: see exert.] To thrust out. — ex-sert'ed, p. a. Projecting beyond the surrounding parts, as a stamen or a sting. — ex-ser-tile (ek-sér'til), a. Capable of being exerted or protruded. — ex-ser'tion (-shən), n. The act of exerting, or the state of being exerted; protrusion.

ex-sic-cant (ek-sik'ant), I. a. Exsiccating; having the power of drying up, as a medicine. II. n. An exsiccant medicine or agent.

ex-sic-cate (ek'si-kāt), v. t.; -cated, -cating. [L. exsiccatus, pp. of exsiccare, < ex-, out, utterly, + sicare, make dry: cf. desiccate.] To dry completely; remove all the moisture from, as a substance; dry up, as moisture. — ex-sic-ca'tion (-kā'shən), n. Drying; dryness. — ex'sic-ca-tive (-kā-tiv), a. Tending to dry. — ex'sic-ca-tor (-kā-tōr), n. A drying apparatus.

ex-stip-u-late (eks-stip'ū-lāt), a. [See ex- and stipulate.] In bot., without stipules.

ex-suc-cous (ek-suk'us), a. [L. exsuccus, < ex-priv. (see ex-) + succus, sucus, juice.] Without juice or sap; dry.

ex-suf-flate (ek-suf'lāt), v. t.; -flated, -flating. [LL. exsufflatus, pp. of exsufflare, < L. ex, out of, + sufflare, blow up, blow: see sufflate.] To blow out or away; eccles., to drive off (an evil spirit) by blowing. — ex-suf-fla-tion (ek-suf'lā'shən), n.

ex-suf-fli-cate† (ek-suf'li-kāt), a. [Cf. exsufflate.] Inflated or exaggerated; windy. See Shakespeare's "Othello," iii. 3. 182.

ex-tant (eks'tant or eks-tant'), a. [L. extans (extant-), for extans, ppr. of extare, stand out, appear, exist, < ex-, out, + stare, stand.] Standing out or protruding (archaic); also, prominent, conspicuous, or manifest (archaic); also, in existence (as, "His despatches form one of the most amusing and instructive collections extant": Macaulay's "Essays," Machiavelli); still existing; not destroyed or lost.

ex-tem-po-ral (eks-tem'pō-ral), a. [L. extemporalis, < ex tempore: see extempore.] Extemporaneous; extempore. [Obs. or archaic.]

ex-tem-po-ra-ne-ous (eks-tem-pō-rā-nē-us), a. [L. extemporaneus, < ex tempore: see extempore.] Made, uttered, or performed extempore; impromptu; offhand; unprepared; of a person, speaking or performing extempore; also,

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒ, then; y, you;

made for the occasion, as a shelter; extemporized; of medicines, made up or prepared at the time of dispensing. — ex-tem-po-ra-ne-ous-ly, adv. — ex-tem-po-ra-ne-ous-ness, n. ex-tem-po-ra-ry (eks-tem'pō-rā-rī), a. [L. ex tempore: see extempore.] Extemporaneous; extempore. — ex-tem'po-ra-ri-ly, adv. — ex-tem'po-ra-ri-ness, n.

ex-tem-po-re (eks-tem'pō-rē), [L. ex tempore, 'out of the time.'] I. adv. On the spur of the moment; without premeditation or preparation; offhand; sometimes, of public speaking, without notes; of musical performance, by improvisation. II. a. Made, composed, uttered, or performed extempore; speaking or performing extempore; also, made for the occasion; extemporized; also, occasional or casual†; sudden†.

ex-tem-po-rize (eks-tem'pō-rīz), v.; -rized, -rizing. [From extempore.] I. intr. To speak extempore; sing, or play on an instrument, composing the music as one proceeds; improvise. II. tr. To compose offhand; improvise; also, to make or devise for the occasion (as, "The Innocent, with the aid of pine-boughs, extemporized a thatch for the roofless cabin": Bret Harte's "Outcasts of Poker Flat"); get up offhand. — ex-tem'po-ri-za'tion (-rī-zā'shən), n. — ex-tem-po-riz-er (-rī-zēr), n.

ex-tend (eks-tend'), v. [L. extendere (pp. extensus, also extensus), stretch out, extend, < ex-, out, + tendere, stretch, E. tend.] I. tr. To stretch out; draw out to the full length; strain; hence, to exert (one's self); also, to place at full length, esp. horizontally, as the body, limbs, etc.; straighten out; also, to write out or transcribe at full length, as shorthand notes, etc.; also, to stretch, draw, or arrange in a given direction, or so as to reach a particular point, as a cord or a line of troops; also, to increase the length or duration of; lengthen; prolong; hence, to carry forward in development; also, to stretch out in various or all directions; expand; spread out in area; widen (boundaries); enlarge the scope of, or make more comprehensive, as operations or influence, or the meaning of a word; increase in quantity by dilution or adulteration, as liquors; also, to stretch forth or hold out, as the arm or hand; also, to hold forth as an offer or grant; offer; grant; give; in law, to assess or value; also, to make a seizure or levy upon, as land, by a writ of extent. II. intr. To be or become extended; stretch out; be continued in length or duration, or in various or all directions; reach, as to a particular point; increase in length, area, scope, etc. (as, his influence is gradually extending). — ex-tend'ed, p. a. Stretched out; continued or prolonged; spread out; widespread or extensive; having extension or spatial magnitude; also, outstretched; in law, valued or assessed; also, levied upon. — extended type, a kind of type much wider than is usual for its height. See type. — ex-tend'ed-ly, adv. — ex-tend'er, n. — ex-tend'i-ble, a. Capable of being extended; extensible.

ex-tense (eks-tens'), a. [L. extensus, pp.: see extend.] Extended; extensive. [Obs. or archaic.]

ex-ten-si-ble (eks-ten'si-blī), a. [F. extensible.] Capable of being extended; susceptible of being drawn out to greater length or breadth; extensible. — ex-ten-si-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-tī), n.

ex-ten-sile (eks-ten'sil), a. Capable of being extended, stretched out, or protruded.

ex-ten-sim-e-ter (eks-ten-sim'e-tēr), n. Same as extensometer.

ex-ten-sion (eks-ten'shən), n. [LL. extensio(n), L. extensio(n).] The act of extending, or the state of being extended; a stretching or straining; a straightening out, or placing at full length; an extending in a particular direction or to a particular point; lengthening or prolongation; expansion or enlargement; enlargement in scope or operation; a stretching or putting forth, as of the arm or hand; also, range of extending; degree of extensiveness; extent; also, something extended; an extended object or space; also, that by which something is extended; a prolongation; an added portion or period; in physiol., the straightening of a part; the action of an extensor muscle; in physics, etc., that property of a body by which it occupies a portion of space; spatial magnitude; in com., a written engagement on the part of a creditor, allowing a debtor further time to pay a debt; in logic, the range of a term or concept as indicated by the number of objects which it denotes or includes (cf. intension). — ex-ten'sion-al, a. — ex-ten'sion-spring, n. A spiral spring designed to resist a pull or strain in line with its length.  — ex-ten'sion-ta'ble, n. A table the frame of which can be drawn out in length for the insertion of additional leaves on the top.

Extension-spring.

ex-ten-si-ty (eks-ten'si-tī), n. [L. extensus, pp.: see extend, and cf. extense.] The quality of having extension; in psychol., that element of sensation from which the perception of extension is developed.

ex-ten-sive (eks-ten'siv), a. [LL. extensivus.] Of, pertaining to, or characterized by extension; also, of great extent; wide; broad; great; comprehensive; also, noting or pertaining to a system involving operations of wide extent carried on by less laborious or less expensive methods not calculated to result in any high degree of effectiveness, as in the cultivation of large areas of land (as where land is cheap) with a minimum of labor and expense (opposed to intensive). — ex-ten'sive-ly, adv. — ex-ten'sive-ness, n.

ex-ten-som-e-ter (eks-ten-som'e-tēr), n. [L. extensus, pp.: see extend and -meter.] An apparatus for measuring minute degrees of expansion, contraction, or deformation.

ex-ten-sor (eks-ten'sor), n. [LL., one who extends or stretches.] A muscle which serves to extend or straighten a part of the body.

ex-tent (eks-ten't), n. [OF. estente, < estendre, < L. extendere: see extend.] The space or degree to which a thing extends; length, area, or size; amount; range or scope; also, something extended; an extended space; a particular length, area, or volume; something having extension; also, the act of extending†; an extending, offering, or showing, as of justice or kindness† (see Shakspeare's "Titus Andronicus," iv. 4. 3; Shakspeare's "Hamlet," ii. 2. 390; also, in Great Britain, assessment or valuation, as of land; also, a writ to recover debts of record due to the crown, under which land, etc., may be seized; a seizure made under such a writ; in the U. S., a writ, or a levy, by which a creditor has his debtor's lands valued and transferred to himself, absolutely or for a term of years; hence, an attack† or assault† (as, "This uncivil and unjust extent Against thy peace": Shakspeare's "Twelfth Night," iv. 1. 57); in logic, extension.

ex-ten-u-ate (eks-ten'ū-āt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [L. extenuatus, pp. of extenuare, < ex-, out, + tenuare, make thin: cf. attenuate.] To make thin, lean, or emaciated (archaic); reduce the consistence or density of (archaic); lessen in degree or intensity†; also, to lessen in honor† (as, "Righteous are thy decrees on all thy works: Who can extenuate thee?" Milton's "Paradise Lost," x. 645); underestimate, underrate, or make light of; now, esp., to represent (fault, offense, etc.) as less serious (as, "Speak of me as I am; nothing extenuate, Nor set down aught in malice": Shakspeare's "Othello," v. 2. 342); also, to serve to make (fault, offense, etc.) seem less serious, as a mitigating circumstance does. — ex-ten-u-at-ing-ly, adv. — ex-ten-u-a'tion (-ā'shən), n. [L. extenuatio(n).] The act of extenuating, or the state of being extenuated; also, that which extenuates; a partial excuse. — ex-ten'u-a-tor, n. — ex-ten'u-a-to-ry (-ā-tō-rī), a. Tending to extenuate; characterized by extenuation.

ex-te-ri-or (eks-tē'ri-ōr), [L., compar. of exter, exterus, outer, outward, compar. adj. < ex, out of.] I. a. Outer (as, the exterior side or surface of a thing); being on the outer side (as, the exterior decorations of a church); being outside of something (sometimes with to: as, points exterior to a curve). II. n. The outer surface or part; the outside; pl., externals. — ex-te-ri-or-i-ty (-ō-rī-tī), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). The state or fact of being exterior; also, something exterior; an outward circumstance. — ex-te'ri-or-ize (-ō-rī-zē), v. t.; -ized, -izing. To make exterior; externalize (a conception). — ex-te'ri-or-ly, adv.

ex-ter-mi-nate (eks-tēr'mi-nāt), v. t.; -nated, -nating. [L. exterminatus, pp. of exterminare, < ex, out of, + terminus, boundary.] To drive out† or expel†; also, to get rid of by destroying; destroy totally; extirpate. — ex-ter-mi-na'tion (-nā'shən), n. [LL. exterminatio(n).] The act of exterminating; total destruction; extirpation.—ex-ter'-mi-na-tive (-nā-tiv), ex-ter'-mi-na-to-ry (-tō-ri), a. Serving or tending to exterminate.—ex-ter'-mi-na-tor (-nā-tor), n.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; çh, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent, ", secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

ex-tern (eks-tēr'n'). [F. externe, < L. externus, < exter, outer, outward: see exterior.] I. a. Outside; outward; external. [Now chiefly poetic.] II. n. Outward form or appearance; also (also pron. eks'tēr'n), an outsider; a person connected with an institution but not residing in it, as a pupil in a boarding-school, a member of the medical staff of a hospital, etc.

ex-ter-nal (eks-tēr'nāl). [L. externus: see extern.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the outside or outer part; outer; to be applied to the outside of the body, as a remedy; also, pertaining to the outward or visible appearance or show (as, external acts of worship); also, situated or being outside of something; acting or coming from without; pertaining to or concerned with what is without or foreign (as, external commerce; the external relations of a country); in metaph., belonging or pertaining to the world of things or phenomena, considered as outside the perceiving mind. II. n. The outside; also, that which is external; pl., external or outward features, circumstances, etc. (as, the externals of religion).—ex-ter'-nal-ism, n. Attention or devotion to externals; undue regard to externals, esp. in religion; also, phenomenalism.—ex-ter'-nal-ist, n.—ex-ter-nal-i-ty (-nāl'-i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). The state or quality of being external; also, undue regard to externals; also, something external; an outward feature or circumstance.—ex-ter'-nal-ize (-nāl-iz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. To make external; embody in an outward form.—ex-ter'-nal-i-za'tion (-i-zā'-shən), n.—ex-ter'-nal-ly, adv.

ex-ter-ne (eks-tēr'n' or eks'tēr'n), n. [F.: see extern.] An extern, as of a hospital.

ex-ter-ri-to-ri-al (eks'ter-i-tō-ri-āl), a. [See ex.] Beyond territorial limits or jurisdiction, as persons resident in a country but not subject to its laws; pertaining to such persons.—ex-ter-ri-to-ri-al-i-ty (-al'-i-ti), n. Extraterritorial status.—ex-ter-ri-to-ri-al-ly, adv.

ex-tinct (eks-tingkt'), a. [L. extinctus, pp. of extinguere: see extinguish.] Extinguished; quenched; having ceased eruption, as a volcano; hence, having come to an end; without a living representative, as a race, family, or species (as, "My father was dead, and my mother and all the family extinct": Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe," i. 19); obsolete, as an institution or office; having no qualified heritor or claimant, as a title.

ex-tinc-tion (eks-tingkt'shən), n. [L. extinctio(n), < extinguere: see extinguish.] The act of extinguishing, or the fact of being extinguished; a putting out or quenching; suppression; abolition; annihilation; also, a becoming extinct; a coming to an end or dying out; the condition of being extinct.—ex-tinc-tive, a. Tending or serving to extinguish.

ex-tine (eks'tin or -tin), n. [L. extimus, outermost, superl. of exter: see exterior.] In bot., the outer coat of a pollen-grain.

ex-tin-guish (eks-ting'gwish), v. t. [L. extinguere (pp. extinctus), for extinguere, < ex-, out, + stinguere, quench, orig. prick: see *stick*², and cf. distinguish, instinct.] To put out (a fire, light, etc.); put out the flame of (something burning or lighted); hence, to quench (hopes, passions, etc.); obscure or eclipse, as by superior brilliancy (as, "natural graces that extinguish art": Shakspeare's "1 Henry VI.," v. 3. 192); also, to put an end to, or wipe out of existence; suppress; abolish; annihilate; bring to an end, as a race, family, etc.; render void, as a right or claim; discharge (a debt), as by payment.—ex-tin'guish-a-ble, a. Capable of being extinguished.—ex-tin'guish-er, n. One who or that which extinguishes; a conical cap for putting over a lighted candle, etc., to extinguish it; any of various portable apparatuses for extinguishing fire (as, a chemical extinguisher).—ex-tin'guish-ment, n.

ex-tirp (eks-tērp'), v. t. Same as extirpate.

ex-tir-pate (eks'ter-pāt or eks-tēr'-), v. t.; -pated, -pating. [L. extirpatus, pp. of extirpare, for extirpare, < ex-, out, + stirps, stock, root.] To pull up by the roots; root up; hence, to remove utterly; destroy totally; exterminate; do away with.—ex-tir-pa'tion (-pā'shən), n.—ex'tir-pa-tor, n.

ex-tol (eks-tol' or -tōl'), v. t.; -tolled, -tolling. [L. extollere, lift out or up, raise, exalt, praise, < ex-, out, + tollere, lift, raise.] To lift up; also, to exalt in rank, honor, etc.; also, to praise highly; laud; eulogize.—ex-tol'ler, n.—ex-tol'ment, n.

ex-tort (eks-tōrt'), v. t. [L. extortus, pp. of extorquere, twist or wrest out, < ex-, out, + torquere, twist.] To wrest or wring (something) from a person by violence, intimidation, or abuse of authority; obtain (money, information, etc.) by force, torture, threat, or the like; in law, to take illegally under color of office.—ex-tort'er, n.—ex-tort'-tion (-tōrt'shən), n. [ML. extortio(n), LL. extorsio(n)-.] The act of extorting, or the fact of being extorted; oppressive or illegal exaction, as of excessive price or interest; also, something extorted; in law, the crime of obtaining money or other thing of value under color of office, when none is due or not so much is due, or before it is due.—ex-tort'-tion-a-ry (-ā-ri), a. Characterized by or given to extortion.—ex-tort'-tion-ate (-āt), a. Characterized by extortion, as persons; exorbitant, as demands for money; grossly excessive, as prices.—ex-tort'-tion-er, n. One who practises extortion.—ex-tort'-tive, a. Tending to extort; extortory.

ex-tra (eks'trā). [Prob. orig. short for extraordinary: cf. L. extra (see extra)-.] I. a. Beyond or more than what is usual, expected, or necessary; additional; also, larger or better than what is usual. II. n. Something extra or additional; specif., an edition of a newspaper other than the regular edition or editions; also, something of superior quality; in cricket, a score or run not made from the bat, as a bye or a wide.—ex'tra, adv. In excess of the usual or specified amount (as, "I wouldn't care if I did go a little extra for it": Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," xiv.); also, beyond the ordinary degree; unusually; uncommonly.

extra-. [L. extra, repr. extra, adv. and prep., outside (of), without, < exter, outer, outward: see exterior.] A prefix of Latin origin, meaning 'outside,' 'beyond,' 'besides,' freely used as an English formative, as in extrajudicial, extraparochial, extraterritorial, and many other words mostly self-explanatory, as extra-atmospheric, extra-European, etc. Cf. intra-.—ex-tra-ca-non-i-cal (eks'trā-kā-non'-i-kāl), a. Not included in the canon of Scripture.—ex-tra-cel'-lu-lar (-sel'ū-lār), a. Outside of a cell or cells.—ex-tra-cra-ni-al (-krā-ni-āl), a. Outside of the cranium or skull.

ex-tract (eks-trakt'), v. t. [L. extractus, pp. of extrahere, < ex, out of, + trahere, draw.] To draw or take (a thing) out of something containing it or of which it forms a part; take or copy out (matter from a book, etc.); sometimes, to make excerpts from (the book, etc.); draw forth or get out by force (as, to extract a tooth); extort (money, information, etc.); separate or obtain (a juice, ingredient, principle, etc.) from a thing or substance by pressure, distillation, treatment with solvents, or the like; derive or obtain (pleasure, comfort, etc.) from a particular source; deduce (a doctrine, principle, etc.); in math., to determine (the root of a quantity).—ex'tract, n. [NL. extractum, prop. neut. of L. extractus, pp.] Something extracted; esp., a passage taken from a book, etc.; an excerpt; a quotation; also, a solid or viscid substance extracted from a drug, plant, or the like; also, a solution or preparation containing the active principles of a drug, plant-juice, or the like.—ex-tract'a-ble, a. That may be extracted.—ex-trac'tion (-trak'shən), n. [ML. extractio(n)-.] The act of extracting, or the state of being extracted; also, something extracted; an extract; also, descent or lineage.—ex-trac'tive. I. a. Tending or serving to extract; also, that may be extracted. II. n. Something extracted; specif., a substance present in plants which forms into a brown insoluble mass during the process of extraction.—ex-trac'tor, n.

ex-tra-dit-a-ble (eks-tra-dit'ā-bl), a. Subject to extradition (as, an extraditable person); also, making subject to extradition (as, an extraditable offense).

ex-tra-dite (eks'tra-dit), v. t.; -dited, -diting. [Back-formation from extradition.] To give up (a fugitive or prisoner) to another nation or authority; also, to obtain the extradition of.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, clect, anōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

ex-tra-di-tion (eks-trā-dish'ŋn), n. [F., < L. ex, out of, from, + traditio(n), a giving over: see tradition.] The surrender of a fugitive or prisoner by one nation or authority to another.

ex-tra-dos (eks-trā'dos), n. [F., < L. extra, outside of, + F. dos, < L. dorsum, back.] In arch., the exterior curve or surface of an arch or vault. Cf. intrados.

ex-tra-haz-ard-ous (eks-trā-haz'ār-dus), a. [See extra, adv.] Involving more than ordinary hazard, risk, or peril: as, an extrahazardous occupation.

ex-tra-il-lus-trate (eks-trā-il'us-trāt), v. t.; -trated, -trating. To add extra illustrations to (a book) after it is printed or published, by pasting or binding them in.—ex'-tra-il-lus-tra'tion (-trā'shŋn), n.

ex-tra-ju-di-cial (eks'trā-jō-dish'āl), a. [See extra-.] Outside of judicial proceedings; beyond the action or authority of a court.—ex'-tra-ju-di'-cial-ly, adv.

ex-tra-lat-er-al (eks-trā-lat'ē-rāl), a. [See extra-.] Situated or extending beyond the sides; specif., noting the right of a mine-owner to a portion of his lode or vein extending beyond the side-lines of his claim but lying between vertical cross-planes through the end-lines.

ex-tra-mun-dane (eks-trā-mun'dān), a. [LL. extramundanus, < L. extra, outside of, + mundus, world.] Beyond our world or the material universe, or pertaining to a region so situated.

ex-tra-mu-ral (eks-trā-mū'rāl), a. [L. extra, outside of, + murus, wall.] Outside the walls or boundaries, as of a city or town or a university.

ex-tra-ne-ous (eks-trā'nē-us), a. [L. extraneus, that is without, foreign, < extra, outside, without: see extra-.] Introduced or coming from without; not belonging or proper to a thing (often with to); external; foreign; alien.—ex'-tra-ne-ous-ly, adv.—ex'-tra-ne-ous-ness, n.

ex-tra-of-fi-cial (eks'trā-ŋ-fish'āl), a. [See extra-.] Outside of the ordinary duties, rights, etc., of an office.

ex-tra-or-di-na-ry (eks-trōr'di-nā-ri or eks-trā-ŋr'), a. [L. extraordinarius, < extra, outside of, + ordo (ordin-), order.] Beyond what is ordinary; out of the regular or established order (as, extraordinary powers, measures, or expenses; extraordinary courses of study); exceptional in character or kind (as, an extraordinary fact, feat, sight, book, or man; extraordinary weather); unusual, uncommon, notable, or remarkable; exceptional in amount, extent, degree, etc. (as, extraordinary value, weight, speed, or fineness; an extraordinary attendance at a lecture); of officials, etc., outside of, additional to, or ranking below the ordinary or regular class (as, an envoy extraordinary, see below; a physician extraordinary to a king, cf. in ordinary, under ordinary, n.; an extraordinary professor in a German university, ranking below an ordinary one); special; additional.—envoy extraordinary, formerly, a diplomatic agent sent on some special mission; now, a diplomatic agent of the second class, ranking below an ambassador (see *envoy*²).—ex'-tra-or'di-na-ri-ly, adv.—ex'-tra-or'di-na-ri-ness, n.

ex-tra-pa-ro-chi-al (eks'trā-pā-rō'ki-āl), a. [See extra-.] Outside of the parish, or any parish.

ex-tra-pro-fes-sion-al (eks'trā-prō-fesh'ŋn-āl), a. [See extra-.] Outside of the ordinary limits of professional interest or duty.

ex-tra-red (eks'trā-red'), a. [See extra-.] Same as infra-red.

ex-tra-sys-to-le (eks-trā-sis'tō-lē), n. [See extra-.] In pathol., a contraction of the heart other than the normal systole.—ex'-tra-sys-tol'ic (-tol'ik), a.

ex-tra-ter-ri-to-ri-al (eks'trā-ter-i-tō'ri-āl), a. [See extra-.] Extraterritorial.—ex'-tra-ter-ri-to-ri-al-i-ty (-al'i-ti), n.—ex'-tra-ter-ri-to-ri-al-ly, adv.

ex-trav-a-gance (eks-trav'ā-gāns), n. The quality or fact of being extravagant; unrestrained or fantastic excess, as of actions, opinions, etc.; an extravagant action, notion, etc.; also, excessive expenditure or outlay; wastefulness; prodigality; an instance of this. Also ex-trav'a-gan-cy.

ex-trav-a-gant (eks-trav'ā-gānt), a. [OF. F. extravagant, < ML. extravagans (-ant-), ppr. of extravagari: see extravagate.] Wandering beyond bounds† (as, "The extravagant and erring spirit hies To his confine": Shakspeare's "Hamlet," i. 1. 154); spreading or projecting irregularly in various directions, as roots or branches†; divergent†, different†, or irrelevant†; strange† or unusual†; now, exceeding the bounds of reason, as actions, demands, opinions, passions, etc., or, esp. formerly, persons; unrestrained by reason; unbridled; fantastically excessive; wild; esp., of persons, etc., exceeding prudence or necessity in expenditure; wasteful; prodigal; of expense, price, etc., exorbitant.—ex-trav'a-gant-ly, adv.—ex-trav'a-gant-ness, n.

ex-trav-a-gan-za (eks-trav'ā-gan'zā), n. [It. estravaganza, now stravaganza, extravagance.] An extravagant or fantastic composition, as in music, the drama, etc.

ex-trav-a-gate (eks-trav'ā-gāt), v. i.; -gated, -gating. [ML. extravagatus, pp. of extravagari, wander beyond, < L. extra, outside of, + vagari, wander: cf. divagate and stray.] To wander beyond bounds; stray; roam at will; hence, to go beyond the bounds of propriety or reason.

ex-trav-a-sate (eks-trav'ā-sāt), v.; -sated, -sating. [L. extra, outside of, + vas, vessel.] In pathol.: I. tr. To force out from the proper vessels, as blood, esp. so as to diffuse through the surrounding parts. II. intr. To be extravasated, as blood; escape from the proper vessels.—ex-trav-a-sa'tion (-sā'shŋn), n. In pathol., the act of extravasating; also, the matter extravasated.

ex-tra-ver-sion (eks-trā-vēr'shŋn), etc. Same as extroversion, etc.

ex-treme (eks-trēm'). [OF. extreme (F. extrême), < L. extremus, superl. of exter, outer, outward: see exterior.] I. a.; compar. extremer, superl. extremest. Outermost; farthest from the center or middle; endmost; hence, farthest, utmost, or very far in any direction (as, "From th' extremest point Of elevation down into th' abyss": Cowper's "Task," ii. 92); also, last or final (now chiefly in 'extreme unction': see under unction); also, utmost or exceedingly great in degree (as, extreme joy; extreme peril); also, of a character or kind farthest removed from the ordinary or average (as, an extreme case; extreme measures); going to the utmost lengths, or exceeding the bounds of moderation (as, extreme fashions; extreme opinions); of persons, going to the utmost or very great lengths in action, habit, opinion, etc. (as, "Be not as extreme in submission As in offence," Shakspeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor" iv. 4. 11; "In conversation frivolous, in dress Extreme," Cowper's "Task," ii. 380; an extreme socialist). II. n. The utmost point, or extremity, of something (obs. or rare); the utmost or highest degree, or a very high degree (as, showy in the extreme, or to an extreme); the furthest or utmost length, or an excessive length, beyond the ordinary or average (as, in the extreme of fashion; to go to extremes in dress); also, one of two things as remote or different from each other as possible (as, "twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief": Shakspeare's "King Lear," v. 3. 198); in math., the first or the last term, as of a proportion or series.—ex-treme'ly, adv. In an extreme degree; exceedingly.—ex-treme'ness, n.—ex-trem'ism (-trēm'izm), n. Tendency or disposition to go to extremes.—ex-trem'ist. I. n. One who goes to extremes; a supporter of extreme doctrines or practices. II. a. Belonging or pertaining to extremists; radical.—ex-trem'i-ty (-trēm'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [OF. extremité (F. extrémité), < L. extremitas, < extremus.] The extreme or terminal point, limit, or part of something; specif., a limb of the body, or the end part of a limb, as a hand or foot (chiefly in pl.); also, a person's last moments (chiefly in pl.); also, the utmost or an extreme degree (as, the extremity of joy; clear to an extremity; "They endured the last extremities of thirst and hunger," Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," xxiv.); a condition, or, in pl., circumstances, of extreme need, distress, etc. (as, "Florence was reduced to the last extremity": Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," xxx.); an extreme measure (chiefly in pl.: as, to be forced to proceed to extremities); also, extreme character, as of views.

ex-tri-ca-ble (eks'tri-kā-bl), a. That may be extricated.

ex-tri-cate (eks'tri-kāt), v. t.; -cated, -cating. [L. extricatus, pp. of extricare, < ex, out of, + trix, trifles, hindrances, perplexities.] To disengage from anything that entangles; set free, as a person from an embarrassing situation, difficulties, etc.; liberate (gas, etc.) from a state of combination, as during a chemical process; also, to unravel (something tangled, literally or figuratively: now rare).—ex-tri-ca'tion (kă'shən), n.

ex-trin-sic (eks-trin'sik), a. [F. extrinsèque, < LL. extrinsecus, adj., outward, < L. extrinsecus, adv., from without, without, < exter, outer (see exterior), + secus, beside, akin to sequi, follow.] Being outside of a thing; outward or external; also, operating or coming from without; extraneous; adventitious; unessential.—ex-trin'si-cal-ly, adv.

ex-tor-se (eks-trō's), a. [LL. extrorsus, in. an outward direction, < L. extra, outside, + versus, toward.] In bot., turned or facing outward, as anthers which open toward the perianth.—ex-tor-se'ly, adv.

ex-tro-ver-sion (eks-trō-vēr'shən), n. The act of extroverting; extroverted state; in psychol., interest directed outward or to things outside the self (cf. introversion).
ex-tro-vert (eks-trō-vêrt'), v. t. [Irreg. < L. extra, outside, + vertere (pp. versus), turn: cf. introvert.] To turn outward; turn inside out; direct (the mind, etc.) toward external things.—ex'tro-vert, n. In psychol., one characterized by extroversion; a person concerned chiefly with what is external or objective. Cf. introvert.—ex-tro-vert'ed, p. a. In psychol., characterized by extroversion.

ex-trude (eks-trōd'), v.; -truded, -truding. [L. extrudere (pp. extrusus), < ex, out of, + trudere, thrust.] I. tr. To thrust out; force or press out; hence, to expel; sometimes, to protrude. II. intr. To protrude.—ex-tru'sion (trō'shən), n. The act of extruding, or the fact of being extruded; expulsion; protrusion.—ex-tru'sive (-siv), a. Tending to extrude; pertaining to extrusion; in geol., of rocks, having been forced out in a molten or plastic condition at the surface of the earth.

ex-u-ber-ant (eg-zū'bĕ-rant), a. [L. exuberans (-ant-), ppr. of exuberare: see exuberate.] Profuse in growth or production; richly or excessively luxuriant; superabundant; overflowing; lavish; effusive.—ex-u'ber-ance, ex-u'ber-an-cy, n.—ex-u'ber-ant-ly, adv.

ex-u-ber-ate (eg-zū'bĕ-rāt), v. i.; -ated, -ating. [L. exuberatus, pp. of exuberare, grow with great luxuriance, superabound, < ex, utterly, + uberare, be fruitful, < uber, fruitful.] To be exuberant; superabound; overflow.

ex-u-date (ek'sū-dāt), v. i. or t.; -dated, -dating. [L. exdatus, pp. of exudare: see exude.] To exude. [Now rare.]—ex-u-date, n. A substance exuded; an exudation.—ex-u-da'tion (-dā'shən), n. The act of exuding; also, that which is exuded; a sweat-like issue or discharge through pores or small openings.—ex-u-da-tive (ek'sū-dā-tiv), a. Pertaining to or characterized by exudation.

ex-ude (ek'sūd'), v.; -uded, -uding. [L. exudare, for exsudare, < ex, out of, + sudare, sweat.] I. intr. To come out gradually in drops like sweat through pores or small openings; ooze out. II. tr. To send out like sweat; emit through pores or small openings.

ex-ul-cer-ate (eg-zul'sĕr-āt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [L. exulceratus, pp. of exulcerare, < ex, utterly, + ulcerare: see ulcerate.] To ulcerate; inflame; exasperate; embitter. [Archaic.]—ex-ul-cer-a'tion (-ā'shən), n.

ex-ult (eg-zult'), v. i. [L. exultare, for exsultare, freq. of exsilire, leap out or up, < ex, out, + salire, leap.] To leap, esp. for joy† (as, "The sea subsiding spreads a level plain, Exults, and owns the monarch of the main": Pope's tr. Homer's "Iliad," xiii.); hence, to manifest or feel a lively or triumphant joy; rejoice exceedingly; be highly elated.—ex-ult'ance, ex-ult'an-cy, n. Exultation.—ex-ult'ant, a. Exulting; highly elated; triumphant.—ex-ult'ant-ly, adv.—ex-ul-ta'tion (ek-sul-tā'shən), n. [L. exultatio(n).] The act of exulting; lively or triumphant joy, as over success or victory.—ex-ult'ing-ly, adv.

ex-u-vi-æ (ek-sū'vi-ē), n. pl. [L., < exuere, put off, strip: cf. induere, put on, E. induē.] Cast skins, shells, or other coverings of animals.—ex-u'vi-al, a.—ex-u'vi-ate (-āt), v. i. or t.; -ated, -ating. To cast off or shed (exuviae).—ex-u-vi-a'tion (-ā'shən), n.

ex vo-to (eks vō'tō). [L., 'from a vow.'] In pursuance of a vow: a phrase also used as an adjective or noun, ex-voto, with reference to offerings made.

-ey. Form of -y, adjective suffix, used esp. after y, as in clayey, skyey, whzey.

e-ya-let (ā-yā-let'), n. [Turk.] Same as vilayet.

ey-as (ī'ās), n. [For nyas, nias, < OF. F. niāis, being a nestling, < L. nidus, nest.] A nestling; in falconry, a hawk taken from the nest for training, as distinguished from one caught and trained.

eye (ī), n.; pl. eyes, archaic eyen (ī'ĕn) or eyne (īn). [AS. ēage = D. oog = G. auge = Icel. auga = Goth. augo, eye: cf. L. oculus, eye.] The organ of sight or vision;

this organ with respect to the color of the iris (as, blue or brown eyes); the region surrounding this organ (as, the blow gave him a black eye); also, the action of the eyes, sight, or vision (often in pl.: as, a strange sight met his eye; to have no eyes for anything else); field or range of vision†; fig., mental view

Human Eye, in median vertical anteroposterior section. (Ciliary processes shown, though not all lying in this section.)

A, anterior, and A', posterior chambers of aqueous humor; a, central artery of retina; C, cornea; Ch, choroid; Cj, conjunctiva; cm, ciliary muscle; cp, ciliary processes; H, hyaloid; I, iris; L, crystalline lens in its capsule (the reference-line passes through the pupil); l, l', insertion of tendon of superior and inferior rectus muscles; o, optic nerve; P, canal of Petit; R, retina; S, sclerotic; s, s', circular sinus or canal of Schlemm; V, vitreous body filling back part of the eye.

... In my mind's eye, Horatio": Shakspeare's "Hamlet," i. 2. 185); also, look, glance, or gaze (often in pl.: as, to cast one's eye on a thing; to raise one's eyes); a glance (as, to make eyes at a person or thing, to throw amorous or covetous glances at him or it); also, attentive look, close observation, or watch (often in pl.: as, to keep an eye on a person; to be under the eye of some one; to be all eyes); regard, respect, view, aim, or intention (as, to have an eye to one's own advantage; to concur with an eye to win favor); also, power of seeing; appreciative or discriminating visual perception (as, to have an eye for color, or for proportion); also, manner or way of looking at a thing, estimation, or opinion (often in pl.: as, in the eye of the law; in the eyes of the world); also, something resembling or suggesting the eye in appearance, shape, etc., as the bud of a tuber, the central spot of a target, one of the round spots on the tail-feathers of a peacock, the hole of a needle, a hole pierced in a thing for the insertion of some object, a metal or other ring as for a rope to pass through, or the loop into which a hook is inserted (forming together with the hook a 'hook and eye'); also, in fig. use, a center of light, intelligence, influence, etc. (as, the eye of day, the sun; "Athens, the eye of Greece, mother of arts," Milton's "Paradise Regained," iv. 240); also, a tinge† or shade† (as, "Ant. The ground indeed is tawny. Seb. With an eye of green in 't": Shakspeare's "Tempest," ii. 1. 55).—eye of the wind, naut., the precise direction from which the wind is blowing.—eyes right, or eyes left, milit., the command given to turn the head and eyes to the right or to the left.—eye, v.; eyed, eying or eyeing. I. tr. To fix the eyes upon; view; often, to observe or watch narrowly. II.† intr. To appear to the eye. See Shakspeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," i. 3. 97.—eye'-able, a. Visible; also, pleasing to the eye.—eye'-ball, n. The ball or globe of the eye.—eye'-bright, n. Any of various scrophulariaceous herbs of the genus Euphrasia, as E. officinalis of Europe, which was formerly used for diseases of the eye; also, any of various other plants, as the germander speedwell, Veronica chamaedrys.—eye'-brow, n. The arch or ridge forming the upper part of the orbit of the eye, or the fringe of hair growing upon it.—eye'=cup, n. A device for applying lotions to the eye, consisting of a cup or glass with a rim shaped to fit snugly about the orbit of the eye.—eyed (īd), a. Having eyes; marked with eye-like spots.—eye'=drop, n. A tear (see Shakspeare's "2

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) ērrant, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

Henry IV.," iv. 5. 88); pl., an eye-wash.—eye'=glass, n. The crystalline lens of the eye† (see Shakspere's "Winter's Tale," i. 2. 268); also, a lens to assist defective vision; pl., a pair of such lenses, esp. when kept in position by a spring which compresses the nose (as distinguished from spectacles, which have bows for the ears); also, sing., the eyepiece of a telescope, microscope, or other optical instrument; also, an eye-cup.—eye'=glassed, a. Wearing eye-glasses.—eye'-hole, n. The socket or orbit of the eye; a hole to look through, as in a mask or a curtain; a circular opening for the insertion of a pin, hook, rope, etc.—eye'lash, n. One of the short, thick, curved hairs growing as a fringe on the edge of an eyelid; also, the whole fringe of such hairs.—eye'less, a. Lacking eyes; blind.

eye-let (i'let), n. [Orig. ME. oilet, < OF. F. œillet, dim. of œil, < L. oculus, eye, but later associated with E. eye.] A small, typically round hole, esp. one finished at the edge, as in cloth or leather, for the passage of a lace or cord, or in embroidery, for ornament; a metal ring for lining a small hole; an eyehole in a wall, mask, etc.; also, a small eye.—eye'let, v. t.; -leted, -leting. To make eyelets (holes) in; also, to insert metal eyelets in.—eye-let-eer' (-le-tēr'), n. A small pointed instrument for making eyelet-holes; a stiletto.—eye'let=hole, n. An eyelet, or small hole.

eye-lid (i'lid), n. The movable lid of skin which serves to cover (and uncover) the eyeball.

eye-o-pen-er (i'ô'pn-ēr), n. Something that causes the eyes to open, as an enlightening or startling disclosure or experience; also, a drink of liquor, esp. one taken early in the day. [Colloq.]

eye-piece (i'pēs), n. In an optical instrument, the lens or combination of lenses to which the eye is applied.

ey-er (i'ēr), n. One who eyes, or watches narrowly.

eye=ser-vant (i'sēr'vant), n. A servant or other who attends to his duty only when watched by his employer. Also eye'=serv'er.—eye'=ser'vice, n. Service performed only under the eye or watch of the employer (see Col. iii. 22); also, homage paid with the eyes; admiring looks.

eye-shot (i'shot), n. Range of vision; view; also, a glance.

eye-sight (i'sit), n. The power or faculty of seeing; also, the action or fact of seeing; also, the range of the eye.

eye-sore (i'sör), n. Something offensive to the eye; an object of dislike.

eye-spot (i'spot), n. An eye-like spot, as on the tail of a peacock; one of the three round spots or scars at one end of a coconut; also, a rudimentary sensory organ, in many of the lower animals, supposed to have a visual function; a spot supposedly sensitive to light, on certain unicellular algae; also, the rudiment of an eye in an embryo.

eye-stalk (i'stāk), n. In zool., the stalk or peduncle upon which the eye is borne in lobsters, shrimps, etc.

eye-stone (i'stōn), n. A small calcareous body, flat on one side and convex on the other, passed between the eye and the eyelid to bring out cinders, etc.

eye-strain (i'strān), n. The strained condition or weakness of the eyes caused by excessive use, uncorrected vision, reading in dim light, etc.: often giving rise to headache or other disorders.

eye-strings (i'stringz), n. pl. The muscles, tendons, or nerves of the eye: formerly supposed to break at death or on loss of sight.

eye-tooth (i'tōth), n.; pl. -teeth (-tēth). A canine tooth, esp. of the upper jaw: so named from its position under the eye.

eye-wash (i'wosh), n. A lotion for the eyes.

eye-wa-ter (i'wā'tēr), n. An eye-wash; also, the fluid refractive media of the eye.

eye-wink (i'wingk), n. A wink of the eye; also, the time taken to wink; an instant; also, a look or glance.—eye'=wink'er, n. An eyelash.

eye-wit-ness (i'wit'nes), n. One who actually beholds some act or occurrence, and hence can give testimony concerning it.

ey-ot (i'ot), n. [Var. of ait.] An islet; an ait. [Eng.]

ey-ra (ā'rā), n. [S. Amer.] An American wildcat, Felis eyra, found from Paraguay to southern Texas.

eyre (ār), n. [OF. eire, < errer, journey, travel: see errant.] A journey in a circuit (as, justices in eyre, formerly, justices who rode the circuit to hold court; "a regular system of judicial eyres," Stubbs's "Constitutional Hist. of Eng.," xi. § 134); also, the court held by justices in eyre.

ey-rie, ey-ry (ā'ri or ē'ri), n. See *aery*².

Eyra.

F

F, f (ef); pl. F's, f's (efs). A consonant, the 6th letter of the English alphabet.

fa (fā), n. In music, the syllable used for the fourth tone of the scale (F, in the major scale of C), and sometimes for the tone F. See sol-fa.

fa-ba-ceous (fā-bā'shius), a. [L. fabaceus, < faba, bean.] Of the bean kind; bean-like; specif., belonging to the Fabaceæ, or bean family of plants, including many herbs, shrubs, and trees, as the bean, pea, lentil, furze, broom, locust, etc., which bear seeds in pods or legumes. Cf. leguminous.

Fa-bi-an (fā'bi-ān), I. a. Characteristic or suggestive of Quintus Fabius Maximus Cunctator ('the Delayer'), a Roman general who sought to wear out the enemy (Hannibal) by harassing tactics without risking a decisive battle; cautiously dilatory; hence, designating or pertaining to a socialistic society founded in London about 1884, advocating a socialism of the more moderate type, to be spread gradually without attempts at revolutionary action. II. n. A member of or sympathizer with the Fabian Society.

fa-ble (fā'bl), n. [OF. F. fable, < L. fabula, < fari, speak, say.] A story or tale; esp., a short story (often with animals or inanimate things as speakers or actors) devised to convey a moral; an apologue; also, a legend or myth; legendary story; also, a mere fiction or fabrication; also, the plot of an epic or dramatic poem; also, a subject of common talk; a byword.—fa'ble, v.; -bled, -bling. I. intr. To tell or write fables; romance; also, to tell false stories; lie. II. tr. To invent or tell as a fable; relate, celebrate, or represent in a fable; also, to make up falsely (as, "I fabled nothing fair, But . . . told her all": Tennyson's "Princess," iii. 120); fabricate; feign.—fa'bled, p. a. Related or celebrated in fables; legendary; also, having no real existence; fictitious.—fa'bler, n.

fab-li-au (fab-li-ō'), n.; pl. -aux (-ōz'). [F., a dim. form < OF. fable, E. fable.] One of the short metrical tales of the medieval French trouvères.

fab-ric (fab'rik), n. [OF. F. fabrique, < L. fabrica, workshop, art, product of art, structure, < faber, artisan.] Something constructed; a structure, edifice, or frame (as, "We build with what we deem eternal rock: A distant age asks where the fabric stood": Cowper's "Task," v. 535); any system of combined parts; specif., a material made by weaving, felting, or otherwise combining fibers; a cloth, texture, or tissue; also, the act or process of constructing; also, mode of construction; structure, formation, or make.

fab-ri-cant (fab'ri-kānt), n. [F. fabricant, < L. fabricans (-ant-), ppr.] One who fabricates; a manufacturer.

fab-ri-cate (fab'ri-kāt), v. t.; -cated, -cating. [L. fabricatus, pp. of fabricari, fabricare, make, construct, < fabrica: see fabric. To make by art and labor; construct; frame; manufacture; specif., to construct by the putting together of standard parts or sections, as certain ships built in the U. S. during the World War from parts made, shaped, punched, etc., in different steel-mills, foundries, machine-shops, etc., and delivered to the shipyards ready for assembling; manufacture (standard parts or sections) for such construction; also, to make up or invent; concoct; devise falsely.—fab-ri-ca'tion (-kā'shən), n. [L. fabricatio(n)-]. The act of fabricating; construction; manufacture; fictitious invention; also, something fabricated, as a false story.—fab-ri-ca-tive (-kā-tiv), a. Fabricating; constructive.—fab-ri-ca-tor (-kā-tər), n.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ", secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

fab-ri-koid (fab'ri-koid), n. [See fabric and -oid.] An impervious fabric, in most varieties leather-like in appearance, having a cloth foundation and a pyroxylin surface, used in upholstering furniture and automobiles, binding books, making traveling goods, and for various other purposes where it replaces leather, cloth, paper, metal, etc. [Proprietary name.]

fab-u-lar (fab'ū-lār), a. [L. fabularis.] Pertaining to or of the nature of a fable; fabulous.

fab-u-list (fab'ū-list), n. [F. fabuliste.] One who invents or relates fables.

fab-u-lous (fab'ū-lus), a. [L. fabulosus.] Of the nature of a fable; characterized by fables; legendary; also, belonging to fable; mythical; imaginary; also, like a fable; incredible or amazing (as, fabulous wealth; a fabulous price); also, addicted to telling fables.—fab'u-lous-ly, adv.—fab'u-lous-ness, n.

fa-çade (fā-sād'), n. [F., < It. facciata, < faccia, < L. facies, E. face.] The face or front, or a principal face, of a building.

face (fās), n. [OF. F. face, < L. facies, form, appearance, face.] The front of the head; the visage or countenance; an expression of countenance (as, an unhappy face); a grimace (as, to make faces); assurance or effrontery (as, to have the face to deny a fact); aspect, appearance, show, or semblance (as in the title of Charles Kingsley's novel, "Hypatia; or, New Foes with an Old Face"); front, sight, or presence (as, "Moses fled from the face of Pharaoh": Ex. ii. 15); in general, the front, principal, or working surface, as of a clock, a type, or a tool; any surface, as of a cube; of a document, the manifest sense or express terms; the amount specified in a bill or note, exclusive of interest; in mining, the front or end of a drift or excavation, where the material is being mined or was last mined; in fort., either of the two outer sides which form the salient angle of a bastion or the like; sometimes, the front between two adjacent bastions; milit., any side of a battalion or the like when formed in a square. Used in many fig. phrases: as, to set one's face against a plan; to put a good face on a bad matter; to hold firm in the face of the enemy or of danger; to save one's face (to save one's dignity or general credit).—face, v.; faced, facing. I. tr. To have or turn the face toward; look toward; hence, to confront; meet boldly; brave; also, to cause to present the face; also, to overlay with some material; also, to dress the surface of (stone, etc.).

II. intr. To have or turn the face in a given direction; front (on, to, or toward).—face'=card, n. A playing-card on which a face is represented; a court-card.—faced, a. Having a face or visage (as, round-faced); also, having a special finish on the face or surface (as, faced cloth; satin-faced ribbon).—face'=hard'en, v. t. To harden the face or surface of (steel or other metal, or a metallic object) by chilling, case-hardening, or the like. Cf. case-harden.—fa-cer (fā'sér), n. One who or that which faces; also, a blow in the face; fig., a staggering check or reverse.

fa-cet (fas'et), n. [F. facette, dim. of face, E. face.] A little face, esp. one of the small polished surfaces of a cut gem; in arch., the fillet between the flutings of a column; in zool., one of the divisions of the cornea, as of an insect, forming the surface of one of the small eyes of a compound eye.—fa'cet, v. t.—-ceded, -ceting. To cut a facet or facets on.

Compound Eye of Housefly (side view) showing Facets. (Highly magnified.)

fa-cete (fā-sēt'), a. [L. facetus, fine, elegant, witty.] Elegant or polished; also, witty or facetious (obs. or archaic).—fa-ce-ti-æ (fā-sē'shi-ē), n. pl. [L., pl. of facetia, a witticism, < facetus: see facete.] Witty or humorous sayings or writings (as, "The reply is . . . among the most celebrated of facetiae": Motley's "Dutch Republic," i. 1); also, in booksellers' and collectors' catalogues, books of a coarsely humorous (or indecent) kind.

fa-ce-tious (fā-sē'shus), a. [F. facétieux, < facétie, < L. facetia: see facetiae.] Characterized by or given to pleasant; jocose; jocular; wagish: as, a facetious remark; a facetious companion.—fa-ce'tious-ly, adv.—fa-ce'tious-ness, n.

fa-cial (fā'shāl), a. [ML. facialis.] Of or pertaining to the face.—facial angle, in craniom., the angle formed by a line passing from the nostril to the center of the external auditory opening, and another line from the nostril to the most prominent part of the forehead ('facial angle of Camper').—fa'cial-ly, adv.

fa-ci-end (fā'shi-end), n. [L. faciendum, neut. gerundive of facere, do, make.] In math., a magnitude which is operated upon, as a multiplicand.

-facient. [L. facient-, nom. faciens, ppr. of facere, do, make.] A termination of adjectives meaning 'making' or 'causing' (something), and of nouns denoting an agent that causes something, as in abortifacient, absorbefacient, liquefacient, rubefacient.

fa-cile (fas'il), a. [OF. F. facile, < L. facilis, easy to do, easy, < facere, do, make.] Easily done, performed, used, etc. (as, a facile task or operation; facile methods or means); presenting little difficulty; also, moving, acting, working, proceeding, etc., with ease (as, a facile hand, tongue, or pen; the gift of facile expression); ready; fluent; also, easy or unconstrained, as manners or persons; affable, agreeable, or complaisant; mild, indulgent, or lenient; easily influenced, pliant, or yielding (as, "Since Adam and his facile consort Eve Lost Paradise": Milton's "Paradise Regained," i. 51).—fa'cile-ly, adv.—fa'cile-ness, n.

fa-cil-i-tate (fā-sil'i-tāt), v. t.; -tated, -tating. [F. faciliter, < L. facilis, easy, E. facile.] To make easy or less difficult; lessen the labor of; help forward (a process); also, to assist the progress of (a person).—fa-cil-i-ta'tion (-tā'shən), n.—fa-cil'i-ta-tor, n.

fa-cil-i-ty (fā-sil'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [F. facilité, < L. facilitas, < facilis, easy, E. facile.] The quality of being facile, or easily performed, used, etc.; also, opportunity or a means for the easy performance of something (as, to afford facility of movement; facilities for communication); also, readiness or dexterity proceeding from skill or practice; ease; aptitude; fluency, as of style; also, ease of manners; affability or complaisance; pliancy of mind or disposition.
fa-ci-ne-ri-ous (fas-i-nē'ri-us), a. Same as facinorous. See Shakspeare's "All's Well" ii. 3. 35.

fa-cing (fā'sing), n. The act of one who or that which faces; also, a covering in front, for ornament, protection, etc.; a superficial layer, as one of stone or other material forming the face of a wall, etc.; material applied on the face of a garment, as for trimming or protection; pl., coverings of a different color applied on the collar, cuffs, or other parts of a military coat.

fa-cin-o-rous (fā-sin'ō-rus), a. [L. facinorosus, < facinus (facinor-), deed, bad deed, < facere, do, make.] Atrociously wicked. [Archaic.]

fac-sim-i-le (fak-sim'i-lē). [L. fac, impv. of facere, do, make, + simile, neut. of similis, like.] I. n. An exact copy or likeness. II. a. Of the nature of a facsimile; also, producing facsimiles.—facsimile telegraph, a telegraphic device for transmitting facsimiles of written messages, drawings, etc.—fac-sim'i-le, v. t.; -led (-lēd), -leing. To make, or serve as, a facsimile of.

fact (fakt), n. [L. factum, a thing done, prop. neut. of factus, pp. of facere, do, make.] A deed or act, often an evil deed (now only in certain legal phrases, as before the fact and after the fact); also, something that has really happened, or is actually the case; a real occurrence, or state of things, as distinguished from something merely alleged or believed; hence, a truth known by actual observation or authentic testimony; loosely, something which is alleged to be, and may or may not be, the case (as, the truth of the fact is in question; his facts are not trustworthy); also, actual occurrence, or reality (as, matters of fact; in fact rather than in theory).

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

fac-tion (fak'shən), n. [F. faction, < L. factio(n-), a doing or making, action, party, faction, < facere, do, make: cf. fashion.] An action† or proceeding†; also, a company of persons acting or associated together or having a common end in view; now, usually, a group or body of persons with strongly and narrowly partisan aims; often, a party, or a section of a party, disposed toward unscrupulous or lawless means of advancing its purposes; also, party strife; dissension.—fac-tion-al, a.—fac-tion-ist, n. A promoter or a member of a faction.—fac-tious (-shus), a. [L. factiosus, < factio(n-).] Given to faction or party strife; turbulent; also, pertaining to or proceeding from faction, as actions.—fac-tious-ly, adv.—fac-tious-ness, n.

fac-ti-tious (fak-tish'us), a. [L. facticiosus, < facere, do, make.] Made, manufactured, or artificial, as a product of art or labor; also, made, contrived, or worked up, rather than spontaneous or natural (as, a factitious demand for a commodity; a factitious value; factitious enthusiasm); made for the purpose or occasion; conventional.—fac-ti-tious-ly, adv.—fac-ti-tious-ness, n.

fac-ti-tive (fak-ti-tiv), a. [NL. factitivus, < L. facere, do, make.] In gram., making or rendering as specified, as a verb when used with an adjunct expressing something predicated of the direct object, as in 'they made him their ruler' and 'to paint the house red'; pertaining to such a verb.—fac-ti-tive-ly, adv.

fac-tor (fak'tər), n. [L. doer, maker, < facere, do, make.] One who does or makes something (obs. or archaic); also, one who acts, or transacts business, for another; specif., a commission-merchant; an agent intrusted with the possession of goods for sale; also, the steward or bailiff of an estate (now only Sc.); a person legally appointed to have charge of forfeited or sequestered property (Sc.); a person warned as a garnishee (local, U. S.); in math., one of two or more numbers, algebraic expressions, or the like, which when multiplied together produce a given product (as, 6 and 3 are factors of 18); hence, in general, one of the elements that contribute to bring about any given result.—fac-tor, v. t. In math., to resolve into factors.—fac-tor-age (-āj), n. The action or business of a factor; also, the allowance or commission paid to a factor.—fac-to-ri-al (-tō'ri-əl), I. a. Of or pertaining to a factor or a factory; in math., of or pertaining to factors or factorials. II. n. In math., the product of an integer multiplied by all the lower integers: as, the factorial of 4 is $4 \times 3 \times 2 \times 1 = 24$.—fac-tor-ize, v. t.; -ized, -izing. In law, to garnish; in math., to resolve into factors.—fac-tor-ship, n. The office or business of a factor.

fac-to-ry (fak'tō-ri), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). [ML. factoria, < L. factor: see factor.] An establishment for factors and merchants carrying on business in a foreign country; also, a building or group of buildings, usually with equipment, where goods are manufactured (as, "Everywhere there sprang up factories using first water then steam power": H. G. Wells's "Outline of History," xxxvi. § 12).

fac-to-rum (fak-tō'tum), n. [L. fac, impv. of facere, do, make, + totum, neut. of totus, all, whole.] A busybody†; also, one employed to do all kinds of work for another (as, "Saunders was a model valet and factotum": Reade's "Christie Johnstone," i.).

fac-tu-al (fak'tū-əl), a. Pertaining to facts; of the nature of fact; real.—fac-tu-al-ly, adv.

fac-tum (fak'tum), n.; pl. -ta (-tā). [L.: see fact.] A statement of the facts of a case or controversy; a memorial. fac-ture (fak'tūr), n. [L. factura, < facere, do, make.] The act, process, or manner of making anything; construction; also, the thing made.

fac-u-la (fak'ū-lā), n.; pl. -læ (-lē). [L., dim. of fax, torch.] In astron., one of the irregular patches on the sun's disk, brighter than the general surface.—fac-u-lar (-lār), a.

fac-ul-ta-tive (fak'ul-tā-tiv), a. Conferring a faculty, privilege, or permission, or the power of doing or not doing something (as, a facultative enactment); hence, left to one's option or choice; optional; also, that may or may not take place; that may or may not assume a specified character; in biol., having the power to exist under different conditions of life (opposed to obligate).

fac-ul-ty (fak'ul-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [OF. faculte (F. faculté), < L. facultas, ability, power, means, property, akin to facul, easily, facilis, easy: cf. facility and difficulty.] A capacity, natural or acquired, for a particular kind of action; an inherent capability of the body or of a bodily organ, as sight or hearing; one of the powers of the mind, as memory or reason; one of the aptitudes supposed in phrenology to be indicated by the natural protuberances, or bumps, of the skull; executive ability, or efficiency (colloq.); pecuniary ability, or resources (often in pl.: now rare); also, one of the departments of learning, as theology, medicine, or law, in a university; the teaching body, sometimes with the students, in any of these departments; the entire teaching force of a university, college, or school; also, an art or profession (archaic); the members of a learned profession, esp. the medical profession; also, a power or privilege conferred; a dispensation, license, or authorization (esp. eccles.). fac-und (fak'und or fa-kund'), a. [OF. facond, < L. facundus, < fari, speak.] Eloquent. [Archaic.]

fad (fad), n. [Origin unknown.] A favored or popular pursuit, diversion, fashion, etc., prevailing for a time; a pet practice or notion; a hobby.—fad'dish, a. Fad-like; given to fads.—fad'dism, n. Addiction to fads.—fad'-dist, n.—fad'dy, a. Faddish.

fade (fād, F. fād), a. [OF. F. fade, prob. < L. vapidus, E. vapid.] Having lost freshness, strength, or life; faded; colorless; dull; insipid; flat. [Archaic except as French.]
—fade, v.; faded, fad'-g. [OF. fader, < fade.] I. intr. To lose freshness and vigor; wither, as a plant; fail gradually in strength or health, as a person; often, to lose youthful freshness, coloring, etc., as with the passage of time; also, to lose brightness or vividness, as light or color; in general, to fail or disappear gradually; die gradually (away or out). II. tr. To cause to fade: as, "No winter could his laurels fade" (Dryden's "Stanzas on Oliver Cromwell," xv.).—fade'less, a. Not fading.—fade'less-ly, adv.

fadge (faj), v. i.; fadged, fadging. [Origin unknown.] To fit or suit; agree; succeed or thrive; make one's way. [Obs. or prov. Eng.]

fad-ing (fad'ing), n. [Origin unknown.] The name of a kind of dance: also used in the phrase 'with a fading,' in the burden of a song (cf. Shakspeare's "Winter's Tale," iv. 4. 195).

fæ-ces (fē'sēz), etc. See feces, etc.

fæc-u-la (fek'ū-lā), n. See fecula.

fa-er-ie, fa-er-y (fā'ēr-i). [Var. of fairy.] I. n. Fairy-land; also, a fairy. [Archaic.] II. a. Fairy. [Archaic.]

fag¹ (fag), v.; fagged, fagging. [Origin obscure: cf. flag¹.] I. intr. To flag or droop (now Sc. and prov. Eng.); also, to work till wearied; work hard (as, "I fagged away at German": C. Brontë's "Jane Eyre," xxxiv.); labor; toil; also, to act as a fag. II. tr. To tire by labor; weary; also, to make a fag of.—fag¹, n. Drudgery; toil; also, in English schools, a boy who performs menial services for another boy in a higher form or class (as, "His lordship . . . talked much of my uncle . . . whose fag he had been at Eton": Lever's "Harry Lorrequer," iii.); hence, a drudge.

fag² (fag), n. [Cf. fag¹, v.] A fag-end, as of a piece of cloth or of a cigar; also, a cigarette (slang, Eng.).

fa-ga-ceous (fā-gā'shius), a. [L. fagus, beech.] Belonging to the Fagaceæ, or beech family of trees and shrubs, which includes the beech, chestnut, oak, etc.

fag-end (fag'end'), n. [See fag².] The unfinished end of a piece of cloth; the untwisted end of a rope; hence, the last and inferior part of anything; a remnant; the very end of something (as, "the fag-end of the eighth volume," Sterne's "Tristram Shandy," viii. 35; the fag-end of the evening).

fag-ger (fag'ēr), n. One who fags.

fag-ot, fag-got (fag'ot), n. [OF. F. fagot; origin uncertain.] A bundle of sticks, twigs, or small branches of trees bound together, used for fuel, as a fascine, etc., and often formerly in burning heretics alive; also, a bundle of pieces of iron or steel to be welded; in fig. use, a collection (as, a fagot of selections).—fag'ot, fag'got, v. t. To bind or make into a fagot; also, to ornament with fagoting. —fag'ot-ing, fag'-got-ing, n. A kind of drawn-work in which threads are drawn out along a line and the remaining cross-threads are arranged in a succession of bundles, each bound together in the middle.

Fagoting.

fa-got-to (fä-got'tō), n.; pl. -ti (-tē). [It.] A bassoon.

fahl-band (fāl'band, G. fäl'bānt), n. [G., 'fallow band.'] In mining, a belt or zone of rock impregnated with metallic sulphides.

Fah-ren-heit (fä'ren-hīt or far'en-), a. Noting or pertaining to a thermometric scale introduced by G. D. Fahrenheit (1686–1736), a German physicist, in which the melting-point of ice is 32° above the zero, and the boiling-point of water 212° above the zero. Abbreviated F. and Fahr.

fa-i-ence (fä-yōns), n. [F. faience, orig. pottery of Faenza, city in northeastern Italy.] A glazed earthenware or pottery, esp. a fine variety with highly colored designs.

fail (fāl), v. [OF. F. faillir, < L. fallere (pp. falsus), deceive, disappoint: cf. false and fault.] I. intr. To be wanting or lacking; be inadequate or insufficient; also, to become exhausted, as supplies; fall off, dwindle, or pass away (as, "Where wealth and freedom reign, contentment fails": Goldsmith's "Travel-ler," 91); die away (as, "The sound, upon the fitful gale, In solemn wise did rise and fail": Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," i. 31); also, to lose strength or vigor; become weaker; also, to prove deficient upon trial; break down, as under strain or pressure (as, "O let the solid ground Not fail beneath my feet": Tennyson's "Maud," i. 11. 1); prove wanting at need; also, to be wanting or deficient in some respect (as, the portrait fails in expression; an argument which fails of coherence); also, to come short of performing duties or functions (as, "Nature fail'd in me": Milton's "Paradise Lost," viii. 534); also, to prove or be unsuccessful, as in an attempt or enterprise (as, "Our envious foe hath fail'd," Milton's "Paradise Lost," vii. 139; "My project fails," Shakspeare's "Tempest," Epilogue, 12); result badly, as crops; come short of obtaining something desired or accomplishing something attempted (with of: as, "A new translation . . . could not fail of a favourable reception," Johnson, in Boswell's "Johnson," 1737; "His man never failed of bringing in his prey," Steele, in "Guardian," 17); specif., to become insolvent or bankrupt. II. tr. To become weak or faint within (one), as the heart, courage, memory, etc.; prove of no use or avail to, as some expected or usual resource; also, to lack or want (now rare); also, to neglect to perform or observe (now chiefly with an infinitive: as, "Burst be the ear that fails to heed!" Scott's "Lady of the Lake," iii. 11); also, to prove unsuccessful in, or prove unable (with an infinitive: as, "You scarce can fail to match his masterpiece," Tennyson's "Gardener's Daughter," 31). — fail, n. [OF. faile, faillie.] Failure: now only in the phrase following. — without fail, without failure as to performance, occurrence, etc.: as, I will pay you to-morrow without fail; come Saturday without fail. — fail'er, n. — fail'ing, n. The act or state of one who or that which fails; a failure; also, a defect, shortcoming, or weakness (as, "And e'en his failings lean'd to virtue's side": Goldsmith's "Deserted Village," 164). — fail'ing, prep. [Orig. ppr.] In default of. — fail'ing-ly, adv.

Armorial Faience.

faillo (fāl, F. fä-y'), n. [F.] A soft, transversely ribbed silk fabric.

fail-ure (fāl'ūr), n. [AF. failer, orig. inf., OF. faillir, E.

fail.] The act of failing, or the state of having failed; lack or default; deficiency; a becoming exhausted; loss of strength or vigor; a giving way under trial; omission of performance of something due or required; a proving unsuccessful, or want of success; a becoming insolvent or bankrupt; also, one who or that which proves unsuccessful. fain (fān), a. [AS. fægen = Icel. feginn, glad.] Glad, pleased, or rejoiced (archaic or prov.); also, content or willing (with an infinitive); hence, constrained or obliged (as, to be fain to acknowledge that one is in the wrong); also, desirous or eager (archaic or prov.). — fain, adv. Gladly; willingly; by preference. [Archaic.]

fai-naigue (fä-nā'g'), v.; — naigued, — naiguing. [Origin uncertain: cf. renege.] I. intr. To renege at cards; renege; also, to break one's word; evade duty; shirk; also, to use guile; finagle. [Prov. Eng.] II. tr. To get by guile; finagle. [Prov. Eng.] — fai-naig'uer (-nā'g'ēr), n.

fai-né-ant (fä-nā-ān). [F., < faire, do, + néant, nothing.] I. a. That does nothing; idle; indolent: an epithet applied to the later Merovingian kings. II. n. An idler. — fai-ne-ance, fai-ne-an-cy (fä'nā-āns, -ān-si), n.

faint (fānt), a. [OF. fainē, feint, feigned, hypocritical, sluggish, spiritless, pp. of feindre, E. feign.] Feigned† or pretended†; also, wanting in courage, cowardly, or timorous (now chiefly in 'faint heart'); also, wanting in strength or vigor, as persons; feeble or half-hearted, as actions, etc. (as, faint resistance; to damn with faint praise, see Pope's "Prologue to the Satires," 201); also, feeble in effect upon the senses or mind; deficient in brightness, vividness, loudness, strength, etc., as light, color, sound, odor, etc.; indistinct; hardly perceptible; not clear, strong, or well-defined, as a resemblance, an idea, etc.; also, having a feeling of extreme weakness or exhaustion; inclined to faint or swoon; sometimes, producing such a feeling; oppressive, as the atmosphere. — faint, v. i. To lose courage (archaic: as, "If thou faint in the day of adversity, thy strength is small," Prov. xxiv. 10); also, to grow weak or feeble (archaic); also, to lose brightness, vividness, etc., as color (now rare); also, to fall into a swoon. — faint, n. A swoon. — faint'er, n. — faint'-heart'ed, a. Lacking courage or energy; cowardly; timorous. — faint'-heart'ed-ly, adv. — faint'-heart'ed-ness, n. — faint'ing-ly, adv. — faint'-ish, a. Rather faint. — faint'ly, adv. — faint'ness, n. — faints, n. pl. The impure spirit which comes over first and last in the distillation of whisky, etc.

fair¹ (fār), a. [AS. fæger = OHG. fagar = Icel. fagr, fair, = Goth. fags, fit, suitable.] Beautiful or comely; pleasing in appearance; attractive; also, specious or plausible (as, fair promises); also, gentle, peaceable, or civil (as, fair words); also, of a light hue (as, a fair skin); not dark; also, free from blemish or imperfection; spotless; clean; pure; clear or legible, as writing; without irregularity or unevenness, as a line or surface; also, free from bias or injustice, as statements, actions, etc.; impartial; equitable; honest; not taking undue advantage, as persons; that may be legitimately sought, pursued, etc., as game; also, passable, or moderately satisfactory; free from grave objection; average; also, marked by favoring conditions (as, to be in a fair way to succeed); likely; promising; also, unobstructed or open, as a view; also, of weather, sky, etc., free from rain, snow, etc., or not stormy, or partially clear, or, sometimes, wholly clear or cloudless. — fair ball or fair hit, in baseball, a batted ball that comes to rest between home and first base or home and third base and within the foul lines, or that when bounding past first or third base is within the foul lines, or that first strikes the ground beyond first or third base and within the foul lines, or that while on or over the ground within the foul lines touches the person of the umpire or a player. — fair catch, in football, a ball so caught as to entitle the catcher's side to a free kick. — fair copy, a copy of a document made after final correction; also, the condition of such a copy. — fair green, in golf, that part of the links between tees and putting-greens where the grass is kept short. — fair hit. See fair ball, above. — fair play, fair or impartial action or treatment, as in a game; the allowance of equitable conditions or due opportunities. — the fair sex, the female sex; women. — fair¹, n. That which is fair; also, one of the fair sex (archaic); a woman,

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

esp. a beloved woman (archaic); also, fairness† or beauty†. —fair¹, adv. [AS. fægere.] In a fair manner; beautifully; agreeably; kindly or civilly; clearly or legibly; evenly or straight; directly or straight, as in aiming or hitting; impartially, equitably, or honestly; in a moderately satisfactory manner; favorably or auspiciously (as, to bid fair, to offer a good prospect, or give good promise). —fair¹, v. i. intr. To become fair; of the weather, to clear. II. tr. To make fair. See Shakspeare's "Sonnets," cxxvii.

fair² (fär), n. [OF. feire (F. foire), < L. feria, holiday.] A periodical gathering of buyers and sellers in an appointed place; also, a competitive exhibition of farm products, live stock, etc.; also, an exhibition and sale of fancy articles to raise money, often for some charitable purpose.

fair-faced (fär'fast), a. Having a fair or beautiful face; also, fair or light of complexion; also, fair-seeming or specious.

fair=ground (fär'ground), n. An inclosure where fairs, horse-races, etc., are held: often in pl.

fair-haired (fär'härd), a. Having fair or light-colored hair.

fair-ly (fär'li), adv. In a fairy-like manner.

fair-ing (fär'ing), n. A present given at or brought from a fair; in general, a present; a gift. [Archaic or prov.]

fair-lead, fair-lead-er (fär'lēd, -lē'dēr), n. Naut., a ring, thimble, or block, or a strip of board with holes in it, through which running rigging is passed to be guided and kept clear.

fair-ly (fär'li), adv. In a fair manner; beautifully; courteously; clearly or distinctly; justly, impartially, or equitably; becomingly or properly; legitimately (as, to come fairly by a thing); moderately, passably, or tolerably (as, fairly good; fairly safe); actually, positively, or completely (as, the wheels fairly spun).

fair=mind-ed (fär'mind'ed), a. Fair or just in mind or judgment; impartial; unprejudiced.

—fair=mind'ed-ness, n.

fair-ness (fär'nes), n. The quality of being fair.

fair=seem-ing (fär'sēm'ing), a. Seeming to be fair; specious; plausible.

fair=sound-ing (fär'soun'ding), a. Fair or plausible in sound.

fair=spok-en (fär'spō'kn), a. Fair, civil, or suave of speech; smooth-tongued.

fair-way (fär'wä), n. An unobstructed passage or way; naut., in a harbor, river, etc., the navigable portion or channel for vessels; the usual course taken by vessels, as in making a port; in golf, same as fair green (see under *fair*¹, a.).

fair=weath-er (fär'wēth'ēr), a. Of or for fair weather; unfitted to endure storms; fig., weakening or failing in time of trial or adversity.

fair-y (fär'i), n.; pl. -ies (-iz). [OF. faerie (F. féerie), < fae, E. fae.] Enchantment† or magic†; also, one of a class of imaginary beings, generally conceived as of diminutive human form, having magical powers capriciously exercised for good or evil in human affairs; also, such beings collectively†; also, fairyland†. —fairy of the mine, a kobold or gnome. —fair'y, a. Of or pertaining to fairies; also, of the nature of a fairy; fairy-like. —fairy bluebird, any of several East Indian passerine birds constituting the genus Irena, which are brilliantly blue and black in color. —fairy ring, a circle formed on the grass in a field by the growth of certain fungi, formerly supposed to be caused by fairies in their dances.

—fair'y-hood (-hüd), n. Fairy state or nature; also, fairies collectively. —fair'y-ism, n. The state, character, or action of a fairy; fairy-like quality; also, belief in fairies. —fair'y-land (-land), n. The imaginary realm of the fairies; hence, any region such as might be the home of fairies. —fair'y=tale, n. A tale or story about fairies or other magical beings or agencies; hence, a statement or assertion of something imaginary or untrue.

faith (fäth), n. [OF. feid, fei (F. foi), < L. fides, faith, < fidere, trust.] Confidence or trust in a person or thing; belief in the truth of a statement or doctrine; often, belief due to reliance on testimony or authority; also, the doctrines which are or should be believed; esp., a system of religious belief (as, the Christian faith; the Jewish faith); often, the Christian faith ('the faith'); also, the obligation of loyalty or fidelity, as to a person or to a promise or engagement (as, to pledge one's faith; to keep faith); also, the observance of the obligations of loyalty or fidelity (as, to act in good or bad faith); loyalty; fidelity; faithfulness; also, truth (in asseverative phrases, as 'in faith'); in theol., belief in the doctrines or teachings of religion (as, "Faith without works is dead": Jas. ii. 26); also, that trust in God and in his promises as made through Christ by which man is justified or saved (as, "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ": Rom. v. 1); also, spiritual perception of truths and realities not revealed through sense or reason (as, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen": Heb. xi. 1). —faith¹, v. t. To trust; believe. See Shakspeare's "King Lear," ii. 1. 72. —faith, interj. In faith; in truth; indeed. See Shakspeare's "Twelfth Night," ii. 3. 11. —faith=cure, n. A method of attempting to cure disease by prayer and religious faith alone; also, a cure effected by this method. —faith'ful. I. a. Full of faith, trusting, or believing (archaic: as, "So then they which be of faith are blessed with faithful Abraham," Gal. iii. 9); also, full of or showing loyalty or fidelity (as, "His faithful dog shall bear him company": Pope's "Essay on Man," i. 112); true to one's word, promises, vows, etc.; strict or thorough in the performance, or as the performance, of duty (as, a faithful servant; faithful services; faithful attendance); also, that may be relied upon, trusted, or believed; adhering or true to fact or an original (as, a faithful account; a faithful copy). II. n. With the, the believers; the believing members of the Christian church or of some branch of it; the adherents of the Mohammedan faith; also, the body of loyal members of any party or group. —faith'ful-ly, *adv. —faith'ful-ness, *n. —faith'less, a. Without trust or belief; unbelieving; esp., without religious faith; among Christians, without Christian faith; also, not adhering to allegiance, promises, vows, or duty (as, a faithless subject; a faithless wife; a faithless servant); disloyal; perfidious; unfaithful; also, unreliable, untrustworthy, false, or delusive (as, "Yonder faithless phantom flies To lure thee to thy doom": Goldsmith's "Hermit"). —faith'less-ly, *adv. —faith'less-ness, *n. —faith'wor'thy, a. Worthy of faith, trust, or belief; trustworthy.*

Fair-lead.

fai-tor, fai-tour (fä'tör), n. [AF. faitour, impostor, OF. faïtor, doer, maker, < L. factor: see factor.] An impostor; a rogue. [Obs. or archaic.]

fake¹ (fäk), v. t.; faked, faking. [Origin uncertain.] Naut., to lay in a coil, as a rope or cable. —fake¹, n. Naut., one of the rings or windings of a cable or hawser as it lies in a coil.

fake² (fäk), v.; faked, faking.

[Cf. D. vegen, G. fegen, sweep, wipe, furbish.] I. tr. To get up, prepare, or make (something specious, deceptive, or fraudulent); manipulate or furbish deceptively or fraudulently (as, "He has rigged and triggered her with paint and spar, and, faith, he has faked her well": Kipling's "Rhyme of the Three Seals"). [Colloq.] II. intr. To fake something; sham; pretend. [Colloq.] —fake². I. n. Something faked up; anything made to appear otherwise than it actually is; a false report; a swindle; also, one who fakes. [Colloq.] II. a. Of the nature of a fake; designed to deceive or cheat. [Colloq.] —fake'ment, n. Something faked up; a fake. [Colloq.]

Rope in Fakes on Deck.

Fairy Bluebird (Irena puella).

fak-er (fä'kër), n. One who fakes; one who gets up fakes; a petty swindler; also, a peddler or street-vender. [Colloq.]

fa-kir (fä-kër' or fä'kër), n. [Ar. faqir, poor.] A Moham-medan religious mendicant or ascetic; also, a Hindu devotee or ascetic of India.

fa-la (fä'lä'), n. [From fa la, used as a refrain in songs.] An old kind of part-song or madrigal.

fa-la-na-ka (fä-lä-nä'kä), n. [Native name.] A viverrine carnivorous quad-ruped, Eupleres goudoti, of Mada-gascar.

fal-ba-la (fal'-bä-lä), n. [F.; origin uncertain.] A founce; a fur-below.

fal-cate (fal'kät), a. [L. falcatus, < falx (fal-), sickle.] Curved like a sickle; hooked. Also fal'-cat-ed (-kät-ed).

fal-ca'tion (-kät'shön), n. Falcate condi-tion; also, a falcate part or appendage.

fal-chion (fä'lchön or -shön), n. [OF. fauchon, < ML. falcio(-), < L. falx (fal-), sickle.] A broad, short sword having a convex edge curving sharply to the point; loosely, any sword.

fal-ci-form (fal'si-förm), a. [L. falx (fal-), sickle: see -form.] Sickle-shaped; falcate.

fal-con (fä'kn or fäl'kqn), n. [OF. F. faucon, < LL. fal-co(-), falcon (named from its hooked talons), < L. falx (fal-), sickle.] Orig., any of various hawks used in falconry, and trained to hunt other birds and game (properly, the female only, the male being known as a tercel); now, any of various diurnal birds of prey of the family Falconidae, esp. of the genus Falco, as F. peregrinus ('peregrine fal-con'), having long wings and a notched bill, and taking their quarry as it moves; also, an old kind of cannon.—fal-con-er (fä'kn-ër), n. [OF. F. fauconnier.] One who hunts with falcons; one who follows the sport of hawking; also, one who breeds and trains hawks for hunting.—fal-co-net (fä'kq-net), n. A little falcon, esp. of any of various Asiatic species; also, an old kind of light cannon.

fal-con-gen-tle (fä'kn-jen'tl), n. The female or young of the European goshawk, Astur palumbarius.—fal-co-nine (fä'kq-nin), a. [LL. falco(-), falcon.] Of or like the falcons.—fal-con-ry (fä'kn-ri), n. [F. fauconnerie.] The art of training fal-cons to pursue other birds and game; the sport of hawking.

fal-de-ral (fal'de-ral), n. Same as folderol.

fald-stool (fäld'stöl), n. [ML. faldistolium (cor-ruptly faldistorium), < OHG. faldstul, < faldan, fold, + stul, seat: see fold and stool.] A chair or seat, orig. one capable of being folded, used by a bishop or other prelate when officiating in his own church away from the throne, or in a church not his own; also, a movable folding stool or desk at which worshipers kneel during certain acts of devotion; also, a desk at which the litany is said or sung (see cut in preceding column).

Falanka.

Peregrine Falcon (Duck-hawk).

Faldstool (Litany-desk).

Fa-ler-ni-an (fä-lër'ni-an). [L. Falernus (Falernus ager, the Falernian district).] I. a. Of or pertaining to a particular district in Campania, Italy, anciently famed for its wine.

II. n. The wine from this district.

fall (fä), v. i.; pret. fell, pp. fallen, ppr. falling. [AS. feallan = D. vallen = G. fallen = Icel. falla, fall.] To descend from a higher to a lower place or position through loss or lack of support; drop; lose high position, dignity, character, etc.; come as if by dropping, as stillness, night, etc.; be brought down, as the hammer of a pistol; become detached and drop off, as leaves; be dropped in birth, as an animal; issue, as speech from a person's lips; hang down, or extend downward (as, with her hair falling upon her shoulders); also, to sink to a lower level, as waves; decline, as in strength; slope, as land; discharge contents, as a river; subside, as water; ebb, as the tide; lose animation, as the face; be cast down, as the eyes; be reduced, as the temperature; become lowered, as the voice; decrease, as in number; be diminished in price or value; also, to come down suddenly from a standing or erect position; prostrate one's self, as in reverence or supplication; come down in fragments, as a building; succumb to attack, as a fortified place; be overthrown, as a government; succumb to tempta-tion; esp., of a woman, to give up chastity; drop down wounded or dead; esp., to be slain; be drawn, as into danger, error, etc.; also, to be directed, as light, sight, etc., on some-thing; have proper place or station (as, the accent falls on the first syllable); come as a lot, possession, burden, or duty; also, to come by chance into a particular position (as, to fall among thieves); also, to pass into some condition or relation (as, to fall asleep; to fall in love; to fall into ruin; to fall into arrears); become (as, to fall sick or lame; to fall vacant or due); betake or apply one's self (to: as, to fall to work, or to disputing); be naturally divisible (into); also, to come to pass; occur; happen.—to fall away, to withdraw support or allegiance; apostatize; also, to decline, decay, or perish; also, to lose flesh; become lean or emaci-ated.—to fall down, to fail. [Slang.]—to fall for, to be deceived by. [Slang.]—to fall foul, to come into collision, as ships; become entangled; also, to come into conflict; have trouble; also, to make an attack.—to fall home, in ship-carp., to incline inward from the perpendicular: said of the topsides of a ship.—to fall in, to sink inward; fall to pieces inwardly; also, to take one's proper place in line, as a soldier; also, to come together; meet; agree.—to fall off, to drop off; also, to separate or withdraw; become es-tranged; withdraw from allegiance; also, to decline in vigor, interest, etc.; also, to decrease in number, amount, intensity, etc.; diminish.—to fall on or upon, to assault; attack; also, to light upon; chance upon.—to fall out, to drop out of one's place in line, as a soldier; also, to disagree or quarrel; also, to occur; happen; turn out.—to fall short, to fail to reach a mark aimed at; fail of attaining a particular amount, degree, standard, etc.; fail to reach the amount, degree, etc., reached by another; also, to prove insufficient; give out.—to fall through, to come to naught; fail; miscarry.—to fall to, to set to work; apply one's self; begin.—to fall upon. See to fall on, above.—fall, v. t. To let fall; bring down; chop down or fell, as a tree.—fall, I. n. The act of falling, or dropping from a higher to a lower place or position; descent, as of rain, snow, etc., or the quantity that descends; autumn, the part of the year when leaves fall from trees; the birth of animals by dropping from the parent, or the number born; descent from high estate, dignity, etc.; also, a sinking to a lower level; subsidence, as of waves; decline or decay; the discharge of the water of a river, etc.; a cata-ract or waterfall (usually in pl.: as, Niagara Falls); down-ward direction or trend; a slope or declivity; the distance through which anything falls; a decrease, as in price or value; also, a falling from an erect position, as to the ground; the fact or a method of being thrown on one's back by an opponent in wrestling; a bout at wrestling (as, to try a fall: also fig.); a felling of trees, or the timber cut down at one time; surrender or capture, as of a city; a succumbing to temptation, or lapse into sin; the lapse of mankind into fat, fäte, fär, fäll, äsk, färe; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviäry, flect, agöny, intö, ünite; (obscured) errant, operä, ardent, actor, natüre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ТН, then; y, you;

a state of natural or innate sinfulness through the transgression of Adam and Eve ('the fall of man' or 'the fall'); death, as in battle; also, a falling, being directed, or having proper place (as, the fall of an accent on a syllable); also, a falling to one as a lot or share†, or that which fallst; also, the movable front of a piano, which covers the keyboard; a kind of trap for catching animals; a falling or hanging covering, or piece of material, as of lace; a loosely hanging veil; a kind of collar for the neck formerly worn, made to turn over and lie upon the shoulders; in mech., etc., the part of the rope of a tackle to which the power is applied in hoisting; pl., the apparatus used in lowering or hoisting a ship's boat. II. a. Of, pertaining to, characteristic of, or suitable for the season of fall or autumn (as, fall winds; fall millinery); also, suitable for sowing in the fall, as grain.

—fall wheat. See under wheat.

fall-la-cious (fal-lā'shus), a. [L. fallaciosus.] Characterized by or involving fallacy; deceptive or delusive (as, "Yet how fallacious is all earthly bliss": Cowper's "Retirement," 457); misleading; false; of arguments, reasoning, etc., containing a fallacy; logically unsound.—fall-la'-cious-ly, adv.—fall-la'-cious-ness, n.

fall-la-cy (fal-lā'si), n.; pl. -cies (-siz). [L. fallacia, < fallax, deceptive, < fallere, deceive.] Deception† (as, "Winning, by conquest, what the first man lost, By fallacy surprised": Milton's "Paradise Regained," i. 155); deceptive, delusive, misleading, or false character, as of hopes, assurances, opinions, arguments, etc.; also, something deceptive, misleading, or false, as a notion or belief; esp., a misleading or unsound argument; an unsound form of reasoning; any of various types of fault in arguments or syllogisms that render them logically unsound.

fall-lal (fal-lāl'), n. [Appar. a made word: cf. falbala.] A bit of finery; a showy article of dress: as, "He found . . . his wife . . . busily engaged . . . with flounces, feathers, fall-lals, and finery" (Thackeray's "Newcomes," lxxi.).—fall-lal'er-y, n. Fallals collectively; finery.

fall-on (fāl'ŋ), p. a. That has dropped or come down from a higher place or level, or from an upright position; dropped; degraded; overthrown; ruined; prostrate; dead.

fall-or (fāl'ŋ), n. One who or that which falls; any of various devices that operate by falling.

fall-fish (fāl'fish), n. Any of several fresh-water cyprinoid fishes of North America, as Semotilus corporalis of the eastern U. S.

fall-li-ble (fal'li-bl), a. [ML. fallibilis, < L. fallere, deceive.] Liable to be deceived or mistaken; liable to err; also, liable to be erroneous or false (as, "Do not satisfy your resolution with hopes that are fallible": Shakspeare's "Measure for Measure," iii. 1. 170).—fall-li-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-ti), fall'li-ble-ness, n.—fall'li-bly, adv.

fall-ing-sick-ness (fāl'ŋ-sik'nes), n. Epilepsy.

fall-ing-star (fāl'ŋ-stār'), n. A meteor in a state of incandescence seen falling or darting through the sky; a shooting-star.

fall-line (fāl'lin), n. In phys. geog., a line drawn through a number of rivers at points where they have falls or rapids due to a common cause.

Fal-lo-pi-an (fa-lō'pi-ān), a. Pertaining to Gabriello Fallopio (1523–62), an Italian anatomist: as, the Fallopian tubes (a pair of slender tubes or ducts which convey the ova from the ovaries to the cavity of the uterus).

fall-low¹ (fal'ō), a. [AS. fealu = D. vaal = G. fahl, fallb, fallow, = Icel. folr, pale.] Of a pale yellowish or brownish color. Cf. fallow-deer.

fall-low² (fal'ō), v. t. [ME. falewen, appar. < AS. fealh, a harrow: cf. OHG. felga, a harrow, G. felgen, falgen, turn up ground, fallow.] To plow, harrow, and break (land) without seeding, in order to make it mellow and destroy weeds and insects.—fall'low². [Appar. < *fallow*², v.] I. n. Land that has lain for a considerable time unseeded after plowing and harrowing; also, the state of being fallow; an interval during which land is left fallow. II. a. Of land, plowed and left unseeded for a season or more; hence, uncultivated or neglected (as, "Break up your fallow ground": Jer. iv. 3). Also fig.: as, "Ploughed by affliction . . . my heart lay fallow for every seed that fell" (Kingsley's "Alton Locke," xxxvii.).

fall-low-deer (fal'ō-dēr'), n. [See *fallow*¹.] A European deer, Dama platyceros (or Cervus dama), with a yellowish coat; also, a related species of western Asia.

fall-low-ness (fal'ō-nes), n.

Fallow state, as of land.

fall-way (fāl'wā), n. A shaft or opening through which goods are hoisted and lowered: so called from the custom of using a block and fall to do the hoisting.

false (fāls), a.; compar. *fals*er, superl. falsest. [L. falsus, feigned, spurious, deceptive, false, pp. of fallere, deceive: see fail.] Contrary to what is true or correct; erroneous, mistaken, untrue, or incorrect, as a statement, opinion, impression, accusation, conclusion, etc.; wrong; inaccurate in pitch, as a musical note; not properly adjusted, as a balance; also, uttering or declaring what is untrue, as a witness, accuser, etc.; mendacious; lying; also, deceitful, treacherous, or faithless (as, a false friend; to prove false to one's oath or trust); deceptive, as appearances; also, not genuine; counterfeit, sham, or artificial (as, a false signature; false diamonds; false teeth); also, employed to deceive or mislead (as, false lights on a shore; false signals; a ship sailing under false colors); also, improperly so called, as from deceptive resemblance to something that properly bears the name (as, the false acacia, the locust-tree, Robinia pseudacacia); substituted for or supplementing, esp. temporarily, something properly or primarily denoted by the name (as, false supports for a bridge in process of construction).—false bottom, a horizontal partition in the lower part of a box, vessel, etc., as one fitted in a trunk to form a secret compartment.—false face, a counterfeit face used as a mask.—false imprisonment, in law, the imprisonment of a person contrary to law.—false ribs. See rib, n.—false, adv. In a false manner; incorrectly or wrongly; treacherously or faithlessly.—false†, v. t.; falsed, falsing. To make false; corrupt; falsify; also, to counterfeit; forge; also, to prove false to.—false=heart'ed, a. Having a false or treacherous heart; deceitful; perfidious.—falsehood (-hūd), n. The quality of being false, or falsity (as, "the scandalous falsehood of the charges now circulated against them": J. H. Newman's "Callista," xxxi.); also, that which is false; something false; an untrue proposition, belief, etc.; also, the act of lying; a lie; false statements in general.—false'ly, adv.—false'ness, n.

false-to (fāl-set'ō). [It., dim. of falso, < L. falsus, E. false.] I. n.; pl. falsestos (-ōz). An unnaturally high-pitched voice or register, esp. in a man; also, one who sings with such a voice. II. a. Having the quality of, or pertaining to, such a voice; also, unnatural, false, or assumed.—false'tist, n.

false-sid-i-cal (fāl-sid'i-kāl), a. [L. falsidicus, < falsus, false, + dicere, say.] Lying; false; illusory: opposed to veridical.

false-si-fi-a-ble (fāl'si-fi-ā-bl), a. Capable of being falsified.

false-si-fi-ca-tion (fāl'si-fi-kā'shən), n. [ML. falsificatio(n-).] The act of falsifying; fraudulent alteration; misrepresentation; disproof.

false-si-fy (fāl'si-fi), v.; -fied, -fying. [OF. F. falsifier, < ML. falsificare, < L. falsus, false, + facere, make.] I. tr. To make false or incorrect, esp. so as to deceive; alter fraudulently; also, to represent falsely; misrepresent; also, to show or prove to be false; disprove; also, to prove false to (one's word, etc.)†. II. intr. To make false statements; lie.—false'si-fi-er (-fi-ēr), n.

false-si-ty (fāl'si-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [LL. falsitas.] The quality of being false; incorrectness; untruthfulness; deceitfulness; treachery; counterfeit character; also, something false; a falsehood.

Fal-staff-i-an (fāl-staff-i-ān), a. Pertaining to, characteristic of, or resembling Sir John Falstaff, a fat, jovial soldier of brazen assurance and few scruples, in certain of Shakespeare's plays ("1 Henry IV.," "2 Henry IV.," and "Merry Wives of Windsor"); also, resembling the ragged band of soldiers recruited by Falstaff.

Fallow-deer (Dama platyceros).

fal-ter (fāl'tēr), v. [ME. falteren; origin uncertain.] I. intr. To become unsteady in movement, as a person, an animal, or the legs, steps, etc.; stagger, stumble, or totter; move or go (on, etc.) with tottering steps; also, to speak hesitatingly or brokenly; stammer; come forth with unsteady or broken utterance, as the voice or speech; also, to hesitate or waver in action, purpose, etc.; begin to give way, as resolution, courage, hopes, powers, etc.; flag; fail.

II. tr. To utter hesitatingly or brokenly.—fal'ter, n. The act of faltering; an unsteadiness of gait, voice, action, or the like; also, a faltering sound.—fal'ter-ing-ly, adv.

fame (fām), n. [OF. F. fame, < L. fama (= Gr. φήμη), < fari (= Gr. φάναι), speak, say.] Public report or rumor (archaic, and sometimes personified: as, "Millions of opening mouths to Fame belong, And every mouth is furnished with a tongue, And round with listening ears the flying plague is hung," Dryden's tr. Virgil's "Æneid," iv. 263); the report or rumor of a particular thing (archaic: as, "The fame thereof was heard in Pharaoh's house, saying, Joseph's brethren are come," Gen. xlv. 16); also, reputation, as from public report or estimation (as, an attack on one's fair fame; a house of ill fame, see under *house*², n.); now, commonly, widespread reputation, esp. of a favorable character (as, to seek or attain fame; literary fame); celebrity; renown.—fame, v. t.; famed, faming. To report publicly or currently (with as, for, or an infinitive, and usually in the passive: as, to be famed as virtuous; to be famed to work wonders: archaic); also, to spread the fame of, celebrate, or make famous (now chiefly in famed, pp.: as, a place famed throughout the world; a far-famed institution).—fame'less, a. Without fame or renown.

fa-mil-i-ar (fā-mil'yār), [OF. F. familier, < L. familiaris, < familia, E. family.] I. a. Of or pertaining to a family or household (now rare); personal or private (as, a familiar spirit, a spirit or demon supposed to attend on or serve a person, as a witch); associated in, characterized by, or proper to close personal relations (as, a familiar friend; familiar companionship or intercourse; to be on a familiar footing with a person); intimate; friendly; sometimes, unduly intimate, as in relations; free in behavior or manner with a person, as if assuming intimacy; taking liberties; bold, forward, or presuming; in a more favorable sense, easy, informal, or unceremonious (as, to write in a familiar style); also, well acquainted or thoroughly conversant, as with any matter of knowledge or experience (as, to be familiar with facts, a subject, book or author, process or method, tool, etc.); also, well-known, as to a person, etc. (as, a face, a book, or a subject familiar to one; phenomena familiar to the scientist, or to science); commonly or generally known or seen, common, or ordinary (as, a familiar sight; to take a familiar instance); also, of animals, accustomed to man, domesticated, or tame. II. n. A member of a family or household (obs., except as used of one who belongs to the household of the Pope or of a bishop, rendering domestic though not menial service); also, a familiar spirit; also, a familiar friend or associate; an intimate; also, an officer of the Inquisition, employed to arrest persons accused or suspected.—fa-mil-i-ar'i-ty (-i-ar'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [OF. familiarité (F. familiarité), < L. familiaritas.] The state of being familiar; intimate friendly relations or intercourse; intimacy; sometimes, undue intimacy; often, freedom of behavior with a person, such as would be justified only by intimate friendly relations; an instance or manifestation of such freedom, as in action or speech (often in pl.); absence of formality or ceremony; familiar acquaintance or conversance, as with a thing, subject, etc.; a being well-known, as to a person or to people in general.—fa-mil'iar-ize (-iz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. [F. familiariser.] To make familiar; establish (a person) in friendly intimacy (obs. or rare); make (a person) familiarly acquainted or conversant, as with something; render (something) well-known, as to a person or to people in general; bring into common knowledge or use, as a word.—

fa-mil'iar-i-za'tion (-i-zā'shən), n.—fa-mil'iar-ly, adv.—fa-mil'iar-ness, n.

fa-mi-li-stère (fā-mē-lē-stār), n. [F., < L. familia, family, with termination as in F. monastère, monastery, phalanstère, phalanstery.] An establishment in which a number of families live together as a community. Also fam-i-lis-te-ry (fam-i-lis'tē-ri); pl. -ries (-riez).

fam-i-ly (fam'i-li), n.; pl. -lies (-liz). [L. familia, the servants of a household, a household, a family, < famulus, servant.] The servants of a house (now only in 'family of servants'); the retinue of an important personage; the staff, or body of assistants, of an official; also, the collective body of persons who form a household under one head, including parents, children, servants, etc.; parents with their children, whether dwelling together or not; one's children considered collectively; all those persons descended from a common progenitor; a clan; a race; stock or lineage, esp. good or noble stock (as, young men of good family, or of family); in general, a group of related things (as, a family of languages); a zoological or botanical group or category ranking below an order and above a genus.—family skele-ton. See skeleton in the closet, under skeleton, n.—fam'i-ly-cir'cle, n. A gallery in a theater, etc., esp. the topmost one.

fam-ine (fam'in), n. [OF. F. famine, < L. fames, hunger.] Extreme and general scarcity of food, as in a city or country; a period of extreme and general dearth, threatening or resulting in starvation; hence, an extreme and general scarcity or dearth of anything (as, "I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread . . . but of hearing the words of the Lord": Amos, viii. 11); also, extreme hunger; starvation; also, violent appetite, as of a starving person.

fam-ish (fam'ish), v. t. or i. [Cf. OF. famis, fameis, famished, starved, < L. fames, hunger.] To subject to or suffer from famine or the extremity of hunger; starve; also, to starve to death.—fam'ish-ment, n.

fa-mous (fā'mus), a. [L. famosus, < fama, E. fame.] Celebrated in fame or public report (as, "It was a famous victory": Southey's "Battle of Blenheim"); renowned; in an unfavorable sense, notorious; also, first-rate or excellent (colloq.).—fa'mous-ly, adv.—fa'mous-ness, n.

fam-u-lus (fam'ū-lus), n.; pl. -li (-li). [L.] A servant or attendant, esp., formerly, of a scholar or a magician.

fan¹ (fan), n. [AS. fann, < L. vannus, fan for winnowing grain.] A contrivance for winnowing grain; also, any device for agitating the air by the movement of a broad surface or a number of such surfaces; esp., a hand-implement for agitating the air and cooling the face, etc., often made up of parts which can be folded or shut up and which when spread out take the form of a sector of a circle; hence, anything resembling or spread out like such an implement, as the tail of a bird; in mach., any of various devices consisting essentially of a series of radiating vanes or blades attached to and revolving with a central hub-like portion, and used to produce a current of air, regulate the velocity of light machinery, etc.; also, a small vane or sail used to keep the large sails of a windmill in the direction of the wind.

—fan², v.; fanned, fanning. I. tr. To winnow (grain, etc.); also, to drive away or remove, as chaff from grain, with or as with a fan; scatter like chaff; also, to move or agitate (the air) with or as with a fan; also, to move like a fan; also, to cause air to blow upon as from a fan; cool or refresh with or as with a fan; stir to activity with or as with a fan, as a flame or, fig., passions, emotions, etc.; of a breeze, etc., to blow upon as if driven by a fan; also, to spread out like a fan; in baseball, of the pitcher, to strike out (a batter). II. intr. To operate a fan; move something in the manner of a fan; move as a fan does; also, to blow, or move along, as if driven by a fan; also, to assume a fan-like shape; in baseball, to strike out.

fan² (fan), n. [Cf. fanatic.] An enthusiastic attendant at baseball games; a devotee of any sport or amusement; in general, an enthusiastic devotee or follower (as, a Kipling fan). [Slang.]

fa-nat-ic (fā-nat'ik). [L. fanaticus, pertaining to a temple, inspired by a divinity, frantic, < fanum, temple, E. fane.] I. a. Possessed by a deity or other supernatural agent; or suggestive of such possession; frenzied; mad; also, fanatical, as in spirit or character. II. n. A fanatical

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intū, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʔh, then; y, you;

person; an unreasoning enthusiast or zealot, in religious or other affairs.—fa-nat'i-cal, a. Possessed by a deity or the like†; frenzied†; also, actuated or characterized by an extreme, unreasoning enthusiasm or zeal, in religious or other affairs; pertaining to or characteristic of a fanatic.—fa-nat'i-cal-ly, adv.—fa-nat'i-cal-ness, n.—fa-nat'i-cism (-sizm), n. Fanatical character, spirit, or conduct.—fa-nat'i-cize (-siz), v. t. or i.; -ized, -izing. To infect with or exhibit fanaticism.

fan-ci-er (fan'si-ër), n. One who fancies; esp., one who fancies or imagines (as, "those people who, in their speculations on politics, are not reasoners but fanciers": Macaulay's "Essays," Hallam); also, a person having a liking for or interested in something, as some class of animals or plants; hence, one who breeds and sells birds, dogs, etc.

fan-ci-ful (fan'si-fül), a. Led by fancy rather than by reason and experience; exhibiting the influence of fancy; whimsical; also, exhibiting fancy in conception or design; quaint or odd in appearance; curious; fantastic; also, suggested by fancy; imaginary; unreal.—fan'ci-ful-ly, adv.—fan'ci-ful-ness, n.

fan-ci-less (fan'si-les), a. Destitute of fancy.

fan-cy (fan'si). [Contr. of fantasy.] I. n.; pl. -cies (-siz) Imagination, esp. as exercised in a capricious or desultory manner; specif., the faculty of creating illustrative or decorative imagery, as in poetical or literary composition, as distinct from the power of producing ideal creations consistent with reality (imagination); also, a mental image or conception; also, a design, invention, or contrivance; also, an idea or opinion with little foundation; a hallucination; also, caprice or capriciousness; a caprice or whim; something whimsical; also, capricious or arbitrary preference; inclination; a liking or fondness (as, to take a fancy to a thing); specif., love† (cf. fancy-free); also, critical judgment; taste; also, something that pleases or entertains without having much use or value; also, fanciers, collectively, of a particular class of things, as birds or dogs, or of a particular amusement, esp. the followers of prize-fighting ("the fancy"); the breeding of animals to develop points of beauty or excellence; sport, esp. pugilism ("the fancy"). II. a.; compar. fancier, superl. fanciest. Based on fancy or imagination; imaginative; also, depending on the exercise of fancy or caprice; capricious; whimsical; irregular; dictated by fancy or caprice, as prices; also, adapted to please the fancy or taste (as, fancy goods, see below; fancy work, see fancywork); not plain; fine; elegant; ornamental; varicolored, as a flower; also, dealing in, or concerned with the sale of, fancy goods (as, the fancy trade); also, bred to develop points of beauty or excellence, as an animal.—fancy ball, a ball at which fancy dress is worn.—fancy dress, dress chosen in accordance with the wearer's fancy, for wear at a ball or the like, as that characteristic of a particular period or place, class of persons, or historical or fictitious character.—fancy goods, goods or articles of trade serving for ornament or show, or merely to please the fancy, rather than for common, necessary use; miscellaneous goods, as novelties or luxurious accessories, other than the staples of trade.—fan'cy, v.; -ied, -ying. I. tr. To form a fancy or conception of; picture to one's self; imagine; also, to believe without being sure or certain (as, I fancy he will come); also, to take a fancy or liking to; like. II. intr. To imagine; also, to believe something without proof; also, to love†.—fan'cy-free', a. Free from the influence of love (as, "in maiden meditation, fancy-free": Shakspeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," ii. 1. 164); hence, untrammelled.—fan'cy-work, n. Ornamental needlework, etc., such as is done for a pastime.

fan-dan-go (fan-dang'gō), n.; pl. -gos (-gōz). [Sp.; from W. Ind.] A lively Spanish or Spanish-American dance in triple time; a piece of music for such a dance or with its rhythm; sometimes, a ball or dance.

fano (fān), n. [L. fanum.] A temple; a church: as, "Beyond are the numerous chapels and fanes which fringe the base of the Capitoline hill" (J. H. Newman's "Callista," v.). [Archaic or poetic.]

fan-fare (fan'fār), n. [F.: cf. Sp. fanfarria, bragging, bravado, also F. and E. fanfaron.] A flourish or short air played on trumpets or the like; hence, an ostentatious flourish or parade.—fan'fa-ron (-fā-ron), n. [F., = Sp.

fanfarón: cf. fanfare.] A braggart; a noisy boaster; also, a fanfare.—fan'fa-ron-ade' (-ron-ād'), n. [F. fanfaronnade = Sp. fanfarronada.] Bragging; bravado; bluster; a brag.

fang (fang), v. t. [ME. fangen, < AS. fōn (pret. fēng, pp. fangen) = OHG. and Goth. fāhan.] To seize or catch (archaic or prov.: as, "Destruction fang mankind!" Shakspeare's "Timon of Athens," iv. 3. 23); also, to strike a fang or fangs into.—fang, n. A seizing, or that which is seized (now only Sc.); also, a long, pointed tooth of an animal; a canine tooth; a tusk; one of the long, sharp, hollow or grooved teeth of a serpent, by which venom is injected; also, the root of a tooth, or one of its prongs; in general, a pointed tapering part of a thing; the tang of a tool.—fanged, a. Having fangs.

fang-les (fang'les), n. [From newfangle, by misunderstanding of its elements.] A (new) fashion or invention; a novelty; also, a silly or foppish contrivance†; foppery†.—fan'gled, a. Newfangled; foppish. See Shakspeare's "Cymbeline," v. 4. 134.

fang-less (fang'les), a. Without fangs.

fan-ion (fan'yōn), n. [F. fanion, var. of fanon: see fanon.] A small flag carried with the baggage of a military brigade, or used to mark positions, as by surveyors.

fan-light (fan'lit), n. A fan-shaped or other window above a door or other opening.

fan-ner (fan'ër), n. One who or that which fans; a machine for winnowing grain; a fan for cooling or ventilating.

fan-on (fan'ōn), n. [F. fanon, < OHG. fano, banner, cloth: cf. fanion, gonfalon, and vane.] Eccles., a manipule; also, a peculiar striped scarf-like vestment worn by the Pope over the alb when celebrating solemn pontifical mass.

fan-palm (fan'pām), n. Any palm with fan-shaped leaves, as the talipot.

fan-shaped (fan'shāpt), a. Like a fan in shape; esp., having the form of a broad sector of a circle.

fan-tail (fan'tāl), n. A tail, end, or part shaped like a fan; also, any of the flycatchers of the genus Rhipidura, of Australian regions, having a fan-like tail; also, one of a breed of domestic pigeons with a fan-shaped tail.—fan'=tailed, a. Having a fan-shaped tail.

fan-tan (fan'tan), n. [Chinese.] A Chinese gambling-game in which a pile of coins or counters is placed under a bowl and bets are made as to what the remainder will be after the sum of the coins or counters has been divided by four; also, a card-game in which the cards are played in sequence, the winner being the player who first gets rid of his cards.

fan-ta-si-a (fan-tā-zē'ä or fan-tā'zi-ä), n. [It., < L. phantasia: see fantasy.] A musical composition in fanciful or irregular rather than strict form or style; sometimes, a potpourri of well-known airs arranged with interludes and florid decorations.

fan-tasm (fan'tazm), etc. See phantasm, etc.

fan-tas-sin (fan'tā-sin), n. [F., < It. fantascino, < fante, boy, infantry soldier, for infante, < L. infans, E. infant.] An infantry soldier; a foot-soldier.

Fan-palm.

Fantail Pigeons.

fan-tast (fan'tast), n. [Cf. G. phantast.] A fanciful person; a visionary; also, a person of fantastic ideas, mannerisms, etc.

fan-tas-tic (fan-tas'tik). [LL. phantasticus, < Gr. φανταστικός, < φαντάζειν, present to the eye or mind: see fantasy.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the fantasy or imagination; imaginative; also, imaginary; extravagantly imagined; groundless or illusory; also, odd, quaint, eccentric, or grotesque in conception, design, character, movement, etc. (as, fantastic dress or ornaments; "Come, and trip it, as you go, On the light fantastic toe," Milton's "L'Allegro," 34); also, fanciful or capricious, as persons or their ideas, actions, etc.; often, extravagantly fanciful; irrational. II. n. One who indulges in fantastic ideas (archaic); one given to fantastic dress or manner. -fan-tas'ti-cal, a. Fantastic. -fan-tas-ti-cal'i-ty (-kal'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). Fantastic quality; also, something fantastic; a crotchet or whim. -fan-tas'ti-cal-ly, adv. -fan-tas'ti-cal-ness, n. -fan-tas'ti-co (-kō), n. [It.] A fantastic. See Shakspere's "Romeo and Juliet," ii. 4. 30.

fan-ta-sy, phan-ta-sy (fan'ta-si), n.; pl. -sies (-siz). [OF. fantasie (F. fantaisie), < L. phantasia, < Gr. φαντασία, < φαντάζειν, present to the eye or mind, < φαίνω, show.] Imagination, esp. when unrestrained; fancy; usually, extravagant fancy; the forming of grotesque mental images; also, a mental image, esp. when grotesque; also, an ingenious or odd thought, design, or invention; also, a supposition based on no solid foundation; a visionary idea; a hallucination; also, caprice; a caprice or whim; also, inclination or liking; in music, a fantasia. -fan'ta-sy, v. t.; -sied, -syng. To fancy; imagine; also, to affect or sway by fancy. [Archaic.] fan-toc-ci-ni (fan-tō-chē'nē), n. pl. [It., pl. of fantoccino, dim. of fantoccio, puppet, < fante, boy: see fantassin.] Puppets made to go through evolutions by means of concealed wires or strings; also, dramatic representations in which they are employed.

fan-tod (fan'tod), n. [Origin obscure.] An uneasy or uncomfortable state of mind or body; a fidget: often in pl., with the: as, "Nice pictures, I reckon, but . . . they always give me the fantods" (Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn," xvii.). [Prov. or slang.]

fan-tom (fan'tōm), n. See phantom.

fan-tra-cer-y (fan'trā-sēr-i), n. In arch., tracery which rises from a capital or a corbel and diverges like the folds of a fan, spreading over the surface of a vault.

fan-win-dow (fan'win'dō), n. A fan-shaped window whose sash is formed with radial bars; a fan-light.

fan-wort (fan'wört), n. A plant, Cabomba caroliniana, of the water-lily family, found in ponds, etc.

fap (fap), a. [Origin obscure.] Intoxicated. See Shakspere's "Merry Wives of Windsor," i. 1. 183.

fa-quir (fā-kēr'), n. Fan-tracery. — Cloisters of Gloucester Cathedral, England. See fakir.

far (fär), adv.; compar. farther, superl. farthest (cf. further, furthest). [AS. feor = D. ver = OHG. fer = Icel. fjarri = Goth. fairra, far; akin to Gr. πέρα, beyond, further, Skt. paras, beyond, far.] At or to a great distance; a long way off; to a remote point; to an advanced stage or degree (as, far gone); by a great interval, or widely (as, not far wrong); greatly, or very much (as, far better); also, at or to a definite distance, point of progress, or degree (preceded by as, so, how, etc.). — by far, by a great interval; very much. — far and away, by far; very much. — from far, from a distance. — in so far, to such an extent. — far, a.; compar. farther, superl. farthest. [AS. feor.] Distant or remote (as, "a far country": Josh. ix. 6); also, extending to a great distance (as, a far look ahead); long; protracted; also, more distant of the two (as, the far side). — a far cry, a great distance; a long way. — Far East. See under east, n.

far-ad (far'ad), n. [From Michael Faraday (1791-1867), English physicist.] The unit of electrical capacity: the capacity of a condenser which has a difference of potential of one volt when charged with one coulomb. — far-a-day (-ā-dā), n. In elect., a unit used in electrolysis, being a quantity of electricity equal to about 96,500 coulombs. — fa-rad-ic, far-a-da-ic (fā-rad'ik, far-ā-dā'ik), a. Pertaining to or named from Faraday: applied to induced currents of electricity, as the secondary currents of induction coils, or to phenomena connected with them. — far'a-dism (-dizm), n. Induced electricity; its application for therapeutic purposes. — far'a-dize (-diz), v. t.; -dized, -dizing. In med., to stimulate or treat, as a muscle, with induced electric currents. — far'a-di-za'tion (-di-zā'shən), n. — far'a-dizer (-dī-zēr), n.

fa-ran-dole (fā-rān-dol), n. [F., < Pr. farandolo.] A lively dance, of Provençal origin, in which all the dancers join hands and execute various figures.

far-a-way (fär'ā-wā'), a. Distant; remote; also, abstracted or dreamy, as a look.

farce (färs), v. t.; farced, farcing. [OF. farsir (F. farcir), < L. farcire, stuff.] To stuff (a fowl, etc.) with seasoned filling; fig., to season (a speech or composition), as with scraps of wit. — farce, n. [F.] A light dramatic composition of broadly comic character, presenting a quickly moving, laughable plot with unexpected situations, often of a highly improbable or even absurd nature; the branch or form of drama constituted by such compositions; also, foolish show; mockery; a ridiculous sham.

far-ceur (fär-sēr), n. [F.] An actor in farce; hence, a joker or wag. — far-ceuse (-séz), n. [F.] Fem. of farceur.

far-ci (fär-sē), a. [F., pp. of farcir, E. farce, v.] In cookery, stuffed.

far-ci-cal (fär'si-kal), a. Pertaining to or of the nature of farce; also, resembling farce; ludicrous; absurd. — far-ci-cal'i-ty (-kal'i-ti), far-ci-cal-ness, n. — far'ci-cal-ly, adv. far-cy (fär'si), n. [Earlier farcin, < OF. F. farcin, < LL. farciminum, < L. farcire, stuff.] A form of the disease glanders affecting chiefly the superficial lymphatics and the skin.

fard (färd), n. [F.; perhaps from Teut. (cf. G. farbe, color).] Paint used on the face. [Obs. or archaic.] — fard, v. t. To paint (the cheeks, etc.); hence, to gloss over. [Obs. or archaic.]

far-del (fär'del), n. [OF. fardel (F. fardeau), dim. of farde, bundle, pack; perhaps from Ar.] A bundle; a burden. [Archaic.]

fare (fär), v. i.; fared, faring. [AS. faran = D. varen = G. fahren = Icel. fara = Goth. faran, fare, go; akin to L. peritus, experienced, portare, carry, porta, gate, portus, harbor, Gr. πέραιν, pass, πόρος, passage, Skt. par-, bring across.] To go or travel (archaic: as, "On he fares . . . half on foot, Half flying," Milton's "Paradise Lost," ii. 940); conduct one's self (as, "Thus fares the queen; and thus her fury blows Amidst the crowd": Dryden's tr. Virgil's "Æneid," vii. 534); seem or appear, or seem likely (prov.); impersonally, to go, turn out, or happen (as, it fares ill with him); of persons, etc., to get on as to circumstances (as, he fares well in all his undertakings); experience good or bad fortune or treatment; specif., to be entertained (well, ill, etc.), as with food. — fare, n. [AS. faru.] A going; a journey; or voyage; a company of persons making a journey; the price of conveyance or passage (now only of persons); a person, or (formerly) the persons collectively, conveyed in a public vehicle; the load of a beast of burden; a catch of fish, as of a fishing-vessel (U. S.); also, deportment or behavior; also, state of things, favorable or unfavorable (archaic); fortune (archaic); also, provisions for the table; food. — far'er, n.

fare-well (fär'wel'), interj. [Orig. two words, fare well: see fare, v.] May you fare well; good-by. — fare'well'.

fat, fāte, fär, fäll, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardgnt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

I. n. An expression of good wishes at parting; a good-by; an adieu; also, leave-taking or departure (as, "The poor exiles . . . fondly look'd their last, And took a long farewell": Goldsmith's "Deserted Village," 367). II. a. Pertaining to a farewell, or an occasion of leave-taking: as, a farewell sermon; a farewell performance of an actor.

far-fetched (fär'fēcht'), a. Fetched or brought from afar (archaic); hence, remotely connected, forced, or strained (as, a far-fetched metaphor).

far-flung (fär'flung'), a. Flung or extending over a great distance: as, "our far-flung battle-line" (Kipling's "Recessional").

fa-ri-na (fä-rē'nä or -ri'nä), n. [L., < far, spelt.] Flour or meal made from various seeds, esp. of cereal or leguminous plants, or from certain roots, as the potato; also, a granular preparation of white maize, finer than hominy; also, starch; also, any powdery substance, as the pollen of flowers or a mealy powder found on some insects.—far-i-na-ceous (far-i-nä'shius), a. [LL. farinaceus.] Consisting of made of flour or meal, as food; containing or yielding starch, as seeds; pertaining to or of the nature of meal; having a mealy appearance.—far-i-nose (-nös), a. [LL. farinosus.] Yielding farina; also, resembling farina or meal; in bot. and zool., covered with a mealy powder.

far-ious. [L. farious.] An adjective suffix joined to stems that express number or quantity, and equivalent in meaning to -fold, or implying parts, rows, forms, kinds, etc., to the number specified, as in bifarious, trifarious, quinquefarious, multifarious, omnifarious.

far-kle-ber-ry (fär'kl-ber'i), n.; pl. -berries (-iz). [Origin uncertain.] A vacciniaceous shrub or small tree, Batodendron arboreum, of the southern U. S., bearing a small, black, many-seeded berry.

farm (färm), n. [OF. F. ferme, < ML. firma, < L. firmare, make firm, < firmus, E. firm.] A fixed yearly amount payable in the form of rent, tax, or the like†; also, a fixed annual amount accepted from a person in lieu of taxes or the like which he is authorized to collect; the letting out of the collection of public revenue; a district let out for the collection of revenue; the condition of being let out at a fixed amount (as, a district in farm); also, a tract of land devoted to agriculture, whether controlled by a tenant or the owner; a tract of land devoted to some allied or other industry, as the raising of domestic or other animals (as, a poultry-farm; an ostrich-farm); sometimes, a baby-farm.—farm, v. I. tr. To take or hold (land, etc.) at a certain rent†; also, to take the proceeds or profits of (a tax, undertaking, etc.) on paying a fixed sum; also, to let or lease (taxes, revenues, an enterprise, etc.) to another for a fixed sum or a percentage (often with out); let or lease the labor or services of (a person) for hire; also, to contract for the maintenance of (a person, institution, etc.): as, a town which *farm*s its paupers; also, to cultivate (land). II. intr. To cultivate the soil; operate a farm.—farm'er, n. One who farms; one who undertakes the collection of taxes, etc., paying a fixed sum for the privilege of retaining them; one who undertakes some service, as the charge and maintenance of children, at a fixed price; one who cultivates land, or operates a farm.—farm'er-gen'er-al, n.; pl. farmers-. In France, under the old monarchy, a member of a company of capitalists that farmed certain taxes.—farm'er-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). The buildings, yards, etc., of a farm.—farm'=house, n. A dwelling-house on a farm.—farm'ing, n. The act or vocation of one who farms; agriculture.—farm'stead (-sted), n. A farm with its buildings; a homestead.—farm'yard, n. A yard or inclosure surrounded by or connected with farm-buildings.

far-o (fär'ō), n. [From Pharaoh, Egyptian ruler, said to have been pictured formerly on one of the cards.] A gambling-game played with cards, in which the players bet on the cards of the dealer's or banker's pack.

far-off (fär'ōf'), a. Distant; remote.

far-ra-go (fä-rä'gō), n. [L., mixed fodder, medley, < far, spelt.] A confused mixture; a hodgepodge; a medley: as, "a confounded farrago of doubts, fears, hopes, wishes" (Sheridan's "Rivals," ii. 1).—far-rag'i-nous (-raj'i-nus), a.

far-reach-ing (fär'rē'ching), a. Extending far in influence or effect.

far-ri-er (fär'i-ër), n. [OF. ferrier, < L. ferrarius, < fer-rum, iron.] A blacksmith who shoes horses; also, a person who treats the diseases of horses; a veterinarian.—far'ri-er-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). The art or the establishment of a farrier.

far-row¹ (fär'ō), n. [AS. fearh, akin to D. varken, G. ferkel, L. porcus.] A young pig; a litter of pigs.—far'row¹, v. I. tr. To bring forth (young): said of swine. II. intr. To produce a litter of pigs.

far-row² (fär'ō), a. [Origin uncertain.] Not producing young in a particular season: applied only to cows.

far-see-ing (fär'sē'ing), a. Able to see far; far-sighted; also, having foresight, sagacious, or discerning (as, "His keen and far-seeing judgment perceived clearly his true interest": Lecky's "Hist. of Eng. in the 18th Century," i.).

far-sight-ed (fär'si'ted), a. Seeing to a great distance; also, seeing objects at a distance more clearly than those near at hand; hypermetropic; also, foreseeing remote results; prescient; shrewd.—far'=sight'ed-ness, n.

far-ther (fär'thēr), adv. compar. [Orig. var. of further, but now taken as an irregularly formed compar. (prop. farrer) of far, with superl. farthest.] At or to a greater distance; also, at or to a more advanced point; to a greater degree or extent; also, in addition, moreover, or besides.—far'ther, a. compar. More distant or remote; also, extending or tending to a greater distance; hence, further or additional.—far'ther, v. t. To help forward; advance; promote; further. [Now rare.]-far'ther-most, a. superl. Most distant or remote; farthest.—far'thest (-thēst), adv. and a. [Orig. var. of furthest: see farther.] Superl. of farther.

far-thing (fär'thing), n. [AS. fēorthing, < fēortha, E. fourth.] An English coin, now of bronze, worth one fourth of a penny, or about half of a U. S. cent; hence, something of very small value; a bit.

far-thin-gale (fär'thing-gäl), n. [OF. verdugale, < Sp. verdugado, < verdugo, young shoot, rod, < verde, < L. viridis, green.] A kind of hoop-skirt or framework for expanding a woman's skirt, worn in the 16th and 17th centuries.

fas-cēs (fas'ēs), n. Plural of fascis.

fas-ci-a (fash'i-ä), n.; pl. fasciæ (-ē). [L., band.] A band or fillet; in arch., a long, flat member or band, esp. a horizontal division of an architrave; in bot. and zool., a distinctly marked band of color; in anat., a band or sheath of connective tissue investing, supporting, or binding together internal organs or parts of the body; tissue of this kind; in surg., a bandage.—fas'ci-al, a.—fas'ci-ate, fas'ci-at-ed (-ät, -ä-ted), a. [L. fasciatus, pp. of fasciare, envelop with bands, < fascia.] Marked with a band or bands; also, bound with a band, fillet, or bandage; in bot., compressed into a band or bundle; grown together, as stems.—fas'ci-ate-ly, adv.—fas-ci-a'tion (-ä'shən), n. Fasciated condition; also, a binding up or bandaging; in bot., the process of becoming fasciated, or the resulting state.

fas-ci-cle (fas'i'cl), n. [L. fasciculus, dim. of fascis, bundle.] A small bundle; specif., a close cluster, as of flowers or leaves; also, a single part of a printed work issued in sections.—fas'ci-cled, a.—fas-cic-u-lar (fa-sik'ü-lär), a. Pertaining to or forming a fascicle; fasciculate.—fas-cic'u-late, fas-cic'u-lat-ed (-lät, -lä-ted), a. Arranged in a fascicle or fascicles.—fas'ci-cule (-kül), n. [F., < L. fasciculus.] A fascicle, esp. of a book.—fas-cic'u-lus (-lus), n.; pl. -li (-li). [L.] A fascicle, as of nerve-fibers or muscle-fibers; also, a fascicle of a book.

Obverse.

Reverse.

Copper Farthing of Charles II., 1672.
British Museum.

Fascicle of Flowers of the Mallow.

(variable) đ as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ˆ, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

fasci-nato (fas'i-nāt), v. t.; -nated, -nating. [L. fascinatus, pp. of fascinare, < fascinum, spell, witchcraft.] To act on by witchcraft or magic; bewitch; also, to cast under a spell by a look; hence, to deprive of the power of resistance as through terror; also, to attract powerfully or irresistibly; now, usually, to attract and hold by delightful qualities; captivate; charm; enchant.—fasci-nat-ing-ly, adv.—fasci-na'tion (-nā'shən), n. [L. fascinatio (-n-).] The act of fascinating; also, fascinating quality; subtle, irresistible influence; a powerful attraction; a charm; also, the state of being fascinated.—fasci-na-tor, n. [L.] One who or that which fascinates; also, a kind of scarf of crochet-work, lace, etc., narrowing toward the ends, worn as a head-covering by women. fasci-ne (fa-sēn'), n. [F., < L. fascina, < fascis, bundle.] A fagot; specif., milit., a long bundle of sticks used in raising batteries, strengthening ramparts, etc.

Fascinés.

fascis (fas'is), n.; pl. fascēs (-ēz). [L., bundle.] A bundle; pl., a bundle of rods containing an ax with the blade projecting, borne before Roman magistrates as an emblem of official power.

Fas-cism (fas'izm or fash'izm), n. [It. Fascismo.] [Also l. c.] The principles or methods of the Fascisti.—Fas'cist. [It. Fascista.] [Also l. c.] I. n. A member of the Fascisti. II. a. Of or pertaining to the Fascisti.

Fasces of a Roman magistrate.

Fas-cis-ti (fa-sis'ti or fa-shis'ti, It. fā-shēs'tē), n. pl. [It., pl. of Fascista, < L. fascis, bundle, pl. fascēs, the fasces, or bundle of rods containing an ax, serving as an emblem of the official power of Roman magistrates.] The members of a patriotic society in Italy, animated by a strong national spirit, and organized in connection with a repressive movement directed against the socialists and communists and the disturbances excited by them during 1919 and the years following, which regarded the government as criminally negligent in failing to deal with these disturbances, and took measures on its own account, often violent ones, to combat them, and which developed into a powerful party obtaining political control of the country in Oct., 1922, under its founder and leader, Benito Mussolini, as prime minister; hence, the members of a similar society or party elsewhere.

fash (fash), v. t. or i. [OF. fascher (F. fâcher).] To annoy or be annoyed; trouble. [Sc.]—fash, n. Trouble; also, a troublesome person or thing. [Sc.]

fash-ion (fash'ən), n. [OF. F. façon, < L. factio (-n-), a doing or making; see faction.] The act or process of making; workmanship; also, the make or form of anything; shape; appearance; also, a particular make, shape, pattern, or style; a kind or sort; also, manner, way, or mode (as, in roundabout fashion; after a fashion, that is, in some manner or other, or to a certain extent); also, a pretense or show (see Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice," iv. 1. 18); also, a prevailing custom, mode, or style, as of dress; the prevailing mode of dress, etiquette, procedure, etc., esp. in polite society ("the fashion"); something fashionable ("the fashion"); conventional usage in dress, manner of life, etc., esp. of polite society, or conformity to it (as, the dictates of fashion; people of fashion; in fashion, or out of fashion); fashionable people collectively.—fash'ion, v. t. To form or shape; give a particular shape or form to; also, to accommodate or adapt (as, "Unskilful he to fawn, or seek for power, By doctrines fashion'd to the varying hour": Goldsmith's "Deserted Village," 146); also, to contrive or manage (as, "You and Douglas . . . As I will fashion it, shall happily meet": Shakespeare's "1 Henry IV," i. 3. 297); also, to counterfeit (as, "It better fits my blood to be disdained of all than to fashion a carriage to rob love from any": Shakespeare's "Much Ado about Nothing," i. 3. 30).—fash-ion-a-ble. I. a. Capable of being fashioned; also, observant of or conforming to the fashion; stylish; also, pertaining to, characteristic of, or patronized by the world of fashion. II. n. A fashionable person.—fash-ion-a-ble-ness, n.—fash'ion-a-bly, adv.—fash'ioned, a. Being of a particular fashion: as, old-fashioned.—fash'ion-er, n.—fash'ion-less, a. Without fashion; formless.—fash'ion-mong'er

(-mung'gēr), n. One versed in or given over to the fashions.—fash'ion-mong'ing, a.—fash'ion=plate, n. A pictorial design showing the prevailing mode or a new mode of dress; also, a person who affects the latest style in dress (colloq.).

fash-ious (fash'us), a. [OF. fascheux (F. fâcheux), < fascher: see fash.] Troublesome; vexatious. [Sc.]

fast¹ (fäst), a. [AS. fæst = D. vast = G. fest = Icel. fastr, fast, firm.] Firmly fixed in place, or not easily moved; securely attached to something else; that cannot escape or be extricated; firmly tied, as a knot; closed and made secure, as a door; such as to hold securely (as, to lay fast hold on a thing); strong against attack, or fortified, as a place (obs. or rare); firm in adherence (as, fast friends); deep or sound, as sleep; permanent or lasting, as a color.—fast and loose, now fast, now loose; sometimes, as a noun, inconstancy; also, an old cheating game in which a belt or string is so arranged that the dupe thinks he can make it fast by passing a skewer through its folds, whereas the operator can detach it at once (hence the phrase 'to play fast and loose,' to trifle deceptively or insincerely; be inconstant or unreliable).—fast¹, n. That which fastens, as a mooring-rope.—fast¹, adv. [AS. fæste.] In a fast manner; firmly; securely; soundly (as, fast asleep); also, close (as, fast by); also, immediately or at once.

fast² (fäst), adv. [ME.; another use of fast¹, adv.] Quickly, swiftly, or rapidly (as, to run fast); in quick succession (as, "Faster than spring-time showers comes thought on thought": Shakespeare's "2 Henry VI," iii. 1. 337); also, in a fast mode of life.—fast², a. [From fast², adv.] Quick, swift, or rapid, as motion, progress, or action, or as something that moves or acts; coming in quick succession (as, "As fast years flow away, The smooth brow gathers": Shelley's "Alastor," 533); also, indicating a time in advance of the correct time, as a clock; also, adapted to or productive of rapid movement (as, a fast track); also, pursuing pleasure at an immoderate rate or with disregard of becoming or moral restraints, as a person; characterized by such pursuit of pleasure, as a mode of life.

fast³ (fäst), v. i. [AS. fæstan = D. vasten = G. fasten = Icel. fasta = Goth. fastan, fast.] To abstain from all food, or eat only sparingly or of certain kinds of food, esp. as a religious observance.—fast³, n. [ME. faste = Icel. fasta: cf. AS. fæsten.] A fasting; an abstinence from food, or a limiting of one's food, esp. when voluntary and as a religious observance; also, a day or period of fasting.—fast³=day, n. A day on which fasting is observed, esp. such a day appointed by some ecclesiastical or civil authority.

fas-ten (fäs'n), v. [AS. fæstnian, < fæst, E. fast¹, a.] I. tr. To make fast; fix firmly or securely in place or position; attach securely to something else; make secure, as an article of dress with buttons, clasps, or the like, or a door with a lock, bolt, or the like; inclose securely, as a person or an animal (with in); fig., to attach by any connecting agency (as, to fasten a nickname or a charge upon one); impose; also, to direct intently (the eyes, thoughts, etc.). II. intr. To become fast or fastened; also, to make one's self fast to something; attach one's self; lay fast hold on something.—fas'ten-er, n.—fas'ten-ing, n. Something that fastens, as a lock or clasp.

fast-er (fäs'tēr), n. One who fasts.

fast-id-i-ous (fas-tid'i-us), a. [L. fastidiosus, < fastidium, loathing, disgust.] Feeling disgust; also, disdainful; also, easily disgusted; squeamish; excessively nice or exacting in requirements of taste; also, causing disgust.—fast-id'i-ous-ly, adv.—fast-id'i-ous-ness, n.

fas-tig-i-ate, fas-tig-i-at-ed (fas-tij'i-āt, -ā-ted), a. [L. fastigium, gable-top, summit, slope.] Rising to a pointed top; in bot., erect and parallel, as branches; having such branches.

fast-ness¹ (fäst'nes), n. [AS. fæstnes.] The state of being fast or firm; fixedness; also, a secure place; a stronghold.

fast-ness² (fäst'nes), n. The state of being fast or rapid; swiftness; also, the quality of being fast, as in behavior or mode of life.

fat¹ (fat). [AS. fætt, orig. pp., fatted, fat, = D. vet = G. feist, fat.] I. a.; compar. fatter, superl. fattest. Having much flesh other than muscle; plump; corpulent; hence, thick, broad, or extended (as, fat-faced type); also, con-fat, fâte, fär, fäll, äsk, färe; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you; sisting of or containing fat; oily; unctuous; hence, abounding in a particular element, esp. a desirable one (as, fat pine, pine rich in resin; fat lime, lime comparatively pure); also, fertile, as land; profitable, as an office; affording good opportunities (as, a fat part in a play); prosperous or affluent, as persons (obs. or archaic); plentiful, as a supply; plentifully supplied, as a larder; also, dull or stupid, like a fat animal. II. n. An oily or greasy substance which forms the chief part of certain animal tissues (fatty or adipose tissues) and also occurs in plants; animal tissue containing this substance; specif., any of a class of organic chemical compounds of which the natural fats are usually mixtures; in fig. use, the richest or best part of anything; the best produce (as, the fat of the land); also, especially profitable or advantageous work.—fat¹, v. t. or i.; fatled, fatting. [AS. fættian, < fætt.] To make or become fat.

fat² (fat), n. [AS. fæt = D. vat = G. fass = Icel. fat, vessel.] A vessel; a tub or vat: as, "The fats shall overflow with wine and oil" (Joel, ii. 24). [Archaic or prov.]

fa-tal (fā'tal), a. [L. fatalis, < fatum, E. fate.] Proceeding from or decreed by fate or overruling necessity; fated; also, of the nature of or resembling fate or destiny; inevitable; necessary; also, influencing or deciding fate or destiny (as, the fatal sisters, the three Fates); also, prophetic; also, foreboding, or associated with, death or disaster (as, "the black and fatal ravens": Marlowe's "2 Tamburlaine," iv. 3); ominous; also, fraught with fate (as, a fatal day); fateful; also, causing death, destruction, or ruin (as, a fatal accident; a blow fatal to one's prospects); deadly; disastrous.—fa'tal-ism, n. The doctrine that all things are subject to fate or inevitable predetermination; also, the acceptance of all things and events as inevitable; submission to fate.—fa'tal-ist, n. A believer in fatalism; also, one whose conduct is controlled by belief in fatalism.—fa-tal-is'tic, a.—fa-tal-i-ty (fā'tal'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [LL. fatalitas.] The quality of being predetermined by or subject to fate; inevitable necessity; an unalterably predetermined course of things; the fate or destiny of a person or thing; also, a predetermined liability to disaster (as, "It seems as if a fatality attended the possessors of this splendid estate": Marryat's "King's Own," l.); also, the quality of causing death or disaster; deadliness; a fatal influence; also, a disaster resulting in death; a calamity or misfortune.—fa'tal-ly, adv. As decreed by fate; also, in a manner leading to death or disaster.—fa'tal-ness, n.

fa-ta Mor-ga-na (fā'tä mör-gä'nä). [It., 'fairy Morgana': cf. fay.] A kind of mirage seen particularly in the Strait of Messina, formerly attributed to fairy agency.

fat-bird (fat'bërd), n. The guacharo; also, the pectoral sandpiper (local).

fat-brained (fat'bränd), a. Dull of apprehension; stupid. See Shakespeare's "Henry V.," iii. 7. 143.

fate (fat), n. [L. fatum, a prophetic declaration, oracle, fate, prop. pp. neut. of fari, speak.] The agency by which events are inevitably predetermined; destiny; also, that which is destined to happen; one's appointed lot or destiny; what will become, or has become, of a person or thing; hence, death, destruction, or ruin; also [cap.], in class. myth., the goddess of fate or destiny; in pl., the three goddesses, Clotho, Lachesis, and Atropos, supposed to control human destinies.—fate, v. t.; fated, fating. To predetermine as by the decree of fate; destine: now only in the passive.—fat-ed (fā'ted), a. Having a particular fate or destiny (as, ill-fated); also, subject to, guided by, or predetermined by fate; also, doomed to destruction; also, invested with the power of determining fates (as, "The fated sky Gives us free scope": Shakespeare's "All's Well," i. 1. 232).—fate'ful, a. Fraught with fate; involving momentous consequences; important; also, prophetic; ominous; also, fatal, deadly, or disastrous; also, controlled by irresistible destiny.—fate'ful-ly, adv.—fate'ful-ness, n.

fat-head (fat'hed), n. A stupid person; a dolt; also, a labroid food-fish, Pimelometopon pulcher, which abounds on the coast of California; also, a cyprinoid fish, Pimephales promelas, of the central U. S.—fat'=head', a. Thick-headed; stupid.

Fathead (Pimelometopon pulcher).

fa-ther (fä'thër), n. [AS. fæder = D. vader = G. vater = Icel. fadhir = Goth. fadar, father; akin to L. pater, Gr. πατήρ, Skt. pitar, father.] He who begets a child; a male parent; the nearest male ancestor; also, any male ancestor, esp. the founder of a race, family, or line; also, a father-in-law, stepfather, or adoptive father (colloq.); also, one who exercises protecting care over others like that of a father (as, "I was a father to the poor": Job, xxix. 16); [cap.] the Supreme Being and Creator; God; with the, in orthodox Christian phraseology, the first person of the Trinity; [l. c.] a title of reverence in ecclesiastical use, as for church dignitaries, officers of monasteries, monks, confessors, and priests; a person bearing this title; also, a title of respect for an old man; the oldest member, or the one who has longest belonged to the membership, of a society, profession, etc.; also, one of the leading men of a city, etc.; a member of a city council or board of aldermen; one of the senators of ancient Rome (as, "The Fathers of the City Are met in high debate," Macaulay's "Battle of the Lake Regillus," viii.: cf. conscript, a.); also, one who originates or establishes something, as a founder, inventor, author, etc. (as, the father of lies, the devil); any of the chief early Christian writers, whose works are the main sources for the history, doctrines, and observances of the church in the early ages ('fathers of the church'); also, that which gives rise to anything (as, the wish was father to the thought).—fa'ther, v. t. To beget (as, "Cowards father cowards and base things sire base": Shakespeare's "Cymbeline," iv. 2. 26); fig., to originate; be the author of; also, to act as a father toward; also, to acknowledge one's self the father of; hence, to assume as one's own; take the responsibility of; also, to provide with a father (as, "Think you I am no stronger than my sex, Being so father'd and so husbanded?" Shakespeare's "Julius Cæsar," ii. 1. 297); also, to name the father of; charge on one the begetting of; fig., to ascribe the authorship of or responsibility for (with on or upon).—fa'ther-hood (-hüd), n. The state of being a father; the relation or authority of a father.—fa'ther-in-law, n.; pl. father-. The father of one's husband or wife; also, a stepfather (colloq., Eng.).—fa'ther-land (-land), n. [= D. vaderland = G. vaterland.] One's native country, or the land of one's ancestors.—fa'ther-less, a. Without a living father; also, without a known or legally responsible father.—fa'ther-less-ness, n.—fa'ther-ly, a. Of, like, or befitting a father.—fa'ther-li-ness, n.—fa'ther-ly, adv. In the manner of a father.—fa'ther-ship, n. The state or relation of a father.

fath-om (fäth'om), n.; pl. fathoms or (as after a numeral) fathoms. [AS. fæthm = D. vadem = G. faden = Icel. fathmr, fathom.] A unit of linear measurement, orig. the distance covered by the outstretched arms, now a definite measure of 6 feet, used chiefly in measuring the length of cables, etc., and the depth of water by sounding; also, intellectual capacity (obs. or archaic: as, "Another of his fathoms they have none," Shakespeare's "Othello," i. 1. 153).

—fath'om, v. t. To encircle by extending the arms; also, to measure the depth of by sounding (often fig.); hence, to penetrate to the bottom of; understand thoroughly; comprehend.—fath'om-a-ble, a. Capable of being fathomed or sounded; fig., comprehensible.—fath'om-er, n.—fath'om-less, a. Incapable of being fathomed; of measureless depth; fig., incomprehensible.—fath'om-less-ly, adv.

fa-tid-i-c, fa-tid-i-cal (fä-tid'ik, -i-kal), a. [L. fatidicus, < fatum, fate, + dicere, say.] Propheying; prophetic.

fat-i-ga-ble (fat'i-gä-bl), a. [LL. fatigabilis.] Easily fatigued or tired.

fat-i-gate (fat'i-gät), a. [L. fatigatus, pp.] Fatigued. See Shakespeare's "Coriolanus," ii. 2. 121.

fa-tigue (fä-tëg'), v. t.; -tigated, -tiguing. [F. fatiguer, < L. fatigare (pp. fatigatus).] To weary with bodily or mental exertion; exhaust the strength of; tire; in mech., to cause the fatigue of.—fa-tigue', n. [F.] Weariness from bodily or mental exertion; also, a cause of weariness; labor; exertion; milit., fatigue-duty; in mech., the weakening of metal subjected to stress, esp. a continued series of stresses.—fa-tigue'=dress, n. A soldier's uniform for fatigue-duty.—fa-tigue'=du'ty, n. Work done by soldiers other than that of a strictly military character, as repairing roads, cleaning up grounds, etc.—fa-tigue'less, a. Without fatigue; tireless.—fa-tigue'=par'ty, n. A body of soldiers engaged in fatigue-duty.—fa-ti'guing-ly, adv.

fat-less (fat'les), a. Without fat; lean, as meat.

fat-ling (fat'ling), n. [See ling¹.] A young animal, as a calf or a lamb, fattened for slaughter.

fat-ly (fat'li), adv. In a fat manner; plumply; corpulently.

fat-ness (fat'nes), n. The condition of being fat; corpulence; oiliness; richness; fertility; also, fatty or oily matter; fat.

fat-ten (fat'n), v. t. or i. To make or become fat.—fat'ten-er, n.

fat-tish (fat'ish), a. Somewhat fat.

fat-ty (fat'i), a.; compar. fattier, superl. fattiest. Consisting of, containing, or resembling fat; in pathol., characterized by morbid production or accumulation of fat.—fatty acid, in chem., any of a class of organic acids certain of which (as oleic acid) are obtained from animal and vegetable fats and oils.—fat'ti-ness, n.

fa-tu-i-ty (fa-tū'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [L. fatuitas.] The quality of being fatuous; foolishness or silliness, or something foolish; also, idiocy or imbecility (now rare).—fa-tu-i'ous, a.

fat-u-ous (fat'ū-us), a. [L. fatuus, foolish: cf. insatuate.] Foolish, esp. in an unconscious, complacent manner; silly; also, idiotic or imbecile (now rare); also, unreal or illusory (as, fatuous fire, the ignis fatuus).—fat'u-ous-ly, adv.—fat'u-ous-ness, n.

fat-wit-ted (fat'wit'ed), a. Dull; stupid. See Shakspeare's "1 Henry IV.," i. 2. 2.

fau-bourg (fō'börg, F. fō-bör), n. [F. faubourg, OF. forsbourg, < fors (< L. foris), outside, + bourg, town, = E. borough.] A part of a city outside of, or originally outside of, the walls; a suburb.

fau-ces (fā'sēz), n. pl. [L.] In anat., the cavity at the back of the mouth, leading into the pharynx.—fau'cal (-kəl), fau'cial (-shal), a.

fau-cet (fā'set), n. [OF. F. fausset.] A small peg or plug for stopping the vent of a cask, etc.; also, in devices for drawing off liquids from casks, etc., the hollow wooden plug or tube whose passage is stopped by a small peg called the spigot; hence, any device for controlling the flow of liquid from a pipe or the like by opening or closing an orifice; a tap; a cock; also, the enlarged end of a pipe into which the end or spigot of another pipe enters to form a joint.

faugh (fā), interj. [Cf. foh and fie.] An exclamation of disgust.

fault (fält), n. [OF. F. faute, < L. fallere, deceive, disappoint, E. fail.] Want of or deficiency (as, "one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend": Shakspeare's "2 Henry IV.," ii. 2. 45); also, a defect or imperfection; a flaw; a failing; also, an error or mistake; a misdeed or transgression; also, delinquency; culpability; cause for blame; in geol. and mining, a break in the continuity of a body of rock or of a vein, with dislocation along a plane of fracture; in elect., an accidental defect in an electric circuit, as a new path opened to the current; in tennis, etc., a failure to serve the ball legitimately within the prescribed limits; in hunting, a break in the line of scent; a losing of the scent.—at fault, open to censure; blamable; also, having lost the scent, as in hunting; fig., puzzled; astray.—in fault, open to censure; blamable.—to a fault, to such an extent as to constitute a fault; excessively.—to find fault. See under find, v. t.—fault, v. I. tr. To find fault with, blame, or censure (now rare); in geol., to cause a fault in. II. intr. To commit a fault (archaic); in geol., to undergo a fault or faults.—fault'find'er, n. One who finds fault; one who complains or objects; also, a device for locating defects, as in an electric circuit.—fault'find'ing, Section showing Displacement of Strata by a Fault.—a and a were once a continuous mass of rock.

n. and a.—fault'ful, a. Full of faults; faulty; culpable.—fault'i-ly, adv. In a faulty manner; defectively; culpably.—fault'i-ness, n. Faulty state or quality.—fault'less, a. Without fault or defect; perfect.—fault'less-ly, adv.—fault'less-ness, n.—fault'y, a.; compar. faultier, superl. faultiest. Containing faults or defects (as, a faulty design or plan); having, or marked by, imperfections or failings (as, "faulty friends," Browning's "La Saisiaz"; faulty morals); also, culpable or blamable; also, of the nature of a fault.

faun (fân), n. [L. faunus, < Faunus, a Roman rural deity later identified with the Greek Pan.] In Rom. myth., one of a class of rural deities represented as men with the ears, horns, and tail, and later also the hind legs, of a goat.

fau-na (fâ'nä), n.; pl. -nas or -næ (-nē). [NL., < Fauna, a female deity, sister of Faunus: see faun.] The animals of a given region or period, taken collectively; also, a treatise on them.—fau'nal, a. Of or pertaining to a fauna.—fau'nist, n. A student of or writer on faunas.—fau'nis'tic, a. fau'teuil (fō-tē-y'), n. [F. fauteuil, OF. faudestuel, < OHG. faldstul: see faldstool.] An arm-chair.

faux pas (fō pä). [F.] A false step; a slip in manners or conduct; a breach of etiquette or propriety.

fa-ve-o-late (fā-vē'ō-lät), a. [NL. faveolus, dim. of L. favus, honeycomb.] Honeycombed; cellular; alveolate; pitted.

fa-vo-ni-an (fā-vō'ni-an), a. [L. Favonius, the west wind, < favere, be favorable.] Of or pertaining to the west wind; hence, mild; favorable; propitious.

fa-vor (fā'vor), n. [OF. favor (F. faveur), < L. favor, < favere, be favorable.] Good-will or kind regard (as, "I have found favor in the sight of the king": Esther, v. 8); inclination or willingness to commend, support, or adopt (as, to look with favor on a project); the state of being approved, or held in regard (as, in favor; out of favor); also, an object of good-will or kind regard (rare: as, "Man, His chief delight and favours," Milton's "Paradise Lost," iii. 664); also, kindness manifested or done (as, to show favor to a person); gracious action proceeding from good-will; a kind act or office (as, to ask a favor of a person); something done or granted out of good-will, rather than from justice or for remuneration; often, a letter, esp. a commercial one (used in compliment); also, kind indulgence (as, "But, with your favours, I will treat it here": Dryden's "Cock and the Fox," 807); leave or permission; pardon; leniency; also, partial or biased kindness (as, a fair field and no favor); partiality; also, in general, aid or furtherance (as, the enemy approached under favor of the night); also, something bestowed as a token of good-will or kind regard; a gift, as a knot of ribbon or a glove, given usually by a woman to a man, to be worn as a token of friendship or love; a ribbon, badge, etc., worn in evidence of good-will or loyalty; any of the various small gifts given between the partners in a cotillion; also, attractiveness or beauty (archaic: as, "Thine eye desireth favours and beauty," Ecclus. xl. 22); an attraction or charm (archaic); also, appearance or look (archaic: as, "Folks don't use to meet for amusement with fire-arms . . . This . . . has an angry favours," Sheridan's "Rivals," v. 1); the face or countenance (archaic: as, "What makes thy favours like the bloodless head Fall'n on the block?" Tennyson's "Queen Mary," v. 2).—in favor of, in support of; on the side of; also, to the advantage of; of a check, etc., so as to be payable to.—fa'vor, v. t. [OF. favorer, < ML. favoreare, < L. favor.] To regard with favor; look kindly upon; have a liking or preference for; also, to show favor to; treat kindly; encourage; patronize; indulge or oblige with something (as, "He begged to be favoured with a song": Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield," v.); also, to deal with gently, spare, or ease (now colloq.: as, to favor a lame leg); also, to treat with partiality; also, to aid or support; lend support or confirmation to (as, "Every circumstance imaginable favoured this suspicion": Steele, in "Tatler," 209); prove advantageous to (as, "The silence and solitude of the place very much favoured his meditations": Addison, in "Tatler," 97); also, to resemble in features or aspect (now colloq.: as, "Robin could not deny but the gentleman favoured his master," Steele, in "Spectator," 398).—fa'vor-a-ble, a. [OF. F. favorable, < L. favorabilis, in favor, winning favor, pleas-fat, fâte, fär, fäll, äsk, färe; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviäry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operă, ardent, actör, natüre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

ing.] Winning favor†; pleasing†; also, manifesting favor; well-disposed; inclined to aid or help; of a report, opinion, etc., approving or commendatory; of an answer, granting what is desired; of appearances, boding well, promising, or hopeful; also, affording aid, advantage, or convenience (as, a favorable position; favorable weather); advantageous; suitable; conducive or contributing (as, "Nothing is more favourable to the reputation of a writer than to be succeeded by a race inferior to himself": Macaulay's "Essays," Petrarch).—fa'vor-a-ble-ness, n.—fa'vor-a-bly, adv.—fa'-vored, a. Regarded or treated with favor; enjoying special favors or advantages; also, adorned with or wearing a favor; also, of specified appearance or looks (as, ill-favored).—fa'-vor-er, n.—fa'-vor-ing-ly, adv.

fa-voor-ite (fā'vor-it). [F. (obs.) favorit (now favori, fem. favorite), < It. favorito, pp. of favorire, favor, < L. favor: see favor.] I. n. A person or thing regarded with peculiar favor or preference; specif., a person who has gained the special favor of a superior; a person treated with special (esp. undue) favor by a prince, etc.; in sports, a competitor considered likely to win. II. a. Regarded with particular favor or preference: as, a favorite author; a favorite child.—fa'vor-it-ism, n. The disposition to favor, or the practice of favoring, one to the neglect of others having equal or superior claims; undue preference; partiality; also, the state of being a favorite.

fa-vose (fā-vōs'), a. [L. favus, honeycomb.] Resembling a honeycomb.

fa'vour, fa'vour-a-ble, etc., fa'vour-ite, etc. British preferred forms of favor, favorable, etc., favorite, etc.

fa-vus (fā'vus), n. [L., honeycomb.] In pathol., a skin disease, esp. of the scalp, characterized by dry incrustations somewhat resembling a honeycomb, due to the fungus Achorion schönleinii.

fawn¹ (fān), v. i. [AS. fahnian, var. of fægnian, rejoice, < fægen, glad, E. fain.] To show fondness by crouching, wagging the tail, licking the hand, etc. (said esp. of dogs); hence, to court notice or favor by servile demeanor; act servilely.

fawn² (fān), n. [OF. F. faon, < L. fetus, offspring, young: see fetus.] A young deer; a buck or doe of the first year; also, fawn-color.—fawn², v. i. Of deer, to bring forth young.—fawn'-col'or, n. A light yellowish-brown color.—fawn'-col'ored, a.

fawn-er (fā'nēr), n. One who fawns; one who acts servilely.—fawn'ing, p. a. That fawns; showing fondness as a dog does; courting favor by servile demeanor.—fawn'-ing-ly, adv.

fay¹ (fā), v. t. or i. [AS. fēgan = G. fügen.] To fit together closely, as timbers in ship-building.

fay² (fā), n. [OF. fae, fee (F. fee), = It. fata, < L. fatum (pl. fata), E. fate.] A fairy: as, "Here he [Merlin] came with the fay Vivian" (M. Arnold's "Tristram and Iseult," iii.).

fay³ (fā), n. [OF. fei: see faith.] Faith; fidelity; loyalty. [Archaic or prov.]—by my fay, by my faith: a phrase of asseveration. [Archaic.]

fay⁴ (fā), a. See fey.

faze (fāz), v. t.; fazed, fazing. [= feeze.] To disturb; discomfit; daunt. [Colloq., U. S.]

faz-le (faz'l), v. i. or t.; -led, -ling. [ME. faselyn = D. vezelen = G. faseln: cf. frazzle.] To ravel. [Now prov. Eng.]

feal (fēl), a. [OF. feal, for feül, < L. fidelis, faithful: see fidelity.] Faithful; loyal; constant. [Obs. or archaic.]

fe-al-ty (fē'al-ti), n. [OF. feauite, feelte, < L. fideli-tas: see fidelity.] Fidelity to a lord (as, "They refused to dethrone the King, but they had sworn no fealty to his child": Green's "Short Hist. of the Eng. People," vi. 2); the obligation or the engagement to be faithful to a lord; hence, fidelity in general; faithfulness.

fear (fēr), n. [AS. fēr, danger, calamity, akin to D. gevaar, G. gefahr, danger, Icel. fār, mischief, plague.] A painful emotion excited by a sense of impending danger or evil, whether for one's self or for another or for any object of solicitude; the feeling or state of being afraid; apprehensive uneasiness of mind; dread; a feeling of this kind on a particular occasion (as, to dismiss one's fears); such an emotion or feeling about something specified (as, fear of one's enemies); often, apprehension or dread of something about or liable to happen or to make trouble (as, fear of the consequences; fear of opposition); anxiety or solicitude for the safety of something (as, in fear of one's life); also, a feeling of reverential awe, esp. toward God (as, "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge": Prov. i. 7); also, ground for apprehension (as, there is no fear of our losing); an object of fear† (as, "Or in the night, imagining some fear, How easy is a bush supposed a bear!" Shakspeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," v. 1. 21); also, formidable-ness†, or aptness to cause fear† (as, "There is no fear in him; let him not die": Shakspeare's "Julius Cæsar," ii. 1. 190).—fear, v. [AS. færan, frighten.] I. tr. To frighten (archaic: as, "This aspect of mine Hath feard the valiant," Shakspeare's "Merchant of Venice," ii. 1. 9); drive away or keep away by fear† (as, "A scarecrow . . . to fear the birds of prey": Shakspeare's "Measure for Measure," ii. 1. 2); also, to regard with fear, or be afraid of (as, to fear a person); be apprehensive of (as, "I will fear no evil: for thou art with me": Ps. xliii. 4); have reverential awe of (as, "The Lord pitieeth them that fear him": Ps. ciii. 13); also, to have fears for† (as, "He was much feard by his physicians": Shakspeare's "1 Henry IV.," iv. 1. 24); also, reflexively, to be afraid (archaic: as, "A flash, I fear me, that will strike my blossom dead," Tennyson's "Lancelot and Elaine," 965).

II. intr. To have fear; be afraid, as of something actual or present; be apprehensive, as of something about or liable to happen; have fears, as for some object of anxious solicitude (as, to fear for a person's safety).—fear'er, n.—fear'-ful, a. Full of fear; afraid or apprehensive of something; easily frightened, timid, or wanting courage; full of awe or reverence; also, indicative of or caused by fear (as, "Cold fearful drops stand on my trembling flesh": Shakspeare's "Richard III.," v. 3. 181); also, causing, or apt to cause, fear; dreadful; awful; hence, extremely bad, unpleasant, ugly, etc., or very great (chiefly colloq.).—fear'-ful-ly, adv.—fear'-ful-ness, n.—fear'less, a. Without fear; bold; courageous.—fear'less-ly, adv.—fear'less-ness, n.—fear'-naught, fear'nought, n. A kind of stout woolen cloth.—fear'some (-sum), a. Causing fear; frightful; also, afraid; timid.—fear'some-ly, adv.—fear'some-ness, n.

fea-sance (fē'zans), n. [AF. fesance, OF. F. faisance, < faire, do: see feasible.] In law, doing or performance, as of a condition, obligation, duty, etc.

fea-si-ble (fē'zi-bl), a. [OF. faisible, faisable (F. faisable), < faire, < L. facere, do, make.] Capable of being done, effected, or accomplished (as, a feasible plan); practicable; also, capable of being dealt with successfully (as, a road feasible for travel); also, likely or probable (as, a feasible theory).—fea-si-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-ti), fea'si-ble-ness, n.—fea'si-bly, adv.

feast (fēst), n. [OF. feste (F. fête) = Sp. fiesta = It. fiesta = G. fest, < L. fiesta, prop. neut. pl. of festus, festal (festum, a festival, feast).] A periodical celebration, or day or time of celebration, of religious or other character, in commemoration of some event or person or having some other special significance (as, the feasts of the church; the medieval feast of fools; the Chinese feast of lanterns); a festival; also, a sumptuous entertainment or repast; a banquet; also, any rich or abundant meal; fig., a rich treat.—feast, v. [OF. fester (F. fêter).] I. intr. To have, or partake of, a feast; eat sumptuously; fig., to dwell with gratification or delight, as on a picture. II. tr. To provide or entertain with a feast; fig., to gratify or delight.—feast'er, n.—feast'ful, a. Festive; joyful; also, filled with feasting.

feat¹ (fēt), n. [OF. F. fait, < L. factum, a thing done, prop. pp. neut. of facere, do, make: cf. fact.] An action or deed; esp., a noteworthy or extraordinary act or achievement; an action displaying strength or skill.

feat² (fēt), a. [Appar. < OF. F. fait, pp. of faire, < L. facere, do, make: cf. fit.] Fitting or suitable; apt; skilful or dexterous, as movements; becoming or neat, as dress; neatly attired, as a person; elegant or fine; affected, as a person. [Archaic or prov.]

feath-er (fēth'ēr), n. [AS. fether = D. veder = G. feder = Icel. fjóðhr, feather; akin to L. penna, feather, Gr. πτερόν, Skt. patra, feather, wing.] One of the epidermal appendages which together constitute the plumage of birds, being typically made up of a hard, tube-like portion (the quill) nearest the body of the bird, which passes into a thinner, stem-like distal portion (the rachis) bearing a series of slender processes (barbs) united in a blade-like structure (web) on each side; also, plumage; fig., attire; also, condition, as of health, spirits, etc. (as, in fine feather; in high feather); also, kind of plumage, or kind in general (as, birds of a feather; of every feather); pl., wings†; sing., birds collectively; also, a feather or feathers attached to the end of an arrow to direct its flight; also, something as light as a feather; hence, a trifle; also, something resembling a feather; a feather-like tuft or fringe of hair; a feather-like flaw, as in a precious stone; a projection on a board, etc., as for fitting into a groove; in rowing, the act of feathering.—a feather in one's cap, fig., a mark of distinction; an honor.—white feather. See under white, a.—feath'er, v. I. tr. To clothe or cover with or as with feathers (as, to feather one's nest, fig., to provide for or enrich one's self, esp. while acting in a fiduciary capacity); provide with feathers, as an arrow; furnish with a feather or tongue, or join by a tongue and a groove, as boards; in rowing, to turn (an oar) after a stroke so that the blade becomes nearly horizontal, and hold it thus as it is moved back into position for the next stroke. II. intr. To grow feathers; also, to be or become feathery in appearance; move like feathers (as, "the ripple feathering from her bows": Tennyson's "Enoch Arden," 540); in rowing, to feather an oar.—feath'er-bone, n. A substitute for whalebone, made from the quills of domestic fowls.—feath'er-brain, n. A light or weak brain; also, a giddy or weak-minded person.—feath'-er-brained, a.—feath'ered, p. a. Clothed, covered, or provided with or as with feathers; also, winged; swift.—feath'er=edge, n. An edge as thin as a feather; the thinner edge of a wedge-shaped board, etc.—feath'er=edged, a.—feath'er-head, n. A light or empty head; also, a silly or light-headed person.—feath'er=head'ed, a.—feath'er-i-ness, n. Feathery state.—feath'er-ing, n. Plumage; the feather of an arrow; feather-like structure or marking; in arch., ornamentation consisting of foils and cusps; foliation; in violin-playing, a very light and delicate use of the bow.—feath'er-less, a. Without feathers.—feath'er=sedge, n. A grass, Andropogon saccharoides, with a plume-like panicle, common in the southwestern U. S.—feath'er=star, n. Any of certain crinoids having a feathery appearance and radiate structure.—feath'er=stitch, n. An embroidery stitch producing work in which a succession of small filaments or branches extend alternately on each side of a central stem.—feath'er=stitch, v. t. To ornament by feather-stitch.—feath'er=veined, a. In bot., of a leaf, having a series of veins branching from each side of the midrib toward the margin.—feath'-er=weight, n. The lightest weight that may be carried by a horse in a handicap; a boxer or other contestant lighter in weight than a Feather.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ˆ, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

a, d, main stem; d, calamus or quill; a, rachis; c, c, c, barbs, cut away on right side in order not to interfere with view of b, the atershaft, the whole of the left web of which is likewise cut away.

lightweight; a frivolous or insignificant person or thing.—feath'er-y, a. Consisting of feathers; also, resembling a feather or feathers, as in appearance or lightness; hence, light, flimsy, or unsubstantial; also, clothed or covered with feathers; feathered.
feat-ly (fēt'li), adv. In a feat manner; fitly; skilfully; nimbly; neatly; elegantly. [Archaic or prov.].—feat'-ness, n.
fea-ture (fē'tūr), n. [OF. faiture, < L. factura, making, formation, < facere, do, make: cf. facture.] Make, form, or shape (obs. or archaic); also, a part of the body†; also, the form or cast of the face; any of the parts of the face, as the eye, nose, mouth, chin, etc.; pl., the face or countenance; hence, sing., a distinct part or characteristic of anything; a prominent or conspicuous part or characteristic.—fea'-ture, v. t.; -tured, -turing. To resemble in features, or favor (colloq.); also, to delineate the features of; depict; outline; also, to be a feature or distinctive mark of; also, to make a feature of, or give prominence to (colloq.).—fea'tured, a. Having features, or a certain cast of features; also, formed† or fashioned†; also, made a feature of, or given prominence to (colloq.).—fea'ture-less, a. Wanting features; without distinctive features; uninteresting; uneventful.
feaze (fēz), v. and n. See feeze.
febri- Form of L. febris, fever, used in combination.—feb-ri-fa-cient (feb-ri-fā'shent), [+ -facient]. I. a. Producing fever. II. n. Something that produces fever.—fe-brif'er-ous (fē-brif'ē-rus), a. [+ -ferous]. Producing fever.—fe-brif'ic, a. [+ -fic]. Producing or marked by fever.—fe-brif-u-gal (fē-brif'ū-gal or feb'ri-fū-gal), a. Of or like a febrifuge.—feb'ri-fuge (-fūj), [F.: see -fuge]. I. a. Serving to dispel or reduce fever, as a medicine. II. n. A febrifuge medicine or agent; hence, a cooling drink.
fe-brile (fē'bril or feb'ril), a. [F. fébrile, < L. febris, fever.] Pertaining to or marked by fever; feverish.
Feb-ru-a-ry (feb'rō-ā-ri), n. [L. Februarius, < februa, pl., the Roman festival of purification, celebrated Feb. 15.] The second month of the year, containing ordinarily 28 days, in leap-years 29.
fe-ces, fæ-ces (fē'sēz), n. pl. [L. fæces, pl. of fæx, dregs.] Dregs; sediment; also, waste matter discharged from the intestines; excrement.—fe'cal, fæ'cal (-kāl), a.
fecht (fēcht), v. and n. Scotch form of fight.
fe-cial (fē'shāl), a. and n. See fetial.
fe-cit (fē'sit), [L.] '(The person named) made it': a word often inscribed on a work of art, preceded by the name of the maker or designer.
feck (fek), n. [Corruption of effect.] Effect; efficacy; value; also, amount or quantity; the greater part. [Sc. and north. Eng.].—feck'less, a. Ineffective; weak or feeble (as, "We are now tottering with short and feckless steps towards the grave": Galt's "Annals of the Parish," Introd.); spiritless; helpless; worthless. [Chiefly Sc. and north. Eng.].—feck'ly, adv. For the most part; mostly; almost. [Sc. and north. Eng.].
fec-u-la (fek'ū-lā), n.; pl. -læ (-lē). [L. fæcula, dim. of fæx, dregs: cf. feces.] Any form of starch obtained as a sediment by washing in water the comminuted roots, grains, or other parts of plants.
fec-u-lent (fek'ū-lent), a. [L. fæculentus, < fæx, dregs: cf. feces.] Abounding in dregs or foul matter; turbid; muddy; foul.—fec'u-lence, fec'u-len-cy, n.
fec-und (fek'und or fē'kund), a. [L. fecundus, akin to fetus, offspring: see fetus.] Capable of producing offspring, or fruit, vegetation, etc., in abundance; prolific; fruitful; productive. Often fig.
fec-un-date (fek'un-dāt or fē'kund-), v. t.; -dated, -dating. [L. fecundatus, pp. of fecundare, < fecundus: see fecund.] To make prolific or fruitful; in biol., to impregnate.—fec-un-da'tion (-dā'shən), n.
fe-cun-di-ty (fē-kun'di-ti), n. [L. fecunditas.] The quality of being fecund; the capacity, esp. in female animals, of producing young in great numbers; fruitfulness or fertility, as of the earth; capacity of abundant production (often fig.: as, fecundity of imagination or invention).
fed (fed). Preterit and past participle of feed.
fed-er-al (fed'er-əl), [= F. fédéral, < L. fœdus (fæder-), compact, league, akin to fides, faith.] I. a. Of or pertain-

Feather-sedge. — a, plant, one fourth natural size; b, perfect spikelet; c, sterile spikelet, enlarged.

fat, fāte, fār, fāll, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnitē; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

ing to a compact or a league, esp. a league between nations or states; also, pertaining to or of the nature of a union of states under a central government distinct from the individual governments of the separate states (as, a federal republic; the federal government of the U. S.); pertaining to such a central government (as, federal offices or officers); also, favoring a strong central government in such a union; [cap.] noting or pertaining to a party in early U. S. history advocating a strong central government; also, pertaining to the U. S. government during the Civil War, or to the party supporting it. II. n. An advocate of federation or federalism; [cap.] in the American Civil War, an adherent of the U. S. government; esp., a soldier in the Federal army.—fed'er-al-ism, n. The federal principle of government; also, the principles of the Federal party in U. S. history.—fed'er-al-ist, n. An advocate of federalism; [cap.] a member or supporter of the Federal party in U. S. history.—fed'er-al-ize (-iz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. To make federal; unite in a federal union, as different states; bring under the control of a federal union or government.—fed'er-al-iza'tion (-i-zā'shən), n.—fed'er-al-ly, adv.

fed'er-ate (fed'ēr-āt), v. t. or i.; -ated, -ating. [L. fœderatus, pp. of fœderare, < fœdus, compact, league: see federal.] To unite in a league or federation; specif., to organize on a federal basis.—fed'er-ate (-āt). I. a. Federated; allied. II. n. A party to a covenant; a member of a league, confederacy, or federation.—fed'er-a'tion (-ē-rā'shən), n. [ML. fœderatio (n-).] The act of federating, or uniting in a league; specif., the formation of a political unity, with a central government, out of a number of separate states, etc., each of which retains control of its own internal affairs; also, a league or confederacy; esp., a federated body formed by a number of states, societies, etc., each of which retains control of its own internal affairs.—fed'er-a'tion-ist, n. An advocate of federation.—fed'er-a-tive (-ā-tiv), a. Pertaining to or of the nature of a federation; also, inclined to federate.

fe-do-ra (fē-dō'rā), n. [Said to take its name from Fédora, drama by Sardou.] A soft felt hat with a curled brim, worn with the crown creased lengthwise.

fee¹ (fē), n. [AS. feoh = OHG. fehu = Icel. fē, cattle, property, money; akin to L. pecu, Skt. paçu, cattle: cf. *fee*², also follow.] Cattle; live stock; property; wealth; money.

fee² (fē), n. [AF. fee, OF. fe, fied, fiu, fieu (F. fief), = ML. feudum, feodum; appar. from Teut., perhaps from the source of *fee*¹.] An estate in land held of a feudal lord on condition of the performing of certain services; a tenure of land subject to feudal obligations; also, an estate of inheritance in land, either absolute and without limitation to any particular class of heirs ('fee simple'), or limited to a particular class of heirs ('fee tail'); hence, possession or ownership (as, "Once did She hold the gorgeous east in fee": Wordsworth's "On the Extinction of the Venetian Republic"); also, a territory held in fee; also, service or employment, as under a feudal lord; also, a payment for services; a charge fixed by law for the services of a public officer; a remuneration for professional service, as of a physician or a lawyer; also, a sum paid for a privilege (as, an admission fee); also, a gratuity or tip.—fee², v. t.; feed, feeling. To engage or employ for a fee (chiefly Sc.); also, to give a fee to; tip.

fee-ble (fē'bl), a.; compar. feebler, superl. feeblest. [OF. feble, feible (F. faible), < L. flebilis, lamentable, < flere, weep.] Physically weak, as from age, sickness, or natural disability (as, a feeble old man; feeble hands; a feeble condition or constitution); lacking bodily strength; infirm; more generally, of things, of little material strength (as, a feeble stem; a feeble barrier); frail; slight; of little enduring power (as, feeble beginnings); also, weak intellectually or morally (as, a feeble mind; a feeble will); easily shaken, as faith; also, lacking in force or effectiveness (as, feeble resistance; a feeble attempt; a feeble argument); also, lacking in volume, loudness, brightness, distinctness, etc. (as, a feeble voice or cry; a feeble ray of light).—fee'ble-mind'ed, a. Feeble in intellect; lacking the normal endowment of mental powers or capacity; deficient in mentality; also, lacking firmness of mind (as, "Comfort the feeble- minded": 1 Thes. v. 14).—fee'ble-mind'ed-ness, n.—fee'ble-ness, n.—fee'bly, adv.

feed (fēd), v. t.; fed, feeding. [AS. fēdan, < fōda, E. food.] To give food to; supply with nourishment; hence, to minister to; gratify; also, to provide with the requisite materials for development, maintenance, or operation; also, to yield, or serve as, food for (as, "the water snake, whom fish and paddocks feed": Dryden's tr. Virgil's "Georgics," iii. 812); also, to provide as food; furnish for consumption; supply for maintenance or to be operated upon, as to a machine; also, to use (land) as pasture.—to be fed up, to be fed to repletion; hence, to have quite enough, or more than enough, of something. [Slang.]—feed, v. i. To take food, or eat (now used of persons only colloquially or in contempt); hence, to be nourished or gratified as if by food.—feed, n. The act of feeding; a meal (colloq.); also, food, as for cattle, horses, etc.; provender; fodder; an allowance of such food; also, pasture-ground† (as, "His flocks and bounds of feed Are now on sale": Shakspeare's "As You Like It," ii. 4. 83); also, the act or process of feeding a furnace, machine, etc.; the material, or the amount of it, so fed or supplied; a feeding mechanism.—feed'=-back, a. In wireless teleg. and teleph., noting or pertaining to a system in which some of the energy of the plate circuit of a vacuum-tube is returned (fed back) to the grid circuit, as in the process of regeneration.—feed'er, n. One who or that which supplies food or feeds something; something that ministers to the maintenance of something else, as a tributary stream or a branch railroad; a person or device that feeds a machine, etc.; also, one who or that which takes food or nourishment.—feed'=-wa'ter, n. Water supplied to a boiler.

feel (fēl), v. t.; felt, feeling. [AS. fēlan = D. voelen = G. fühlen, feel.] To perceive by touch or by any nerves of sensation other than those of sight, hearing, taste, and smell (as, to feel the cold; to feel a pin pricking one); hence, in general, to be or become conscious of (as, to feel the floor sinking; to feel the approach of age); be sensible of; perceive; experience mentally (as, to feel a sensation, emotion, or inclination; "I feel the impulse—yet I do not plunge," Byron's "Manfred," i. 2); be emotionally affected by (as, to feel one's loss or disgrace keenly); be sensibly affected by, or experience the effects of (as, to feel the vengeance of an enemy; the whole region felt the storm; "Better . . . it might appear . . . That never air or ocean felt the wind," Pope's "Essay on Man," i. 167); also, with an adjunct or complement, to have a particular sensation, sense, or impression of (as, to feel one's self slighted; to feel a remark to be a slur upon one); have a general or thorough conviction of (as, to feel a thing to be true; "To feel, altho' no tongue can prove, That every cloud, that spreads above And veileth love, itself is love," Tennyson's "Two Voices," 445); also, to try or examine by touch, as with the hand (as, to feel one's pulse; feel this silk); test by touching or contact (as, to feel the ground with the foot or with a stick); find or pursue (one's way) by touching, groping, or cautious moves.—to feel its, or one's, oats, to be lively or frisky, as a horse fed on oats; hence, of persons, to have or show a lively sense of advantages enjoyed; be demonstratively complacent or self-important. [Colloq.]—feel, v. i. To have perception by touch or by any nerves of sensation other than those of sight, hearing, taste, and smell; have mental sensations or emotions (as, "From sense of grief and pain we shall be free: We shall not feel, because we shall not be": Dryden's tr. Lucretius, iii. 12); also, to have a sensation or sense of being (as specified: as, to feel warm, strong, or free); be consciously, in emotion, sentiment, opinion, etc. (as, to feel happy, proud, angry, or reluctant; to feel convinced or sure); be disposed (as, to feel kindly toward one); also, to have the sensibilities affected; have sympathy (with) or compassion (for); also, to produce a particular sensation; be (cold, warm, hard, etc.) to the touch; seem, in the impression produced (as, how does it feel to be rich?); also, to make examination by touch; search or seek with the hand or by touching (as, to feel for a coin in one's purse; to feel about in a dark room); grope.—feel, n. The sense of touch (as, soft to the feel); also, a sensation or something felt; a feeling; also, a quality of an object that is perceived by feeling or touching (as, soapstone has a soapy feel; liquids with an unctuous feel); also, the act or an act of feeling.—feel'a-ble, a. That may be felt.—feel'er, n. One who or that which feels; any special organ of touch in an animal, as an antenna or a tentacle; also, a proposal, remark, hint, or the like, designed to bring out the opinions or purposes of others.—feel'ing, n. The act of one who or that which feels; the function or the power of perceiving by touch or contact (as, a limb that has lost all feeling); physical sensation or sensibility not connected with sight, hearing, taste, or smell; a particular sensation of this kind (as, a feeling of warmth, pain, or drowsiness); also, a consciousness, sense, or impression of something (as, a feeling of inferiority; to have a feeling that something is wrong); an emotion (as, a feeling of joy, sorrow, hope, fear, pity, or wonder; to contemplate a thing with mingled feelings); a sentiment, inclination, or opinion (as, the feeling of the nation is against this policy); also, capacity for emotion; sensibility; pl., sensibilities or susceptibilities liable to be unpleasantly affected (as, to hurt, ruffle, or soothe one's feelings); sing., susceptibility to the higher or more refined emotions; fine emotional endowment; sympathetic perception or spirit; sympathetic appreciation of emotional meaning, as of a musical composition, as manifested in execution; also, a quality or character felt to belong to something (as, there was an uncanny feeling about the place); in the fine arts, the general impression conveyed by a work; also, emotional or sympathetic perception revealed by an artist in his work.—feel'ing, p. a. That feels; sentient; sensitive, as nerves; accessible to emotion, or sympathetic (as, a feeling heart); indicating emotion (as, a feeling response or tone); also, deeply felt, or heartfelt (as, "feeling sorrows"; Shakspeare's "King Lear," iv. 6. 226).—feel'ing-ly, adv.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

feer (fēr), n. See *ferē*¹.

feet (fēt), n. Plural of foot.

feeze, feaze (fēz), v.; feezed, feazed, feezing, feazing. [AS. fēsian, drive.] I. tr. To drive, beat or flog, or do for (obs. or prov.); disturb or discomfit (prov. or colloq.: see faze).

II. intr. To fret; worry. [Prov. or colloq.].—feeze, feaze, n. A rush, or a violent impact (obs. or prov.); a fit of vexation or worry (colloq., U. S.).

feign (fān), v. [OF. F. feindre (ppr. feignant), < L. figere, pp. factus (stem fig-), touch, form, mold, conceive, devise, feign; akin to Gr. θυγάειν, touch, Skt. dih-, stroke, smear, and E. dough.] I. tr. To invent fictitiously or deceptively, as a story or an excuse; also, to represent fictitiously (as, "Things . . . worse Than fables yet have feign'd": Milton's "Paradise Lost," ii. 627); fable; also, to picture to one's self, or imagine (now rare); also, to maintain fictitiously, or pretend (usually with an object and infinitive, or a clause); also, to put on an appearance of (as, to feign death or sickness); simulate; sham; also, to imitate deceptively, or counterfeit (as, to feign another's voice). II. intr. To make believe; pretend.—feigned, p. a. Fictitiously invented; also, pretended, sham, or counterfeit; assumed, as a name; disguised, as a voice.—feign-ed-ly (fā'ned-li), adv.—feign'er, n.—feign'ing-ly, adv.

feint (fānt), n. [F. feinte, < feindre, E. feign.] A feigned or assumed appearance (as, to make a feint of deep absorption); a pretense; also, a movement made with the object of deceiving an adversary; an appearance of aiming at one part or point when another is the real object of attack.—feint, v. i. To make a feint.

feints (fānts), n. pl. See faints.

feist (fist), n. Same as fice.

feld-spar (feld'spār), n. [For G. feldspath, 'field spar.'] Any of a group of minerals, all silicates of aluminium with potassium, sodium, calcium, or barium. Cf. orthoclase. Also feld'spath (-spath).—feld-spath'ic, feld'spath-ose (-ös), a. Of, pertaining to, or containing feldspar.—feld'spath-oid, n. Any of a group of minerals related to the feldspars.

Fé-libre (fā-lēbr), n. [F. félibre, < Pr. felibre, a word found in an old Provençal poem, perhaps meaning 'nursling,' < LL. fellebris, sucking.] A writer of verse or prose in the Provençal language; a member of the Félibrige.—Fé-li-bre-an (fā-lēbrē-ān), a. [F. félibréen.] Of or pertaining to the fe-li-cif-ic (fē-li-sif'ik), a. [L. felix (felic-), happy, + facere, make.] Making happy; productive of happiness.

Félibres.—Fé-li-brige (fā-lē-brēzh), n. [F. félibrige, < Pr. felibrige, < felibre.] A literary society founded in Provence in 1854 for the maintenance and purification of the Provençal language and the promotion of Provençal literature and art.

fe-li-ci-tate (fē-lis'i-tāt), v. t.; -tated, -tating. [LL. felicatus, pp. of felicitare, make happy, < L. felix, happy.] To make happy (now rare); also, to compliment upon a happy event; congratulate.—fe-li'ci-tate', a. Made happy. See Shakspeare's "King Lear," i. 1. 77.—fe-li-ci-ta'tion (-tā'shən), n. The act or an act of felicitating; a congratulatory speech or message.—fe-li'ci-ta-tor, n.

fe-li-ci-tous (fē-lis'i-tus), a. Characterized by felicity; apt or appropriate, as action, manner, or expression; apt in manner or expression, as a person.—fe-li'ci-tous-ly, adv.—fe-li'ci-tous-ness, n.

fe-li-ci-ty (fē-lis'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [OF. felicite (F. félicité), < L. felicitas, < felix, happy.] The state of being happy; happiness, esp. in a high degree; an instance of this; also, a source of happiness; a blessing; also, prosperity or good fortune, or a piece of good fortune (now rare); also, a happy faculty (as, a writer's felicity of expression); singular grace or appropriateness, as of invention, manner, or expression; an instance or display of this; a happy turn of thought or expression.

fe-line (fē'līn or -līn). [L. felinus, < feles, cat.] I. a. Belonging or pertaining to the cat family (Felidae), which includes, besides the domestic cat, the lions, tigers, leopards, etc.; cat-like in form or structure; characteristic of animals of the cat family; also, cat-like in character or quality; sly; stealthy; treacherous. II. n. An animal of the cat family.—fe'line-ly, adv.—fe'line-ness, n.

fell¹ (fel), v. t. [AS. fellan, causative of feallan, E. fall.] To cause to fall; knock or strike down, as an animal; cut down, as a tree; in sewing, to finish (a seam) by sewing the edge down flat.—fell¹, n. A felling; a cutting down, as of timber; the timber cut down in one season; in sewing, a seam finished by felling.

fell² (fel). Preterit of fall.

fell³ (fel), n. [AS. fell = D. vel = G. fell; akin to L. pellis, skin.] The skin or hide of an animal; a pelt; sometimes, the skin of a human being; also, a covering of hair, wool, or the like; a fleece; a head of hair.

fell⁴ (fel), a. [OF. fel (orig. nom., with acc. felon), < ML. fello (acc. fellonem): see *felon*².] Fierce or savage; cruel or ruthless; dreadful or terrible; also, intensely painful; very destructive; deadly, as poison; also, keen or eager (prov.); also, sturdy or doughty (now prov.); also, great or huge (Sc.). [Now literary or prov.]

fell⁵ (fel), n. [Icel. fjall = Sw. fjell = Norw. fjeld: cf. fjeld.] A stretch of elevated waste land or pasture; a down. [Chiefly north. Eng. and Sc.]

fel-lah (fel'ā), n.; pl. fellahin or fellaheen (fel-ā-hēn'). [Ar. fellāh.] A native peasant or laborer in Egypt, Syria, etc.

fell-er (fel'ēr), n. One who or that which fells; specif., a sewing-machine attachment for felling seams.

fell-mong-er (fel'mung'gēr), n. A dealer in skins or hides of animals, esp. sheepskins.

fell-ness (fel'nes), n. The quality of being fell; fierceness; ruthlessness. [Now literary or prov.]

fel-loo (fel'ō), n. See *felly*¹.

fel-low (fel'ō), n. [ME. felowe, felawe, < AS. feolaga, from Scand.: cf. Icel. félagi, partner, companion, < fē, property, money, + leggja, lay: see *fee*¹ and *lay*¹.] A partner; a colleague; an ally; also, a companion or comrade; also, a thing that with something else makes up a pair; a mate; also, a thing that matches or resembles something else; also, one belonging to the same class; an equal or peer; also, a member, as of a company or party; a member of any of certain learned societies (as, a fellow of the Royal Geographical Society); an incorporated member of an English college, entitled to certain privileges; a graduate student of a university or college, to whom an allowance is granted for special study; a member of the corporation or board of trustees of a university or college; in general, a man or person (now chiefly familiar or colloq.); sometimes, fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, plne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; tū, then; y, you; in contempt, a person of small worth or no esteem (as, "Worth makes the man, and want of it the fellow": Pope's "Essay on Man," iv. 203). Much used in compounds to denote association, membership, or some other relation based on a common status, as in fellow-citizen, fellow-countryman, fellow-student, fellow-worker.—fel'low, v. t. To make, or represent as, equal with another; also, to produce a fellow or equal to; match.—fel'low=crea'ture, n. A creature produced by the same Creator: now used chiefly of human beings.—fel'low-feel'ing, n. Sympathetic feeling; sympathy; also, sense of joint interest.—fel'low-less, a. Without a fellow, companion, or mate; also, matchless or peerless.—fel'low-ly, a. Companionable; sociable; familiar. [Now prov. Eng.]—fel'low-ship, n. The condition or relation of being a fellow; community of interest, feeling, etc.; companionship; also, mutual intercourse; communion, as between members of the same church; also, friendliness (as, "The birds . . . with fearless fellowship Above and round him wheel and hover": Shelley's "Rosalind and Helen," 121); also, a body of fellows; a company; a guild or corporation; an association of persons having similar tastes, interests, etc.; also, the position or emoluments of a fellow of a university, etc.; a foundation for the maintenance of such a fellow; in arith., the rule of proportions by which the accounts of partners in business are adjusted so that each may have a share of gain, or sustain a share of loss, in proportion to his part of the stock.—fel'low-ship, v. I. tr. To unite in fellowship†; also, to admit to fellowship, esp. religious fellowship. II. intr. To join in fellowship, esp. religious fellowship.

fel'ly¹, fel-loe (fel'i, -ō), n.; pl. fellies (-iz), felloes (-ōz). [AS. felg = D. velg = G. felge.] The circular rim, or a part of the rim, of a wheel, into which the outer ends of the spokes are inserted.

fel-ly² (fel'li), adv. In a fell manner; fiercely; ruthlessly. [Now literary.]

fel-lo de se (fē'lō dē sē'), pl. felos de se (fē'lōz dē sē'). [ML., 'a felon with respect to one's self.'] One who commits suicide; also, suicide.

fel-on¹ (fel'on), n. [ME. feloun, appar. Wheel. — a. felly; b. < ML. fello(n), an inflammatory swelling, perhaps from L. fel, gall, poison: cf. felon².] In pathol., an acute and painful inflammation of the deeper tissues of a finger or toe, usually near the nail: a form of whitlow.

fel-on² (fel'on). [OF. felon (F. fêlon), n. and a., < ML. fello(n), felo(n), traitor, felon; origin uncertain: cf. felon¹, also fell⁴.] I. n. A wicked person†; in law, one who has committed a felony. II. a. Wicked; cruel; savage; wild. [Now poetic.]—fel-lo-ni-ous (fe-lō'ni-us), a. Wicked, base, or villainous (now chiefly poetic: as, "A bloody murderer, Or foul felonious thief," Shakspeare's "2 Henry VI.," iii. 1. 129); in law, pertaining to, of the nature of, or involving a felony (as, felonious homicide, which comprehends murder and manslaughter; to break into a house with felonious intent).—fel-lo'ni-ous-ly, adv.—fel-lo'ni-ous-ness, n.—fel'on-ry, n. The whole body or class of felons; the convict population of a penal colony.—fel'on-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). [OF. felonie (F. fêlonie).] Wickedness†; crime†; in law, formerly, any crime which occasioned the forfeiture of land or goods, or both, and sometimes other penalties; now, usually, any of various offenses, as murder, burglary, etc., of graver character than those called misdemeanors.

fel-site (fel'sit), n. [From fels(par).] A dense igneous rock or rock constituent consisting typically of minute crystals of feldspar and quartz.—fel-sit'ic (-sit'ik), a.

fel-spar, fel-spath (fel'spār, -spath), n. Same as feldspar.

felt¹ (felt). Preterit and past participle of feel.

felt² (felt), n. [AS. felt = D. vilt = G. filz = Sw. and Dan. filt, felt.] An unwoven fabric of wool, or of wool and fur or hair, matted together by rolling and pressure; any article of this material, esp. a hat; any matted fabric or material.—felt², v. I. tr. To make into felt; mat or press together; also, to cover with or as with felt. II. intr. To become matted together.—felt'ing, n. The act or process of making felt; the materials of which felt is made; felted material.—felt'y, a. Felt-like.

fe-luc-ca (fe-luk'ā), n. [It. felucca, feluca; from Ar.] A long, narrow vessel propelled by oars or lateen sails, or both, used chiefly in the Mediterranean.

fel-wort (fel'wört), n. [AS. feldwyr, 'field wort.'] Any of several plants of the gentian family, as Gentiana amarella.

Felucca.

fe-male (fē'māl). [ME. female (a form due to association with male), femele, < OF. F. femelle, < L. femella, dim. of femina, woman, female: see fetus.] I. n. A human being of the sex which conceives and brings forth young; a woman or girl; also, any animal of corresponding sex (as, "The female of the species is more deadly than the male": Kipling's "Female of the Species"); in bot., a pistillate plant.

II. a. Belonging to the sex which brings forth young, or any division or group corresponding to it; also, pertaining to or characteristic of this sex; feminine; also, womanish or weakly† (as, "Boys . . . clap their female joints In stiff unwieldy arms": Shakspeare's "Richard II.," iii. 2. 114); in bot., designating or pertaining to any reproductive structure which produces or contains elements that need fertilization from the male element; of seed-plants, pistillate; in mech., designating some part, etc., into which a corresponding part fits (as, a female screw: see screw, n.).

—female rime. Same as feminine rime, under feminine, a.

feme (fem), n. [AF. and OF.: see femme.] In law, a woman or wife.—feme covert, in law, a married woman.—feme sole, in law, an unmarried woman, whether spinster, widow, or divorcee; also, a married woman who is independent of her husband with respect to property.—feme sole trader, in law, a married woman who is entitled to carry on business on her own account and responsibility, independently of her husband.

fem-i-ne-i-ty (fem-i-nē'i-ti), n. [L. femineus, feminine, < femina, woman.] Feminine nature; womanliness.

fem-i-nie (fem'i-ni), n. [OF. feminie, < L. femina, woman.] Women collectively; esp., the Amazons, or their country. [Archaic.]

fem-i-nine (fem'i-nin), a. [OF. feminin (F. fêminin), < L. femininus, < femina, woman.] Belonging to the female sex (now somewhat rare); also, pertaining to or characteristic of a woman or women; womanly; sometimes, womanish; in gram., noting or pertaining to the gender to which the words denoting females regularly belong.—feminine ending, in gram., a termination or final syllable marking a feminine word; in pros., an ending in which a line closes with an extra unaccented syllable instead of the normal accented syllable.—feminine rime, in pros., a rime of two syllables of which the second is unstressed, as motion, notion ('double rime'), or of three syllables of which the second and third are unstressed, as fortunate, importunate ('triple rime'). Cf. masculine rime, under masculine, a.

—fem'i-nine, n. In gram., the feminine gender; a feminine word or word-form.—fem'i-nine-ly, adv.—fem'i-nine-ness, n.—fem-i-nin'i-ty (-nin'i-ti), n. The quality of being feminine; womanliness; also, women collectively.

fem-i-nism (fem'i-nizm), n. [L. femina, woman.] Feminine character; also, the doctrine advocating extension of the activities of women in social and political life.—fem'i-nist, n. A believer in or advocate of feminism.—fem-i-nis'tic, a.

fe-min-i-ty (fe-min'i-ti), n. Same as femininity.

fem-i-nize (fem'i-niz), v. t. or i.; -nized, -nizing. [L. femina, woman.] To make or become feminine or womanish.—fem'i-ni-za'tion (-ni-zā'shon), n.

fem-i-nol-o-gy (fem-i-nol'ō-jī), n. [L. femina, woman: see -logy.] The science or study concerned with woman.—fem-i-nol'o-gist, n.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n̄, F. bonbon; ʹ, primary accent; ʳ, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

femme (fám), n. [F. femme, OF. feme, < L. femina, woman.] A woman; a wife. Cf. feme.—femme de chambre (dè shānbr). [F.] A lady's maid; also, a chambermaid.

fem-mur (fē'mēr), n.; pl. femurs or femora (fem'ō-rā). [L., thigh.] In man, the single long bone in the leg which extends from the hip to the knee; the thigh-bone; also, a corresponding bone in the leg or hind limb of other animals; in entom., the third segment or joint of an insect's leg (counting from the proximal end), situated between the trochanter and the tibia.—fem-o-ral (fem'ō-rāl), a.

fen (fen), n. [AS. fen = D. veen = G. fenn = Icel. fen, fen, = Goth. fani, mud.] Low land covered wholly or partially with water; boggy land; a marsh; pl. [often cap.], with the, certain marshy districts in Cambridgeshire, Lincolnshire, and other English counties.

fence (fens), n. [For defence, defense.]

The act of defending†; defense†; also, a means of defense (archaic); a bulwark (archaic); also, an inclosure or barrier, as around or along a field, yard, etc.; also, the act, practice, or art of fencing; sword-play; hence, skill or adroitness in argument, etc., as in defending one's position and baffling an opponent's attacks; also, a receiver of stolen goods, or a place where such goods are received; in mach., a guard or guide, as for regulating the movements of a tool or machine.—to be on the fence, to be undecided or neutral. [Colloq., U. S.]—to mend one's fences. See under mend, v. t.—fence, v.; fenced, fencing. I. tr. To defend; shield; protect; guard; also, to ward off or keep out; also, to inclose with or as with a fence; separate by or as by a fence or fences; also, to declare (a forest, river, etc.) closed against hunting or fishing. II. intr. To raise a defense or a fence; also, to leap over a fence (said of a horse); also, to use a sword, foil, etc., in defense and attack, or in exercise or exhibition of skill in that art; hence, to parry arguments; strive to evade questioning.—fence'less, a. Defenseless; also, without a fence or inclosure; open.—fence'less-ness, n.—fence'=liz'ard, n. The common small lizard, or swift, Sceloporus undulatus, of the U. S.—fen'cer, n. One who fences; esp., one who practises the art of fencing with a sword, foil, etc.

fen-ci-ble (fen'si-bl). [For defensible.] I. a.

Capable of making defense; also, capable of being defended; also, pertaining to fencibles. II. n. A soldier enlisted for defensive service in his own country only.

fen-cing (fen'sing), n. The act of one who fences; a raising up of a defense or of fences; also, an inclosure or railing; fences collectively; material for fences; esp., the act, practice, or art of using a sword, foil, etc., for defense and attack; hence, a parrying of arguments; an evading of questions.—fen'cing=stick, n. A stick, as of hickory with a basketwork guard for the hand, used in fencing.

fend (fend), v.

[For defend.]

I. tr. To defend (archaic); also, to ward off (often with off: as, to fend off blows); also, to support or maintain (Sc.). II. intr. To make defense; offer resistance; also, to parry or fence; also, to make shift, or provide (prov. or colloq.: as, "We may strive . . . and fend, but it's little we can do," George Eliot's "Silas Marner," xiv.; to fend for one's self).—fend'er, n. One who or that which fends; a metal guard before an open fire, to keep back falling coals; a piece of timber, bundle of rope, or the like, hung over the side of a vessel to lessen shock or prevent chafing; a device in front of a locomotive, electric car, or the like, for pushing aside or catching objects or persons in case of collision.

fen-es-tel-la (fen-es-tel'ä), n.;

pl. -tellæ (-tel'ë). [L., dim.

of fenestra, window.] A small window or window-like opening; specif., a small window-like niche in the wall on the south side of an altar, containing the piscina, and frequently also the credence.

fe-nes-tra (fē-nes'trā), n.;

pl. -træ

(-trē). [L., window.] A window-like opening; in anat., a small opening or perforation, as in a bone.—fe-nes'tral, a. Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a window or fenestra.—fe-nes'- trate, fe-nes'trat-ed (-trāt, -trät-ted), a. [L. fenestratus, pp. of fenestrare, furnish with windows,

< fenestra.] Furnished with windows or window-like openings.

—fen-es-tra-tion (fen-es-trāshən), n. The disposition of windows in a building; in anat., the process of becoming perforated; the state of being fenestrate or perforated.

Fe-ni-an (fē'ni-an). [Ir. Fiann,

Feinne, legendary band of Irish warriors.] I. n. A member of a legendary band of warriors in Ireland; also, a member of an Irish revolutionary organization ('Fenian Brotherhood'), founded in New York in 1858, which had for its aim the overthrow of English rule in Ireland. II. a. Of or pertaining to the

Fenians.—

Fe'ni-an-

ism, n.

fen-nec, fen-

nek (fen'ek),

n. [Ar. fenek.]

A small African

fox, Vulpes

zerda, of

a pale fawn-

color, and

having large,

pointed ears.

fen-nel (fen'-

el), n. [AS.

fenol, finol, < L. feniculum, fennel, dim. of fænum, hay.]

An apiaceous plant, Feniculum feniculum, having yellow flowers, and bearing aromatic seeds which are used in cookery and medicine; the seeds of this plant; also, any of various more or less similar plants, as Ferula communis ('giant fennel'), a tall, ornamental apiaceous herb.—fen'nel=flow'er,

n. Any of the ranunculaceous herbs constituting the genus

Nigella, as N. sativa whose seeds are used in the East as a condiment and medicine.

Anterior view of Human Right Femur. — ec, external condyle; etu, external tuberosity; ic, internal condyle; itu, internal tuberosity; ltr, lesser trochanter; glt, great trochanter; h, head; n, neck.

Fence-lizard.

Fencing-stick.

Fender for Electric Car.

Fenestella. — Church of Norrey, near Caen, Normandy.

Fennec.

Fennel (Feniculum feniculum).

fat, fâte, fâr, fâll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; 7H, then; y, you;

fen-ny (fē'nī), a. Having the character of a fen; marshy; also, inhabiting, or growing in, fens (as, "a fenny snake," Shakspeare's "Macbeth," iv. 1. 12; "through palmy fern, and rushes fenny," Keats's "Endymion," i.).

fent (fent), n. [OF. F. fente, < fendre, < L. findere, cleave, split.] A short slit or opening in a garment, to facilitate putting it on; a placket; a vent. [Chiefly prov.]

fen-u-greek (fē'nū-grēk), n. [AS. fenogrecum, < L. fænum Græcum, 'Greek hay.'] A fabaceous plant, Trigonella fenumgræcum, indigenous to western Asia, but extensively cultivated elsewhere, chiefly for its mucilaginous seeds, which are used as food and in veterinary medicine.

food, feo-dal (fūd, fū'dəl), etc. See *feud*², *feudal*², etc.

foeff (fēf), v. t. [AF. feoffer, OF. feffer, fieffer (F. fieffer), < fiere, E. *fee*².] To invest with a fief or fee; enfeoff.—foeff, n. A fief or fee.—foeff-ee' (-ē'), n. A person invested with a fief or fee.—foeff'er, foeff'or, n. One who grants a fief or fee.—foeff'ment, n. The act of investing with a fief or fee.

fe-ra-cious (fē-rā'shus), a. [L. ferax (ferac-), < ferre, bear.] Fruitful; productive. [Obs. or archaic.]—fe-ra-ci-ty (-ras'i-ti), n.

fe-ral¹ (fē'ral), a. [L. fera, wild beast, prop. fem. of ferus, wild: see fierce.] Wild, or existing in a state of nature, as animals (or sometimes plants); also, having reverted to the wild state, as from domestication; also, pertaining to or characteristic of wild animals (as, the feral state); fig., wild; savage.

fe-ral² (fē'ral), a. [L. feralis, pertaining to the dead, < ferre, bear (with reference to funeral processions).] Pertaining to the dead; funereal; gloomy; also, deadly; fatal.

Fer-a-li-a (fē-rā'li-ā), n. pl. [L., prop. neut. pl. of feralis: see *feral*².] Among the ancient Romans, the general festival of the dead, held on the last day of the Parentalia.

fe-rash (fē-rāsh), n. [Hind., < Ar. farrāsh.] In the East Indies, a servant employed to spread carpets, pitch tents, etc., and in a house to do the work of a chambermaid.

fer-de-lance (fār-dē-lāns), n. [F., lit. 'iron (head) of lance.'] A large, very venomous serpent, Lachesis lanceolatus, of the warm parts of America.

ferē¹ (fēr), n. [AS. gefēra, < ge, together, + fēra, from the root of fara n., E. fare.] A companion; a mate; esp., a spouse. [Archaic.]

ferē² (fēr), a. [Icel. færr, akin to fara, go, AS. faran, E. fare.] Able; strong; sound; healthy. [Now Sc.]

fer-e-to-ry (fēr'ē-tō-rī), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). [ME. feretre, < OF. fietre, < L. feretrum, < Gr. φέρετρον, < φέρειν, bear.] A bier (rare); also, a shrine, usually portable, designed to hold the relics of saints; also, a room or chapel in which shrines were kept.

fer-ri-al (fē'ri-āl), a. [ML. ferialis, < L. feria, holiday: cf. *fair*².] Pertaining to a holiday; eccles., pertaining to week-days not set apart as festivals.

Fenugreek. — a, a fruit.

Fer-de-lance.

Feretory, or Shrine. — English medieval work in silver.

fe-rine (fē'rin or -rin), a. [L. ferinus, < fera, wild beast: see *feral*¹.] Feral; wild: as, "We killed some wild ferine creatures at the foot of these hills" (Defoe's "Captain Singleton," viii.).

Fe-rin-ghi, Fe-rin-ghee (fē-ring'gē), n. [Pers. Farangī, Ar. Faranjī, lit. 'Frank': cf. *Frank*¹.] An East Indian term for a European or a person of European descent, esp. a Portuguese born in India: now usually contemptuous.

fer-i-ty (fēr'i-ti), n. [L. feritas, < ferus, wild: see fierce.] Wild, untamed, or uncultivated state; hence, savagery; ferocity.

fer-ly (fēr'li). [AS. færlīc, sudden, < fær, E. fear.] I. † a. Sudden or unexpected; also, dreadful or terrible; also, strange or wonderful. II. n. Something wonderful; a marvel; a sight. [Now chiefly Sc.]

fer-mail (fēr'māl), n. [OF. fermail, < ML. fīrmaculum, < L. fīrmare, E. fīrm, v.] A clasp, buckle, or fastening, as used in ancient costume, etc.

fer-ment (fēr'ment), n. [L. fermentum, < fervere, boil: see fervent.] Any of various agents or substances, as yeast or leaven, which produce certain changes, as effervescence or decomposition, in other substances; specif., in modern scientific use, any of various living organisms, as yeasts, certain bacteria, etc. ('organized ferments'), or any of certain complex substances derived from living cells, as pepsin, etc. (enzymes, or 'unorganized ferments,' 'chemical ferments,' or 'soluble ferments'), capable of producing certain chemical changes in organic substances; also, fermentation; fig., agitation; excitement; a tumult.—fer-ment', v. [L. fermentare (pp. fermentatus), < fermentum.] I. tr. To act upon as a ferment; cause to undergo a change of the nature of or similar to that by which grape-sugar is converted into alcohol, etc., in the presence of yeast; cause to undergo fermentation; fig., to agitate; excite; also, to inflame; foment. II. intr. To be fermented; undergo fermentation; fig., to seethe with agitation or excitement.—fer-ment'a-ble, a. Capable of being fermented.—fer-men-ta'tion (-men-tā'shōn), n. The act or process of fermenting; a change brought about by a ferment, as in grape-sugar decomposed into alcohol and carbon dioxide by the action of yeast; fig., agitation; excitement.—fer-men'ta-tive (-tā-tiv), a. Tending to produce or undergo fermentation; also, pertaining to or of the nature of fermentation. Also fer-men'tive.

fer-me-ture (fēr'mē-tūr), n. [F., < fermer, close: see fīrm, v.] A device for closing the bore or chamber of a breech-loading gun.

fern (fēr), n. [AS. fearn = D. varen = G. farn.] Any of the pteridophytes constituting the order Filicales, comprising flowerless plants varying in size from small epiphytic species to herb-like and tree-like forms; also, such plants collectively. Cf. *brake*⁴.—ferned, a. Abounding in ferns.—fern'er-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). A place or a glass case in which ferns are grown for ornament.—fern'less, a. Without ferns.—fern'=seed, n. The spores of ferns, formerly regarded as seeds and supposed to have the power to render persons invisible: as, "We have the receipt of fern-seed, we walk invisible" (Shakspeare's "I Henry IV.," ii. 1. 96).—fern'wort (-wērt), n. Any of the pteridophytes.—fern'y, a. Of or pertaining to, consisting of, or resembling ferns; also, abounding in or overgrown with ferns (as, "a green ferny well": Syngue's "Well of the Saints," i.).

fer-o-cious (fē-rō'shus), a. [L. ferox (feroc-), < ferus, wild, fierce: see fierce.] Savagely fierce, as a wild beast, a person, or disposition, action, aspect, etc.; violently cruel; savage.—fe-ro'ci-ous-ly, adv.—fe-ro'ci-ous-ness, fe-ro'ci-ty (-ros'i-ti), n.

Fern (Dryopteris filix-mas).

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; û, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

-ferous. [L. -fer, also -ferus, < ferre, bear.] An adjective termination meaning 'bearing,' 'producing,' 'yielding,' 'containing,' 'conveying,' as in auriferous, gypsiferous, herbiferous, lactiferous, pestiferous.

fer-rate (fer'āt), n. In chem., a salt of ferric acid.

fer-rel (fer'el), n. Same as ferrule.

fer-re-ous (fer'ē-us), a. [L. ferreus, < ferrum, iron.] Of or pertaining to, consisting of, or resembling iron.

fer-ret¹ (fer'et), n. [It. fioretto, dim. of fiore, < L. flos, flower.] A narrow tape or ribbon, as of silk or cotton, used for binding, shoe-strings, etc.

fer-ret² (fer'et), n. [OF. F. furet, dim. < ML. furo(n), ferret, prob. < L. fur, thief.] A small, slender animal of the weasel kind, of whitish or pale-yellow color, bred to drive rabbits from their burrows, kill rats, etc.: usually regarded as a domesticated variety of the polecat, Putorius fœtidus.

fer-ret², v. I. tr. To hunt with ferrets; hence, to hunt after or worry, as a ferret does his prey; also, to drive out by or as by means of a ferret (as, "Measures were . . . taken . . . to ferret this vermin brood [buccaneers] out of the colonies": Irving's "Tales of a Traveler," iv. 2); also, to search out or bring to light (commonly with out: as, to ferret out the facts of a case).

II. intr. To hunt with ferrets; hence, to search about.—fer-ret-er, n.—fer-ret-y, a. Ferret-like.

ferri-. Form of L. ferrum, iron, used in combination: in chem., implying esp. combination with iron in the ferric form, as in ferricyanic, ferricyanide. Cf. ferro-.

fer-ri-age (fer'i-āj), n. The act or business of conveying persons and things over a stream or other water by a ferry-boat or the like; also, provision for ferrying; also, the price charged for ferrying.

fer-ric (fer'ik), a. [L. ferrum, iron.] Of or containing iron. See ferrous.—ferric acid, a hypothetical acid (H_2FeO_4) containing iron, known only through its salts.

fer-rif-er-ous (fe-rif'ē-rus), a. [See ferri- and -ferous.] Producing or yielding iron.

Fer-ris (fer'is) wheel. [From G. W. G. Ferris, the inventor.] An amusement device consisting of a large upright wheel rotating about a fixed axis, and having passenger-cars suspended at intervals around its rim.

fer-rite (fer'it), n. [L. ferrum, iron.] Any of certain indeterminate mineral substances (probably iron compounds) frequently observed in the microscopic examination of certain igneous rocks; also, a compound formed when ferric oxide is combined with a more basic metallic oxide; also, the pure iron constituent of steel, etc., as distinguished from the iron carbides, etc.

ferro-. Form of L. ferrum, iron, used in combination, as in ferro-aluminium, ferrochromium, ferromanganese, ferromolybdenum, ferrosilicon, ferrotitanium, ferrotungsten, ferrovanadium (these being combinations of iron with aluminium, chromium, manganese, etc., respectively: all used in steel-making): in chem., sometimes implying esp. combination with iron in the ferrous form, as in ferrocyanic, ferrocyanide. Cf. ferri-.—fer-ro-bronze (fer'ō-bronz), n. Bronze alloyed with a small proportion of iron.—fer-ro-con-crete (-kon'krēt), n. Reinforced concrete.—fer-ro-mag-ne'sian (-mag-nē'shian or -zhian), a. Containing both iron and magnesium: applied to minerals and rocks.—fer'ro-mag-net'ic (-mag-net'ik), a. Loosely, pertaining to ordinary magnetism (opposed to diamagnetic); specif., noting or pertaining to a class of substances (as iron, cobalt, etc.) which are magnetic in the usual way and in a high degree, and hence tend to take a position with the longer axis parallel to the lines of force (distinguished from para- magnetic, and opposed to diamagnetic).—fer'ro-type (-tip), n. [+ -type.] A photograph taken on a sensitized sheet of enameled iron or tin; a tintype; also, the process.

fer-rous (fer'us), a. [L. ferrum, iron.] Containing iron (in larger proportion than a corresponding ferric compound).

fer-ru-gi-nous, fer-ru-gin-e-ous (fe-rō'ji-nus, fer-ō-jin'ē-us), a. [L. ferruginus, ferrugineus, < ferrugo, iron-rust, < ferrum, iron.] Orig., of, pertaining to, or of the nature of iron-rust; now, usually, of the nature of or containing iron; also, of the color of iron-rust; reddish-brown.

fer-rule (fer'öl or -el), n. [F. virole, < ML. virola, < L. viriola, dim. < viria, bracelets.] A metal ring or cap put round the end of a post, cane, etc., for strength or protection.

—fer'rule, v. t.; —ruled, —ruled. To furnish with a ferrule.

fer-rum (fer'um), n. [L.] Iron: in chem., abbreviated Fe (without period).

fer-ry (fer'i), v.; —ried, —rying. [AS. ferian, akin to faran, E. fare.] I. tr. To transport†; esp., to carry or convey over a river, strait, etc., in a boat; also, to work (a boat, etc.) across a stream or other contracted body of water; also, of a vessel, to serve as a ferry-boat over (a stream, etc.).

II. intr. To pass over water in a boat or by ferry.—fer'ry, n.; pl. ferries (-iz). A place where boats convey persons and things across a river, etc.; also, the provision, as a boat service or line, for such conveyance; a ferry-boat; also, the legal right to ferry passengers, etc., and to charge toll for the service.—fer'ry-boat, n. A boat used to convey passengers, vehicles, etc., across a river or the like.—fer'ry-man (-man), n.; pl. -men. One who keeps or plies a ferry.

fer-tile (fēr'til), a. [L. fertilis, < ferre, bear.] Bearing or producing vegetation, crops, etc., abundantly, as land or soil; fruitful; sometimes, bearing offspring freely, or prolific (see Milton's "Paradise Lost," vii. 454); fig., abundantly productive, or yielding abundant returns, results, etc. (as, a fertile mind or imagination; a fertile subject for investigation); producing abundance (of: as, "A reforming age is always fertile of impostors," Macaulay's "Essays," Moore's Byron); abundant or rich of production (in: as, a mind fertile in schemes or expedients); also, conducive to fruitfulness or productiveness (as, fertile showers); also, produced in abundance; in bot., capable of producing fruit, as a flower; capable of causing fertilization, as an anther with fully developed pollen; having spore-bearing organs, as a frond; in biol., fertilized, as an egg or ovum; fecundated.—fer'tile-ly, adv.—fer'tile-ness, fer-til'i-ty (-til'i-ti), n.—fer'ti-liz-a-ble (-ti-li-zā-bl), a. Capable of being fertilized.—fer'ti-li-zā'tion (-li-zā'shon), n. The act or process of fertilizing, or the state of being fertilized; the enrichment of soil for the production of crops, etc.; in biol., the rendering of an egg, ovum, or female cell capable of development by union with the male element; fecundation or impregnation of animals or plants; specif., in bot., the process by which the pollen reaches and acts upon the ovules and assures the production of fruit; also, the analogous process in cryptogams.—fer'ti-lize (-liz), v. t.; —lized, —lizing. To make fertile; enrich (soil, etc.) for the production of crops, etc.; fig., to make productive (as, to fertilize the mind); in biol., to render (an egg, ovum, or female cell) capable of development by union with the male element; fecundate or impregnate (an animal or plant); specif., in bot., to render fruitful by means of pollen.—fer'ti-liz-er (-li-zēr), n. One who or that which fertilizes; any material used to fertilize the soil; a manure, esp. a commercial manure.

fer-ule¹ (fer'öl), n. [L. ferula, the giant fennel, a rod, a cane.] A rod, cane, or flat piece of wood, used for the punishment of children, as in schools, by striking them, esp. on the hand.—fer'ule¹, v. t.; —ruled, —ruled. To punish with a ferule.

fer-ule² (fer'öl or -el), n. See ferrule.

fer-vent (fēr'vent), a. [OF. F. fervent, < L. fervens (ferv-), ppr. of fervere, be boiling hot, boil, glow.] Hot, burning, or glowing (as, "The elements shall melt with fervent heat": 2 Pet. iii. 10); fig., having, showing, or characterized by great warmth and earnestness of feeling (as, a fervent admirer or admiration; a fervent hope or prayer; fervent zeal); ardent; hearty.—fer'ven-cy, fer'vent-ness, n.—fer'vent-ly, adv.

fer-vid (fēr'vid), a. [L. fervidus, < fervere: see fervent.]

Ferret.

fat, fâte, fâr, fall, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pîne; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ûnite; (obscured) errânt, operâ, ârdent, actôr, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; y, you;

Hot, fiery, or burning (as, "The mounted sun Shot down direct his fervid rays": Milton's "Paradise Lost," v. 301; fig., heated or vehement in spirit, enthusiasm, etc. (as, a fervid orator or oration; fervid protestations); impassioned. —fer-vid'i-ty, fer'vid-ness, n. —fer'vid-ly, adv.

fer-vor (fēr'vŏr), n. [OF. fervor (F. fervour), < L. fervor, < fervere: see fervent.] Intense heat; fig., great warmth and earnestness of feeling; ardor; fervency.

fer-vour, n. British preferred form of fervor.

Fes-cen-nine (fēs'ē-nin or -nin), a. Pertaining to or associated with the ancient town of Fescennia, in Italy, as a kind of rude, jeering verses extemporized on festive occasions, and popular at Rome and elsewhere, which are said to have been introduced from Fescennia; hence, scurrilous; licentious; obscene.

fes-cue (fēs'kū), n. [OF. festu (F. fétu), < L. festuca, stalk, straw.] A straw, slender twig, or the like, used to point out the letters in teaching children to read; also, any grass of the genus Festuca, some species of which are cultivated as pasture grasses.

fesse, fess (fēs), n. [OF. fesse, faisse (F. fasce), < L. fascia, band.] In her., a wide horizontal band across the middle of an escutcheon. —fesse=point, n. In her., the central point of an escutcheon. —fesse-wise, adv. In her., in the manner of a fesse.

fest (fĕst), n. [G.: see feast.] A feast; a festival or festivity: much used in composition, as in sängerfest and in various humorous or slang formations, as talk-fest, gab-fest, fight-fest.

fes-ta (fēs'tā), n. [It.: see feast.] A feast, festival, or festivity; a festival day; a holiday.

fes-tal (fēs'tāl), a. [OF. festal, < L. festum, a festival, feast: see feast.] Pertaining to or befitting a feast, festival, or gala occasion; festive; gay. —fes'tal-ly, adv.

fes-ter (fēs'tēr), n. [OF. festre, < L. fistula: see fistula.] An ulcer; a rankling sore; esp., a small, purulent, superficial sore; also, a festering or rankling. —fes'ter, v. I. intr. To generate purulent matter (as, "Wounds immedicable . . . fester": Milton's "Samson Agonistes," 621); suppurate; also, to cause ulceration, or rankle, as something embedded in the flesh (often fig.); also, to putrefy or rot (as, "Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds": Shakspeare's "Sonnets," xciv.). II. tr. To cause to fester.

fes-ti-nate (fēs'ti-nāt), v. i. or t.; -nated, -nating. [L. festinatus, pp. of festinare, hasten.] To hasten. —fes'ti-nate, a. Hasty. See Shakspeare's "King Lear," iii. 7. 10. —fes'ti-na'tion (-nā'shŏn), n. [L. festinatio (-n-).] Hasten; in pathol., an involuntary hurrying in walking, observed in certain nervous diseases.

fes-ti-val (fēs'ti-val), [OF. festival, < ML. festivus, < L. festivus, E. festive.] I. a. Of, pertaining to, or befitting a feast or holiday; festal. II. n. A festival celebration, occasion, or time; a periodical religious or other feast (as, Christian, Jewish, and Mohammedan festivals; the festival of Christmas; the Roman festival of the Parentalia or the Saturnalia); any course or occasion of festive or pleasurable proceedings, esp. of a public character, whether periodical or not (as, a music festival; a strawberry festival); an entertainment; also, merry-making or revelry (archaic: as, to hold high festival; "The morning trumpets festival proclaim'd Through each high street," Milton's "Samson Agonistes," 1598).

fes-tive (fēs'tiv), a. [L. festivus, < festum, a festival, feast: see feast.] Of, pertaining to, or befitting a feast or festival; characterized by gaiety, pleasurable entertainment, or good cheer; gay or merry; convivial. —fes'tive-ly, adv. —fes'tive-ness, n. —fes-tiv'i-ty (-tiv'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [L. festivitas.] Festive character; festive gaiety or pleasure; also, a festive celebration or occasion; pl., festive proceedings. —fes'ti-vous, a. Festive. [Now rare.]

fes-toon (fēs-tŏn), n. [F. feston, < It. festone, < fešta, feast, festival: see feast.] A string or chain of flowers, foliage, ribbon, etc., suspended in a curve between two points; also, a decorative representation of this, as in architectural work or on pottery. —fes-toon', v. t. To adorn with or as with festoons; also, to form into festoons; hang in or like festoons (as, to festoon draperies); also, to connect by festoons (as, "Growths of jasmine turn'd Their humid arms festooning tree to tree": Tennyson's "Dream of Fair Women," 70). —fes-toon'er-y, n. Festoons collectively; a decoration of festoons.

fet (fĕt), v. t. [AS. fetian; connections uncertain: cf. fetch.] To fetch. [Now prov. Eng.]

fe-tal (fĕ'tāl), a. Of, pertaining to, or having the character of a fetus.

fe-ta-tion (fĕ-tā'shŏn), n. [L. fetare, bring forth, breed.] The formation or development of a fetus; pregnancy.

fetch¹ (fĕch), n. [Origin obscure.] The apparition of a living person; a wraith.

fetch² (fĕch), v. [AS. feccan, prob. var. of fetian, E. fet.] I. tr. To bring, or, usually, to go and bring, to the speaker or to or from a particular place (as, fetch me my hat; to fetch a child home from school); hence, to cause to come, or succeed in bringing (as, the call *fetch*ed him at once); draw forth (tears, blood, etc.); bring (a price, etc.); bring to terms, or to agreement or acquiescence (colloq.: as, a little flattery will fetch him); win the fancy of, take, or captivate (colloq.); also, to draw or derive, as from a source (now rare); also, to take (a breath); bring forth or utter (a sigh, groan, etc.); deal or deliver (a stroke, blow, etc.); perform or execute (a movement, step, leap, etc.); make (a circuit, etc.); take (a walk, etc.: archaic); also, to reach, or arrive at (chiefly naut. or prov.). II. intr. To go and bring things (as, to fetch and carry for one, like a dog or a drudge); also, to move, go, or take a course (chiefly naut.: as, to fetch about; to fetch to windward); also, to bring (up) in a specified position or place (colloq. or naut.). —fetch², n. The act or an act of fetching; a bringing in as from a distance; a stroke, performance, or effort (as, a fetch of the imagination); a trick, artifice, or dodge (as, "This excuse . . . though true in part, was principally a fetch": Cooper's "Deerslayer," xiv.); also, the distance of fetching or reaching; the reach or stretch of a thing (specif. with reference to the traveling of waves of the sea). —fetch'er, n. —fetch'ing, p. a. Taking; charming; captivating. [Colloq.] —fetch'ing-ly, adv.

fête (fât, F. fât), n. [F.: see feast.] A feast or festival; a festival day; a holiday; a festive celebration or entertainment. —fête champêtre (fât shâh-pâtr). [F.] An outdoor festival; a garden-party. —fête (fât), v. t.; fêled, fêting. [F. fêler.] To entertain at or honor with a fête; commemorate by a fête. —fête=day, n. A festival day; a name-day; a birthday.

fet-e-ri-ta (fĕt-ĕ-rĕ'tā), n. [Prob. native African.] A grain-sorghum (see sorghum), a variety of Andropogon sorghum with slender stems, introduced into the U. S. from northern Africa in 1906, and cultivated for grain and forage. Also called Sudan durra.

fe-tial (fĕ'shāl), [L. fetialis.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the fœtiales; concerned with declarations of war and treaties of peace (as, a fe-tial messenger; fe-tial law); hence, heraldic. II. n. One of the fœtiales.

fe-ti-a-les (fĕ-shi-ā'lĕz), n. pl. [L.] A college of priests in ancient Rome who acted as heralds and representatives of the people in disputes with foreign nations and in the declaration of war and the ratification of peace.

fe'tich, etc. See fetish, etc.

fe-ti-cide (fĕ'ti-sĭd), n. [See fetus and -cide.] The destruction of the life of a fetus. —fe'ti-ci-dal (-sĭ-dāl), a.

fet-id (fĕ'tid or fĕ'tid), a. [L. fetidus, fatidus, < fetere, less correctly fatere, stink.] Having an offensive odor; stinking. —fe-tid-i-ty (fĕ-tid'i-ti), n. —fet'id-ness, n. —fet'id-ly, adv.

fe-tish (fĕ'tish or fĕ'tish), n. [F. fétiche, < Pg. feitico, charm, fetish, orig. adj., artificial, < L. facticius, E. factitious.] A material, commonly inanimate object regarded with awe as having mysterious powers residing in it or as being the embodiment or habitation of a potent deity or spirit (first used with reference to western Africa); hence, any object of blind reverence (as, to make a fetish of conventional respectability). —fe'tish-ism, n. Belief in or worship of fetishes.—fe'tish-ist, n. A worshiper of fetishes.—fe'tish-is'tic, a.—fe'tish-snake, n. An African snake, Hortalia natalensis (or Python sebæ).

Fetishes of Dahomey, Africa.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ", secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

fet-lock (fē'tlok), n. [ME. fetelak, fillok, = G. dial. fissloch.]

A part of a horse's leg situated behind the joint between the cannon-bone and the great pastern-bone, and bearing a tuft of hair; the tuft of hair itself; the joint at this point ('fetlock-joint').

Fetish-snake.

fe-tor (fē'tor), n. [L. fetor, fātor, < fetere: see fetid.] Any strong offensive smell; a stench.

fet-ter (fē'tēr), n. [AS. fefer = OHG. fezzera = Icel. fjōturr, fetter; akin to E. foot.] A chain or shackle by which a person or an animal is confined by the foot; hence, any shackle; fig., anything that confines or restrains; a restraint: usually in pl.—fet'ter, v. t. To put fetters upon; shackle; fig., to confine or restrain.—fet'ter-bone, n. The great pastern-bone of a horse.—fet'ter-bush, n. An Ericaceous evergreen shrub, Pieris nitida, of the southern U. S., with fragrant white flowers.—fet'ter-er, n.—fet'ter-less, a. Without fetters; unfettered.—fet'ter-lock, n. A shackle for a horse's leg or foot; also, a fetlock.

fet-tle (fē'tl), v.—lled, -tling. [ME. fettlen, put in order, arrange; perhaps orig. 'gird up', < AS. fetel, belt.] I. tr. To make ready, put in order, or put to rights (now prov. Eng. and Sc.); specif., to line (the hearth of a puddling-furnace or the like); also, to beat (prov. Eng. and Sc.). II. intr. To prepare one's self; set to work; busy one's self. [Prov. Eng. and Sc.]—fet'tle, n. State or condition (as, to be in fine fettle; 'getting a bit of the country into good fettle,' George Eliot's "Middlemarch," xl.); trim; also, the fettleing for a furnace.—fet'tling, n. The material with which the hearth of a puddling-furnace or the like is lined, as a substance rich in oxides of iron.

fe-tus (fē'tus), n. [L. fetus, less correctly fætus, a bringing forth, offspring, young, < fe-, bring forth, whence also fetus, breeding, having brought forth (see effete), fecundus, prolific, femina, woman, female; ult. akin to E. be.] The young of an animal in the womb or in the egg, esp. in its later stages. Cf. embryo.

feu (fū), n. [OF. feiu: see fee.²] In Sc. law, a fee, or estate in land held of a feudal lord; a tenure of land subject to feudal obligations; also, a feudal tenure of land in which the holder, in place of military service, makes a return of grain or money; a grant of land under this tenure; in modern use, a perpetual lease for a fixed rent; also, a piece of land held in one of these ways.—feu, v. t. In Sc. law, to grant (land) upon feu.—feu'ar (-ār), n. In Sc. law, one who holds land upon feu.

feud¹ (fūd), n. [ME. fede, < OF. fede, faide, feud; feud; from Teut. (cf. G. fehde), and akin to E. foe.] A state of bitter and continuous mutual hostility; esp., such a state existing between two families, clans, or the like, and marked by frequent or occasional sanguinary conflicts; sometimes, a quarrel or contention.—feu-dal¹ (fū'dal), a.

feud² (fūd), n. [ML. feudum, feodum: see fee.²] An estate in land granted by a lord to a vassal on condition of services, in default of which the land was to revert to the lord; a fee or fief; a tenure of land under, and by dependence on, a superior; also, a territory held in fee.—feu-dal² (fū'dal), a. Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a feud or fee (as, a feudal estate); also, of or pertaining to the holding of land in feud or fee (as, the feudal system, a system of political organization in Europe during the middle ages, based on the holding of lands in feud or fee, and on the resulting relations between lord and vassal); also, of or pertaining to the feudal system (as, feudal law; a feudal lord).—feudal ages. See ages in history, under age, n.—feu'dal-ism, n. The feudal system, or its principles and practices.—feu'dal-ist, n. A supporter of the feudal system; also, one versed in feudal law.—feu-dal-is'tic, a.—feu-dal-i-ty (-dal'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). The state or quality of being feudal; feudal principles; a feudal system; also, a feud or fee.—feu'dal-ize (-iz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. To make feudal; bring under or conform to the feudal system.—feu'dal-iza'tion (-i-zā'shən), n.—feu'dal-ly, adv.—feu'da-ry (-dā-ri). I. a. Feudatory. II. n.; pl. -ries (-riz). A feudatory, or feudal vassal.—feu'da-to-ry (-tō-ri). I. a. Holding by, or held under, feudal tenure. II. n.; pl. -ries (-riz). One who holds his lands by feudal tenure; a feudal vassal; also, a feud or fee.—feud'ist, n. A writer or authority on feuds or fees; one versed in feudal law.*

Feuil-lant (fē-yāñ), n. [F.] A member of a congregation of reformed Cistercian monks, founded in 1577 by Jean de La Barrière, at Les Feuillans, near Toulouse, France, and dissolved in 1791; also, a member of a club of constitutional royalists in the French Revolution, which held its meetings in the old convent of the Feuillants in Paris.

feuille-ton (fē-y'-tōñ), n. [F., < feuille, dim. of feuille, leaf: see foil.¹] A part of a French newspaper (usually the bottom of one or more pages, marked off by a rule) devoted to light literature, criticism, etc.; also, an article or work printed in the feuilleton.—feuille-to-niste (-tō-nēst), n. [F.] A writer for a newspaper feuilleton.—feuille-ton-is'tic (-tōñ-is'tik), a.

fe-ver (fē'vēr), n. [AS. fefer, < L. febris.] A morbid condition of the animal body characterized by undue rise of temperature, quickening of the pulse, and disturbance of various bodily functions; also, any of a group of diseases in which high temperature is a prominent symptom (as, scarlet fever: see under scarlet, a.); fig., a state of intense nervous excitement.—fe'vor, v. i. tr. To affect with or as with fever: as, "The scorching blast . . . fevers the blood" (Kinglake's "Eothen," xviii.). II. intr. To become feverish; burn as with fever.

fe-ver-few (fē'vēr-fū), n. [AS. feferfuge, < LL. febrifugia, kind of plant, < L. febris, fever, + fugare, put to flight.] A perennial asteraceous plant, Chrysanthemum parthenium, bearing small white flowers: formerly used as a febrifuge.

fe-ver-heat (fē'vēr-hēt), n. The heat of fever; a degree of bodily heat exceeding 98.6° F.; fig., a feverish degree of excitement.

fe-ver-ish (fē'vēr-ish), a. Having fever, esp. a slight degree of fever; fig., excited, fitful, or restless, as if from fever; also, pertaining to, of the nature of, or resembling fever; also, infested with fever, as a region; having a tendency to produce fever, as food.—fe'ver-ish-ly, adv.—fe'ver-ish-ness, n.

fe-ver-ous (fē'vēr-us), a. Feverish.—fe'ver-ous-ly, adv.

fe-ver-root (fē'vēr-rōt), n. A North American caprifoliaceous herb, Triosteum perfoliatum, having a purgative and emetic root: said to have been used by the Indians as a remedy for fever.

fe-ver-sore (fē'vēr-sōr), n. A sore connected with necrosis of a bone; also, a cold-sore.

fe-ver-tree (fē'vēr-trē), n. The blue-gum (tree), which is supposed to prevent malaria; also, a small rubiaceous tree, Pinckneya pubens, of the southeastern U. S., with a bark used as a tonic and febrifuge.

few (fū). [AS. fēawe, pl., = OHG. fōhe = Goth. fawai; akin to L. paucus, Gr. παῦρος, little, pl. few.] I. a. Being of some small number; not many: as, a book with few merits; "If few their wants, their pleasures are but few" (Goldsmith's "Traveller," 212). II. n. A small number; few individuals, as of a body or class specified; few persons; a minority: construed as pl.: as, "Many be called, but few chosen" (Mat. xx. 16); a few, or a few (of the) members, dissent.—the few, a small number of persons or things separated or discriminated from a larger number; the minority: as, a measure which benefits the few at the expense of the many.—few'ness, n. The state or fact of being few; paucity.

fey (fā), a. [AS. fæge = D. veeg = Icel. feigr.] Fated to die; doomed to death; on the verge of a sudden death; also, dying. [Now chiefly Sc.]

fez (fēz), n.; pl. fezzes (fēz'ez). [F.; said to be named from the city of Fez in Morocco.] A felt cap, usually of a red color, having the shape of a truncated cone, and ornamented

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

with a long black tassel: the national head-dress of the Turks.

fiacre (fyákr), n. [F.] A small four-wheeled carriage for hire; a hackney-coach.

fi-an-cé (fī-ān'sā, F. fyān-sā), n. [F., pp. of fiancer, betroth.] An affianced or betrothed person (male).—fi-an-cée (fī-ān'sā, F. fyān-sā), n. [F.] Fem. of fiancé.

fi-ar (fē'ār), n. [Cf. feuar.] In Sc. law, the person in whom a fee simple is vested.

fi-as-co (fī-as'kō), n.; pl. -cos or -coes (-kōz). [It., < ML. flascus or flasco; see flask.] A flask or bottle; also, a failure or breakdown in a dramatic or musical performance; an ignominious failure of any kind.

fi-at (fī'at), n. [L., 'let it be done, or made.'] Orig., the word fiat (see etym.), or a formula containing it, by which a person in authority gave his sanction; hence, an authoritative sanction; also, an authoritative decree, command, or order (as, "Their fate . . . had intimidated its fiat that their fortunes were inseparable": Scott's "Castle Dangerous," xx.).—fiat money, paper currency made legal tender by a fiat of the government, but not based on or convertible into coin.

fib¹ (fīb), v. t.; fibbed, fibbing. [Origin obscure.] To strike or beat; deliver a rapid succession of blows upon. [Slang.]

fib² (fīb), n. [Perhaps connected with fable.] A trivial or venial falsehood: as, "Ask me no questions, and I'll tell you no *fib*s" (Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer" iii.). [Colloq.]—fib², v. i.; fibbed, fibbing. To tell a fib. [Colloq.]—fib²/ber, n.

fi-ber, fi-bre (fī'bēr), n. [F. fibre, < L. fibra, fiber, filament.] A slender filament; a fine thread-like piece or element of a substance, as of wool, silk, cotton, jute, or asbestos; one of the thread-like elements composing the tissue of muscles, nerves, etc.; a slender, thread-like root of a plant; also, filaments collectively, or matter composed of filaments; esp., filamentous matter from the bast tissue or other parts of plants, used for industrial purposes; also, fibrous structure; fig., material, stuff, or character (as, moral fiber; men of stronger fiber).—fiber silk. See silk, n.—fi'bered, fi'bred (-bērd), a. Having fibers.—fi'ber-less, fi'bre-less, a. Without fibers or fiber.—fi'bri-form (-bri-fōrm), a. [See -form.] Of the form of a fiber or fibers.

fi-bril (fī'bril), n. [NL. fibrilla, dim. of L. fibra, E. fiber.] A small or fine fiber. Also (NL.) fi-bril'la (-bril'ā); pl. fibrillæ (-ē).—fi'bril-lar, fi'bril-la-ry (-bri-lār, -lā-rī), a. Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of fibrils.—fi'bril-late, fi'bril-lat-ed (-lāt, -lā-ted), a. Having fibrils; finely fibrous.—fi-bril-la'tion (-lā'shōn), n. Fibrillate condition; also, a quivering movement of the fibrils of a muscle or nerve.—fi-bril-li'fer-ous (-lī'fē-rus), a. [See -ferous.] Bearing fibrils.—fi-bril'li-form (-bril'i-fōrm), a. [See -form.] Of the form of a fibril or fibrils.—fi'bril-lose (-bri-lōs), a. Composed of or furnished with fibrils.

fi-brin (fī'brin), n. [L. fibra, E. fiber.] A white, tough, strongly elastic, fibrous proteid, formed esp. in the coagulation of blood; also, a similar substance found in some plants.—fi-bri-na'tion (-bri-nā'shōn), n. The acquisition of an excess of fibrin in the blood, as in pleurisy.—fi-brin'o-gen (-ō-jen), n. [See -gen.] A proteid found in the blood, lymph, etc., and yielding fibrin in the coagulation of blood.—fi'bri-no-gen'ic (-nō-jen'ik), fi-bri-nog'e-nous (-noj'e-nus), a. Producing fibrin.—fi'bri-nous, a. Containing, composed of, or of the nature of fibrin.

fi-broid (fī'broid), I. a. Resembling fiber or fibrous tissue; composed of fibers, as a tumor. II. n. A fibroid tumor.

fi-bro-ma (fī-brō'mā), n.; pl. -mas or -mata (-mā-tā). [NL., < L. fibra, fiber; see -oma.] In pathol., a tumor consisting essentially of fibrous tissue.—fi-brom'a-tous (-brom'ā-tus), a.

fi-brous (fī'brus), a. [NL. fibrosus, < L. fibra, E. fiber.] Containing, consisting of, or resembling fibers.—fi'brous-ly, adv.—fi'brous-ness, n.

fib-ster (fīb'stēr), n. One who tells fibs or petty falsehoods: as, "You silly little fibster!" (Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," xlviii.). [Colloq.]

fib-u-la (fīb'ū-lā), n.; pl. -læ (-lē). [L., clasp, buckle, pin, < figere, fix, fasten.] A clasp or buckle; in anat., in man, the outer and thinner of the two bones of the lower leg, extending from the knee to the ankle; a corresponding bone (often rudimentary, or ankylous with the tibia) of the leg or hind limb of other animals.—fib'u-lar (-lār), a.

-fic. [L. -ficus, < facere, do, make.] An adjective suffix meaning 'making,' 'producing,' 'causing,' as in colorific, frigorific, horrific, pacific, prolific, soporific.

-fication. [L. -ficatio(n)-, < -ficare: see -fy.] A suffix of nouns of action or state corresponding to verbs ending in -fy, as in deification, indemnification, pacification.

fi-ce, fi-st¹ (fis, fist), n. [From obs. fist, break wind.] A small dog; a cur. [U. S.]

fi-celle (fī-sel', F. fē-sel), n. [F., string, < L. filum, thread.] String-colored; of a light grayish-brown.

fi-chu (fish'ō, F. fē-shū), n. [F.; origin uncertain.] A kind of kerchief of muslin, lace, or the like, generally triangular in shape, worn about the neck by women, with the ends drawn together or crossed on the breast.

fi-ck-le (fik'l), a. [AS. ficol, deceitful, treacherous, akin to gefic, deceit.] Deceitful† or treacherous†; hence, not to be relied on to continue without change; likely to change from caprice, irresolution, or instability (as, the fickle world; fickle fortune); changeable; inconstant; of weather, the sea, etc., changeful or uncertain.—fi-ck'le-ness, n.

fi-co (fē'kō), n. [It., < L. ficus, fig.] A fig; hence, the value of a fig, or the merest trifle (as, "A fico for the phrase!" Shakspeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," i. 3. 33); also, a gesture of contempt made by placing the thumb between two of the fingers or in the mouth. [Obs. or archaic.]

fi-cile (fik'il), a. [L. fictilis, < figere, form, mold: see feign.] Capable of being molded; plastic; also, molded into form by art; made of earth, clay, etc., by a potter; also, having to do with pottery.

fi-ction (fik'shōn), n. [OF. f. fiction, < L. fictio(n)-, < figere, form, conceive, devise, feign: see feign.] The act of forming or fashioning†; something fashioned†; also, a pretending†; deceit; also, the act of feigning, inventing, or imagining; something feigned, invented, or imagined; a made-up story; a false narration or statement; also, the branch of literature comprising works of imaginative narration, esp. in prose form; works of this class, as novels or tales; occasionally, a single such work; also, the intentional assuming as fact of what is not such, for the sake of convenience, decorum, or the like; something assumed in this way, esp. a legal assumption serving as a device for extending the application of the law.—fi-ct'ion-al, a. Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of fiction.—fi-ct'ion-al-ly, adv.—fi-ct'ion-ist, n. A maker or writer of fiction.

fi-cti-tious (fik-tish'us), a. [L. ficticius, < figere: see fiction and feign.] Made by art†, or artificial†; arbitrarily devised (as, "The notion then of a moral scheme of government is not fictitious but natural": J. Butler's "Analogy of Religion," i. 3); also, counterfeit or sham (as, "Two treaties were drawn up, one on white paper, the other on red, the former real, the latter fictitious": Macaulay's "Essays," Lord Clive); feigned or assumed, as a name or a character; also, feigned to exist, imaginary, or unreal (as, a fictitious claim); also, of, pertaining to, or of the nature of fiction (as, "the fictitious world," Macaulay's "Essays," Leigh Hunt; "the most popular writer of fictitious narrative then living," Macaulay's "Essays," Madame D'Arbly); also, assumed as real or genuine by a legal or conventional fiction (as, "the growing popularity of Adoption, as a method of obtaining a fictitious son": Maine's "Early Law and Custom," iv.).—fi-ct'i-tious-ly, adv.—fi-ct'i-tious-ness, n.

fi-ctive (fik'tiv), a. [F. fictif, < L. figere: see fiction and feign.] Concerned with or pertaining to the creation of fiction; also, fictitious; sham; assumed; imaginary.—fi-ctive-ly, adv.

fid (fid), n. [Origin obscure.] A bar or pin to support or steady something; a square bar or support to hold in place a topmast, etc.; also, a conical wooden pin used to open strands of rope in splicing.

(variable) q as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; '', secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

-fid. [L. fidus, from fid-, stem of findere, cleave.] An adjective termination meaning 'cleft,' 'divided,' 'lobed,' as in bifid, trifid, multifid, pinnatifid.

fid-dle (fid'l), n. [ME. (and prob. AS.) fiðele = D. vedel = G. fiedel = Icel. fidhla: cf. ML. vitula, vidula, E. viol.] A stringed musical instrument of the viol class, esp. a violin (now only in familiar or contemptuous use); also, a fiddler; naut., a device to prevent things from rolling off the table in bad weather.—fid'dle, v.; -dled, -dling. I. intr. To play on the fiddle (now only in familiar or contemptuous use); hence, to make aimless movements, as with the hands; also, to trifle. II. tr. To play on (a fiddle), or play (a tune) on a fiddle (now familiar or contemptuous); also, to cheat (slang).—fid'dle=block, n. Naut., a long block having a large sheave above a smaller one.—fid'dle=de-dee' (-dē-dē'), interj. [Cf. fiddle, v., fiddle=fiddle, fiddlestick.] An exclamation used in dismissing something as silly or trifling.—fid'dle=fad'dle (-fad'l). [Varied redupl. of fiddle.] I. n. Trifling talk or action; nonsense; something trivial; also, a trifle. [Colloq.] II. a. Trifling. [Colloq.]—fid'dle=fad'dle, v. i.; -dled, -dling. To busy one's self with trifles; trifle; fuss. [Colloq.]—fid'dle=

Fiddle-block.

Fiddle-head.

fid'dle=head, n. An ornament at the bow of a ship, containing a scroll somewhat like that at the head of a violin; also, a head as empty as a fiddle.—fid'dle=head'ed, a. Having a fiddle-head; also, empty-headed.—fid'dler, n. One who fiddles; a violinist; in zool., the common European sandpiper, Tringoides hypoleucos (so called from its habit of oscillating the body); also, the fiddler-crab.—fid'dler=crab, n. Any of the small burrowing crabs of the genus Gelasimus, common on the Atlantic coast of the U. S.—fid'dle=stick, n. The bow with which a fiddle is played; also, a mere nothing (used, esp. in pl., as an exclamation equivalent to 'nonsense!' or 'fiddle-de-dee!').—fid'dle=string, n. One of the strings on a fiddle, which produce the sound.—fid'dle=wood, n. The heavy, hard, durable wood of any of various West Indian and other trees; also, any of the trees.

Fiddler-crab (Gelasimus pugilator).

fi-del-i-ty (fi-dē'l-i-ti or fi-), n. [OF. fideliē (F. fidélité), < L. fideliās, < fidelis, faithful, < fides, faith, < fidere, trust.] The quality of being faithful; loyalty, as to a person or party; strict adherence to promises, vows, etc.; conjugal faithfulness; strictness or thoroughness in the performance of duty; trustworthiness, as of a witness; adherence to fact or to an original, as of a narrative or a picture.

fidge (fij), v. i. or t.; fidged, fidging. [Origin uncertain.] To fidget; also, to twitch (as, "Look, Jim, how my fingers fidget . . . I can't keep 'em still": Stevenson's "Treasure Island," iii.). [Now prov.]

fidg-et (fij'et), v. [From fidge.] I. intr. To move about restlessly or impatiently; be uneasy. II. tr. To cause to fidget; make uneasy.—fidg'et, n. A condition of restlessness or uneasiness, expressed by irregular bodily movements (often in pl.: as, "But sedentary weavers of long tales Give me the fidgets, and my patience fails," Cowper's "Conversation," 208); also, one who fidgets.—fidg'et-y, a. Inclined to fidget; restless; uneasy.—fidg'et-i-ness, n.

fi-du-cial (fi-dū'shāl), a. [ML. fiducialis, < L. fiducia: see fiduciary.] Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of trust or reliance (as, fiducial dependence upon God); also, pertaining to or of the nature of a trust or trusteeship; fiduciary; in physics, astron., etc., accepted as a fixed basis of reference or comparison (as, fiducial points, in thermometry, the melting-point of ice and the boiling-point of water).—fi-du'cial-ly, adv.

fi-du-ci-a-ry (fi-dū'shi-ā-ri). [L. fiduciarius, < fiducia, trust, confidence, thing held in trust, < fidere, trust.] I. a. Of the nature of or proceeding from trust or reliance; depending on public confidence for value or currency, as fiat money; also, holding something in trust (as, a fiduciary possessor); held or given in trust (as, fiduciary estates); pertaining to or of the nature of a trust or trusteeship (as, in a fiduciary capacity). II. n. One who holds something in trust; a trustee.—fi-du'ci-a-ri-ly, adv.

fie (fi), interj. [ME. fy: cf. Icel. fý, OF. F. fi, L. fi, also E. fough, foh, and phew.] An exclamation expressing disgust, disapprobation, etc.: as, "Acres. I—I—I don't feel quite so bold, somehow, as I did. Sir Luc. Oh fie!—consider your honour" (Sheridan's "Rivals," v. 3).

fief (fēf), n. [F. fief: see *fee*².] A fee or feud, or estate in land held of a feudal lord; a tenure of land subject to feudal obligations; also, a territory held in fee.

field (fēld), n. [AS. fēld = D. veld = G. fēld.] Open country; also, a piece of open or cleared ground, esp. one suitable for pasture or tillage; also, a piece of ground devoted to sports or contests; a particular portion of it (as, left-field or the infield, in baseball); esp., the outfield in baseball; also, fielders collectively; a fielder; also, those taking part in an outdoor sport or contest, as a hunt; also, all the contestants, as in a race, not favored in the betting (as, to back a horse against the field); also, any region characterized by a particular feature or product (as, a gold-field); also, a battle-ground (as, the field of Waterloo), or, sometimes, a battle (as, "What though the field be lost? All is not lost": Milton's "Paradise Lost," i. 105); more widely, the scene of military or other operations; also, an extent or expanse of anything, as of sea or ice; the surface of a canvas, shield, etc., on which something is portrayed; also, an area, sphere, or range of operation, activity, interest, opportunity, etc.; in physics, a portion of space controlled or affected by a force (as, a magnetic field, the space through which the influence of a magnet is exerted); in elec., that part of a dynamo, motor, or the like, by which the exciting magnetism is produced.—field, v. I. tr. In baseball, cricket, etc., to stop, or catch, and throw (the ball) as a fielder. II. intr. To take to the field; in baseball, cricket, etc., to act as a fielder; field the ball.—field'=bat'ter-y, n. A battery of field-guns.—field'=book, n. A book used by surveyors, naturalists, etc., in the field, for setting down measurements, observations, etc., or preserving collected specimens.—field'=col'ors, n. pl. Milit., small flags for indicating the positions of squadrons, etc., and the location of headquarters.—field'=cor'net, n. A minor official having jurisdiction within a district in South Africa, charged with inquiring into and reporting crime, and with other duties.—field'=day, n. A day when troops are drawn up for exercise in field evolutions; a day devoted to outdoor sport or athletic contests, or to scientific investigations, etc. (as of a society), in the field; any day of unusual activity or display.—field'er, n. A player who fields the ball in baseball, cricket, etc.; any of the players of the infield or the outfield in baseball, esp. an outfielder.

field-fare (fēld'fār), n. [ME. feldefare, < AS. feldeware, appar. repr. feld, field, + faran, E. fare.] A European thrush, Turdus pilaris, of reddish-brown color, with a blackish tail and ashy head.

field=glass (fēld'glās), n. A compact binocular telescope for use in the field; also, a small achromatic telescope.

field=gun (fēld'gun), n. A light cannon mounted on a carriage, for service in the field.

field-mag-net (fēld'mag'net), n. A magnet for producing a magnetic field; esp., a magnet (fixed or rotary) on a dynamo or electric motor, by which the exciting magnetism is produced, as distinguished from the armature.

Fieldfare.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

field-mar-shal (fēld'mār'shāl), n. An officer of the highest military rank in the British and other armies.

field-mouse (fēld'mous), n. Any of various mice inhabiting fields and meadows.

field-of-fi-cer (fēld'of'i-sēr), n. A military officer above the rank of captain and below that of brigadier-general, as a colonel.

field-pea (fēld'pē), n. A plant, Pisum arvense, related to the cultivated pea, P. sativum: a valuable forage-plant.

field-piece (fēld'pēs), n. A field-gun.

field-span-iel (fēld'span'yel), n. See spaniel.

field-spar-row (fēld'spar'ō), n. A small fringilline bird, Spizella pusilla (or agrestis), of the U. S., frequenting fields and thickets.

field-tri-al (fēld'tri'al), n. A trial of animals, as hunting-dogs, in actual performance in the field.

field-ward, field-wards (fēld'wārd, -wārdz), adv. Toward the fields: as, "Glossy bees at noon do fieldward pass" (Keats's "Isabella," xxxix.).

field-work (fēld'wērk), n. Work done in the field, as by a surveyor, geologist, etc.; milit., a temporary fortification thrown up in the field.

fiend (fēnd), n. [AS. fēond = D. vijand = G. feind = Icel. fjandi = Goth. fjands, all orig. ppr. of a verb (AS. fēon, fēogan) meaning 'hate.'] An enemy†; specif., the enemy of mankind; Satan; the devil; hence, any evil spirit; a demon; also, a diabolically wicked person, esp. in the way of cruelty or malignity; also (colloq.), a person or thing that causes mischief or annoyance (as, the interviewer fiend); one who is hopelessly given up to some pernicious habit, as to the excessive use of a drug (as, an opium fiend); a student devoted to or unusually proficient in some study. — fiend'ish, a. Like or characteristic of a fiend; diabolically cruel or malignant. — fiend'ish-ly, adv. — fiend'ish-ness, n.

fierce (fērs), a.; compar. fiercer, superl. fiercest. [OF. fiers, fier, fierce (F. fier, proud), < L. ferus, wild, savage, fierce, cruel.] Vehement, without fear or restraint, in temper or action, like a wild beast (as, fierce animals; fierce savages; "Moloch . . . the strongest and the fiercest spirit that fought in heaven, now fiercer by despair," Milton's "Paradise Lost," ii. 44); boldly passionate or violent in hostile ardor, as the disposition or mood; characterized by or showing unrestrained vehemence or hostile ardor (as, a fierce conflict; fierce anger; fierce words or looks); also, violent in force, effects, intensity, etc. (as, fierce storms, winds, heat, or cold; "In that fierce light which beats upon a throne, And blackens every blot," Tennyson's "Idylls of the King," Dedication); severe, as grief; passionate, as desires or zeal; furiously eager or strenuous, as efforts or competition; also, high-spirited† or brave†; proud† or haughty†; also (slang), extremely bad, unpleasant, etc.; 'awful'. — fierce'ly, adv. — fierce'ness, n.

fi-e-ri fa-ci-as (fī'ē-rī fā'shi-as), [L., 'cause to be done.'] In law, a writ, issued after the award of a judgment for a sum of money, commanding the sheriff to levy upon the goods, or the goods and lands, of the judgment debtor for the collection of the amount due.

fier-y (fī'rī or fī'ēr-i), a.; compar. fierier, superl. fieriēst. [From fire.] Consisting of, attended with, characterized by, or containing fire (as, a fieri discharge from a volcano; a fieri meteor; fieri sparks; "a burning fieri furnace," Dan. iii. 6); characteristic of, suggestive of, or resembling fire (as, a fieri glow or heat; a fieri red); red as fire, as the face, a blush, etc.; flashing or glowing, as the eye; burning, or intensely hot, as winds, desert sands, etc.; inflamed, as a tumor or sore; causing a burning sensation, as liquors or condiments; also, intensely ardent, impetuous, or passionate, as persons or the spirit, temper, courage, zeal, speech, etc.; high-spirited or mettlesome, as a horse; also, liable to take fire, or inflammable, as gas in a mine; containing inflammable gas, as a mine. — fier'i-ly, adv. — fier'i-ness, n.

Field-sparrow.

fies-ta (fyes'tā), n. [Sp.: see feast.] A feast, festival, or festivity; a festal day; a holiday.

fife (fif), n. [F. fifre, fife, fifer; from Teut.: cf. G. pfeife and E. pipe.] A high-pitched instrument of the flute class, much used in military music: as, fif-teen (fif'tēn'), [AS. fiftigēne.] I. a. Five more than ten. II. n. A number composed of fifteen units, or a symbol, as 15 or xv, representing it. — the Fifteen, the year 1715 as marked by the Jacobite rebellion in Scotland; the rebellion itself. — fif'teenth'. I. a. Next after the fourteenth; also, being one of fifteen equal parts. II. n. The fifteenth member of a series; also, a fifteenth part.

"the ear-piercing fife" (Shakespeare's "Othello," iii. 3. 352). — fife, v. i. or t.; fifed, fifing. To play on a fife. — fif'er, n. — fife'-rail, n. A rail round the lower part of a mast, for securing belaying-pins.

fifth (fifth), a. [AS. fifta.] Next after the fourth; also, being one of five equal parts. — fifth monarchy, the last of the five great kingdoms referred to in the prophecy of Daniel (see Dan. ii.), the four preceding ones being taken to be those of Assyria, Persia, Greece (under Alexander the Great), and Rome. — Fifth Monarchy Men, an English sect of millenarians, of Oliver Cromwell's time, who identified the fifth monarchy with the millennial kingdom of Christ predicted in the Apocalypse (see Rev. xx.), and believed it was their duty to inaugurate that kingdom by force. — fifth wheel, a horizontal ring (or segment of a ring) consisting of two circular bands which slide on each other, placed above the forward axle of a carriage and designed to support the fore part of the body while allowing it to turn freely in a horizontal plane; also, an extra wheel for a four-wheeled vehicle; fig., any extra or superfluous thing or person. — fifth, n. The fifth member of a series; also, a fifth part; in music, a tone on the fifth degree from a given tone (counted as the first); the interval between such tones; the harmonic combination of such tones; in a scale, the dominant. — fifth'ly, adv.

fif-ti-eth (fif'ti-eth), [AS. fiftigotha.] I. a. Next after the forty-ninth; also, being one of fifty equal parts. II. n. The fiftieth member of a series; also, a fiftieth part. fif-ty (fif'ti), [AS. fiftig.] I. a. Five times ten. II. n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). A number composed of fifty units, or a symbol, as 50 or l, representing it. — fif'ty=fif'ty, adv. and a. With equality of shares, as of profits: as, to go fifty-fifty with a person; a fifty-fifty arrangement. [Slang.] fig¹ (fig), n. [OF. fige (F. figue), < L. ficus, fig-tree, fig.] Any tree or shrub of the moraceus genus Ficus; esp., a small tree or bush, F. carica, native in southwestern Asia, bearing an oblong pear-shaped fruit which is eaten fresh or preserved or dried; also, the fruit of such a tree or shrub, esp. (in commerce) that of F. carica; also, the value of a fig; the merest trifle; the least bit; also, a gesture of contempt made by thrusting the thumb between two of the closed fingers or into the mouth; a fico.

fig² (fig), v. t.; figged, figging. [Origin uncertain.] To dress or array (with out); also, to furbish (with up). [Colloq.] — fig², n. Dress or array (as, in full fig); also, condition (as, to be in good fig). [Colloq.] fight (fit), v. i.; fought, fighting. [AS. feohtan = D. vechten = G. fechten, fight.] To engage in battle or in single combat; attempt to defeat, subdue, or destroy an adversary by physical means; hence, to contend in any manner; strive vigorously for or against something.—to fight shy of, to keep carefully aloof from (a person, affair, etc.).—fight, v. t. To contend with in battle or combat; war against; hence, to contend with or against in any manner; also, to carry on (a battle, duel, pugilistic match, etc.); maintain (a cause, quarrel, etc.) by fighting or contending; make (one's way) by fighting or striving; also, to cause or set (a pugilist, or a game-cock, dog, etc.) to fight; also, to manage or maneuver (troops, ships, guns, etc.) in battle.—fight, n. [AS. feoht.] The act of fighting (archaic: as, to fall in fight); a battle or combat; any contest or struggle; also, ability or inclination to fight (as, there was no fight left in him); also, a screen set up on a ship for protection during a battle† (see Shakspeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," ii. 2. 142).—fight'er, n.—fight/ing-cock, n. A game-cock; fig., a pugnacious fellow.—fight/ing-top, n. In a war-ship, a platform on or near the top of a mast, from which rapid-fire guns, etc., are fired.

Two forms of Fifth Wheels.

Common Fig (Ficus carica).

fig-in-sect (fig'in'sekt), n. Any of various insects inhabiting the fig; esp., a small hymenopterous insect, Blastophaga grossorum, serving as an important agent in caprification. See caprification.

fig-leaf (fig'lēf), n. The leaf of a fig-tree, esp. in allusion to the first covering of Adam and Eve (see Gen. iii. 7); fig., something designed to conceal what is shameful or indecorous.

fig-mar-i-gold (fig'mar'i-göld), n. Any of various herbs of the genus Mesembryanthemum, with showy white, yellow, or pink flowers.

fig-ment (fig'ment), n. [L. figmentum, < figere, form, conceive, devise: see feign.] Something molded or fashioned†; also, something feigned, invented, or imagined; esp., a mere product of the mind or imagination; a pure invention.—fig-men-ta-ry (-men-tā-rī), a.

fig-paste (fig'pāst'), n. A confection of figs, a favorite Turkish sweetmeat; loukoum; also, a semitransparent sweetened and flavored paste cut into small blocks and dusted with fine sugar.

fig-shell (fig'shel), n. Any of the shells of the genus Pyrula (or Ficula), of tropical or warm seas: so called from the shape.

fig-u-line (fig'ū-līn or -līn), n. [F., < L. figulina, fem. of figulinus, of a potter, < figulus, potter, < figere, form, mold: see feign.] A piece of pottery (as, "This Potter . . . Whose figulines and rustic wares Scarce find him bread": Longfellow's "Kéramos," 106); also, potters' clay.

fig-u-ra-ble (fig'ū-rā-bl), a. Capable of receiving or retaining a definite figure or shape.

fig-u-ral (fig'ū-rāl), a. Pertaining to figure, or to delineation by figures; in music, figurate.

fig-u-rant (fig'ū-rānt, F. fē-gü-rāñ), n. [F., pp. of figurer, < L. figurare, E. figure, v.] A dancer in the ballet who does not come forward alone but dances with others in groups or figures; also, an accessory character on the stage who has nothing to say; hence, one who appears in any scene without taking a prominent part.—fig-u-rante (fig'ū-rānt', F. fē-gü-rānt), n. [F.] Fem. of figurant.

fig-u-rate (fig'ū-rāt), a. [L. figuratus, pp. of figurare, E. figure, v.] Of a certain determinate figure or shape; in music, characterized by the use of passing-notes or other embellishments; florid.—figurate number, in math., any of the numbers occurring in a series which has been derived from an arithmetical progression whose first term is unity and whose difference is a whole number, as 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, etc., by taking for the consecutive terms of the derived series the first term, the sum of the first two terms, the sum of the first three terms, and so on, of the simple progression, or any of the numbers in any series formed in like manner from such a derived series: so called because points or counters representing the units of such a number can be arranged symmetrically in the form of a figure, as a triangle, characteristic of the series to which it belongs.

fig-u-ra-tion (fig'ū-rā'shən), n. [L. figuratio(-n-), < figurare, E. figure, v.] The act of shaping into a particular figure; the resulting figure or shape; also, the act of representing figuratively; a figurative representation; also, the act of marking or adorning with figures or designs; in music, the employment of passing-notes or other embellishments; also, the figuring of a bass part.

fig-u-ra-tive (fig'ū-rā-tiv), a. [LL. figurativus, < L. figurare, E. figure, v.] Representing by means of a figure or likeness, as in drawing or sculpture; also, representing by a figure or emblem; emblematic; also, of the nature of or involving a figure of speech, esp. a metaphor (as, a figurative expression; to use a word in a figurative sense); metaphorical; not literal; metaphorically so called (as, this remark was a figurative boomerang); abounding in or addicted to figures of speech (as, figurative language; a figurative writer).—

fig'u-ra-tive-ly, adv. By means of a figure or emblem; emblematically; also, by a figure of speech; in a figurative sense; metaphorically; not literally.—fig'u-ra-tive-ness, n.

fig-ure (fig'ūr, Brit. usually fig'ēr), n. [OF. figure, < L. figura, < figere, form, mold: see feign.] Form or shape, as determined by outlines or exterior surfaces (as, round, square, or cubical in figure); also, a line or surface or a combination of lines or surfaces disposed in a particular form or shape (as, geometrical plane figures, such as the circle, square, and polygon, or solid figures, such as the sphere, cube, and polyhedron); also, the form or appearance proper to something (as, the human figure; "doing, in the figure of a lamb, the feats of a lion," Shakspeare's "Much Ado about Nothing," i. i. 15); the bodily form or frame (as, garments fitting closely to the figure; to have a slender or a graceful figure); an individual bodily form, or a person with reference to form or appearance (as, a tall figure stood in the doorway; he was a fine figure of a man; a figure of fun, a person of ludicrous appearance); also, a person as he appears or as presented before the eyes of the world (as, to be an interesting figure; minor political figures of the time); a character or personage, esp. one of distinction (as, to be a figure in society); also, the appearance or impression made by a person, or sometimes a thing, esp. a conspicuous or distinguished appearance (as, to make, or cut, a fine, dashing, or sorry figure; "It is my wish . . . to have my boy make some figure in the world," Sheridan's "Rivals," ii. 1); hence, show or display (archaic); prominence or distinction (archaic: as, persons of some figure); also, something perceived only as having a more or less definite shape, as in fog or darkness; a mere shape; sometimes, a phantasm† or illusion†; also, a likeness, representation, or image of something (as, "Where beams of warm imagination play, The memory's soft figures melt away": Pope's "Essay on Criticism," 59); an artificial representation, pictorial or sculptured, of something, specif. of the human form; a diagram, chart, or plan; an astrological diagram, or horoscope, of the heavens at a given time; an illustration or cut in a book or the like; also, an emblem or type (as, the dove is a figure of peace); also, an arrangement of lines, etc., forming an ornamental device; such a device as the (or a) characteristic feature of a pattern or design (as, fabrics printed or woven with a small figure); a pattern or design; also, a distinct movement or division of a dance; a movement or series of movements in skating; also, a written character other than a letter; specif., a numerical symbol, esp. an Arabic numeral; hence, an amount or value expressed in numbers; in music, a short succession of musical notes, either as melody or as a group of chords, which produces a single, complete, and distinct impression; in rhet., any of various modes of expression (as metaphor, simile, personification, antithesis, etc.) in which words are used out of their literal sense, or out of ordinary locutions, to suggest a picture or image, or for other special effect (also called 'figure of speech'); in logic, any of the forms of the syllogism with respect to the relative position of the middle term.—fig'ure, v.; -ured, -uring. [OF. F. figurer, < L. figurare (pp. figuratus), < figura.] I. tr. To form or shape into a definite or particular figure (now only as in figured, p. a.); also, to represent by a pictorial or sculptured figure, a diagram, or the like; picture or depict; trace (an outline, etc.); fig., to picture in the mind; imagine or conceive; sometimes, to portray by speech or action: also, to represent by an emblem or symbol, or be an emblem or symbol of (as, "You, lord archbishop . . . Whose white investments figure innocence":

Fig-shell (Pyrula ficus).

fat, fate, fär, fäll, äsk, färe; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, elect, agony, intō, unite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; then, then; y, you,

Gray Hairstreak
(Strymon melinus)

Clouded Sulphur
(Eurymus philodice)

The Banded Purple
(Basilarchia arthemis)

Silver-bordered Fritillary (Brenthis myrina)

The Comma
(Polygonia comma)

Goatweed Butterfly
(Anaea andria)

Monarch Butterfly
(Danaus archippus)

Common Blue
(Lycana pseudargiolus)

Common Wood-nymph
(Satyrus alope)

Tiger Swallowtail
(Papilio turnus)

Pearl Crescent
(Phyciodes tharos)

Eyed Emperor
(Apatura celtis)

American Copper
(Chrysophanus hypophleas)

Nettle Tortoise-shell
(Aglais milberti)

Great Spangled Fritillary
(Argynnis cybele)

The Buckeye
(Junonia cania)

Lorquin's Admiral
(Basilarchia lorquini)

Thistle Butterfly
(Vanessa cardui)

NORTH AMERICAN BUTTERFLIES

Courtesy of the American Museum of Natural History, New York City.

TWO-THIRDS NATURAL SIZE

Shakspeare's "2 Henry IV.," iv. 1. 45); symbolize or typify; also, to represent or express by a figure of speech; also, to mark or adorn with figures, or with a pattern or design (as, muslin figured in the weaving); also, to mark with numerical figures; express in figures; compute or calculate; hence, fig., to conclude or judge, as if after calculation (with a clause: as, I figured that the matter was settled: colloq.); in music, to embellish with passing-notes or other decorations; also, to write figures above or below (a bass part) to indicate accompanying chords. II. intr. To make a figure or appearance; be seen or prominent (as, to figure in society; his name figures in all the reports of the case); be conspicuous; also, to appear (as: as, to figure as a martyr); also, to perform a figure in dancing; also, to compute or work with numerical figures; cipher; hence, fig., to count, reckon, or rely (on: as, we figure on settling the matter this week: colloq.). — fig'-ured, p. a. Formed or shaped (finely, ill, etc.); also, represented by a pictorial or sculptured figure; also, marked or adorned with figures, or with a pattern or design (as, figured silk, muslin, or wall-paper); also, figurative, as language; in music, florid; also, of a bass part, having the accompanying chords indicated. — fig'-ure-head, n. An ornamental figure, placed over the cutwater of a ship; also, a person who is nominally the head of a society, community, etc., but has no real authority or responsibility. — fig'-ure-less, a. Without a figure; shapeless. — fig'-ur-er, n. fig-u-rine (fig-ū-rēn'), n. [F., < It. figurina, dim. of figura, < L. figura, E. figure, n.] A small ornamental figure of pottery, metalwork, etc.; a statuette: as, the Tanagra figurines (small terra-cotta figures, decorated in colors, such as have been found in ancient tombs at Tanagra in Greece).

Figurehead.

fig-wort (fig'wért), n. Any of numerous coarse herbs of the genus Scrophularia; also, any scrophulariaceous plant.

fike (fik), v.; fiked, fiking. [ME. fiken, fyken; prob. from Scand.] I. intr. To move restlessly; fidget; fuss; trifle. [Now Sc. and north. Eng.] II. tr. To make uneasy; trouble; worry. [Sc.] — fike, n. A restless movement; bustle; stir; fuss; trouble; worry. [Sc.]

fil-a-gree (fil'ā-grē), etc. See filigree, etc.

fil-a-ment (fil'ā-ment), n. [F. filament, < L. filum, thread.] A very fine thread or thread-like structure; a fiber or fibril; in an incandescent lamp, the thread-like, nearly infusible conductor which is placed in the bulb and raised to incandescence by the passage of the current; in wireless telegraph and teleph., one of the interior elements of a vacuum-tube (see vacuum-tube); in bot., the stalk-like portion of a stamen, supporting the anther. — fil-a-men'ta-ry (-men'tā-rī), a. Pertaining to or of the nature of a filament or filaments. — fil'a-ment-ed (-men-ted), a. Provided with filaments. — fil-a-men'tous, a. Composed of or containing filaments; resembling a filament; bearing filaments; pertaining to filaments.

fil-lar (fil'lār), a. [L. filum, thread.] Of or pertaining to a thread or threads; having threads or the like; thread-like. fil-la-ri-a (fī-lā'ri-ā), n., pl. -ri-æ (-ri-ē). [NL., < L. filum, thread.] Any of the slender, thread-like nematode worms constituting the genus Filaria, parasitic in the blood and tissues of vertebrates and other animals. — fil-la'ri-al, a. Belonging to the genus Filaria and allied genera (see filaria); also, caused by a filaria or filariae, as a disease. — fil-a-ri-a-sis (fil-ā-rī'ā-sis), n. [NL.] In pathol., the presence of filarial worms in the blood, etc.

fil-lasse (fī-lās'), n. [F., < fil, < L. filum, thread.] Vegetable fiber prepared for the process of manufacture.

fil-a-ture (fil'ā-tūr), n. [F. filature, < ML. filare, spin, < L. filum, thread.] The act of forming into threads; the reeling of silk from cocoons; also, a reel for drawing off silk from cocoons; also, an establishment for reeling silk.

fil-bert (fil'bért), n. [Said to be from Norman F. noix de filbert, 'nut of (St.) Philibert,' so called because ripe about the time of this saint's day, Aug. 22.] The thick-shelled, edible nut of certain cultivated varieties of hazel, esp. of Corylus avellana of Europe; also, a tree or shrub bearing such nuts.

filch (filch), v. t. or i. [Origin unknown.] To steal (esp. something of small value); pilfer: as, "He that filches from me my good name Robs me of that which not enriches him And makes me poor indeed" (Shakspeare's "Othello," iii. 3. 159). — filch'er, n. — filch'ing-ly, adv.

file¹ (fil), n. [AS. fēol = D. vijl = G. feile, file.] A metal (usually steel) tool of varying form and size, with numerous small cutting ridges or teeth on its surface, for abrading, smoothing, or cutting substances; fig., something serving to smooth or polish. — file¹, v. t.; filed, filing. To reduce, smooth, or cut with or as with a file; also, to remove with or as with a file.

file² (fil), v. t.; filed, filing. [AS. fylan (recorded in compounds), < fúl, E. foul.] To defile; pollute. See Shakspeare's "Macbeth," iii. 1. 65. [Archaic or prov.]

file³ (fil), n. [F. fil, thread, string, and file, file, row, < L. filum, thread.] A thread; also, a string or wire on which papers are strung for preservation and reference; hence, any device, as a cabinet, by means of which papers, etc., are arranged or classified for convenient reference; also, a collection of papers so arranged or classified; any orderly collection of papers, etc.; also, a list or roll (as, "Our present musters grow upon the file To five and twenty thousand men of choice": Shakspeare's "2 Henry IV.," i. 3. 10); also, a line of persons or things arranged one behind another; milit., a number of soldiers forming a line from front to rear, esp. two soldiers forming such a line in a formation of only two ranks (distinguished from rank); also, a small detachment of soldiers; in chess, one of the lines of squares on a chess-board running directly from player to player. — on file, on or in a file, or in orderly arrangement for convenient reference, as papers; of a paper, etc., duly deposited among a collection of papers, etc., so arranged. — file³, v.; filed, filing. I. tr. To place on or in a file, as papers; arrange (papers, etc.) methodically for preservation and convenient reference; place (a paper, etc.) on file. II. intr. To march or move in a file, one after another, as soldiers.

file⁴ (fil), n. [Origin unknown.] A pickpocket; also, a cunning, shrewd, or artful person (prov. or slang, Eng.).

file-fish (fil'fish), n. Any of various fishes with rough, granular skin, as Alutera schaffi of the Atlantic coast of the U. S.

fil-e-mot (fil'ē-mot). [F. feuille

morte, dead

leaf.] I. a.

Of the color

of a dead leaf;

yellowish-

brown. [Archaic.] II.

n. A yellow-

ish-brown

color. [Archaic.]

fil-er (fil'ér),

n. One who

or that which

files (in any of the various senses).

File-fish (Alutera schaffi).

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

fil-let (fē-lā), n. [In part, F. filet, net, netting, for filé, < fil, thread, string (see *file*³); in part, F. filet, E. fillet.] Net, or lace with a ground of net, with a square mesh; in cookery, a fillet.

fil-ial (fil'yāl), a. [LL. filialis, < L. filius, son, filia, daughter.] Of, pertaining to, or befitting a son or daughter (as, filial obedience); also, bearing the relation of a child to a parent. —fil-ial/i-ty (-yāl'i-ti or -i-āl'i-ti), fil'ial-ness, n. —fil'ial-ly, adv.

fil-i-ate (fil'i-āt), v. t.; —ated, —ating. [L. filius, son, filia, daughter: cf. affiliate.] To take or adopt as a son or daughter; join as by ties of sonship; affiliate; also, to fix the paternity of; father (upon). —fil-i-a'tion (-ā'shən), n. The act of filiating, or the state of being filiated; affiliation; an affiliated branch, as of a society; also, the relation of a son or daughter to a parent; sonship; the fact of being the child of a certain parent; parentage; fig., descent as if from a parent; derivation; the relation of one thing to another from which it is derived; also, the fixing of the paternity of a child upon some person (also fig.: as, "The direct filiation of euphuism on Spanish originals is no doubt erroneous," Saintsbury's "Hist. of Elizabethan Literature," Conclusion).

fil-i-beg (fil'i-beg), n. [Gael. feileadh-beag, 'small kilt' (as distinguished from the large one formerly worn).] The kilt or plaited skirt worn by Scottish Highlanders.

fil-i-bus-ter (fil'i-bus-tēr), n. [Cf. Sp. filibustero, F. filibustier, earlier frībustier, and obs. E. filibutor, all < D. vrybuitler, E. freebooter.] A freebooter or buccaneer, esp. one of the piratical adventurers who made depredations on the Spanish colonies in the West Indies during the 17th century; also, one who engages in an unlawful military expedition into a foreign country to inaugurate or to aid a revolution, esp. one of the members of certain expeditions organized in the U. S. in the middle of the 19th century for the purpose of revolutionizing certain Spanish-American countries; more widely, an irregular military adventurer; also, a member of a minority in a legislative assembly who resorts to irregular or obstructive tactics to prevent the adoption of a measure or procedure favored by the majority (U. S.); a course of legislative filibustering (U. S.). —fil-i-bus-ter, v. i. To act as a filibuster, buccaneer, or irregular military adventurer; also, to impede legislation by irregular or obstructive tactics (U. S.). —fil-i-bus'ter-er, n.

fil-i-cide (fil'i-sid), n. [L. filius, son, filia, daughter: see -cide.] One who kills his son or daughter; also, the act of killing one's son or daughter. —fil'i-ci-dal (-si-dāl), a.

fil-i-coid (fil'i-koid), a. [L. filix (filic-), fern: see -oid.] Resembling a fern.

fil-i-e-ty (fi-l'ē-ti), n. [LL. filietas, < L. filius, son.] The relation of a son to a parent.

fil-i-form (fil'i-fōrm), a. [L. filum, thread: see -form.] Thread-like; filamentous.

fil-i-grain, fil-i-grane (fil'i-grān), n. and a. Earlier forms of filigree.

fil-i-gree (fil'i-grē). [Corruption of filigrane, < F. filigrane, < It. filigrana, < L. filum, thread, + granum, grain.] I. n. Ornamental work of fine wire, esp. jewelers' work of gold or silver; hence, any similar ornamental openwork; fig., anything very delicate or fanciful (as, "Guarantees, he said, were mere filigree, pretty to look at, but too brittle to bear the slightest pressure"; Macaulay's "Essays," Frederic the Great). II. a. Composed of or resembling filigree. —fil'i-gree, v. t.; —greed, —greeting. To adorn with or form into filigree. —fil-i-gree=work, n.

fil-ing (fil'ing), n. The act of using a file, as for smoothing; pl., particles removed by a file.

fil-i-pi-no (fil-i-pē'nō). [Sp.] I. n.; pl. -nos (-nōz). A native of the Philippine Islands, esp. a member of a Christianized native tribe. II. a. Belonging or pertaining to the Filipinos.

fil¹ (fil), n. [Var. of thill.] A thill or shaft, as of a cart. See Shakspeare's "Troilus and Cressida," iii. 2. 48. [Now prov. Eng.]

fil² (fil), v. t. [AS. fyllan = D. vullen = G. füllen = Icel. fylla = Goth. fulljan, fill; from the Teut. adj. represented by *E. full*¹.] To make full, as of contents; put as much as can be held into (as, to fill a cup, basket, or trunk; to fill a room with gas, the hands with flowers, or the ears with cotton); supply to fullness or to the utmost (lit. or fig.: as, to fill one with food; to fill one's head with false notions or silly stories; to fill the heart with joy); complete by inserting something in blank spaces (usually with in, out, or up: see phrases below); supply, stock, or store plentifully (as, to fill a house with works of art; to fill a pond with fish); also, to stop up or close (a hole, crack, crevice, etc.) with something put in; supply (a blank space) with written matter, decorative work, etc.; furnish (a vacancy or vacant post) with an occupant; also, to stop up the holes, hollows, crevices, interstices, etc., of with some substance (as, to fill a tooth with gold; to fill wood or canvas by coating with varnish or size, as in preparing the surface); prepare, make up, or adulterate with some other material (see filled); also, to put, as contents, into a receptacle, esp. to pour (wine, tea, etc.) (obs. or archaic); put (in) by inserting (see to fill in, below); also, of contents, etc., to occupy to the full capacity (lit. or fig.: as, water filled the basin; the crowd filled the hall; matter enough to fill two pages; such thoughts filled his mind); extend throughout or pervade completely (as, the light, sound, or odor filled the room); be plentiful throughout (as, fish filled the rivers); distend, as the wind does a sail; occupy (a vacancy, position, post, etc.) as the incumbent; hold, and perform the duties of (as, to fill an office satisfactorily); satisfy, as food does; meet (requirements, etc.) satisfactorily (as, the book fills a long-felt want); execute (a business order); make up or compound (a medical prescription); fulfil (a promise, prophecy, etc.)†; complete (a work, period of time, etc.)†. —to fill in, to fill (a hole, hollow, blank, etc.) with something put in; also, to complete (a document, design, etc.) by filling blank spaces; also, to put in or insert so as to fill or complete something (as, to fill in omitted names or items of a list). —to fill out, to distend (sails, etc.); round out (the cheeks, figure, etc.); also, to complete (a document, list, etc.) by filling blanks, or fill (blanks) in a document, etc. —to fill the bill, to satisfy the requirements of the case; be or do what is wanted. [Colloq.] —to fill up, to fill completely, as a vessel or receptacle or a hole or hollow; fill to repletion; also, to fill out, as a document, or as blanks in a document; also, to fill (a vacancy, vacant post, etc.) with an occupant, or occupy (a vacancy); also, to take up or occupy fully (as, these duties fill up the day). —fill², v. i. To become full (as, the hall fills rapidly; eyes filling with tears); become distended, as sails with wind; become rounded (out), as the cheeks, figure, etc.; also, to fill a cup or other receptacle; pour out drink, as into a cup. —fill², n. [AS. fyllō.] One's full supply or desired amount (as, to take one's fill of food or sleep; "The stag at eve had drunk his fill," Scott's "Lady of the Lake," i. 1); also, a quantity sufficient to fill something (as, a fill of tobacco for a pipe); a single filling or charge of something; also, a mass of earth, stones, etc., used to fill a hollow, afford a road-bed, etc. —filled, p. a. Made full; charged or supplied with requisite contents; made with a filling, or an added amount, of some different, usually inferior material (as, filled gold, cf. gold-filled; filled cheese, cheese made of skim-milk with foreign fat added; filled soap; filled cloth). —fill'er, n. One who or that which fills; also, an implement used in filling, as a funnel, or a small syringe for filling a fountain-pen; also, a thing, material, or quantity of a material put in to fill something; the tobacco forming the body of a cigar, as distinguished from the wrapper; a liquid, paste, or the like used to coat wood, etc., as in preparing a surface for painting; something used to fill a vacant space (as, to use a short poem as a filler on a magazine page); a stop-gap. —fill'er-vase, n. In Gr. archaeol., a slender vase having a funnel-like bottom with a hole, apparently used to transfer liquids to narrow-necked receptacles.

fil-let (fil'et), n. [OF. F. filet, dim. of fil, thread, string, < L. filum, thread.] A narrow band of ribbon or the like bound round the head or hair (as, "A belt her waist, a fillet binds her hair"; Pope's "Windsor Forest," 178); a strip of any material used for binding something; also, any narrow strip of material, as wood or metal; a raised rim or ridge on a surface, as a ring on the fat, fāte, fār, fāll, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

Filler-vase.

muzzle of a gun; any band-like object or marking; specif., pl., the loins, esp. of a horse; sing., in anat., a band of fibers, esp. of white nerve-fibers in the brain; in cookery, a strip or long (flat or thick) piece of meat or fish, esp. such as is easily detached from the bones or adjoining parts (as, the fillet of beef, the tenderloin; fillets of sole); a thick slice of meat, etc.; a piece of veal or other meat boned, rolled, and tied, for roasting; in arch., etc., a relatively narrow molding with a plane face, as between other moldings; also, the flat surface between two flutes of a column; in her., a horizontal division of an escutcheon, equal to one fourth of the depth of the chief, of which it occupies the lowest part; in bookbinding, a line impressed upon the cover of a book as a decoration; also, a rolling tool for impressing such lines. — fil'let, v. t.; -leted, -leting. To bind or adorn with or as with a fillet; in cookery, to cut or prepare (meat or fish) as a fillet; also, to cut fillets from.

fil-li-beg (fil'i-beg), n. See filibeg.

fil-li-bus-ter (fil'i-bus-tēr), etc. See filibuster, etc.

fil-li-gree (fil'i-grē), etc. See filigree, etc.

fill-ing (fil'ing), n. The act of one who or that which fills; a making or becoming full; also, that which is put in to fill something (as, a gold filling in a tooth; a custard filling for a pie; a bread filling for a chicken; a filling of earth and stones for hollow ground); carpeting of solid color used to supplement bordered carpets or rugs; in needlework, lace, etc., any simple stitch or work serving to fill considerable spaces; in weaving, material for the weft; the weft-threads of a fabric.

fil-lip (fil'ip), v. [Perhaps imit.: cf. *flip*¹.] I. tr. To strike with the nail of a finger snapped from the end of the thumb; hence, to tap or strike smartly; also, to drive by or as by a fillip with the fingers (as, "He filipped a little dust from his coat"; Howells's "Foregone Conclusion," i.); toss (a coin) with a fillip. II. intr. To make a fillip with the fingers. — fil'lip, n. An act or movement of filliping; a smart tap or stroke given by filliping or otherwise; also, anything that tends to rouse, excite, or revive; a stimulus.

fil-li-peen (fil-i-pēn'), n. Same as philopena.

fil-lis-ter (fil'is-tēr), n. [Origin unknown.] A plane for cutting rabbets or grooves; also, a rabbet or groove, as one on a window-sash to hold the glass and putty.

fil-ly (fil'i), n.; pl. fillies (-iz). [Cf. Icel. fylja, fem., foli, masc.: see foal.] A female colt or foal; a young mare; also, a lively young girl (colloq.).

film (film), n. [AS. filmen, akin to fell, skin, E. *fell*³.] A thin skin or membrane; a thin sheet of any material; a delicate web of filaments or fine threads, as gossamer or cobweb, or sometimes a single filament; a thin layer or coating (as, "An icy game . . . o'er the pool Breathes a blue film"; Thomson's "Seasons," Winter, 724); specif., the sensitive coating, as of gelatin and silver bromide, on a photographic plate; a strip or roll of celluloid coated with a sensitive emulsion, used instead of a photographic plate; such a strip of celluloid before it is coated; the celluloid strip containing the photographs exhibited in a moving-picture machine; hence, in general use, a moving picture. — film, v. I. tr. To cover with a film; also, to photograph with a moving-picture camera; reproduce in the form of moving pictures (as, to film a novel). II. intr. To become covered by a film. — film'y, a.; compar. filmier, superl. filmiest. Of the nature of, resembling, or covered with a film. — film'i-ly, adv. — film'i-ness, n.

fil-lo-plume (fil'lō-plōm or fil'ō-), n. [NL. filopluma, < L. filum, thread, + pluma, feather.] A thread-like or hair-like feather bearing a minute tuft of barbs at the tip.

fil-lose (fil'lōs), a. [L. filum, thread.] Thread-like; ending in a thread-like process.

fil-o-selle (fil'ō-sel' or -zel'), n. [F., < It. filosello, a dim. form (simulating It. filo, thread) < L. foliis, bellows, bag: cf. ML. foliisellus, foliellus, silkworm's cocoon.] The floss or rough, broken silk of cocoons, separated from the finer portion in reeling; an embroidery silk in untwisted strands made of it.

fil's (fēs), n. [F., < L. filius.] Son: sometimes used after a name to distinguish a son from his father. See père.

fil-ter (fil'tēr), n. [F. filtre = It. filtro, < ML. filtrum, fel-trum, felt (used as a filter); from the Teut. source of E. *felt*².] Any contrivance, as a piece of felt or paper, porous porcelain, a stratum of charcoal or sand, etc., through which liquid is passed to remove impurities or other matter; also, any of various analogous devices, as for removing dust from air or eliminating certain kinds of light-rays. — fil'ter, v. I. tr. To pass through or as through a filter; also, to act as a filter for; also, to remove by the action of a filter. II. intr. To pass through or as through a filter: as, "The water had . . . filtered through the roof" (J. H. Newman's "Callista," xxx.). — fil'ter-a-ble, a. — fil'ter-er, n. — fil'ter-pass'er, n. In med., a pathogenic micro-organism, as that of influenza, which is so small that it passes through the minute interstices of a filter. — fil'ter-pass'ing, a. In med., passing through a filter, as a micro-organism or virus.

filth (filth), n. [AS. fylth, < ful, E. foul.] Foul condition; also, foul matter; offensive or disgusting dirt; sometimes (with plural), a particular accumulation or kind of foul matter; fig., anything morally unclean or defiling; moral impurity, or corruption; foul language, or obscenity; also, a vile person (archaic or prov. Eng.: as, "Filth, thou liest!" Shakspeare's "Othello," v. 2. 231). — filth'y, a.; compar. filth-ier, superl. filthiest. Foul with, characterized by, or of the nature of filth; disgustingly dirty; fig., morally foul; vile; obscene; as a general epithet of strong condemnation, highly offensive or objectionable. — filth'i-ly, adv. — filth'i-ness, n.

fil-trate (fil'trat), v. t. or i.; -trated, -trating. [NL. filtratus, pp. of filtrare, < ML. filtrum, felt: see filter.] To filter. — fil'trate, n. The liquid which has been passed through a filter. — fil-tra'tion (-trā'shōn), n.

fil-lum (fil'lum), n.; pl. -la (-lā). [L., thread.] A thread-like structure or part; a filament.

fil-m-ble (fil'mbl), n. [MD. filmel.] The male or staminate plant of hemp, which is harvested before the female or pistillate plant. Cf. carl-hemp.

fil-m-bri-a (fil'mbri-ā), n.; pl. fimbriæ (-ē). [LL., border, fringe: see fringe.] In bot., zool., and anat., a fringe or fringed border: often in pl. — fil'm'bri-al, a. — fil'm'bri-ate, a. fil'm'bri-at-ed (-āt, -ā-ted), a. Fringed, as the petals of certain flowers. — fil-m'bri-a'tion (-ā'shōn), n. Fimbriate or fringed condition; also, a fringe or fringe-like part.

fil-m-bril-la (fil'm-bril'ā), n.; pl. fimbrillæ (-ē).

[NL., dim. of LL. fimbria: see fimbria.] A single division or tooth of a minute or fine fringe. — fil-m-bril'late (-bril'āt), a. Bordered with fimbriæ; having a small or fine fringe. — fil-m-bril-lif'er-ous (-bril-lif'e-rus), a. [See -ferous.] Bearing fimbriæ, as the receptacle of a plant.

fin (fin), n. [AS. finn = D. vin = LG. finne, fin: cf. L. pinna, fin.] A membranous wing-like or paddle-like organ attached to any of various parts of the body of fishes and certain other aquatic animals, used for propulsion, steering, or balancing; also, any part, as of a mechanism, resembling a fin; any of certain small, horizontal or vertical, subsidiary planes on an airplane; sometimes, the arm or the hand (slang); also, fishes collectively. — fin, v.; finned, finning. I. tr. To cut off the fins from (a fish); carve or cut up, as a chub; of a fish, to wound with its fins. II. intr. To move the fins; lash the water with the fins, as a whale when dying.

fin-a-ble (fin'ā-bl), a. Of a person or an offense, liable to be punished by a fine; also, of a tenure or a tenant, subject or liable to the payment of a fine on renewal.

fi-na-gle (fi-nā'gl), v.; -gled, -gling. [Var. of fainaigue: see fainaigue.] I. intr. To use guile or trickery; practise deception or fraud. [Slang.] II. tr. To use guile or trickery upon; work upon with artful skill; manipulate; Fimbriate Petals.

Fins of Common Perch. — D, first dorsal; D', second dorsal; P, pectoral; V, ventral; A, anal; C, caudal.

Filoplume of a Goose.

(variable) đ as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ˝, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

trick or cheat (a person); get (something) by guile or trickery. [Slang.]—fi-na'gler, n.

fi-nal (fī'nāl). [OF. F. final, < LL. finalis, < L. finis, end, E. *fine*¹.] I. a. Pertaining to or coming at the end; last in place, order, or time (as, the final syllable of a word; a final effort; the final moment); also, beyond which no other may be expected, or ultimate (as, the final goal of all things); also, putting an end to a thing, conclusive, or decisive (as, the court's decision is final); also, pertaining to or expressing end or purpose (as, in gram., a final clause); constituting the end or purpose (as, a final cause: see cause, n.). II. n. Something final, as a last and decisive examination or athletic contest after preliminary ones (often in pl.).

fi-na-lo (fē-nā'lā), n. [It., < LL. finalis, E. final.] The final or concluding part, esp. if of impressive character, of an act of an opera, or of any musical composition; the concluding part of any performance, course of proceedings, etc.

fi-nal-ist (fī'nāl-ist), n. One who is entitled to take part in a final trial or round, as of an athletic contest.

fi-nal-i-ty (fī-nāl'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [LL. finalitas.] The state, quality, or fact of being final; conclusiveness or decisiveness; also, something that is final; a final act, utterance, etc.; also, the relation or the operation of a final cause; the doctrine of final causes.

fi-nal-ly (fī'nāl-i), adv. At the final point or moment; in the end; also, in a final manner; conclusively or decisively.

fi-nance (fi-nans' or fī-, or fī'nans), n. [OF. finance, ending, payment, supply, resources, revenue, F. cash, finance, pl. resources, finances, < OF. finer, finish, settle, pay, < fin, end, settlement: see *fine*¹.] Ending; payment; ransom; supply of goods or money; pl., pecuniary resources, as of a sovereign or state, a corporation, or an individual; revenues; sing., the management of public revenues; the conduct or transaction of pecuniary affairs generally, esp. such as affect the public, as in the fields of banking and investment; the science of monetary business or affairs.—fi-nance', v.; -nanced, -nancing. I. tr. To supply with finances or money; provide capital for. II. intr. To conduct financial operations; manage finances.—fi-nan'cial (-nan'shāl), a. Of or pertaining to finance, or money matters.—fi-nan'cial-ly, adv.—fin-an-cier (fin-an-sēr' or fī-nan-, or fī-nan'si-ēr), n. [F.] One occupied with or skilled in financial affairs or operations.—fin-an-cier', v. I. intr. To act as a financier; conduct financial operations. II. tr. To act as banker for; finance.

fin-back (fīn'bak), n. Any whalebone whale of the genus Balænoptera having a prominent dorsal fin, as B. musculus of the northern Atlantic; a rorqual.

finch (finch), n. [AS. finc = D. vinck = G. fink, finch.] Any of the numerous small singing birds of the family Fringillidæ, including the buntings, sparrows, crossbills, linnets, etc.; also, any of various non-fringilline birds.

find (find), v. t.; found, finding. [AS. findan = D. vinden = G. finden = Icel. finna = Goth. finthan, find.] To come upon by chance (as, to find a splinter in sugar); meet with, as in records (as, "We find Semiramis leading her three millions to the field": Addison, in "Spectator," 415); come upon (something) when it is in a particular condition (as, "The morning finds the self-sequestered man Fresh for his task": Cowper's "Task," iii. 386); discover (something not previously seen or known: as, a prospector finds gold; an astronomer finds a new star); also, to meet with in experience, come to have, or receive (as, to find favor with the public); gain or regain the use of (as, to find one's tongue); also, to discover or perceive upon examination or consideration (as, to find no harm in a proceeding; to find fault, see below); discover (something) on examination to be as specified (as, to find conditions satisfactory); perceive (one's self) to be as specified (as, to find one's self in a dilemma; to find one's self weak from loss of blood); perceive (something) by experience or trial to be or do as specified (as, "He finds rest more agreeable than motion": Steele, in "Spectator," 6); detect (now only with out: see to find out, below); also, to discover, learn, attain, or obtain by search or effort (as, to find a bullet in a wound by probing; to find the meaning of a word by looking in a dictionary; to find time or money for a thing); recover (something lost); discover the right place or conditions for (one's self); hence, to attain or obtain as if by effort (as, his feelings found vent in words); arrive at as a destination (as, to find one's level); reach home to the understanding or appreciation of (as, "A verse may find him who a sermon flies": Herbert's "Church Porch"); also, to ascertain by study or calculation (as, to find some way to reduce expenses; to find the sum of several numbers); also, to determine after judicial inquiry (as, to find a person guilty); agree upon and deliver (a verdict); ascertain the validity of (an indictment, etc.); also, to provide or furnish (something) for the use of somebody (as, to find food and lodging for servants); also, to provide for or maintain (a person); provide food, lodging, etc., for.—to find fault, to discover or make known some defect, flaw, or matter of censure; find cause of blame or complaint; express dissatisfaction.—to find one's level. See under level, n.—to find one's way, to make out one's way by observation, search, or inquiry; also, to get to a place as if in spite of difficulties; come to a place by natural course or by force of circumstances (as, the river finds its way to the sea; the picture found its way to the auction-room).—to find out, to discover in the course of time or experience; discover by search or inquiry (as, "Canst thou by searching find out God?" Job, xi. 7); discover or ascertain by study, etc. (as, to find out a way to remedy an evil); often, to detect, as in an offense; discover the actions or character of; discover or detect (a fraud, imposture, etc.); discover the identity of (a person).—find, v. i. In law, to determine an issue after judicial inquiry; render a verdict: as, the jury found for the plaintiff.—find, n. An act of finding; a discovery, esp. of something valuable; also, something that has been found.—find'a-ble, a. That may be found.—find'er, n. One who or that which finds; in astron., a small telescope attached to a larger for the purpose of finding an object more readily; in photog., an attachment of a camera to indicate how the picture will appear on the sensitized plate.

Common Purple Finch of the U. S.
(Carpodacus purpureus).

fin de siècle (fañ dè syekl). [F.] 'End of century': used attributively toward the close of the 19th century in the sense of 'modern' or 'up-to-date,' and sometimes implying decadence.

find-ing (fīn'ding), n. The act of one who or that which finds; discovery; also, that which is found; something ascertained; a decision or verdict after judicial inquiry; pl., tools, materials, etc., used by artisans (as, shoemakers' findings, shoemakers' supplies, excepting leather).

fine¹ (fin), n. [OF. F. fin, < L. finis, boundary, border, end, ML. settlement, agreement, payment, fine.] End or conclusion (now only in 'in fine,' finally, or in short); also, a compromise of a fictitious suit, formerly in use as a mode of conveyance of land; also, a fee paid by a feudal tenant to the landlord, as on the renewal of tenure; a sum of money paid by a tenant on the commencement of his tenancy so that his rent may be small or nominal; esp., a sum exacted as a penalty for an offense or dereliction; a mulct; hence, a penalty of any kind (archaic).—fine¹, v. t.; fined, fining. To subject to a fine, or pecuniary penalty; punish by a fine.

fine² (fin), a.; compar. finer, superl. finest. [OF. F. fin = ML. finus, appar. (as if meaning 'brought to the final point,' as of excellence) < L. finire, finish: see finish.] Of the highest or of very high grade or quality; free from imperfections or impurities; of gold, silver, etc., having a high proportion of pure metal, or having the proportion as specified (as, gold 18 carats fine); in general, choice, excellent, or admirable (as, a fine sermon; a fine view; to have a fine time); highly skilled or accomplished (as, a fine scholar; a fine musician); good-looking or handsome (as, "His wife hath . . . had much pretension to beauty, and is still a very fine woman":

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, élect, agôny, intô, ûnite; (obscured) errânt, operâ, ardent, actôr, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ð, then; y, you; Fielding's "Tom Jones," viii. 8); showy or smart, as dress; smartly dressed, as persons; characterized by or affecting refinement or elegance (as, a fine lady); polished or refined (as, fine manners); affectedly ornate or elegant (as, fine language or writing); also, delicately fashioned (as, "Heaven . . . warp those fine limbs To loathed lameness!" Shelley's "Cenci," iv. 1. 133); delicate in texture (as, fine linen); consisting of minute particles (as, fine sand, meal, or shot); attenuated, rarefied, or subtle (as, "Transparent forms, too fine for mortal sight, Their fluid bodies half dissolved in light"; Pope's "Rape of the Lock," ii. 61); very thin or slender (as, fine thread); keen or sharp, as a tool; trained down to the proper degree, as an athlete; sensitive to delicate impressions, as an organ or an instrument; delicate or subtle, as a distinction; also, pure, absolute†, or sheer† (as, by fine force).—fine arts, n. Under *art*².—fine², adv. In a fine manner; excellently, or very well; elegantly; delicately; with nicety. [Now chiefly colloq.]—fine², v.; fined, fining. I. tr. To make fine; purify, clarify, or refine; make small, thin, or slender; make subtle. II. intr. To become fine; become pure, or clarify; become thin; dwindle (away).

fine-draw (fin'drā), v. t.; pret. drew, pp. drawn, ppr. drawing. To sew together or up so finely or nicely that the joint is not noticed; also, to draw out to extreme fineness, tenuity, or subtlety.—fine-drawn, p. a. Drawn fine; drawn out to extreme fineness or thinness; extremely subtle.

fine-less (fin'les), a. [See *fine*¹.] Endless. See Shakspeare's "Othello," iii. 3. 173. [Archaic.]

fine-ly (fin'li), adv. In a fine manner; excellently; elegantly; delicately; minutely; nicely; subtly.—fine'ness, n. The state or quality of being fine (in any sense); esp., the proportion of pure metal (gold or silver) in an alloy, often expressed by the number of parts in 1,000.

fin-er (fi'nér), n. A refiner.

fin-er-y¹ (fi'nér-i), n.; pl. -ies (-iz). [See *fine*², a.] Fineness, smartness, or elegance; also, fine or showy dress, ornaments, etc.

fin-er-y² (fi'nér-i), n.; pl. -ies (-iz). [See *fine*², v.] In metal, a hearth on which cast-iron is converted into wrought-iron.

fine-spun (fin'spun), a. Spun or drawn out to a fine thread; hence, highly or excessively refined or subtle.

fin-esse (fi-nes'), n. [F., < fin: see *fine*².] Fineness†; also, delicacy of execution; subtlety of discrimination; also, artful management; craft; strategy; an artifice or stratagem; in card-playing, an attempt to win a trick with a lower card when a higher card not in sequence with it is held, in the hope that the card or cards between may be on the right.—fi-nesse', v.; nessed, -nessing. I. intr. To use finesse or artifice; also, to make a finesse at cards. II. tr. To bring by finesse or artifice; also, to make a finesse with (a card).

fin-foot (fin'füt), n.; pl. -foots. Any of certain pinnatiped or fin-footed aquatic birds (genus Helio- ornis, etc.) of South America and Africa, related to the rails and coots.—fin'=foot'ed, a. Web-footed; also, having feet the toes of which are separately furnished with flaps, as the finfoots, coots, etc.; pinnatiped.

fin-ger (fing'gèr), n. [AS. finger = D. vinger = G. finger = Icel. fingr = Goth. figgrs, finger.] Any of the terminal members of the hand, esp. one other than the thumb; hence, something resembling a finger, as a ray of a starfish; something performing the office of a finger, as an index (as, "the finger of a clock"; Cowper's "Task," iv. 118) or any of various projecting parts of machines; also, the breadth of a finger (or $\frac{3}{4}$ inch); the length of a finger (or $4\frac{1}{2}$ inches); also, a part of a glove made to receive a finger; in music, skill in fingering a musical instrument.—fin'ger, v. I. tr. To touch with the fingers; handle; toy or meddle with; also, to touch or take thievishly; pilfer; filch; in music, to play on (an instrument) with the fingers; perform or mark (a passage of music) with a certain fingering. II. intr. To touch or handle something with the fingers; in music, to use the fingers in playing.—fin'ger-board, n. In a violin, guitar, etc., the strip of wood on the neck against which the strings are stopped by the fingers; in a piano, organ, etc., the keyboard.—fin'ger-bowl, n. A bowl to hold water for rinsing the fingers at table.—fin'ger-breadth, n. The breadth of a finger ($\frac{3}{4}$ inch).—fin'gered, a. Having fingers; in bot., digitate.—fin'ger-er, n. One who fingers; esp., a pilferer.—fin'ger-glass, n. A glass finger-bowl.

fin-ger-ing¹ (fing'gèr-ing), n. [Earlier fingram; perhaps < F. fin grain, 'fine grain': cf. rogram and grosgrain.] A kind of woolen yarn, used esp. for knitting.

fin-ger-ing² (fing'gèr-ing), n. The act of one who fingers; esp., in music, the action or method of using the fingers in playing on an instrument; the indication of the way the fingers are to be used in performing a piece of music.

fin-ger-less (fing'gèr-less), a. Without fingers.

fin-ger-ling (fing'gèr-ling), n. [See *ling*¹.] Something very small; esp., a very small salmon or a small trout.

fin-ger-mark (fing'gèr-märk), n. A mark, esp. a smudge or stain, made by a finger.

fin-ger-nail (fing'gèr-näl), n. The nail growing on each of the fingers of the hand.

fin-ger-plate (fing'gèr-plät), n. A plate of metal, etc., on a door as a protection from fingermarks.

fin-ger-post (fing'gèr-pöst), n. A guide-post, as where roads cross or divide, bearing an arm terminating in the shape of an index-finger.

fin-ger-print (fing'gèr-print), n. An impression, as with ink, of the markings of the inner surface of the last joint of the thumb or a finger, taken esp. for purposes of identification, as of criminals.—fin'ger-print, v. t. To take the finger-prints of.

fin-ger's-breadth (fing'gèr-z-bredth), n. Same as finger-breadth.

fin-ger-shaped (fing'gèr-shäpt), a. Shaped like a finger; slenderly oblong.

fin-ger-stall (fing'gèr-stäl), n. [See *stail*², n.] A sheath, as of leather, worn to protect a finger.

fin-i-al (fin'i-al), n. [L. finis, end.] In arch., the ornamental termination of a pinnacle, gable, etc., usually foliated.

fin-i-cal (fin'i-kal), a. [Appar. < *fine*²; recorded earlier than the var. finikin, later finicking.] Affectedly fine, refined, or nice; excessively fastidious or particularly about trifles; pettily dainty or precise; mincing.—fin-i-cal'i-ty (-kal'i-ti), fin'i-cal-ness, n. I. Final, A.D. 1230, Cathedral of Amiens, France. 2. Final, 15th century.

fin-i-cal-ly, adv.

fin-ick-ing, fin-ick-y, fin-i-kin (fin'i-king, -ki, -kin), a. Same as finical.—fin-ick-ing-ly, adv.

fi-nis (fi'nis), n. [L.] End; conclusion: a word occasionally, and in former times commonly, placed at the end of a book.

fin-ish (fin'ish), v. [OF. F. finir (finiss-), < L. finire (pp. finitus), bound, limit, terminate, finish, end, < finis, boundary, border, end.] I. tr. To bring (action, speech, etc.) to an end; come to the end of (a course, period of time, etc.); conclude; end: also, to bring (work, affairs, etc.) to completion; complete; also, to dispose of completely, use up, African Finfoot (Podica senegalensis).

Fin-footed (Coot).

I. Final, A.D. 1230, Cathedral of Amiens, France. 2. Final, 15th century.

or consume (as, to finish a book that one is reading; to finish a spool of thread or a plate of food); also, to put an end to, terminate the existence of, destroy, or kill (as, "God hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it," Dan. v. 26; to finish a wounded beast in hunting or an enemy in battle); fig., to give a quietus to, settle, or overcome completely (colloq.: as, this retort finished him); also, to complete or perfect in detail, as by final touches (sometimes with off); give the final smoothness, polish, nicety or elegance of effect, etc., to (any product of labor or art); perfect (a person) in education, accomplishments, social graces, etc.; also, to complete in preparation with specified features, fittings, ornamentation, etc., or with a particular effect (as, to finish cloth with a nap; to finish metal with a dull surface; to finish a room with wainscoting, or in shades of brown). II. intr. To come to an end, as of action, speech, a course, etc.; leave off; cease; also, to terminate or end (as, "Exeter doth wish His days may finish ere that hapless time": Shakspeare's "1 Henry VI," iii. 1. 201); terminate existence, or die (see Shakspeare's "Cymbeline," v. 5. 36); also, to complete a course, etc. (as, he started in the race but did not finish). — fin'ish, n. The end or conclusion; the last stage; esp., the end of a hunt, race, etc.; also, a decisive ending (as, a fight to a finish); also, the quality of being finished, or completed with smoothness, nicety, elegance, etc.; perfected excellence of workmanship or execution; often, educational or social polish; also, the manner in which a thing is finished in preparation, or an effect imparted in finishing (as, cloth with a smooth or a soft finish; a lustrous or a dull finish for kid, metal, gilding, etc.); also, something used or serving to finish, complete, or perfect a thing; any completing feature or decoration (as, a finish for a costume); woodwork, etc., esp. in the interior of a building, not essential to the structure, but used for purposes of ornament, neatness, etc.; a final coat of plaster or paint; a material for application in finishing. — fin'ished, p. a. Ended, concluded, or completed; esp., completed or perfected in all details or processes of making, as a product; brought to the highest degree of excellence, as by final touches, as a literary production; highly accomplished, as a person; in general, consummate; perfect. — fin'ish-er, n. One who or that which finishes, completes, or perfects, esp. in manufacturing processes. — fin'ish-ing-school, n. A school for completing the education of young women and preparing them for entrance into society.

fi-nite (fī'nīt). [L. finitus, pp. of finire: see finish.] I. a. Having bounds or limits; not too great or too small to be naturally susceptible of measurement; not infinite or infinitesimal; hence, subject to limitations or conditions, as of space, time, circumstances, or the laws of nature; in gram., of verbs, limited by person and number; not infinitival or participial. II. n. That which is finite, or finite things collectively (usually preceded by the); something finite. — fi'nite-ly, adv. — fi'nite-ness, fin-i-tude (fī'nī-tūd), n.

fin-keel (fīn'kēl'), n. Naut., a fin-like projection extending downward from the keel of a sailboat, serving to prevent lateral motion and acting as additional ballast.

Fin-keel.

Fin-land-er (fīn'-lan-dēr), n. A native or inhabitant of Finland.

fin-less (fīn'les), a. Without fins.

fin-let (fīn'let), n. A small fin.

Finn (fīn), n. [AS. Finnas, pl.] A native or inhabitant of Finland; also, one of a people inhabiting Finland and other parts of northern Europe; also, a member of a race or ethnological group including this people and allied peoples (cf. Finn-Ugrian).

fin-nan-had-dock, fin-nan-had-die (fīn'an-had'ok, -had'i), n. [For Findon haddock, named from a village in eastern Scotland, where they were first cured.] A smoked haddock.

finned (fīnd), a. Having a fin or fins.

Finn-ic (fīn'ik), a. Of or pertaining to the Finns, esp. as an ethnological group; pertaining to the languages spoken by them.

fin'nick-ing, etc. See finicking, etc.

Finn-ish (fīn'ish). I. a. Of or pertaining to Finland, its inhabitants, or their language; also, Finnic. II. n. The language of the Finns of Finland.

Fin-no-U-gri-an (fīn'ō-ō'gri-an), a. Pertaining to the Finns and the Ugrians; noting or pertaining to a division of the Ural-Altaic family of languages containing Finnish, Estonian, Lapp, and related languages, and also Magyar and related languages. Also Fin'no-U'gric (-grīk).

fin-ny (fīn'i), a. Having fins; finned; also, of the nature of a fin; fin-like; also, of, pertaining to, or containing fish (as, "the finny deep": Goldsmith's "Traveller," 187).

Fin-sen (fīn'sen) light. [From N. R. Finsen (1860-1904), Danish physician, who devised this form of treatment.] Light composed of violet and ultra-violet rays, used in the treatment of cutaneous diseases.

fiord, fjord (fyōrd), n. [Norw. and Dan. fjord = Icel. fjörður: cf. firth, frith.] A long, relatively narrow arm of the sea, bordered by steep cliffs, as on the coast of Norway.

fi-pence, fi-pen-ny (fīp'ens, fīp'ē-nī). Colloquial forms of fivepence, fivepenny.

fir (fēr), n. [ME. fīrr; prob. from Scand.] Any of the pyramidal pinaceous evergreen trees or shrubs constituting the genus Abies, as A. balsamea, the balsam-fir; any of various similar pinaceous trees; the wood of such a tree. — fir'=bal'sam, n. The balsam-fir, Abies balsamea.

Fir (Abies fraseri).

fire (fir), n. [AS. fȳr = D. vuur = G. feuer = Icel. fjurr, fire; akin to Gr. πῦρ, fire.] The active principle of burning or combustion, maintained by the evolution of light and heat; also, burning or combustion (as, on fire, ignited or burning; to take fire, to become ignited); also, a burning mass of material, as on a hearth or in a furnace; also, the destructive burning of any large mass, as a building or a forest; a conflagration; also, torture by burning; exposure to fire by way of ordeal; fig., severe trial (as, the fires of affliction); also, a composition or device for producing a conflagration or a fiery display (as, Greek fire: see under Greek, a.); also, lightning, or a thunderbolt (archaic: as, "Vapours, from whose solid atmosphere Black rain, and fire, and hail will burst," Shelley's "Ode to the West Wind"); a spark or sparks; flashing light; luminous appearance like that of fire (as, "his sparkling eyes, replete with wrathful fire": Shakspeare's "1 Henry VI," i. 1. 12); brilliancy, as of a gem; a luminous object, as a star (as, "the fires of heaven": Shakspeare's "Coriolanus," i. 4. 39); also, heating quality, as of strong drink; also, bodily heat, as from disease (as, "the raging fire of fever": Shakspeare's "Comedy of Errors," v. 1. 75); fever; inflammation; in fig. use, burning passion, as of love or rage (as, "With an inward fire possessed, They raged": Shelley's "Revolt of Islam," x. 40); ardor, fervor, or enthusiasm (as, a man full of fire and courage); liveliness of imagination, vigor of fancy, or inspiration (as, "a poet's fire": Pope's "Essay on Criticism," 676); also, the discharge of firearms (as, to open fire; under fire: often fig.). — fire, v. fired, firing. I. tr. To set on fire; kindle; also, to expose to the action of fire; subject to heat; bake, as bricks; also, to supply (a furnace, etc.) with fuel; attend to the fire of (a boiler, etc.); also, to drive out or away by or as by fire (as, "He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven, And fire us hence like foxes": Shakspeare's "King Lear," v. 3. 23); also, to light or illuminate, or cause to glow as if on fire (as, "The sun, with ruddy orb Ascending, fires th' horizon": Cowper's "Task," v. 2); also, to inflame, as with passion; fill with ardor; inspire (as, a scene to fire a poet's imagination); also, to subject to explosion or explosive force, as a mine; discharge, as a gun; project (a missile) by discharging from a gun, etc.; hence, to project or hurl as if from a gun (colloq.: as, to fire a stone through a window); eject or dismiss forcibly or peremptorily (slang); in vel. surg., to cauterize. II. intr. To take fire; be kindled; also, to glow as if on fire; also, to become inflamed with passion; become excited; also, to go off, as a gun; discharge a gun, etc. (as, to fire at a fleeing enemy); hence, to hurl a missile (colloq.). — to fire away, to begin; go ahead; go on. [Colloq.] — to fire up, to start a fire in a furnace, a locomotive, etc.; also, to become irritated or angry.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, glect, agōny, intō, quīte; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; tu, then; y, you

fire-a-larm (fir'a-lärm'), n. An alarm of fire; also, an apparatus for giving the alarm.

fire-arm (fir'ärm), n. A weapon from which a missile is discharged by gunpowder or other explosive.

fire-ar-row (fir'ar'ō), n. An arrow with combustible matter attached, formerly used, by shooting from a hand-bow or an engine, for incendiary purposes.

fire-ball (fir'bāl), n. A ball of fire, as the sun; esp., a luminous meteor, sometimes exploding; also, lightning having the appearance of a globe of fire; also, a ball filled with explosive or combustible material, used as a projectile, as for injuring the enemy by explosion or for setting fire to their works.

fire-bal-loon (fir'bā-lōn'), n. A balloon made buoyant by air heated by a fire attached beneath an opening at the bottom; also, a balloon sent up at night with fireworks which ignite at a regulated height.

fire-bee-tle (fir'bē'tl), n. Any of various beetles, esp. of the genus Pyrophorus of tropical America, having light-producing organs.

fire-bird (fir'bērd), n. The Baltimore oriole (see oriole).

fire-board (fir'bōrd), n. A board used to close a fire-place.

fire-boat (fir'bōt), n. A steamboat fitted with apparatus for extinguishing fires.

fire-box (fir'boks), n. The box or chamber in which the fire of a furnace, steam-boiler, etc., is placed.

fire-brand (fir'brand), n. A piece of burning wood or other material (as, "I took up a great firebrand, and in I rushed . . . with the stick flaming in my hand": Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe," i. 12); fig., one who or that which kindles strife, inflames the passions, etc.

fire-brick (fir'brik), n. A brick made of fire-clay.

fire-bug (fir'bug), n. An incendiary. [U. S.]

fire-clay (fir'klā), n. A kind of clay capable of resisting high temperature: used for making crucibles, fire-bricks, etc.

fire-com-pa-ny (fir'kum'pā-ni), n.; pl. -nies (-niz). A company of men organized or employed to extinguish fires; also, a fire-insurance company.

fire-crack-er (fir'krak'ēr), n. A paper cylinder filled with an explosive and furnished with a fuse, and discharged to make a noise.

fire-damp (fir'damp), n. A combustible gas, consisting chiefly of methane, formed esp. in coal-mines, and dangerously explosive when mixed with certain proportions of atmospheric air.

fire-dog (fir'dog), n. An andiron.

fire-drake (fir'drāk), n. [AS. fȳdraca: see drake?.] A mythical fiery dragon; a luminous meteor; an ignis fatuus; a kind of firework.

fire-drill (fir'dril), n. A practice drill for a company of firemen, the crew of a ship, etc., to accustom them to the duties proper to each in case of fire; also, a drill for pupils in a school, employees in a factory, etc., to train them in the manner of exit to be followed in case of fire.

fire-eat-er (fir'ē'tēr), n. A juggler who pretends to eat fire; also, one who seeks occasion to fight or quarrel; a hotspur. — fire-eat'ing, a.

fire-en-gine (fir'en'jin), n. An apparatus (usually mounted on wheels, and commonly moved by horses or a motor) for throwing a continuous stream of water through a hose to extinguish fires, consisting essentially of a pump operated usually by steam but sometimes by hand; also, an apparatus fitted with chemical fire-extinguishing devices, moved by horses or otherwise.

fire-es-cape (fir'es-kāp'), n. An apparatus or structure to afford escape from a burning building.

fire-flaught (fir'flât), n. [See flaught.] Lightning; a flash of lightning; also, a fiery glance; also, a sudden burst or rush; also, the aurora borealis. [Chiefly Sc.]

fire-fly (fir'fli), n.; pl. -flies (-fiz). Any of various winged insects, esp. beetles of the genera Photinus and Photuris, having light-producing organs.

fire-house (fir'hous), n. A building where apparatus for extinguishing fires is kept, or one forming the headquarters of a fire-company.

fire-less (fir'les), a. Lacking fire; without a fire; fig., without life or animation.

fire-light (fir'lit), n. The light from a fire, as on a hearth.

fire-line (fir'lin), n. A strip of forest land cleared to prevent the spread of fire; also, a police cordon round the scene of a fire.

fire-lock (fir'lok), n. An old type of gun-lock, as a flintlock, which ignites the priming by means of sparks; a gun with such a gun-lock; a soldier armed with such a gun.

fire-man (fir'man), n.; pl. -men. A man employed to extinguish or prevent fires; also, a man employed to tend fires; a stoker.

fire-new (fir'nū'), a. Fresh from the fire or forge; hence, brand-new. See Shakspeare's "Richard III," i. 3. 256. [Archaic.] fire-o-pal (fir'ō'pal), n. In mineral., girasol.

fire-pink (fir'pink), n. A caryophyllaceous plant, Silene virginica, with brilliant scarlet flowers.

fire-place (fir'plās), n. That part of a chimney which opens into an apartment and in which fuel is burned; a hearth.

fire-proof (fir'prōf), a. Proof against fire; comparatively incombustible. — fire'proof, v. t. To render fireproof.

fire'proof'ing, n. Material for use in making anything fireproof.

fir-er (fir'ēr), n. One who fires, or sets on fire, treats with fire or heat, discharges a firearm, etc.; also, a firearm with reference to its firing (as, a single-firer; a rapid-firer).

fire-room (fir'rōm), n. A room containing a fireplace; also, a space in front of a furnace or steam-boiler, from which coal is supplied; also, a fire-box.

fire-ship (fir'ship), n. A vessel freighted with combustibles and explosives and set adrift to destroy an enemy's ships, etc.

fire-side (fir'sid), n. The side of a fireplace; the space about a fire or hearth, considered esp. as the place of a family's social enjoyment: as, "There is no fireside . . . But has one vacant chair" (Longfellow's "Resignation").

fire-stone (fir'stōn), n. A flint; also, iron pyrites; also, a fire-resisting stone, esp. a kind of sandstone used in fireplaces, furnaces, etc.

fire-tow-er (fir'tou'ēr), n. A tower with a beacon at its top, as for service as a lighthouse; also, a fireproof tower, or separately constructed tower-like portion of a building, with stairs, for use as a fire-escape.

fire-trap (fir'trap), n. A building in which, as from the material or arrangement of the structure, life is especially exposed to peril in case of fire.

fire-war-den (fir'wâr'dn), n. An officer having authority in the prevention or extinguishing of fires, as in towns or camps.

fire-wa-ter (fir'wâ'tēr), n. Strong liquor: a term used by American Indians.

fire-weed (fir'wēd), n. Any of various plants appearing in recently burned clearings or districts, as an asteraceous weed, Erechtites hieracifolia, of North America.

fire-wood (fir'wūd), n. Wood for fuel.

fire-work (fir'wērk), n. A combustible or explosive device for producing in combustion a striking display of light (sometimes a pictorial or ornamental design) or a loud noise, or to be used in signaling at night or for various other purposes, as in war (usually in pl.); pl., a pyrotechnic display.

fire-worm (fir'wērm), n. A glow-worm; also, the larva of an American tortricid (moth), Eudemis vacciniana, so injurious to cranberry-vines as to give them a burned appearance.

Fire-arrows, 14th and 15th centuries.

Fire-beetle (Pyrophorus noctilucus).

Firefly (Photuris pennsylvanica). — a, larva (line shows natural size); b, leg of larva, magnified; c, beetle.

fir-ing (fir'ing), n. The act of one who or that which fires; a setting on fire; a taking fire; exposure to heat, as in order to bake; the application of fire or of a cautery; the act or manner of supplying with fuel, or of tending a fire; the act of discharging a mine, firearm, etc.; also, material for a fire, or fuel (as, "I . . . brought home firing sufficient for the consumption of several days": Mrs. Shelley's "Frankenstein," xii.). —fir'ing=line*, n. Milit., the line along which troops are stationed to fire upon the enemy; the troops firing from this line. —fir'ing=par'ty*, n. A detachment of soldiers, marines, or sailors detailed to fire over the grave of a person buried with military honors, or to execute any person sentenced to death by shooting.

firk (fêrk), v. [AS. fercian, bring; perhaps akin to E. fare.] I. tr. To bring† or convey†; also, to move, drive, pull, etc., briskly or with a jerk; stir (up); also, to beat soundly; trounce. [Obs. or archaic or prov.] II. intr. To go quickly†; also, to move about briskly or in a jerky manner; stir about; poke about in something. [Obs. or prov.]

fir-kin (fêr'kin), n. [ME. ferdekyn, appar. a dim. form < D. vierde, fourth.] A measure of capacity, usually the fourth part of a barrel; also, a small wooden vessel for butter, etc.

firm (fêrm), a. [OF. F. ferme, < L. firmus, firm, stable, steadfast, strong.] Able or tending to maintain form or cohesion of substance (as, firm ground or snow; firm flesh; a firm jelly; a firm fabric; firm consistence or texture); comparatively solid, hard, stiff, or rigid; also, securely fixed in place, fast, or immovable (as, a candle firm in its socket; "Hope, as an anchor firm and sure, holds fast The Christian vessel, and defies the blast," Cowper's "Hope," 167); fixed, settled, or unalterable, as a belief or conviction, a decree, etc.; also, steady, or not shaking, trembling, quivering, etc. (as, a firm step, grasp, hand, or voice); not fluctuating or falling, as prices or the market; steadfast or unwavering, as persons or the purpose, resolution, principles, attachments, etc.; unflinching; resolute; constant. —firm, v. t. [OF. fermer, make firm, fix (F. close), < L. firmare, make firm, confirm, < firmus.] To make firm in substance or consistence; render more solid; also, to fix securely in place; make or hold fast; also, to establish, ratify, or confirm (obs. or archaic); sign (a document)†. —firm, n. [It. and Sp. firma, signature, < L. firmare, confirm, E. firm, v.] Signature†; also, the name or style under which associated persons do business; also, a partnership or association of two or more persons for carrying on a business; a commercial house.

fir-ma-ment (fêr'ma-mênt), n. [LL. firmentum, firmament, L. a support, prop, < L. firmare, E. firm, v.] The vault of heaven; the sky: now chiefly rhetorical or literary. —fir-ma-men'tal (mên'tal), a.

fir-man (fêr'man or fêr-mân'), n.; pl. -mans. [Pers. fermân.] An edict or order issued by an Oriental sovereign.

firm-ly (fêrm'li), adv. In a firm manner. —firm'ness, n.

firn (firn), n. [G., prop. adj., of last year.] Nêvé.

fir-ry (fêr'i), a. Of or pertaining to the fir; made of fir; abounding in firs (as, "in firry woodlands": Tennyson's "Miller's Daughter," 42).

first (fêrst), a. [AS. fyrst = OHG. furst (G. fürst, prince) = Icel. fyrstr, foremost, first; a superl. form akin to E. fore.] Being before all others with respect to time, order, rank, importance, etc.: used as the ordinal of one. —at first blush, at the first view; on first consideration. —at first hand, from the first or original source. —first aid, emergency aid or treatment given to persons suffering from accident, etc., before the services of a physician can be obtained. —first, n. That which or something that is first in time, order, rank, etc.; the beginning (as, at first, or at the first, at the beginning or outset; from the first, from the beginning or outset); the first part; the first member of a series; a place in the first or highest group in an examination for honors; the first place in a race, etc.; pl., the best quality of certain articles of commerce. —first, adv. Before all others or anything else in time, order, rank, etc. (as, "The good die first," Wordsworth's "Excursion," i. 500; "The consent of the historians . . . makes him, first and foremost, a legislator and administrator," Stubbs's "Constitutional Hist. of Eng.," xii. § 147); in the first place, or firstly (as, "First of all I would have them seriously think of the shortness of their time": Addison, in "Spectator," 89); also, before some other thing, event, etc., specified or implied (as, "Thou shalt not see my face, except thou first bring Michal Saul's daughter": 2 Sam. iii. 13); hence, in preference to something else, rather, or sooner (as, "Die? He'll bribe a gaoler or break prison first!" Browning's "Ring and the Book," x.); also, for the first time (as, "For as you were when first your eye I eyed, Such seems your beauty still": Shakspeare's "Sonnets," civ.). —first and last, at one time and another; altogether; in all. —first or last, at one time or another; sooner or later. —first=born'. I. a. First in the order of birth; eldest. II. n. One that is born first; a first-born child; fig., the first result or product. —first=class', a. Of the highest or best class or quality; first-rate. —first=fruit', n. The earliest fruit of the season; hence, the first product or result of anything; in feudal and eccles. law, the first year's income of a holding or benefice, formerly paid to some superior: usually in pl. —first=hand'. I. a. Of or pertaining to the first or original source; obtained directly from the original source, and not through an intermediate agency. II. adv. From the first or original source. —first'ling, n. The first of its kind to be produced or to appear; the first product or result; esp., the first offspring of an animal. —first'ly, adv. In the first place; first. —first=night'er, n. One who makes a practice of attending the theater on the nights of the first public performance of plays. —first=rate'. I. a. Of the first rate or class; hence, excellent; very good. II. adv. Excellently; very well. [Colloq.]

firth (fêrth), n. [Icel. fjörðr: see fiord, and cf. frith.] A narrow arm of the sea; a frith.

fisc (fisk), n. [F. fisc, < L. fiscus, basket, purse, treasury.] A royal or state treasury; an exchequer. —fis'cal. [L. fiscalis.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the public treasury or revenues; also, pertaining to financial matters in general; financial. II. n. In some countries, an official having the function of public prosecutor. —fis'cal-ly, adv.

fish¹ (fish), n. [F. fiche, peg, counter, < ficher, fix.] A counter used in various games.

fish² (fish), n.; pl. fishes or (esp. collectively) fish. [AS. fisc = D. visch = G. fisch = Icel. fiskr = Goth. fisks, fish; akin to L. piscis, fish.] In popular use, any animal that lives entirely in water (as, a shell-fish); specif., any of various cold-blooded, completely aquatic vertebrates (generally regarded as comprising the group or class Pisces), having gills, commonly fins, and typically an elongated body usually covered with scales; also, the flesh of fishes used as food; also, a fish-tackle; also, a long strip of wood, iron, etc., used to strengthen a mast, joint, etc.; pl. [cap.], the zodiacal constellation or sign Pisces ('the Fishes'). —fish², v. [AS. fiscian.] I. intr. To catch or attempt to catch fish, as by angling or drawing a net; also, to search for or attempt to lay hold on something under water, in mud, etc., by the use of a dredge, rake, hook, or the like; also, to seek to obtain something by artifice or indirectly (as, to fish for compliments). II. tr. To catch or attempt to catch (fish or the like); hence, to draw (up, out, etc.) as by fishing; specif., to hoist the flukes of (an anchor) up to the gunwale by means of a tackle; also, to try to catch fish in (a stream, etc.); search through as by fishing; also, to strengthen (a mast, joint, etc.) by a fish. —fish'a-ble, a. That may be fished in, as a stream. —fish'=ball, n. A fried ball or cake of shredded fish, esp. salt codfish, and mashed potato; a fish-cake. —fish'=bolt, n. A bolt which secures a fish-plate. —fish'=cake, n. A fish-ball.

fish-er (ûsh'êr), n. [AS. fiscere.] One who or that which fishes; a fisherman; an animal that catches fish for food; also, a kind of marten, Mustela pennanti, of a dark-brown or blackish color and a somewhat fox-like appearance, inhabiting the northern parts of North America;

Fisher (Mustela pennanti).

fat, fâte, fâr, fall, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hêr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, flect, agôny, intô, ûnite; (obscured) errant, operâ, ardent, actôr, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

its fur.—fish'er-man (-man), n.; pl. -men. One engaged in fishing, whether for profit or pleasure; an animal that catches fish; a vessel employed in fishing.—fish'er-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). The occupation or industry of catching fish or taking other products of the sea or streams from the water; also, a place where such an industry is regularly carried on; also, those engaged in fishing at such a place; a fishing establishment; also, a fishing venture; also, the right of fishing in certain waters.

fish=hawk (fish'hák), n. The osprey.

fish=hook (fish'húk), n. A hook used for catching fish; also, a hook used with a fish-tackle.

fish-i-fy (fish'i-fi), v. t.; -fied, -fying. [See -fy.] To change (flesh) to fish. See Shakspeare's "Romeo and Juliet," ii. 4. 40.

fish-i-ly (fish'i-li), adv. In a fishy manner.—fish'i-ness, n.

fish=joint (fish'joint), n. A joint formed by one or more rigid plates fastened to the side or sides of rails, beams, etc., meeting end to end: used esp. in connecting the rails of railroads.

fish-less (fish'les), a. Without fish.

fish-line (fish'lin), n. A line used in fishing.

fish-louse (fish'ious), n.; pl. -lice (-lis). Any of numerous small crustaceans parasitic on fishes.

fish-mong-er (fish'mung'ger), n. A dealer in fish.

fish-plate (fish'plat), n. One of the plates used in a fish-joint.

fish-slice (fish'slís), n. A kitchen implement with a broad, thin blade and a long handle, for turning fish in frying; also, a broad-bladed implement for serving fish at table.

fish=spear (fish'spēr), n. A spear or lance, often having more than one tine, for spearing fish through ice or from a boat.

fish=sto-ry (fish'stō'ri), n. An extravagant or incredible story or tale. [Colloq.]

fish-tack-le (fish'tak'li), n. The tackle used for fishing an anchor.

fish=tail (fish'tāl), a. Like a fish's tail in shape or action.

fish-way (fish'wā), n. An arrangement for enabling fish to ascend a fall or dam.

fish-wife (fish'wif), n.; pl. -wives (-wivz). A woman who sells fish. Also fish'wom'an; pl. -women (-wim'en).

fish-y (fish'i), a.; compar. fishier, superl. fishiest. Abounding in fish (as, "the fishy flood": Pope's tr. Homer's "Odyssey," iv.); also, consisting of fish (as, "fishy food": Pope's tr. Homer's "Odyssey," v.); also, fish-like in shape, smell, taste, etc.; dull and expressionless (as, fishy eyes); also, of questionable character (colloq.); improbable, as a story (colloq.). fis-sile (fis'il), a. [L. fissilis, < findere: see fission.] Capable of being split or divided; cleavable.—fis-sil-i-ty (fis'il'i-ti), n.

fis-sion (fis'ōn), n. [L. fissio(-n), < findere (pp. fissus), cleave, split: cf. -fid.] The act of cleaving or splitting into parts; in biol., the automatic division of a cell or organism into new cells or organisms as a process of reproduction; cell-division; sometimes, splitting or division in general, as of a chromatin granule.

fis-si-pal-mate (fis-i-pal'māt), a. [L. fissus, pp., cleft (see fission), + palma, palm: cf. palmate.] Semipalmate.

fis-sip-a-rous (fi sip'a-rus), a. [L. fissus, pp., cleft (see fission), + parere, bring forth.] Reproducing by fission.—fis-sip'a-rism (-rizm), fis-si-par-i-ty (fis-i-par'i-ti), n.

fis-si-ros-tral (fis-i-ros'tral), a. [L. fissus, pp., cleft (see fission), + rostrum, beak.] Having a broad, deeply cleft beak or bill, as the swallows, goatsuckers, and other birds; of the bill, deeply cleft. See cut in preceding column.

Fish-louse (Cymothoa oentis), upper and under views. (Line shows natural size.)

Fissirostral Bill of Goatsucker.

fis-sle (fis'li), v. i.; -sled, -sling. [Imit.] To rustle; also, to fidget. [Prov. Eng. and Sc.]

fis-sure (fis'hūr), n. [L. fissura, < findere: see fission.] A narrow opening produced by cleavage, or separation of parts; a cleft; also, the act of cleaving, or the state of being cleft; cleavage.—fis'sure, v. t. or i.; -sured, -suring. To make fissures in, or open in fissures; cleave; split.

fit¹ (fit), n. See fice.

fit² (fit), n. [AS. fȳst = D. vuist = G. faust, fist.] The hand closed tightly, with the fingers doubled into the palm, as for the purpose of striking, or in order to grasp or hold something; also, the hand (now colloq.); also, a person's handwriting (now colloq.); in printing, the index sign (☞).

—fit², v. t. To strike with the fist (as, "The boy would fit me hard": Tennyson's "Harold," i. 1); also, to grasp with the fist (as, "We have been down together . . . fisting each other's throat": Shakspeare's "Coriolanus," iv. 5. 131).

—fit²ed, a. Having fists: as, hard-fisted.—fis'tic, a. Of or pertaining to the fists; pugilistic. [Colloq.] fis-ti-cuff (fis'ti-kuf), n. A cuff or blow with the fist; pl., combat with the fists.—fis'ti-cuff, v. t. or i. To strike or fight with the fists.—fis'ti-cuff-er, n.

fis-tle (fis'l), v. i. See fissle.

fis-tu-la (fis'tū-lā), n.; pl. -las or -læ (-lē). [L., pipe, tube, reed, ulcer: cf. fester.] A reed or pipe; a tube; in pathol., a narrow passage or duct formed by disease or injury, as one leading from an abscess to a free surface, or one forming an abnormal means of communication with some normal cavity; in vet. science, any of various suppurative inflammations, as in the withers of a horse.—fis'tu-lar (-lār), fis'tu-lous, a. Tube-like; tubular; also, containing tubes or tube-like parts; in pathol., pertaining to or of the nature of a fistula.

fit¹ (fit), n. [AS. fitt, fight, struggle.] A sudden, acute attack or manifestation of a disease (as, a fit of gout, ague, or colic); also, a sudden morbid seizure characterized by loss of consciousness or by convulsions (as, a fainting-fit; an apoplectic fit; epileptic fits; to fall down in a fit); also, an attack of any physical disturbance (as, a fit of coughing, sneezing, or nosebleed); fig., an access, spell, or period of emotion or feeling, inclination, activity, idleness, etc.—by fits, or by fits and starts, by irregular spells; fitfully; intermittently.

fit² (fit), a.; compar. fitler, superl. fittest. [ME. fytt; origin uncertain: cf. feat².] Well adapted or suited by nature or character, as for a purpose, use, or occasion (as, a fit choice, plan, or opportunity; berries fit for food, or fit to be eaten; those fittest to survive in the struggle for existence); suitable; meet; often, suitable on grounds of propriety or right, worthy, or deserving (as, a story not fit to be repeated; fit to be hanged; not fit to live); proper, becoming, or right as a course of action (as, to do as one sees or thinks fit; "Is it fit to say to a king, Thou art wicked?" Job, xxxiv. 18); also, suitable by reason of qualifications, abilities, etc., as for a position, office, or function; qualified or competent; also, in a suitable condition, prepared, or ready (as, crops fit for gathering; men fit for active service); in good physical condition, as an athlete, a race-horse, military troops, etc.; hence, in general, in good health (colloq.); also, in a condition, ready, or inclined, to do something specified (now chiefly colloq.: as, to be fit to explode with wrath); also, of the right size or shape, as a garment.—fit², v.; fitted, fitting. I. tr. To be adapted or suited to (a purpose, object, occasion, etc.); be suitable or meet for; accord with; also, to be proper, becoming, or right for (as, "It *fitte*th not a prelate so to plead": Shakspeare's "1 Henry VI," iii. 1. 57); become; befit; also, to be of the right size or shape for (as, garments that fit the wearer; a key that fits the lock); conform to in a specified way in adjustment (as, this coat fits the figure loosely); also, to adapt or suit to a purpose, object, etc. (as, "We'll fit him to our turn": Shakspeare's "Taming of the Shrew," iii. 2. 134); also, to render qualified or competent (as, qualities that fit one for leadership; his learning fits him to speak on the subject); also, to bring to a suitable condition, or prepare (as, this school fits students for college); also, to conform, adjust, or apply with exact conformity, to something (as, to fit a dress to the figure; to fit a ring to the finger or a cork to a bottle); put (in, into, on, over, together, etc.) with nice adjustment; also, to supply suitably with something specified (as, to fit one with gloves; to fit a door with a new handle); provide, furnish, or equip; furnish with clothing, equipments, furniture, fixtures, or other requisites (usually with out or up: as, to fit out a person for a hunting trip; to fit up a house). II. intr. To be fit or suitable (now chiefly as in fitting, p. a.); accord or agree (with)†; also, to be proper, becoming, or right (now chiefly as in fitting, p. a.); also, to be of the right size or shape, as a garment for the wearer or any object or part for a thing to which it is applied; conform (to) when worn or applied (as "Gown'd in pure white, that fitted to the shape . . . she stood": Tennyson's "Gardener's Daughter," 125); go (in, into, on, etc.) with nice adjustment.—fit², n. The process or a process of fitting, adapting, preparing, adjusting, etc.; also, the manner in which a thing fits (as, the fit of a coat; the fit of a wheel on the axle; a loose, tight, poor, or perfect fit); often, a good or satisfactory manner of fitting; also, something that fits in a manner indicated (as, the coat is a poor fit; the ring is a good fit); often, something that fits well (as, this coat is a fit).

fit³, fyttē (fit), n. [AS. fit.] A division of a song poem, or story. [Archaic.]

fitch¹ (fich), n. Same as vetch. [Now prov.]

fitch² (fich), n. [MD. fisse, visse, vitsche, polecat: cf. fitchew.] The European polecat, Putorius fadidus, or its fur; also, a fitch-brush.—fitch²-brush, n. A small brush made of the hair of the fitch, or sometimes of the hog: used for painting, etc.—fitch²/et (-et), n. Same as fitch².

fitch-ew (fich'ō), n. [OF. fichaw, also fissel, a dim. form connected with MD. fisse, visse: see fitch².] The fitch, or European polecat; also, its fur.

fit-ful (fit'fūl), a. Characterized by or occurring in fits or occasional attacks, as a disease (archaic: as, "After life's fitful fever he sleeps well," Shakspeare's "Macbeth," iii. 2. 23); hence, in general, coming, appearing, acting, etc., by spells (as, fitful gusts, gleams, or sounds; fitful conversation; fitful impulses or zeal); irregularly intermittent.—fit-ful-ly, adv.—fit-ful-ness, n.

fit-ly (fit'li), adv. In a fit manner; also, at a fit time.

fit-ment (fit'mēt), n. That with which something is fitted or furnished; dress† or equipment† (see Shakspeare's "Cymbeline," v. 5. 409); a fitting, fixture, or the like, as of a house (often in pl.); also, that which is fitting for one† (see Shakspeare's "Pericles," iv. 6. 6).

fit-ness (fit'nes), n. The state or quality of being fit.

fit-tor (fit'er), n. One who or that which fits; one who fits articles of dress on persons; one who fits together or adjusts the parts of machinery; one who supplies and fixes fittings or fixtures (as, a gas-fitter); one who furnishes or equips with whatever is necessary for some purpose.

fit-ters (fit'erz), n. pl. [Origin obscure: cf. flitters and frutter².] Fragments; bits; shreds. [Obs. or prov. Eng.]

fit-ting (fit'ing), n. The act of one who or that which fits; also, anything with which something is fitted by way of furnishing, equipping, completing, etc.; pl., furnishings, fixtures, or the like (as, fittings for an office; gas-fittings).—fit-ting, p. a. That fits; suitable or appropriate; proper or becoming.—fit-ting-ly, adv.—fit-ting-ness, n.

fitz (fits), n. [AF., for OF. fiz, filz (F. filz), < L. filius, son.] A son: now occurring only as an element in certain surnames, as Fitzgerald ('son of Gerald'). Some such surnames were given specifically to illegitimate sons and daughters of kings or princes: as, Henry Fitzroy ('son of the king'), son of Charles II. and the Countess of Castlemaine; Lady Mary Fitzclarence, daughter of the Duke of Clarence (afterward William IV.) and Mrs. Jordan.

five (fiv), a. [AS. fif = D. vijf = G. fünf = Icel. fimm = Goth. fimf, five; akin to L. quinque, Gr. πέντε, Skt. pañca, five.] One more than four.—Five Nations, a powerful confederacy of Iroquoian Indians comprising the Mohawks, Oneidas, Onondagas, Cayugas, and Senecas, prominent in American history.—five, n. A number composed of five units, or a symbol, as 5 or v, representing it; a set of five persons or things; a playing-card, die-face, etc., with five pips.—five-fin'ger (-fing'gēr), n. Any of certain species of potentilla with leaves of five leaflets, as Potentilla canadensis; also, the Virginia creeper, Parthenocissus quinquefolia; also, a starfish with five rays.—five-fold (-fōld). I. a. Comprising five parts or members; five times as great or as much. II. adv. In fivefold measure.—five-pence (fiv'pens or fip'ēns), n. A sum of money of the value of five English pennies, or about 10 U. S. cents.—five-pen-ny (fiv'pe-ni or fip'e-ni), a. Of the amount or value of fivepence.—five-er (fiv'er), n. A five-dollar bill or a five-pound note; also, anything that counts as five. [Colloq.]-fives (fivz), n. [Orig. pl. of five, n.] An English game, of two varieties, similar to handball.—fives=court, n. A court where the game of fives is played.

fix (fiks), v. [L. fixus, pp. of figere, fix, fasten, drive in, pierce.] I. tr. To make fast, firm, or stable; place, attach, or insert so as to secure against displacement (as, to fix bayonets, to attach them to the end of the barrel of muskets or rifles); fasten; fig.; to implant firmly, as principles, etc.; put or place (responsibility, blame, etc.) on a person; also, to make constant or steadfast; render unchangeable in purpose or conviction (as, "I am fix'd, not to part hence without him": Milton's "Samson Agonistes," 1481); also, to direct (the eyes, the attention, etc.) steadily or unwaveringly; look at with a steady gaze (as, to fix a person with one's eyes); attract and hold (the eye, the attention, etc.); render set or rigid, as the countenance in death; hold spellbound; also, to render (a substance, dye, color, etc.) stable or more permanent by decreasing or destroying its volatility, fluidity, solubility, softness, or the like, through chemical combination, cold, etc.; make (a photographic negative, positive, image, etc.) permanent by chemical treatment, etc.; also, to place definitely and more or less permanently; set or station; install (a person) in a position; establish (a person) in a place of residence; also, to assign or refer to a definite place, time, etc.; settle definitely, or determine (as, to fix the amount of an appropriation); settle or determine the form of (a language, etc.); put into permanent form (as, to fix one's thoughts on paper); also, to put into due condition; put in order; adjust or arrange; repair; also, to arrange matters with, or with respect to, esp. privately or dishonestly, so as to secure favorable action (colloq.: as, to fix a jury; to fix a series of baseball games); also, to put in a condition or position to make no further trouble (colloq.); get even with (colloq.). II. intr. To become fixed; become firmly attached or implanted; become steadily directed, as the eyes or the attention; become set, as the features; assume a rigid or solid form; become stable or permanent; also, to settle down; take up a position, esp. a permanent one; also, to settle one's choice, or decide (on or upon: as, to fix on a time).—fix, n. A position from which it is difficult to escape; a predicament; a bad plight: as, "If we get left on this wreck we are in a fix" (Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn," xiii.).—fix-a-ble, a. Capable of being fixed.

fix-ate (fik'sāt), v.; -ated, -ating. [Appar. a back-formation from fixation.] I. tr. To fix; render stable, as a sensation; determine the position of, as a star. II. intr. To become fixed.

fix-a-tion (fik-sā'shōn), n. [ME., < ML. fixatio(n), < fixare, freq. of L. figere: see fix.] The act of fixing, or the state of being fixed; establishment in a fixed, stable, or permanent position or condition; reduction from a volatile or fluid to a stable or solid form; a rendering fast or unfading, as of colors.—fix-a-tive (fik'sā-tiv), I. a. Serving to fix; making fixed or permanent. II. n. A fixative substance, as a mordant for fixing colors.

fixed (fikst), p. a. Made fast or firm; firmly implanted (as, a fixed idea: see below); set or intent upon something, as the mind; steadily directed, as the gaze; set or rigid, as the countenance in death; non-volatile, or not easily volatilized (as, a fixed oil: see below); rendered stable or permanent, as color; definitely and permanently placed, or stationary (as, the fixed stars: see star, n.); definitely assigned or appointed, or not fluctuating or varying (as, fixed charges); put in order; arranged with, or arranged, privately or dishonestly (colloq.).—fixed idea, a persistent or obsessing idea, often delusional, which the subject cannot escape; specif., a delusional idea which dominates the mind in certain forms of insanity.—fixed oil, any of a group of non-volatile or not easily volatilized natural oils, as lard-oil, linseed-oil, etc., fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

occurring in the cellular membranes, etc., of animals, and in the seeds, capsules, etc., of plants.—fix-ed-ly (fik'sed-li), adv.—fix'ed-ness, n.

fix-er (fik'sèr), n. One who or that which fixes.—fix'ing, n. The act of one who or that which fixes; the process by which anything is fixed; pl. (colloq.), appliances; trimmings.

fix-i-ty (fik'si-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [= F. fixité.] The state or quality of being fixed; stability; permanence; also, something fixed.

fix-ture (fiks'tūr), n. [For fixure.] The act of fixing, or the state of being fixed (now rare); also, something securely fixed in position; an appendage, or part of the equipment, of a house, etc., permanently attached to it (as, a gas-fixture); also, a person or thing long established in the same place or position; also, a fixed or appointed time or event, as a date set for a race, or the race itself; in law, a personal chattel annexed to real property.

fix-ure (fik'sūr), n. [LL. fixura, < L. figere: see fix.] Fixed position or condition. See Shakspeare's "Troilus and Cressida," i. 3. 101. [Obs. or archaic.] fix-gig (fiz'gig), n. [Cf. fizz and gig.] A frivolous, gadding girl or woman (as, "My husband . . . prefers to me . . . this fixgig called Fiffine!" Browning's "Fifine at the Fair," xxxiii.); also, a kind of hissing firework; also, a fish-spear.

fizz, fiz (fiz), v. i. [Imit.] To make a hissing or sputtering sound.—fizz, fiz, n. A hissing sound; effervescence; spirit or go (colloq.); an effervescent drink, as champagne (colloq.).

fiz-zle (fiz'zle), v. i.; -zled, -zling. [Imit.: cf. fizz and fizzle.] To make a hissing or sputtering sound, esp. one that dies out weakly; hence (colloq.), to fail ignominiously after a more or less brilliant start; come to a lame conclusion; fail.—fiz'zle, n. A fizzling, hissing, or sputtering (as, "The chicken and ham had a cheerful and joyous fizzle in the pan": Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," xiii.); also (colloq.), a fiasco; a failure.

fiz-zy (fiz'zi), a.; compar. fizzier, superl. fizziest. That fizzes; fizzing.

fjeld (fyeld), n. [Norw.: cf. fell.] A high, almost barren plateau on the Scandinavian range.

fjord (fyórd), n. See fiord.

flab-ber-gast (flab'èr-gast), v. t. [Origin obscure: cf. flabby or flap and aghast.] To overcome with surprise and bewilderment; astound: as, "The aldermen . . . were what is sometimes emphatically styled flabbergasted; they were speechless from bewilderment" (Disraeli's "Coningsby," v. 3). [Colloq.]

flab-by (flab'i), a.; compar. flabbier, superl. flabbiest. [For earlier flappy, < flap.] Hanging loosely or limply, as flesh, muscles, etc., or having such flesh, as persons or animals; flaccid; fig., lacking firmness, force, pith, etc., as character or persons, principles, utterances, etc.; feeble.—flab'bi-ly, adv.—flab'bi-ness, n.

fla-bel-late (fla-bel'at), a. [See flagellum.] Fan-shaped. Also fla-bel'li-form (-bel'i-fôrm).

fla-bel-lum (fla-bel'um), n.; pl. flabella (-ä). [L., fan, < flare, blow.] A fan, esp. one used in religious ceremonies; also, a fan-shaped part.

flac-cid (flak'sid), a. [L. flaccidus, < flacus, flabby.] Drooping or hanging loosely, as from want of stiffness or firmness of substance (as, a balloon becomes flaccid with the escape of its gas; "Flaccid threads of ivy, in the still And sultry air, depending motionless," Wordsworth's "To Lycoris"); flabby, as flesh; limp, as garments; fig., lacking firmness, force, etc.; feeble.—flac-cid'i-ty (-sid'i-ti), flac'cid-ness, n.—flac'cid-ly, adv.

flache-rie (flash-rè), n. [F.] A disease of silkworms.

fla-con (fla-kôn), n. [F.: see flagon.] A small bottle or flask with a stopper.

flag¹ (flag), v.; flagged, flagging. [Appar. a later form of ME. flacken, flap, flutter, = Icel. flaka, flap, hang loose.] I. intr. To hang loosely or limply, as sails, wings, etc.; become limp or flaccid; droop, as plants; hence, to fall off in vigor, energy, activity, etc. (as, dogs flagging in the chase; the conversation flags; the zeal, attention, or imagination flags); grow languid; slacken; fail, as the spirits; fall off in interest, as a diversion. II. tr. To droop (the wings, etc.); also, to cause or allow to fall off in vigor, activity, etc. (obs. or archaic).

flag² (flag), n. [= D. vlag = Dan. flag = Sw. flagg = G. flagge; appar. recorded first in Eng.: cf. *flag*¹.] A piece of cloth, commonly bunting, of varying size, shape, color, and device, usually attached by one edge to a staff or cord, and used as an ensign, standard, symbol, signal, etc. (as, the flag of a nation, state, or city; a military or naval flag; a Red Cross flag; the flag of a yacht club; a danger flag; a weather flag; the black flag of pirates; the red flag of socialists; the white flag, used in token of truce, surrender, etc.; the yellow flag of quarantine); also, something resembling a flag, as the tail of a deer or of a setter dog.—Flag Day, June 14, as the anniversary of the day (June 14, 1777) when Congress adopted the Stars and Stripes as the national emblem of the United States of America: now widely observed with patriotic exercises.—flag of truce, milit., a white flag displayed as an invitation to the enemy to confer, or carried as a sign of peaceful intention by one sent to communicate with the enemy.—flag², v. t.; flagged, flagging. To place a flag or flags over or on; decorate with flags; also, to signal or warn (a person, etc.), or communicate (information), by means of a flag; also, to decoy, as game, by waving a flag or the like to excite attention or curiosity.

flag³ (flag), n. [ME. flagge; origin uncertain.] Any of various plants with long, sword-shaped leaves, as the sweet-flag (which see) or, esp., a plant of the genus Iris, as I. versicolor or I. prismatica (both known as 'blue flag'); also, the long, slender leaf of such a plant or of a cereal.

flag⁴ (flag), n. [ME. flagge, a turf: cf. Icel. flag, spot where a turf has been cut out, flaga, flag or slab of stone.] A flat slab of stone used for paving, etc.; a flagstone; pl., a walk paved with such slabs.—flag⁴, v. t.; flagged, flagging. To lay or pave with flags.

fla-gel-la (fla-jel'ä), n. Plural of flagellum.

fla-gel-lant (flaj'e-lant), [L. flagellans (-ant-), ppr. of flagellare: see flagellate.] I. a. Flagellating; scourging. II. n. One who flagellates; usually, one who flagellates or scourges himself for religious discipline; esp. [l. c. or cap.], one of a medieval European sect of fanatics that practised scourging in public.

fla-gel-late¹ (flaj'e-lät), a. [See flagellum.] Having flagella; also, flagelliform.

fla-gel-late² (flaj'e-lät), v. t.; -lated, -lating. [L. flagellatus, pp. of flagellare, < flagellum, a whip, scourge: see flagellum.] To whip; scourge; flog; lash.—fla-gel-la'tion (-lä'shən), n.—fla-gel-la-tor, n.

fla-gel-li-form (fla-jel'i-fôrm), a. [L. flagellum, a whip: see -form.] Long, slender, and flexible, like the lash of a whip.

fla-gel-lum (fla-jel'um), n.; pl. flagella (-ä). [L., a whip, scourge, dim. of flagrum, a whip.] A whip or lash; in bot., a runner; in biol., a long, lash-like appendage serving as an organ of locomotion in certain reproductive bodies, bacteria, protozoa, etc.

fla-go-let (flaj-ō-let' or flaj'ō-let), n. [F., dim. of OF. flageol, flajol, flute.] A small wind-instrument of the flute type, having a tubular mouthpiece at one end, six or more holes, and sometimes keys.

fla-ging¹ (flag'ing), p. a. Drooping; failing.

fla-ging² (flag'ing), n. Flagstones collectively; a pavement of flagstones.

fla-gy¹ (flag'i), a. Flagging; drooping; limp.

fla-gy² (flag'i), a. Abounding in, consisting of, or resembling the plants called flags.

fla-gy³ (flag'i), a. Pertaining to flags or flagstone; having a structure like flagstone; laminate.

Papal Flabellum.

Liturgical Flabellum.

Flageolet.

flag-i-tate (flaj'i-tāt), v. t.: -tated, -tating. [L. flagitatus, pp. of flagitare, demand, entreat, akin to flagrare, burn: see flagrant.] To entreat earnestly; importune. [Obs. or rare.]

fla-gi-tious (fla-jish'us), a. [L. flagitiosus, < flagitium, a shameful act or thing.] Shamefully wicked, as persons, actions, life, character, times, etc.; heinous or flagrant, as crime; infamous.—fla-gi'tious-ly, adv.—fla-gi'tious-ness, n.

flag-man (flaj'man), n.; pl. -men. One who has charge of or carries a flag; one who signals with a flag, as at a railroad-crossing.

flag-of-fi-cer (flaj'of'i-sēr), n. A naval officer, as an admiral, vice-admiral, or rear-admiral, entitled to display a flag indicating his rank; an officer in command of a fleet, squadron, or group of ships.

flag-on (flaj'on), n. [OF. F. flacon, < ML. flasco(n): see flask.] A large bottle for wine, etc.; also, a vessel for holding liquids, as for use at table, esp. one with a handle, a spout, and usually a cover.

fla-grant (flā'grant), a. [L. flagrans (flagrant-), pp. of flagrare, blaze, burn, akin to Gr. φλέγειν, burn.] Blazing, burning, or glowing (now rare: as, a flagrant brand); fig., ardent or fervent (now rare: as, "He burns with most intense and flagrant zeal To serve his country," Cowper's "Task," iii. 794); also, glaring, notorious, or scandalous, as an offense or an offender (as, "You're an old, flagrant heathen": Synge's "Tinker's Wedding," i.); conspicuous in a reprehensible way; also, actually going on, or in progress (a Latinism: as, in flagrant war, L. flagrante bello); also, red from blows† (as, "flagrant from the scourge": Pope's "Dunciad," ii. 148).—fla-grance, fla-gran-cy, n.—fla-grant-ly, adv.

flag-ship (flaj'ship), n. The ship which bears the flag-officer of a fleet, squadron, or the like, and displays his flag.

flag-staff (flaj'stáf), n. A staff or pole on which a flag is displayed.

flag-station (flaj'stā'shən), n. A railroad-station where trains stop only when a signal is displayed.

flag-stone (flaj'stōn), n. A flat slab of stone used for paving, etc.; a flag; pl., a walk paved with such slabs; sing., rock, such as sandstone, shale, etc., which can be split up into such slabs.

flail (flāl), n. [ME. flegl, flayel, in part through OF. flaie (F. fléau), < LL. flagellum, flail, L. whip, scourge; see flagellum.] An instrument for threshing grain by hand, consisting of a staff or handle to one end of which is attached a freely swinging stick or bar; also, a weapon resembling this in construction or action.—flail, v. t. To strike with or as with a flail; thresh.

flair (flār), n. [F., < flairer, smell, scent, OF. flairier, emit an odor, < L. fragrare: see fragrant, and cf. flavor.] Power of detecting as by smell; scent; keen perception.

flake¹ (flāk), n. [ME. flake, fleke: cf. Icel. flaki, fleki, hurdle, wickerwork shield, = D. vlaak, hurdle.] A hurdle, esp. a wattled hurdle (prov. Eng. and Sc.); also, a frame, rack, or stage, esp. one for drying fish.

flake² (flāk), n. [ME. flake: cf. Icel. flōki, felt, hair, wool, and E. *flock*², also *flaw*² and *flay*².] A small, loosely cohering piece or mass, as of falling snow or of cloud; a small detached bit of burning matter; a scale, or a small, flat ex-foliated particle; a thin piece split off from the surface of anything; a stratum or layer; a loose sheet of ice; a lock of hair (archaic); among florists, a carnation whose petals have a white or yellow ground marked by stripes of a single color (as, a purple flake, one striped with purple).—flake², v.; flaked, flaking. I. intr. To fall in flakes, as snow; fall like flakes of snow; also, to peel off or separate in flakes. II. tr. To cover with or as with flakes of snow; fleck; also, to form into flakes; also, to remove in flakes; also, to break flakes or chips from.—flak-or (flā'kēr), n. One who or that which flakes; esp., one who strikes off flakes of flint for use in flintlocks.—flake'=white', n. Pure white lead in the form of flakes or scales, used as a pigment.—flak'y, a.; compar. flakier, superl. flakiest. Consisting of flakes; also, lying, or cleaving off, in flakes or layers; flake-like.—flak'i-ly, adv.—flak'i-ness, n.

flam¹ (flam), n. [Origin uncertain: cf. flimflam.] A fanciful notion or composition†; also (now prov. or colloq.), a fabrication or falsehood; a deception or trick; a humbug (as,

"They told me . . . about liberty and property . . . and I find it is all a flam": Godwin's "Caleb Williams," xxvi.).—flam¹, v. t.; flammed, flamming. To deceive by a flam; delude; cheat. [Now prov. or colloq.]

flam² (flam), n. [Prob. imit.] A drum-beat made by striking the drum with the two sticks almost at the same instant, but so as to produce separate sounds.

flam-beau (flam'bō), n.; pl. -beaux (-bōz). [F., < OF. flambe: see flame.] A flaming torch; a torch for use at night in illuminations, processions, etc.; also, a large decorated candlestick, as of bronze.

flam-boy-ant (flam-boi'ant), a. [F., ppr. of flamboyer, to flame, flare, < OF. flambe: see flame.] Flaming, flaring, or gorgeous (as, flamboyant red hair; flamboyant colors or dress); showily striking (as, "that flamboyant but egotistical figure Alexander the Great": H. G. Wells's "Outline of History," xxxiv. § 3); also, florid or ornate (as, flamboyant rhetoric); also, of wavy form, like the outline of flame, as the blades of some swords; in arch., noting or pertaining to the highly ornate Gothic style prevalent in France during the 15th and 16th centuries, characterized esp. by wavy, flame-like tracery in the windows.—flam-boy-ance, flam-boy-an-cy, n.—flam-boy-ant-ly, adv.

flame (flām), n. [OF. flame, flambe (F. flamme), < L. flamma, flame, perhaps akin to flagrare, blaze, burn: see flagrant.] Burning gas or vapor, as from wood, etc., undergoing combustion; a portion of ignited gas or vapor; pl., with the, fire, with reference to destruction or death by burning (as, to commit a thing to the flames; condemned to the flames); also, sing. or pl., the state or condition of blazing combustion (as, to set in flame; to burst into flames); hence, any flame-like condition; glow; inflamed condition; also, sing., something resembling flame or a flame; bright light (as, "The moon began To show her silver flame": Longfellow's "Spanish Student," iii. 5); a beam of light; bright coloring; a streak or patch of color; also, fig., heat or ardor, as of zeal or passion; a burning feeling of love (as, "Ah youth ungrateful to a flame like mine!" Pope's "Sappho to Phaon," 20); hence, an object of the passion of love (as, she was an old flame of his).—flame, v.; flamed, flaming. [OF. flamer, < L. flammare, < flamma.] I. intr. To burn with a flame or flames; burst into flames; blaze; fig., to burn as with flame, as passion; break into open anger, indignation, etc. (with out or up); also, to glow like flame; shine brilliantly; flash. II. tr. To burn†; also, to inflame†; also, to subject to the action of flame or fire; also, to send forth by flaming.—flame'=col'or, n. A vivid reddish-orange color.—flame'=col'ored, a.—flame'less, a. Without flame.—flame'let, n. A little flame.

fla-men (flā'men), n.; pl. flamens, L. flamines (flam'i-nēz). [L.] In Rom. antiq., a priest devoted to the service of one particular deity.

flame-throw-er (flām'thrō'ēr), n. [Tr. G. flammenwerfer.] An apparatus for shooting forth streams of fire at the enemy in warfare; esp., a portable device for this purpose, consisting of a tank containing oil and a compressed gas, to which is attached a pipe with nozzles, the tank being carried by a soldier on his back with the nozzles held in his hands, and the oil being sent forward to a distance in the form of spray and there ignited.

flam-ing (flā'ming), p. a. Emitting flames; blazing; fiery; also, glowing like flame; brilliant; very bright; hence, extravagant (as, "I had heard some flaming stories of Captain Avery": Defoe's "Captain Singleton," xi.); glaring; also, flamboyant, as a blade.—flam-ing-ly, adv.

Bronze Flambeau, Florence.

Flamboyant Tracery, Rouen Cathedral, Normandy.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; then, then; y, you;

fla-min-go (fla-ming'gō), n.; pl. -gos or -goes (-gōz). [Pg. flamingo = Sp. flamenco, < L. flamma, E. flame.] Any of the aquatic birds constituting the genus Phanicopterus, of tropical and semitropical regions, with very long neck and legs, webbed feet, and pinkish to scarlet plumage.

flam-ma-ble (flam'a-bl), a. [L. flammare, E. flame, v.] Inflammable.

flam-mu-lat-ed (flam'ū-lā-ted), a. [L. flammula, dim. of flamma, E. flame.] In ornith., reddish; ruddy.

flam-y (flā'mi), a. Pertaining to, consisting of, or resembling flame: as, "And look! that flash of flamy wings, —The fire-plumed oriole!" (Holmes's "After a Lecture on Wordsworth").

flâne-rie (flān-rē), n. [F., < flâner, stroll, lounge.] Strolling; lounging; idling. —flâ-neur (flā-nēr), n. [F.] A stroller or lounge; an idler.

flange (flanj), n. [Cf. flank.] A projecting rim, collar, edge, ridge, or the like, on an object, for keeping it in place, attaching it to another object, strengthening it, etc. — flange, v.; flanged, flanging. I. intr. To project like, or take the form of, a flange. II. tr. To furnish with a flange.

flank (flangk), n. [OF. F. flanc; prob. from Teut.] The side of an animal or a human being between the ribs and hip; the thin piece of flesh constituting this part; also, the side of anything, as of a building; the extreme right or left side of an army or fleet, or of a subdivision of an army or fleet; in fort., the right or left side of a work or fortification; also, a part of a work that defends another work by a fire along the outside of its parapet; esp., the part of a bastion which extends from the curtain to the face and protects the curtain, opposite face, etc. — flank, v. I. tr. To stand, or be posted, at the flank or side of; also, to defend or guard at the flank; also, to menace or attack the flank of; also, to pass round the flank of. II. intr. To occupy a position at the flank or side; also, to present the flank or side. — flank'er, n. One who or that which flanks; milit., one of a body of skirmishers employed on the flank of an army to guard a line of march; in fort., a fortification projecting so as to defend another work, or to command the flank of an assailing body.

flan-nel (flan'el), n. [Origin uncertain.] A warm, soft woolen fabric in many varieties, used for clothing, bed-coverings, etc.; a similar fabric made of cotton (as, outing flannel, outing cloth; Canton flannel, a strong cotton cloth with a long, soft nap, usually on one side only); pl., outer garments made of the woolen fabric, as for boating, tennis, etc.; also, woolen undergarments. — flan'nel, v. t.; -neled or -nelled, -neling or -nelling. To cover or clothe with flannel; also, to rub with flannel: chiefly in flanneled, flannelled, pp. — flan-nel-ette' (-et'), n. A light cotton flannel; outing cloth. — flan'nel-ly, a. Of or like flannel.

flap (flap), v.; flapped, flapping. [ME. flappen; prob. imit.] I. intr. To strike a sudden blow†; esp., to strike a blow with something broad and flexible; also, to fall or plump down suddenly, esp. with noise (colloq.); also, to swing or sway loosely, as in the wind; make a noise in doing this, as when striking against something else; also, to move up and down, as wings; flap the wings, or make similar movements. II. tr. To strike with a sudden blow (now prov.); esp., to strike with something broad and flexible (as, "Yet let me flap this bug with gilded wings": Pope's "Prologue to the Satires," 309); also, to toss, fold, shut, etc., smartly, roughly, or noisily (colloq.); also, to cause to swing or sway loosely, esp. with noise; also, to move (wings, etc.) up and down; also, to pull down the flap or flaps of (a hat); also, to provide (a hat, etc.) with a flap or flaps. — flap, n. A stroke† or blow†; esp., a blow given with something broad and flexible; also, the motion of anything broad and loose; a flapping motion; the noise produced by something that flaps; also, something broad and flexible, or flat and thin, that hangs loosely, attached at one side only (as, a flap of a hat or a pocket; a flap of a table, a hinged leaf hanging loosely); hence, anything broad and flexible; a broad, flat piece of any material; in surg., a portion of skin or flesh separated from the underlying part, but remaining attached to adjoining tissue at the base; also, a piece of skin or flesh grafted on an injured or other part.

Red Flamingo (Phanicopterus ruber).

Various forms of Flanges.

flap-doo-dle (flap'dō'dl), n. [Cf. flap and doodle.] Something on which fools are supposed to be nourished (as, "It's my opinion . . . that the gentleman has eaten no small quantity of flap-doodle": Marryat's "Peter Simple," xxviii.); food for fools; hence, specious nonsense, bosh, or humbug (as, "a speech, all full of tears and flapdoodle about its being a sore trial for him": Mark Twain's "Huckleberry Finn," xxv.). [Colloq.]

flap-drag-on (flap'drag'ŋn), n. An old game in which the players snatch raisins, plums, etc., out of burning brandy, and eat them; the object so caught and eaten.

flap-eared (flap'ēr), a. Having broad, loose, flapping ears: as, "A . . . flap-ear'd knave!" (Shakspeare's "Taming of the Shrew," iv. 1. 160).

flap-jack (flap'jak), n. [Cf. slapjack.] A griddle-cake. See Shakspeare's "Pericles," ii. 1. 87.

flap-mouthed (flap'mou'nd), a. Having loose, hanging lips, as a dog. See Shakspeare's "Venus and Adonis," 920.

flap-per (flap'ēr), n. One who or that which flaps; something broad and flat for striking with, or for making a noise by striking; something flat and loose; a broad fin or flipper; the hand (slang); a young bird, esp. a wild duck, when first trying its wings or just able to fly; a young, half-grown girl, often one who is extreme in dress, speech, etc. (colloq.).

flare (flār), v.; flared, flaring. [Origin uncertain.] I. intr. To spread or stream out, as the hair, head-dress, etc.† (as, "Quaint in green she shall be loose enrobed, With ribands pendent, flaring 'bout her head": Shakspeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," iv. 6. 42); also, to burn with an unsteady, swaying flame, as a torch or candle in the wind; blaze with a sudden burst of flame, as a fire or something burning (often with up); flame; fig., to start up or burst out in sudden, fierce activity, passion, etc. (usually with up or out: as, the persecutions flared up afresh; to flare up or out in anger); also, to shine or glow like flame (as, "The blood-red light of dawn Flared on her face": Tennyson's "Lancelot and Elaine," 1019); be glaringly bright or showy (used esp. as in flaring, p. a.); also, to spread gradually outward in form toward the edge or rim, as the bell-shaped end of a trumpet or the walls of a basin; incline outward from a perpendicular, as a ship's sides or bows. II. tr. To spread out (the hair)†; also, to wave or flourish (something) in the air; display conspicuously or ostentatiously; also, to cause (a candle, etc.) to burn with a swaying flame; signal by flares of fire or light; light up (the sky, etc.) as with flame; also, to cause (something) to spread gradually outward in form. — flare, n. The act or the effect of flaring; a flaring or swaying flame or light, as of torches in the wind; a sudden blaze or burst of flame; a sudden blaze of fire or light used as a signal or for illumination or guidance, or a combustible for burning to produce such a blaze; fig., a sudden burst, as of zeal or of temper; also, glaring brightness or show; glare; also, a gradual spread outward in form; in photog., a spot of light (as the image of the diaphragm) cast by the lens of a camera on the plate, etc. — flare'-back, n. A blast of flame which sometimes issues from the breech of a large gun or cannon when it is opened after firing; fig., an outburst of something coming back (as, a flare-back of winter). — flare'=up, n. A sudden flaring up of flame or light; fig., a sudden outburst of anger (colloq.). — flar-ing (flār'ing), p. a. That flares; flaming; glaringly bright or showy; spreading gradually outward in form. — flar-ing-ly, adv.

flash (flash), v. [ME. flaschen; prob. imit.] I. intr. To dash or splash, as the sea or waves (now rare: as, "The tortured wave . . . Now flashes o'er the scattered fragments," Thomson's "Seasons," Summer, 601); also, to break forth into sudden flame or light, esp. transiently or intermittently; hence, to burst suddenly into view or perception (as, a thing flashes upon one's sight, or into one's mind); move like a flash (as, "Bear me to thine abode When desolation flashes o'er a world destroyed": Shelley's "Hellas," 956); break into sudden action (as, "Every hour He flashes into one gross crime or other": Shakspeare's "King Lear," i. 3. 4); make a flash or sudden display (now colloq. or slang). II. tr. To dash or splash (water: obs. or rare: as, "With his raging arms he rudely flashed The waves about," Spenser's "Faerie Queene," ii. 6. 42); also, to increase the flow of water in (a river, etc.); flood; flush; also, to emit or send forth (fire or light) in sudden flashes; send forth like a flash (as, "Stern is the tyrant's mandate, red the gaze That flashes desolation": Shelley's "Queen Mab," iii. 145); also, to cause to flash, as powder by ignition or a sword by waving; also, to express or communicate by or as by a flash or flashes; convey by instantaneous communication, as by telegraph; also, to make a sudden or ostentatious display of (slang: as, to flash one's roll, that is, of money); in glass-making, to cause (a blown globe or mass of glass) to expand into a flat disk; also, to coat (plain glass or a glass object) with a film of colored glass; apply (a film of colored glass) to glass or a glass object; in arch., to protect by flashing (see flashing). — flash, n. A dash or splash of water; also, an extra volume or rush of water, as that produced by a dam and sluiceway, utilized to float a boat over shoals or for other purposes; the device, as a lock or sluice, used for this purpose; also, a sudden, transitory outburst of flame or light; a sudden blaze instantly disappearing; a gleam; hence, the brief period occupied by a flash of light; an instant; also, a telegraphic despatch (chiefly in journalistic use); also, a sudden, brief outburst or display of joy, wit, etc.; also, ostentatious display (as, "Pedants . . . are apt to decry the writings of a polite author, as flash and froth": Addison, in "Spectator," 59); an ostentatious or showy person; also, the cant or jargon of thieves, vagabonds, etc. (colloq.); also, a preparation for coloring, and giving a factitious strength to, brandy, rum, etc. — a flash in the pan, a flashing of the priming in the pan of a flintlock, without discharge of the weapon; fig., a sudden showy or pretentious outburst or effort, without any result. — flash, a. Showy or ostentatious; vulgarly ostentatious or gaudy; also, counterfeit or sham; also, belonging or pertaining to the class of sporting men; also, belonging to or connected with the class of thieves, vagabonds, etc., or pertaining to the cant or jargon spoken by thieves, etc. [Colloq.] — flash'=back, n. A representation, in the course of presenting a story by moving pictures, of some event or scene of a previous time; a cut-back. — flash'=board, n. A board, or one of a series of boards, as on a mill-dam, used to increase the depth or force of a stream of water. — flash'er, n. — flash'i-ly, adv. In a flashy manner. — flash'i-ness, n. — flash'ing, n. The act of one who or that which flashes; the producing of an artificial flash or flood of water; in glass-making, the process or method by which glass is flashed; in arch., pieces of sheet-metal, etc., used to cover and protect certain joints and angles, as where a roof comes in contact with a wall or chimney. — flash'ing=point, n. The temperature at which a mineral oil or the like gives off inflammable vapor in sufficient quantity to flash, or ignite momentarily, on the application of a flame or spark. — flash'=light, n. A flash of light, or a light that flashes; a device for giving forth flashes of light, as in a lighthouse or for signaling; a preparation which on ignition emits a brilliant flash of light, as for use in taking photographs at night. — flash'y, a.; compar. flashier, superl. flashiest. Flashing with light; fig., sparkling or brilliant, esp. in a superficial way or for the moment; pretentiously smart; showy; often, vulgarly showy, as dress, ornaments, etc., or the wearer; gaudy.

flask (flask), n. [F. flasque, < It. fasca, < ML. flasca, also flasco(-n-), flascus (see flagon and fiasco), perhaps < L. vasculum, dim. of vas, vessel.] A bottle or bottle-shaped vessel, of glass, metal, leather, or other material, esp. one of some special form, as a long-necked, bulbous glass bottle (sometimes protected by wickerwork) for wine, etc., a flat glass or metal bottle for holding a supply of drink, suitable for carrying in the pocket, or a leather or other vessel carried by sportsmen to contain gunpowder; in founding, the box or frame holding together the sand, etc., which forms the mold.

flas-ket (flás'ket), n. [Cf. OF. flasquet, flachel, a small flask, also E. flask.] A small flask (as, "a flasket richly chased": Scott's "Harold the Dauntless," v. 18); also, a long, shallow basket.

Two-part Molding-flask.—a, top part; b, bottom part.

flat¹ (flat), n. [Var. of obs. flet, < AS. flet, floor, house, hall; akin to E. flat².] A floor or story of a building; esp., a floor, or a suite of rooms on one floor, forming a complete residence, as for a family.

flat² (flat), a.; compar. flatter, superl. flattest. [ME. flat, from Scand.: cf. Icel. flatr, Sw. flat, Dan. flad, OHG. flaz, flat, and E. flat¹.] Horizontally level, or not sloping or tilted, as the ground, a roof, etc.; lying at full length on the ground or the like, as a person; prostrate, rather than upright or erect; thrown down, laid low, or level with the ground, as fallen trees or buildings; lying wholly on or against something (as, a ladder flat against a wall); also, level, even, or without inequalities of surface, as land, areas, surfaces, etc.; comparatively lacking in projection or depression of surface (as, the Eskimo has a broad, flat face); lacking relief, contrast, or shading, as a painting; disposed so as to present a level or even surface, as an unrolled map, the open hand, etc.; having a generally level shape or appearance (as, a flat cap; a flat button; a flat dish; a flat foot, cf. flatfoot); fig., without qualification, unqualified, downright, or positive (as, a flat refusal or denial; "I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat," Shakspeare's "1 Henry IV.," iv. 2. 43); unrelieved or unbroken, as a calm; without modification (as, a flat rate, one not subject to discount); without interesting features, uninteresting, dull, or tedious (as, a flat existence; a flat discourse or book); pointless, as a remark, joke, etc.; dull-witted or stupid, as persons; spiritless, apathetic, or depressed, as persons; commercially dull, as trade or the market; having lost its flavor, sharpness, or life, as wine, beer, etc.; stale; tasteless or insipid, as food; not clear, sharp, or ringing, as sound, a voice, etc.; in music (opposed to sharp), below an intended pitch, as a note; too low; also, lowered a half-step in pitch (as, B flat); also, minor, as an interval; also, having flats in the signature, as keys or tonalities; in phonetics, of a consonant, voiced or sonant; in gram., not distinguished by a characteristic ending or sign, as an adjective derived without change from a noun, an adverb derived without change from an adjective, or an infinitive used without to. — flat wheel, in railroading, a car-wheel or engine-wheel in which the tread has been worn flat in one or more places. Also called square wheel. — flat³, n. That which is flat; the flat surface, side, or part of anything (as, the flat of a sword-blade; the flat of the hand, the inside surface of the open hand; to lie on the flat of one's back); flat or level ground; a flat area, stretch of country, or plain; a level tract near water or covered by shallow water (often in pl.: as, "The naked shore, Wide flats, where nothing but coarse grasses grew," Tennyson's "Holy Grail," 791); a marsh; a shallow; an object or thing having a generally flat shape, as a flat-bottomed boat, a platform-car, a low-crowned and broad-brimmed hat, or a shallow basket or box; fig., a stupid person, or simpleton (colloq.: as, "You wouldn't be such a flat as to let three thousand a year go out of the family?"; Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," x.); in music, a tone one half-step below a given tone; in musical notation, the character (♭) which indicates this. — flat², v.; flatted, flattening. I. tr. To make flat; in music, to lower in pitch, esp. one half-step. II. intr. To become flat; in music, to sound below the true pitch. — flat², adv. In a flat position; horizontally; levelly; also, in a flat manner; without qualification; positively; absolutely; entirely or quite; in finance, without interest; in music, below the true pitch; naut., used in various phrases to indicate that a sail has been

Flat Caps of the 16th century.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

flattened against a mast or has been brought nearly in the direction of the keel, or that a sheet or other part has been brought as far as possible in a particular direction (as, to haul a sheet flat aft, to haul a sheet aft as far as possible, as when making a fore-and-aft sail lie like a board without protuberance; to brace a yard flat back, to put it in such a position that the wind is nearly at right angles to the forward surface of the sail).

flat-boat (flăt'bōt), n. A large flat-bottomed boat, as for use in shallow water, esp. one for floating merchandise, etc., down a river.

flat-fish (flăt'fîsh), n.; pl. -fishes or (esp. collectively) -fish. Any of a group of fishes (often considered as constituting the suborder Heterosomata), including the halibut, flounder, sole, etc., having a greatly compressed body, and swimming on one side, and (in the adult) having both eyes on the upper side.

Flatfish (Lepidopsetta bilineata).

flat-foot (flăt'füt), n. In pathol., a condition in which the arch of the foot is flattened so that the entire sole rests upon the ground.

flat-foot-ed (flăt'füt'ed), a. Having flat feet; also (colloq.), taking or showing an uncompromising stand in a matter; firm and explicit. — flat'=foot'ed-ly, adv.

Flat-head (flăt'hed), n. One of a small tribe of American Indians of northwestern Montana, specifically so called, though not having flattened heads; also, a Chinook Indian.

flat-head-ed (flăt'hed'ed), a. Having a flat head or top.

flat-i-ron (flăt'î'ern), n. An iron with a flat face, for smoothing cloth.

flat-ling, flat-lings (flăt'ling, -lingz), adv. [From *flat*² + *-ling*².] In a flat position; with the flat side, as of a sword; also, flatly or positively. [Archaic or prov.] Also flat'-long.

flat-ly (flăt'li), adv. In a flat position or manner; horizontally; levelly; unqualifiedly; positively; dully; insipidly. — flat'ness, n.

flat-nosed (flăt'nōzd), a. Having a flat nose.

flat-ten (flăt'n), v. t. or i. To make or become flat. — to flat-ten out, in aeronautics, of an aviator, to bring an aeroplane into a horizontal position, as after a dive; of an aeroplane, to assume such a position. — flat'ten-er, n.

flat-ter¹ (flăt'ēr), n. One who or that which makes something flat; esp., a hammer with a broad face, used by smiths.

flat-ter² (flăt'ēr), v. [ME. flateren: cf. OF. flater (F. flatter), stroke, caress, flatter, flater, a flatterer, prob. from Teut. and akin to E. *flat*².] I. tr. To seek to please by complimentary speech or attentions; compliment or praise insincerely; also, to gratify by compliments or attentions, or as a compliment does (as, to feel flattered by an invitation); hence, to play upon the vanity or susceptibilities of, as by artful blandishments; cajole, wheedle, or beguile; often, to beguile with hopes; encourage (hopes); please (one's self) with the thought or belief (that: with a clause); also, to gratify (the eye, ear, etc.); also, to represent too favorably, as in portrayal. II. intr. To use flattery. — flat'ter-er, n. — flat'ter-ing-ly, adv. — flat'ter-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). [OF. flaterie (F. flatterie).] The act of flattering; adulation; obsequious or insincere compliment or praise; artful blandishment or cajolery; a flattering tribute or speech; also, a pleasing hope or belief† (as, "She is persuaded I will marry her, out of her own love and flattery, not out of my promise": Shakspeare's "Othello," iv. 1. 133).

flat-tish (flăt'ish), a. Somewhat flat.

flat-u-lent (flăt'ü-lent), a. [F. flatulent, < L. flatus: see flatus.] Full of, or of the nature of, wind or gas; also, generating gas in the alimentary canal, as food; attended with or caused by, or suffering from, such an accumulation of gas; fig., inflated; pretentious; empty. — flat'u-lence, flat'u-len-cy, n. — flat'u-lent-ly, adv.

fla-tus (flă'tus), n. [L., a blowing, < flare, blow: see *blow*³.] A puff of wind; a breath; in pathol., an accumulation of gas in the stomach, intestines, or other body-cavity.

flat-ware (flăt'wâr), n. Vessels for the table, or for other use, that are more or less flat, as plates, saucers, etc.: distinguished from hollow-ware.

flat-ways, flat-wise (flăt'wâz, -wiz), adv. With the flat side (not the edge) foremost or in contact.

flat-worm (flăt'wêrm), n. Any platyhelminth: sometimes restricted to the turbellarians.

flaught (flăt, Sc. flächt), n. [ME. flaght; akin to *flake*².] A flake, as of snow; also, a flash, as of fire or lightning. [Archaic or Sc.]

flaunt (flânt or flänt), v. [Origin uncertain.] I. intr. To wave conspicuously in the air, as a banner or a plume; hence, to make a gay or showy appearance, as a flower or plant; parade or display one's self in fine clothes or showy finery, or in any conspicuous and pretentious manner, as a person (as, "The Miss Lambs might now be seen flaunting along the streets in French bonnets, with unknown beaux": Irving's "Sketch-Book," Little Britain); parade one's self boldly or brazenly in public; be obtrusively conspicuous. II. tr. To parade or display ostentatiously (as, to flaunt one's self or one's finery; to flaunt one's vices or one's radical opinions); make a bold or brazen parade of. — flaunt, n. The act of flaunting; also, something flaunted, as finery† (see Shakspeare's "Winter's Tale," iv. 4. 23). — flaunt'er, n. — flaunt'-ing-ly, adv. — flaunt'y, a. Flaunting; ostentatious; showy. flau-tist (flă'tist), n. [It. flautista.] A flutist.

fla-ves-cent (flă-ves'ent), a. [L. flavescens (-ent-), ppr. of flavescere, turn yellow, < flavus, be yellow, < flavus, yellow.] Turning yellow; yellowish.

Fla-vi-an (flă'vi-an), I. a. Pertaining to members of the Flavius gens, or group of families, of ancient Rome, esp. to the three Roman emperors, Vespasian and his sons Titus and Domitian, who reigned A.D. 70-96: as, the Flavian amphitheater (the Colosseum, which was built by Vespasian and Titus). II. n. Any of the Flavian emperors.

fla-vin (flă'vin), n. [L. flavus, yellow.] A yellow dyestuff obtained from quercitron bark. — fla'vone (-vön), n. In chem., an organic compound, C₁₅H₁₀O₂, which is the parent substance of various (yellow) dyes. — fla-vo-pur-pu-rin (flă-vō-pêr'pū-rin), n. A yellowish crystalline compound (isomeric with purpurin): used in dyeing.

fla-vor (flă'vôr), n. [ME. flavor, appar. < OF. flawr, fraor, flairor, odor, < L. fragrare (OF. flairier), emit an odor: see fragrant, and cf. flair.] Smell, odor, or aroma; now, more commonly, taste, esp. a characteristic taste, or a noticeable element in the taste, of a thing (as, water without flavor; a sweet, bitter, or mild flavor; the flavor of the peach; ice-cream with a vanilla flavor); fig., the characteristic quality of a thing as affecting the mental taste or perception (as, the flavor of a book; the whole flavor of the transaction is objectionable); a particular quality noticeable in a thing (as, language with a strong nautical flavor); also, a flavoring substance or extract. — fla'vor, v. t. To give flavor to; season; render of a particular flavor by adding some ingredient (as, to flavor food with herbs, spices, fruit-juice, etc.). — fla'vor-er, n. — fla'vor-ing, n. The act of one who or that which flavors; also, something that gives flavor; a substance or preparation used to give a particular flavor to food or drink. — fla'vor-less, a. Without flavor; tasteless. — fla'vor-ous, a. Full of flavor; pleasant to the smell or taste. fla'vour, fla'vour-er, fla'vour-ing, fla'vour-less. British preferred forms of flavor, etc.

flaw¹ (flă), n. [= D. vlaag = LG. and Dan. flage.] A sudden gust or brief, sharp storm of wind (as, "The hulk flew . . . before rapidly succeeding flaws of wind": Poe's "MS. Found in a Bottle"); a short spell of rough weather; fig., a gust or storm of feeling, passion, fury, etc.† (see Shakspeare's "Macbeth," iii. 4. 63).

flaw² (flă), n. [ME. flaw, flake; prob. from Scand., and akin to E. *flay*²: cf. *flake*².] A flake, as of snow†; a fragment† (as, "This heart Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws, Or ere I'll weep": Shakspeare's "King Lear," ii. 4. 288); also, a crack, break, breach, or rent in a thing; any defect in an object, whether occurring as a natural imperfection in the substance or due to accident or fault in making (as, a flaw in a diamond; a flaw in a casting); an imperfection; fig., a defect impairing beauty, excellence, logical soundness, etc.; a marring feature; a fault; often, a defect impairing legal soundness or validity (as, a flaw in a lease or a will; a flaw in a title); sometimes, a fault in conduct (as, "death for ev'ry flaw": Cowper's "Truth," 550).—*flaw*², v. I. tr. To produce a flaw, crack, or defect in; impair or mar by a flaw. II. intr. To contract a flaw; become cracked or defective.—flaw'less, a. Without flaw, defect, or imperfection.—flaw'less-ly, adv.—flaw'less-ness, n.

flawn (flān), n. [OF. flaon (F. flan); from Teut. (cf. G. fladen, flat cake).] A kind of custard-pie. [Archaic or prov.]

flaw-y (flā'i), a. Characterized by flaws or gusts, as wind.

flax (flaks), n. [AS. flæx = D. vlas = G. flachs, flax.] Any plant of the genus Linum, esp. L. usitatissimum, a slender, erect annual plant with narrow, lance-shaped leaves and blue flowers, much cultivated for its fiber and seeds; the fiber of this plant, used in the manufacture of linen thread and fabrics; also, any of various plants resembling flax.—flax'=bush, n. A liliaceous plant, Phormium tenax, of New Zealand, with erect, sword-shaped leaves which yield a strong fiber.—flax'en, a. Made of flax; also, resembling flax; of the pale yellowish color of dressed flax; also, pertaining to flax.—flax'=plant, n. The plant flax; also, the flax-bush.

Flax (Linum usitatissimum), with section of seed-vessel.

Flax-bush.

—flax'seed, n. The seed of flax, used in medicine as a demulcent and for poulitices, and yielding linseed-oil; linseed.—flax'wort, n. Any plant of the flax family (Linaceæ).—flax'y, a. Flaxen.

flay¹, fley (flā), v. t. [ME. flayen, fleien, from an AS. causative form connected with fleogan, E. *fly*².] To put to flight; frighten away; also, to frighten; scare. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

flay² (flā), v. t. [AS. flēan = MD. vlaen = Icel. flā, flay; cf. *flaw*².] To strip off the skin of (as, to flay an animal; to flay a person alive, as a mode of torture); skin; hence, to deprive of the rind, bark, or any outer coating or covering; also, to strip off (skin, rind, bark, etc.); fig., to strip of money or property, as by exaction or swindling; fleece; also, to criticize or reprove with scathing severity.—flay'er, n.—flay'flint, n. A skinflint. See Tennyson's "Walking to the Mail," 76. [Archaic.] flea (flē), n. [AS. flēah, flēa, = D. vloo = G. floh = Icel. flō, flea; prob. from the root of E. flee.] Any of numerous small, wingless, blood-sucking insects, typically of the genus Pulex, parasitic upon mammals and birds, and noted for their powers of leaping; also, any of various small beetles and crustaceans which leap like a flea.—a flea in one's ear, a stinging utterance that disturbs the serenity or complacency of the hearer; a discomfiting rebuke or rebuff; a sharp hint.—flea'bane, n. Any of various asteraceous plants, as Pulicaria dysenterica of Europe or Erigeron philadelphicus of the U. S., reputed to destroy or drive away fleas.—flea'bite, n. The bite of a flea, or the red spot caused by it; hence, a trifling wound, pain, annoyance, etc.; a mere trifle; also, a mark resembling that caused by the bite of a flea.—flea'bit-ton, a. Bitten by a flea or fleas; also, of a horse, etc., having small reddish spots or streaks upon a lighter ground.

Cat and Dog Flea (Pulex serraticeps). (Line shows natural size.)

fleam (flēm), n. [OF. flieme (F. flamme), < LL. phleboto-mus, lancet, < Gr. φλεβοτόμος, opening veins; cf. phlebotomy.] In surg., a kind of lancet, as for opening veins.

flea-wort (flē'wört), n. Any of certain plants supposed to destroy or drive away fleas, as Inula conyza, a rough-leaved asteraceous herb of Europe; also, a European plantain, Plantago psyllium, whose seeds resemble fleas.

fleche (flesh), n. [F.] An arrow; in arch., a spire; esp., a slender spire rising from the junction of the nave and transepts of a church; in fort., a field-work consisting of two faces forming a salient angle.—flé-chette (flā-shet), n. [F., dim. of fleche.] A little arrow; a steel dart thrown from an aéroplane.

fleck (flek), n. [Cf. Icel. flekkr, Sw. fläck, D. vlek, G. fleck, spot.] A spot or mark on the skin, as a freckle; hence, any spot or patch of color, light, etc.; also, a speck or small bit of something.—fleck, v. t. [Cf. Icel. flekka.] To mark with a fleck or spots; diversify with spots, as of color or light; spot; dapple.—fleck'ered (-ērd), fleck'led (-ld), a. Flecked; dappled.—fleck'less, a. Spotless.

flec-tion (flek'shən), etc. See flexion, etc.

fled (fled). Preterit and past participle of flee.

fledge[†] (flej), a. [ME. flegge; akin to E. *fly*².] Of young birds, able to fly; having the wings developed for flight; fledged.—fledge, v.; fledged, fledging. I. intr. Of a young bird, to acquire the feathers necessary for flight. II. tr. To bring up (a young bird) until it is able to fly; also, to furnish with or as with feathers or plumage; feather (an arrow).—fledg'ling, fledge'ling, n. A young bird just fledged; fig., an inexperienced person.—fledg'y, a. Covered with feathers; feathery.

flee (flē), v.; fled, fleeing. [AS. flēon = G. fliehen = Icel. flíga = Goth. thliuhan, flee; long confused with the unrelated word *fly*².] I. intr. To run away, as from danger, pursuers, or any cause or place of danger or embarrassment; seek escape or safety by flight; take flight; depart or withdraw hastily; often, to withdraw or go hastily (to, into, etc.), as for refuge, protection, etc. (as, "To whom will ye flee for help?" Isa. x. 3); also, to pass quickly away, or vanish, as shadows, clouds, bloom, beauty, etc. (often with away); also, to move swiftly along, fly, or speed, as a missile (as, "Arrows fled not swifter toward their aim Than did our soldiers . . . Fly from the field": Shakspeare's "2 Henry IV.," i. 1. 123). II. tr. To run away from (a place, person, etc.); depart hastily from; also, to avoid by flight; shun; also, to escape (now rare).

fleece (flēs), n. [AS. flēos = D. vlies = G. fliess.] The coat of wool that covers a sheep or some similar animal; also, the wool shorn from a sheep at one time; also, something resembling a fleece of wool, as in quality or appearance (as, "the fleeces of descending snows": Pope's tr. Homer's "Iliad," iii.); a head of hair (as, "the Aboriginal Savage, glaring fiercely from under his fleece of hair": Carlyle's "Sartor Resartus," i. 5); a soft nap or pile.—golden fleece. See under golden, a.—fleece, v. t.; *fleece*d, *fleece*ing. To deprive (a sheep) of the fleece; hence, to strip of money or belongings; plunder; victimize; swindle; also, to overspread as with a fleece; fleck with fleece-like masses.—fleece'a-ble, a. That may be fleeceed.—*fleece*d, a. Provided with a fleece; as, thick-fleece.—flee-cer (flē'sér), n.

flech (flēch), v. [Origin obscure.] I. tr. To cajole; wheedle; also, to beseech. [Sc. and north. Eng.] II. intr. To speak in a cajoling or beseeching manner. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

flee-cy (flē'si), a.; compar. fleecier, superl. fleeci-est. Covered with, consisting of, or resembling a fleece or wool.—flee'ci-ly, adv.

flee-er¹ (flē'ér), n. One who flees.

flee² (flēr), v. [ME. fleryen; prob. from Scand.] I. intr. To grimace; also, to grin or laugh coarsely or rudely; also, to smile or laugh mockingly; jeer. II. tr. To flee at; deride.—*flee*², n. A fleeing look; a jeer or gibe.—flee'er, n.—flee'ing-ly, adv.

fleet¹ (flēt), v. [AS. flēotan, float, = Icel. fljóta, float, flow, = D. vlieten, G. fließen, flow; akin to L. pluere, rain, Gr. πλύνω, sail, Skt. plu-, float.] I. intr. To float; drift; swim; sail; also, to fluctuate or waver; also, to flow, as water; hence, to glide away like a stream; slip away; fade; vanish; also, to move swiftly; fly; naut., to change position; shift. II. tr. To cause (time) to pass lightly or swiftly (see Shakspeare's "As You Like It," i. 1. 124); naut., to change the position of; shift.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, flect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

fleet² (flēt), n. [AS. flēot, ship, craft, < flēotan, float: see *fleet*¹.] A number of armed vessels, or vessels carrying armed men; a number of war-ships under the command of a single chief officer (as an admiral or rear-admiral), with other officers in command of single vessels or groups of vessels; a naval armament; hence, any group of ships or boats sailing in company, employed in the same service, or otherwise associated; also, a number of aeroplanes, automobiles, or the like, moving or operating in company.

fleet³ (flēt), n. [AS. flēot, flowing water, = Icel. fljót, river, = D. vliet, G. fließ, brook; akin to E. *fleet*¹.] An arm of the sea; an inlet; a creek. [Now prov. Eng., or in place-names.]—the Fleet, a former London prison, long used for debtors: so called from its situation near a run of water (now a covered sewer) also known as 'the Fleet,' flowing into the Thames at Blackfriars Bridge.

fleet⁴ (flēt), a. [Cf. Icel. fljót, swift, akin to E. *fleet*¹.] Swift of motion; rapid; also, fleeting; evanescent. [Chiefly in literary use.]—fleet⁴=foot^{ed}, a.

fleet-ing (flē'ting), p. a. That fleets; gliding swiftly away; passing swiftly, as time; evanescent or transitory, as joys.—fleet-ing-ly, adv.—fleet-ing-ness, n.

fleet-ly (flēt'li), adv. In a fleet manner; swiftly; rapidly.—fleet-ness, n.

fleg (fleg), v. t.; flegged, flegging. [Cf. *flay*¹, fley.] To frighten; frighten away. [Sc.]—fleg, n. A fright; a scare: as, "One dark night we got a fleg in sober earnest" (Moir's "Mansie Wauch," xii.). [Sc.]

Flem-ing (flem'ing), n. [MD. Vlaming.] A native of Flanders; esp., a Flemish-speaking Belgian.

Flem-ish (flem'ish). [MD. Vlaemisch.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Flanders, its people, or their language. II. n. The people of Flanders; the Flemings; also, the language of the Flemings, a form of Low German closely related to Dutch.

flense (flens), v. t.; flensed, flensing. [Dan. flense.] To strip the blubber or the skin from (a whale, seal, etc.); also, to strip off (blubber or skin).

flesh (flesh), n. [AS. flæsc = D. vleesch = G. fleisch, flesh, = Icel. flesk, pork.] The soft substance of an animal body, consisting of muscle and fat, or, in a more restricted sense, of muscular tissue alone; also, such substance of animals as an article of food, usually excluding fish and sometimes fowl; meat; also, the surface of the body, esp. with respect to color; also, the body, esp. as distinguished from the spirit or soul (as, to see a person in the flesh; "The spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak," Mat. xxvi. 41); man's physical or animal nature, as distinguished from his moral or spiritual nature (as, to yield to the promptings of the flesh; "From all the deceits of the world, the flesh, and the devil, Good Lord, deliver us," Book of Common Prayer, Litany); also, mankind, or living creatures generally (as, to go the way of all flesh; "And all flesh died . . . both of fowl, and of cattle . . . and every man," Gen. vii. 21); also, one's kindred or family, or a member of it (as, "He is our brother and our flesh," Gen. xxxvii. 27: now commonly in the phrase 'one's own flesh and blood'); also, the pulpy portion of a fruit, vegetable, or the like.—flesh, v. t. To feed (a hound or hawk) with flesh in order to make it more eager for the chase; make (an animal) eager for prey, as the taste of flesh or blood does; hence, to incite and accustom (persons) to bloodshed or battle by an initial experience; fig., to inflame the ardor or passions of by a taste of indulgence; also, to plunge (a weapon) into the flesh; also, to clothe (a skeleton, etc.) with flesh; make fleshy; also, to remove adhering flesh, etc., from (hides, etc.).—flesh=col^{or}, n. A pinkish-white color with a tinge of yellow; a pinkish cream-color.—flesh=col^{ored}, a.—fleshed, a. Having flesh: as, white-fleshed.—flesh'er, n. A butcher (chiefly Sc.); also, one who fleshes hides; a tool for fleshing hides.—flesh=fly, n. Any of various true flies, as the blow-fly, whose eggs or larvæ are deposited on flesh.—flesh=hook, n. A hook for use in lifting meat, as from a pot; also, a hook to hang meat on.—fleshⁱ-ness, n. The state of being fleshy.—fleshⁱ-ings, n. pl. Flesh-colored tights; also, bits of flesh, etc., scraped from hides.—fleshⁱ-less, a. Destitute of flesh, as a skeleton; also, emaciated; lean.—fleshⁱ-ly, a.; compar. fleshier, superl. fleshiest. [AS. flæsclic.] Of or pertaining to the flesh or body (as, the fleshy form or eye); bodily, corporeal, or physical; also, of or pertaining to man's physical or animal nature (as, fleshy appetites or indulgences); carnal or sensual; given to sensual indulgences; sometimes, worldly, rather than spiritual; also, consisting of flesh (now rare); having much flesh; or fleshy.—fleshⁱ-li-ness, n.—fleshⁱ-mentⁱ, n. The state of being fleshed or stimulated, as by a taste of something. See Shakspeare's "King Lear," ii. 2. 130.—fleshⁱ-pot, n. A pot or vessel containing flesh or meat; hence, good food or fare; good living; luxuries or substantial advantages that are the object of longing regret or covetous desire: from the Biblical use, "Would to God we had died . . . in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the flesh pots, and when we did eat bread to the full" (Ex. xvi. 3).—fleshⁱ-y, a.; compar. fleshier, superl. fleshiest. Having much flesh; plump; fat; also, of, pertaining to, or consisting of flesh; also, of flesh-like substance; pulpy, as a fruit; thick and tender, as a leaf.

flech (flech), v. t. [Prob. < fletcher.] To provide (an arrow) with a feather.

flech-er (flech'er), n. [OF. flechier, < fleche (F. flèche), arrow.] One who makes or deals in arrows, or bows and arrows. [Archaic.]

Flech-er-ism (flech'er-izm), n. The practice of chewing food until it is reduced to a finely divided, liquefied mass, as advocated by Horace Fletcher (1849-1919) as a nutritional measure.—Flech-er-ize, v. t. or i.; -ized, -izing. To masticate (food) thoroughly.

fleur-de-lis (flêr-dê-lê'), n.; pl. fleurs-de-lis (flêr-). [F. fleur de lis, 'flower of lily'.] The iris (flower or plant); also, a heraldic device somewhat resembling three petals or floral segments assembled in a cluster by an encircling band, explained by some as having originally represented an iris, by others the head of an arrow, spear, scepter, or the like, esp. used as the distinctive bearing of the royal family of France. Cf. giglio.

Various forms of the Fleur-de-lis.

fleur-ron (flê-rôn), n. [F., < fleur: see flower.] A flower-shaped ornament, used esp. in architectural decoration, on coins, etc.

fleur-ry, flo-ry (flô'ri, flô'-), a. [F. fleuré, OF. floré, < OF. flor (F. fleur), E. flower.] In her., decorated with fleurs-de-lis; of a cross, having each arm ending in a fleur-de-lis, or the upper part of one.

flew (flô). Preterit of *fly*².

flews (flöz), n. pl. [Origin unknown.] The large pendulous upper lip of certain dogs, as bloodhounds.—flewed, a.

flex (fleks), v. t. or i. [L. flexus, pp. of flectere, bend.] To bend, as a part of the body.

flex-i-ble (flek'si-bl), a. [F. flexible, < L. flexibilis, < flectere, bend.] Capable of being bent; easily bent; pliable; pliant; also, willing or disposed to yield; compliant; tractable; also, susceptible of modification or adaptation; adaptable.—flex-i-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-ti), flex'i-ble-ness, n.—flex'i-bly, adv.

flex-ile (flek'sil), a. [L. flexilis.] Flexible; pliant; tractable; adaptable.—flex-il'i-ty (flek-sil'i-ti), n.

flex-ion, flec-tion (flek'shon), n. [L. flexio(n), < flectere, bend.] The act of bending, or the state of being bent; a bend; a bent part; in gram., inflection.—flex'ion-al, flec'tion-al, a.—flex'ion-less, flec'tion-less, a. Without (grammatical) flexion.

flex-or (flek'sor), n. [NL.] A muscle which serves to flex or bend a part of the body.

flex-u-ous (flek'sū-us), a. [L. flexuosus, < flexus, a bending, < flectere, bend.] Full of bends or curves; winding; sinuous; also, waving or undulating.—flex-u-os'i-ty (-os'i-ti), n.—flex'u-ous-ly, adv.

flex-ure (flek'sūr), n. [L. flexura.] The act of flexing or bending; the state of being flexed or bent; a bend; a fold; a bent part or thing.—flex'ur-al, a.

fley (flā), v. t. See *flay*¹.

fib-ber-tigib-bet (fib'êr-ti-jib'et), n. [Appar. a made word.] A chattering or flighty person: commonly applied to a woman, and also formerly used [cap.] as the name of a fiend (see Shakspeare's "King Lear," iii. 4. 120).

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; û, F. bonbon; °, primary accent; ˚, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

flif-flac (flik'flak), n. [F.; imit. of the sound made.] A step in dancing in which the feet strike rapidly together.

flick (flik), n. [Appar. imit.] A sudden light blow or stroke, as with a whip or the finger; also, the sound thus made; also, something thrown off with or as with a jerk (as, a flick of spray).—flick, v. I. tr. To strike lightly with a whip, the finger, etc.; remove with such a stroke (as, "He would . . . flick away the remaining particles of dust with a graceful wave of his hand"; Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," xxxviii.); also, to move with a sudden stroke or jerk. II. intr. To move with a jerk or jerks; also, to flutter.

flick-er¹ (flik'er), n. [Imit. of the bird's note.] Any of several handsomely colored woodpeckers; esp., the golden-winged woodpecker, Colaptes auratus, of eastern North America.

flick-er² (flik'er), v. i. [AS. flicerian; prob. imit.] To flutter, as a bird; hover; flap the wings rapidly; also, to wave to and fro; vibrate; quiver; also, to burn unsteadily (as, "A chain-droop'd lamp was flickering by each door"; Keats's "Eve of St. Agnes," xl.); flash up and die down alternately, as a flame; shine with a wavering light.—flick'er², n. A flickering; a flickering movement; an unsteady flame or light.—flick'er-ing-ly, adv.—flick'er-tail, n. A destructive rodent or gopher, Citellus (or Spermophilus) richardsoni, from which North Dakota is called the 'Flickertail State.' See gopher.

Flicker, or Golden-winged Woodpecker (Colaptes auratus).

flick-er², n. A flickering; a flickering movement; an unsteady flame or light.—flick'er-ing-ly, adv.—flick'er-tail, n. A destructive rodent or gopher, Citellus (or Spermophilus) richardsoni, from which North Dakota is called the 'Flickertail State.' See gopher.

fi-er, fly-er (fi'er), n. [*See fly*², v.] Something that flies, as a bird or insect; an aviator; an aeroplane or flying-machine; also, one who or that which moves with great speed; some part of a machine having a rapid motion; also, a flying jump or leap; hence, a financial venture outside of one's ordinary business (U. S.); also, a single one of a straight flight of steps; also, a small handbill (U. S.); also, one who flees; a fugitive.

flight¹ (flit), n. [ME. fliht, < AS. flēon, E. flee.] The act of fleeing; hasty departure.

flight² (flit), n. [AS. flyht, < flēogan, *E. fly*².] The act, manner, or power of flying with or as with wings; also, swift movement in general, as of a missile; fig., a soaring above or transcending ordinary bounds (as, a flight of fancy; a flight of ambition); also, the distance covered or the course pursued by a flying object; also, a number of beings or things flying or passing through the air together (as, "a flight of doves or swallows," Irving's "Sketch-Book," Christmas Day; "flights of angels," Shakspeare's "Hamlet," v. 2. 371; "a flight of fairy arrows," Tennyson's "Aylmer's Field," 94); also, a light arrow for long-distance shooting; a contest with such arrows; also, the series of steps or stairs between two adjacent landings; hence, a series of steps, etc., ascending without change of direction.—flight², v. i. Of wild-fowl, to fly in flights: as, "The wild geese are flighting" (Kipling's "Irish Guards").—flight²-feath'er, n. In ornith., one of the large, stiff feathers which form most of the extent of a bird's wing, and which are essential to flight.—flight-less, a. Incapable of flying.—flight²-path, n. In aëronautics, the path (with reference to the earth) taken by the center of gravity of an aircraft.—flight²-y, a.; compar. flightier, superl. flightiest. Swift or fleet (obs. or rare); also, given to flights or sallies of fancy, caprice, etc.; volatile; frivolous; also, slightly delirious, or light-headed; mildly crazy.—flight²-i-ly, adv.—flight²-i-ness, n.

flim-flam (flim'flam), n. [Origin uncertain: cf. flam.] A trifling fancy or conceit; also, a piece of nonsense; mere nonsense; also, a trick or deception; mere trickery or humbug. [Now colloq.]—flim'flam, v. t.; -flammed, -flamming.

To trick; delude; humbug; cheat. [Colloq.]—flim'-flam, mer, n.

flim-sy (flim'zi), [Perhaps connected with film.] I. a.; compar. flimsier, superl. flimsiest. Without material strength or solidity; frail; unsubstantial; also, without force or value; trivial; paltry; frivolous. II. n. A flimsy or thin kind of paper, esp. for use in making several copies of a writing, telegraphic despatch, etc., at once (as in newspaper work); a copy of a report or despatch on such paper; also, a bank-note (slang).—flim'-si-ly, adv.—flim'-si-ness, *n.

finch (finch), v. [Prob. < OF. flenchir, var. of flechir (F. fléchir), bend, turn aside, appar. < L. flectere, bend.]

I. intr. To draw back from an undertaking, duty, etc., as from want of courage or endurance; shrink from what is dangerous, difficult, or unpleasant; also, to shrink under pain; wince; in croquet, to let the foot slip from the ball in the act of croqueting. II. tr. To draw back or withdraw from.—finch, n. The act or an act of finching.—finch'er, n.—finch-ing-ly, adv.

fin-der (fin'dér), n. [Cf. Norw. flindra, splinter.] A splinter; a small piece or fragment: usually in pl.: as, "The tough ash spear, so stout and true, Into a thousand flinders flew" (Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," iii. 6).

fling (fling), v.; flung, flinging. [Cf. Icel. flengja, whip, mod. ride furiously, Sw. flänga, fly, race, tear, romp.] I. tr. To throw, cast, or hurl; throw with force or violence; throw with impatience, disdain, etc.; also, to put suddenly or violently (as, to fling one into prison); send forth suddenly and rapidly (as, to fling fresh troops into a battle); also, to throw to the ground, as in wrestling or from horseback. II. intr. To fling a missile; also, to move with haste or violence; rush; dash; sometimes, to be driven forcibly or swiftly; also, to fly into violent and irregular motions, as a horse; throw the body about, as a person; also, to caper or dance (Sc.).—fling, n. An act of flinging; a throw; a cast from the hand; fig., an attack upon or attempt at something, as in passing; a severe or contemptuous remark, or gibe, uttered in passing or incidentally; also, a rush or dash (obs. or rare); also, a violent, irregular movement, as of an animal; a throw or twist of the body; also, a lively Scotch dance characterized by flinging movements of the legs and arms (commonly called 'Highland fling'); also, a spell of unrestrained indulgence of one's impulses (as, to have one's fling).—fling'er, n.

flint (flint), n. [AS. flint = MLG. vlins = OHG. flins = Dan. flint.] A hard kind of stone, a form of silica resembling chalcedony but more opaque and less lustrous; a piece of this, esp. as used, as with a piece of steel, for striking fire; hence, something very hard or obdurate.—flint²-glass, n. A glass of great brilliancy containing silicon, potassium or sodium, and lead: used for making tableware, lenses, etc.—flint²-i-ly, adv. In a flinty manner.—flint²-i-ness, n.—flint²-lock, n. A gun-lock in which a piece of flint striking against steel produces sparks which ignite the priming; also, a fire-arm with such a lock.—flint²-y, a.; compar. flintier, superl. flintiest. Of, like, or containing flint; hard as flint.

flip¹ (flip), v.; flipped, flipping. [*Appar. a variant of flip*² (recorded earlier).] I. tr. To fillip; flick; put into motion by or as by a fillip with the fingers; toss (a coin) with a fillip or flip; also, to move with a jerk or jerks; flit. II. intr. To make a fillip; strike smartly at something; also, to move with a jerk or jerks.—flip¹, n. A fillip; a smart tap or stroke; also, a sudden jerk.—flip¹, a.; compar. flipper, superl. flippest. Smart; pert; flippant. [Colloq.] flip² (flip), n. [*Origin uncertain; perhaps < flip*¹.] A beverage made of beer or ale, cider, or the like, sweetened, spiced, and heated with a hot iron: as, "The minister himself heated two little old andirons red-hot . . . and therewith . . . stirred up a mighty bowl of flip" (Mrs. Stowe's "Old-town Folks," xxxvii.).

Flintlock Fowling-piece. — a, steel struck by flint; b, pan; c, touch-hole; d, flint; e, c, cocks.

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, mōve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, çlect, agôny, intô, ûnite; (obscured) errant, operâ, ardent, actor, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you; flip-pant (flīp'ant), a. [Perhaps < *flip*¹: cf. Icel. fleipa, babble, prattle.] Nimble, limber, or pliant (obs. or prov. Eng.); also, voluble† or talkative†; also, smart or pert in speech; characterized by a shallow or disrespectful levity. — flip-pan-cy, flip/pant-ness, n. — flip/pant-ly, adv.

flip-per (flīp'ēr), n. [From *flip*¹.] A broad, flat limb, as of a seal, whale, etc., especially adapted for swimming; also, the hand (slang).

flirt (flērt), v. [Prob. imit.] I. tr. To throw or propel with a toss or jerk; fling suddenly; also, to give a sudden or brisk motion to; wave smartly, as a fan. II. intr. To move with a jerk or jerks; dart about; also, to play at courtship; trifle in love; coquet; also, in general, to trifle. — flirt, n. A quick throw or toss; a sudden jerk; a darting motion; also, a giddy or wanton woman†; also, a person (woman or man) given to flirting; sometimes, a person to flirt with (as, "General Tufto is a great flirt of mine": Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," xxv.). — flirt-ta-tion (flēr-tā'shən), n. A flirting; playing at courtship; amorous trifling or adventure. — flirt-tious (-shus), a. Given to flirtation; also, of pertaining to, or of the nature of flirtation. — flirt-tious-ly, adv. — flirt-tious-ness, n. — flirt'er, n. — flirt'=gill† (-jil), n. A giddy or wanton woman. See Shakspeare's "Romeo and Juliet," ii. 4. 162. — flirt-ing-ly, adv. — flirt'y, a. Flirtatious.

flit (flīt), v.; flitted, flitting. [Cf. Icel. flytja, carry, convey, akin to E. *fleet*¹.] I. tr. To remove; transfer; oust or dispossess. [Chiefly Sc.] II. intr. To shift position; move; depart or be gone, or die (chiefly north. Eng. and Sc.); change one's residence (chiefly north. Eng. and Sc.); also, to move lightly and swiftly; fly, dart, or skim along; also, to pass away quickly, as time; also, to flutter, as a bird. — flit, n. A flitting; a removal (chiefly north. Eng. and Sc.); a light, swift movement; a flutter.

fitch (fīch), n. [AS. flicce = MLG. vlicke = Icel. flikki, fitch.] The side of a hog (or, formerly, some other animal) salted and cured ('fitch of bacon'); a side of bacon; also, a steak cut from a halibut; also, a slab cut lengthwise from the trunk of a tree; specif., one of several planks fastened together to form a compound beam.

fite, flyte (flīt), v.; flited, flyted, fliting, flyting. [AS. flitan, strive, contend.] I. intr. To dispute; wrangle; rail; scold; flout; jeer. [Now Sc. and north. Eng.] II. tr. To berate; scold; jeer at. [Now Sc. and north. Eng.] — fite, n. [AS. flit, strife.] A dispute; a wrangle; an abusive speech; a scolding; a flout. [Now Sc. and north. Eng.]

flit-ter¹ (flīt'ēr), n. One who or that which flits.

flit-ter² (flīt'ēr), v. i. or t. [Freq. of flit.] To flutter.

flit-ter-mouse (flīt'ēr-mous), n.; pl. -mice (-mis). [From flitter + mouse: cf. G. fledermaus.] A bat (animal). [Now chiefly prov.]

flit-ters (flīt'ēr-z), n. pl. [Var. of flitters: cf. *fritter*².] Fragments; bits; shreds. [Prov. or colloq.]

flit-ting (flīt'ing), p. a. That flits; moving; moving lightly and swiftly; passing quickly; fluttering. — flit-ting-ly, adv.

fliv-ver (flīv'ēr), n. [Origin obscure.] A bungle or fizzle; a failure; also, something of unsatisfactory quality or inferior grade, as an automobile (sometimes applied humorously to any automobile); something small of its kind, as a small naval destroyer (vessel). [Slang.] — fliv-ver, v. i. To fail ignominiously; fizzle; also, to go or be conveyed in a flivver (automobile). [Slang.]

float (flōt), v. [AS. flōtan, < flēotan, float: see *fleet*¹.]

I. intr. To rest on the surface of a liquid; be buoyant; also, to move gently on the surface of a liquid; drift along; also, to rest or move in a liquid, the air, etc.; in fig. use, to move or hover before the eyes or in the mind (as, "Faded ideas float in the fancy like half-forgotten dreams": Sheridan's "Rivals," Preface); pass from one to another, as a rumor; move or drift about free from attachment; in com., to be in circulation, as an acceptance; be awaiting maturity; also, to be launched or floated, as a company, scheme, etc. II. tr. To cause to float; also, to cover with water; flood; irrigate; also, to launch (a company, scheme, etc.); set going; also, to make smooth or level, as the surface of plaster; also, to subject (pigments, etc.) to a process in which the powdered material is put into slowly moving water in order to carry the suspended finer particles to some distance and thus separate them from the coarser. — float, n. [AS. flot, a floating, flota, a ship, fleet.] The act or state of floating (now rare); also, a wave†, or the sea† (see Shakspeare's "Tempest," i. 2. 234); also, something that floats, as a raft; something for buoying up, as a piece of cork for supporting a baited line in the water and showing by its movement when a fish bites, or an inflated organ that supports an animal in the water; in certain apparatuses, cisterns, etc., a device, as a hollow metal ball, which through its buoyancy automatically regulates the level, supply, or outlet of a liquid; a float-board of a water-wheel or a paddle-wheel; also, pl. or sing., the footlights of a theater†; also, sing., a platform on wheels, bearing a tableau or other display, and drawn in a procession; a low-bodied dray for transporting heavy goods; also, any of various tools for smoothing, leveling, or the like, as a kind of file, a plasterer's trowel, etc. — float-a-ble, a. Capable of floating; that may be floated; also, that can be floated on, as a river. — float-a-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-ti), n. — float-age (-āj), n. The act or state of floating; also, floating power; buoyancy; also, anything that floats; flotsam; the vessels that float on a stream.

float-a-tion (flō-tā'shən), n. See flotation.

float-board (flōt'bōrd), n. One of the boards of an under-shot water-wheel; also, one of the boards (paddles) at the circumference of a paddle-wheel.

float-er (flō'tēr), n. One who or that which floats; one who is continually changing his place of abode, employment, etc.; a voter not attached to any party, esp. one whose vote may be purchased (U. S.); one who fraudulently votes in different places in the same election (U. S.).

float-ing (flō'ting), p. a. That floats; resting or moving on or in water, air, etc.; free from attachment, or having but little attachment; not fixed or settled in a definite place or state (as, the floating population; the floating vote, the voters not definitely attached to any political party); in circulation or use, or not permanently invested, as capital; not funded, as a debt. — floating dock. See *dock*³, n. — floating heart, any of certain perennial aquatic herbs of the genus Limnæthemum, with floating, more or less heart-shaped leaves. — floating island, a floating island-like mass of earth held together by driftwood, interlacing roots, etc.; also, a dish consisting of boiled custard with portions of meringue or whipped cream, and often bits of jelly, etc., floating upon it. — floating kidney, in pathol., a kidney which has become loose and displaced in the abdomen. — floating ribs. See rib, n. — float-ing-ly, adv.

float-y (flō'ti), a. Able to float; buoyant; of a boat, drawing little water.

floc-cil-la-tion (flok-si-lā'shən), n. [L. floccus, flock of wool.] In pathol., a delirious picking of the bedclothes, etc., by the patient, as in certain fevers.

floc-cose (flok'ōs), a. [LL. floccosus, < L. floccus, flock of wool.] In bot., consisting of or bearing woolly tufts.

floc-cu-late (flok'ū-lāt), v.; -lated, -lating. [NL. flocculus: see flocculus.] I. tr. To form into flocculent masses. II. intr. To form flocculent masses, as cloud, a chemical precipitate, etc.; form aggregated or compound masses of particles. — floc-cu-la'tion (-lā'shən), n.

floc-cule (flok'ūl), n. [NL. flocculus: see flocculus.] Something resembling a small flock or tuft of wool; a bit of flocculent matter, as in a liquid.

floc-cu-lent (flok'ū-lēnt), a. [L. floccus, flock of wool.] Like a flock or flocks of wool; consisting of or containing loose woolly masses; covered with a soft, woolly substance. — floc-cu-lence, n. — floc-cu-lent-ly, adv.

floc-cu-lus (flok'ū-lus), n.; pl. -li (-li). [NL., dim. of L. floccus, flock of wool.] A small flock of wool, or something resembling it; a floccule; a flake.

flock¹ (flok), n. [AS. flocc = Icel. flokkr.] A band or company of persons (now somewhat rare); also, a number of animals of one kind keeping, feeding, or herded together, now esp. of sheep or goats or of birds; fig., in Biblical and ecclesiastical use, the Christian church in relation to Christ, or a single congregation in relation to its pastor; sometimes, in general, an assemblage, collection, or multitude (as, "flocks of churches": Wordsworth's "Prelude," iii. 33). — flock¹, v. i. To gather or go in a flock, company, or crowd.

flock² (flok), n. [ME. flokke, appar. < OF. F. floc, < L. floccus, flock of wool: cf. MD. and MLG. vlocke, OHG. floccho, flock, flake, Icel. flōki, felt, hair, wool, and E. *flake*².]

(variable) đ as d or j, ş as s or sh, ţ as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; û, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

A lock or tuft of wool, hair, etc.; pl. or sing., wool refuse, shearings of cloth, old cloth torn to pieces, etc., used for stuffing mattresses, upholstering furniture, etc.; also, finely powdered wool, cloth, etc., used in making flock-paper; sing., a tuft-like mass, as in a chemical precipitate.—flock², v. t. To stuff with flock, as a mattress; also, to cover or coat with flock, as wall-paper.—flock'=pa'per, n. Wall-paper coated or figured with flock, or powdered wool.—flock'y, a. Like flocks or tufts; flocculent.

floe (flō), n. [Cf. Norw. flo, Icel. flō, layer.] A field of floating ice formed on the surface of the sea, etc.; a detached floating portion of such a field.

flog (flog), v. t.; flogged, flogging. [Origin obscure.] To beat or whip; chastise with repeated blows, as of a rod or whip.—flog'ger, n.—flog'ging, n. The act of one that flogs; chastisement; a beating or whipping.

flood (flud), n. [AS. flōd = D. vloed = G. flut = Icel. flōdh = Goth. flōdus, flood; from the root of E. *flow*².] The flowing in of the tide (opposed to ebb); also, a great flowing or overflowing of water, esp. over land not usually submerged; an inundation; a deluge; [often cap.] with the, the universal deluge recorded as having occurred in the days of Noah (see Gen. vii.); also [l. c.], a body of flowing water, as a river (now poetic); the water or the sea as opposed to the land (now poetic); also, any great outpouring or stream, as of lava, light, etc.; an overflowing abundance (as, "You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors": Shakspeare's "Timon of Athens," i. 1. 42).—flood, v. i. tr. To overflow in or cover with a flood; inundate; deluge; cover with water, as grassland; fill to overflowing, as a river; fig., to cover as with a flood (as, "The moon is at her full and, riding high, Floods the calm fields with light": Bryant's "Tides"); overwhelm with an abundance of something (as, the new governor is flooded with applications for office); also, to pour in a flood. II. intr. To flow or pour in or as in a flood; rise in a flood, or overflow (as, "The Nilus would have risen before his time And flooded at our nod": Tennyson's "Dream of Fair Women," 144); in pathol., to have an excessive menstrual flow; also, to suffer uterine hemorrhage, esp. in connection with parturition.—flood'a-ble, a. That may be flooded.—flood'er, n.—flood'agate, n. A gate designed to control the flow of water; hence, anything serving to control indiscriminate flow or passage.—flood'=light, n. Artificial light so directed or diffused as to give a comparatively uniform illumination throughout a room or the like.—flood'=light, v. t. To illuminate with flood-light.—flood'=tide, n. The inflow of the tide; the rising tide.

floor (flōr), n. [AS. flōr = D. vloer = G. flur = Icel. flōr, floor.] That part of a room or the like (consisting of boards, planks, tiles, stone, concrete, etc.) which forms its lower inclosing surface, and upon which one walks; the part of a legislative chamber, etc., where the members sit, and from which they speak; the right of one member to speak from such a place at a particular time in preference to other members (as, to get or have the floor); the main part of an exchange or the like, in distinction from galleries, etc.; also, a story of a building (as, to occupy the second floor); also, a level supporting surface in any structure (as, the floor of a bridge or of an elevator); a platform or prepared level area for a particular use (as, a threshing-floor); also, the flat bottom of any more or less hollow place (as, the floor of a cave or of the ocean); a flat extent of surface (as, "For Lycidas your sorrow is not dead, Sunk though he be beneath the watery floor": Milton's "Lycidas," 167); in mining, an underlying stratum; also, a stratum or layer, as of ore; navit., that part of the bottom of a vessel on each side of the keelson which is most nearly horizontal.—floor, v. t. To furnish with a floor; also, to bring down to the floor or ground; knock down; hence, to beat or defeat (colloq.); confound or nonplus (colloq.: as, to be flooded by a problem); also, to place upon a floor; base.—floor'age (-āj), n. Floor space.—floor'=cloth, n. A piece of cloth or some substitute material for covering a floor (with or without carpet); any material, as crash, drugget, oilcloth, linoleum, etc., used for this purpose; also, a cloth for washing or wiping floors.—floor'er, n. One who lays floors; also, a person or thing, as a blow, that knocks to the floor or ground; hence, something that beats, overwhelms, or confounds (colloq.).—floor'ing, n. A floor; floors collectively; materials for making floors.—floor'less, a. Having no floor.—floor'=walk'er, n. A person employed in a large retail store to walk about as an overseer, to direct customers, etc.

flop (flop), v.; flopped, flopping. [Var. of flap.] I. intr. To fall or plump down suddenly, esp. with noise; drop or turn with a sudden bump or thud; hence, to change suddenly, as from one side or party to another (often with over); yield or break down suddenly; also, to flap, as in the wind. [Colloq.] II. tr. To drop, throw, etc., with a sudden bump or thud; also, to flap clumsily and heavily, as wings. [Colloq.]—flop, n. The act or sound of flopping; a thud. [Colloq.]—flop'er, n.—flop'py, a.; compar. flopplier, superl. floppiest. Tending to flop. [Colloq.]—flop'pi-ly, adv.—flop'pi-ness, n.

flo-ra (flō'rā), n.; pl. -ras or -ræ (-rē). [L. Flora, < flos, (flor-), flower.] [cap.] The Roman goddess of flowers; [l. c.] the plants of a particular region or period, taken collectively; a work systematically describing such plants.—flo'ral, a. [L. floralis.] [cap.] Of or pertaining to the goddess Flora; [l. c.] pertaining to a flora; also, of, pertaining to, or consisting of flowers.—floral circle, in bot., a ring of like organs, as petals, round the axis of a flower; one of the whorls of a flower.—floral envelop or envelops, in bot., the floral leaves (petals or sepals, or both) of a flower, collectively; a perianth.—floral leaf, in bot., one of the divisions of a perianth; a petal or sepal; also, less properly, a bract.—flo'ral-ly, adv.

flor'ré-al (flō-rā'-l), n. [F. floréal, < L. floreus, of flowers, < flos (flor-), flower.] In the calendar of the first French republic, the eighth month of the year, extending from April 20 to May 19.

Flor'en-time (flor'en-tēn or -tīn). [L. Florentinus, < Florentia, Florence.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Florence, in Italy: as, the Florentine lily (see giglio). II. n. A native or inhabitant of Florence; [l. c.] a twilled silk fabric, used for wearing apparel.

flor'es-cence (flō-res'ens), n. [NL. florescentia, < L. florescens, ppr. of florescere, begin to flower, < florere: see flourish.] The act, state, or period of flowering; bloom.—flor'es-cent, a. [L. florescens (-ent-), ppr.] Flowering.

flor'et (flō'ret), n. [Dim. < L. flos (flor-), flower.] A small flower, or floweret (as, "acres of houstonia, whose innumerable flowerets whiten and ripple before the eye": Emerson's "Essays," Nature); in bot., one of the closely clustered small flowers that make up the flower-head in asteraceous plants, as the daisy.

flor'i-at-ed (flō'ri-ā-ted), a. [L. flos (flor-), flower.] Decorated with floral ornamentation: as, floriated capitals of columns.—flor'i-a'tion (-ā'shən), n.

flor'i-cul-ture (flō'ri-kul-tūr or flō'ri-), n. [L. flos (flor-), flower, + cultura, culture.] The cultivation of flowers or flowering plants.—flor'i-cul'tur-al, a.—flor'i-cul'tur-ist, n.

flor'id (flō'id), a. [L. floridus, < flos (flor-), flower.]

Abounding in or consisting of flowerst; fig., flowery or highly ornate, as language, composition, style, or a speaker or writer; abounding in decorative features or work, as architecture; of a highly embellished or showily elaborate kind, as music; in general, ornate; showy; pretentiously fine; also, bright in color, esp. bright-red, as arterial blood†; high-colored or ruddy, as complexion, cheeks, persons, etc.

Flor'i-da (flō'ri-dā) moss. A bromeliaceous epiphytic plant, Tillandsia usneoi-

Florida Moss.—a, branch, showing the leaves and stem.

fat, fāte, fär, fäll, äsk, färe; net, mē, hér; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, arđent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

des, of the southern U. S., forming pendulous tufts which drape the branches of trees.

flo-rid-i-ty (flō-rid'i-ti), n. The state or quality of being florid.—flor-id-ly (flor'id-li), adv. In a florid manner.—flor'id-ness, n. Floridity.

flo-rif-er-ous (flō-rif'e-rus), a. [L. florifer, < flos (flor-), flower, + ferre, bear.] Flower-bearing.

flo-ri-le-gi-um (flō-ri-lē'ji-um), n.; pl. -gia (-ji-ä). [NL., < L. florilegus, flower-culling, < flos (flor-), flower, + legere, gather, choose.] A collection of flowers†; fig., an anthology.

flor-in (flor'in), n. [OF. F. florin, < It. fiorino, a Florentine coin stamped with a lily, < fiore, < L. flos (flor-), flower.] A former gold coin weighing about 55 grains, first issued at Florence in 1252; a former English gold coin of Edward III., worth 6 shillings; an Austrian silver coin, equal to 2 kronen, not coined since 1892; the gulden of the Netherlands; an English silver coin worth 2 shillings, first minted in 1849.

flor-ist (flō'rist or flō'rist), n. [L. flos (flor-), flower.] One who cultivates flowers, esp. for sale; a dealer in flowers.

-florous. Adjective termination from L. flos (flor-), flower, as in biflorous, noctiflorous, tubuliflorous.

flor-u-it (flor'ū-it), [L.] 'He (or she) flourished': used in giving the date of the most successful or effective period, or the accepted period, of a person's life and activity.

flor-ry (flō'ri), a. See floury.

flos-cule (flōs'kul), n. [L. flosculus, dim. of flos, flower.] In bot., a floret.—flos-cu-lar, flos-cu-lous (flōs'kū-lär, -lus), a.

floss (flōs), n. [F. floche, earlier flosche, soft, not twisted (as silk), < It. floscio, soft, flaccid, < L. flurus, pp. of fluere, flow.] Silk or other fiber in untwisted filaments; silk, linen, etc., in untwisted strands for use in embroidery; also, the outer rough or broken silk fibers of cocoons; also, the cottony fiber yielded by the silk-cotton trees; in general, any silky filamentous matter, as the silk of maize.—floss'=silk, n. Silk in untwisted filaments or strands; also, the floss of cocoons.—floss'y, a.; compar. flossier, superl. flossiest. Of or like floss.

flot-age (flōt'āj), n. See floatage.

flot-ta-tion (flō-tā'shən), n. [For floatation: cf. F. flottaison (see flotsam).] The act or state of floating (see float, v.); esp., the floating or launching of a commercial venture, a loan, etc.

flot-til-la (flō-til'ä), n. [Sp., dim. of flota, fleet; prob. akin to E. float.] A small fleet; a fleet of small vessels.

flot-sam (flōt'sam), n. [AF. floteson, flotsam, = OF. flotaison, flooding (F. flottaison, flotation), < floter, float, flood; prob. akin to E. float.] Such part of the wreckage of a ship and its cargo as is found floating on the water. Also fig. Cf. jetsam.

frounce¹ (flouns), v. i.; flounced, flouncing. [Cf. Sw. dial. flunsa, plunge.] To plunge, as into water, a hole, etc.†; also, to make plunging or heavy, violent movements of the body, as a horse or other animal or a person; throw the body about, as in floundering or struggling; sometimes, to fling one's self about in dancing; also, to go (away, off, out, etc.) with an indignant or angry fling of the body.—frounce¹, n. A flouncing movement; esp., a sudden fling of the body in indignation or anger.

frounce² (flouns), n. [Var. of frounce.] A strip of material, wider than a ruffle, gathered and attached at one edge and with the other edge left hanging: used for trimming, esp. on women's skirts.—frounce², v. t.; flounced, flouncing. To trim with a frounce or frounces.—froun-cing (floun'sing), n. Trimming consisting of a frounce; also, material for frounces.

floun-der¹ (floun'dër), v. i. [Origin uncertain: cf. *founder*³.] To stumble†; slip, plunge, or tumble about, as in mud or snow, with strong efforts to maintain or regain the footing or balance (as, "The foot-passengers had a hard time of it floundering in the arctic drifts": Aldrich's "Story of a Bad Boy," xii.); struggle (along, on, through, etc.) with stumbling or plunging movements; fig., to struggle clumsily or helplessly in embarrassment or confusion; go (along, on, through, etc.) in action, speech, writing, etc., with clumsy slips and painful efforts to retrieve one's self (as, to flounder through a dance or an apology).—floun'dër¹, n. A floundering movement or action.

floun-der² (floun'dër), n. [ME.; prob. from Scand.] Any flatfish; esp., one of various flatfishes of the genus Pleuronectes and allied genera, as P. platessa of England, and Pseudopleuronectes americanus and Paralichthys oblongus of the eastern U. S.

Four-spotted Flounder (Paralichthys oblongus).

flour (flour), n. [An earlier spelling of flower, as meaning the 'finest part' of meal.] The finely ground meal of grain, esp. the finer meal separated by bolting; commonly, the finely ground and bolted meal of wheat; hence, any fine, soft powder (as, flour of emery).—flour, v. t. To sprinkle or dredge with flour, as food or utensils in cookery; powder (a wig); also, to make (grain, etc.) into flour; grind and bolt.—flour'=bee'tle, n. Any of various beetles that live on flour or farinaceous substances, as Tenebrio molitor, whose larva is a common meal-worm.

flour-ish (flur'ish), v. [OF. florir (floriss-) (F. fleurir), < L. florere, flower, bloom, flourish, < flos (flor-), E. flower.] I. intr. To flower† or blossom†; also, to grow luxuriantly, or thrive in growth, as a plant; hence, in general, to thrive, do well, or prosper (as, an age when art and learning flourished; the enterprise flourishes; churches and kingdoms flourish; "The stars shall fade away, the sun . . . Grow dim . . . But thou shalt flourish in immortal youth," Addison's "Cato," v. 1); be in its or one's prime; often, of persons, to be in the most successful or effective period, or the best-known or the accepted period, of life and activity, at a date specified (as, Sappho, the Greek poetess, flourished about 600 B.C.: cf. floruit); also, to add embellishments or flourishes to writing, letters, etc.; make fanciful strokes with a pen or the like; speak or write in flowery or pretentious language; descant (on or upon); also, to make strokes or flourishes with a brandished weapon or the like; hence, to make a parade or ostentatious display; in music, to play a showy passage; play in a showy manner; also, to sound a trumpet-call or fanfare. II. tr. To cause to bloom, thrive, or prosper†; also, to adorn with decorative work or designs, color, etc. (now only as in next sense); embellish (writing, letters, etc.) with sweeping or fanciful curves or lines; embellish (discourse, etc.) with flowery or pretentious language†; also, to brandish or wave (a sword, a stick, the limbs, etc.) about in the air; hence, to parade, flaunt, or display ostentatiously (as, to flourish one's wealth or authority).—flour'ish, n. The state of flowering or blossoming†; a blossom, or blossoms collectively (Sc. and north. Eng.); also, the condition of flourishing or thriving; the bloom of youth or life (as, "A Prince In the mid might and flourish of his May, Gawain, surnamed The Courteous, fair and strong": Tennyson's "Lancelot and Elaine," 552); prosperity; also, a decoration or embellishment, now esp. one of sweeping or fanciful curves, etc., about writing, an initial letter, or the like; also, rhetorical embellishment, or an instance of it; a parade of fine language; an expression used merely for effect; also, a brandishing or waving, as of a sword, a stick, or the like; hence, a parade or ostentatious display; in music, an elaborate passage or addition merely for display; also, a trumpet-call or fanfare.—flour'ish-er, n.—flour'ish-ing, p. a. That flourishes; vigorous in growth; thriving; prosperous.—flour'ish-ing-ly, adv.

Flour-beetle (Tenebrio molitor). (Line shows natural size.)

flour-y (flour'i), a. Of, pertaining to, or resembling flour; covered or white with flour.

flout (flout), v. [Origin uncertain: cf. flite, flyte.] I. intr. To mock, gibe, or scoff (often with at); behave with disdain or contumely. II. tr. To mock; scoff at; treat with disdain or contempt.—flout, n. A flouting speech or action; a mocking insult; a gibe: as, "Bruise me with scorn, confound me with a flout" (Shakspeare's "Love's Labour's Lost," v. 2. 397).—flout'er, n.—flout'ing-ly, adv.

flow¹ (fł or flou), n. [Cf. Icel. flōi, marshy moor, bay, akin to E. flow.] A marshy tract; a bog; a quicksand; also, a basin or arm of the sea (as, Scapa Flow, in the Orkney Islands). [Sc. and north. Eng.]

flow² (fłō), v. [AS. flōwan = D. vloeien = Icel. flōa; akin to E. flood, and perhaps to *fleet*¹ and float.] I. intr. To move along in a stream, as a liquid; stream; run; circulate, as the blood; become liquid†; also, to come or go as in a stream, as persons or things; proceed continuously and smoothly, like a stream, as thought, speech, or verse; fall or hang loosely at full length, as hair; also, to stream or well forth; gush out; issue or proceed from a source; discharge a stream, as of blood; also, to rise and advance, as the tide (opposed to ebb); be in flood or overfull, as a river†; overflow or abound with something (as, "a land flowing with milk and honey"; Ex. iii. 8). II. tr. To cause or permit to flow; also, to cover with water or other liquid; flood.—flow², n. The act of flowing; movement in or as in a stream; any continuous movement, as of thought, speech, trade, etc., like that of a stream of water; an outpouring or discharge of something, as in a stream (as, to check a flow of blood); the rise of the tide (opposed to ebb); an overflowing (as, "regions fatten'd with the flows of Nile": Pope's tr. Homer's "Odyssey," iv.); also, that which flows; a stream, as of water or other fluid or of anything regarded as flowing (as, to cross a lava-flow; "A most silver flow Of subtle-paced counsel in distress," Tennyson's "Isabel"); also, the rate of flowing; the volume of fluid that flows through a passage of any given section in a unit of time.—flow'age (-āj), n. The act of flowing; flow; the state of being flowed or flooded; also, the flowing or overflowing liquid.

flow-er (flou'ér), n. [OF. flor, flour (F. fleur), < L. flos (flor-), flower; akin to E. blow.] The blossom or bloom of a plant; in botanical use, that part of a seed-plant comprising the reproductive organs and their envelops (if any), esp. when such envelops are more or less conspicuous in form and color (in scientific use, usually applied to a single complex structure consisting typically of pistil, stamens, corolla, and calyx, but in popular use applied also to a complete inflorescence or cluster of such structures); an analogous reproductive structure in other plants, as the mosses; a plant considered with reference to its blossom or cultivated for its floral beauty; also, an ornament representing a flower; any ornament or adornment; an ornament or figure of speech; also, the best or finest member or part of a number, body, or whole (as, to be the flower of the family); the finest or choicest product of anything (as, this work was the flower of his genius); the best or finest example of some quality (as, "Lancelot, the flower of bravery": Tennyson's "Lancelot and Elaine," 113); also, the state of efflorescence or bloom (as, plants in flower); the finest or most flourishing state or period, as of life or beauty; the prime; pl., in chem., a substance in the form of a fine powder, esp. as obtained by sublimation (as, flowers of sulphur).—flow'er, v. I. intr. To produce flowers, or blossom, as a plant; abound in flowers, as ground; come into full bloom, as a flower; fig., to come out into full development or display (often with out); froth, as beer†; also, to flourish† or prosper; sometimes, to flourish, or be alive and active, at a specified time†. II. tr. To cause (a plant) to blossom or bloom; also, to cover or deck with flowers; embellish with a design of flowers, as by embroidery (as, "A queenlier thing Than to weave silk and flower it with fine gold": Swinburne's "Bothwell," i. 5); in general, to decorate† or adorn.—flow'er-age (-āj), n. The process or state of flowering; also, flowers collectively; an assemblage of flowers; floral ornament or decoration.

flow-er-de-luce (flou'ér-dē-lūs'), n. [Old var. of fleur-de-lis, conformed to flower.] The iris (flower or plant); also, the heraldic fleur-de-lis. [Archaic.]

flow-er-ed (flou'érd), a. Having or bearing flowers (as, pink-flowered); also, covered or decked with flowers; embellished with a design of flowers, as fabrics, wall-paper, etc.

flow-er-er (flou'ér-ér), n. A plant that flowers.

flow-er-et (flou'ér-et), n. A small flower; a floret.

flow-er-head (flou'ér-hed), n. In bot., an inflorescence consisting of a dense cluster of sessile florets; a capitulum.

flow-er-i-ly (flou'ér-i-li), adv. In a flowery manner.—flow'-er-i-ness, n.

flow-er-ing (flou'ér-ing), p. a. Bearing flowers; being in bloom.—flowering almond, a shrub, Amygdalus japonica, much cultivated for its pink flowers.—flowering maple, the abutilon.

flow-er-less (flou'ér-les), a. Without flowers; in bot., cryptogamous.

flow-er-pot (flou'ér-pot), n. A pot to hold earth for a plant to grow in: commonly made of burned clay, unglazed, and tapering a little toward the bottom, which is perforated for drainage.

flow-er-y (flou'ér-i), a. Abounding in, consisting of, or pertaining to flowers (as, flowery meadows; flowery garlands; flowery fragrance); also, embellished with a design of flowers, as a fabric; flowered; also, abounding in or given to flowers of speech, or fine or showy words and expressions, as language or a speaker; highly ornate; florid.

flow-ing (flō'ing), p. a. That flows; moving in or as in a stream; proceeding smoothly or with ease, as language, eloquence, the pen, etc.; smoothly and gracefully continuous throughout the length, as lines or curves; falling or hanging loosely at full length, as hair.—flow'ing-ly, adv.—flow'ing-ness, n.

flown¹ (flōn). Past participle of *fly*².

flown² (flōn), p. a. [Obs. pp. of *flow*².] Swollen, as a river in flood†; filled to excess (archaic: as, "The sons of Belial, flown with insolence and wine," Milton's "Paradise Lost," i. 502).

flu (flō), n. Shortened form of influenza. [Colloq.]

flub-dub (flub'dub), n. [Prob. a made word.] Pretentious nonsense or show; airs. [Colloq.]

fluc-tu-ant (fluk'tū-ant), a. Fluctuating; varying.

fluc-tu-ate (fluk'tū-āt), v.; -ated, -ating. [L. fluctuatus, pp. of fluctuare, < fluctus, a wave, < fluere, flow.] I. intr. To move in waves or like waves, as the sea, a flag, etc.; hence, to change continually, as by turns, from one course, position, condition, amount, etc., to another, as the mind, opinion, policy, prices, temperature, etc.; often, to vary with alternating tendencies, as between opposite courses, positions, etc. (as, to fluctuate between hope and fear; the election returns fluctuated between the two candidates); waver. II. tr. To put into wave-like motion (as, "A breeze began to tremble o'er The large leaves of the sycamore, And fluctuate all the still perfume": Tennyson's "In Memoriam," xcv.); also, to cause to waver. [Rare.]—fluc-tu-a'tion (-ā'shōn), n. [L. fluctuatio (n-).] The act of fluctuating; wave-like motion; continual change from one course, position, condition, etc., to another; alternating variation, as between opposite courses, etc.; wavering.

flue¹ (flō), n. [Origin obscure.] Formerly, a chimney; now, the smoke-passage in a chimney; any duct or passage for air, gases, or the like; in certain steam-boilers, any of the pipes or tubes through which hot gases, etc., are conveyed in order to heat surrounding or adjacent water.

flue² (flō), n. [Origin uncertain; perhaps akin to *fly*²: cf. fluff.] Downy matter; fluff.

flue³ (flō), n. [Cf. *fluke*¹.] The fluke of an anchor; a barb or fluke of a harpoon; a barb of a feather.—fluod, a. Having a flue or flues.

flu-ent (flō'ent), a. [L. fluens (fluent-), ppr. of fluere, flow.] Flowing, as a stream; capable of flowing, or fluid, as liquids or gases; fig., not fixed or stable in form; also, proceeding smoothly and easily, as speech, a speaker or writer, the pen, etc.; characterized by readiness of expression, as style; also, falling loosely, or flowing, as hair.—flu'en-cy, flu'ent-ness, n.—flu'ent-ly, adv.

flue-y (flō'i), a. Covered with flue; fluffy; downy.

fluff (fluf), n. [Appar. var. of *flue*².] Light, downy particles, as of cotton; also, a downy mass; something downy or fluffy.—fluff, v. I. tr. To make into fluff; shake or puff

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; tū, then; y, you;

out (feathers, hair, etc.) into a fluffy mass; also, to buff (leather). II. intr. To become fluffy; move, float, or settle down like fluff. —fluff'y, a.; compar. fluffier, superl. fluffiest. Of, like, or covered with fluff; soft and light as fluff. —fluff'iness, n.

flu-id (flō'id), a. [L. fluidus, < fluere, flow.] Capable of flowing; liquid or gaseous; fig., changing readily; shifting; not fixed, stable, or rigid. Also, of or pertaining to fluids: see phrases following. —fluid dram, the eighth part of a fluid ounce: often written fluidrachm. —fluid measure, apothecaries' measure. See under apothecary. —fluid ounce, a measure of capacity equal to one sixteenth of a pint in the U. S., and to one twentieth of an imperial pint (28.4 cubic centimeters) in Great Britain: often written fluidounce. —flu'id, n. One of a class of substances (including liquids and gases) whose particles move freely among themselves and thus yield readily to pressure; also, any of various hypothetical subtle substances, as that to which electrical phenomena were formerly attributed. —flu-id-ic (flō'id'ik), a. Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a fluid; fluid. —fluidic body, in spiritualism, a supposed fluid double of the physical body. —flu-id'i-ty, n. Fluid state or quality. —flu'id-ly, adv. —flu'id-ness, n. —flu'id-ounce (-ouns), n. See fluid ounce, under fluid, a. —flu'i-drachm (-i-dram), n. See fluid dram, under fluid, a.

fluke¹ (flök), n. [Origin uncertain.] The flat triangular piece at the end of each arm of an anchor, forming the part which catches in the ground; also, a barb, or the barbed head, of a harpoon, etc.; also, either half of the triangular tail of a whale.

fluke² (flök), n. [AS. flōc.] Any of various flatfishes, as the common British flounder; also, any of several trematode worms (which in certain stages resemble flounders in shape) parasitic in man and certain animals, esp. sheep; sometimes, any trematode.

fluke³ (flök), n. [Origin uncertain.] An accidentally successful stroke in billiards; hence, any accidental advantage; a lucky chance; also, a failure; a fiasco. [Colloq.] —fluke³, v.; fluked, fluking. I. tr. To hit, make, or gain by a fluke. [Colloq.] II. intr. To make a fluke in billiards; gain an advantage as by chance; also, to make a failure. [Colloq.] —fluk-y (flō'ki), a. Of the nature of a fluke; obtained by chance rather than skill; also, uncertain, as a wind. [Colloq.] —fluk'i-ness, n.

flume (flōm), n. [OF. flum, < L. flumen, stream, river, < fluere, flow.] A stream†; also, a deep, narrow defile, esp. one containing a mountain torrent; also, an artificial channel or trough for conducting water, as one in which logs, etc., are transported. —flume, v. t.; flumed, fluming. To transport, as lumber, in a flume, also, to divert, as a river, etc., by a flume.

flum-mer-y (flum'er-i), n. [W. llymrw.] Oatmeal or flour boiled with water until thick (prov. Eng., Sc., and Ir.); any of various dishes made of flour, milk, eggs, sugar, etc.; fig., agreeable humbug; empty compliment; nonsense.

flum-mox, flum-mux (flum'oks, -uks), v. t. [Origin obscure.] To bewilder; confound; bring to confusion. [Slang.]

flump (flump), v. i. or t. [Imit.] To plump down suddenly or heavily; flop. [Colloq.] —flump, n. The act or sound of flumping. [Colloq.]

flung (flung), preterit and past participle of fling.

flunk (flungk), v. [Origin uncertain: cf. *funk*².] I. intr. To fail, as a student in a recitation or examination; give up; back (out). [Colloq., U. S.] II. tr. To fail in (a recitation, etc.); also, to cause to fail. [Colloq., U. S.] —flunk, n. A flunking; a failure. [Colloq., U. S.]

flun-ky, flun-key (flung'ki), n.; pl. -kies, -keys (-kiz). [Orig. Sc.; perhaps akin to flank.] A male servant in livery (as, "His flunkies answer at the bell": Burns's "Twa Dogs," 54); a lackey; also, a servile follower; a toady. —flun'ky-ism, n. Servility; toadying.

flu-o- Form of fluorine used in combination.

flu-or (flō'qr), n. [So called from its use as a flux, < L. fluor, a flowing, < fluere, flow.] Fluor-spar; fluorite. See fluor-spar.

flu-or-esce (flō-qr-es'), v. i.; -esced, -escing. [From fluorescence.] To exhibit fluorescence.

flu-or-es-cence (flō-qr-es'ens), n. [From fluor (-spar).] The property possessed by certain transparent substances, such as fluor-spar, of emitting light of a certain color, or becoming self-luminous, upon exposure to the ultra-violet and other rays; also, the light or luminosity so produced. —flu-or-es-cent, a. Characterized by or pertaining to fluorescence. flu-or-ic (flō-qr'ik), a. Pertaining to or obtained from fluor or fluorine.

flu-or-ide, flu-or-id (flō'qr-id or -id, -id), n. In chem., a compound of fluorine with another element or a radical.

flu-or-ine, flu-or-in (flō'qr-in), n. [From fluor.] Chem. sym., F; at. wt., 19.0. A non-metallic element, a pale greenish-yellow corrosive gas, occurring combined, esp. in fluor-spar and other minerals.

flu-or-ite (flō'qr-it), n. Fluor-spar.

flu-or-o-scope (flō'qr-ō-skōp or flō-qr'-), n. [From fluor (-escence) + -scope.] A tube or box fitted with a screen coated with a fluorescent substance, used for viewing objects exposed to the Röntgen rays. —flu"or-o-scop'ic (-skōp'ik), a. Pertaining to the fluoroscope or to fluoroscopy. —flu"or-o-scop'i-cal-ly, adv. —flu-or-os'co-py (-os'kō-pi), n. [See -scopy.] The art of using the fluoroscope, or of examining by means of a fluorescent screen the shadows of bodies exposed to the Röntgen rays.

Fluoroscope.

flu-or-spar (flō'qr-spār), n. [See fluor.] A native fluoride of calcium, CaF₂, sometimes colorless and transparent, but more often in tints of yellow, green, blue, and red, used as a flux and for ornamental purposes.

flu-o-sil-i-cate (flō-ō-sil'i-kāt), n. [See fluor.] In chem., a salt of fluosilicic acid. —flu"o-si-li'cic (-si-lis'ik), a. In chem., noting or pertaining to an acid (H₂SiF₆) containing silicon and fluorine, and obtained only as an aqueous solution.

flur-ry (flur'i), n.; pl. flurries (-iz). [Origin uncertain; perhaps imit.] A sudden gusty blowing of wind; also, a light gusty shower or snowfall; also, a sudden commotion; agitation; perturbation; also, the spasmodic movements of a dying whale. —flur'ry, v. t.; -ried, -rying. To put (a person) into a flurry; agitate; perturb: as, "O lud! now, Mr. Fag— you flurry one so" (Sheridan's "Rivals," ii. 2).

flush¹ (flush), v. [ME. flusshen; appar. imit.: cf. flash.] I. intr. To fly out or start up suddenly, as a bird when disturbed. II. tr. To cause (birds, etc.) to start up. —flush¹, n. The act of flushing; also, a flushed bird, or flock of birds.

flush² (flush), v. [*Cf. flush*¹ and flash.] I. intr. To flow with a rush; flow and spread suddenly; also, to become suffused with color; blush; redden; also, to send out shoots, as a tea-plant. II. tr. To flood with water, as for cleansing purposes; wash out (a sewer, etc.); also, to suffuse with color; redden; also, to animate or elate (as, "armies flushed with conquest": Addison's "Cato," i. 2). —flush², n. A rushing or overspreading flow, as of water; also, a suffusion with color; a blush; a rosy glow; glowing freshness or vigor (as, the flush of youth); also, a rush of emotion (as, a flush of joy); elation (as, in the first flush of victory); also, a fresh growth, as of shoots and leaves.

flush³ (flush). [Perhaps < *flush*².] I. a. Quite full; full to overflowing; also, full of vigor; lusty; also, well supplied, as with money; affluent; prosperous; sometimes, abundant or plentiful, as money; also, flushed with color; blushing; also, even or level, as with a surface; in one plane (as, a flush deck, one which is unbroken by deck-houses, etc., and has an even surface fore and aft or from stem to stern). II. adv. So as to be flush or even. —flush³, v. t. To make flush or even.

flush⁴ (flush), n. [F. (obs.) flus, for flux, flow, flush (cf. 'run of cards'), < L. fluxus, E. flux.] In card-playing, a hand or set of cards all of the same suit.

flus-ter (flus'tēr), v. [Cf. Icel. flaustra, be flustered, flaustr, fluster, hurry.] I. tr. To excite and confuse with drink (as, "Three lads of Cyprus . . . Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups": Shakspeare's "Othello," ii. 3. 60); also, to render agitated and confused; flurry. II. intr. To become confused; move with agitation or flurry (as, "At Miltoun's approach two blackbirds flustered out through the netting and flew away": Galsworthy's "Patrician," ii. 4).—flus'ter, n. Confusion; flurry.—flus'trate (-trät), v. t.; -trätet, -trät-ing. To fluster. [Colloq.]-flus-tra'tion (-trä'shön), n.

(variable) q as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; '', secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

flute (flöt), n. [OF. flaute, flehute, flaute, flahute; origin unknown.] A musical wind-instrument consisting of a tube with a series of finger-holes or keys for producing tone variations, in early forms blown through a mouthpiece at the upper end, but in the form now in common use having a hole in the side near the upper end across the edge of which a current of air is blown; also, a channel or furrow with rounded section, as in a pillar.—flute, v.; fluted, fluting. I. intr. To play on a flute; also, to produce or utter flute-like sounds (as, "The thrushes are in song there, fluting from the nest": Masfield's "West Wind"). II. tr. To utter in flute-like tones; also, to form flutes, grooves, or furrows in.—flut-ed (flöt'ed), p. a. Uttered in flute-like tones; also, having flutes or grooves, as a pillar; furrowed.—flut'er, n.—flut'ing, n. The act of one who flutes; a flute-like sound; also, the act of making flutes, or ornamenting with flutes; fluted work; a flute, groove, or furrow.—flut'ing=i'ron, n. A specially shaped iron for pressing ruffles, etc., into a fluted form.—flut'-ist, n. A flute-player.

Modern Flute.

flut-ter (flut'ér), v. [AS. floterian, a freq. form connected with fléotan, float, E. fleet.] I. intr. To float or toss on waves; also, to toss or wave in air, as a flag; move in quick, irregular motions; beat fast and irregularly, as the heart; be tremulous or agitated (as, "With this my lady swept out of the room, fluttering with her own audacity": Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," lv.); also, to go with irregular motions or aimless course (as, "One flaunts in rags, one flutters in brocade": Pope's "Essay on Man," iv. 196); also, of birds, etc., to flap the wings, or fly with flapping movements. II. tr. To cause to flutter; vibrate; agitate; throw into confusion or tremulous excitement (as, to flutter one's nerves).—flut'-ter, n. A fluttering movement or state; agitation; confused excitement.—flut-ter-er, n.—flut-ter-ing-ly, adv.—flut-ter-y, a. Fluttering; apt to flutter.

Fluting-iron.

flut-y (flöt'ti), a. Flute-like, as in tone.

flu-vi-al (flö'vi-al), a. [L. fluvialis, < fluvius, river, < fluere, flow.] Of, pertaining to, or produced by a river.

flu-vi-a-tile (flö'vi-a-til), a. [L. fluvialis, < fluvius, river; see fluvial.] Pertaining or peculiar to rivers; found in or near rivers.

fluvio-. Form of L. fluvius, river, used in combination.—flu-vi-o-graph (flö'vi-ö-gräf), n. [+ -graph.] An instrument which measures and records automatically the rise and fall of a river.—flu-vi-ol'o-gy (-öl'ö-jî), n. [+ -logy.] The science of rivers and streams.—flu'vi-o-ma-rine' (-ö-mä-rën'), a. Noting or pertaining to deposits formed by rivers in estuaries or on the bottom of the sea.—flu-vi-om'e-ter (-öm'e-tér), n. [+ -meter.] An apparatus for determining the height of water in a river.

flux (fluks), n. [OF. F. flux, < L. fluxus, a flowing, < fluere, flow.] A flowing or flow; the flowing in of the tide; a stream (often fig.); specif., an abnormal or morbid discharge of blood or other matter from the body; dysentery ('bloody flux'); also, the rate of flow of a fluid, heat, or the like; also, continuous passage; continuous change (as, "The matter is in a perpetual flux, and never at a stay": Bacon's "Essays," Of Vicissitude of Things); also, fusion; also, a substance, as borax or fluor-spar, used to promote the fusion of metals or minerals.—magnetic flux. See under magnetic.—flux, v. I. tr. To purget; also, to fuse; treat with a flux. II. intr. To flow; also, to change.—flux-ion (fluk'shön), n. [F. fluxion, < L. fluxio(n-), < fluere.] The act of flowing; a flow or flux; in math., the rate of change of a continuously varying quantity.—flux'ion-al, flux'ion-a-ry (-ä-rî), a.—flux'ion-al-ly, adv.—flux'me'ter (-më'tër), n. In elect., an instrument for measuring magnetic flux.

fly¹ (fli), n.; pl. flies (fliz). [AS. flēoge = D. vlieg = G. fliege, a fly; from the root of E. fly.] Orig., any winged insect (as, a butterfly); now, any of the two-winged insects constituting the order Diptera ('true flies'), and esp. the family Muscidae, as Musca domestica (the common 'house-fly'); also, a fish-hook dressed with silk, tinsel, etc., so as to resemble an insect.

fly² (fi), v.; pret. flew, pp. flown, ppr. flying. [AS. flēogan = D. vliegen = G. fliegen = Icel. flýga, fly; cf. flee.] I. intr. To move through the air on wings, as a bird; travel through the air in an aeroplane or the like, or as an aeroplane does; be borne through the air by the wind or any other force or agency; also, to float or flutter in the air, as a flag, the hair, etc.; also, to move or pass swiftly (as, the ship flies before the wind); move with a start or rush (as, to fly to arms); spring with violence (as, a dog flies at an intruder); be forced or driven suddenly (as, "From the cold stone sparks of fire do fly": Shakspeare's "Lucrece," 177); be thrown (open, up, etc.; as, "Up flew the windows all," Cowper's "John Gilpin," 110); burst (apart, in pieces, etc.). also, to flee, run away, or take flight (as, "For those that fly may fight again, Which he can never do that's slain": Butler's "Hudibras," iii. 3); withdraw hastily; pass quickly away. II. tr. To cause to fly (as, "I'll fly my hawk with yours": Heywood's "Woman Killed with Kindness," i. 1); pilot (an aeroplane or the like) in flight; carry in an aeroplane or the like, as a passenger; perform by flying (as, "Ere the bat hath flown His cloister'd flight": Shakspeare's "Macbeth," iii. 2. 40); traverse or cross by flying (as, to fly the Atlantic in an aeroplane); also, to cause to float or flutter in the air, as a kite or a flag; also, to chase with a hawk; attack by flying, as a hawk does; also, to flee from; shun.—fly², n.; pl. flies (fliz). The act or an act of flying; a flight; the course of a flying object, as a ball; also, something that flies, as a ball batted high in the air; a light public carriage for passengers (Eng.: as, "She came . . . driving up from the station in a fly," Galsworthy's "Patrician," ii. 3); a regulating device for clockwork, etc., consisting of an arrangement of vanes on a revolving axis; a fly-wheel; the extent of a flag from the staff to the outer end, or the outer end itself; a piece of canvas extending over the ridge-pole of a tent and forming an outer roof; a flap forming the door of a tent; a strip sewed along one edge to a garment, to aid in concealing the buttons; pl., the space and apparatus above the stage in a theater.—fly², a. [Appar. < *fly*², v.] Knowing; sharp; smart. [Slang.]

fly-ag-a-ric (fli'ag'ä-rik), n. A very poisonous mushroom, Amanita muscaria; sometimes used for making a poison for flies. Cf. amanita. Also fly'am-a-ni'ta (-am-ä-ni'tä).

fly-a-way (fli'ä-wä"), a. Fluttering; streaming; also, flighty; volatile; frivolous.

fly-blow (fli'blö), n. The egg or young larva of a flesh-fly, deposited on meat, etc.—fly-blow, v. t. To taint with or as with flyblows.—fly'blown, a. Tainted with flyblows; spoiled; corrupt.

fly-boat (fli'böt), n. [Cf. D. vlieboot.] A kind of fast sailing-vessel formerly in use; a flat-bottomed Dutch coaster; a swift boat for canal transportation.

fly-book (fli'bük), n. An angler's book-like case for holding artificial flies.

Fly-book.

fat, fäte, fär, fäll, äsk, färe; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lüte, pull; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviary, elect. agnōv, into, unite; (obscured) errant, operä, ardent, actör, natüre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

fly-catch-er (flī'kach'ēr), n. One who or that which catches flies; usually, a bird that captures insects on the wing; esp., a bird of the family Muscicapidae, as Muscicapa grisola (the 'spotted flycatcher' of Europe) and Seisura inquieta (the 'restless flycatcher' of Australia), or a bird of the American family Tyrannidae, as the kingbird.

fly'er, n. See flier.

fly=fish (flī'-fish), v. i. To fish with flies, natural or artificial, as bait. —fly'=fish'ing, n.

fly-ing (flī'ing), p. a. That flies; making flight through the air (as, "a fiery flying serpent," Isa. xiv. 29; a flying circus, see circus); passing through the air (as, flying sand); floating, fluttering or waving, or hanging or moving freely, in the air (as, flying kites; flying colors, or flags, esp. as ensigns of victory; a flying jib, a triangular sail set outside of the jib); extending through the air (as, a flying buttress: see under buttress, n.); moving swiftly (as, "Earth rolls back beneath the flying steed"; Pope's "Windsor Forest," 158); made while moving swiftly (as, a flying start, a start, as of a race, made at full speed, as after a preparatory run; a flying jump, one made after a run or while running); hasty (as, to make a flying trip; to pay one a flying visit); designed for swiftness (as, flying artillery); also, fleeing, running away, or taking flight. —fly-ing=boat', n. A hydro-aëroplane whose main body consists of a single hull or boat. —fly-ing=drag'on, n. Any of the small arboreal lizards of the genus Draco. See dragon. —Fly-ing Dutch'man. A legendary spectral Dutch ship supposed to be seen at sea, esp. near the Cape of Good Hope; also, the captain of this ship, supposed to have been condemned to sail the sea, beating against the wind, till the day of judgment.

—Fly-ing Fish. In astron., the southern constellation Piscis Volans. —fly-ing=fish, n. Any of certain fishes with wing-like pectoral fins which help them to glide for some distance through the air after leaping from the water; esp., a fish of the genus Exocoetus, as E. volitans, common in open seas. —fly-ing=fox', n. Any large fruit-eating bat of the family Pteropodidae, esp. of the genus Pteropus, as P. edulis, of old-world tropical regions: so called from the fox-like head. —fly-ing=frog', n. An East Indian frog of the genus Rhacophorus, with large webbed toes which enable it to glide through the air. —fly-ing=gur'nard, n. Any of several fishes of the acanthopterygian genus Cephalacanthus, esp. C. volitans, having wing-like pectoral fins which enable them to move for some distance through the air after leaping from the water. —fly-ing=le'mur, n. An East Indian lemur-like mammal of the family Galeopithecidae, having a fold of skin on each side of the body, which acts like a parachute as the animal leaps from tree to tree. —fly-ing=ma-chine', n. A contrivance which sustains itself in and propels itself through the air; an aëroplane or the like. —fly-ing=mouse', n. A very small Australian flying-phalanger of the genus Acrobates. —fly-ing=pha-lan'ger, n. A phalanger (marsupial quadruped) with a parachute-like fold of skin at each side, which assists it in leaping. —fly-ing=squir'rel, n. A squirrel-like animal, esp. of the genus Sciuropterus, as S. volans of the eastern U. S., with folds of skin connecting the fore and hind legs, enabling it to take long flying leaps; also, a flying-phalanger.

Spotted Flycatcher (Muscicapa grisola).

Flying-fox (Pteropus edulis).

Flying-frog (Rhacophorus marmoratus).

Flying-squirrel (Sciuropterus volans).

fly-leaf (flī'lēf), n.;

pl. -leaves (-lēvz).

A blank leaf at the beginning or the end of a book or the like.

fly=pa-per (flī'pā'pēr), n. Paper prepared to destroy flies by poisoning them or by catching them on its sticky surface.

flysch (flīsh), n. [Swiss.] In geol., a partly Tertiary, partly Cretaceous formation, consisting chiefly of sandstones, soft marls, and sandy shales, found in the Alps, etc.

fly=speck (flī'spek), n. A speck or tiny stain from the excrement of a fly; a minute spot. —fly'=speck, v. t. To mark with fly-specks.

flyte (flīt), v. and n. See flite.

fly-trap (flī'trap), n. A trap for flies; also, any of various plants which entrap insects, as Apoynum androsæmifolium, a species of dogbane, or Dionæa muscipula (see Venus's fly-trap).

fly=weight (flī'wāt), n. A boxer or other contestant of very light weight, lighter than a feather-weight and a bantam-weight.

fly=wheel (flī'hwēl), n. A heavy wheel which by its momentum tends to equalize the speed of machinery with which it is connected.

foal (fōl), n. [AS. fol = OHG. folo = Icel. foli = Goth. fula, foal; akin to L. pullus, Gr. πῶλος, young animal, foal.] The young of the horse, ass, or any allied animal; a colt or filly. —foal, v. t. or i. To bring forth (a foal).

foam (fōm), n. [AS. fām = G. feim: cf. Skt. phena, foam.] An aggregation of minute bubbles formed on the surface of a liquid by agitation, fermentation, etc.; froth formed in the mouth, as in epilepsy and rabies; the froth of perspiration formed on the skin of a horse or other animal from great exertion; spume. —foam, v. i. intr. To form or gather foam; emit foam; froth. II. tr. To cause to foam; also, to cover with foam; also, to emit in or like foam. —foam-ing-ly, adv. —foam'less, a. Free from foam. —foam'y, a.; compar. foamier, superl. foamiest. Covered with or full of foam; consisting of foam; resembling foam; of or pertaining to foam.

fob¹ (fob), v. t.; fobbed, fobbing. [Appar. a var. of fop, v.] To fool; trick; cheat; also, to bring, put, or foist, as into a position, by trickery; pass or palm off, as on a person; put (off), as a person, by pretenses or deceit. —fob¹, n. A trick; an artifice.

fob² (fob), n. [Origin uncertain.] A small pocket just below the waist-line in trousers or breeches, to hold a watch, etc.; also, a short chain or ribbon with a seal or the like, attached to a watch and worn hanging from the pocket.

fo-cal (fō'kal), a. Of or pertaining to a focus: as, the focal distance or length of a lens (the distance from its center to its principal focus). —fo'cal-ize (-īz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. To focus. —fo'cal-i-za'tion (-ī-zā'shən), n. —fo'cal-ly, adv.

fo-cus (fō'kus), n.; pl. -cuses or -ci (-sī). [L., hearth, fireplace.] A point at which rays of light, heat, or the like, meet after being reflected or refracted; a point from which diverging rays appear to proceed, or a point at which converging rays would meet if they could be prolonged in the same direction ('virtual focus'); the point to which parallel rays are brought upon striking a converging lens or mirror ('principal focus'), or the point from which they appear to diverge upon striking a diverging lens or mirror ('principal virtual focus'); either of two points ('conjugate foci') so situated in relation to a lens or mirror that the rays emitted from a luminous body at either point are refracted or reflected to the other; also, the position of an object, or the adjustment of an optical device, necessary to produce a clear image (as, in focus; out of focus); clear and sharply defined condition of an image, etc., resulting from such position or adjustment; also, the focal length of a lens; in fig. use, a central point, as of attraction, attention, or activity (as, "Every upstart of fortune . . . presents himself at Bath, as in the very focus of observation": Smollett's "Humphry Clinker," April 23); in geom., one of the points from which the distances to any point of a given curve are in a linear relation.—fo'cus, v.; -cused or -cussed, -cusing or -cussing. I. tr. To bring (rays of light, etc.) to a focus; fig., to concentrate (as, to focus one's attention on a matter); also, to adjust (a lens, the eye, etc.) to a focus; also, to bring (an image, etc.) into focus. II. intr. To become focused.—fo'cus-er, n.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ", secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

fod-der (fod'ēr), n. [AS. fōdor = D. voeder = G. futter = Icel. fōdhr, fodder; akin to E. food.] Food for cattle, horses, etc., esp. such food as hay, straw, vegetables, etc.; specif., in the U. S., the stalks and leaves of Indian corn or maize as fed to cattle, etc.—fod'der, v. t. To feed with or as with fodder.

foe (fō), n. [AS. gefā, < ge-, together, mutually, + fāh, hostile: cf. *feud*¹.] One who entertains enmity, hatred, or malice against another; an enemy; also, an adversary in combat; sometimes, an adversary or opponent in a game or contest; also, an enemy in war; one belonging to a hostile army or nation; a hostile army or force (as, "Whispering with white lips—"The foe! they come! they come!" Byron's "Childe Harold," iii. 25); also, a person who is opposed in feeling, principle, etc., to something (as, to be a foe to all measures of reform); a thing that is opposed or inimical (as, intemperance is a foe to thrift).

foehn (fēn), n. See föhn.

foe-man (fō'man), n.; pl. -men. [AS. fāhman, < fāh, hostile, + man, man.] A foe, as in war.

foe'tal, etc., foet'id, etc. See fetal, etc., fetid, etc.

fog¹ (fog), n. [ME. fogge; origin unknown.] A second growth of grass, as after mowing; aftergrass; also, long grass left standing in fields during the winter; also, moss. [Prov.]

fog² (fog), n. [Cf. Dan. fog, spray, shower, drift, Icel. fok, spray, drift (of snow, sand, ashes, etc.), fjūk, snow-storm, fjūka, be driven by the wind, as spray, snow, etc.] A cloud-like mass or layer of minute globules of water in the air near the earth's surface; thick mist; hence, any darkened state of the atmosphere, or the diffused substance which causes it; a dark mass, as of smoke; fig., an influence or a condition that prevents clear mental perception (as, to dispel the fog of ignorance; to be in a fog of doubt); in photog., a (usually uniform) darkening or opacity of the whole or of parts of a developed plate or a print.—fog², v.; fogged, fogging. I. tr. To envelop with or as with fog; befog; confuse; in photog., to affect (a plate or print) by fog. II. intr. To become enveloped or obscured with or as with fog.—fog'=bank, n. A stratum of fog as seen from a distance.—fog'=bell, n. A bell, as on a rocky coast, for warning vessels in foggy weather.—fog'=bow (-bō), n. A whitish or slightly colored bow or appearance analogous to a rainbow, sometimes seen in fog.—fog'=dog, n. A bright spot sometimes seen in a fog-bank.—fog'=fruit, n. A procumbent verbenaceous plant, Lippia lanceolata, with small pale-blue flowers; any of certain other plants of this genus.

fog-gage (fog'āj), n. [See *fog*¹.] The pasturing of cattle on fog or aftergrass, or the right of such pasturing; also, fog or aftergrass. [Chiefly prov.]

fog-gy (fog'ī), a.; compar. foggier, superl. foggiest. Abounding in, thick with, or resembling fog; misty; dim; obscure;

in photog., affected by fog.—fog'gi-ly, adv.—fog'gi-ness, *n. fog-horn (fog'hörn), n. A horn for sounding warning signals, as to vessels, in foggy weather.*

fog-less (fog'les), a. Free from fog.

fo-gy (fō'gi), n.; pl. -gies (-giz). [Orig. Sc.: origin uncertain.] A slow or dull fellow; an old-fashioned or excessively conservative person: usually preceded by old: as, "My part . . . is always that of the old Fogy who sees nothing to admire in the young folks" (George Eliot's "Adam Bede," xxii.). [Colloq.]—fo'gy-ish, a. Inclined to be a foggy; foggy-like.—fo'gy-ism, n.

foh (fō), interj. [Cf. faugh and fie.] An exclamation of disgust.

föhn (fēn), n. [G.] A warm, dry south wind of the valleys on the north side of the Alps.

foi-ble (foi'bl), n. [F. foible, obs. form of faible, E. feeble.] A weak point; a weakness or failing of character; also, the weaker part of a sword-blade, being the portion between the middle and the point (opposed to forte).

foil¹ (foil), n. [OF. foil (also fem. feuille, F. feuille), < L. folium, leaf; akin to Gr. φύλλον.] A leaf of a plant; also, metal hammered or rolled into a very thin sheet (as, gold-foil; tin-foil); the metallic backing applied to glass to form a mirror; a thin layer of metal placed under a gem to improve its color or brilliancy; the setting of a jewel† (see Shakspeare's "Richard II.," i. 3. 266); fig., anything that serves to set off another thing distinctly or to advantage by contrast (as, "gray duennas, foils of younger maids": Holmes's "Old Player"); in arch., an arc or a rounded space between cusps, as in the tracery of a window or in other ornamentation.—foil¹, v. t. To cover or back with foil; also, to set off by contrast; in arch., to ornament with foils.

foil² (foil), v. t. [OF. F. fouler, trample, full (cloth): see *full*².] To tread under foot; trample (the ground, track, etc.) or spoil (the scent) by trampling, as an animal does, so as to baffle the hounds in hunting; also, to give (a person) an incomplete fall in wrestling† (see Shakspeare's "As You Like It," ii. 2. 14); fig., to defeat, discomfit, or balk (an adversary, enemy, etc.); frustrate or baffle (efforts, attempts, etc.); disappoint (hopes, etc.).—foil², n. The track or trail of hunted game; also, an incomplete or partial fall given in wrestling†; fig., a defeat, discomfiture, or baffling check (archaic).

foil³ (foil), n. [Appar. < *foil*².] A blunt sword with a button at the point, for use in fencing; pl., the art or exercise of fencing with such swords.

foil-or (foi'lēr), n. One who or that which foils, defeats, balks, or baffles.

foils-man (foilz'man), n.; pl. -men. One who is expert at fencing with foils.

foin (foin), v. i. [ME. foynen, appar. < OF. foine (F. fouine), fish-spear, < L. fuscina, trident.] To thrust with a weapon; lunge. See Shakspeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," ii. 3. 24. [Obs. or archaic.]-foin, n. A thrust with a weapon. See Shakspeare's "King Lear," iv. 6. 251. [Obs. or archaic.]

foi-son (foi'zōn), n. [OF. F. foison, < L. fusio(-n), a pouring out, E. fusion.] Abundance or plenty of something, esp. abundant harvest (archaic or prov.: as, "Earth's increase, foison plenty, Barns and garners never empty," Shakspeare's "Tempest," iv. 1. 110); also, vigor, strength, or ability (chiefly Sc.); also, nourishing power, or nourishment, as in food (chiefly Sc.).

foist (foist), v. t. [Prob. < D. vuisten, take in the hand, < vuist, fist.] To palm, or bring (in) when palmed, as a false die in dicing†; hence, to bring or put (in or into) surreptitiously or fraudulently (as, to foist spurious passages into a fat, fāte, fār, fāll, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, flect, agōny, intō, unite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you; text); palm off or impose fraudulently or unwarrantably (on or upon: as, to foist inferior goods on a customer; to foist an unworthy governor upon a province).

Foils, from Amiens Cathedral, France, 13th century. — A, trefoil; B, quatrefoil.

fold¹ (fôld), v. [AS. fealdan = OHG. faldan = Icel. falda = Goth. falthan, fold: cf. -fold.] I. tr. To double or bend (cloth, paper, etc.) over upon itself; bend (back, down, over, etc.), as one part upon another; bring into a compact form, or shut, by bending and laying parts together (often with up: as, to fold up a map); also, to bend or wind (about, round, etc.): as, to fold one's arms about a person's neck; bring together (the arms, hands, legs, etc.) with parts disposed one about or within another; bring (the wings) close to the body, as a bird; also, to inclose, wrap, or envelop in something (as, "Hast thou a knife? . . . Here, Marcus, fold it in the oration": Shakspeare's "Titus Andronicus," iv. 3. 116); clasp or embrace, as in the arms; also, to be disposed about, surround, or cover (poetic: as, "Light and shadow ever wander O'er the green that folds thy grave," Tennyson's "Dirge"); shut (in: as, "This blind haze, which . . . Hath folded in the passes of the world," Tennyson's "Passing of Arthur," 78); in cooking, to mix (in), as beaten egg-whites added to a batter or the like, by gently turning one part over another with strokes of a spoon. II. intr. To become folded or doubled, with one part upon another; also, to pass or wind about something.—fold², n. A folded disposition, form, or part of anything (as, a garment hanging in loose folds); a pleat; a flexure; a bend, winding, or sinuosity (as, the folds of the mountains); a coil, as of the body of a serpent; a leaf of a door or gate (as, "The doors, Opening their brazen folds": Milton's "Paradise Lost," i. 724); also, an act of folding or doubling over; also, a clasp or embrace (see Shakspeare's "Troilus and Cressida," iii. 3. 223); also, an enveloping layer or thickness of something (as, to wrap a mummy in many folds of cloth); a band of material applied to a garment or the like by way of trimming or finish; in geol., a portion of strata which is folded or bent (as an anticline or syncline), or which connects two horizontal or parallel portions of strata of different levels (as a monocline).

fold² (fôld), n. [AS. fald, falod, fold, = MLG. vall, inclosure, yard.] An inclosure for domestic animals, esp. sheep; the sheep contained in it, or a flock of sheep; fig., the church, or a particular church.—fold², v. t. To confine (sheep, etc.) in a fold.

-fold (-fôld). [AS. -feald = OHG. G. -falt = Icel. -faldr = Goth. -falths, -fold; akin to E. *fold*¹: see double.] A suffix appended to numerals, or other quantitative words or word-elements, to denote formation or division into so many parts or members, and also used with multiplicative force to form words meaning 'so many times as great or as much,' as in twofold, bifold, threefold, fourfold, manifold.

fold-er (fôl'dér), n. One who or that which folds; also, a folded printed sheet, as a circular or a time-table.

fol-de-rol (fôl'dê-rol), n. [Orig. meaningless syllables used in songs.] Mere nonsense; foolish talk or ideas (as, "She had no fol-de-rol about woman's rights": Mrs. Stowe's "Oldtown Folks," xxxiii.); also, a silly trifle; a piece of trumpery; a gimcrack; a gewgaw.

fo-li-a (fô'li-ä), n. Plural of folium.

fo-li-a-ceous (fô-li-ä'shi-us), a. [L. foliaceus, < folium, leaf.] Of the nature of a leaf; leaf-like; bearing leaves or leaf-like parts; pertaining to or consisting of leaves; consisting of leaf-like plates or laminæ.

fo-li-age (fô'li-ä), n. [Altered (to conform to L. folium) from F. feuillage, < feuille, < L. folium, leaf.] The leaves of a plant, collectively; leaves in general; also, the representation of leaves, flowers, and branches, as in architectural ornament.—fo'li-aged, a. Having foliage; also, decorated with foliage.—fo'li-age=plant, n. Any plant cultivated for ornament for the sake of its foliage rather than its flowers.

fo-li-ar (fô'li-är), a. [L. folium, leaf.] Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a leaf or leaves.

fo-li-ate (fô'li-ät), v.; -ated, -ating. [ML. foliatus, pp. of foliare, put forth leaves, < L. folium, leaf.] I. intr. To put forth leaves; also, to split into thin leaf-like layers or laminæ. II. tr. To furnish with leaves; also, to shape like a leaf or leaves; also, to form into thin sheets; also, to spread over with a thin metallic backing; also, to number consecutively the folios or leaves of (a book, etc.); in arch., to decorate with foils, or with foliage.—fo'li-ate (-ät), a. [L. foliatus, < folium.] Having leaves; leaf-like.—fo'li-ated (-ä-ted), p. a. Furnished with leaves; shaped like a leaf or leaves; consisting of thin leaf-like layers or laminæ; backed with foil, as glass; in arch., ornamented with foils, or with foliage.—fo-li-a'tion (-ä'shön), n. The act of foliating, or bursting into leaf; the state of being in leaf; the arrangement of leaves within the bud; leaves or foliage; also, formation into thin sheets; also, the application of foil to glass; also, the consecutive numbering of the folios or leaves of a book, etc.; in geol., the splitting up or the arrangement of certain rocks in leaf-like layers; in arch., ornamentation with foils, or tracery so formed; ornamentation with foliage, or an arrangement of foliage.—fo'li-a-ture (-ä-tür), n. [L. foliatura.] A cluster of leaves; foliage; also, foliar ornamentation.

fo-li-o (fô'li-ö). [L., abl. of folium, leaf.] I. n.; pl. -lios (-li-öz). A leaf of paper, parchment, etc., as of a manuscript or book, esp. one of a collection of such leaves numbered consecutively on the front side only; also, the number of a page, as of a book, inserted at the top or the bottom; also, a sheet of paper folded once; a volume consisting of sheets folded once (that is, with 2 leaves or 4 pages to each sheet); a volume having pages of the largest size; the form of a folio sheet or volume, or the size of such a volume (as, "The more usual form of books printed in the fifteenth century is in folio," Hallam's "Literature of Europe," i. 3. § 148: abbreviated fol.); also, a wrapper or case for loose papers, etc.; in bookkeeping, a page of an account-book, or a left-hand page and a right-hand page facing each other and having the same serial number; in law, a certain number of words (in the U. S. generally 100) taken as a unit for computing the length of a document. II. a. Pertaining to or having the form of a folio; consisting of sheets folded once (that is, with 2 leaves or 4 pages to each sheet); having pages of the largest size.—fo'lio, v. t.; -li-od, -li-ong. To number the folios or leaves, or the pages, of (a book, etc.) consecutively; mark with the proper folio or page number; in law, to mark each folio in (a pleading, etc.) with the proper number.

fo-li-ole (fô'li-öl), n. [NL. foliolum, dim. of L. folium, leaf.] In bot., a division of a compound leaf; a leaflet; in zool., a small leaf-like part or organ.—fo'li-o-late (-ö-lät), a.

fo-li-ose (fô'li-ös), a. [L. foliosus, < folium, leaf.] Abounding in leaves; leafy.

fo-li-um (fô'li-um), n.; pl. folia (-ä). [L., leaf: see foil.] A leaf or sheet, as of paper (as, "protocols and memoranda in ten thousand folia": Motley's "Dutch Republic," vi. 3); also, a thin leaf-like stratum or layer; a lamella.

folk (fôk), n.; pl. folks. [AS. folc = D. and G. volk = Icel. fôlk = Sw. and Dan. folk, folk, people.] A people or tribe (archaic); an aggregation of people in relation to a superior, as God or a king (archaic); the common people (archaic); people in general, or people of a specified class or group (archaic in sing.; now usually, and chiefly colloq., in pl.

Foliations in Tracery.—Sainte Chapelle, Paris; 13th century.

Medieval Conventionalized Foliage, Notre Dame, Paris; end of 13th century.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ˈ, primary accent; ˆ, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

in same sense as sing.; pl. (colloq.), the persons of one's own family; one's relatives.—folk'=dance, n. A dance which originated among, and has been transmitted through, the common people; a piece of music for such a dance.—folk'land (-land), n. [AS. folceland.] In old Eng. law, land held by folkright or customary law, as distinguished from bookland, which was held by charter or deed.—folk'-lore (-lör), n. The lore of the common people; the traditional beliefs, legends, customs, etc., of a people, or the study of these.—folk'lor-ist (-lör-ist), n. One versed or engaged in the study of folklore.—folk'-lor-is'tic, a.—folk'moot, folk'mote (-möt, -möt), n. [AS. folcmöt, 'folk meeting'.] Formerly, in England, a general assembly of the people of a shire, town, etc.—folk'=mu'sic, n. Music, usually of simple character, originating and handed down among the common people.—folk'right, n. [AS. folcryht.] In old Eng. hist., the right of the people under the customary law; customary or common law.—folk'=song, n. A song, usually of simple or artless character, originating and handed down among the common people; also, a song in imitation of this type.—folk'=speech, n. Popular language; the dialect spoken by the common people of a country or district, as distinguished from the speech of the educated people or from the literary language.—folk'=sto'ry, n. A folk-tale.—folk'=tale, n. A tale or legend originating and handed down among the common people.

fol-li-cle (fol'i-kl), n. [L. folliculus, dim. of foliis, bellows, bag.] In anat., etc., a small cavity, sac, or gland; in bot., a dry one-celled seed-vessel consisting of a single carpel, and dehiscent only by the ventral suture, as the fruit of larkspur.—fol-lic-u-lar (fo-lik'ü-lär), a. Pertaining to, consisting of, or like a follicle or follicles; provided with follicles; in pathol., affecting, or originating in, a follicle or follicles.—fol-lic'u-late, fol-lic'u-lat-ed (-lät, -lä-ted), a. Provided with or consisting of a follicle or follicles.—fol-lic-u-lo'sis (-lō'sis), n. [NL.] In pathol., an abnormal or diseased condition of follicles, as of the inner surface of an eyelid.

Follicle.—Fruit of larkspur.

fol-low (fol'ō), v. t. [AS. folgian, also fylgan, = D. volgen = G. folgen = Icel. fylgja, follow; perhaps akin to E. full.] To go or come after; move behind in the same direction; also, to move forward along (a path, etc.); also, to come after in natural sequence, order of time, etc.; succeed; come after as a result or consequence; result from; also, to go after or along with (a person, etc.) as a companion; attend upon; accompany; also, to go in pursuit of; pursue; hence, to endeavor to obtain or to attain to (as, "Follow peace with all men": Heb. xii. 14); also, to accept as a guide or leader, accept the authority or example of, or adhere to, as a person; conform to, comply with, or act in accordance with (as, to follow the fashion; to follow a person's advice); also, to engage in or be concerned with as a pursuit (as, to follow a profession; to follow the sea, or the stage); also, to watch the movements, progress, or course of; also, to keep up with and comprehend (an argument, etc.).—to follow suit, in card-playing, to play a card of the same suit as that first played; fig., to follow the example of another.—to follow up, to pursue closely; pursue to a conclusion; prosecute with energy, as something already begun; increase the effect of by further action.—fol'low, v. i. To go or come after a person or thing in motion; hence, to attend; also, to come after something else in natural sequence, order of time, etc.; ensue; also, to result as an effect; occur as a consequence; also, to go in pursuit; hence, to strive for attainment.—fol'low, n. The act of following; in billiards, a stroke which causes the player's ball to roll on after the ball struck by it.—fol'low-a-ble, a. That may be followed.—fol'-low-er, n. One who or that which follows; an attendant, retainer, or servant; an adherent; an imitator; a male admirer and frequent visitor of a young woman, esp. a maid-servant (colloq.); in mach., a part of a machine that receives motion from, or follows the motion of, another part.—fol'low-ing, n. A body of followers, attendants, adherents, etc.—fol'low-ing, p. a. That follows; esp., that comes after or next in order or time (as, "Living carcasses design'd For death, the following day, in bloody fight": Milton's "Paradise Lost," x. 278); succeeding; also, that is now to follow; now to be mentioned, described, related, or the like.—fol'-low-up', n. The act of following up; also, a letter or circular sent to a person to enhance the effect of a previous one, as in advertising.

fol-ly (fol'i), n.; pl. follies (-iz). [OF. F. folie, < fol: see fool.] The state or quality of being foolish; want of understanding or sense (as, "Where ignorance is bliss, 'Tis folly to be wise": Gray's "On a Distant Prospect of Eton College"); also, unwise or light-minded conduct; also, a foolish action, practice, idea, etc.; an absurdity; also, a costly but foolish undertaking; a more or less pretentious building left unfinished for want of means, or, when finished, too expensive to be properly maintained, or inconveniently situated or otherwise inadequate for practical use; also, wickedness† (see Josh. vii. 15); wantonness† (see Shakspeare's "Othello," v. 2. 132).

fo-ment (fō-ment'), v. t. [F. foment, < LL. fomentare, < L. fomentum, a warm application, < fovere, keep warm.] To apply warm water or medicated liquid, cloths dipped in such liquid, or the like to (the surface of the body); also, to cherish with heat† (as, "All things . . . these soft fires . . . with kindly heat . . . foment and warm": Milton's "Paradise Lost," iv. 669); also, to promote the growth or development of; foster; esp., to foster or instigate (discord, rebellion, etc.).—fo-men-ta-tion (fō-men-tā'shən), n. [LL. fomentatio (-n-).] The act of fomenting; the application of warm liquid, etc., to the surface of the body; the liquid, etc., so applied; also, encouragement; instigation.—fo-ment'er, n. One who or that which foment; a device for applying heat to some part of the body.

fond (fond), a. [ME. founned, pp. of fonnen, be foolish; origin uncertain: cf. fun.] Foolish or silly (archaic or prov.); esp., foolishly credulous or confident; also, foolishly tender or loving; doting; hence, loving or affectionate (without implication of foolishness); also, cherished or prized highly or too highly; doted on; also, having affection or liking for a person or thing (as, to be fond of children; to be fond of sports); also, desirous (of something, or of doing something); pleased or glad (to do something: now chiefly Sc.).—fond†, v. i. intr. To be fond; dote: as, "My master loves her dearly; And I . . . fond as much on him" (Shakspeare's "Twelfth Night," ii. 2. 35). II. tr. To show fondness for; fondle: as, "The Tyrian hugs and fonds thee on her breast" (Dryden's tr. Virgil's "Æneid," i. 962).

fon-da (fon'dä), n. [Sp.; from Ar.] In Spain or Spanish-speaking countries, an inn or hotel.

fon-dant (fon'dant, F. fōn-dän), n. [F., prop. ppr. of fondre, melt: see found.] Thick, creamy sugar paste, the basis of many candies.

fon-dle (fon'dl), v.; -dled, -dling. [Freq. of fond, v. I. tr. To treat with fond indulgence; also, to handle or touch fondly; caress. II. intr. To show fondness, as by manner, words, or caresses: as, "Fondling together, as I'm alive! . . . Ah! have I caught you, my pretty doves?" (Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," iv.).—fon'dler, n.

fond-ling (fond'ling), n. [From fond, a.] A fool or simpleton (now prov. Eng.); also, a person or thing fondly treated; a pet.

fond-ly (fond'li), adv. In a fond manner; foolishly (now prov.); with complacent credulity; lovingly or affectionately.—fond'ness, n. The state or quality of being fond; foolishness (now prov.); complacent credulity; doting affection; affectionateness or tenderness; instinctive liking.

fon-du (fōn-dü), a. [F., pp. of fondre, melt: see found.] Blended; characterized by blending of colors, one into another, through delicate gradations.

fon-due (fōn-dü), n. [F., prop. fem. of fondue, pp.: see fondue.] A dish composed of grated cheese melted with butter, eggs, etc.

font¹ (font), n. [F. fonte, < fondre, melt, cast: see found.] The act or process of founding or casting; in printing, a complete assortment of type of one style and size, as required for ordinary printed work.

font² (font), n. [AS. font, < ML. fons (font-), baptismal font, L. spring, fountain, E. fount.] A receptacle, usually of stone, as in a baptistery or a church, for the water used fat, fāte, fär, fäll, äsk, färre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

in baptism; also, a receptacle for holy water; a stoup; a bénitier; also, the reservoir for oil in a lamp; also, a fount or fountain (archaic).—fon-tal (fon'-tal), a. Of or pertaining to a font, as of baptism; also, pertaining to or issuing as from a fount or spring; fig., pertaining to or being the source of something.

fon-ta-nelle, fon-ta-nel (fon-ta-nel'), n. [F. fontanelle, < fontaine, E. fountain.] In pathol., an opening for the discharge of pus†; in anat., one of the spaces, covered with a membranous structure, between certain bones of the fetal or young skull.

fon-ti-nal (fon'ti-nal), a. [L. fontinalis, < fons (font-), E. font2.] Growing in or about springs, as certain plants.

food (föd), n. [AS. fōda, food; akin to OHG. fuotan, Icel. fæðna, Goth. fōðjan, feed, and to Gr. παρέσθαι, eat: cf. feed, fodder, and foster.] What is eaten, or taken into the body, for nourishment (as, food for man and beast); more broadly, whatever supplies nourishment to organic bodies (as, the food of plants); aliment; nutriment; often, more or less solid nutriment, as opposed to drink; also, a particular kind or article of nutriment (as, animal food, meat, etc.; breakfast foods, as various cereal preparations); fig., that on which anything subsists (as, intellectual food); something that sustains, or keeps in existence (as, food for hope); anything serving as material for consumption or use (as, "Prince. I did never see such pitiful rascals. Fal. Tut, tut . . . food for powder, food for powder; they'll fill a pit as well as better": Shakspeare's "1 Henry IV.," iv. 2. 71); matter (for thought, etc.); also, the process of feeding or eating† (see Shakspeare's "Comedy of Errors," v. 1. 83).—food'less, a. Without food.—food'stuff, n. A substance or material suitable for food.

fool (föi), n. [OF. fol (F. fol, fou), n. and a., < L. follis, bellows, bag or ball inflated with air: cf. windbag.] One who is deficient in judgment or sense; a silly or stupid person; a simpleton; also, a professional jester or buffoon; a retainer dressed in motley, wearing a cap often hung with bells, and carrying a bauble or mock scepter in his hand, formerly kept by a person of rank for the purpose of making sport; also, one who is made to appear deficient in sense or ridiculously simple-minded (as, to make a fool of a person); the victim of some trick, imposition, or the like (as, an April fool: see under April); a butt or dupe (as, to be fortune's fool); also, a weak-minded or idiotic person.—fool's cap, a kind of cap or hood, usually hung with bells, formerly worn by professional fools or jesters; also, a conical paper cap sometimes worn by dunces at school as a punishment. See also foolscap.—fool's errand, an absurd or useless errand or undertaking.—fool's gold, iron pyrites, which is sometimes mistaken for gold.—fool's paradise, a state of illusory happiness; enjoyment based on false beliefs or hopes.—fool's parsley, a fetid, poisonous apiaceous plant, Aethusa cynapium, resembling common parsley.—fool', a. Foolish; silly. [Now colloq.]—fool', v. I. intr. To play the fool; play, trifle, dally, or toy; jest, or make believe; potter; idle. II. tr. To make a fool of; impose on; dupe; deceive; also, to make foolish†, or infatuate†; also, with away, to spend foolishly, as time or money.

fool² (föi), n. [Prob. another use of fool¹.] A dish made of fruit scalded or stewed, crushed, and mixed with cream, etc.: as, gooseberry fool.

fool-er-y (fö'ler-i), n.; pl. -ies (-iz). Foolish action or conduct (as, "We've had about enough of this foolery": Stevenson's "Treasure Island," xxvi.); fooling; a piece of fooling; a foolish action, performance, or thing.

fool-har-dy (föi'här'di), a. [OF. fol hardi: see fool¹ and hardy¹.] Bold without judgment; foolishly rash or venturesome.—fool'har'di-ly, adv.—fool'har'di-ness, n.

fool-ing (fö'ling), n. The act of one who fools; trifling; jesting; foolery.

Baptismal Font.—Cathedral of Langres, France.

fool-ish (fö'lish), a. Like or befitting a fool; unwise or silly; also, ridiculous (as, to cut a foolish figure); also, trifling, insignificant, or paltry (obs. or archaic: as, "a trifling foolish banquet," Shakspeare's "Romeo and Juliet," i. 5. 124).—fool'ish-ly, adv.—fool'ish-ness, n.

fool-proof (föi'prüf), a. Proof against fools; involving no risk, even from the handling or meddling of foolish or ignorant persons.

fools-cap (föi'z'kap), n. Paper for writing (usually folded) or for printing, in sheets varying in size from 12 by 15 to 13½ by 17 inches: named from an old watermark consisting of a fool's cap. See also fool's cap, under fool¹, n.

foot (füt), n.; pl. feet (fēt). [AS. fōt = D. voet = G. fuss = Icel. fōtr = Goth. fōtus, foot; akin to L. pes (ped-), Gr. πούς (pod-), and Skt. pad, foot.] In vertebrates, the terminal part of the leg, below the ankle-joint, on which the body stands and moves; in invertebrates, any part similar in position or function; often, such a part considered as the organ of locomotion; hence, walking or running motion; step; pace; also, foot-soldiers or infantry (as, "Single or in array of battle ranged Both horse and foot": Milton's "Paradise Lost," xi. 645); also, the end of a bed, grave, etc., toward which the feet are placed; the part of a stocking, etc., covering the foot; also, some thing or part resembling an animal's foot, as in function; also, the lowest part, or bottom, as of a hill, ladder, column, page, etc.; the lower edge of a sail; the part of anything opposite to the top or head; the last, as of a series; that which is written at the bottom, as the total of an account; also (often in pl. foots), sediment or dregs; also, foothold†; status† or footing†; also, a unit of length derived from the length of the human foot, in English-speaking countries equivalent to 12 inches, or 30.48 centimeters; in pros., a group of syllables constituting a metrical unit of a verse.—on foot, on one's own feet (as, to come on foot); also, in motion; astir; also, in active existence or operation.—foot, v. I. intr. To move the feet as in walking, or go on foot (often with indefinite it); also, to move the feet to measure or music, or dance (often with indefinite it); also, to total (up), as an account. II. tr. To set foot on; walk or dance on; traverse on foot; also, to settle or establish (as, "What confederacy have you with the traitors Late footed in this kingdom?" Shakspeare's "King Lear," iii. 7. 45); also, to kick†; seize with the talons, as a hawk does; also, to make or attach a foot to (as, to foot a stocking); also, to add (up), as a column of figures, and set the sum at the foot; hence, to pay or settle, as a bill (colloq.).

foot-age (füt'āj), n. Length or extent in feet (as, the footage of a moving-picture film); in mining, payment by the running foot of work done, or the amount so paid.

foot-and-mouth (füt'and-mouth') dis-ease', A contagious disease of cattle and other animals, communicable to man, characterized by a vesicular eruption about the hoofs and in the mouth.

foot-ball (füt'bäl), n. A large, oval or round, inflated ball designed for propulsion with the foot; also, an outdoor game played with such a ball by two sets of players, each of which endeavors to kick or convey it to or through a goal defended by the opposing side. See Rugby football and soccer.—foot'ball'er, foot'ball'ist, n.

foot-board (füt'börd), n. A board or small platform on which to support the foot or feet; also, a treadle; also, an upright piece across the foot of a bedstead.

foot-boy (füt'boi), n. A boy in livery employed as a servant; a page; a lackey.

foot-bridge (füt'brij), n. A bridge intended for pedestrians only.

foot-can-dle (füt'kan'dl), n. A unit of illumination equivalent to that produced by a standard candle at the distance of one foot.

foot-cloth (füt'klöth), n. A richly ornamented caparison for a horse, hanging down to the ground†; also, a carpet or rug.

foot-drop (füt'drop), n. In pathol., dropping of the anterior portion of the foot when the limb is raised from the ground, due to paralysis of the flexor muscles.

foot-ed (füt'ed), a. Provided with a foot or feet: as, a four-footed animal.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ˊ, primary accent; ˋ, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

foot-er (füt'ēr), n. One who goes on foot; a walker; also, with a numeral prefixed, a person or thing of the height or length in feet indicated by that number (as, a six-footer).

foot-fall (füt'fāl), n. A footstep.

foot-gear (füt'gēr), n. Covering for the feet, as shoes, boots, etc.

foot-guard (füt'gärd), n. A boot or pad worn by a horse to prevent wounding the feet by interfering or overreaching; also, one of a body of infantry soldiers forming a guard; pl., any of certain British infantry regiments.

foot-hill (füt'hil), n. A minor elevation at the base of a mountain or mountain-range.

foot-hold (füt'höld), n. A hold or support for the feet; a place where one may stand or tread securely; firm footing; secure position.

foot-ing (füt'ing), n. The act of one that foots, or moves on foot, as in walking or dancing; also, a firm placing or stable position of the feet; hence, place or support for the feet; surface to stand on; fig., secure position; established place; foothold; also, the basis or foundation on which anything is established; position or status assigned to a person, etc., in estimation or treatment; relation with reference to intercourse (as, to be on a friendly footing with a person); also, entrance into a new position or relationship; a fee demanded from a person upon his entrance into a trade, society, etc. (as, "Fork out the tin and pay your footing": Kingsley's "Alton Locke," ii.); also, the act of putting a foot to anything, as a stocking; that which is added as a foot; also, the act of adding up a column of figures, or the amount of such a column as footed up; in arch., a projecting course or courses at the base of a wall, etc.

foot-jaw (füt'já), n. One of those limbs of crustaceans and other arthropods which are modified into accessory mouth-parts.

foot-less (füt'les), a. Without a foot or feet; hence, unsupported or unsubstantial; also, awkward, helpless, or inefficient (colloq.).

foot-lights (füt'lits), n. pl. In theaters, etc., a row of lights at the front of the stage, nearly on a level with the feet of the performers.

foot-ling (füt'ling), adv. and a. [See *-ling*².] In obstetrics, with the feet foremost.

foot-loose (füt'lös), a. Free to go or travel about at will; not confined to any one place, etc., by ties, responsibilities, or other circumstances.

foot-man (füt'män), n.; pl. -men. A pedestrian (archaic or prov.); also, a foot-soldier; also, a runner in attendance upon a rider of rank; a servant who ran before his master's carriage; also, a male servant in livery who attends the carriage, waits at table, etc.; also, a metal stand to hold anything before a fire; also, any moth of the family Lithosiidæ (also called footman-moth).

foot-mark (füt'märk), n. A mark made by the foot; a footprint.

foot-note (füt'nöt), n. A note or comment at the foot of a page, referring to something in the text.

foot-pace (füt'päs), n. A walking pace (as, to go at a foot-pace); also, something on which to tread, or place the feet; a raised portion of a floor; a landing or resting-place at the end of a short flight of steps.

foot-pad (füt'pad), n. A highwayman who robs on foot.

foot-path (füt'pāth), n. A path for pedestrians only.

foot-pound (füt'pound), n. In mech., a unit of energy or work equivalent to the energy required to raise the weight of one pound avoirdupois to the height of one foot.—foot-pound^{al}, n. A unit of energy equivalent to that of an avoirdupois pound moving with the velocity of one foot per second.

foot-pow-er (füt'pou'ēr), n. Power applied by the motion and pressure of the foot, as for running a machine.

foot-print (füt'print), n. An impression left by the foot.

foot-rope (füt'röp), n. Naut., the portion of the bolt-rope to which the lower edge of a sail is sewed; also, a rope ex-

Foot-rope.

foot-second (füt'sek'ond), n. In mech., a unit of velocity equal to one linear foot per second, used in stating the velocity of a projectile; also, a unit for measuring the flow of liquids, equal to a flow of one cubic foot per second.

foot-sol-dier (füt'söl'jēr), n. A soldier who serves and fights on foot; an infantryman.

foot-sore (füt'sör), a. Having the feet sore or tender, as from much walking.

foot-stalk (füt'stāk), n. In bot. and zool., a petiole; a pedicel; a peduncle.

foot-step (füt'step), n. A step or tread of the foot, or the sound produced by it; a footfall; also, the distance traversed by the foot in stepping; a pace; also, the mark or impression of a foot; a footprint; also, a step by means of which to ascend or descend (as, "the footsteps of a throne": Wordsworth's "Miscellaneous Sonnets," i. 28).

foot-stone (füt'stön), n. A stone placed at the foot of a grave.

foot-stool (füt'stöl), n. A low stool upon which to rest the foot or feet.

foot-ton (füt'ton), n. In mech., a unit of work equivalent to the energy expended in raising a ton of 2,240 pounds one foot.

foot-warm-er (füt'wär'mër), n. Any of various contrivances for keeping the feet warm.

foot-way (füt'wä), n. A way or path for pedestrians only: as, "Mr. Ferris took his way through the devious footways" (Howells's "Foregone Conclusion," ii.).

foot-wear (füt'wär), n. Articles for wearing on the feet, esp. shoes, slippers, gaiters, etc.

foot-worn (füt'wörn), a. Worn by the feet (as, a foot-worn pavement); also, foot-sore.

foot-y (füt'i). [Cf. F. foutu.] I. a. Poor; mean; worthless; paltry; insignificant; silly or ridiculous. [Prov. or colloq.] II. n.; pl. foodies (-iz). A worthless person or thing. [Prov., U. S.]

foo-zle (fö'zl), v. t. or i.; -zled, -zling. [Origin uncertain.] To bungle; play clumsily (as, to foozle a stroke in golf).

-foo'zle, n. An act of fooling; a badly played stroke in golf; also, an old-fashioned person; a fogey.

fop (fop), n. [ME. foppe, fool: see fop, v.] A fool; a foolish, pretentious person; now, an empty-headed dandy.

—fop[†], v. t.; fopped, fopping. [Appar. < fop, n. (recorded earlier): cf. *job*¹, v., also G. foppen, befool, hoax, mock, deride.] To fool; cheat. See Shakspeare's "Othello," iv. 2. 197.—fop'ling, n. A petty fop.—fop'per-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). Foolishness; a foolish action or thing; now, the manners, practices, dress, etc., of a fop; something characteristic of a fop.—fop'pish, a. Foolish (as, "Wise men are grown foppish": Shakspeare's "King Lear," i. 4. 182); now, resembling or befitting a fop.—fop'pish-ly, adv.—fop'pish-ness, n.

for (fôr). [AS. for, also fore, before, for: see fore, prep.] I. prep. Before; in the interest of (as, to act for a client); in place of, or instead of (as, a substitute for butter); in consideration of, or in requital of (as, three for a dollar; to be thanked for one's efforts); as an offset to (as, blow for blow); in favor of, or on the side of (as, to stand for honest government); in honor of (as, to give a dinner for a person); with the object or purpose of (as, to go for a fat, fâte, fâr, fäll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviäry, êlect, agöny, intö, ûnite; (obscured) erränt, operä, ardënt, actör, näture; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you; walk, or, now archaic or vulgar, to go for to walk); in order to become (as, to go for a soldier); conducive to (as, for the advantage of everybody); in order to obtain (as, a suit for damages); in order to save (as, to flee for one's life); with inclination or tendency toward (as, to long for a thing; an eye for beauty); with the purpose of reaching (as, to start for London); intended to belong to, suit the purposes or needs of, or be used in connection with (as, this is for you; a book for children; a box for gloves); in assignment or attribution to (as, an engagement for this evening; it is for you to decide); appropriate or adapted to (as, a subject for speculation; he is no match for his opponent); to allow of, or to require (as, too many for separate mention; important enough for separate treatment); such as results in (as, his reason for going); with regard or respect to (as, so much for that; pressed for time; weather too warm for April); as affecting the interests or circumstances of (as, bad for one's health); in the character of, or as being (as, to know a thing for a fact); by reason of, or because of (as, to shout for joy; famed for its beauty); in spite of (as, for all that); during the continuance of (as, for a long time); to the extent or amount of (as, to walk for a mile). Sometimes used to govern a noun or pronoun followed by an infinitive, in a construction equivalent to a clause with that and the auxiliary should, etc. (as, it is time for him to go, or that he should go). II. conj. Because (archaic); also, seeing that; since; also, in order that.

Footman-moth (Lithosia cephalica). (Cross shows natural size.)

for-. [AS. for- = D. and G. ver- = Icel. for- = Goth. fra-; akin to E. for, fore, and from.] A prefix meaning 'away,' 'off,' 'to the uttermost,' 'extremely,' 'to detriment or destruction,' or imparting a negative or privative force, occurring in words of Anglo-Saxon or Middle English origin, many of which are now obsolete or archaic.

for-age (fôr'āj), n. [OF. forrage (F. fouillage), < forre, fuere, fodder; from Teut., and akin to E. fodder.] Food for horses and cattle; fodder; provender; also, the seeking or obtaining of such food; hence, the act of searching for provisions of any kind; sometimes, a raid. —for'age, v.; -aged, -aging. [OF. forragier (F. fouirager).] I. intr. To wander in search of supplies; hence, to make a raid; also, to hunt or search about. II. tr. To collect forage from; strip of supplies; plunder; also, to obtain by foraging (as, "foraged corn" = Whittier's "Yorktown"); also, to supply with forage. —for'age-cap, n. A small, low undress cap worn by soldiers. —for'ag-er (-ā-jēr), n.

for-a-men (fō-rā'men), n.; pl. foramina (fō-ram'i-nā). [L., hole, < forare, pierce; akin to E. bore.] An opening, orifice, or short passage, as in a bone or in the integument of the ovule of a plant. —fo-ram-i-nate, fo-ram-i-nat-ed (fō-ram'i-nāt, -nā-ted), a. [LL. foraminatus, < L. foramen.] Furnished with foramina; perforated.

fo-ram-min-i-fer (fō-rā-min'i-fēr), n. [NL. Foraminifera, pl., < L. foramen, hole, + ferre, bear.] Any of the Foraminifera, an extensive order of rhizopods commonly having a calcareous shell which in many species is perforated by small holes or pores (foramina). —fo-ram-i-nif-er-al (fō-ram-i-nif'ē-rāl), fo-ram-i-nif-er-ous, a.

fo-rane (fō-rān'), a. [ML. foraneus, < L. foras, out of doors, outside: cf. foreign.] Pertaining to places or things remote: as, vicar forane (in the Rom. Cath. Ch., an ecclesiastical dignitary appointed by a bishop to exercise limited jurisdiction in a particular district of his diocese).

for-as-much (fôr-az-much'), adv. Followed by as: In view of the fact that; seeing that; since.

for-ay (fôr'ā), v. [ME. forray: cf. OF. forrer, forage, ravage, forreor, forrier, forager, < forre, fodder (see forage).] I. tr. To ravage in search of forage or booty; pillage. II. intr. To make a raid; forage; pillage. —for'ay, n. A predatory incursion or inroad; a raid. —for'ay-er, n.

for-bade, for-bad (fôr-bad'). Preterit of forbid.

for'bear¹, n. See forebear.

for-bear² (fôr-bār'), v.; pret. -borne, pp. -bearing. [AS. forberan: see for- and *bear*¹.] I. tr. To endure; also, to endure the absence of; also, to keep away from; also, to refrain from; desist from; cease; also, to refrain from using, etc. (as, "Yet stay a while; forbear thy bloody hand": Marlowe's "Edward II." v. 5); keep back; withhold; also, to show mercy or indulgence to (now rare); refrain from insisting on or exacting (now rare). II. intr. To refrain; hold back; also, to be patient; show forbearance.

—for-bear'ance, n. The act of forbearing; a refraining from something; also, forbearing conduct or quality; patient endurance; lenity; also, an abstaining from the enforcement of something due. —for-bear'ing-ly, adv.

for-bid (fôr-bid'), v.; pret. -bade, also -bad, pp. -bidden, also -bid, ppr. -bidding. [AS. forbēdan: see for- and bid.]

I. tr. To command (a person, etc.) not to do, have, use, etc., something, or not to enter some place; also, to put an interdiction against (something); prohibit; also, to hinder or prevent; render impossible; exclude; repel; also, to curse† (as, "He shall live a man forbid": Shakspeare's "Macbeth," i. 3. 21). II. intr. To utter a prohibition: as, "Forbid who will, none shall from me withhold Longer thy offer'd good" (Milton's "Paradise Lost," v. 62). —for-bid'dance, n. The act of forbidding, or the state of being forbidden; prohibition. —for-bid'den, p. a. Prohibited; interdicted. —forbidden degrees, degrees of consanguinity or affinity within which marriage is not allowed. —for-bidden fruit, the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, of which Adam and Eve partook (see Gen. ii. 17 and Gen. iii.); hence, unlawful pleasure, esp. illicit love. —for-bid'den-ly, adv. —for-bid'der, n. —for-bid'ding, p. a. That forbids; keeping one back from a nearer approach; repellent; repulsive; causing aversion or dislike. —for-bid'ding-ly, adv. —for-bid'ding-ness, n.

for-bode† (fôr-bōd'), n. [AS. forbod, < forbēdan, E. forbid.] Forbidding; prohibition.

for-bore (fôr-bōr'). Preterit of *forbear*². —for-borne' (-bōrn'). Past participle of *forbear*².

for-by, for-by (fôr-bī'), prep. and adv. [See for and by.] Close by; near; also, besides. [Now chiefly Sc. and prov. Eng.]

force¹† (fōrs), v. t. [= farce.] To stuff. See Shakspeare's "Troilus and Cressida," v. i. 64.

force² (fōrs), n. [Icel. fors.] A waterfall. [North. Eng.]

force³ (fōrs), n. [OF. F. force, < ML. fortia, < L. fortis, strong.] Strength or power, esp. active power; impetus; intensity of effect; also, might, as of a ruler or realm; strength for war; also, a body of armed men (often in pl.); hence, any body of persons combined for joint action (as, a police force; an office force); also, strength or power exerted upon an object; physical coercion; violence; specif., in legal use, unlawful violence offered to persons or things; also, mental or moral strength; power of overcoming resistance; power to influence or control (as, "Let not her cries or tears have force to move you": Addison's "Cato," iv. 2); power to convince; also, binding power, as of an agreement; hence, operation (as, a law now in force); also, value, significance, meaning, or import; also, any influence or agency analogous to physical force (as, social forces); in physics, etc., an influence which produces or tends to produce motion or change of motion, or the intensity of such an influence (sometimes loosely used as equivalent to energy or power, or to indicate a natural phenomenon, as electricity). —force³, v.; forced, forcing. [OF. F. forcer, < force.] I. tr. To use force upon; overcome the resistance of; ravish or violate (a woman); also, to compel by force; constrain; also, to drive or propel against resistance; also, to press, urge, or exert to violent effort or to the utmost; also, to put or impose forcibly (on or upon); enforce (a law, etc.); also, to take or enter by force (as, to force a stronghold, a ship, etc.); effect a passage through or across (mountains, a river, etc.) by force; break open (a door, a lock, etc.); also, to bring about or effect by force; produce by unnatural effort; bring about of necessity; make (one's way, etc.) by force; also, to obtain or draw forth by or as by force; extort; also, to cause (plants, fruits, etc.) to grow or mature by artificial means; also, to give force to; strengthen; reinforce; also, to attach importance to; care for; in card-playing, to compel (a player) to trump, by leading a suit of which he has no cards; compel (a player) to play so as to make known the strength of his hand; also, to compel a player to play (a particular card). II. intr. To use force; also, to make one's way by force; also, to scruple† or hesitate†. —forced, p. a. Subjected to force; also, enforced or compulsory (as, forced labor); also, effected by unusual force or effort (as, a forced march); strained, unnatural, or affected (as, a forced smile).—for-ced-ly (fôr'sed-lī), adv.—force'ful, a. Full of force; powerful; vigorous; effective; also, acting or driven with force.—force'ful-ly, adv.—force'ful-ness, n.—force'less, a. Without force; impotent; feeble: as, "feeble heart and forceless hand" (Scott's "Rokeby," i. 24).

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; û, F. bonbon; †, primary accent; ‡, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

force-meat (fôrs'mēt), n. [See *force*¹.] In cookery, meat chopped fine and seasoned, used as stuffing, etc.

for-ceps (fôr'seps), n.; pl. -ceps or -cepses (-sep-sez). [L.] An instrument, as pincers or tongs, for seizing and holding objects, as in surgical operations; in anat. and zool., a part or process resembling a forceps: sometimes used as pl. in same sense as sing., and also called a pair of forceps.

Surgical Forceps. — A, for compression of an artery to control hemorrhage; B, for removing stone from the bladder in lithotomy.

force=pump (fôrs'pump), n. Any pump which delivers a liquid under pressure, so as to eject it forcibly: distinguished from lift-pump.

for-cer (fôr'sér), n. One who or that which forces.

for-ci-ble (fôr'si-bl), a. [OF. forcible.] Characterized by the use of force or violence; effected by force; also, possessing force; producing a powerful effect; effective; convincing, as reasoning.—for'ci-ble-ness, n.—for'ci-bly, adv.

for-cite (fôr'sit), n. [See *force*³.] A powerful explosive containing nitroglycerin, soluble guncotton, and potassium nitrate.

ford (fôrd), n. [AS. ford = G. furt, ford; akin to E. fare.] A place where a river or other body of water may be crossed by wading; also, a stream to be crossed†.—ford, v. t. To cross (a river, etc.) by a ford: as, "The streams rose so rapidly that we could hardly ford them" (Parkman's "Oregon Trail," i.).—ford'a-ble, a. That may be forded.—ford'less, a. Without a ford; not fordable.

for-do (fôr-dô'), v. t.; pret. -did, pp. -done, ppr. -doing. [AS. fordōn: see for- and *do*¹.] To do away with; kill; destroy; ruin; undo; also, to wear out or exhaust (only in pp.: as, "The heavy ploughman snores, All with weary task fordone," Shakspeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," v. 1. 381). [Archaic.]

fore (fôr). [AS. fore = D. voor = G. vor = Goth. faura, before, for; akin to L. præ, before, pro, Gr. πρό, before, for, Skt. pra, before: cf. for and from.] I. prep. and conj. Before: now only prov., or regarded as a shortened form of before or afore, and written fore. II. adv. Before (now prov., except as in composition); forward (now prov.); naut., at or toward the bow.—fore and aft, naut., at or toward both bow and stern; alternately toward the bow and the stern (as, to walk fore and aft); also, from stem to stern, or in line with the keel (as, a vessel rigged fore and aft, that is, having fore-and-aft sails); lengthwise.—fore, interj. In golf, a cry of warning to persons ahead who are liable to be struck by the ball.—fore. [From fore-, prefixal use of fore, adv., in noun compounds: cf. forepart, also written fore-part and fore part.] I. a. Situated at or toward the front, as compared with something else; first in place, time, order, rank, etc.; forward; earlier. II. n. The fore part of anything; the front.—to the fore, to or at the front; to or in a conspicuous place or position; also (orig. Sc., Ir., and north. Eng.), within call, or present; still surviving, or alive; ready at hand, or available.

fore-and-aft (fôr'and-âft'), a. and adv. Naut., in a line with the keel: as, a fore-and-aft sail.—fore'-and-aft'er, n. Naut., a vessel with fore-and-aft sails, as a schooner.

fore-arm¹ (fôr'ârm), n. The part of the arm between the elbow and the wrist.

fore-arm² (fôr'ârm'), v. t. To arm beforehand.

fore-bear (fôr'bâr or fôr-bâr'), n. [Orig. Sc., < fore, adv., + be, v., + -ar for *-er*¹.] An ancestor; a forefather.

fore-bode (fôr-bôd'), v.; -boded, -boding. I. tr. To bode beforehand; foretell or predict; portend or foreshadow; also, to have a presentiment of (esp. evil: as, "My heart forebodes Danger or death awaits thee on this field," M. Arnold's "Sohrab and Rustum"). II. intr. To prophesy; presage; also, to have a presentiment.—fore-bode'ment, n. A foreboding.—fore-bod'er (-bô'dér), n.—fore-bod'ing, n. A prediction or presage; a portent; also, a presentiment.—fore-bod'ing-ly, adv.

fore-brain (fôr'brân), n. The prosencephalon.

fore-cast (fôr-kâst'), v.; -cast or -casted, -casting. I. tr.

To cast, contrive, or plan beforehand; prearrange; also, to conjecture beforehand; predict; also, to make a forecast of (the weather, etc.); also, to serve as a forecast of; foreshadow. II. intr. To plan or arrange beforehand; also, to conjecture beforehand; make a forecast.—fore'cast, n. The act, practice, or faculty of forecasting; foresight in planning; also, a conjecture as to something in the future; a prediction, esp. as to the weather; also, a foreshadowing, as by one thing, of something else to come.—fore-cast'er, n.

fore-cas-tle (fôr'kâs-l, naut. fôk'sl), n. Naut., a short raised deck in the fore part of a ship; also, that part of the upper deck forward of the foremast; also, the seamen's quarters in the forward part of a merchant vessel.

fore-cit-ed (fôr'si'ted), a. Previously cited.

fore-close (fôr-kloz'), v.; -closed, -closing. [OF. forclos, pp. of forclorre, exclude, < for- (< L. foris, outside, + clorre, < L. claudere, shut: cf. *close*¹.] I. tr.

To shut out; exclude or bar; also, to hinder or prevent, as from doing something; also, to establish an exclusive claim to; also, to close, settle, or answer beforehand (as, to fore-close a case; to foreclose objections); in law, to deprive (a mortgager) of the right to redeem his mortgaged estate; also, to take away the right to redeem (a mortgage).

II. intr. To foreclose a mortgage.—fore-clos'a-ble (-klô'zə-bl), a.—fore-clo'sure (-klô'zhûr), n. The act of foreclosing; esp., the act of foreclosing a mortgage, as on an estate.

fore-court (fôr'kôrt), n. A front or outer court.

fore-date (fôr-dât'), v. t.; -dated, -dating. To antedate.

fore-do¹, v. t. See fordo.

fore-doom (fôr'dôm), n. A doom ordained beforehand.—fore-doom', v. t. To doom beforehand.

fore-fa-ther (fôr'fä'thēr), n. An ancestor.—Forefathers' Day, the anniversary of the day (Dec. 21, 1620, in Old Style Dec. 11) on which the Pilgrims landed at Plymouth, Mass.: owing to an error in changing the date from the Old Style to the New, generally observed on Dec. 22.

fore-feel (fôr-fēl'), v. t. To feel or perceive beforehand; have a presentiment of.—fore'feel, n. A feeling beforehand.

—fore-feel'ing, n. A feeling beforehand; a presentiment: as, "a strong forefeeling that much of my destined life . . . was yet to come" (Kinglake's "Eothen," xviii.).

fore-fend', v. t. See forfend.

fore-fin-ger (fôr'fing'gēr), n. The first finger, or that next to the thumb.

fore-foot (fôr'füt), n.; pl. -feet (-fēt). One of the front feet of a quadruped, or of an insect, etc. (also written fore foot); naut., the forward end of the keel.

fore-front (fôr'frunt), n. The foremost part or place.

fore-gath'er, v. i. See forgather.

fore-glow (fôr'glô), n. A glow often seen in the sky before sunrise.

fore-go¹, v. t. See forgo.

fore-go² (fôr-gô'), v. t. or i.; pret. -went, pp. -gone, ppr. -going. [AS. foregān.] To go before; precede.—fore-go'er, n.—fore-go'ing, p. a. Going before; preceding; antecedent.—fore-gone' (-gôn'), p. a. That has gone before; previous; past.—foregone conclusion, a conclusion, opinion, or decision formed in advance; also, an inevitable conclusion or result. See Shakspeare's "Othello," iii. 3. 428.—fore-gone'ness, n.

Diagram of Ship's Bow. — G, bowsprit; F, fore-castle; M, main deck or spar-deck; L, lower deck.

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, ásk, fáre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, ělect, agōny, intō, ũnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēnt, actōr, natŭre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; y, you;

fore-ground (fôr'ground), n. The ground or parts situated, or represented as situated, in the front; the nearer portion of a scene: opposed to background.

fore-hand (fôr'hând), I. n. Position in front or above; superior position; advantage; also, the mainstay† (as, "The great Achilles . . . The sinew and the forehand of our host": Shakspeare's "Troilus and Cressida," i. 3. 143); also, the part of a horse which is in front of the rider. II. a. Being in front or ahead; foremost or leading; also, done beforehand; anticipative; given or made in advance, as a payment; also, made with the hand turned palm forward, as a stroke in tennis, etc.—fore-hand'ed, a. Providing for the future; prudent; thrifty; hence, in easy circumstances; well-to-do; also, of a horse, formed (in a specified manner) in the forehead; also, forehand, as a stroke in tennis, etc.—fore-hand'ed-ness, n.

fore-head (fôr'ed), n. [AS. forhēafod.] The fore or front upper part of the head; the part of the face above the eyes; the brow; also, the fore or front part of anything; also, decency† or modesty†; also, assurance† or audacity†.

for-ain (fôr'en), a. [OF. F. forain, < L. foras, foris, out of doors, outside, connected with foris, door: see door.] Outside† or outer†; also, not of one's household or family†; also, belonging to or proceeding from other persons or things (as, a statement supported by foreign testimony); also, situated outside a district, province, etc.; belonging to or coming from another district, province, society, etc.; esp., external to one's own country or nation (as, a foreign country; foreign regions); pertaining to, characteristic of, or derived from another country or nation; not native or domestic; hence, strange or unfamiliar; also, carried on abroad, or with other countries (as, foreign service; foreign trade); also, pertaining to relations or dealings with other countries (as, the foreign office of a government; a foreign money-order); also, not related to or connected with the thing under consideration (as, foreign to his nature; foreign from our discussion); alien in character; irrelevant or inappropriate; remote; also, not belonging to the place or body where found (as, a foreign substance in the flesh).—foreign legion, a military body in the service of a state, consisting of foreign volunteers; specif. [caps.], a military body in the French service, consisting of foreigners of all nationalities, with a small proportion of Frenchmen, which was formed about 1830 for service in the conquest of Algeria, and was employed, up to the time of the World War, in the French colonial service and in distant expeditions.—for'ain-er, n. An outsider, as one from another district, province, society, etc. (now only prov.); also, a person not native or naturalized in the country or jurisdiction under consideration; an alien; also, a thing produced in or brought from a foreign country; esp., a foreign vessel.—for'ain-ism, n. Foreign quality; imitation of anything foreign; a foreign custom, trait, idiom, term, or the like.—for'ain-ly, adv.—for'ain-ness, n.

fore-judge¹, v. t. See forjudge.

fore-judge² (fôr-juj'), v. t.; -judged, -judging. To judge beforehand; prejudge.—fore-judg'ment, n. A judgment formed or rendered beforehand.

fore-know (fôr-nô'), v. t.; pret. -knew, pp. -known, ppr. -knowing. To know beforehand.—fore-know'a-ble, a. That may be foreknown.—fore-knowl'edge (-nol'ej), n. Knowledge of a thing before it exists or happens; prescience.

fore-land (fôr'land), n. A cape, headland, or promontory (as, "Now the forelands took the shapes they knew": H. Newbolt's "Admiral Blake"); also, land or territory lying in front (in some uses, opposed to hinterland).

fore-leg (fôr'leg), n. One of the front legs of a quadruped, or of an insect, etc.: also written fore leg.

fore-lock¹ (fôr'lok), n. The lock of hair that grows from the fore part of the head; a prominent or somewhat detached lock above the forehead: as, to take time by the forelock (fig., to anticipate an emergency or occasion by suitable action; act in anticipation or with promptness).

fore-lock² (fôr'lok), n. A wedge or pin passed through a hole in the end of a bolt or the like, to keep it in place.—fore'lock², v. t. To secure (a bolt, etc.) by a forelock.

fore-man (fôr'man), n.; pl. -men. The chief or head man, as the spokesman of a jury or the overseer of a group of workmen.—fore'man-ship, n.

fore-mast (fôr'mást), n. Naut., the mast nearest the bow of a ship.

fore-men-tioned (fôr'men'shond), a. Previously mentioned; aforesaid.

fore-most (fôr'möst), a. and adv. superl. [Altered (to conform to most) from AS. formest, fyrmost, superl. < forma, first, which is itself superl. < fore, before: see fore and -most.] First in place, order, rank, etc.

fore-moth-er (fôr'muθ'ër), n. A female ancestor.

fore-name (fôr'nâm), n. A name that precedes the family name, or surname; a first name; a prænomen.

fore-nent, fore-nenst (fôr-nent', -nenst'), prep. [See fore and anent.] Opposite to; directly in front of; over against; in the direction or neighborhood of; also, with respect to. [Now prov.]

fore-noon (fôr'nôn'), n. The period of daylight before noon; often, the latter part of the morning, esp. the part ordinarily employed in transacting business.

fo-ren-sic (fôr-ren'sik), a. [L. forensis, < forum, forum.] Pertaining to, connected with, or used in courts of law or public discussion and debate; adapted or suited to argumentation; argumentative.—forensic medicine. Same as medical jurisprudence.—fo-ren'sic, n. A spoken or written exercise in argumentation, as in a college.—fo-ren'si-cal-ly, adv.

fore-or-dain (fôr-ôr-dân'), v. t. To ordain or appoint beforehand; predestinate.—fore-or-dain'ment, n.

fore-or-di-na-tion (fôr'ôr-di-nâ'shon), n. Previous ordination or appointment; predestination.

fore-part (fôr'pärt), n. The fore, front, or early part.

fore-peak (fôr'pëk), n. Naut., the part of the hold in the angle formed by the bow.

fore-post (fôr'pöst), n. An advanced post; an outpost.
fore-reach (fôr-rëch'), v. I. intr. To gain, as one ship on another; shoot or glide ahead, as a ship after coming into the wind. II. tr. To gain upon; pass; sail beyond.

fore-room (fôr'rôm), n. The front room or parlor of a house. [Local, U. S.]

fore-run (fôr-run'), v. t.; pret. -ran, pp. -run, ppr. -running. To run in front of; precede; hence, to be the precursor of (as, "These signs forerun the death or fall of kings": Shakspeare's "Richard II." ii. 4. 15); anticipate or forestall; also, to outrun or outstrip.—fore-run'ner, n. One who or that which foreruns; a herald or harbinger; a predecessor; an ancestor; a prognostic or portent.

fore-said (fôr'sed), a. Forementioned; aforesaid.

fore-sail (fôr'säl, naut. -sl), n. Naut., the sail bent to the foreyard of a square-rigged vessel; also, the principal fore-and-aft sail set on the foremast of a schooner; also, the forestaysail of a sloop, cutter, etc.

fore-say (fôr-sä'), v. t.; -said, -saying. [AS. foresecgan.] To say beforehand; predict; also, to foreordain (as, "Let ordinance Come as the gods foresay it": Shakspeare's "Cymbeline" iv. 2. 146).

fore-see (fôr-së'), v.; pret. -saw, pp. -seen, ppr. -seeing. [AS. foresëon.] I. tr. To see beforehand; have prescience of; foreknow; also, to provide for or against. II. intr. To exercise foresight.—fore-see'a-ble, a. That may be foreseen.—fore-see'ing-ly, adv.—fore-se'er, n.

fore-shad-ow (fôr-shad'ô), v. t. To shadow or indicate beforehand; prefigure.—fore'shad'ow, n. An indication or prefiguration of something to come: as, "to impart some outline or foreshadow of this Doctrine" (Carlyle's "Sartor Resartus," i. 8).—fore-shad'ow-er, n.

fore=sheet (fôr'shët), n. Naut., a sheet of a foresail; pl., the forward part of an open boat.

fore-ship (fôr'ship), n. Naut., the fore part of a ship.

fore-shore (fôr'shôr), n. The fore part of the shore; the part of the shore between the ordinary high-water mark and low-water mark; also, the ground between the water's edge and the land cultivated or built upon.

fore-short-en (fôr-shôr'tn'), v. t. To represent (a line, part, object, or the like, which lies in a plane not perpendicular to the line of sight) as of less than its true length in order to give the proper impression to the eye; shorten, or delineate as shortened, because of perspective.

fore-show (fôr-shô'), v. t. To show beforehand; foretell; foreshadow.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; û, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

fore-side (fôr'sid), n. The front side or part; also, the upper side; also, a stretch of land fronting the sea (New Eng.).

fore-sight (fôr'sit), n. The act or power of foreseeing; prevision; prescience; also, the act or an act of looking forward; perception gained by or as by looking forward; prospect; a view into the future; also, care or provision for the future; provident care; also, the sight nearest the muzzle of a firearm; in surv., a sight or reading taken in a forward direction.

fore-skin (fôr'skin), n. In anat., the fold of skin which covers the head of the penis; the prepuce.

fore-spend', v. t. See for-spend.

for-est (fôr'est), n. [OF. forest (F. forêt), < ML. forestis, an unclosed wood (as opposed to a park), < L. foris, outside: see foreign.] A large tract of land covered with trees; an extensive wood; sometimes, the trees alone (as, to cut down a forest); in Eng. law, a tract of woody grounds and pastures, generally belonging to the sovereign, set apart for game. — for'est, v. t. To cover with trees; convert into a forest. — for'es-tal (-es-tal), a.

fore-stall (fôr-stäl'), v. t. [ME. forstallen, < AS. foresteall, a standing before, intercepting, waylaying: see fore and stall.] To lie in wait for; intercept; also, to buy up (goods) in advance, in order to enhance the price; prevent sales at (a fair, market, etc.) by buying up or diverting goods; also, to prevent, hinder, or thwart by action in advance (as, "Her foresight could not forestall their will": Shakspeare's "Lucrece," 728); debar (from) or deprive (of) by previous action† (as, "May this night forestall him of the coming day!" Shakspeare's "Cymbeline," iii. 5. 69); in general, to be beforehand with or get ahead of (a person, etc.) in action (as, to forestall another in recording a claim; to forestall one by bestowing a favor before it is asked; take measures concerning or deal with (a thing) in advance (as, to forestall the action of others; to forestall objections by explaining a case); anticipate; sometimes, to deal with, meet, or realize in advance of the natural or proper time (as, "What need a man forestall his date of grief, And run to meet what he would most avoid?" Milton's "Comus," 362). — fore-stall'er, n. — fore-stal'ment, fore-stall'ment, n.

for-es-ta-tion (for-es-tä'shön), n. The planting or establishment of forests.

fore-stay (fôr'stä), n. Naut., a stay running from the head of the most forward mast of a schooner, etc., or the single mast of a cutter, etc., to the bowsprit or stem, and serving to support the mast. — fore-stay'sail (-säl, naut. -sl), n. Naut., a triangular sail set on the forestay, being the first sail in front of the forward (or single) mast.

for-est-er (fôr'es-tër), n. [OF. F. forestier.] An officer having charge of a forest; also, one who practises, or is versed in, forestry; also, one who lives in a forest; an animal of the forest; also, any of various moths of the family Agaristidae, as Alypia octomaculata (the 'eight-spotted forester'), a black moth with large yellow spots, whose larva devours the foliage of grape-vines. — for'est-ine (-es-tin), a. Of or belonging to the forest. — for'est-less, a. Without forests. — for'est-ry, n. The art or science of forming or cultivating forests; the economic management of trees; also, forest land.

fore-taste (fôr-täst'), v. t.; -tasted, -tasting. To taste beforehand; to enjoy by anticipation. — fore'taste, n. A taste beforehand; an anticipation.

fore-tell (fôr-tel'), v.; -told, -telling. I. tr. To tell of beforehand; predict or prophesy; of things, to foreshow. II. intr. To utter prediction or prophecy. — fore-tell'er, n.

fore-think (fôr-think'), v. t.; -thought, -thinking. [AS. forethencean.] To think of or contemplate beforehand (now rare); also, to think out beforehand; plan†. — fore-think'er, n.

Eight-spotted Forester, natural size. — a, larva; b, side view of one joint, enlarged.

fore-thought (fôr'thôt), n. A thinking of something beforehand; previous consideration; anticipation; also, a thinking out beforehand (as, "His good was mainly an intent, His evil not of forethought done": Whittier's "My Namesake"); planning; premeditation; also, provident care; prudence. — fore'thought'ful, a. Full of or having forethought; provident. — fore'thought'ful-ly, adv. — fore'thought'ful-ness, n.

fore-time (fôr'tim), n. Former or past time; the past.

fore-to-ken (fôr'tô'kn), n. [AS. foretâcn.] A premonitory token or sign; a prognostic. — fore-to'ken, v. t. To betoken beforehand; foreshadow.

fore-top (fôr'top), n. The fore part of the crown of the head; a lock of hair on this part of the head, or on the front of a wig† (as, "a periwig with an high foretop": Steele, in "Spectator," 17); the forelock of an animal, esp. a horse; also, the front seat on the top of a vehicle; naut., a platform at the head of a foremast.

fore-top-gal-lant-mast (fôr-top-gal'ant-mäst, naut. -tô-gal'ant-mäst), n. Naut., the mast next above the foretopmast. — fore-top-gal'lant-sail (-säl, naut. -sl), fore-top-gal'lant-yard, n. Naut., the sail or the yard belonging to the foretopgallantmast.

fore-top-mast (fôr'top'mäst), n. Naut., the mast erected at the head of the foremast, above the foretop.

fore-top-sail (fôr'top'säl, naut. -sl), n. Naut., the sail set on the foretopmast.

for-ev-er (for-ev'ër), adv. For ever; eternally; continually. See ever. — for-ev'er-more', adv. See evermore.

fore-warn (fôr-wärn'), v. t. To warn, admonish, or advise beforehand. — fore-warn'er, n. — fore-warn'ing-ly, adv.

fore-went (fôr-went'), Preterit of forego.

fore-wom-an (fôr-wüm'an), n.; pl. -women (-wim'en). The chief or head woman; esp., the woman overseer of a number of women in a workshop or factory.

fore-word (fôr'wërd), n. A word said beforehand; hence, an introduction or preface.

fore-worn', pp. See forworn.

fore-yard (fôr'yärd), n. Naut., the lower yard on the foremast.

for-feit (fôr'fît), n. [OF. F. forfait, < ML. forisfactum, transgression, prop. pp. neut. of forisfacere, transgress, < L. foris, outside, + facere, do, make.] A transgression† or crime†; also, something to which the right is lost by the commission of a crime or misdeed, the neglect of a duty, a breach of contract, etc.; hence, a fine; a penalty; also, an article deposited in a game because of a mistake and redeemable by a sportive fine or penalty; pl., a game so played; also, sing., the act of forfeiting; forfeiture. — for'-feit, v. t. To lose as a forfeit; lose, or become liable to lose, in consequence of crime, fault, breach of engagement, etc.; hence, to yield up (as, "So should we save a valiant gentleman By forfeiting a traitor and a coward": Shakspeare's "1 Henry VI.," iv. 3. 27); also, to cause the forfeiture of; also, to subject to forfeiture or confiscation (now rare). — for'-feit, a. Forfeited: as, "Thy wealth being forfeit to the state, Thou hast not left the value of a cord" (Shakspeare's "Merchant of Venice," iv. 1. 365). — for'-feit-a-ble, a. Liable to be forfeited. — for'-feit-er, n. — for'-feit-ure (-fî-tür), n. [OF. F. forfaiture.] The act of forfeiting; also, that which is forfeited; a fine or mulct.

for-fend (for-fend'), v. t. [See for and fend.] To fend off, avert, or prevent (archaic); also, to forbid† or prohibit†; sometimes, to defend, secure, or protect.

for-fi-cate (fôr-fi-kät), a. [L. forfic (forfic), scissors.] Deeply forked, as the tail of certain birds. — for-fi-ca'tion (-kä'shön), n. Forficatate state or form.

for-fought-en (fôr-fô'tn), a. [See for and foughten.] Exhausted with fighting, or by labor. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

for-gath-er (for-gath'ër), v. i. [See for and gather.] To gather together; convene; assemble; also, to encounter or meet, esp. by accident; also, to associate or fraternize (with). [Orig. and chiefly Sc.]

for-gave (fôr-gäv'). Preterit of forgive.

forge¹ (fôrj), v. i.; for-ged, for-ging. [Origin uncertain: cf. *forge*², also *force*³, v.] To move ahead, esp. slowly or with difficulty: usually with ahead.

fat, fâte, fär, fäll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviäry, ãlect, agöny, intö, ünite; (obscured) erränt, operä, ärdënt, actör, natüre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

forge² (fōrj), n. [OF. F. forge, < L. fabrica, workshop. see fabric.] A workshop or establishment where metal, as iron, is heated and hammered or worked into form; a smithy; also, the special fireplace, hearth, or furnace (fitted with a bellows or other device for producing a blast) in which metal is heated before hammering; also, a hearth, furnace, or establishment where metal is melted, refined, or the like, as one for producing wrought-iron directly from the ore; a bloomery; a puddling and shingling mill. — forge², v.; forged, forging. [OF. forgier (F. forger), < L. fabricare, < fabrica: cf. fabricate.] I. tr. To form by heating and hammering; beat into shape; hence, to form or make in any way; esp., to invent or devise (a fictitious story, a lie, etc.); sometimes, to pretend (something) to have happened; also, to make (a thing) in fraudulent imitation of something else; make (something spurious) in order to pass it off as genuine; also, to imitate (a signature, seal, etc.) fraudulently.

II. intr. To work at a forge; do a smith's work; also, to commit forgery. — forge'a-ble, a. That may be forged. — for'ger, n. One who forges metals; a smith; also, a maker or author, now only of false stories, etc. (as, "Ye are forgers of lies": Job, xiii. 4); also, one guilty of forgery. — for'ger-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). The act of forging metal† (as, "The forgery Of brazen shield and spear": Milton's "Samson Agonistes," 131); also, invention or devising, often fictitious invention, or deception or artifice (now only poetic); also, the act of fabricating or producing falsely; the making of a fraudulent imitation of a thing, or of something spurious which is put forth as genuine, as a coin, a work of art, a literary production, etc.; esp., the fraudulent making or altering of a writing to the prejudice of the right of another; also, something, as a coin, a work of art, a writing, etc., produced by forgery.

for'get (for-'get'), v. t.; pret. -got (archaic -gat), pp. -gotten (sometimes -got), ppr. -getting. [AS. forgitan, forgietan: see for- and get.] To lose remembrance of; cease to remember; fail to remember; be unable to recall; also, to omit or neglect unintentionally (to do something); omit to take, or leave behind inadvertently (as, "A plague upon it! I have forgot the map": Shakspeare's "1 Henry IV.," iii. 1. 6); omit to mention, or leave unnoticed; also, to omit to think of, or take no note of (as, "How happy is the blameless Vestal's lot! The world forgetting, by the world forgot": Pope's "Eloisa to Abelard," 208); hence, to neglect wilfully; overlook, disregard, or slight. — to forget one's self, to fail to remember one's station, position, or character; lose sight of what is due from one; say or do something improper; also, to become absent-minded; also, to lose consciousness, as in sleep; also, to neglect or slight one's self.

— for'get', v. i. To cease or omit to think of something. — for'get'a-ble, etc. See forgettable, etc. — for'get'ful, a. Apt to forget; that forgets; also, heedless or neglectful; also, causing to forget, or inducing oblivion (poetic). — for'get'ful-ly, adv. — for'get'ful-ness, n.

for'ge-tive (fōr-'je-tiv), a. [Appar. < *forge*², v.] Inventive; creative: as, "A good sherris-sack . . . ascends me into the brain . . . makes it apprehensive, quick, forgetive, full of nimble fiery and delectable shapes" (Shakspeare's "2 Henry IV.," iv. 3. 107). [Archaic.]

for'get-me-not (for-'get-'mē-not), n. A small boraginaceous plant, Myosotis palustris, which bears a light-blue flower commonly regarded as the emblem of constancy and friendship; any of several other plants of the same genus, or any of various similar plants.

for'get-ta-ble (for-'get-'a-bl), a. That may be forgotten. — for'get'ta-ble-ness, n.

for'get-ter (for-'get-'ēr), n. One who forgets; a heedless person.

for'ging (fōr-'jing), n. Something forged; a piece of forged work in metal.

for'give (for-'giv'), v.; pret. -gave, pp. -given, ppr. -giving. [AS. forgifan, forgiefan: see for- and give.] I. tr. To give† or grant†; also, to give up† or resign†; also, to grant free pardon for or remission of (an offense, debt, etc.); pardon; give up all claim on account of; also, to grant free pardon to (a person); cease to feel resentment against.

II. intr. To pardon an offense or an offender (as, "To err is human, to forgive, divine": Pope's "Essay on Criticism," 525); remit a debt, etc. — for'giv'a-ble, a. — for'give'-ness, n. [AS. forgifnes.] The act of forgiving, or the state of being forgiven; also, disposition or willingness to forgive. — for'giv'er, n. — for'giv'ing, p. a. That forgives; disposed to forgive; indicating forgiveness. — for'giv'ing-ly, adv. — for'giv'ing-ness, n.

for'go (for-'gō'), v. t.; pret. -went, pp. -gone, ppr. -going. [AS. forgān: see for- and go.] To go or pass by†; hence, to neglect or overlook (archaic); also, to quit or leave (archaic); also, to abstain or refrain from; do without; give up, renounce, or resign. — for'go'er, n.

for'got (for-'got'). Preterit of forget. — for'got'ten, for'got'l. Past participles of forget.

for'judge (for-'juj'), v. t.; -judged, -judging. [OF. forgugier, < for- (< L. foris, outside) + jugier, E. judge, v.] To exclude, expel, dispossess, or deprive by a judgment. [Now only in law.]

fork (fōrk), n. [AS. forca, < L. furca, a fork.] An instrument having two or more prongs or tines, for holding, lifting, etc., as any of various agricultural tools or an implement for handling food at table or in cooking; also, something resembling or suggesting this in form; a tuning-fork; the forked tongue of a snake†; the barbed head of an arrow†; also, a forking, or dividing into branches; the point or part at which a thing, as a river or a road, divides into branches; each of the branches into which a thing forks. — fork, v. I. tr. To make fork-shaped; also, to pierce, raise, pitch, dig, etc., with a fork; hence, to hand (over or out: slang).

II. intr. To form a fork; divide into branches. — forked (fōrkt or fōr'ked), a. Having a fork or bifurcation, or forking branches; also, zigzag, as lightning. — fork'ed-ly, adv. — fork'ed-ness, n. — fork'y, a. Forked: as, "A Python . . . With forky tongue" (Browning's "Pippa Passes," iii.).

for'la-na (fōr-lä'nä), n. Same as furlana.

for'lorn (for-lōrn'), a. [ME. forlorn (= D. verloren), pp. of forlesen, < AS. forlēosan (pp. forloren), lose utterly, destroy: see for- and lorn.] Lost†; also, desperate or hopeless (as, a forlorn cause); also, abandoned, deserted, or forsaken (sometimes followed by of); bereft (of: as, "Dreamland lies forlorn of light," Rossetti's "Love's Nocturn"); desolate or dreary; unhappy, miserable, or wretched, as in feeling, condition, or appearance. — forlorn hope. [D. verloren hoop, 'lost troop.'] A body of men appointed to lead in an assault, storm a fortification, enter a breach, or perform some other unusually perilous service; a member of such a body; also, a perilous or desperate enterprise; also (with a play upon words, or through misunderstanding of 'hope'), a vain hope; an undertaking almost certain to fail. — for'lorn-ly, adv. — for'lorn-ness, n.

form (fōrm), n. [OF. F. forme, < L. forma, form, shape, figure, plan, model, mold, frame, sort, kind, ML. seat, bench.] Definite shape; external shape or appearance considered apart from color or material; configuration; also, a particular shape; the shape of a thing or person; hence, a particular structural condition, character, or mode of being exhibited by a thing (as, sulphur in the crystalline or the amorphous form; water in the form of steam or of ice; electricity is a form of energy; a mild form of a disease; a novel in the form of letters); a particular character as to spelling, inflection, etc., exhibited by a word, or a word considered as exhibiting such a character (as, an archaic, Anglicized, or abbreviated form of a word; 'his' is the possessive form of 'he'); also, due or proper shape; orderly arrangement of parts; good order; also, the manner or style of arranging and coordinating parts for a pleasing or effective result, as in literary or musical composition; also, a set, prescribed, or customary order or method of doing something (as, "The citadel was defended in form, and at length, in proper form, surrendered at discretion": Fielding's "Tom Jones," i. 11); a set order of words, as for use in religious ritual or in a legal document; also, a formulary document with blank spaces to be filled in with particulars; a sample or specimen document to be used as a guide in framing others for like cases (as, a form for a deed, lease, or contract); also, a conventional method of procedure or behavior; a formality or ceremony, often with implication of absence of real meaning (as, "For who would keep an ancient form Thro' which the spirit breathes no more?" Tennyson's

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; †, primary accent; ‡, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

"In Memoriam," cv.); also, procedure according to a set order or method; formality; ceremony; conformity to the usages of society; often, in depreciation, mere outward formality or ceremony; conventional observance of social usages; also, procedure or conduct as judged by social standards (as, it is bad form to do such a thing); also, manner or method of performing something (as, he is a fast runner, but his form is bad); also, condition, esp. good condition, with reference to fitness for performing (colloq.: as, an athlete in good form, or in form); also, something having a definite shape or arrangement; a figure; a body, esp. that of a human being; also, an image† or likeness†; also, a rank or class of pupils in a school; also, a bench or long seat; also, an assemblage of types, etc., secured in a chase to print from or make plates from (in Great Britain, often spelled forme); also, the bed or lair of a hare; also, something that gives or determines shape; a mold; in crystal, the combination of all the like faces possible on a crystal of given symmetry; in philos., that element which determines the mode in which a thing is, or is perceived.—form, v. [OF. F. former, < L. formare, < forma.] I. tr. To give form or shape to; shape; fashion; give a particular form to, or fashion in a particular manner; also, to mold by discipline or instruction (as, "The most skillful masters . . . had labored to form the mind and body of the young prince": Gibbon's "Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire," xxvii.); train; also, to place in order; arrange; organize; also, to construct or frame; make or produce; frame in the mind (ideas, opinions, etc.); also, to contract (habits, friendships, etc.); also, to serve to make up, or compose; serve for, or constitute. II. intr. To take or assume form; be formed or produced; assume a particular form or arrangement.

-form. [L. -formis, < forma, form.] A termination of adjectives expressing form, shape, or likeness, as aëriiform, cruciform, cuneiform, deiform, pisciform, or denoting the number of forms, as biform, triform, quadriform, multiform, omniform.

form-a-ble (fôr'mā-bl), a. That may be formed.

form-al (fôr'māl), a. [L. formalis.] Of or pertaining to the form, shape, structural condition, or mode of being of a thing, esp. as distinguished from the matter; also, being such in form, esp. in mere outward form; also, being in accordance with prescribed or customary forms (as, a formal siege); made or done in accordance with forms ensuring validity (as, a formal authorization); being in accordance with conventional requirements; conventional; academic; rigorously methodical; excessively regular or symmetrical; also, marked by form or ceremony (as, a formal call; a formal occasion); observant of form, as persons; ceremonious; sometimes, excessively ceremonious; punctilious or precise to affectation; also, being a matter of form only; perfunctory; also, normal or sound in intellect† (as, "With wholesome syrups, drugs and holy prayers, To make of him a formal man again": Shakspeare's "Comedy of Errors," v. 1. 105); in philos., pertaining to form.

form-al-de-hyde (fôr-māl'dē-hid), n. [From formic + aldehyde.] In chem., a gas, CH₂O, used, often in the form of an aqueous solution, as a disinfectant and preservative.

form-a-lin (fôr'mā-lin), n. [From formaldehyde + -in.] An aqueous solution of formaldehyde.

form-al-ism (fôr'māl-izm), n. [See formal.] Strict adherence to or observance of prescribed or customary forms; esp., in religion, excessive attachment to external forms and observances.—form'al-ist, n.—form'al-i-ty (-māl'-i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). The condition or quality of being formal; accordance with prescribed, customary, or due forms; conventionality; rigorously methodical character; excessive regularity, or stiffness; observance of form or ceremony; sometimes, marked or excessive ceremoniousness; also, an established order or mode of proceeding (as, the formalities of judicial process); a formal act or observance; also, something done merely for form's sake; a requirement of custom or etiquette.—form'al-ize (-iz), v.; -ized, -izing. I. tr. To give a definite form or shape to; also, to render formal. II. intr. To be formal; act with formality.—form'al-i-za'tion (-i-zā'shən), n.—form'al-ly, adv.—form'al-ness, n.

for-mat (fôr'mat, F. fôr-mä), n. [F., < L. formatus, pp. of formare, E. form, v.] The shape and size of a book; the form or style generally, in which a book is made.

for-mate (fôr'mät), n. In chem., a salt of formic acid.

for-ma-tion (fôr-mā'shən), n. [L. formatio(n-).] The act or process of forming, or the state of being formed; also, the manner in which a thing is formed; disposition of parts; formal structure or arrangement; specif., a particular disposition of troops, as in columns, squares, etc.; also, something formed; in geol., strata formed during some subdivision (usually minor) of geological time; a body of sedimentary rock of practically the same kind throughout; also, a mass or deposit of rock or mineral of a particular composition or origin (as, the siliceous formation around a geyser).

for-ma-tive (fôr'mā-tiv), [OF. F. formatif.] I. a. Giving form or shape; forming; shaping; fashioning; molding; also, pertaining to formation or development (as, the formative period of a nation); in gram., serving to form words (as, a formative termination); in biol., anat., etc., concerned with the formation of an embryo, organ, or the like (as, formative yolk: see yolk); capable of developing new cells or tissue by cell-division (as, formative tissue). II. n. In gram., a formative element of a word, as a prefix or a suffix; also, a word formed, as from a root.—for'ma-tive-ly, adv.—for'ma-tive-ness, n.

forme (fôr'm), n. See form (assemblage of types, etc.).

form-er¹ (fôr'mér), n. One who or that which forms or serves to form.

form-er² (fôr'mér), a. [ME. former, a compar. formed to correspond to ME. and AS. foremost, superl.: see foremost.] Being before in place†; forward†; foremost†; also, preceding in time; prior or earlier; past; long past, or ancient; also, preceding in order; being the first of two; esp., being the first mentioned of two.—for'mer-ly, adv. Before something else†; first†; also, in time past; heretofore; of old; also, in time just past†; just now†.

for-mic (fôr'mik), a. [L. formica, ant.] Pertaining to or derived from ants: as, formic acid (a colorless, irritant, vesicatory acid, HCO.OH, existing in ants, other insects, certain plants, etc.).

for-mi-ca-ry (fôr'mi-kā-ri), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). [ML. formicarium, < L. formica, ant.] An ants' nest.

for-mi-cate (fôr'mi-kāt), v. i.; -cated, -cating. [L. formicatus, pp. of formicare, < formica, ant.] To crawl like ants; also, to swarm with moving beings.—for-mi-ca'tion (-kā'shən), n. [L. formicatio(n-).] In pathol., an abnormal sensation as of ants creeping over the body.

for-mi-da-ble (fôr'mi-dā-bl), a. [F. formidable, < L. formidabilis, < formidare, fear, dread.] That is to be feared or dreaded, esp. in encounters or dealings; of alarming strength, power, size, difficulty, appearance, etc. (as, "a most formidable fellow to look at": Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe," i. 12); such as to inspire apprehension of defeat or failure.—for'mi-da-ble-ness, n.—for'mi-da-bly, adv.

form-less (fôr'm'les), a. Wanting form or shape; shapeless; without a determinate or regular form.—form'less-ly, adv.—form'less-ness, n.

for-mu-la (fôr'mū-lā), n.; pl. -las or -læ (-lê). [L., dim. of forma, E. form, n.] A set form of words, as for stating or declaring something definitely or authoritatively, for indicating procedure to be followed, or for prescribed use on some ceremonial occasion; a rule; a recipe or prescription; a formal statement of religious doctrine; in scientific use, a group of symbols, etc., by which something is expressed; specif., in math., a rule or principle expressed in algebraic symbols; in chem., an expression of the constituents of a compound by symbols and figures.—for'mu-lar (-lār), a. Of or pertaining to a formula; formulary.—for'mu-lar-ize (-iz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. To formulate.—for'mu-lar-i-za'tion (-i-zā'shən), n.—for'mu-lar-y (-lā-ri). [F. formulaire, n., < L. formula.] I. n.; pl. -ries (-riz). A collection or system of formulas; also, a set form of words; a formula. II. a. Of or pertaining to a formula or formulas; of the nature of a formula.

for-mu-late (fôr'mū-lāt), v. t.; -lated, -lating. [Cf. F. formuler.] To reduce to a formula; express in or as in a formula; state definitely or systematically.—for-mu-la'-tion (-lā'shən), n.

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pîne; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pùll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, êlect, agôny, întô, ûnite; (obscured) errânt, operâ, ardent, actôr, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; y, you; for-mu-lism (fôr'mū-lizm), n. Adherence to or systematic use of formulas; also, a system of formulas.—for'mu-list, n. One who adheres to or favors the use of formulas.—for-mu-lis'tic, a.

for-mu-lize (fôr'mū-liz), v. t.; -lized, -lizing. To formulate.—for'mu-li-za'tion (-li-zā'shən), n.

for-myI (fôr'mil), n. [See formic and -yl.] In chem., the hypothetical radical, CHO, of formic acid.

for-nent, for-nenst, prep. See forenent, forenenst.

for-ni-cate¹ (fôr'ni-kāt), a. [L. fornicatus, < fornix, arch, vault.] Arched; vaulted.

for-ni-cate² (fôr'ni-kāt), v. i.; -cated, -cating. [LL. fornicatus, pp. of fornicari, < L. fornix, arch, vault, (underground) brothel.] To commit fornication.—for-ni-ca'tion (-kā'shən), n. [LL. fornicatio(-n-).] Voluntary sexual intercourse on the part of an unmarried person with a person of the opposite sex; also, esp. in Scripture, adultery; fig., idolatry.—for'ni-ca-tor, n.—for'ni-ca-tress, n.

for-nix (fôr'niks), n.; pl. -nices (-ni-sēz). [L., arch, vault.] In anat., any of various arched or vaulted structures, as an arching fibrous formation in the brain.

for-sake (for-sāk'), v. t.; pret. -sook, pp. -saken, ppr. -saking. [AS. forsacan, < for- (see for-) + sacan, contend: see sake']. To deny†; repudiate†; also, to decline† or refuse†; avoid† or shunt; also, to give up or renounce; also, to quit or leave entirely; desert; abandon.—for-sak'en (-sāk'ən), p. a. Deserted; abandoned; forlorn; also, morally abandoned†.—for-sak'en-ly, adv.—for-sak'er, n.

for-slow (for-slō'), v. [AS. forslāwian, < for- (see for-) + slāwian, be slow, < slāw, E. slow']. I. tr. To be slow or dilatory about; put off; also, to make slow; delay; obstruct. [Obs. or archaic.] II. † intr. To be slow or dilatory: as, "Forslow no longer, make we hence amain" (Shakspeare's "3 Henry VI," ii. 3. 56).

for-sook (for-sūk'). Preterit of forsake.

for-sooth (for-sōth'), adv. [AS. forsōth, 'for sooth.'] In truth; in fact; indeed: now commonly used ironically or derisively.

for-speak (for-spēk'), v. t.; pret. -spoke, pp. -spoken or -spoke, ppr. -speaking. [See for- and speak']. To speak against† (as, "Thou hast forspoke my being in these wars, And say'st it is not fit": Shakspeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," iii. 7. 3); also, to bewitch (now only Sc. and north. Eng.).

for-spend (for-spend'), v. t.; -spent, -spending. [AS. forspendan: see for- and spend']. To spend or use up completely, as strength; wear out or exhaust, as with exertion: chiefly in forspent, pp.

for-swear (for-swār'), v.; pret. -swore, pp. -sworn, ppr. -swearing. [AS. forswerian: see for- and swear']. I. tr. To reject or renounce upon oath or with protestations; abjure; also, to deny upon oath or with strong asseveration; also, to perjure (one's self). II. intr. To swear falsely; commit perjury.—for-swear'er, n.—for-sworn' (-swōrn'), p. a. Perjured.

for-sy-thi-a (for-sī'thi-ä or -sith'i-ä), n. [NL.; from W. Forsyth (1737-1804), British horticulturist.]. Any shrub of the oleaceous genus Forsythia, native in China and south-eastern Europe, species of which are much cultivated for their showy yellow flowers, appearing in early spring before the leaves.

fort (fört), n. [F. fort, noun use of fort, adj., < L. fortis, strong.] A strong or fortified place; an armed place surrounded by defensive works and occupied by troops; a fortification; also, in North America, a trading-post (so called because such posts were originally fortified).—fort, v. t. To fortify; inclose in a fort.

fort-a-lice (fôr'tā-lis), n. [OF. fortalice, fortelese, < ML. fortalitia, fortalitium, < L. fortis, strong.] A fortress†; also, a small fort; an outwork.

forte¹ (fört), n. [F. fort, noun use of fort, adj.: see fort']. A strong point, as of a person; that in which one excels; also, the stronger part of a sword-blade, being the portion between the middle and the hilt (opposed to foible).

for-te² (fôr'tā). [It., < L. fortis, strong.] In music: I. a. Loud. II. adv. Loudly.

forth (föth). [AS. forth = D. voort = G. fort; akin to E. fore and further']. I. adv. Forward; onward or outward in place or space; also, onward in time, in order, or in a series (as, from that day forth; and so forth, that is, and so on, and others, or et cetera); also, out, as from concealment or inaction; into view or consideration; also, away, as from a place or country; abroad. II. prep. Out of; forth from: as, "Steal forth thy father's house to-morrow night" (Shakspeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," i. 1. 164). [Archaic.]

forth-come (föth-kum'), v. i. [AS. forthcuman]. To come forth; appear.—forth-com'ing, p. a. Coming forth, or about to come forth; about to appear; approaching in time; often, ready or available when required or expected (as, "Still no Christian was forthcoming": J. H. Newman's "Callista," xvii.).

forth-put-ting (föth-püt'ing), a. That puts forth; esp., putting one's self forward; obtrusive; presumptuous; meddlesome. [Now chiefly U. S.]

forth-right (föth'rit or föth-rit'), adv. [AS. forthrihte]. Straight or directly forward; in a direct manner; also, straightway; at once; immediately.—forth-right. I. a. Proceeding in a straight course; direct; straightforward; fig., going straight to the point; outspoken. II. n. A straight course or path.—forth-right-ness, n.

forth-with (föth-wiž' or -with'), adv. Immediately; at once; without delay; as soon as can reasonably be expected.

for-ti-eth (fôr'ti-eth). [AS. fēwertigotha]. I. a. Next after the thirty-ninth; also, being one of forty equal parts. II. n. The fortieth member of a series; also, a fortieth part.

for-ti-fi-a-ble (fôr'ti-fi-ä-bl), a. That may be fortified.

for-ti-fi-ca-tion (fôr'ti-fi-kā'shən), n. [F. fortification, < LL. fortificatio(-n-).] The act of fortifying or strengthening; specif., the art or science of constructing defensive military works; also, that which fortifies or protects; specif., a military work constructed for the purpose of strengthening a position; a fortified place; a fort; a castle.

for-ti-fy (fôr'ti-fi). [F. fortifier, < LL. fortificare, < L. fortis, strong, + facere, make.]. I. tr. To make strong; impart strength or vigor to, as the body; strengthen mentally or morally (as, courage fortified by prayer); confirm or corroborate (as, a charge fortified by particulars); furnish with a means of resisting force or standing strain, wear, etc. (as, a barrel fortified with metal hoops); specif., to strengthen against attack; surround with defenses; provide with defensive military works; protect with fortifications. II. intr. To set up defensive works; erect fortifications.—for'ti-fi-er (-fi-ēr), n.—for'ti-fy-ing-ly, adv.

for-tis-si-mo (fôr-tis'i-mō). [It., superl. of forte: see forte']. In music: I. a. Very loud. II. adv. Very loudly.

for-ti-tude (fôr'ti-tūd), n. [L. fortitudo, < fortis, strong.] Physical strength†; firmness†; also, moral strength or endurance (as, "adamantine fortitude, which sustained without flinching a mountain of responsibility": Motley's "Dutch Republic," iii. 2); patient courage under affliction, privation, or temptation.

fort-night (fört'nit or -nit), n. [ME. fourtenight, < AS. fēwertighe niht, fourteen nights.] The space of fourteen nights and days; two weeks.—fort-night-ly. I. a. Occurring or appearing once a fortnight. II. n.; pl. -lies (-liz). A fortnightly publication. III. adv. Once a fortnight.

fort-tress (fôr'tres), n. [OF. forterice (F. forteresse), appar. var. of fortalice: see fortalice']. A fortified place; a fort; esp., a large permanent fortification, often including a town; hence, any place of defense or security.—for'tress, v. t. To furnish with a fortress; defend by or as by a fortress; fortify.

for-tu-i-tism (fôr-tū'i-tizm), n. [See fortuitous]. The doctrine or belief that adaptations in nature are produced (variable) đ as d or j, š as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

- by the fortuitous operations of natural causes, and not by design.—for-tu'i-tist, n.
- for-tu-i-tous (fôr-tū'i-tus), a. [L. fortuitus, < fors (fort-), chance: see fortune.] Happening or produced by chance; accidental; casual.—for-tu'i-tous-ly, adv.—for-tu'i-tous-ness, n.—for-tu'i-ty (-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). Fortuitous character; the fact of being accidental or casual; accident or chance; an accidental occurrence.
- for-tu-nate (fôr-tū-nāt), a. [L. fortunatus, pp. of fortunare, E. fortune, v.] Having good fortune; receiving good from uncertain or unexpected sources; lucky; also, bringing or presaging good fortune; resulting favorably; auspicious.—Fortunate Islands, the Islands of the Blessed (see under island); also, the Canary Islands.—for-tu-nate-ly, adv.—for-tu-nate-ness, n.
- for-tune (fôr-tūn), n. [OF. F. fortune, < L. fortuna, chance, luck, fortune, < fors (fort-), chance, akin to ferre, bear.] Chance, hap, or luck; [often cap.] chance personified, commonly regarded as a goddess distributing arbitrarily or capriciously the lots of life; also [L. c.], that which falls or is to fall to one as his portion in life or in any particular proceeding (often in pl.); lot; destiny; esp., good luck; success; prosperity; also, position in life as determined by wealth; amount of wealth; a person's possessions collectively; a stock of wealth; often, great wealth; an ample stock of wealth; also, a person of wealth, esp. a woman; an heiress.—for-tune, v.; -tuned, -tuning. [L. fortunare, make fortunate, < fortuna.] I. tr. To make fortunatē; also, to determine or control the lot or destiny of; also, to endow with a fortune. II. intr. To chance or happen; come by chance: as, "It fortuned, out of the thickest wood A ramping Lyon rushed suddenly" (Spenser's "Faerie Queene," i. 3. 5). [Now rare.]—for-tune-hunt'er, n. One who seeks to win a fortune, esp. through marriage.—for-tune-hunt'ing, n. and a.—for-tune-less, a. Without fortune; luckless; also, without a pecuniary fortune.—for-tune-tell'er, n. One who professes to foretell to persons the fortune or lot destined for them.—for-tune-tell'ing, n. and a.
- for-ty (fôr-ti). [AS. fēwertig.] I. a. Four times ten. II. n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). A number composed of forty units, or a symbol, as 40 or xl, representing it.—the Forty, the forty members constituting the French Academy. Also called the Forty Immortals.—for-ty-five, n. A card-game in which the game is 45 points.—the Forty-five, the year 1745 as marked by a Jacobite rebellion in Scotland; the rebellion itself.—for-ty-nin'er (-ni'nēr), n. One of those who went to California in 1849, during the gold fever, in search of fortune. Cf. Argonaut.
- fo-rum (fô-rum), n.; pl. -rums, L. -ra (-rā). [L.] The market-place or public place of an ancient Roman city, the center of judicial and other public business and a place of assembly for the people; hence, a court or tribunal (often fig.: as, the forum of conscience; the forum of public opinion); also, an assembly for the discussion of questions of public interest.
- for-ward (fôr-wārd), adv. [AS. forweard, < for, fore, before, + -weard: see fore and -ward.] Toward or at a place, point, or time in advance; onward; ahead; also, to the front, into view or consideration, or forth (as, to bring forward new evidence).—for-ward. I. a. Situated in the front or fore part; lying in advance; fore; also, directed toward a point in advance; moving ahead; onward; also, of or pertaining to the future (as, forward buying); prospective; also, being in a condition of advancement; well advanced; often, advanced beyond one's years; precocious; also, ready, prompt, or eager (as, "I killed a sea-fowl or two . . . but was not very forward to eat them": Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe," i. 6); also, presumptuous, pert, or bold (as, "Your cousin Sophy is a forward, impertinent gipsy": Sheridan's "School for Scandal," iii. 1); also, radical or extreme, as persons or opinions. II. n. A player stationed in advance of others on his team, as, in football, any player in the forward line.—for-ward, v. t. To send forward; transmit, esp. to an ulterior destination (as, to forward a letter); also, to advance or help onward (as, to forward the growth of a plant); promote; hasten; in bookbinding, to prepare (a book) for the finisher by fitting it with back and covers, etc.
- for-ward-er, n.—for-ward-ly, adv.—for-ward-ness, n.—for-wards, adv. Forward.
- for-wear (fôr-wār'), v. t. [See for- and *wear*².] To wear out; exhaust: now only in forworn, pp. [Archaic.]
- for-wear-y (fôr-wēr'i), v. t.; -wearied, -wearying. [See for- and weary, v.] To weary utterly; tire out. [Obs. or archaic.]
- for-went (fôr-went'). Preterit of forgo.
- for-worn (fôr-wörn'). Past participle of forwear.
- foss (fos), n. See fosse.
- fos-sa (fos'sā), n.; pl. fossæ (-ē). [L., a ditch, trench, prop. fem. of fodere, dig.] In anat., a pit, cavity, or depression in a bone, etc.
- fosse (fos), n. [OF. F. fosse, < L. fossa: see fossa.] A ditch, trench, or canal; esp., a moat in a fortification.
- fos-sette (fo-set'), n. [F. fossette, dim. of fosse: see fosse.] A little hollow; a depression; a dimple.
- fos-sick (fos'ik), v. [Origin obscure.] I. intr. To search for gold in relinquished workings, washing-places, etc.; hence, to search about or rummage. [Australia.] II. tr. To dig; hunt. [Australia.]—fos-sick-er, n.
- fos-sil (fos'il). [L. fossilis, < fodere, dig.] I. a. Dug out of the earth, or obtained by digging (as, fossil fuel); also, of the nature of a fossil; hence, belonging to a past epoch or discarded system; antiquated. II. n. Any rock or mineral substance dug out of the earth; also, any remains, impression, or trace of an animal or plant of a former geological age, found in the earth's crust or strata; hence, a fossilized or antiquated person or thing; a person of antiquated ideas or ways.—fos-sil-if-er-ous (fos-i-lif'ē-rus), a. [See -ferous.] Bearing or containing fossils, as rocks or strata.—fos-sil-ist, n. A student of fossils; a paleontologist.—fos-sil-ize (-iz), v.; -ized, -izing. I. tr. To convert into a fossil (as, to fossilize animal remains); fig., to change as if into mere lifeless remains or traces of the past; render rigidly antiquated, as persons, ideas, etc. II. intr. To become fossilized (lit. or fig.); also, to search for fossils.—fos-sil-i-za'tion (-i-zā'shon), n.
- foss-so-ri-al (fo-sō'ri-al), a. [LL. fossorius, < L. fossor, digger, < fodere, dig.] Digging or burrowing, or adapted for digging or burrowing: as, a fossorial animal; a fossorial limb.
- fos-ter (fos'tēr), n. [AS. fōstor, akin to fōda, E. food.] Nourishment: now chiefly as in foster-father, foster-mother, foster-parent, foster-child, foster-brother, etc., implying relationship through nursing or rearing, not by blood.—fos-ter, v. t. To feed† or nourish† (as, "foster'd with cold dishes": Shakspere's "Cymbeline," ii. 3. 119); also, to bring up or rear, as a foster-child; hence, to care for or cherish tenderly (as, "He gave them charge about the Queen, To guard and foster her for evermore": Tennyson's "Guinevere," 588); also, to promote the growth or development of (as, to foster a plant; to foster trade or friendly relations); further; encourage.—fos-ter-age (-āj), n. The act of fostering or rearing another's child as one's own; the condition of being a foster-child; also, the act of promoting or encouraging.—fos-ter-er, n.—fos-ter-ling, n. A foster-child.—fos-tress, n. A woman who fosters. Also fig.
- foth-er¹ (fōth'ēr), n. [AS. fōther.] A cart-load, or any large quantity (now chiefly Sc. and north. Eng.); also, an old unit of weight for lead, lime, coal, etc., that for lead being now usually 19½ hundredweight.
- foth-er² (fōth'ēr), v. t. [Cf. D. voederen, voeren, LG. fodern, Icel. fōðra, line.] To cover (a sail) with oakum, rope-yarn, etc., fastened upon it, for placing over and stopping a leak in a ship; also, to stop (a leak) with a sail prepared thus.
- Fou-cault (fō-kō) cur-rent. [From J. B. L. Foucault (1819-68), French physicist.] In elect., an eddy current.
- fou-droy-ant (fō-droi'ant, F. fō-drwo-yān), a. [F., ppr. of foudroyer, strike with lightning, < foudre, < L. fulgur, lightning.] Striking as with lightning; sudden and overwhelming in effect; stunning; dazzling.
- fou-gasse (fō-gas'), n. [F., earlier fougade; from It.] Milit., a small, well-like mine sunk in the ground.
- fought (fōt). Preterit and past participle of fight.—fought'en, p. a. [Old pp. of fight.] That has been the scene of fighting (archaic: as, a foughten field); also, for-foughten (Sc. and north. Eng.).

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

foul (foul). [AS. fūl = D. vuil = G. faul = Icel. fūll = Goth. fūls, foul; akin to L. pus, Gr. πῶν, pus, Gr. πίθων, rot, L. putere, Skt. pū-, stink.] I. a. Grossly offensive to the senses, or disgusting (as, foul matter; a foul exudation; a foul smell); loathsome; noisome; also, charged with or characterized by offensive or noisome matter (as, a foul pond; foul air; a foul ulcer); filthy or dirty, as places, vessels, or clothes; muddy, as a road; abounding in errors or in marks of correction, as a printer's proof; clogged or obstructed with foreign matter (as, a foul chimney, one choked with soot; a ship with a foul bottom, one having the bottom clogged with seaweed, barnacles, etc.); in collision or obstructing contact (as, a ship foul of another or of a rock); entangled, caught, or jammed (as, a foul rope or anchor); also, not fair; ugly or unattractive (now chiefly prov.); disfigured† (as, "My face is foul with weeping": Job, xvi. 16); contrary to the rules or established usages, as of a sport or game; unfair (as, foul play, unfair conduct in a game, or any unfair or treacherous dealing, often such as involves murder); unfavorable or stormy, as weather; contrary, as the wind; also, grossly offensive in a moral sense; abominable, wicked, or vile, as deeds, crime, slander, etc.; scurrilous, profane, or obscene, as language; in baseball, noting a hit or batted ball which is not a fair ball (see fair ball, under *fair*¹, a.); noting the lines from home to first base and from home to third base, with their indefinite continuations. II. n. That which is foul; a collision or entanglement; a violation of the rules of a sport or game; in baseball, a foul ball.—foul, adv. In a foul manner; foully; unfairly.—foul, v. I. tr. To make foul; defile; soil; clog or obstruct, as a chimney or the bore of a gun; encumber (a ship's bottom) with seaweed, barnacles, etc.; collide with (as, one boat fouled another); cause to become entangled or caught, as a rope; also, to defile in a moral sense; dishonor; disgrace. II. intr. To become foul; collide, as ships; become entangled or caught, as a rope; also, to make a foul play, give a foul blow, knock a foul ball, etc.

foul-lard (fö-lärd'), n. [F.; origin unknown.] A soft, light-weight silk or satin, plain or with a printed pattern, used for women's dresses, etc.

foul-ly (foul'li), adv. In a foul manner.

foul-mind-ed (foul'min'ded), a. Foul or unclean in mind or thoughts.

foul-mouthed (foul'mout'hd'), a. Using scurrilous, profane, or obscene language; given to filthy or abusive speech.

foul-ness (foul'nes), n. The state or quality of being foul; also, that which is foul; foul matter; filth; wickedness.

foul-spok-en (foul'spö'kn), foul-tongued (foul'tungd'), a. Foul-mouthed.

fou-mart (fö'märt), n. [ME. fulmard, < AS. fūl, foul, + meart, marten.] The European polecat.

found¹ (found), Preterit and past participle of find.

found² (found), v. t. [OF. F. fondre, melt, cast, < L. fundere, pour, melt, cast: cf. *fuse*¹.] To melt and pour (metal, etc.) into a mold; form or make (an article) of molten material in a mold; cast.

found³ (found), v. [OF. F. fonder, < L. fundare, lay the bottom of, found, < fundus, bottom: cf. fund.] I. tr. To lay the lowest part of, fix, or build (a structure) on a firm base or ground (as, a house founded upon a rock: see Mat. vii. 25); hence, to set up or establish on a firm basis or for enduring existence (as, to found a city, colony, or institution; to found a family or dynasty; to found a system of philosophy); also, to base or ground (on or upon: as, a story founded on fact; to found a claim on right or justice); sometimes, to afford a basis or ground for. II. intr. To be founded or based (on or upon); also, to base one's opinion (on or upon).

found-da-tion (foun-dä'shən), n. [OF. F. fondation, < L. fundatio(n-).] The act of founding, setting up, establishing, etc., or the state of being founded; also, that on which something is founded; the natural or prepared ground or base on which some structure rests; the lowest division of a building, wall, or the like, usually of masonry and partly or wholly below the surface of the ground; the basis or ground of anything (as, a report that has no founda-tion of fact); also, a donation or legacy for the support of an institution; an endowment; an endowed institution. —foun-da'tion-er, n. In Great Britain, one who is supported on the foundation or endowment of a college or school. —foun-da'tion-less, a. Without foundation; baseless; unfounded.

found-er¹ (foun'dér), n. One who founds or casts metal, etc.

found-er² (foun'dér), n. One who founds or establishes.

found-er³ (foun'dér), v. [OF. fondrer, < L. fundus, bottom: cf. *found*³.] I. intr. To fall or sink down, as buildings, ground, etc.; sink in mire, a quicksand, etc.; esp., to fill with water and sink, as a ship; fig., to suffer wreck, or fail utterly (as, "In this point All his tricks founder": Shakspeare's "Henry VIII." iii. 2. 40); also, to stumble, break down, or go lame, as a horse. II. tr. To cause to fall or sink down; undermine, as a structure; cause to sink in mire, etc. (as, "A boggy Syrtis, neither sea, Nor good dry land: nigh founder'd on he fares": Milton's "Paradise Lost," ii. 940); cause to fill with water and sink, as a ship; also, to cause (a horse, etc.) to break down, go lame, or suffer from foundering, in golf, to drive (the ball) into the ground. —found-er³, n. Lameness or inflammation in the foot of a horse, mule, etc., as from overwork; laminitis. —foun'der-ous, a. Apt to cause foundering, as roads, ground, etc.; miry; swampy. [Now chiefly prov. Eng.]

found-ling (foun'dling), n. An infant found abandoned; a child without a parent or claimant.

found-ress (foun'dres), n. A woman who founds or establishes.

foun-drous (foun'drus), a. See founderous.

foun-dry (foun'dri), n.; pl. -dries (-driz). [F. fonderie, < fondre, E. *found*².] The founding of metal, etc.; also, things made by founding; castings; also, an establishment for founding (as, an iron-foundry; a type-foundry; a glass-foundry).

font¹ (font), n. In printing, same as *font*¹. [Chiefly Eng.]

font² (font), n. [L. fons (font-), spring, fountain: cf. *font*².] A spring of water; a fountain; fig., a source or origin.

foun-tain (foun'tān), n. [OF. F. fontaine, < LL. fontana, prop. fem. of L. fontanus, of or from a spring, < fons, E. *font*².] A spring or source of water; the source or head of a stream; fig., the source or origin of anything (as, "Almighty God, the fountain of all wisdom": Book of Common Prayer, Communion); also, a jet or stream of water (or other liquid) issuing or spouted forth, esp. one made by mechanical means to spout or rise from an orifice or structure, as to afford water for use, or to cool the air, or to serve for ornament (as, "And drew, from butts of water . . . The fountain of the moment, playing, now A twisted snake, and now a rain of pearls, Or steep-up spout whereon the gilded ball Danced like a wisp": Tennyson's "Princess," Prologue, 61); hence, a structure for discharging such a jet or a number of jets, often an elaborate or artistic work with basins, sculptures, etc.; an erection, as in a public place, for furnishing a constant supply of fresh water for drinking; a soda-fountain; also, a reservoir for a liquid to be supplied gradually or continuously, as one for oil in certain kinds of lamp or one for ink in a printing-press (cf. fountain-pen). —foun'tained, a. Having a fountain or fountains. —foun'tain-head, n. A fountain or spring from which a stream flows; the head or source of a stream; fig., a primary or original source (as, "Jerusalem is the fountain-head of religious knowledge": J. H. Newman's "Idea of a University," ii. 1). —foun'tain-less, a. Without fountains. —foun'tain-pen, n. A writing-pen with a reservoir for supplying ink continuously.

four (fö-r), a. [AS. fēower = D. and G. vier = Icel. fjörir = Goth. fīdwoñ, four; akin to L. quattuor, Gr. τέτταρες, Skt. catur, four.] One more than three.—the four seas. See under sea. —four, n. A number composed of four units, or a symbol, as 4 or iv, representing it; a set of four things or persons, as a team of four horses or the crew of a four-oared boat; also, the boat; also, a playing-card, die-face, etc., with four pips.—on all fours, on the hands and feet (or knees).

four-ché, four-chée (fö-r-shä'), a. [F. fourché, masc., fourchée, fem., < fourche, a fork: see fourchette.] In her., (variable) ğ as d or j, ş as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

forked; having the extremity or extremities divided into two parts: said of a bearing, esp. a cross having each arm divided into two square ends at its extremity.

four-chette (fôr-shet'), n. [F., dim. of fourche, < L. furca, E. fork.] A fork, or something resembling a fork; the strip of material forming the sides of two adjacent fingers of a glove; in anat., the furcula of a bird; also, the frog of an animal's foot; also, a small fold of membrane just within the posterior commissure of the vulva; in card-playing, the combination in one hand of the card immediately above and that immediately below a given card.

Cross Fourché.

four-cy-cle (fôr'si'kl), n. In an internal-combustion engine, a cycle in which one piston stroke out of every four is a working stroke.

Four-dri-nier (fôr-dri-nēr') ma-chine'. [From H. and S. Fourdrinier, English inventors.] A machine for making paper in a continuous strip or web.

four-flush (fôr'flush'), n. In the game of poker, four cards of a possible flush, which, with one card of a different suit, make up a hand; an imperfect flush (which, as such, is of no value); hence (slang), a mere bluff or empty pretense. — four'-flush', v. i. To act as a four-flusher. [Slang.] — four'-flush'er, n. One who bluffs on or as on the strength of a four-flush; one who makes pretensions that he cannot or does not bear out. [Slang.]

four-fold (fôr'fôld). I. a. Comprising four parts or members; four times as great or as much. II. adv. In fourfold measure.

four-foot-ed (fôr'fût'ed), a. Having four feet.

four-gon (fôr-gôn), n. [F.; origin uncertain.] A long covered wagon for carrying baggage, goods, military supplies, etc.; a van; also, a baggage-car.

four-hand-ed (fôr'han'ded), a. Having four hands, or four feet adapted for use as hands; quadrumanous; also, intended for four hands, as a piece of music for the piano; also, involving four hands or players, as a game at cards.

Fou-ri-er-ism (fô'ri-ēr-izm), n. The communistic system propounded by the French socialist F. M. Charles Fourier (1772-1837), according to which society was to be organized into associations or communities called phalanxes, each with a membership of about 1,800. — Fou'ri-er-ist, Fou'ri-er-ite (-it), n.

four-in-hand (fôr'in-hand), n. A vehicle drawn by four horses driven by one person; also, a team of four horses; also, a long scarf or necktie to be tied in a slip-knot with the ends left hanging.

four-leaved (fôr'lēvd), a. Having four leaves or leaflets.

four-o'clock (fôr'ô-klok'), n. A common nyctaginaceous garden-plant, Mirabilis jalapa, with red, white, yellow, or variegated flowers which open late in the afternoon; any plant of the same genus; also, the friar-bird.

four-pence (fôr'pens), n. A sum of money of the value of four English pennies, or about 8 U. S. cents; also, a British silver coin of this value. — four'-pen-ny (-pe-ni), a. Of the amount or value of four-pence.

four-post-er (fôr'pôs'tēr), n. A bed with four posts, as for supporting curtains.

four-ra-gère (fô-râ-zhâr), n. [F., said to have originated in the corde à fourrage, 'cord for forage,' carried by mounted men for binding and transporting forage: see forage.] In French military use, an ornament of cord worn on the shoulder; specif., such a cord awarded as an honorary decoration, as to the members of a regiment or other unit that has received a requisite number of citations.

four-score (fôr'skôr), a. Four times twenty; eighty.

four-some (fôr'sum). I. a. Consisting of four; performed by four persons together. [Chiefly Sc.] II. n. A company or set of four (chiefly Sc.); in golf, etc., a match played by four persons, two against two.

four-square (fôr'skwâr). I. a. Having its four sides and angles equal; square. II. n. A foursquare figure; a square.

Obverse.

Reverse.

Fourpence of Queen Victoria.

four-teen (fôr'tēn'). [AS. fēwertȳne.] I. a. Four more than ten. II. n. A number composed of fourteen units, or a symbol, as 14 or xiv, representing it. — four'teenth'. I. a. Next after the thirteenth; also, being one of fourteen equal parts. II. n. The fourteenth member of a series; also, a fourteenth part. — Fourteenth of July, the date of the fall of the Bastille, in Paris, in 1789, observed as the national holiday of France.

fourth (fôrth), a. [AS. fēortha.] Next after the third; also, being one of four equal parts. — fourth arm. See *arm*², n. — fourth dimension. See dimension, n. — fourth estate. See under estate, n. — fourth, n. The fourth member of a series; [cap.] the Fourth of July (see phrase below); also [l. c.], a fourth part; in music, a tone on the fourth degree from a given tone (counted as the first); the interval between such tones; the harmonic combination of such tones; in a scale, the subdominant. — Fourth of July, the date of the adoption of the Declaration of Independence, in 1776, observed as a public holiday of the U. S. Often called the Fourth. — fourth'ly, adv.

four-wheeled (fôr'hwēld), a. Having, or running on, four wheels. — four'-wheel'er, n. A vehicle with four wheels; esp., a four-wheeled cab.

fous-sa (fôs'ä), n. [Native name.] A cat-like carnivorous quadruped, Cryptoprocta ferox, of Madagascar; the galet.

fou-tre, fou-ter

(fô'tēr), n. [Cf. F. se foutre de, care nothing for, foutre (< L. futuere), have sexual commerce with.] A word formerly used in expressions of contemptuous indifference (as, to care not a foutre; "A foutre for the world and worldlings base!" Shakespeare's "2 Henry IV.," v. 3. 103); also, a term of the deepest contempt for a person (chiefly Sc. and north. Eng.).

fo-ve-a (fô'vē-ä), n.; pl. foveæ (-ē). [L., a small pit.] In anat., bot., etc., a small pit or depression, as one in the center of the yellow spot on the retina of the eye. — fo'-ve-al, a. Of, pertaining to, or situated in a fovea. — fo'-ve-ate, fo'-ve-at-ed (-ät, -ä-ted), a. Having foveæ; pitted.

fo-ve-o-la (fô'vē-ô-lä), n.; pl. -læ (-lē). [NL., dim. of L. fovea: see fovea.] In anat., bot., etc., a small fovea; a very small pit or depression. — fo-ve-o-late, fo-ve-o-lat-ed (fô'vē-ô-lät, -lä-ted), a. Having foveolæ, or very small pits.

fowl (fowl), n.; pl. fowls or (esp. collectively) fowl. [AS. fugol = D. and G. vogel = Icel. fugl = Goth. fugls, fowl, bird; possibly akin to E. *fly*².] Any bird (now chiefly in combination, as in sea-fowl, water-fowl, wild-fowl); specif., the domestic or barnyard cock or hen ('domestic fowl'), a gallinaceous bird (often designated as Gallus domesticus) of the pheasant family, descended from wild species of Gallus, esp. G. ferrugineus; any of various other gallinaceous or similar birds, as the turkey or duck; pl., poultry; sing., in market and household use, a full-grown domestic fowl for food purposes (as distinguished from a chicken, or young fowl); the flesh or meat of a domestic fowl. — fowl, v. i. [AS. fuglian.] To hunt or take wild-fowl. — fowl'er, n. One who hunts or takes wild-fowl. — fowl'ing-piece, n. A light gun for shooting wild-fowl; also, a picture of wild-fowl.

fox (foks), n. [AS. fox = D. vos = G. fuchs, fox.] Any of certain carnivorous quadrupeds of the dog family (Canidae), esp. those constituting the genus Vulpes, smaller than the wolves, characterized by pointed muzzle, erect ears, and long, bushy tail (commonly called the brush), and proverbially noted for cunning (see cut on following page); also, the fur of the fox; also, some animal likened to the fox, as the flying-fox; in the English Bible, sometimes, the jackal;

Foussa.

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, ásk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, ēlect, agôny, intö, ûnite; (obscured) errant, operâ, ardent, actör, natüre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; 7H, then; y, you;

fig., a cunning or crafty person; also, a kind of sword†; naul., a seizing or the like made by twisting rope-yarns together.—fox and geese, a game played on a cross-shaped board or a checker-board with pins, checkers, or the like, one representing a fox and the rest geese, the object of the geese being to surround the fox, and that of the fox to capture or to escape from the geese; also, a boys' game in which one player tries to catch others as they run from one goal to another.

Red Fox (Vulpes vulgaris or fulvus).

—fox, v. I. intr. To hunt the fox; also, to act cunningly or craftily; also, to become discolored through decay, etc., as timber or the leaves of a book; also, to turn sour, as beer. II. tr. To intoxicate or befuddle; also, to cause (timber, book-leaves, etc.) to fox; also, to make sour, as beer; also, to repair, finish, or make (a shoe) with a piece or pieces of leather or other material applied so as to cover or form part of the upper next above the sole.—foxed, p. a. Intoxicated or befuddled; also, discolored by decay, as timber or paper; also, turned sour, as beer.

fox-fire (foks'fir), n. The phosphorescent light emitted by foxed or decaying timber.

fox-glove (foks'gluv), n. Any plant of the scrophulariaceous genus Digitalis, esp. D. purpurea (the common foxglove), a native of Europe, bearing tall racemes of drooping, tubular, purple or white flowers, and leaves that are used in medicine as the drug digitalis; also, any of various plants of other genera.

Foxglove (Digitalis purpurea).

fox-grape (foks'grāp), n. Either of two species of grape, Vitis labrusca of the northern U. S. and V. rotundifolia of the southern U. S., from which various cultivated varieties have been derived.

fox-hound (foks'hound), n. One of a breed of fleet, keen-scented hounds trained to hunt foxes.

fox-i-ness (foks'si-nes), n. Foxy quality or character.

fox-ing (foks'ing), n. The piece or pieces of leather or other material with which a shoe is foxed.

fox-squir-rel (foks'skwur'el), n. Any of several North American arboreal squirrels varying in color and remarkable for large size.

fox-tail (foks'tāl), n. The tail of a fox; also, any of various grasses with soft, brush-like spikes of flowers.—foxtail millet, an annual grass, Chetochloa italica, of numerous varieties, introduced into the U. S. from Europe and Asia, and grown somewhat for its seed but chiefly for hay. Also called Italian millet.

Black Fox-squirrel (Sciurus niger).

fox-ter-ri-er (foks'ter'i-ër), n. One of a breed of small, active terriers, sometimes used for driving foxes from their holes, but kept chiefly as pets.

fox-trot (foks'trot), n. A pace, as of a horse, consisting of a series of short steps, as in slackening from a trot to a walk; also, a kind of dance performed by couples, characterized by various combinations of short, quick steps.

fox-wood (foks'wüd), n. Foxed or decayed wood.

fox-y (foks'si), a.; compar. foxier, superl. foxiest. Fox-like; cunning or crafty; also, of the color of the common red fox; of a yellowish or reddish brown; marked by an excess of reddish tints, as a painting; also, discolored or foxed; also, impaired or defective in quality; having turned sour in fermentation, as beer; also, having the musky flavor of the fox-grape.

foy (foi), n. [MD. foye, prob. < OF. voie, < L. via, way.] A feast, gift, etc., given by or to a person about to start on a journey; also, a feast held on some special occasion, as at the end of the harvest. [Now Sc. and prov. Eng.]

foy-er (foi'ër, F. two-yä), n. [F., hearth, fireside, foyer (to which orig. the audience went for warmth from the unheated hall between the acts), < ML. focarium, < L. focus, hearth.] A corridor or outer public room in a theater, opera-house, or the like, used by the audience as a promenade, etc., during intermissions.

fra (frä), n. [It., for frate: see frate.] Brother: a title of a friar: as, Fra Giovanni ('Brother John').

fra-cas (frä'kas, F. frä-kä), n. [F., < It. fracasso, < fraccare, smash.] A disorderly noise or disturbance; an uproar; a noisy quarrel or fight.

fract-ed (frak'ted), a. [L. fractus, pp. of frangere, break: see fraction.] Broken† (as, "My reliances on his fractured dates Have smit my credit": Shakspeare's "Timon of Athens," ii. 1. 22); in her., having a part displaced, as if broken.

Chevron Fractured.

frac-tion (frak'shon), n. [OF. F. fraction, < LL. fractio(n), < L. frangere, break; akin to E. break.] The act of breaking (as, eccles., the fraction of the bread in the eucharist); a broken state or place†; a fracture, as of a bone†; fig., a rupture of harmony, friendly relations, etc.†; discord†; also, a piece broken off, fragment, or bit (see Shakspeare's "Troilus and Cressida," v. 2. 158); a part, as distinct from the whole of anything (as, a mere fraction of the regiment came back); in math., a part of unity; one or more of a number of equal parts into which a unit is divided, or an arithmetical representation of such a part or parts, as $\frac{1}{2}$ or $\frac{3}{4}$ (as, a common or vulgar fraction, one having the numerator above and the denominator below a horizontal or diagonal line; a proper fraction, one having the numerator less than the denominator; an improper fraction, one having the numerator greater than the denominator; a simple fraction, one expressing a ratio between two whole numbers; a complex fraction, one expressing a ratio between fractions or mixed numbers, or between a fraction or mixed number and a whole number; a compound fraction, a complex fraction, or a fraction of a fraction); also, an analogous ratio of algebraic quantities.—frac'tion, v. t. To divide into fractions; also, to fractionate.—frac'tion-al, a. Of or pertaining to a fraction or fractions; constituting a fraction; hence, partial, inconsiderable, or insignificant.—fractional crystallization, a process by which a substance, as a mixture of salts, is separated into its ingredients, or into portions having different properties, by means of repeated crystallizations.—fractional currency, current coins or paper money of a smaller denomination than the monetary unit.—fractional distillation. See distillation.—frac'tion-al-ly, adv.—frac'tion-a-ry (-ä-ri), a. Fractional.—frac'tion-ate (-ät), v. t.; -ated, -ating. To separate (a mixture) into its ingredients, or into portions having different properties, as by distillation or crystallization; subject to fractional distillation, crystallization, or the like; also, to obtain by such a process.—frac-tion-a'tion (-ä'shon), n.

frac-tious (frak'shus), a. [Cf. fraction in the obs. sense 'discord.†'] Refractory or unruly; also, cross, fretful, or peevish.—frac'tious-ly, adv.—frac'tious-ness, n.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ′, primary accent; ″, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

fracture (frak'tūr), n. [F. fracture, < L. fractura, < frangere, break: see fraction.] The act of breaking, or the state of being broken; breakage; specif., the breaking of a bone, cartilage, etc., or the resulting condition (in the case of a bone, called simple when the bone only is divided, and compound when there is also a laceration of the integuments); in general, a break, breach, or split; also, the characteristic manner of breaking, or the characteristic appearance of a broken surface, as of a mineral.—fracture, v.; —tured, —turing. I. tr. To break or crack; specif., to cause or to suffer a fracture in (a bone, etc.). II. intr. To undergo fracture; break.

fræ (frā), prep. [= fro.] From. [Sc.]

fræ-num (frē'num), n. See frenum.

frag-ile (fraj'il), a. [F. fragile, < L. fragilis, < frangere, break: see fraction, and cf. *frail*².] Easily broken or shattered; hence, in general, easily damaged or destroyed; delicate; frail (as, "This city is for the King, whose body is fragile, a very unhealthy city": Dunsany's "Laughter of the Gods," i.).—frag'ile-ly, adv.—frag'ile-ness, n.—frag'il-ty (fraj'il'i-ti), n. [OF. fragilite (F. fragilité), < L. fragilitas.] Fragile character; liability to be broken or damaged; delicacy.

frag-ment (frag'ment), n. [F. fragment, < L. fragmentum, < frangere, break: see fraction.] A part broken off (as, scattered fragments of rock; to reduce glass to fragments); hence, a detached portion of anything, esp. a portion that is incomplete or imperfect in character, as if separated by accident or chance (as, fragments of a letter or a picture; to overhear fragments of conversation); an odd piece, bit, or scrap; often, an extant or surviving portion of something otherwise lost or no longer in existence (as, fragments of Greek verse attributed to Sappho; "A land of old . . . Where fragments of forgotten peoples dwelt," Tennyson's "Passing of Arthur," 84); often, a part of an unfinished whole (as, the collected poems of Shelley include many fragments).—frag-men'tal (-men'tal), a. Fragmentary; in geol., noting or pertaining to rock or rocks (as the conglomerates, sandstones, shales, etc.) made up of fragments or particles of older rocks.—frag-men'ta-ry (-men-tā-ri), a. Of the nature of a fragment; incomplete; also, composed of fragments; broken; disconnected; in geol., fragmental.—frag'men-ta-ri-ly, adv.—frag'men-ta-ri-ness, n.—frag-men-ta'tion (-tā'shən), n. A breaking up into fragments or parts; in biol., amitosis.—frag'ment-ed, a. Reduced to fragments.

fra-grance (frā'grans), n. Fragrant quality or odor; sweet scent. Also fra'gran-cy.

fra-grant (frā'grant), a. [L. fragrans (fragrant-), ppr. of fragrare, emit an odor, smell sweet.] Emitting a pleasing odor; sweet-smelling; sweet-scented.—fra'grant-ly, adv.

frail¹ (frāl), n. [OF. frail, freel; origin unknown.] A flexible basket made of rushes, used esp. for dried fruits, as dates, figs, or raisins; also, the quantity, as of figs or raisins, contained in such a basket.

frail² (frāl), a. [OF. fraille (F. frêle), < L. fragilis, E. fragile.] Easily broken, damaged, or destroyed; fragile; hence, weak in any way; having little capacity for enduring or lasting (as, "Frail is our happiness, if this be so": Milton's "Paradise Lost," ix. 340); esp., physically delicate, or weakly, as a person, the constitution, etc.; often, morally weak, or not strong against temptation; specif., of a woman, infirm in virtue, or unchaste.—frail'y, adv.—frail'ness, n.—frail'ty (-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [OF. frailite, < L. fragilitas: cf. fragility.] The quality or state of being frail; esp., moral weakness; liability to yield to temptation; also, a fault proceeding from moral weakness; a weakness or failing.

fraise (frāz), n. [F.] A ruff worn around the neck; in fort., a defense consisting of pointed stakes projecting from the ramparts in a horizontal or an inclined position.

fram-a-ble (frā'mā-bl), a. That may be framed.

fram-bœ-sia (fram-bē'ziā), n. [NL., < F. framboise, raspberry; origin uncertain.] In pathol., a contagious disease prevalent in certain tropical regions, characterized by an eruption of raspberry-like excrescences; yaws.

frame (frām), v.; framed, framing. [AS. framian, avail, profit, < fram, adv., forward, forth, also prep.: see from.]

I. intr. To avail† or profit†; also, to succeed, get on, or fare (now prov.); also, to betake one's self, or resort (now prov.); also, to prepare, attempt, give promise, or manage to do something (now chiefly prov.). II. tr. To fashion or shape; esp., to shape or adapt to a particular purpose (as, "to frame and fashion your own lives . . . according to the Doctrine of Christ": Book of Common Prayer, Ordering of Deacons); dispose; also, to direct, as one's steps (obs. or rare: as, "A stately Castle far away she spyde, To which her steps directly she did frame," Spenser's "Faerie Queene," iii. 1. 20); also, to form or make, as by fitting and uniting parts together; construct; hence, to contrive, devise, or compose, as a plan, law, poem, etc.; conceive or imagine, as ideas, etc.; also, in recent slang use (often with up), to contrive or devise fraudulently or falsely, as a plot, a charge, etc.; prearrange the result of fraudulently, as a race or a boxing-match; incriminate unjustly by a plot, as a person. Also, to provide with or put into a frame, as a picture.—frame, n. The act of framing, fashioning, or constructing†; also, manner or method of framing; form, constitution, or structure; also, an established system or order, as of government; also, natural or habitual temper or disposition (as, "I am a fellow of a very odd frame of mind": Steele, in "Spectator," 167); more commonly, temporary state of mind (as, "In this frame of thankfulness I went home to my castle," Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe," i. 12: now usually in the phrase 'frame of mind'); also, anything composed of parts fitted and joined together; a structure; often, the body, esp. the human body, with reference to its make or build; also, the sustaining parts of a structure fitted and joined together; a framework or skeleton; also, a frame-house; also, a structure for admitting or inclosing something; an inclosing border or case, as for a picture; in pool, the triangular form used to set up the balls for a game; the balls as so set up; the period of play required to pocket them; in American bowling, a turn to bowl, each player usually having ten turns, of three shots each, in a game.—frame'-house, n. A house constructed with a skeleton frame of timber, as the ordinary wooden house.—frame'less, a. Having no frame.—fram-er (frā'mēr), n.—frame'=up, n. The act of framing up; that which is framed up, as a plot, or a contest the result of which has been fraudulently prearranged. [Slang.]—frame'work, n. A structure composed of parts fitted and united together; esp., one designed to support or inclose something; a frame or skeleton; also, frames collectively; also, work done in, on, or with a frame.—fram'ing, n. The act of one who or that which frames; the act, process, or manner of constructing or contriving anything; the act of providing with a frame; also, framed work; a frame or a system of frames.

fram-pold† (fram'pōld), a. [Origin uncertain.] Ill-tempered, fretful, or quarrelsome (see Shakspeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," ii. 2. 94); also, high-spirited or fiery, as a horse.

franc (frangk), n. [OF. F. franc, said to be so called from the legend, ML. Francorum rex, king of the Franks (or French), on the first coin.] Either of two old coins of Obverse.

Reverse.

Silver Franc of Henry III. of France.—British Museum.

France, one of gold and the other of silver; now, a French silver coin and money of account, the monetary unit of France, equal to 19.3 U. S. cents.

fran-chise (fran'chiz or -chiz), n. [OF. F. franchise, < franc, free, E. *frank*².] Freedom†; also, a legal immunity

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; æt, then; y, you;

or exemption from a particular burden, exaction, or the like; also, a privilege arising from the grant of a sovereign or government, or from prescription, which presupposes a grant; a privilege of a public nature conferred on an individual or a body of individuals by a governmental grant (as, a franchise for a street railway); specif., the right of suffrage (as, the U. S. granted the franchise to women in 1920); also, the district or jurisdiction to which the privilege of an individual or corporation extends†; also, the privilege or right of affording asylum or sanctuary to fugitives†, or a place of asylum or sanctuary†.—fran'chise†, v. t.; -chised, -chising. To set free; invest with a franchise; enfranchise.

fran-cisc (fran-sisk'), n. Same as francisca.

fran-cis-ca (fran-sis'kă), n. [ML., prop. fem. of Franciscus, Frankish.] A battle-ax used by the (ancient) Franks, commonly having a head long in proportion to the width and expanding toward a convex curved edge.

Fran-cis-can (fran-sis'kan). [ML. Franciscus, Francis.] I. a. Of or pertaining to St. Francis of Assisi (1181 or 1182–1226), or the mendicant religious order founded by him. II. n. A member of the order of St. Francis.

fran-cisque (fran-sisk'), n. [F.] Same as francisca.

fran-co (frang'kō). Form of LL. Francus, Frank, used in combination, often in the sense of 'French,' as in Franco-American, Franco-German.

fran-co-lin (frang'kō-lin), n. [F. francolin, < It. francolino.] Any of the old-world gallinaceous birds of the partridge kind constituting the genus Francolinus and allied genera, esp. F. vulgaris, a species formerly common in southern Europe but now chiefly confined to Asia.

Fran-co-phil,

Fran-co-phile

(frang'kō-fil). [See

Franco- and -phil.]

I. a. Friendly to France or the

French. II. n.

One who is friendly to France or the French.

Fran-co-Prus-sian

(frang'kō-prush'- an), a. [See Fran- co-.] Pertaining to France and Prussia:

as, the Franco-

Prussian War of 1870–71.

fran-co-ti-reur (frän-tē-rēr), n.; pl. francs-tireurs (F. frän-tē-rēr). [F., 'free shooter.'] A sharpshooter in the French service, sometimes forming part of a corps of light troops and sometimes of a separate body of guerrillas, during the Franco-Prussian War largely the latter; in general, a guerrilla combatant.

fran-gi-ble (fran'ji-bl), a. [OF. F. frangible, < L. frangere, break: see fraction.] Capable of being broken; breakable.—fran-gi-bil-i-ty (-bil'i-ti), n.

fran-gi-pa-ni (fran-ji-pä'ni), n. [Said to be named from the inventor.] A perfume prepared from, or imitating the odor of, the flower of the red jasmine, Plumeria rubra, an apocynaceous tree or shrub of tropical America; also, the tree or shrub itself.

Frank¹ (frangk), n. [LL. Francus, usually explained as from the name of the national weapon (cf. AS. franca, spear, javelin): see *frank*².] A member of a group of ancient Germanic peoples dwelling in the regions of the Rhine, one division of whom, the Salians, conquered Gaul about A.D. 500, founded an extensive kingdom ruled successively by the Merovingian and Carolingian dynasties, and gave origin to the name France; also, a designation in the Levant for any native or inhabitant of western Europe.

frank² (frangk), a. [OF. F. franc (fem. franche), < ML. francus, free, < LL. Francus, Frank: see *Frank*¹.] Free with respect to condition or rights, or the absence of restraints, restrictions, obligations, etc.†; also, liberal or generous (now rare: see Shakspeare's "King Lear," iii. 4. 20); also, free from concealment or dissimulation, as persons, the nature or disposition, manner, etc.; open, ingenuous, or sincere; often, open or unreserved in utterance; candid or outspoken; also, undisguised, manifest, or plain (as, frank mutiny; a frank imitation); also, good or fine in quality† (cf. frankincense).—frank³, v. t. To mark (a letter, package, etc.) for transmission by public conveyance free of the usual charge, by virtue of official or special privilege; send free of charge, as mail; also, to send or convey (a person) gratuitously, as on a journey; fig., to enable to pass or go freely (as, "English . . . will now frank the traveller through the most of North America": Stevenson's "Memories and Portraits," i.); also, to secure exemption for.—frank², n. A signature or mark affixed by special privilege to a letter, package, or the like, to ensure its transmission free of charge, as by mail; also, a franked letter, package, etc.; also, the privilege of franking letters, etc.

frank^{3†} (frangk), n. [OF. franc.] A pen, as for hogs; a sty. See Shakspeare's "2 Henry IV.," ii. 2. 160.—frank^{3†}, v. t. To shut up in a pen or sty, as for fattening (see Shakspeare's "Richard III.," iv. 5. 3); hence, to cram with food; fatten by feeding.

frank-a-ble (frang'ka-bl), a. That may be franked, as a letter.—frank-a-bil-i-ty (-bil'i-ti), n.

frank-al-moin, frank-al-moigne (frangk'al-moin), n. [AF. franke almoigne, < OF. franc, free (see *frank*²), + almosne, < LL. elemosyna, E. alms.] In Eng. law, a tenure by which a religious corporation holds lands, on condition of praying for the soul of the donor and his heirs or performing other religious service.

Frank-en-stein (frangk'en-stin), n. [From the hero of Mrs. Shelley's story "Frankenstein," a young student who creates a destructive being, in human form, that he cannot control.] One who creates a 'monster' or a destructive agency that he cannot control or that brings about his own ruin; often, incorrectly, the 'monster' or destructive agency itself.

frank-er (frang'kér), n. One who franks letters, etc.

frank-furt-er (frangk'fër-tër), n. [G., 'Frankfort (sausage).'] A reddish variety of sausage, of German origin: commonly cooked by steaming or boiling.

frank-in-cense (frangk'in-sens), n. [OF. franc encens: see *frank*² and *incense*¹.] An aromatic gum-resin from various Asiatic and African trees of the genus Boswellia, used chiefly for burning as incense or ceremonially (see Lev. ii. 1, 2); also, any of various similar resinous exudations.

Frank-ish (frang'kish), a. Of or pertaining to the Franks.

frank-lin (frangk'lin), n. [ME. frankeleyn, < ML. francus, free, E. *frank*².] A freeman†; formerly, in England, a freeholder; in the 14th and 15th centuries, one of a class of landowners, of free but not noble birth, ranking next below the gentry.

frank-lin-ite (frangk'lin-it), n. [From Franklin, N. J., where it is found.] A black native oxide of iron, zinc, and manganese: used as a zinc ore and in the manufacture of spiegeleisen.

frank-ly (frangk'li), adv. In a frank manner; freely; openly; unreservedly; candidly; plainly.—frank'ness, n.

frank-pledge (frangk'plej), n. [AF. franc plege: cf. *frank*² and pledge.] In old Eng. law, a system by which the members of a tithing were made responsible for one another's conduct; also, each of these mutually responsible members; also, the tithing itself.

fran-tic (iran'tik), a. [OF. frenetique (F. frénétique), < L. phreneticus, < Gr. φρενιτικός, < φρενίτις, inflammation of the brain: see phrenitis.] Insane or mad (obs. or archaic); also, wild with excitement, passion, fear, pain, etc.; frenzied; characterized by or pertaining to frenzy.—fran'ti-cal-ly, fran'tic-ly, adv.—fran'tic-ness, n.

frap (frap), v. t.; frapped, frapping. [OF. fraper, strike, F. frapper, strike, fasten, chill: cf. frappé.] To strike (obs. or prov. Eng.); naul., to bind securely.

frap-pé (fra-pä'), [F., pp. of frapper: see frap.] I. a. Artificially chilled, as with ice; iced; frozen. II. n. An iced or frozen refreshment.

Francisca.

Francolin (Francolinus vulgaris).

frat (frat), n. [Short for fraternity.] A college or school fraternity. See fraternity. [Slang.]—frat house, a fraternity house. [Slang.]

fratch (frach), v. i. [ME. fracchyn, creak, as a cart; appar. imit.] To quarrel; wrangle. [Prov. Eng.]—fratch, n. A quarrel; a wrangle. [Prov. Eng.]

fra-te (frā'tā), n.; pl. frati (-tē). [It., < L. frater, brother: cf. fra.] In Italian use, a friar.

fra-ter (frā'tēr), n. [L., brother; akin to E. brother.] A brother; a comrade.

fra-ter-nal (frā-tēr'nāl), a. [L. fraternus, brotherly, < frater, brother: see frater.] Of, pertaining to, or befitting a brother or brothers; brotherly; also, being, or pertaining to, a society of men associated in brotherly union, as for mutual aid or benefit (as, a fraternal organization; fraternal insurance).—fra-ter-nal-ism, n. The state or character of being fraternal; also, the principle or practice of association in fraternal organizations.—fra-ter-nal-ly, adv.

fra-ter-ni-ty (frā-tēr'ni-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [OF. fraternité (F. fraternité), < L. fraternitas, < fraternus: see fraternal.] The relation of a brother or between brothers; brotherhood; also, the relation of persons associated on the footing of brothers (as, 'liberty, equality, fraternity,' F. liberté, égalité, fraternité, the motto of the French Republic); also, a body of persons associated as by ties of brotherhood; any body or class of persons having common purposes, interests, etc. (as, the medical fraternity; the sporting fraternity); in American colleges and schools, a student society organized for social and other purposes, commonly composed of affiliated branches or chapters in various institutions and designated by two or more letters of the Greek alphabet ('Greek-letter fraternity').—fraternity house, a house occupied by a college or school fraternity.

frat-er-nize (frat'ēr-niz), v.; -nized, -nizing. [F. fraterniser, < ML. fraternizare, < L. fraternus: see fraternal.] I. intr. To associate, or hold intercourse, in a fraternal or brotherly way. II. tr. To bring into fraternal association or sympathy.—frat'ēr-ni-za'tion (-ni-zā'shən), n.—frat'ēr-niz-er (-nī-zēr), n.

frat-ri-cide (frat'ri-sīd), n. [L. fratricida, fratricidium, < frater, brother: see -cide.] One who kills his or her brother; also, the act of killing one's own brother.—frat'ri-ci-dal (-sī-dəl), a.

frau (frou), n.; pl. fraus (frouz), G. frauen (frou'en). [G.] In German use, a woman; a married woman; a wife; a lady; as a title, equivalent to Mrs.

fraud (frād), n. [OF. F. fraude, < L. fraus (fraud-), cheating, deceit.] Deceit or trickery deliberately practised in order to gain some advantage or end unfairly, dishonestly, or to the prejudice of another's right or interest (as, to obtain a prize or carry an election by fraud; to allege fraud in a bankruptcy case or in the administration of an estate); a particular instance of such deceit or trickery (as, election frauds; to uncover frauds in business operations); in general, deceit or trickery of any kind (as, "Artificer of fraud . . . the first That practised falsehood under saintly show, Deep malice to conceal, couch'd with revenge": Milton's "Paradise Lost," iv. 121); a deception, artifice, or trick (as, a pious fraud: see pious); anything contrived or intended to deceive (as, the letter is a fraud); sometimes, a person who makes deceitful pretenses, or a humbug or impostor (colloq.).—fraud'ful, a. Full of fraud; deceitful; treacherous; fraudulent.—fraud'ful-ly, adv.

frau-du-lent (frā'dū-lənt), a. [L. fraudulentus, < fraus, E. fraud.] Given to or using fraud, as a person; cheating; dishonest; also, characterized by, involving, or proceeding from fraud, as actions, enterprises, methods, gains, etc.—frau'du-lence, frau'du-len-cy, n.—frau'du-lent-ly, adv.

fraught (frāt), n. [MD. or MLG. vracht, also vrecht (see freight), freight, freight money: cf. OHG. frēht, earnings, gain.] The freight or cargo of a vessel (see Shakespeare's "Titus Andronicus," i. 1. 71); in general, a load carried (obs. or Sc.).—fraught, v. t.; fraught or fraughted, fraught-ing. To freight (a vessel); in general, to load, charge, store, or fill with something: now only in fraught, pp., as in the following phrase.—fraught with, freighted with (a cargo, etc.), as a vessel (archaic); hence, loaded, stored, or filled with (something material: archaic: as, "waggons, fraught with utensils of war," Milton's "Paradise Regained," iii. 336); fig., filled with (something immaterial: as, words fraught with wisdom or deep meaning); attended with, involving, or producing (as, memories fraught with pain; scenes fraught with horror); sometimes, pregnant with, or destined or likely to produce (as, an act fraught with momentous consequences).

fräu-lein (fro'i'līn), n.; pl. fräuleins, G. fräulein. [G., dim. of frau.] In German use, an unmarried woman; a young lady; as a title, equivalent to Miss.

Fraun-ho-fer's (froun'hō'fēr) lines. The dark lines of the solar spectrum, first accurately studied by Joseph von Fraunhofer (1787-1826), a German optician.

frax-i-nel-la (frak-si-nel'ā), n. [NL., dim. of L. fraxinus, ash-tree.] The dittany, Dictamnus albus.

fray¹ (frā), v. [For affray.] I. tr. To frighten. [Archaic or prov.] II. intr. To fight; brawl. [Archaic or prov.]—fray¹, n. Fright (obs. or Sc.); also, a noisy quarrel; a brawl; a fight, skirmish, or battle.

fray² (frā), v. [F. frayer, < L. fricare, rub: see friction.] I. tr. To rub (as, a stag frays its horns against a tree to rub off the velvet); also, to wear by rubbing (sometimes with through); esp., to wear (cloth, rope, etc.) to loose, raveled threads or fibers at the edge or end; cause to ravel out. II. intr. To rub against something; also, to become frayed, as cloth, etc.; ravel out.—fray², n. A frayed part, as in cloth.

fraz-zle (fraz'z), v. i. or t.; -zled, -zling. [Var. of fazel, perhaps by association with fray.] To ravel; fray; wear to threads or shreds. Also fig. [Prov. or colloq.]—fraz'zle, n. A frazzled state or remnant; a shred. [Prov. or colloq.]

freak¹ (frēk), n. [Origin uncertain: cf. AS. frician, dance.] A sudden and apparently causeless change or turn of the mind; a capricious notion or humor; a whim; a vagary; also, capriciousness; also, a capricious prank; also, a product of capricious fancy; any abnormal product or curiously unusual object; an abnormal organism; a monstrosity; a person or animal on exhibition in a show as an example of some strange deviation from nature.—freak¹, v. i. To indulge in freaks; frolic: as, "Then glad they left their covert lair, And freaked about in the midnight air" (J. R. Drake's "Culprit Fay," xxvi.).

freak² (frēk), v. t. [Appar. < *freak*¹, but cf. freck, freckle.] To fleck, streak, or variegate: as, "the pansy freak'd with jet" (Milton's "Lycidas," 144).—freak², n. A fleck or streak of color.

freak-ish (frē'kish), a. Addicted to or characterized by freaks; whimsical; capricious; also, of the nature of a freak; queer; grotesque.—freak'ish-ly, adv.—freak'ish-ness, n.

freak-y (frē'ki), a.; compar. freakier, superl. freakiest. Freakish.

freck (frēk), v. t. [Appar. < freckle: cf. *freak*².] To mark with spots or freckles; dapple.

freck-le (frēk'l), n. [Var. of earlier frecken: cf. Icel. freknur, pl., freckles.] A small brownish-yellow spot in the skin, esp. on the face, neck, or arms; also, any small spot or discoloration.—freck'le, v. t. or i.; -led, -ling. To mark or become marked with or as with freckles.—freck'ly, a. Marked or covered with freckles.

free (frē), a.; compar. freer (frē'ēr), superl. freest (frē'est). [AS. frēo = D. vrīj = G. frei = Goth. freis, free; orig. meaning 'dear, favored,' and akin to Skt. priya, dear: cf. friend.] Enjoying personal rights or liberty, as one not in bondage or slavery; pertaining to or reserved for those who enjoy personal liberty (as, free labor; free soil, see free-soil); also, possessed of, characterized by, or existing under civil liberty as opposed to arbitrary or despotic government, as a country or state, or its citizens, institutions, etc.; also, enjoying political liberty or independence, as a people or country not under foreign rule; also, at liberty, or not in confinement or under physical restraint (as, to set a prisoner free); released from confinement or restraint; disengaged (as, he will be free presently, if you care to wait); in general, exempt from external authority, control, interference, restriction, hampering conditions, etc., as a person, the will, thought, choice, action, etc.; independent; unfettered; not bound by legal or moral ties or obligations; not subject to special regulation or restrictions, as trade (see free trade, below); not subject to rules, set forms, etc. (as, the free song of a bird; free verse, see vers libre); not literal, as a translation; clear of obstructions or obstacles, as a place, passage, etc.; vacant or unoccupied; often, exempt or released from something specified that controls, restrains, burdens, etc. (with from or of: as, free from foreign domination; free from interference, obligation, responsibility, or matrimonial ties; free of taxes or customs-duties); having immunity or being safe (usually with from: as, free from criticism, reproach, or suspicion); in general, exempt from the presence of something specified, usually something objectionable or unnecessary (with from, sometimes of: as, roads free from snow; to be free from jealousy; free from any trace of human occupation; "Infirmities that honesty is never free of," Shakspeare's "Winter's Tale," i. 2. 264); clear or void (of); guiltless† or innocent† (sometimes with of: see Shakspeare's "Hamlet," v. 2. 343); also, at liberty, permitted, or able at will (to do something: as, to be free to come and go; free to choose, object, or decline; to be left free to stir up trouble); permissible or allowable (to do something: as, it is free to, or for, him to go); open (to or for: as, privileges free to all; a race free for all competitors); open to all comers, users, etc. (as, a free port, see phrase below); general or promiscuous (as, a free fight); also, unimpeded, as motion or movements; easy, firm, or swift in movement (as, a free step; a free sweep); able to move without restraint (as, a free polyp; a free balloon, as distinguished from a captive balloon); also, loose, or not held fast or attached (as, a rope free at one end; to get one's arm free; a nut may work free in time); not joined to or in contact with something else (as, a free surface; a column standing free); uncombined chemically (as, free oxygen); also, acting spontaneously or readily (as, a free horse); ready or willing (to do something: as, to be free to confess a thing); acting without self-restraint or reserve (as, too free in the use of liquor; too free with one's tongue); frank and open in intercourse; unconstrained, unceremonious, or familiar; sometimes, unduly familiar (hence, 'to make free with,' to treat or use too familiarly, or take liberties with); plain-spoken or candid; unrestrained by decency, loose, or licentious; also, ready in giving, liberal, or lavish (as, to be free with one's money or advice); given readily or in profusion, or unstinted; more frequently, given without consideration of a return, as a gift; hence, provided without, or not subject to, a charge or payment (as, free schools; admission free; a free pass or passenger); gratuitous; also, easily worked, as stone or land; also, invested with all the rights, privileges, or immunities (of: as, to be made free of a city); fig., admitted to entry and enjoyment at will (of: as, to be free of a friend's house); also, of gentle birth or breeding†, noble†, or honorable† (formerly much used as a term of compliment); noble in spirit or character, or magnanimous (archaic: as, "Ring in the valiant man and free, The larger heart, the kindlier hand," Tennyson's "In Memoriam," cvi.); naut., of a wind, blowing so that a boat can sail free.—free and easy, unconstrained; unconventional; showing little regard for conventional formalities; sometimes, careless.—free church, a church in which the pews or sittings are not rented, but are open to all; also, a church free from state control; esp. [caps.], a Presbyterian church in Scotland, organized in 1843 by secession from the established Presbyterian church, the majority of the members uniting in 1900 with the United Presbyterian Church to form the 'United Free Church of Scotland,' and the name 'Free Church of Scotland' still being borne by the congregations who opposed this union.—free city, a city having an independent government and forming a sovereign state by itself, as Hamburg, Bremen, and Lübeck, in Germany.—free coinage, the unrestricted coinage of bullion, or of a specified metal, as silver, into money acceptable as legal tender, for any person bringing it to the mint.—free companion, a member of a band of mercenary soldiers of the middle ages; a free-lance.—free company, a band of free companions.—free kick, in football, an unhampered kick at the ball, during which the opponents are prohibited from advancing upon the kicker.—free love, the doctrine or practice of free choice in sexual relations, without restraint of legal marriage or of any continuing obligations independent of individual will.—free port, a port open under equal conditions to all traders, or one where no customs-duties are collected.—free thought, thought unrestrained by deference to authority, esp. in matters of religion.—free trade, unrestricted trade or commerce; specif., trade or commerce between different countries, free from governmental restrictions, duties, or differences of treatment; esp., international trade free from protective duties, etc., and subject only to such tariffs as are necessary for revenue (cf. protection); also, the system, principles, or maintenance of such trade; also, smuggling.—free verse. Same as vers libre.—free, adv. In a free manner; freely; without cost or charge; naut., further from the wind than when close-hauled (as, to sail free).—free, v. t.; freed, freeing. [AS. frēon.] To make free; set at liberty; release from bondage, imprisonment, or restraint; exempt or deliver (from); relieve or rid (of); disengage (from); clear (with from or of).

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, elect, agony, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; tū, then; y, you;

free-board (frē'bōrd), n. Naut., the part of a ship's side between the water-line and the deck or gunwale.

free-boot (frē'bōt), v. i. [Back-formation from freebooter.] To act as a freebooter.

free-boot-er (frē'bō'tēr), n. [D. vrijbouter, < vrij, free, + buil, booty.] One who goes about in search of plunder; esp., a pirate or buccaneer.

free-born (frē'bōrn), a. Born free, rather than in slavery, bondage, or vassalage; also, pertaining to or befitting persons born free.

freed-man (frēd'man), n.; pl. -men. A man who has been freed from slavery.

free-dom (frē'dōm), n. [AS. frēdōm.] The state of being free; personal liberty, as opposed to bondage or slavery; civil liberty, as opposed to subjection to an arbitrary or despotic government; political or national independence; the state of being at liberty rather than in confinement or under physical restraint; in general, exemption from external control, interference, regulation, etc. (as, to claim freedom of choice); power of determining one's or its own action (as, to exercise complete freedom in the management of an affair; to maintain the doctrine of the freedom of the will); absence of or release from ties, obligations, etc. (as, to win one's freedom by divorce); often, exemption or immunity (from: as, freedom from control or obligation; freedom from taxation or arrest); in general, exemption from the presence of anything specified (with from: as, freedom from vanity or prejudice); also, ease or facility of movement or action; frankness of manner or speech; absence of ceremony or reserve; familiarity, often undue familiarity; sometimes, a liberty taken; also, a particular immunity or other privilege enjoyed, as by a city or corporation; the right of enjoying all the privileges or peculiar rights of citizenship, membership, or the like (as, to present a foreign visitor with the freedom of the city); fig., the right of frequenting, enjoying, or using at will (as, to have the freedom of a friend's library).

freed-wom-an (frēd'wūm'an), n.; pl. -women (-wim'en). A woman who has been freed from slavery.

free-hand (frē'hand), a. Done by the hand without guiding instruments, measurements, or other artificial aid: as, free-hand drawing.

free-hand-ed (frē'han'ded), a. Having the hands free; also, open-handed; generous; liberal.

free-heart-ed (frē'hār'ted), a. Having a free heart; light-hearted; spontaneous; frank; generous.

free-hold (frē'hōld), n. In law, a tenure by which an estate is held in fee simple or fee tail, or for life; a similar tenure of an office; an estate or office held by this tenure.—free-hold'er, n. One who possesses a freehold estate.—chosen freeholder. See under chosen.

free-lance (frē'lāns), n. A mercenary soldier or military adventurer, often of knightly rank, of the middle ages, who offered his services to any state, party, or cause; hence, one who contends in any cause, or in a succession of various causes, as he chooses, without personal attachment or allegiance; often, an unattached journalist or writer who sells his work wherever opportunity offers.—free=lance, v. i.; -lanced, -lancing. To act as a free-lance.

free-liv-er (frē'liv'ēr), n. One who in his mode of life freely indulges his appetites.—free=liv'ing, a.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ˆ, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

- free-lov-er (frē'luv'ér), n. One who advocates or practices free love. See free'love, under free, a.
- free-ly (frē'li), adv. [AS. frēolice.] In a free manner.
- free-man (frē'man), n.; pl. -men. [AS. frēoman.] A man who is free; a man who enjoys personal, civil, or political liberty; one who possesses the freedom of a city, corporation, etc.
- free-ma-son (frē'mā'sn), n. One of a class of skilled stoneworkers of the middle ages and later; later, a member of a society composed of such workers, with honorary members (known as 'accepted masons') who were not connected with the building trades; now [often cap.], a member of a widely distributed secret order ('Free and Accepted Masons') developed from societies of this kind, having for its object mutual assistance and the promotion of brotherly love among its members.—free'ma-son'ic (-mā-son'ik), a.
- free'ma'son-ry, n. [Often cap.] The principles, practices, and institutions of freemasons; hence [l. c.], secret or tacit brotherhood; instinctive sympathy.
- free-ness (frē'nes), n. The state or quality of being free; freedom.
- fre-er¹ (frē'ér), n. One who frees.
- fre-er² (frē'ér), Comparative of free, a.
- free-sia (frē'ziā), n. [NL.; from E. M. Fries (1794-1878), Swedish botanist.] Any plant of the iridaceous genus Freesia (or Nympanina), native in South Africa, esteemed in cultivation for its fragrant white, yellow, or sometimes rose-colored, tubular flowers.
- free-soil (frē'soil'), a. In U. S. hist., pertaining to or in favor of 'free soil,' or the non-extension of slavery into the Territories, or those parts of the country not yet erected into States: used [cap.] as the epithet of a political party active 1848-56.—free'-soil'er, n.—free'=soil'ism, n.
- free-spok-en (frē'spō'kn), a. Given to speaking freely or without reserve.—free'=spok'en-ness, n.
- fre-est (frē'est), Superlative of free, a.
- free-stone (frē'stōn), I. n. Any stone, as a sandstone, which can be freely worked or quarried, esp. one which cuts well in all directions without splitting; also, a freestone peach. II. a. Having a stone from which the pulp is easily separated, as certain peaches.
- free-swim-mer (frē'swim'ér), n. An animal, as a fish, that swims about freely.—free'-swim'ming, a. Capable of swimming about freely: said specif. of aquatic animals that are not fixed or attached.
- free-think-er (frē'thing'kér), n. One who forms his opinions independently of authority or tradition, esp. in matters of religion: as, "A free-thinker I will be, and believe nothing but what I know and understand" (Kingsley's "Alton Locke," v.).—free'think'ing, n. and a.
- free-trad-er (frē'trā'dér), n. One who trades without restriction; sometimes, a smuggler; specif., an advocate of the principle or system of free trade.
- free-wheel (frē'hwél), n. That form of rear wheel (driving-wheel) on a bicycle, which has a clutch-like device ('free-wheel clutch') for freeing or releasing it from the driving mechanism, as when the pedals are stopped in coasting.
- free-will (frē'wil'), a. Made or done freely or of one's own accord; voluntary: as, "a freewill offering" (Deut. xvi. 10).
- freez-a-ble (frē'zā-bl), a. That may be frozen.
- freeze (frēz), v.; pret. froze, pp. frozen, ppr. freezing. [AS. frēosan = D. vriezen = G. frieren = Icel. frjósa, freeze.] I. intr. To be congealed by cold, as a liquid; be hardened into ice by the abstraction of heat; become covered with ice, as a river or pond; become obstructed by the formation of ice, as pipes; become hard or rigid under the influence of cold, as objects containing moisture; become fixed to something by or as by the action of frost (as, "My very lips might freeze to my teeth": Shakspeare's "Taming of the Shrew," iv. 1. 7); also, to be of the degree of cold at which water freezes (often used impersonally to describe the state of the weather: as, it is freezing to-night); also, to suffer the effects of intense cold; have the sensation of extreme cold; die of frost or cold; fig., to lose warmth of feeling; be chilled with fear, etc. II. tr. To congeal by cold, as a liquid; harden into ice; form ice on the surface of, as a river or pond; obstruct or close by the formation of ice, as pipes (often with up); fix fast in ice (with in or up); shut (in) or keep (out) by a barrier of ice; fig., to exclude, or compel to withdraw, from society, business, etc., as by chilling behavior, severe competition, etc. (with out: colloq., U. S.); also, to harden or stiffen by cold, as objects containing moisture; also, to cause to suffer the effects of intense cold; produce the sensation of extreme cold in; kill by frost or cold; fig., to congeal as if by cold; chill with fear, etc.; quench warmth of feeling in; paralyze with dismay, etc.; sometimes, to render (credit given or loans made) impossible of liquidation, as business conditions do (colloq.).—freeze, n. The act of freezing, or the state of being frozen; a frost.
- freez'er, n.—freez'ing, p. a. That freezes; tending to freeze; very cold; chilling.—freez'ing-ly, adv.—freez'-ing-mix'ture, n. A mixture, as of salt and snow, whose temperature becomes low enough to cool or freeze substances in contact with it.—freez'ing=point, n. The temperature at which a liquid freezes: as, the freezing-point of water (32° F., 0° C., or 0° R.).
- freight (frāt), n. [= fracht: cf. MD. and MLG. vrecht, for vracht, also the related OF. fret.] Transportation of goods by water or (esp. in the U. S. and Canada) by land; esp., the ordinary conveyance or means of transport of goods afforded by common carriers, as opposed to express; also, the price paid for such transportation; also, the cargo, or any part of the cargo, of a vessel; in the U. S. and Canada, cargo or lading carried for pay either by water or by land; also, in the U. S. and Canada, a train of cars for transporting goods or merchandise.—freight, v. t. To load with goods for transportation; let out for the transportation of freight; in general, to load; burden; also, to transport as freight; send by freight.—freight'age (-āj), n. The transportation of goods, or the price paid for this; also, freight, cargo, or lading.—freight'er, n. One who loads a ship, or who charters it for the transportation of goods; also, one whose occupation it is to receive and forward freight; also, a vessel engaged chiefly in the transportation of goods; also, one for whom freight is transported.
- frei-herr (frī'her), n.; pl. -herren (-her'en). [G., 'free lord.'] In German use, a nobleman ranking below a graf (or count), and corresponding to an English baron.
- fremd (fremd), a. [AS. fremde = D. vreemd = G. fremd = Goth. framaths, foreign, strange; akin to E. from.] Foreign; strange; unrelated; unfamiliar; unusual or unnatural; unfriendly or estranged. [Now only Sc. and north. Eng.]
- fre-mes-cent (frē-mes'ent), a. [L. fremere, murmur, growl, roar: see -escent.] Beginning to murmur; growing noisy.
- fre-mes'cence, n.
- frem-i-tus (frem'i-tus), n.; pl. fremitus. [L., < fremere: see fremescent.] In med., palpable vibration, as of the walls of the chest.
- French (french), a. [AS. Frēncisc, < Franca, a Frank.] Of, pertaining to, or characteristic of France, its inhabitants, or their language.—French Academy. See academy.—French and Indian War, the war between France and England in America, 1754-60, in which the French were aided by Indian allies.—French bean, the common kidney-bean or haricot, Phaseolus vulgaris.—French chalk, a variety of talc used for marking lines on cloth, etc.—French horn. See horn, n.—French leave, departure without ceremony, permission, or notice.—French Revolution. See revolution.—French roof, a form of roof resembling the mansard roof.
- French window, a long window having two sashes hinged at the sides and opening in the middle.—French, n. The people of France and their immediate descendants elsewhere, collectively; also, the chief language spoken by the French people (divided for convenience into Old French, extending to about 1500, and modern French, from about 1500 on, to which is sometimes added Middle French, extending from 1500, or 1400, to 1600).—

French Roof.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

French, v. t. To give a French form to; render into French; also, to prepare according to the French mode.—French'i-fy (-i-fi), v. t.; -fied, -fying. [See -fy.] To make French; imbue with French qualities.—French'man (-mān), n.; pl. -men. A man belonging to the French race; also, a French ship.—French'wom'an, n.; pl. -women (-wim'en).—French'y, a. Characteristic or suggestive of the French.

fre-net-ic, phre-net-ic (frē-net'ik), a. [OF. frenétique (F. frénétique), < L. phreneticus: see frantic.] Insane† or mad†; also, frantic; frenzied.—fre-net'i-cal-ly, phre-net'i-cal-ly, adv.

fre-num (frē'num), n.; pl. -na (-nä). [L. frenum, also frænum, bridle, curb, bit.] In anat., a ligament or fold of membrane which checks or restrains the motion of a part, as the one which binds down the under side of the tongue.

fren-zied (fren'zid), p. a. Affected with frenzy; characterized by, due to, or suggestive of frenzy; frantic.

fren-zy (fren'zi), n.; pl. -zies (-ziz). [OF. frenesie (F. frénésie), < L. phrenesis, for Gr. φρενις: see phrenitis.] Mental derangement; delirium; the violent excitement of a paroxysm of mania; fig., violent mental agitation resembling temporary madness; wild excitement or enthusiasm.—fren'zy, v. t.; -zied, -zying. To affect with or drive to frenzy; render frantic.

fre-quence (frē'kwens), n. [L. frequentia.] Assemblage, or an assembly (archaic: as, "In full frequency bright Of angels," Milton's "Paradise Regained," i. 128); also, frequent occurrence; frequency.—fre'quen-cy, n. The state or fact of being frequent; frequent occurrence, or rate of recurrence (as, "The frequency of his colds had somewhat diminished": Arnold Bennett's "Clayhanger," iv. 1); in physics, the number of regularly recurring events of any given kind in a given time; of an alternating electric current, the number of cycles, that is, complete or double alternations or reversals, per second (as, an alternating current of high frequency, or of low frequency, one having a comparatively large, or comparatively small, number of cycles per second; hence, a high-frequency, or low-frequency, current); of electric or other waves, the number occurring or passing per second.—audio frequency. [That is, 'hearing frequency': audio, < L. audire, hear.] In wireless teleg. and teleph., a frequency or variation corresponding to that of audible or sound vibrations, commonly any below 10,000 cycles per second: opposed to radio frequency.—radio frequency, in wireless teleg. and teleph., a frequency or variation greater than that of sound vibrations or audio frequency, commonly any with 10,000 or more cycles per second, as that of the continuous oscillations or waves produced by radio apparatus: opposed to audio frequency.

fre-quent (frē'kwent), a. [L. frequens (frequent-), akin to farvere, stuff: cf. farce.] Assembled in great numbers, as persons†; filled or crowded, as with persons, as a place†; also, found at short distances apart (as, a coast with frequent lighthouses); numerous; abundant; usually, happening or occurring at short intervals (as, to make frequent trips to a place); often recurring; coming in close succession; sometimes, in common use, of common occurrence, or usual (now rare); also, accustomed to do or indulge in something often (now rare: as, to be frequent in one's remonstrances); given to repetition in something (now rare); also, constant, habitual, or regular (as, "The tim'rous hare, Grown so familiar with her frequent guest, Scarce shuns me": Cowper's "Task," vi. 306).—fre-quent (frē-kwent'), v. [L. frequentare, < frequens.] I. tr. To crowd† or fill†; also, to visit often, as a place; resort to habitually; also, to associate with, as a person (now rare); also, to use habitually†. II. intr. To resort, as to a place (obs. or rare: as, "Nor track nor pathway might declare That human foot frequented there," Scott's "Lady of the Lake," i. 25); also, to associate, as with a person†.—fre-quent-a-tion (frē-kwen-tā'shən), n. [L. frequentatio(n)-]. The practice of frequenting.—fre-quent-a-tive (frē-kwen-tā-tiv), [L. frequentativus.] In gram.: I. a. Of a verb, serving to express the frequent repetition of an action. II. n. A frequentative verb.—fre-quent'er, n.—fre'quen-ty, adv.—fre'quent-ness, n. fres-co (fres'kō), n.; pl. -coes or -cos (-kōz). [It. fresco: see fresh.] Coolness; fresh air†; also, a method of painting on a wall, ceiling, or the like, before the plaster is dry fresh (fresh), a. [OF. fres, fem. fresche (F. fraîs, fem. fraîche), = It. fresco, fresh, cool; from Teut. (cf. G. frisch).] New; not previously known, met with, etc.; novel; also, additional or further (as, fresh supplies); also, newly made, arrived, obtained, etc. (as, fresh footprints; a book fresh from the press); also, inexperienced or unsophisticated (as, "How green you are and fresh in this old world!" Shakespeare's "King John," iii. 4. 145); forward or presumptuous (slang); also, not preserved by pickling, salting, drying, etc.; also, not salt, as water; fit for drinking; also, pure, cool, or refreshing, as air or water; also, retaining the original properties unimpaired; not deteriorated in any way; not stale, musty, etc.; also, not faded, worn, obliterated, etc.; not sullied or tarnished; looking youthful and healthy (as, "a fresh and fair old man": Campbell's "Ritter Bann"); also, not exhausted or fatigued (as, to feel fresh after long exertion); brisk; vigorous; also, in a refreshed condition; freshened; renewed; also, moderately strong or brisk, as the wind; also, sober (Sc.); also, tipsy (colloq.).—fresh blood, blood of another strain, as for imparting new strength or vigor in breeding; fig., any accession of new elements or members bringing fresh force, ideas, etc.—fresh, n. The fresh or early part of the day, season, etc.; also, a spring, pool, or stream of fresh water; also, a stream of fresh water running into tide-water; the part of a tidal river above the salt water; also, a flood of fresh water flowing into the sea; also, a freshet or flood; also, a freshman (college slang).

('true fresco'), or, less properly, after the plaster has dried ('dry fresco'), in which the colors sink in and become incorporated; loosely, painting on plaster in any manner; also, a picture or design so painted.—fres'co, v. t.; -coed, -coing. To paint in fresco.—fres'co-er, n.—fres'co-ing, n. The process of painting in fresco; frescoed decoration.

fresh-en (fresh'n), v. I. intr. To become or grow fresh, bright, strong, brisk, etc.: as, "The gentle morning breeze had a little freshened" (De Quincey's "Revolt of the Tartars"). II. tr. To make fresh; refresh, revive, or renew; remove saltiness from; naul., to relieve, as a rope, by altering the position of a part exposed to friction.—fresh-en-er, n.

fresh-et (fresh'et), n. [Dim. of fresh.] A small stream of fresh water; also, a stream or rush of fresh water flowing into the sea; also, a flood or overflowing of a stream, due to heavy rains or melted snow.

fresh-ly (fresh'li), adv. In a fresh manner; newly; afresh.

fresh-man (fresh'mān), n.; pl. -men. A novice; esp., a student in the first year of the course at a university, college, or school.

fresh-ness (fresh'nes), n. The condition or quality of being fresh.

fresh-wa-ter (fresh'wā'tēr), a. Of or pertaining to water that is fresh, or not salt; living in fresh water, or pertaining to animals doing this; also, accustomed to fresh water only, and not to the sea (as, "You're but a fresh-water sailor": Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe," i. 1); hence, of little experience, green, or raw, as soldiers; crude; of slight attainments; of minor standing.

fret¹ (fret), n. [Origin uncertain.] Any of the ridges of wood, metal, etc., set across the finger-board of a guitar or similar instrument, to serve as fixed points against which the strings may be pressed by the fingers in regulating the tone.—fret¹, v. t.; fretted, fretting. To provide with frets.

fret² (fret), n. [OF. frete (F. frette), interlaced work: origin uncertain.] Ornamental interlaced work; fretwork; also, a band-like ornament of which the pattern is composed of straight (not curved) lines bending or combined at right or other angles (cf. a guilloche).—fret², v. t.; fretted, fretting. [OF. fretter.] To ornament with or as with fretwork.

fret³ (fret), v.; fretted, fretting. [AS. fretan = D. wreten = G. fressen = Goth. frastan, eat up, devour; from elements represented by E. for- and eat.] I. tr. To eat† or devour†; also, to gnaw; wear away or consume by gnawing (as, "Rich robes are fretted by the moth": Wordsworth's "Egyptian Maid"); hence, to wear away or consume by friction, rust, chemical corrosives, etc.; fig., to torment; irritate, annoy, or vex; also, to form or make (a passage, etc.) by wearing away a substance; also, to throw (water) into agitation. II. intr. To gnaw; cause corrosion; make a way by gnawing or corrosion; also, to become eaten, worn, or corroded; fig., to give one's self up to feelings of irritation, resentful discontent, regret, worry, or the like; often, to express such feelings in a peevish, complaining way; also, to move in agitation or commotion, as water (as, "I love the Brooks which down their channels fret": Wordsworth's "Intimations of Immortality," xi.).—fret³, n. A gnawing or wearing away; erosion; corrosion; also, a worn or eroded place; fig., an irritated state of mind; annoyance; vexation; peevish complaining.—fret⁴*ful*, a. Gnawing†; corroding†; also, disposed to fret; irritable or peevish; impatient; also, in agitation or commotion, as water; gusty, as wind; also, characterized by or producing fretting (as, "The fretful days Of prejudice and error": Thomson's "To the Memory of Lord Talbot," 340).—fret⁵*ful-ly*, adv.—fret⁶*ful-ness*, n.—fret⁷*less*, a. Free from fret; untroubled; unruffled: as, "fretless and free" (Browning's "La Saisiaz").—fret⁸*ter*, n.—fret⁹*ty*, a. Fretful.

Greek Frets. — a, from the Parthenon, above cella frieze; b, from vases.

(variable) đ as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; †, primary accent; ‡, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

fret-work (fret'wérk), n. Ornamental work in an interlaced or openwork design.

Freud-i-an (froid'i-án), I. a. Of or pertaining to the Austrian physician, psychoanalyst, and psychopathologist Sigmund Freud (born 1856), or his doctrines, esp. respecting the causes and treatment of neurotic and psychopathic states, the interpretation of dreams, etc. II. n. An adherent of the doctrines of Freud.—Freud¹*i-an-ism*, n. The Freudian doctrines. Also Freud²*ism*.—Freud³*ist*, n.

fri-a-ble (fri'a-bl), a. [F. friable, < L. friabilis, < friare, crumble.] That may be easily crumbled or reduced to powder; crumbly: as, friable soil.—fri-a-bil¹*i-ty* (-bil'i-ti), fri²*a-ble-ness*, n.

fri-ar (fri'är), n. [OF. frere (F. frère), < L. frater, brother; akin to E. brother.] In the Rom. Cath. Ch., a brother or member of one of certain religious orders, esp. the mendicant orders of Franciscans ('Gray Friars'), Dominicans ('Black Friars'), Carmelites ('White Friars'), and Augustinians ('Austin Friars').—Friars Minor, the Franciscan friars, esp. the Observants.—fri¹*ar-bird*, n. Any of various Australasian honey-eaters, esp. Philemon corniculatus: so called from the bare head and neck.—fri²*ar's=lan*³*tern*, n. The ignis fatuus or will-o'-the-wisp. See Milton's "L'Allegro," 104.—fri⁴*ar-y*, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). A convent of friars; also, a brotherhood of friars.

frib-ble (frib'l), v.; -bled, -bling. [Origin uncertain: cf. F. frivole, frivolous.] I. intr. To totter†; falter†; also, to act in a trifling or frivolous manner. II. tr. To waste foolishly.—frib¹*ble*. I. n. A trifter; also, anything trifling or frivolous; also, frivolousness. II. a. Trifling; frivolous.—frib²*bler*, n.

frik-an-deau (frik-än-dö'), n.; pl. -deaux (-döz'). [F.] Veal or other meat larded, stewed, and served with a sauce.—frik-as-see (frik-a-sē'), n. [F. fricassée, < fricasser, cook as a fricassee.] Meat, as chicken or veal, cut up, stewed, and served in a sauce made of its own gravy.—frik-as-see¹, v. t.; -seed, -seeing. To prepare as a fricassee.—frik-a-tive (frik'a-tiv). [= F. fricatif, < L. fricare, rub.] In phonetics: I. a. Characterized by a frictional rustling of the breath in utterance, as f, v, s, sh, and certain other consonants. II. n. A fricative consonant.

fric-tion (frik'shŋn), n. [F. friction, < L. frictio(n)-, < fricare, rub: cf. Gr. χρίω, rub, anoint.] The act of rubbing or chafing, as the body or limbs; also, the rubbing of the surface of one body against that of another; fig., clashing or conflict, as of temperaments, opinions, etc. (as, "Fresh friction was created by Alexander's objection to Napoleon's matrimonial ambitions": H. G. Wells's "Outline of History," xxxviii. § 4); in mech. and physics, the resistance to the relative motion (sliding or rolling) of surfaces of bodies in contact; sometimes, such resistance of the particles of a body among themselves ('internal friction').—fric¹*tion-al*, a. Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of friction; moved, worked, or produced by friction.—fric²*tion-al-ly*, adv.—fric³*tion-less*, a. Free from or unattended with friction.—fric⁴*tion-match*, n. A kind of match tipped with a compound that ignites by friction.—fric⁵*tion-tight*, a. In mech., fitting so tightly or closely, as a joint, that a desired effect of friction, as the prevention of slipping, is produced.

Fri-day (fri'dä), n. [AS. Frīgedæg, < Frīg, name of a Teutonic goddess in part identified with the Roman Venus (akin to E. free and friend), + dæg, E. day.] The sixth day of the week, following Thursday.—Black Friday. See under black, a.—Good Friday. See under good, a.—man Friday. See under man, n.

fried (frid). Preterit and past participle of *fry*².

friend (frend), n. [AS. frēond = D. vriend = G. freund = Icel. frændi = Goth. frijōnds, all orig. ppr. of a verb (AS. frēon, love, free) from the source of E. free.] One attached to another by feelings of personal regard; an intimate; also, a kinsman (now only in pl. except in prov. use: as, "She . . . is promised by her friends Unto a youthful gentleman of worth," Shakspeare's "Two Gentlemen of Verona," iii. 1. 106); also, a favorer or well-wisher; a patron or supporter; also, one who is on good terms with another; one not hostile; a member of the same nation, party, etc.; specif. [cap.], a member of the 'Society of Friends,' the proper designation of the Christian sect commonly called Quakers, founded by George Fox about 1650, and opposed to oath-taking and all war.—friend at (or in) court, a friend who is in a position to further one's interests with others: as, "A friend i' the court is better than a penny in purse" (Shakspeare's "2 Henry IV.," v. 1. 34).—friend, v. t. To make friendly†; also, to befriend (archaic).—friend¹*less*, a. Without friends; forlorn.—friend²*less-ness*, n.—friend³*ly*, a.; compar. friendlier, superl. friendliest. [AS. frēondlic.] Like a friend; disposed to act as a friend; kind; also, characteristic of or befitting a friend; manifesting friendship; hence, favorably disposed; inclined to approve, help, or support; favorable or propitious, as things or influences; suitable to one's comfort or convenience (as, "Neigh-b'ring trees with friendly shade invite The troops": Dryden's tr. Virgil's "Georgics," iv. 33); also, not hostile or at variance; without hostility; amicable.—friend⁴*li-ly*, adv.—friend⁵*li-ness*, n.—friend⁶*ly*, adv. [AS. frēondlice.] In a friendly manner; like a friend.—friend⁷*ship*, n. [AS. frēondscipe.] The state of being a friend; association as friends; also, a friendly relation or intimacy (as, "And softly, thro' a vinous mist, My college friendships glimmer": Tennyson's "Will Waterproof's Lyrical Monologue," 40); also, friendly feeling or disposition; also, a friendly act†; friendly aid† (as, "Hard by here is a hovel; Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest": Shakspeare's "King Lear," iii. 2. 62).

fri-er, fry-er (fri'ér), n. One who or that which fries; also, something, as a chicken, for frying.

Frie-sian, Fris-ian (frē'zian, friz'ian). I. a. Of or pertaining to Friesland, a province of the Netherlands, or its inhabitants or their language. II. n. One of the people of Friesland, or one of their ancient Low German ancestors; also, Friesic.

Frie-sic (frē'zik). I. a. Friesian. II. n. The language of the Friesians, belonging to the Low German group.

frieze¹ (frēz), n. [F. frise, appar. < It. fregio, decoration, border, frieze, < L. Phrygius, Phrygian.] That part of an entablature which is between the architrave and the Friar-bird (Philemon corniculatus).

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, ásk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pùll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, élect, agony, inq̄, unite, (obscured) errant, operâ, ardent, actor, nat̄re; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; tu, then; y, you; cornice, and which is commonly ornamented with sculpture; hence, any similar longitudinal or horizontal decorative band or feature, as on a wall.

frieze² (frēz), n.

[OF. frize (F. frise), perhaps < Frise, Friesland: cf. F. friser, curl (hair, etc.), not recorded in OF.] A thick woolen cloth finished with a shaggy nap on one side.

—frieze², v. t.;

friezed, friezing.

To raise a nap on (cloth).

frig-ate (frig'āt), n. [F. frégate, < It. fregata.] Orig., a small, swift vessel; later, an old type of sailing war-vessel, larger than a corvette; hence, any of various more modern war-vessels.—frig'ate-bird, n. Either of two species of rapacious marine birds, Fregata aquila and F. minor, noted for their powers of flight.

fright (frit), n. [AS. fryhto, for fyrhto, akin to G. furcht and Goth. faurhte, fear.] Sudden and extreme fear; a sudden terror; also, something that frightens; hence, a person or thing of shocking, grotesque, or ridiculous appearance.—fright, v. t. [AS. fyrhtan.] To affect with fright; terrify; also, to scare (away, etc.). [Now chiefly poetic or prov.].—fright'en, v. t. To throw into a fright; terrify; scare; also, to drive (away, off, etc.) by scaring.

—fright'en-er, n.—fright'ful, a. Full of fright or fear; also, such as to cause fright; dreadful, terrible, or alarming; horrible, shocking, or revolting; also, hyperbolically, 'awful' (colloq.).—fright'ful-ly, adv. In a frightful manner, or to a frightful degree; dreadfully; 'awfully' (colloq.).

—fright'ful-ness, n. The quality of being frightful; sometimes, terrifying methods or measures intended as a means of coercion, as in war; terrorism.

frig-id (fri'id), a. [L. frigidus, < frigere, be cold, < frigus, cold, coldness.] Very cold in temperature (as, the frigid zones, the regions between the poles and the polar circles); devoid of heat or warmth; fig., destitute of warmth of feeling, or without ardor or enthusiasm; cold or indifferent, as persons or their manners, etc.; stiff or formal, as a bow; chilling or depressing, as circumstances or surroundings; failing to excite feeling or interest, dull, or flat, as literary efforts.—frig-i-da'ri-um (-i-dā'ri-um), n.; pl. -ria (-ri-ā). [L., prop. neut. of frigidarius, of or for cooling, < frigidus.] The cooling-apartment of the ancient Roman thermæ, usually furnished with a cold bath; the cold bath itself; hence, any room kept at a low temperature.

—frig-id-i-ty (fri-jid'i-ti), frig'id-ness, n.—frig'id-ly, adv.

frig-o-rif-ic (frig-ō-rif'ik), a. [L. frigorificus, < frigus (rigor-), cold, + facere, make.] Causing or producing cold.

frij-jol (frē'höl), n.; pl. frijoles (-hō'lās). [Sp. frijol.] A cultivated bean of the genus Phaseolus, much used for food in Mexico, etc.

frill (fril), n. [Origin uncertain.] A trimming consisting of a strip of cloth, lace, or the like, gathered at one edge and left loose at the other; a ruffle; also, something resembling such a trimming, as the projecting fringe of hair on the chest of some dogs; fig., an affectation of manner, style, etc. (colloq.).—frill, v. I. tr. To trim or ornament with a frill or frills; form into a frill; in photog., to cause to frill. II. intr. In photog., to become wrinkled at the edge, as the gelatin coating of a dry plate.—frill'ing, n. Frilled trimming; frills collectively.—frill'-liz'ard, n. An Australian lizard, Chlamydosaurus kingi, which grows to a length of 3 feet, remarkable for a broad, frill-like, erectile fold of skin about the neck, and for a habit of running, when startled, upon its hind legs. Also called frilled lizard.

Fri-maire (frē-mār), n. [F. frimaire, < frimas, hoar-frost.] In the calendar of the first French republic, the third month of the year, extending from Nov. 21 to Dec. 20.

fringe (frinj), n.

[OF. fringe, frenge (F. frange), < LL.

frimbria, border, fringe, for L. frimbriæ, pl., threads, fringe: cf. L. fibra, E. fiber.] An ornamental bordering having projecting lengths of thread, cord, etc., either loose or variously arranged or combined; also, anything resembling or suggesting this (as, a fringe of hair over the forehead; a fringe of trees about a field); a border or margin.—fringe, v. t.; fringed, fringing. To furnish with or as with a fringe; also, to serve as a fringe for.—fringe'less, a. Without fringe.

—fringe'=tree, n. An oleaceous shrub or small tree, Chionanthus virginica, of the southern U. S., bearing panicles of white flowers with long, narrow petals.

frin-gil-line (frin-jil'in), a. [L. fringilla, kind of bird.] Of or pertaining to the finch family of birds; finch-like.

frin-gy (frin'ji), a. Like a fringe; adorned with fringe.

frip-per-y (frip'er-i), n.; pl. -ies (-iz). [F. friperie, OF. friperie, < frepe, rag.] Old or cast-off clothes, or a place where they are sold; also, finery in dress, esp. when tawdry; an article of this kind; in general, tawdry ornamentation; also, trifling articles, or something trifling; fig., empty display; ostentation.

fri-sette (fri-zet'), n. [F., little curl, frizz, < friser, to curl, E. frizz.] A fringe of curled or frizzed hair, esp. artificial, worn on the forehead by women.

fri-seur (frē-zēr), n. [F., < friser: see frisette.] A hair-dresser.

Fris-ian (friz'ian), a. and n. See Friesian.

frisk (frisk), a. [OF. frisque; origin uncertain.] Lively; brisk; frisky. [Obs. or archaic].—frisk, n. I. intr. To dance, leap, skip, or gambol, as in frolic: as, "We were as twinn'd lambs that did frisk i' the sun" (Shakspeare's "Winter's Tale," i. 2. 67). II. tr. To search (a person), as for stolen property, concealed weapons, or other articles carried. [Slang].—frisk, n. A leap, skip, or caper; a sportive movement; a frolic.—frisk'er, *n.

fris-ket (fris'ket), n. [F. frisquette.] In printing, a thin framework of iron hinged to the tympan of a hand-press, for holding in place the sheet to be printed; later, a sheet with parts cut out, or a frame for holding such a sheet, for placing over a form so that only certain parts may print.

frisk-y (fris'ki), a.; compar. friskier, superl. friskiest. Given to frisking; lively; frolicsome; playful.—frisk'i-ly, adv.—frisk'i-ness, n.

Frieze ornamented with Sculpture, on wall at side of stairway of the great altar of Pergamum, Asia Minor.

Frigate-bird (Fregata aquila).

Frill-lizard.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; [^], primary accent; ^ˆ, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

- frit (frit), n. [F. fritte, < It. frittata, prop. pp. fem. of frigere, < L. frigere, roast, E. fry.²] In glass-making, a calcined, partly fused material ready for complete fusion to form glass; in ceramics, a partially fused material used as a basis for glazes; also, the composition from which artificial soft-paste porcelain is made.—frit, v. t.; fritted, fritting. To make into frit; fuse partially.
- frit-fly (frit'fli), n.; pl. -flies (-fīz). [Cf. fret.³] A dipterous insect, Oscinis frit, of Europe, whose larva damages growing wheat, etc.
- frith (frith), n. [Var. of firth.] A narrow arm of the sea; a firth.
- frit-il-la-ri-a (frit-i-lā'ri-ä), n. [NL., < L. fritillus, dice-box.] Any plant of the liliaceous genus Fritillaria, comprising bulbous herbs with drooping, bell-shaped flowers, as F. imperialis, the crown-imperial.—frit'il-la-ry (-lā-ri), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). A fritillaria; also, any of several butterflies of the genus Argynnis and allied genera.
- frit-ter¹ (frit'er), n. [OF. F. friture, < frīre, fry, < L. frigere, E. fry.²] A small cake of batter, sometimes containing fruit, clams, or some other ingredient, fried in deep boiling lard or the like or in a frying-pan.
- frit-ter² (frit'er), n. [Appar. < flitters.] A small piece, fragment, or shred; also, a trifle.—frit-ter², v. t. To break or tear into small pieces or shreds (now rare); hence, to disperse or squander piecemeal, or waste little by little (now usually with away: as, to fritter away one's money or energies on trifles; "The allies . . . frittered away precious time in . . . rapacious disputes," H. G. Wells's "Outline of History," xxxviii. § 5).—frit-ter-er, n.
- Fritz (frits), n. [G., for Friedrich, man's name.] A popular name for a German.
- friv-ol (friv'ol), v.; -oled or -olled, -oling or -olling. [From frivolous.] I. intr. To behave frivolously; trifle. [Colloq.] II. tr. With away, to spend frivolously. [Colloq.]—friv-ol-er, friv-ol-ler, n.
- friv-ol-i-ty (fri-vol'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). The quality or state of being frivolous; disposition to trifle; frivolous behavior; also, a frivolous act or thing.
- friv-o-lous (friv'ō-lus), a. [L. frivolus, silly, trifling, paltry.] Of little or no weight, worth, or importance (as, a frivolous matter; a frivolous objection or pretext); paltry or trivial; not worthy of serious notice; also, characterized by lack of seriousness or sense, as conduct; given to trifling or levity, as persons.—friv'o-lous-ly, adv.—friv'o-lous-ness, n.
- frizz¹ (friz), v. [Imit.] I. intr. To make a sizzling or sputtering noise, as in frying. II. tr. To frizzle (meat, etc.).
- frizz², friz (friz), v.; frizzed, frizzing. [F. friser, curl (hair, etc.); origin uncertain.] I. tr. To curl or crisp (the hair); form into small, crisp curls; also, to form into little tufts, as the nap of cloth. II. intr. To form short, crisp curls.—frizz², friz, n. The state of being frizzed; also, something frizzed; a curl, fringe, or wig of frizzed hair.
- friz-zle¹ (friz'li), v.; -zled, -zling. [Freq. of frizz.¹] I. intr. To make a sizzling or sputtering noise in frying or the like; frizz. II. tr. To fry or cook with a sizzling noise; crisp (meat, etc.) by frying; also, to prepare (dried beef sliced thin) in a white sauce.—friz'zle¹, n. The act or sound of frizzling; a dish of something frizzled.
- friz-zle² (friz'li), v. t. or i.; -zled, -zling. [Appar. freq. of frizz.²] To curl in small, crisp curls; frizz.—friz'zle², n. The state of being frizzled; frizz; also, frizzled hair; a short, crisp curl.—friz'zly, a. Frizzled.
- friz-zy (friz'i), a. Frizzed, as hair; frizz-like.
- fro (frō). [ME. fro, fra, from Scand.: cf. Icel. frā, also E. from.] I. prep. From. [Archaic or prov.] II. adv. Away; back: now only in the phrase 'to and fro' (forward and backward; hither and thither).
- Frö-bel-i-an, Froe-bel-i-an (frē-bel'i-an), a. Of or pertaining to Friedrich Fröbel (1782-1852), the German educational reformer, or the kindergarten system of instruction, originated by him.—Frö-bel-ism, Froe-bel-ism, n. The Fröbelian or kindergarten system of instruction.
- frock (frok), n. [OF. F. froc; origin uncertain.] A coarse outer garment with large sleeves, worn by monks; hence, the priestly or clerical office; also, a long coat or mantle; also, a loose outer garment worn by peasants and workmen; a smock-frock; also, a sailor's woolen jersey (chiefly Sc.); also, the principal outer garment of women; a gown or dress; also, a frock-coat; a military coat resembling a frock-coat.—frock, v. t. To provide with or clothe in a frock; hence, to invest with priestly or clerical office.—frock'=coat', n. A man's close-fitting coat, usually double-breasted, with a skirt extending to about the knees and of the same length before and behind.—frock'ing, n. Material for making frocks.—frock'less, a. Without a frock.
- Froe-bel'i-an, etc. See Fröbelian, etc.
- frog¹ (frog), n. [Origin uncertain.] A loop or attachment, as on a belt, for receiving a sword, bayonet, etc. (as, "I made him a belt, with a frog hanging to it, such as in England we wear hangers in": Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe," i. 15); also, an ornamental fastening for the front of a coat, consisting of an elongated (or other) button and a loop through which it passes.
- frog² (frog), n. [AS. frogga, akin to D. vorsch, G. frosch, Icel. froskr, frog.] Any of various anurous or tailless amphibians (order Anura), esp. of the web-footed aquatic species constituting the genus Rana and allied genera, but sometimes including certain terrestrial species which are more commonly called toads; also, any of various animals somewhat resembling frogs; also, a slight hoarseness due to mucus on the vocal cords ('frog in the throat'); also, a triangular mass of elastic, horny substance in the middle of the sole of the foot of a horse or related animal; also, an arrangement or device in the rail of a railroad for connecting one track with another branching from it or crossing it.—frog², v. i.; frogged, frogging. To catch, or search for, frogs.
- frog-bit (frog'bit), n. A floating aquatic plant, Hydrocharis morsus-ranæ, of Europe, with white flowers; also, a similar plant, Limnobium spongia, of the United States.
- frog-eye (frog'i), n. A disease which affects tobacco-leaves, producing small white spots: attributed to a fungus.—frog'=eyed, a. Affected with frog-eye.
- frog-fish (frog'fish), n. Any of the fishes constituting the family Antennariidæ, characterized by a wide frog-like mouth and broad limb-like fins; also, the angler, Lophius piscatorius.
- frogged (frogd), a. [See frog.¹] Fastened or ornamented with frogs.—frog'ging, n. Fastenings or ornamentation consisting of frogs.
- frog-gy (frog'i), a. [See frog.²] Abounding in frogs; frog-like.
- frog-hop-per (frog'hop'er), n. Any of various small, leaping, frog-like homopterous insects (family Cercopidæ) whose young are inclosed in a frothy secretion called cuckoo-spit.
- frog-lil-y (frog'lil'i), n. The yellow pond-lily.
- frog-mouth (frog'mouth), n. Any of the Australian and East Indian goatsuckers (birds) constituting the family Podargidæ, or, according to some classifications, the subfamily Podarginæ: so called from their wide, flat, frog-like mouth. See goatsucker.
- frog-spawn (frog'spân), n. Frog-spit (alga); also, a micro-organism, Streptococcus mesenterii.

Railroad Frog.

Frogfish (Antennarius pictus).Froghopper (Aphrophora quadrangularis). (Line shows natural size.)

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, ásk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, mōve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, élect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operâ, ardent, actōr, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ⁂h, then; y, you;

oides, causing fermentation and the formation of slimy masses in saccharine solutions.

frog=spit, frog=spit-tle (frog'spit, -spit'/l), n. Any of several filamentous fresh-water algæ, esp. of the genus Spirogyra, forming floating masses; also, cuckoo-spit.

frol-ic (frol'ik), a. [D. vrolijk (= G. fröhlich), < MD. vro = G. froh, glad, joyous.] Joyous or merry; sportive; full of pranks. [Archaic.]—frol'ic, v. i.; -icked, -icking. To play merrily; sport; gambol; play pranks.—frol'ic, n. A frolicking; a fit of merry play; a frolicsome performance; a merrymaking; also, sportive gaiety; merry play.—frol'ick-er, n.—frol'ick-y, a. Frolicsome.—frol'ic-some (-sum), a. Disposed to frolic; sportive; merrily playful.—frol'ic-some-ly, adv.—frol'ic-some-ness, n.

from (from or frəm), prep. [AS. fram, prep., from, as adv. forward, forth (see frame), = OHG. and Goth. fram, prep. and adv., = Icel. frá, prep. (cf. fro), fram, adv.; ult. akin to E. fore.] A particle specifying a starting-point, and hence used to express removal or separation in space, time, order, etc., discrimination or distinction, source or origin, instrumentality, and cause or reason: as, a train running west from New York; to leap from a seat; from that time onward; to count from 0 to 10; to wander from one's purpose; he is often from home; a long way from being rich; to tell one tree from another; from one point of view; a gift from his wife; sketches drawn from nature; a blow from one's fist; to suffer from measles; to act from a sense of duty.

from-age (frō-māzh), n. [F. fromage, OF. formage, < L. forma, E. form.] Cheese.

from-en-ty (frō'men-ti), n. Same as frumenty.

frond (frond), n. [L. frons (frond-), leafy branch.] In bot., a large compound leaf, as of a palm; in specif. use, a leaf-like expansion not differentiated into stem and foliage, as in lichens; also, the leaf of a fern; in zool., a leaf-like expansion in certain animal organisms.—frond-age (fron'-dāj), n. Fronds collectively; loosely, foliage.—frond'ed, a. Having fronds: as, "fronded palms" (Whittier's "Eternal Goodness").

fron-dent (fron'dent), a. [L. frondens (frondent-), ppr. of frondere, have leaves, < frons, E. frond.] Abounding in leaves; leafy.

fron-desce (fron-des'), v. i.; -desced, -descing. [L. frondes-cere, < frondere: see frondent.] To put forth leaves.—fron-des'cence (-des'ens), n. The process or period of coming into leaf; also, foliage.—fron-des'cent, a. Putting forth leaves or fronds.

fron-dif-er-ous (fron-dif'ē-rus), a. [L. frondifer: see frond and -ferous.] Bearing leaves or fronds.

fron-dose (fron'dōs or fron-dōs'), a. [L. frondosus, < frons: see frond.] Leafy; frondiferous; frond-like.

front (frunt). [OF. F. front, < L. frons (front-), forehead, front.] I. n. The forehead, or the entire face; hence, bearing or demeanor in confronting anything (as, a calm front); sometimes, cool assurance, or impudence (as, "Men of front carry things before them with little opposition": Steele, in "Tatler," 168); also, the part or side of anything, as a house, which seems to look out or be directed forward; the foremost part or surface of anything; any side or face, as of a building; the beginning (as, the front of a book); land facing a road, river, sea, etc.; also, something attached or worn at the fore part, as a woman's half-wig, a shirt-front, a dicky, etc.; also, a place or position directly before anything, or that place to which one's view is directed (as, in front of it or him); milit., the foremost line or part of an army, etc., or the direction in which it faces; a line of battle; the place where active operations are carried on. II. a. Of or pertaining to the front; situated in or at the front.—front, v. I. tr. To have the front toward; face; also, to meet face to face; confront; esp., to face in opposition, hostility, or defiance (as, "With Stupidity and sound Digestion man may front much": Carlyle's "Sartor Resartus," ii. 7); oppose; also, to set face to face, as with some one or something; also, to furnish or adorn in front; supply with a front; also, to serve as a front to. II. intr. To have or turn the front in some specified direction.

fron-tage (frun'tāj), n. Land abutting on a river, street, etc.; also, the space lying between a building and the street, etc.; also, the front of a building or lot; the lineal extent of this front; also, the act or fact of fronting in a certain direction; outlook; exposure.—fron'tag-er (-tāj-ēr), n. One who owns land fronting on a stream, road, etc.; also, one who lives on a frontier.

fron-tal¹ (frun'tal), a. [NL. frontalis, < L. frons, E. front.] Of or pertaining to the forehead; noting or pertaining to the bone (or pair of bones) forming the forehead; also, pertaining to, or being in or at, the front.

fron-tal² (frun'tal), n. [OF. frontel, < ML. frontale, < L. frons, E. front.] Something worn on or applied to the forehead, as an ornamental band for the hair; also, the façade of a building; eccles., a movable cover or hanging for the front of an altar; in anat., the frontal bone.

front-ed (frun'ted), a. Having a front; formed with a front.

fron-tier (fron'tēr, frōn-tēr', or frun-tēr'). [OF. frontiere (F. frontière), < ML. frontaria, < L. frons, E. front.]

I. n. That part of a country which fronts or faces another country; the border; also, that part of a country which forms the border of its settled or inhabited regions; also, a border town or fortress. II. a. Of or pertaining to a frontier; situated on the frontier.—fron-tiers-man (fron'tērz-man or frun-tēr'z-), n.; pl. -men. A man who lives on the frontier.

fron-tis-piece (frun'tis-pēs or fron'-), n. [An altered form, simulating piece, of frontispice, < F. frontispice, < ML. frontispicium, < L. frons, front, + specere, look at.] The part which is seen in front, or which first strikes the eye; specif., the principal face of a building; the decorated entrance of a building; also, the pediment over a door, gate, etc.; also, a sculptured or engraved panel; also, the first page of a book, or what is printed on it; now, usually, an illustration facing the title-page of a book or of a division of a book; in humorous use, the face or the forehead.—fron'-tis-piece, v. t.; -pieced, -piecing. To furnish (a book) with a frontispiece; also, to represent on a frontispiece; also, to provide as a frontispiece.

fron-less (frunt'les), a. Without a front; also, without shame or modesty, shameless, or audacious (now rare: as, "For vice, though frontless and of hardened face, Is daunted at the sight of awful grace," Dryden's "Hind and the Panther," iii. 1040).

fron-let (frunt'let), n. [OF. frontelet, dim. of frontel, *E. frontal*².] Something worn on the forehead, as an ornament, band, or the like; also, the forehead, esp. of an animal (as, "The antler'd monarch of the waste . . . Toss'd his beam'd frontlet to the sky": Scott's "Lady of the Lake," i. 2); in ornith., the forehead when marked by a different color or texture of the plumage.

fron-to- (fron'tō-). Form of L. frons (front-), forehead, in combination: used esp. in anatomical terms, often with reference to the frontal bone, as in frontomalar (pertaining to the frontal and the malar bone), frontoparietal, fronto-temporal.

fron-ton (frun'ton, F. frôn-tôn), n. [F., < It. frontone, < fronte, < L. frons, E. front.] In arch., a pediment.

front-ward, front-wards (frun'twārd, -wārdz), adv. Toward the front.

frore (frōr), a. [Old pp. of freeze.] Frozen; also, frosty; intensely cold. [Archaic.]

frost (frōst), n. [AS. frost, forst, = D. vorst = G. and Icel. frost, frost; from the verb represented by E. freeze.] The act or process of freezing, or the state of being frozen; a state of the temperature which occasions the freezing of water (as, degrees of frost, degrees below the freezing-point, forty degrees of frost, Fahrenheit, for example, corresponding to -8° F.); also, a covering of minute ice-needles formed from the atmosphere at night upon the ground and exposed objects when these have cooled by radiation below the dew-point and when the dew-point is below the freezing-point ('white frost' or 'hoar-frost'); frozen vapor; fig., coldness of manner or temperament; a coolness between persons (slang); also, a failure (slang).—frost, v. I. tr. To freeze; frost-bite; also, to cover with hoar-frost; also, to give a frost-like surface to (glass, etc.); ice (a cake, etc.). II. intr. To freeze; hence, to become like frost.—frost'=bite, v. t.; pret. -bit, pp. -bitten, ppr. -biting. To injure by frost; blight with frost; affect by severe cold so as to cause inflammation or gangrene.—frost=bite, n. The condition or effect of being frost-bitten.—frost/ed, p. a. Frozen; frost-bitten; also, covered with hoar-frost; also, having a frost-like surface; iced, as cake.—frost=fish, n. The tomcod, Micregadus tomcod (so called because it appears on the coast of North America as frost sets in); also, the American smelt, Osmerus mordax.—frost/i-ly, adv. In a frosty manner.—frost/i-ness, n.—frost/ing, n. A preparation of powdered sugar beaten together with whites of eggs, etc., or a preparation of sugar and water boiled together, for covering cakes or the like; also, a lusterless finish, as of metal or glass.—frost/less, a. Without frost.—frost=plant, n. Any of various plants on whose stems crystals of ice form in autumn, as the frostweed, Helianthemum canadense, or the American dittany, Cunila origanoides.—frost/weed, n. Any of the woody herbs or low shrubs constituting the cistaceae genus Helianthemum, as H. canadense, a yellow-flowered species notable for the crystals of ice which shoot from the bursting bark near the base of the stem in autumn.—frost/work, n. The delicate tracery formed by hoar-frost, esp. on glass; ornamentation in imitation of this as on metal.—frost/y, a.; compar. frostier, superl. frostiest. Attended with or producing frost; freezing; very cold; fig., lacking warmth of feeling; chilling; also, consisting of or covered with hoar-frost; also, resembling hoar-frost; white or gray, as the hair; hence, pertaining to or characteristic of old age.

froth (frôth), n. [ME. frothe: cf. Icel. frodha, froth, also AS. āfrēoþam, form froth.] An aggregation of bubbles, as on a fermented liquid or at the mouth of a hard-driven horse; foam; fig., something unsubstantial or evanescent (as, "a froth of fleeting joy": Shakspeare's "Lucrece," 212).—froth, v. I. intr. To give out froth; foam. II. tr. To cause to foam; also, to emit like froth; also, to cover with froth.—froth/y, a.; compar. frothier, superl. frothiest. Of, like, or having froth; foamy; fig., unsubstantial; trifling; vain.—froth/i-ly, adv.—froth/i-ness, n.

frot-té (fro-tā), n. [F., prop. pp. of frotter, rub.] In art, a picture, or a part of a picture, executed by means of very slight and more or less transparent washes of color, as in producing hazy effects of atmosphere in landscape.

frou-frou (frô'frô), n. [F.] A rustling, as of silk.

frounce (frouns), n. [OF. F. frounce, a wrinkle, fold; origin uncertain.] A wrinkle†; a fold†; a flounce†; a furbelow or showy ornament (archaic).—frounce, v. t.; frounced, frouncing. [OF. frouncer (F. froncer).] To wrinkle†; gather into folds†; curl (the hair)†; adorn with furbelows (archaic).

frou'zy, etc. See frowzy, etc.

frow (frou), n. [D. vrouw = G. frau.] A woman; a wife: used esp. with reference to the Dutch or Germans.

frow-ward (frô'wârd), a. [See fro and -ward.] Perverse; wilfully contrary; refractory; untoward.—frow/ward-ly, adv.—frow/ward-ness, n.

frown (froun), v. [OF. froignier, frongnier (cf. F. renfrogner, contract in a frown); origin uncertain.] I. intr. To contract the brow as in displeasure or deep thought; scowl; also, to look disapprovingly (as, "to frown on a scheme"); also, to have a threatening aspect; lower. II. tr. To force (away, off, into, etc.) by a frown; also, to express by a frown.—frown, n. A frowning look; a scowl; also, any expression or show of disapproval.—frown/er, n.—frown/ing-ly, adv.—frown/less, a. Without a frown.

frow-y (frou'i), a. [Cf. frowzy.] Musty; stale; not fresh and sweet: said of articles of food. [Prov. Eng. and U. S.]

frow-zy (frou'zi), a.; compar. frowzier, superl. frowziest. [Origin obscure.] Ill-smelling (as, "a thousand frowzy steams which I could not analyze": Smollett's "Humphry Clinker," May 8); musty; also, dirty and untidy; slovenly; dingy; unkempt.—frow/zi-ly, adv.—frow/zi-ness, n.

froze (frôz). Preterit of freeze.—froz-en (frô'zn), p. a. Subjected to freezing; congealed by cold; covered with ice, as a stream; obstructed by the formation of ice, as pipes; injured or killed by frost or cold; frigid, or very cold; chilly or cold in manner (as, a frozen stare); rendered impossible of liquidation, as by business conditions (colloq.: as, frozen credits; frozen loans).—froz-en-ly, adv.—froz-en-ness, n.

fruc-tes-cence (fruk-tes'çns), n. [NL. fructescencia, < L.

fructus, E. fruit.] The fruiting of a plant; the fruiting season.

Fruc-ti-dor (frük-tê-dôr), n. [F. fructidor, < L. fructus, fruit, + Gr. δῶρον, gift.] In the calendar of the first French republic, the twelfth month of the year, extending from Aug. 18 to Sept. 16.

fruc-tif-er-ous (fruk-tif'ê-rus), a. [L. fructifer, < fructus, fruit, + ferre, bear.] Fruit-bearing; producing fruit.

fruc-ti-fi-ca-tion (fruk'ti-fi-kā'shən), n. [LL. fructificatio(-n).] The act of fructifying; the fruiting of a plant; also, the fruit of a plant; the organs of fruiting.

fruc-ti-fy (fruk'ti-fi), v.; -fied, -fying. [OF. F. fructifier, < L. fructificare, < fructus, fruit, + facere, make.] I. intr. To bear fruit. II. tr. To make fruitful or productive; fertilize.—fruc/ti-fi-er (-fi-êr), n.

fruc-tiv-o-rous (fruk-tiv'ô-rus), a. [L. fructus, fruit, + vorare, devour.] Feeding on fruits; frugivorous.

fruc-tose (fruk'tôs), n. [L. fructus, fruit: see *-ose*².] In chem., a sugar occurring in three optically different isomeric forms, the best known being levulose.

fruc-tu-ous (fruk'tū-us), a. [OF. fructuosus (F. fructueux), < L. fructuosus, < fructus, E. fruit.] Fruitful; productive; profitable.

fru-gal (frô'gal), a. [L. frugal, < frugi, useful, worthy, frugal, prop. dative of frux (frug-), fruit, profit, akin to fructus, E. fruit.] Economical in use or expenditure (as, "Though on pleasure she was bent, She had a frugal mind": Cowper's "John Gilpin," 32); prudently saving or sparing; also, entailing little expense (as, a frugal meal).—fru-gal-i-ty (frô-gal'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [L. frugalitas.] The quality of being frugal; prudent economy; pl., frugal practices or resources.—fru/gal-ly, adv.—fru/gal-ness, n.

fru-giv-o-rous (frô-jiv'ô-rus), a. [L. frux (frug-), fruit, + vorare, devour.] Feeding on fruits, as certain animals.

fruit (frôt), n. [OF. F. fruit, < L. fructus, enjoyment, proceeds, fruit, < frui, enjoy, akin to E. *brook*¹.] Any product of vegetable growth useful to men or animals (commonly in pl.: as, the fruits of the earth); usually, an edible seed-containing plant-product, esp. one in which the seed is contained in a succulent pulp, as the apple, orange, or plum, a melon, or a berry; such products collectively; in botanical use, the matured ovary of a plant with its contents and appendages (as, an aggregate fruit, see aggregate, a.; a collective or multiple fruit, see collective, a.); also, the spores of a cryptogam; in fig. use, offspring; also, anything produced or accruing; a product, result, or effect; return or profit.—fruit, v. i. or t. To bear or bring to bear fruit.

—fruit/age (-âj), n. The bearing of fruit; also, fruit borne (as, "Greedy they pluck'd The fruitage fair to sight": Milton's "Paradise Lost," x. 561); fig., product or result.

—fruit=cake, n. A rich cake containing raisins, currants, citron, etc.—fruit=crow, n. Any of various South American birds of the family Cotingidæ that feed largely on fruits.—fruit/-ed, a. Having fruit; laden with fruit.—fruit/er, n. A fruit-bearing tree; also, a fruit-grower; also, a ship employed in transporting fruit.—fruit/er-er, n. A dealer in fruit; a fruit-seller.—fruit/er-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). [F. fruiterie.] A place for raising or storing fruit; also, fruit collectively.—fruit/ful, a. Abounding in fruit, as trees or other plants; bearing fruit abundantly; conducing to abundance of fruit, as soil or showers; also, producing offspring, esp. abundantly; prolific; fecund; also, abundantly productive (of or in: as, "golden days, fruitful of golden deeds," Milton's "Paradise Lost," iii. 337; fruitful in expedients); often, productive of results (as, a fruitful journey; fruitful investigations); profitable; also, abundant† or fat, fâte, fâr, fâll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, êlect, agôny, intô, ûnite; (obscured) errânt, operâ, ardênt, actôr, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; y, you;

Fruit-crow (Querula purpurata).

plenteoust (as, "One fruitful meal would set me to 't": Shakspeare's "Measure for Measure," iv. 3. 161).—fruit-ful-ly, adv.—fruit/ful-ness, n.

fru-i-tion (frō-ish'qn), n. [OF. fruition, < LL. fruitio (n.), < L. frui, enjoy: see fruit.] Enjoyment, as of something attained or realized: as, "an object of desire placed out of the possibility of fruition" (Addison, in "Spectator," 256).

fruit-less (frōt'les), a. Without fruit; barren; hence, unproductive; vain.—fruit/less-ly, adv.—fruit/less-ness, n.

fruit-let (frōt'let), n. A small fruit.

fruit-sug-ar (frōt'shūg'ār), n. In chem., levulose.

fruit-y (frō'ti), a. Fruit-like, as in flavor: as, "The Madeira . . . is a trifle too fruity for my taste" (F. H. Smith's "Colonel Carter of Cartersville," iii.).

fru-men-ta-ceous (frō-men-tā'shius), a. [LL. frumentaceus, < L. frumentum, grain.] Of the nature of or resembling wheat or other grain.

fru-men-ty (frō-men-ti), n. [OF. frumentee, < frument, < L. frumentum, grain.] Hulled wheat boiled in milk and seasoned with sugar, etc.

frump (frump), v. t. [Origin obscure.] To mock; flout; also, to vex. [Archaic or prov. Eng.]—frump, n. A flout (now prov.); ill humor (often in pl.: now prov.); also, an ill-natured, old-fashioned woman; a dowdy.—frump-ish, frump'y, a. Ill-natured; cross; also, dowdy.

frush† (frush), v. t. [OF. fruissier (F. froisser), < L. frustum, piece, bit.] To break to pieces; crush; batter. See Shakspeare's "Troilus and Cressida," v. 6. 29.—frush, a. Brittle; also, not firm; soft. [North. Eng. and Sc.]

frus-trate (frus'trāt), v. t.; -trated, -trating. [L. frustratus, pp. of frustrari, frustrare, < frustra, in vain.] To disappoint or thwart (a person); also, to make (plans, efforts, etc.) of no avail; defeat; baffle; nullify.—frus'trate, a. Frustrated; hence, futile; vain. [Archaic.]—frus-tra'tion (-trā'shən), n.

frus-tule (frus'tūl), n. [L. frustulum, dim. of frustum, piece, bit.] In bot., the siliceous shell of a diatom.

frus-tum (frus'tum), n.; pl. -tums or -ta (-tā). [L., piece, bit.] A piece or portion; in geom., the part of a solid left after cutting off a top portion by a plane parallel to the base; the part of a solid between two cutting planes.

fru-tes-cent (frō-tes'ent), a. [Irreg. < L. frutex, shrub, bush: see -escent.] In bot., shrub-like; shrubby.—fru-tes'cence, n.

fru-ti-cose (frō'ti-kōs), a. [L. fruticulosus, < frutex (frutic-), shrub, bush.] In bot., having the form of a shrub; shrub-like.

fry¹ (fri), n. [ME. fry: cf. Icel. frjó, fræ, Goth. fraiw, seed.] Offspring, as of human beings†; also, the young of fishes, or of some other animals, as frogs; young or small fishes or other young creatures, as children, collectively, or, fig., lesser persons or minor things (chiefly in 'young fry,' 'small fry'); a swarm, crowd, or multitude of such.

fry² (fri), v.; fried, frying. [OF. F. frire, < L. frigere, roast, parch, fry.] I. tr. To cook in fat over a fire. II. intr. To undergo cooking in fat. Also fig.—fry², n.; pl. fries (friz). A dish of something fried; also, any of various internal parts of animals, usually eaten fried.—fry'er, n. See frier.—fry'ing-pan, n. A shallow pan, commonly of iron, with a long handle, used for frying food.

fu (fō), n. [Chinese.] In China, a prefecture or department; also, the chief city of a department.

fu' (fō), a. Scotch form of *full*¹.

fub¹ (fub), v. t.; fubbed, fubbing. [Var. of *fob*¹.] To trick; (also) to put (off) by a trick or pretense (see Shakspeare's "2 Henry IV.," ii. 1. 37).

fub²†, subst (fub, fubz), n. [Prob. imit.] A small, chubby person.—fub'sy, a. Chubby; short and fat or thick. [Prov. or colloq., Eng.]

fuch-sia (fū'shiā or fōk'si-ā), n. [NL.; from Leonhard Fuchs (1501-66), German botanist.] Any plant of the onagraceous genus Fuchsia, which includes many varieties cultivated for their handsome drooping flowers.

fuch-sin, fuch-sine (fōk'sin), n. [From G. Fuchs (lit. 'fox'), tr. F. Renard, name of the introducers of the dye.]

A coal-tar dyestuff occurring as a greenish solid which forms deep-red solutions; magenta.

fu-coid (fū'koid), I. a. Resembling, or allied to, seaweeds of the genus Fucus (see fucus); of sandstone, etc., containing seaweed-like forms or markings. II. n. A fucoid seaweed.

fu-cus (fū'kus), n.; pl. fuci (-sī). [L., rock lichen.] Any seaweed of the genus Fucus, which comprises leathery olive-brown algæ with branching fronds and often air-bladders; rockweed.

fud-dle (fud'l), v.; -dled, -dling. [Origin obscure.] I. tr. To make stupid with drink; intoxicate; also, to muddle or confuse. II. intr. To tipple.—fud'dler, n. A tippler.—fud'dling-cup, n. b. b. conceptacles.

An old English drinking-vessel, as of earthenware, formed of a group of cups with communicating interiors, so that to empty one it was necessary to empty all.

fudge (fuj), v. t.; fudged, fudging. [Origin obscure: cf. fadge.] To adjust or perform clumsily, perfunctorily, or dishonestly; make or get (up).—fudge, n. A made-up story; also, nonsense or bosh (sometimes used as a contemptuous interjection: as, "Mr. Burchell . . . at the conclusion of every sentence would cry out fudge, an expression which displeased us all." Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield," xi.); also, a mass of printed matter (often in color), as a piece of late news, inserted in a page of a newspaper; a machine or attachment for printing masses of this kind; also, a kind of candy (often home-made) composed of sugar, butter, milk, and chocolate, or maple sugar, sometimes nuts, etc., boiled together, poured into a shallow pan, and when cool cut into small blocks.

fu-el (fū'el), n. [OF. fouraille, < ML. focalia, pl. of focale, fuel, < L. focus, hearth, fireplace.] Combustible matter used to maintain fire, as coal, wood, oil, etc.; fig., means of sustaining or increasing passion, ardor, etc. (as, "Each party is always laying up fuel for dissension": Steele, in "Tatler," 150).—fu'el, v. t.; -eled or -elled, -eling or -elling. To supply with fuel.—fu'el-oil, n. An oil used for fuel, esp. one used as a substitute for coal, as crude petroleum.

fuert (fürst), n. See fürst.

fuff (fuf), v. i. or t. [Imit.] To puff; whiff. [Sc. and north. Eng.]—fuff, n. A puff; a whiff; a sputter; an angry fume or huff. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

fu-ga-cious (fū-gā'shus), a. [L. fugax (fugac-), < fugere, flee: see fugitive.] Tending to flee; fleeting; transitory; in bot., falling or fading early.—fu-ga'cious-ly, adv.—fu-ga'cious-ness, fu-ga'ci-ty (-gas'i-ti), n.

fu-gal (fū'gal), a. Pertaining to or in the style of a fugue.—fu-gal-ly, adv.

-fuge. [F. fuge, < L. fugare, put to flight.] A termination of adjectives meaning 'driving away (something),' and of nouns denoting some agent that drives away, dispels, or expels something (esp. disease or disease-producing organisms), as in febrifuge, tanifuge, vermifuge.

fu-gi-tive (fū'ji-tiv). [OF. F. fugitif, < L. fugitivus, < fugere = Gr. φύγεω, flee: see *bow*¹.] I. a. Fleeing, or tending to flee (as, "A fugitive and gracious light he seeks, Shy to illumine": M. Arnold's "Thyrsis"); having taken flight, or runaway (as, a fugitive slave); also, wandering, roving, or vagabond; fig., fleeting or transitory (as, "In Fructifying Tip of a Frond of Fucus (F. vesiculosus).—a, a, air-bladders; b, b, conceptacles.

Fuddling-cup.

Frustum of a Cone.—f, frustum; c, part cut off.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

youth alone, unhappy mortals live; But, ah! the mighty bliss is fugitive": Dryden's tr. Virgil's "Georgics," iii. 109); quickly fading, as colors; readily escaping, as odors; soon falling, as flowers or petals; also, dealing with subjects of passing interest, as writings; ephemeral; occasional. II. n. A fugitive person or thing; a runaway; a refugee.—fu-gi-tive-ly, adv.—fu-gi-tive-ness, n.

fu-gle (fū'gl), v. i.; -gled, -gling. [From fugleman.] To act as a fugleman; serve as guide or director; make signals. fu-gle-man (fū'gl-mān), n.; pl. -men. [G. flügelmann, < flügel, wing, + mann, man.] A well-drilled soldier placed in front of a military company as a model for the others in their exercises. Also fig.

fugue (fūg), n. [F. fugue, < It. fuga, < L. fuga, flight, swift course, akin to fugere, flee: see fugitive.] In music, a polyphonic composition based on one, two, or more themes, which are enunciated by the several parts in turn, developed contrapuntally, and presented finally in a conclusion or climax.—fugued, a. Composed in the style of a fugue.—fu-guist (fū'gist), n. A composer or performer of fugues.

-ful. [AS. -full, -ful, repr. full, ful, E. *full*¹, a.] A suffix used with the sense of 'full of,' 'fraught with,' 'characterized by,' or with less definite signification, to form adjectives, as artful, careful, grateful, masterful, mournful, thankful, or with the sense of 'enough to fill,' to form nouns, as handful, roomful, spoonful.

ful-crum (fū'krum), n.; pl. -crums or -era (-krä). [L., bedpost, < fulcire, prop up.] A prop; in mech., the support, or point of rest, on which a lever turns in moving a body.—ful'crum, v. t.; -crumed, -cruming. To furnish with a fulcrum; place on something as a fulcrum; also, to establish as a fulcrum.

F, Fulcrum; L, Lever.

ful-fil, ful-fill (fūl-fil'), v. t.; -filled, -filling. [AS. fullfyllan, < full, E. *full*¹, a., + fillan, E. *fill*², v.] To fill full or make full (archaic: as, "I hear it now, that tender strain Fulfilled with all of sorrow save its pain," R. W. Gilder's "Music and Words"); make complete, or supply what is lacking in (archaic); hence, to carry out, or bring to consummation, as a prophecy, promise, etc.; also, to perform, execute, or do, as duty; obey or follow, as commands; also, to satisfy (requirements, etc.); answer (a purpose); also, to bring to an end, finish, or complete, as a period of time or a course of procedure (archaic).—ful-fil'ler, n.—ful-fil'ment, n.

ful-gent (fūl'jent), a. [L. fulgens (fulgent-), ppr. of fulgere, flash, shine.] Shining brightly; resplendent: as, "Then issued Vesper from the fulgent west" (Wordsworth's "Gipsies").—ful'gent-ly, adv.

ful-gid (fūl'jid), a. [L. fulgidus, < fulgere, flash, shine.] Glittering; gleaming: as, "Through the brown shade the fulgid weapons shined" (Pope's tr. Homer's "Iliad," x.).

ful-gor (fūl'gor), n. [L. fulgor, < fulgere, flash, shine.] Dazzling brightness; splendor.—ful'gor-ous, a.

ful-gu-ral (fūl'gū-rāl), a. [L. fulguralis, < fulgur, lightning, < fulgere, flash, shine.] Of or pertaining to lightning.

ful-gu-rant (fūl'gū-rānt), a. Fulgurating; flashing like lightning: as, "that erect form, flashing brow, fulgurant eye" (Browning's "Ring and the Book," vi.).

ful-gu-rate (fūl'gū-rāt), v. i.; -rated, -rating. [L. fulguratus, pp. of fulgurare, < fulgur, lightning: see fulgural.] To flash or dart like lightning.—ful-gu-ra'tion (-rā'shon), n.

ful-gu-rite (fūl'gū-rit), n. [L. fulgur, lightning.] A tube formed in sand or rock by lightning; also, rocky matter fused by lightning; also, an explosive of the nitroglycerin class, used for blasting.

ful-gu-rous (fūl'gū-rus), a. [L. fulgur, lightning: see fulgural.] Flashing with or like lightning; lightning-like.

ful-ham (fūl'ām), n. See fullam.

fu-lig-i-nous (fū-līj'i-nus), a. [LL. fuliginosus, < L. fuligo, soot.] Sooty; soot-like; smoky; dusky.—fu-lig-i-nos'i-ty (-nos'i-ti), n.—fu-lig'i-nous-ly, adv.

full¹ (fūl), a. [AS. full, ful, = D. vol = G. voll = Icel. fullr = Goth. fulls, full; akin to L. plenus, Gr. πλήρης, full, L. plere, Gr. συμπλάναι, Skt. pur-, fill: see plus and poly-.] Containing all that can be held (of); containing a plentiful amount or number (of); filled (with contents understood: as, a full cup; full sails; a full stomach; a full heart); having had one's fill, as of food; drunk (slang); sated (now with up, as slang); filled with the thought or subject (of); also, filled or rounded out, as in form; of garments, draperies, etc., wide, ample, or having ample folds; also, of the maximum size, amount, extent, volume, etc. (as, a full mile; full pay; full growth; the full moon); complete; entire; perfect; unqualified; also, ample in detail; copious; also, of dress, suited for occasions of the utmost state; esp., of the style customary for formal evening wear; also, of wines, having considerable body; not thin.—full blood, pure extraction (as, an Indian of full blood); also, whole blood, or relationship through both parents (as, brothers of full blood, male children of the same father and the same mother).—full hand or full house, in poker, a hand consisting of three of a kind and a pair, as three queens and two tens.—full stop, in punctuation, a period.—full tilt. See under *tilt*², n.—in full blast, in full operation; at full force.—in full cry, in full pursuit, as dogs in the chase.—full¹, n. Full measure, or utmost extent; the height, as of a season; of the moon, the stage of complete illumination.—full¹, adv. [AS. full.] Fully, completely, or entirely; also, exactly or directly (as, "Full in the middle way there stood a lake": Pope's "Dunciad," ii. 69); also, very (now chiefly poetic: as, "Full many a gem of purest ray serene, The dark unfathom'd caves of ocean bear," Gray's "Elegy," xiv.).—full¹, v. t. or i. To make or become full.

full² (fūl), v. [OF. F. fouler, < ML. fullare, full (cloth), < L. fullo(n-), a fuller: cf. *fuller*².] I. tr. To cleanse and thicken (cloth, etc.) by special processes in manufacture. II. intr. Of cloth, etc., to become compacted or felted.

ful-lam, ful-ham (fūl'ām), n. [Earlier fullam; origin uncertain.] A loaded die. See Shakspeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," i. 3. 94. [Slang.]

ful-back (fūl'bak), n. In football, etc., the back furthest behind the forward line. See *back*², n.

ful=blod-ed (fūl'blud'ed), a. Having a full supply of blood; also, of pure extraction; thoroughbred.

ful-blown (fūl'blōn), a. In full bloom: as, "the full-blown rose" (Cowper's "Task," i. 36). Also fig.

ful-er¹ (fūl'ēr), n. [Appar. < *full*¹, v.] In blacksmithing, a tool for grooving and spreading iron; also, a groove made by it.

ful-er² (fūl'ēr), n. [AS. fullere, < L. fullo(n-): see *full*².] One who fuls cloth.—fullers' earth, a mixture of clay and fine siliceous material, used for removing grease from cloth, etc., in fulling.

ful-face (fūl'fas), n. In printing, bold-face.—ful'=faced, a. Having a plump or round face; also, facing squarely toward the spectator or in a given direction; in printing, of type, bold-faced.

ful=fledged (fūl'fledj'), a. Fully developed; fully organized; of full rank or standing (as, a ful-fledged professor).

ful-grown (fūl'grōn'), a. Fully grown; mature.

ful-heart-ed (fūl'hārt'ed), a. Full of courage and confidence, as a person; carried on zealously, as a work; also, full of emotion.

ful-ness, ful-ness (fūl'nes), n. The state of being full.—the fullness of time, the proper or destined time: as, "When the fullness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son" (Gal. iv. 4).

—ful'ly, adv. In a full manner; completely; entirely; wholly; exactly; quite.

ful-mar (fūl'mār), n. [Perhaps < Icel. full, foul (with allusion to odor), + mār, gull.] Any of certain oceanic birds of the petrel family, esp. Fulmarus glacialis, a gull-like arctic species.

Fulmar (Fulmarus glacialis).

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, unite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; then, then; y, you;

ful-mi-nant (fŭl'mi-nānt), a. Fulminating.

ful-mi-nate (fŭl'mi-nāt), v.; -nated, -nating. [L. fulminatus, pp. of fulminare, < fulmen (fulmin-), lightning, thunderbolt, < fulgere, flash, shine.] I. intr. To lighten and thunder; also, to explode with a loud noise; detonate; also, to issue denunciations or the like. II. tr. To cause to explode; also, to send forth (denunciations, etc.); also, to denounce vehemently.—ful-mi-nate, n. A salt of fulminic acid (as, mercuric fulminate, an explosive used in percussion-caps); also, an explosive powder.—ful-mi-na-tion (-nā'shən), n. [L. fulminatio(n-)] The act of fulminating; also, that which is fulminated, or thundered forth; a violent denunciation or censure.—ful-mi-na-to-ry (-nā-tō-rī), a. Fulminating; denunciatory.

ful-mine (fŭl'min), v. i. or t.; -mined, -mining. [L. fulminare: see fulminate.] To fulminate; thunder: as, "Orators . . . whose resistless eloquence . . . Shook the arsenal, and fulminated over Greece" (Milton's "Paradise Regained," iv. 270). [Archaic.]

ful-min-ic (fŭl'min'ik), a. [L. fulmen (fulmin-): see fulminate.] Pertaining to detonation.—fulminic acid, in chem., an acid, CNOH, whose salts are extremely explosive.

ful-mi-nous (fŭl'mi-nus), a. [L. fulmen (fulmin-): see fulminate.] Of or like lightning or a thunderbolt.

ful-ness (fŭl'nes), n. See fulness.

ful-some (fŭl'sum or fŭl'-), a. [ME. fulsum; < full + *-some*¹.] Full†; also, plump†; also, surfeiting† or cloying†; also, disgusting†; esp., offensive to good taste, esp. as being excessive; gross, as flattery; also, lustful†; obscene†.—ful-some-ly, adv.—ful-some-ness, n.

ful-vous (fŭl'vus), a. [L. fulvus.] Reddish-yellow; tawny.

fu-ma-role (fŭ-mā-rōl), n. [It. fumaruolo, < L. fumus, smoke, E. fume, n.] A hole, as in a volcano, from which vapor issues.

fu-ma-to-ri-um (fŭ-mā-tō'rī-um), n.; pl. -ria (-rī-ā). [NL., < L. fumare (pp. fumatus), E. fume, v.] A structure in which plants are fumigated, to destroy insects.—fu-ma-to-ry (-tō-rī). I. a. Of or pertaining to smoking. II. n.; pl. -ries (-riz). A place set apart for smoking or fumigating.

fum-ble (fŭm'bl), v.; -bled, -bling. [= D. fommelen = LG. fummeln = Sw. fumla.] I. intr. To feel or grope about clumsily; search awkwardly; also, to stammer; mumble. II. tr. To handle clumsily; catch or stop (a ball) in a clumsy or ineffectual way; also, to utter in a hesitating or indistinct manner.—fum'ble, n. A fumbling.—fum'bler, n.—fum'bling-ly, adv.

fume (fŭm), n. [OF. fum, < L. fumus, smoke, steam, fume.] Smoke (archaic in the general sense); now, esp., a portion or cloud of smoke, esp. odorous smoke (as of incense or tobacco), or smoke of stifling or otherwise powerful (and often useful) properties (now commonly in pl.: cf. fumigate); also, any smoke-like or vaporous exhalation from matter or substances (often in pl.); sometimes, an odorous exhalation, as from flowers; fig., something comparable to an exhalation, as in being unsubstantial or evanescent (as, "Love is a smoke raised with the fume of sighs" = Shakspeare's "Romeo and Juliet," i. 1. 196); also, an irritable or angry mood (as, to be in a fume).—fume, v.; fumed, fuming. [OF. F. fumer, < L. fumare, < fumus.] I. intr. To emit fumes; also, to rise, or pass off, as fumes; fig., to show irritation or anger. II. tr. To treat with fumes; fumigate; also, to burn incense before; also, to send forth as fumes.—fumed, p. a. Darkened or colored by exposure to ammonia fumes, as oak and other wood.

fu-mi-gate (fŭ'mi-gāt), v. t.; -gated, -gating. [L. fumigatus, pp. of fumigare, < fumus, smoke, + agere, drive.] To expose to smoke or fumes, as in coloring wood or in disinfecting; also, to perfume.—fu-mi-ga-tion (-gā'shən), n. The act of fumigating, as in disinfecting; the generation of odorous smoke or fumes, as in magic rites; also, the smoke or fumes generated in fumigating; also, a preparation used for fumigating.—fu-mi-ga-tor, n. One who or that which fumigates; a brazier or pan in which something is burned for the purpose of fumigating or perfuming rooms, etc.—fu-mi-ga-to-ry (-gā-tō-rī). I. a. Serving to fumigate. II. n.; pl. -ries (-riz). A room or apparatus for fumigating.

fum-ing (fŭ'ming), p. a. That fumes.—fum'ing-ly, adv.

fu-mi-to-ry (fŭ'mi-tō-rī), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). [OF. F. fumeterre, < ML. fumus terræ, 'smoke of the earth.'] Any plant of the genus Fumaria, of the poppy family, esp. F. officinalis, a delicate herb with finely dissected leaves and racemes of small purplish flowers.

fu-mous (fŭ'mus), a. [L. fumosus.] Fumy; smoky; in bot., smoke-colored.

fum-y (fŭ'mi), a. Full of fumes; fuming; fume-like.

fun (fun), n. [Prob. < ME. fonnen, be foolish: see fond.] Mirthful sport or diversion; merry amusement; drollery.—figure of fun. See figure, n.—to make fun of, to ridicule.—fun, v. i.; funned, funning. To make fun; joke. [Colloq.]

fu-nam-bu-list (fŭ-nam'bŭ-list), n. [L. funambulus, < funis, rope, + ambulare, walk.] One who performs feats of walking, dancing, etc., on a stretched rope.—fu-nam-bu-lism, n.

func-tion (fungk'shən), n. [F. function (now fonction), < L. functio(n-), < fungi, perform.] The act of performing†; also, action† or behavior†; also, the kind of action or activity proper to a person or thing; office; duty; also, a religious ceremony; any ceremonious public or social gathering or occasion (as, "He . . . set out to attend the last gathering of the season at Valleys House, a function . . . almost perfectly political": Galsworthy's "Patrician," ii. 6); in math., a quantity having a definite value when any special value is given to another quantity to which it is related.—func'tion, v. i. To perform a function, or one's or its functions; act; serve; operate.—func'tion-al, a. Of or pertaining to a function or functions; in biol., having the function or functions usual to the part or organ (as, the functional wings of an insect, those used for flying).—functional disease, a disease in which there is a morbid change in the function of an organ, but no structural alteration in the tissues involved; opposed to organic disease.—func'tion-al-ly, adv.—func'tion-a-ry (-ā-rī), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). One invested with a function or office; an official.—func'tion-ate (-āt), v. i.; -ated, -ating. To fulfil a function; act; operate; function.—func'tion-less, a. Having no function.

fund (fund), n. [= F. fond, bottom, foundation, fonds, land, capital, stock, fund, < L. fundus, bottom, piece of land, estate.] Bottom†; also, foundation†; basis†; also, a store or stock of something, now often of something immaterial (as, a fund of knowledge or experience); esp., a stock of money or pecuniary resources, as for some purpose; pl., money in hand; pecuniary resources; also, pl., with the, the stock of a national debt, considered as a form of investment (as in Great Britain: as, to have money in the funds).—fund, v. t. To put into a fund or store; store up; also, to invest, as in the funds; also, to provide a fund to pay the interest or principal of (debt); hence, to convert (general outstanding debts) into a more or less permanent debt or loan, represented by interest-bearing bonds; also, to provide funds for (a work, etc.); finance.—fund'a-ble, a. That may be funded.

fun-da-ment (fun'da-mənt), n. [OF. F. fondement, < L. fundamentum, < fundare, *E. found*³.] The foundation, as of a building†; also, the buttocks; specif., the anus.—fun-da-men'tal (-men'təl), a. Of or pertaining to the foundation or basis; serving as, or being a component part of, a foundation or basis; basic; underlying; elementary; original; essential.—fundamental unit, in physics, one of the units (esp. those of mass, length, and time) taken as a basis for a system of units.—fun-da-men'tal, n. A leading or primary principle, rule, law, or the like, which serves as the groundwork of a system; an essential part.—fun-da-men'tal-ism, n. The principle of accepting the fundamental teachings of Christianity as beyond question or not subject to criticism. See modernism.—fun-da-men'tal-ist, n. and a.—fun'da-men-tal'i-ty (-tal'i-ti), n. The quality of being fundamental.—fun-da-men'tal-ly, adv.

fun-dus (fun'dus), n. [L.: see fund.] The bottom or foundation; in anat., the base of an organ, or the part opposite to or remote from an aperture.

fu-ner-al (fŭ'ne-rəl), a. [ML. funeralis (as n., neut. pl., funeralia), < L. funus (funer-), funeral.] Of or pertaining to the ceremonial burial (or, sometimes, cremation) of the dead; used, spoken, etc., on such an occasion (as, funeral rites; a funeral sermon).—funeral pile, a pile of wood or other combustible material upon which a dead body is burned.—fun-ner-al, n. The ceremonies connected with the disposition of the body of a dead person; obsequies; also, a funeral procession (as, "A funeral, with plumes and lights And music, went to Camelot": Tennyson's "Lady of Shalott," ii.).

(variable) đ as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; û, F. bonbon; ʹ, primary accent; ˘, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

fu-ner-a-ry (fū-nē-rā-ri), a. [LL. funerarius, < L. funus (funer-), funeral.] Of or pertaining to a funeral or burial: as, a funerary urn.

fu-ne-re-al (fū-nē-rē-āl), a. [L. funereus, < funus (funer-), funeral.] Of or pertaining to a funeral (as, "the sad funereal feast": Pope's tr. Homer's "Odyssey," iv.); appropriate to or suggestive of a funeral (as, funereal garb; funereal gloom); hence, mournful; gloomy; dismal.—fu-ne-re-al-ly, adv.

fu-nest (fū-nest'), a. [L. funestus, < funus, funeral, also death, murder, destruction.] Causing or portending death; deadly; fatal; dire. [Now rare.]

fun-gal (fung'gāl), a. Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a fungus; consisting of fungi.

fun-gi (fun'ji), n. Plural of fungus.

fungi-. Form of L. fungus, mushroom, fungus, used in combination.

fun-gi-ble (fun'ji-bl), [ML. fungibilis, < L. fungi, perform, discharge.] In law: I. a. Of such a nature that one instance or portion may be replaced by another in respect of function, office, or use. II. n. A fungible thing, as money or grain.

fun-gi-cide (fun'ji-sid), n. [See fungi- and -cide.] An agent for destroying fungi.—fun-gi-ci-dal (-si-dāl), a.

fun-gi-form (fun'ji-fōrm), a. [See fungi- and -form.] Having the form of a fungus or mushroom.

fun-giv-o-rous (fun-jiv'ō-rus), a. [See fungi- and -vorous.] Feeding on fungi, as certain insects.

fun-goid (fung'goid), a. [See -oid.] Resembling a fungus; of the nature of a fungus; in pathol., characterized by spongy morbid growths, as certain diseases.

fun-gous (fung'gus), a. [L. fungosus, < fungus, fungus.] Of or pertaining to fungi; of the nature of or resembling a fungus; fig., springing up suddenly like a mushroom, but not enduring; in pathol., fungoid.—fun-gos-i-ty (-gos'i-ti), n.

fun-gus (fung'gus), n.; pl. fungi (-ji) or funguses. [L., mushroom, fungus.]

Any of the Fungi, a group of thallophytes including the mushrooms, molds, mildews, smuts, etc., characterized chiefly by absence of chlorophyll and by subsisting upon dead or living organic matter; in pathol., a spongy morbid growth, as proud flesh formed in a wound.—fun-gus-bee"tle, n. Any of various beetles that feed on fungi, esp. beetles of the family Endomychidae, as Endomychus biguttatus of North America.

Fungus-beetle (Endomychus biguttatus). (Line shows natural size.)

fu-ni-cle (fū'ni-kl), n. [L. funiculus, dim. of funis, rope.]

A small cord, or cord-like part or process; in bot., the stalk of an ovule or seed.—fu-nic-u-lar (fū-nik'ū-lār), a. Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a funicle or funiculus; also, of or pertaining to a rope or cord, or its tension; worked by a rope or the like (as, a funicular railway, one operated by a moving cable; a cable-railroad).—fu-nic-u-lus (-lus), n.; pl. -li (-li). [L.] In bot., a funicle; in anat., the umbilical cord; also, one of the small bundles of fibers that make up the larger nerves.

funk¹ (funk), v. [Cf. OF. funkier, fun-gier, emit smoke, < L. fumigare: see fumigate.] I. tr. To blow smoke upon; annoy with smoke; also, to smoke (a pipe, etc.). II. intr. To smoke: as, "But there my triumph's straw-fire flared and funked" (Browning's "Fra Lippo Lippi").—funk¹, n. A strong and offensive smell, esp. of smoke.

Funicle.—Pod showing funicles, a, a, a.

funk² (funk), v. [Origin uncertain.] I. intr. To shrink or quail in fear. [Colloq.] II. tr. To shrink from; try to shirk; also, to be afraid of; also, to frighten. [Colloq.]—funk², n. Cowering fear; a state of fright or terror (as, to be in a funk, or, more emphatically, a blue funk); also, a coward. [Colloq.]—funk'-hole, n. In soldiers' use, a rough shelter dug in the ground for protection against the enemy's fire; a dugout; hence, a safe situation for one shirking military duty. [Colloq.]—funk'y, a. Shrinking in fear; timid. [Colloq.]

fun-nel (fun'el), n. [ME. funell, prob., through OF., < LL. fundibulum, funnel, < L. fundere, pour.] A cone-shaped utensil with a tube at the apex, for conducting liquids, etc., through a small opening, as into a bottle; also, a flue, tube, or shaft, as for ventilation; a smoke-stack, esp. of a steamship or a locomotive.—fun'neled, fun'nelled, a. Having a funnel or funnels (as, "The red-funnelled tug has gone": Masefield's "Valediction"); also, funnel-shaped.—fun'nel-form, a. Having the form or shape of a funnel.—fun'nel-shaped, a. Shaped like a funnel; of a corolla or a flower, having the form of a tube enlarging gradually upward and expanding widely at the summit.

Funnel-shaped Corolla.

fun-ny (fun'ni), a.; compar. funnier, superl. funniest. Affording fun; amusing; comical; also, curious, strange, or queer (colloq.).—fun'ni-ly, adv.—fun'ni-ness, n.—fun'ny-bone, n. The part of the elbow where the ulnar nerve passes by the internal condyle of the humerus, which when struck causes a peculiar, tingling sensation in the arm and hand; the crazy-bone.

fur (fēr), v. t.; furred, furring. [OF. forrer, furrer (F. fouurer), line, face, orig. encase, < forre, fuerre, case, sheath; from Teut.] To line, face, or trim (a garment, etc.) with fur; clothe (a person) with fur; also, to coat with foul or deposited matter, as the tongue or the inside of a boiler; in building, to apply furring to.—fur, n. [Appar. < fur, v.: 'cf. OF. forreure, fur lining or trimming, F. fouurrure, fur.] The skin of certain animals (as the sable, ermine, beaver, etc.), covered with a fine, soft, thick hairy coating, used for lining or trimming garments or for entire garments; such skins as a material; an article of apparel made of or with this material (usually in pl.); the hairy coating on such a skin; also, fur-bearing animals collectively; also, any of a class of heraldic tinctures representing tufts upon a plain ground, or patches of different colors supposed to be sewed together; also, any coating resembling or suggesting fur, as one of morbid matter on the tongue.

fur-be-low (fēr'be-lō), n. [Var. of falbala.] Orig., a pleated or gathered trimming on a woman's gown or the like; a flounce; hence, any bit of elaborate trimming or showy finery, esp. in women's dress.—fur'be-low, v. t. To ornament with or as with furbelows.

fur-bish (fēr'bish), v. t. [OF. forbir (forbiss-) (F. fourbir), polish, clean; from Teut.] To rub or scour (armor, weapons, etc.) to brightness; polish; burnish; hence, in general, to restore to freshness of appearance or condition (often with up); renovate; revive; brush (up).—fur'bish-er, n.—fur'bish-ment, n.

fur-cate (fēr'kāt), v. i.; -cated, -cating. [L. furca, fork.] To form a fork; divide into branches.—fur'cate, a. Forked.—fur-ca'tion (-kā'shən), n. A forking or branching; also, a branch.

fur-cu-la (fēr'kū-lā), n.; pl. -læ (-lē). [L., dim. of furca, fork.] The forked clavicular bone of a bird; the wish-bone. Also fur'cu-lum (-lum); pl. -la (-lā).

fur-fur (fēr'fēr), n.; pl. fur-fures (-ēz). [L., bran, scurf.] Dandruff; scurf; pl., scales or particles of scurf.—fur-fu-ra-ceous (-fū-rā'shius), a. [LL. furfuraceus.] Bran-like; scaly; scurfy.—fur'fu-ral (-ral), n. [L. furfur, bran, + E. al(dehyde).] In chem., an oily liquid

A, Furcula of a Domestic Fowl. B, Furcula of a Buzzard. — h, median clavicular rudimentary in B.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ru, then; y, you;

aldehyde, $C_6H_4O_2$, with an aromatic odor, obtained by distilling bran, sugar, wood, corncocks, etc., with dilute sulphuric acid, and used in the manufacture of dyes. Also fur'fu-rol (-rol or -röl).

fu-ri-bund (fû'ri-bund), a. [L. furibundus, < furere, rage, rave.] Raging; furious.

fu-ri-ous (fû'ri-us), a. [OF. F. furieux, < L. furiosus, < furia, E. fury.] Full of fury, violent passion, or rage, as a person or animal, temper, action, speech, etc.; also, fiercely vehement or violent, as battle, onslaughts, blows, etc.; in general, intensely violent, as wind, storms, etc.; of unrestrained energy, speed, etc. (as, furious activity; a furious pace or gallop); sometimes, unrestrainedly boisterous (as, the fun grew fast and furious).—fu'ri-ous-ly, adv.—fu'ri-ous-ness, n.

furl (fêrl), v. t. [Prob. a contr. of obs. furdel, var. of obs. fardel, furl, < fardel, a bundle: see fardel.] To draw into a compact roll, as a sail against a spar or a flag against its staff; in general, to draw or fold into small compass (as, to furl an umbrella or a tent; the eagle furls its wings).

fur-la-na (fôr-lä'nä), n. [It.; from the Furlanei or Friuli district in Italy, north of the Adriatic Sea.] A lively Italian dance in sextuple rhythm, common esp. among Venetian gondoliers; also, a piece of music written for, or in the rhythm of, this dance.

fur-long (fêrl'long), n. [AS. furlang, < furh, furrow, + lang, long.] A measure of length equal to the eighth part of a mile (equivalent to 40 rods, 220 yards, or 201.17 meters).

fur-lough (fêrl'lo), n. [D. verlof, leave, furlough: cf. G. verlaub, leave, permission.] Leave of absence, esp. to a soldier.—fur'lough, v. t. To grant a furlough to.

fur-men-ty, fur-me-ty (fêr'men-ti, -mę-ti), n. Same as frumenty.

fur-nace (fêr'näs), n. [OF. fornais, fornaise (F. fournaise), < L. fornax (fornac-), < fornus, furnus, oven.] A structure or apparatus in which to generate and maintain heat, as for melting ores, baking pottery, heating houses, etc.; fig., a place of severe trial (as, "the furnace of affliction": Isa. xlviii. 10); also, a place of burning heat.—fur'nace, v. t.; -naced, -nacing. To subject to the heat of a furnace; also, to emit like a furnace (as, "He furnaces The thick sighs from him": Shakspeare's "Cymbeline," i. 6. 66).

fur-nish (fêr'nish), v. t. [OF. furnir (furniss-) (F. fournir), accomplish, complete, supply, furnish; from Teut., and akin to E. frame and from.] To accomplish or perform, as an undertaking; also, to provide or supply with something specified, usually something necessary, useful, appropriate, or desired (as, to furnish one with money, food, information, or an excuse; to furnish a boat with oars; to furnish a cane with a ferrule); also, to provide or supply with what is necessary or proper; now, esp., to fit up (a house, room, etc.) with necessary appliances, esp. furniture; formerly, to equip with dress, harness, trappings, etc., as a person or a horse; fit out, as a ship; also, to serve for supplying, fitting up, etc. (sometimes formerly with forth: as, "The funeral baked meats Did coldly furnish forth the marriage tables," Shakspeare's "Hamlet," i. 2. 181); also, to provide or supply (something), as for use or consideration (as, to furnish money to one for a special purpose; to furnish heat for tenants; to furnish proof or an instance of something); give, afford, or yield.—fur'nish-er, n.—fur'nish-ing, n. The act of one who or that which furnishes; also, that with which anything is furnished; esp., pl., fittings, appliances, articles of furniture, etc., for a house or room; accessories of dress (as, to deal in gentlemen's furnishings).—fur'nish-ment, n. The act of furnishing, or the state of being furnished; also, that which is furnished; pl., supplies.

fur-ni-ture (fêr-ni-tür), n. [F. fourniture, < fournir, furnish: see furnish.] The act of furnishing, or the state of being furnished; also, that with which anything is furnished; equipment; outfit; harness, trappings, etc., of a horse or other animal; fittings, apparatus, or necessary accessories for something; specif., the movable articles, as tables, chairs, bedsteads, desks, cabinets, etc., required for use or ornament in a house, office, or the like; in printing, pieces of wood or metal, less than type-high, set in and about pages of type to fill them out and hold the type in place.

fu-ror (fû'rör), n. [L., < furere, rage, rave.] Fury; rage; madness; also, inspired frenzy (as, the poetic furor); also, a prevailing mania or craze for something; a general outburst of enthusiasm or excitement.

fu-ro-re (fö-rö'rä), n. [It., < L. furor: see furor.] A furor, as of enthusiasm or excitement.

furred (fêrd), p. a. Made with or of fur, as garments; clad in fur or furs, as persons; covered with or having fur, as animals; also, coated with morbid matter, as the tongue; in building, furnished with furring.

fur-ri-er (fur'i-ër), n. A dealer in or dresser of furs.—fur'-ri-er-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). The business or trade of a furrier; also, furs in general.

fur-ring (fêr'ing), n. The act of lining, trimming, or clothing with fur, or the fur used; also, the formation of a coating of matter on something, as on the tongue or the inside of a boiler; in building, the nailing on of thin strips of board, as to furnish a level surface for lathing or plastering, to provide air-space between a wall and plastering, etc.; the strips thus nailed on.

fur-row (fûr'ö), n. [AS. furh = D. voor = G. furche, furrow, = Icel. for, drain.] A narrow trench made in the ground, esp. by a plow; hence, a narrow, trench-like depression in any surface (as, the furrows between waves of the sea; the furrows of a wrinkled face); a long, narrow hollow; a groove or channel.—fur'row, v. i. tr. To make a furrow or furrows in; plow (land, etc.); cleave (the sea, etc.); make wrinkles in (the face, etc.); groove; also, to hollow out (a way) as by a furrow. II. intr. To make a furrow or furrows.—fur'row-er, n.—fur'row-less, a. Without furrows.—fur'row-y, a. Full of furrows; furrowed.

fur-ry (fêr'i), a. Consisting of or resembling fur; made of or with fur; wearing fur; covered with fur.

fur-seal (fêr'sêl), n. Any of various species of eared seal, as Callorhinus ursinus ('northern fur-seal'), which have under the outer hair a thick coat of fur, of great commercial value; distinguished from hair-seal.

fürst (fürst), n.; pl. fürsten (fürst'-en). [G.: see first.] In German use, a nobleman ranking below a herzog and above a graf: the word is commonly represented in English by prince.

Northern Fur-seal (Callorhinus ursinus).

fur-ther (fêr'thēr), adv. compar. [AS. furthor, compar. of fore, before, E. fore.] At or to a more advanced point; to a greater extent; also, at or to a greater distance; farther; also, in addition; moreover.—fur'ther, a. compar. [AS. furthra.] More extended; additional; more; also, more distant or remote; farther.—fur'ther, v. t. [AS. fyrrthrian.] To help forward (a work, undertaking, cause, etc.); promote; advance; forward; also, to help or assist (a person).—fur'ther-ance, n. The act of furthering; promotion; advancement.—fur'ther-er, n.—fur'ther-more, adv. Moreover; besides; in addition.—fur'ther-most, a. superl. Most distant or remote.

fur-thest (fêr'thēst), adv. and a. [ME.; formed to correspond to further.] Superl. of further.

fur-tive (fêr'tiv), a. [L. furtivus, < furtum, theft, < fur, thief.] Obtained by theft, or stolen; also, thieving or thievish; more commonly, fig., taken, done, used, etc., by stealth, or in the manner of one wishing to escape observation (as, a furtive glance, movement, or effort); surreptitious; clandestine; secret; also, showing or suggesting a wish to escape observation (as, a furtive manner; "That furtive mien, that scowling eye . . . The traitor Judas," M. Arnold's "St. Brandan").—fur'tive-ly, adv.—fur'tive-ness, n.

fu-run-cle (fû'rung-kl), n. [L. furunculus, a petty thief, a boil, dim. of fur, thief.] A boil, or inflammatory sore.—fu-run-cu-lar (fû-rung-kû-lär), a.—fu-run-cu-lo'sis (-lō'sis), n. [NL.] In pathol., the morbid state characterized by the presence of furuncles.

fu-ry (fū'ri), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). [OF. F. furie, < L. furia, < furere, rage, rave.] Frenzied or unrestrainedly violent passion, esp. anger; rage; a fit of rage; also, frenzied or fierce vehemence or violence in action (as, the fury of battle); a course or period of fierce violence (as, the Spanish Fury at Antwerp in 1576, characterized by wholesale plundering, burning, and massacre by Spanish soldiery); in general, intense violence, as of wind, storms, waves, fire, disease, etc.; unrestrained energy, speed, etc. (as, to work with fury); also, the frenzy of one supernaturally possessed or inspired (as, "A sibyl . . . In her prophetic fury sew'd the work": Shakspeare's "Othello," iii. 4. 72); [cap.] one of the avenging deities of classical mythology (in female form, with serpents twined in their hair), in later accounts three in number and called Alecto, Megæra, and Tisiphone; [l. c.] any avenging spirit, or minister of vengeance; also, a fierce and violent person, esp. a woman; a termagant; a virago.

furze (férz), n. [AS. fyrz.] Any plant of the fabaceous genus Ulex, esp. U. europæus, a low, much-branched, spiny shrub with yellow flowers, common on waste lands in Europe; gorse; whin.—furz'y, a. Of or pertaining to furze; overgrown with furze (as, "the furzy hills of Braid": Scott's "Marmion," iv. 23).

fu-sain (fū-zān), n. [F., spindle-tree, charcoal made from its wood, < L. fusus, spindle.] A fine charcoal used in drawing, made from the wood of the spindle-tree; also, a drawing made with it.

fus-ces-cent (fu-ses'ent), a. Somewhat fuscous.

fus-cous (fus'kus), a. [L. fuscus.] Of a dark color; dusky; brown tinged with gray.

fuse¹ (fūz), v.; fused, fusing. [L. fusus, pp. of fundere, pour, melt, cast.] I. tr. To reduce (metals, minerals, or other solids) to a liquid state by heat; liquefy; melt; also, to combine or blend by melting together (as, to fuse rocks together; to fuse the various ingredients into glass); fig., to unite or blend into a whole as if by melting together.

II. intr. To become liquid under the action of heat; melt; fig., to become united or blended as if by melting together.

fuse² (fūz), n. [Also fuze; It. fuso, < L. fusus, spindle.] A tube, ribbon, or the like, filled or saturated with combustible matter, for igniting an explosive; a mechanical device for the same purpose, as for exploding projectiles, etc. (in military use spelled fuze); also, a piece of fusible metal in an electric circuit, which melts, and thus interrupts the circuit, when the current exceeds safety.

fu-see (fū-zē'), n. [F. fusée, < ML. fusata, spindleful, orig. pp. fem. of fusare, work with a spindle, < L. fusus, spindle.] A conical pulley or wheel; esp., a device in a clock or watch for counteracting the diminishing power of the uncoiling mainspring, consisting essentially of a spirally grooved conical pulley wound with a chain or cord whose other end winds round the barrel containing the mainspring; also, a fuse; a kind of match with a large head, for igniting by friction; a kind of firework, usually a tube filled with combustible matter, lighted on a railroad as a signal.

fu-se-lage (fū-zē-lāj), n. [F., < fuselé, spindle-shaped, < fuseau, < L. fusus, spindle.] The framework of the body of a flying-machine or aeroplane.

fu-sel-oil (fū-zēl-oil'), n. [G. fusel, inferior liquor or spirits.] An acrid, oily, poisonous liquid consisting chiefly of amyl alcohol, often obtained as a by-product in the manufacture of spirits.

fu-si-ble (fū'zi-bl), a. [OF. F. fusible, < L. fundere: see *fuse*¹.] Capable of being fused or melted.—fusible metal or alloy, any of various alloys, as one of bismuth, lead, and tin, which melt at comparatively low temperatures, and hence can be used for making various safety devices, such as a plug which melts when a certain temperature is reached.—fu-si-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-ti), n.

fu-si-form (fū'si-fōrm), a. [L. fusus, spindle: see -form.] Spindle-shaped; rounded, and tapering from the middle toward each end, as some roots.

fu-sil', a. See fusile.

fu-sil² (fū'zil), n. [F. fusil, OF. foisil, steel for striking fire with flint, < ML. focus, fire, L. hearth.] A light flint-lock musket.

fu-sile (fū'zil), a. [L. fusilis, < fundere: see *fuse*¹.] Capable of being fused; fusible; also, fused or molten (as, "fusile gold": Pope's tr. Homer's "Odyssey," vi.); also, made by fusing; founded or cast, as type. [Archaic.]

fu-si-lier (fū'zi-lēr'), n. [F.] Orig., a soldier armed with a fusil: a term still used (without reference to weapons) in the names of certain British regiments.

fu-sil-lade (fū'zi-lād'), n. [F., < fusiller, shoot, < fusil: see *fusil*².] A simultaneous or continuous discharge of firearms; a wholesale execution by this means; fig., a general discharge or outpouring of anything.—fu-sil-lade', v. t.; -laded, -lading. To attack or shoot by a fusillade.

fu-sion (fū'zhon), n. [L. fusio(-n-), < fundere: see *fuse*¹.] The act of fusing, or the state of being fused; a melting, or a melting together; the uniting or blending of various elements into a whole as if by melting together; also, something formed by or resulting from fusing; in politics, the coalition of parties or factions; the body or group resulting from such coalition.—fu'sion-ism, n. In politics, the principle, policy, or practice of fusion.—fu'sion-ist, n. In politics, one who advocates or supports a coalition of parties or factions.

fuss (fus), n. [Origin uncertain: cf. fuzz.] An excessive display of anxious activity (as, "The king and queen meant to treat this fuss about the national finance as a terrible bore": H. G. Wells's "Outline of History," xxxvii. § 8); needless or useless bustle; to-do; also, a disturbance or commotion; a 'rumpus'; also, a person given to fussing.—fuss, v. I. intr. To make a fuss; make much ado about trifles; busy one's self in an anxious way, with little effect; move restlessly (about, in and out, etc.); fidget; worry; also, to pay complimentary attentions to a girl (college slang, U. S.). II. tr. To put into a fuss; disturb with trifles; bother; worry; also, to pay complimentary attentions to (college slang, U. S.).—fuss'=budge'^{et}, n. A fussy or fidgety person. [Colloq.]-fuss'er, n.—fuss'y, a.; compar. fussier, superl. fussiest. Given to fuss; excessively busy about trifles; anxious or particular about petty details; also, full of petty details; of clothes, etc., elaborately made or trimmed.—fuss'i-ly, adv.—fuss'i-ness, n.

fust (fust), n. [OF. fust (F. fût), cask, wood, < L. fustis, cudgel.] A wine-cask; also, mold, or a moldy or strong smell (obs. or prov.).—fust, v. i. To become or smell moldy or musty. See Shakspeare's "Hamlet," iv. 4. 39. [Obs. or prov.]

fus-ta-nel-la (fus-tā-nel'ä), n. [A dim. form prob. < It. fustagno, fustian.] A kind of skirt or kilt of white cotton or linen, very full and stiffened, worn by men in modern Greece.

fus-tian (fus'chan). [OF. fustagne (F. futaine); said to be named from Fostat (old Cairo), Egypt.] I. n. Formerly, a stout fabric of cotton and flax; now, a stout twilled cotton fabric with a short nap or pile; fig., inflated or turgid language in writing or speaking; bombast; rant; claptrap. II. a. Made of fustian; fig., pompous or bombastic, as language; also, worthless.

fus-tic (fus'tik), n. [F. and Sp. fustoc, < Ar. fustuq, akin to Gr. πιστάκη, pistachio-tree; from Pers.] The wood of a large moraceous tree, Chlorophora tinctoria, of tropical America, yielding a light-yellow dye; the tree itself, or the dye; also, any of several other dyewoods.

fus-ti-gate (fus'ti-gāt), v. t.; -gated, -gating. [LL. fustigatus, pp. of fustigare, < L. fustis, cudgel.] To cudgel; beat.—fus-ti-ga'tion (-gā'shon), n.—fus-ti-ga-tor, n.

fust-y (fus'ti), a.; compar. fustier, superl. fustiest. [See fust.] Moldy; musty; having a stale smell; stuffy; also, old-fashioned; foggyish.—fust'i-ly, adv.—fust'i-ness, n.

fu-thorc (fū'thōrk), n. [So called from the first six letters, equivalent to f, u, th, o, r, c.] The runic alphabet.

fu-til (fū'til, Brit. often -tē), a. [L. inutilis, untrustworthy, vain, lit. 'that easily pours out,' related to fundere, pour.] Addicted to talking; also, incapable of producing any result; ineffective; useless; vain; trifling or frivolous.—fu-til-ly, adv.—fu-til-ness, n.—fu-til-i-ty (fū'til'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). Disposition to talk or tattle; also,

Furze (Ulex europæus).

fat, fāte, fār, fāll, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ȳ, then; y, you;

the quality of being futile (as, "The chief characteristic of her existence seemed to be a tragic futility": Arnold Bennett's "Clayhanger," iv. 9); ineffectiveness; uselessness; frivolousness; also, something futile.

fut-tock (fut'ok), n. [Said to be for foot-hook.] Naut., one of the curved timbers which form the middle sections of a compound rib in a ship.—fu'tock=plates, n. pl. Naut., iron plates at the top of a lower mast, to which are secured the deadeyes of the topmast rigging and into which are fastened the upper ends of the futtock-shrouds; also, similar plates at the top of a topmast.—fu'tock=shrouds, n. pl. Naut., the short iron rods extending downward from the futtock-plates to an iron band on the mast.

Futtock-shrouds.

fu-ture (fū'tūr). [OF. F. futur, < L. futurus, future participle of esse, be.] I. a. That is to be or come hereafter (as, future events; a future king; at some future day); also, pertaining to or connected with time to come (as, one's future prospects; "future hopes," Shakspeare's "Two Gentlemen of Verona," i. 1. 50); in gram., relating to or expressing action or being in time to come (as, the future tense). II. n. Future time; also, what will exist or happen in future time; future condition, as of a person, institution, etc.; often, a future condition of success or prosperity; a prospect of future betterment or prosperity; also, goods or stocks purchased or sold for future receipt or delivery, or a purchase or sale on such terms (usually in pl.); in gram., the future tense, or a verb-form in it.—fu'ture-less, a. Without a future; having no prospect of future betterment or prosperity.—fu'ture-per'fect. In gram.: I. a. Denoting an action or state viewed as completed before a given future time: as, the future-perfect tense. II. n. The future-perfect tense; a verb-form in this tense, as Latin amavero, 'I shall have loved.'—fu'tur-ism, n. A recent doctrine or movement (orig. Italian) requiring complete abandonment of traditional usage and reconstruction of art and life on the basis of the present and the future: having reference esp. to painting, literature, and music. Cf. post-impressionism.—fu'tur-ist, n. An advocate of futurism.—fu-tur-is'tic, a.—fu-tu-ri-ty (fū-tū'ri-ti), n.; pl. ties (-tiz). The state of being future; also, future time; also, what will exist or happen in the future; future state or condition; a future event.—futurity race, a race, as for horses, to be run long after the entries are made.—futurity stakes, the stakes in a futurity race.

fuze, fu-zee (fūz, fū-zē'). See *fuse*², fusee.

fuzz (fuz), n. [Origin uncertain.] Loose, light fibrous or fluffy matter; a mass or coating of such matter.—fuzz, v. I. intr. To form, or take on, fuzz; become fuzzy. II. tr. To form into or cover with fuzz; make fuzzy.—fuzz-ball, n. A puffball.—fuzz'y, a.; compar. fuzzier, superl. fuzziest. Of the nature of or resembling fuzz; covered with fuzz.—fuzz'i-ly, adv.—fuzz'i-ness, n.

-fy. [F. -fier, prop. < L. -ficare, verb suffix (orig. through -ficus, adj. suffix: see -fic), < facere, do, make; but used also, like E. -fy, to form verbs directly from L. facere.] A verb suffix meaning 'to make,' 'render,' or 'convert into,' or 'to be made,' or 'become,' as in acetyfy, beatify, deify, indemnify, liquefy, rarefy, speechify, terrify.

fyke¹ (fik), v. and n. See fike.

fyke² (fik), n. [D. fuik.] A bag-shaped net for catching fish.
fyl-fot (fil'fot), n. [A word of doubtful meaning found once in a late ME. manuscript.] Same as swastika.

fytte (fit), n. See *fit*³.

G

G, g (jē); pl. G's, g's (jēz). A consonant, the 7th letter of the English alphabet.

gab¹ (gab), v. i.; gabb, gabbing. [Appar. imit.: cf. OF. gaber and Icel. gabba, mock.] To talk idly or much; chatter. [Colloq.]—gab², n. Idle talk; chatter; also, fluent or glib speech (as, "We knew well enough that he had the gift of the gab": Godwin's "Caleb Williams," iv.). [Colloq.]

gab² (gab), n. [Var. of *gab*².] The mouth. See Burns's "Jolly Beggars," 23. [Sc.]

gab³ (gab), n. [Origin obscure.] In mech., a hook, esp. on the rod transmitting the motion of an eccentric.

gab-ar-dine, gab-er-dine (gab-är-dēn', -ēr-dēn'), n. [Sp. gabardina or OF. gavardine, galvardine; origin uncertain.] A man's long, loose cloak or frock, formerly worn distinctively by Jews (as, "You . . . spit upon my Jewish gaberdine": Shakspeare's "Merchant of Venice," i. 3. 113); also, a closely woven woolen fabric with fine diagonal ribs on the face; a fabric of like weave made of some other fiber, as cotton.

gab-bart (gab'ärt), n. [F. gabare, < Pr. gabarra.] A barge or lighter, esp. for inland navigation. [Sc.]

gab-ble (gab'bl), v.; -bled, -bling. [Imit.: cf. *gab*¹.] I. intr. To talk rapidly and unintelligently or foolishly; jabber; of geese, etc., to cackle (as, "the noisy geese that gabbled o'er the pool": Goldsmith's "Deserted Village," 119). II. tr. To utter rapidly and unintelligently.—gab'ble, n. Rapid, unintelligent talk; senseless chatter; also, inarticulate chatter, as of birds.—gab'bler, n.

gab-bro (gab'rō), n.; pl. gabbros (-rōz). [It.] Any one of a particular class of granular igneous rocks.

gab-by (gab'by), a. Full of gab; loquacious. [Colloq.]

ga-belle (gä-bel'), n. [F.; prob. akin to E. *gavel*².] A tax; an excise; esp., in France before the Revolution, a tax on salt.

gab-or-dine (gab-är-dēn'), n. See gabardine.

gab-er-lun-zie (gab-är-lun'zi or -lün'yi), n. [Origin uncertain.] A beggar; a mendicant. [Sc.]

ga-bi-on (gä'bi-on), n. [F. gabion, < It. gabbione, aug. of gabbia, < L. cavea, E. cage.] A cylinder of wickerwork filled with earth, used as a military defense; also, a similar cylinder filled with stones and sunk in water, as in laying the foundations of a dam or jetty.—ga'bi-on-ade' (-g-nād'), n. [F. gabionnade.] A work formed of or with gabions.—ga'bi-oned, a. Furnished with gabions.

Part of Trench, with A. Fascines, and B. Gabions.

ga-ble (gä'bl), n. [OF. gable; cf. Icel. gafl, gable, OHG.

Ornamental Gable of the South Transept Door of Notre Dame, Paris; 13th century.

gabala, G. gabel, fork.] The end of a ridged roof which at its extremity is not hipped or returned on itself but cut off in a vertical plane, together with the triangular expanse of wall from the level of the eaves to the apex; a similar end, as of a gambrel-roof, not of triangular shape; an architectural member resembling the triangular end of a roof, as an ornamental structure over a doorway (see cut on preceding page); also, an end-wall with a gable; a gable-end.—ga'ble, v. t.; -bled, -bling. To build with a gable or gables; form as a gable: chiefly in gabled, pp.—ga'ble=end', n. An end-wall with a gable.—ga'ble=roof', n. A ridged roof terminating at one or both ends in a gable.—ga'-blet, n. A small gable or gable-like architectural ornament.—ga'ble=win'dow, n. A window in or under a gable; a window having its upper part shaped like a gable.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ˆ, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

Gablet. — From a buttress of York Minster, England.

ga-by (gā'bi), n.; pl. -bies (-biz). [Origin uncertain.] A simpleton; a fool: as, "She is still whimpering after that gaby of a husband" (Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," lxvii.). [Colloq.]

gad¹ (gad), n. A minced form of God: often used interjectionally, as a mild oath.

gad² (gad), n. [= Icel. gaddr, spike, = Goth. gazds, sting; akin to E. yard².] A pointed bar or rod; a spike; a goad for driving cattle; a thick, pointed nail; a pointed mining tool for breaking up rock, coal, etc.—gad², v. t.; gadd-ed, gadding. To break up with a mining gad.

gad³ (gad), v. i.; gadd-ed, gadding. [Origin uncertain.] To move restlessly or idly about; go about in pursuit of amusement or excitement; ramble or wander (sometimes fig.); sometimes, to straggle in growth (as, "Now gads the wild vine o'er the pathless ascent": Wordsworth's "Fort Fuentes").—gad³, n. The act of gadding (as, always on the gad); also, a gadabout.—gad'a-bout', n. One given to gadding about.

gad-bee (gad'bē), n. A gadfly.

gad-der (gad'ēr), n. One who gads; a gadabout.

gad-fly (gad'fli), n.; pl. -flies (-fiz). [See gad².] A fly that goads or stings domestic animals; esp., some member of the family Tabanidæ, the females of which have a piercing proboscis and suck the blood of horses, cattle, etc.

gadg-et (gaj'et), n. [Origin obscure.] A contrivance, device, or 'contraption'; any ingenious article or interesting object or trifle; a gimcrack. [Colloq.]

Ga-dhel-ic (ga-del'ik). [Ir. Gaidheal, Gael. Gaidheal, E. Gael.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the branch of the Celtic race comprising the Irish, the Gaels of Scotland, and the Manx of the Isle of Man: distinguished from Cymric.

II. n. The group of dialects or languages spoken by the Gadhelic Celts.

ga-doid (gā'doid). [NL. gadus, cod, < Gr. γάδος, kind of fish: see -oid.] I. a. Resembling a cod; belonging to the Gadidæ, a family of soft-finned fishes including the cod, haddock, pollack, etc. II. n. A gadoid fish.

gad-o-lin-i-a (gad-ō-lin'i-ä), n. [NL., < gadolinium.] Oxide of gadolinium.

gad-o-lin-ite (gad'ō-lin-it), n. [From J. Gadolin (1760-1852), Finnish chemist.] A silicate mineral containing iron, yttrium, cerium, beryllium, etc.

gad-o-lin-i-um (gad-ō-lin'i-um), n. [NL.: see gadolinite.] Chem. sym., Gd; at. wt., 157.3. A rare metallic element found associated with yttrium.

ga-droon (gā-drōn'), etc. Same as godroon, etc.

Mining Gads, fastened together for convenience in carrying.

Gadfly (Tabanus ruficornis), natural size.

gad-wall (gad'wāl), n. [Origin unknown.] A fresh-water wild duck, Chaulelasmus streperus, much esteemed for the table; also, some allied species.

gad-zooks (gad'zōks'), interj. [See gad¹; second element uncertain.] An emphatic expletive of indefinite meaning. [Archaic.]

gae (gā), v. i.; pret. gaed, pp. gaen, ppr. gaeing. Scotch form of go.

Gaek-war (gik'wār), n. [Marathi gāek-wār, lit. 'cowherd.'] The title of the ruler of Baroda, a native state of western India.

Gael (gāl), n. [Gael. Gaidheal = Ir. Gaedheal.] A Scottish Celt or Highlander; also, an Irish Celt; also, any Gadhelic Celt.—Gael-ic (gā'lik). I. a. Pertaining to the Gaels of the Scottish Highlands, or to their language; also, Irish; also, Gadhelic. II. n. The Celtic language of the Highlanders of Scotland; Erse; also, Irish; also, Gadhelic.

gaff¹ (gaf), n. [OF. F. gaffe, boat-hook.] A strong hook with a handle, used for landing large fish; also, a barbed fish-spear; also, a metal spur for a game-cock; naut., the spar extending the upper edge of a fore-and-aft sail.—gaff¹, v. t. To hook or land with a gaff.

gaff² (gaf), n. [Origin unknown.] A cheap place of amusement; a theater or music-hall of the lowest class. [Slang, Eng.]

gaff³ (gaf), n. [Origin obscure: cf. gaff¹.] The hardship, suffering, or strain occasioned by something: chiefly in the phrase 'to stand the gaff.' [Slang.]

gaff⁴ (gaf), n. [Origin obscure; appar. first in rogues' slang.] A word occurring in the phrase 'to blow the gaff,' to disclose or betray the secret, reveal the plot, or inform on others. [Slang.]

gaff-er (gaf'ēr), n. [Also formerly gaffar; appar. a contr. of grandfather.] A rustic title or term for an old man (as, "the only son of Gaffar and Gammer Andrews," Fielding's "Joseph Andrews," i. 2: cf. gammer); also, a master, or employer of labor (now prov. Eng.); an overseer or foreman (Eng.).

gaff-ile (gaf'l), n. [Prob. < D. gaffel = G. gabel, fork: cf. gale.] A lever for bending a crossbow; also, an artificial spur for a game-cock.

gaff-top-sail (gaf'top'sāl, naut. -sl), n. Naut., a light triangular or quadrilateral sail set above a gaff, by which its foot is extended; also, in ichth., a sea catfish, Felichthys felis, of the Atlantic and Gulf coasts of the U. S. (so called from the elevated dorsal fin).

gag (gag), v.; gagged, gagging. [Prob. imit. of the sound made in choking.] I. tr. To stop up the mouth of (a person) with something, so as to prevent speech; hence, to silence, as by force or authority (as, "The time was not yet come when eloquence was to be gagged": Macaulay's "Essays," Machiavelli); also, to choke up (a valve, etc.); also, to fasten open the jaws of, as in surgical operations; also, to cause to heave with nausea; also, to introduce interpola-

Gadwall (Chaulelasmus streperus).

G. Gaff.

Gaff-top-sail.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒ, then; y, you;

tions into (a stage part, etc.: slang); also, to ply with talk, false stories, etc., or take in by such means (slang). II. intr. To heave with nausea; also, to introduce interpolations or gags in acting (slang); also, to play on one's credulity by false stories, etc. (slang).—gag, n. Something thrust into the mouth to prevent speech (also fig.); a surgical device for distending the jaws; also, an interpolation introduced by an actor into his part (slang); also, a joke (slang); a hoax (slang).

gag¹ (gāj), n. [OF. gage, gaue, wage (F. gage), pledge, security; from Teut.: see wage.] A pledge or pawn; security; also, something, as a glove, thrown down in token of challenge to combat; hence, a challenge.—gag¹, v. t.; gaged, gaging. [OF. gagier (F. gager).] To pledge, stake, or wager (archaic: as, "And 'gainst an oaken bough I'll gage my silver wand of state," Scott's "Lord of the Isles," ii. 7); also, to engage†.

gag² (gāj), n. [Named about 1725 from Sir W. Gage.] A name given to several varieties of plum: as, the green gage; the golden gage.

gag³, gauge (gāj), n. [OF. gaue, jaue (F. jaue); origin uncertain.] A standard of measure; a standard dimension, quantity, or amount; in general, measure; extent or capacity; specif., the distance between the rails of a railroad (as, standard gauge, 4 feet 8½ inches; broad gauge, or narrow gauge, a gauge greater, or less, than standard gauge); the distance between the opposite wheels of a vehicle; also, the exposed part or length of a shingle or tile; also, the depth to which a loaded vessel sinks in the water; also, the position of one ship with reference to another and to the wind (as, to have the weather-gauge of a ship, to be to the windward of it; to have the lee-gauge); also, any of various instruments for determining, testing, or adjusting dimensions, capacity, force, or the like; in joinery, a tool for marking lines parallel to an edge.—gag³, gauge, v. t.; gaged, gauged, gaging, gauging. [OF. gaugier, jaugier (F. jauger).] To measure, as with a gauge; to determine the dimensions, capacity, quantity, or force of; hence, to appraise, estimate, or judge (as, "But I bar to-night: you shall not gauge me By what we do to-night": Shakspeare's "Merchant of Venice," ii. 2. 208); also, to make conformable to a standard; in sewing, to gather in parallel rows.—gag³a-ble, gauge'a-ble, a. That may be gaged.—ga-gor, gau-ger (gā'jēr), n. One who or that which gages; esp., an officer who ascertains the contents of casks, etc.; an exciseman.

gag-ger (gag'ēr), n. One who gags.

gag-gle (gag'li), v. i.; -gled, -gling. [Imit.] To utter the cry of a goose; cackle.—gag-gle, n. A flock of geese; also, gagging; cackle.

gag-law, gag-rule (gag'lā, -röl), n. A law or rule made and enforced for the purpose of preventing or restricting discussion or expression of opinion, as in a deliberative body.

gahn-ite (gān'it), n. [From J. G. Gahn (1745–1818), Swedish chemist.] A dark-colored mineral containing aluminium and zinc.

gai-e-ty, gay-e-ty (gā'e-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [F. gaieté, gaiété.] The state of being gay or cheerful; gay spirits; cheerful liveliness; also, merrymaking or festivity (often in pl.); also, showiness; finery.

Gaik-war (gik'wār), n. See Gaekwar.

gail-lar-di-a (gā-lār-di-ä), n. [NL.; named from M. Gaillard de Marentonneau.] Any plant of the American asteraceous genus Gaillardia, several species of which are cultivated for their showy flowers with yellow, purple, or variegated rays.

gai-ly, gay-ly (gā'li), adv. In a gay manner; cheerfully or merrily; brightly or showily.

gain¹ (gān), a. [Icel. gegn.] Straight or direct; convenient or advantageous; handy or skilful; active; graceful. [Now Sc. and prov. Eng.]

gain² (gān), n. [Origin uncertain.] A mortise; a groove or notch, as in a timber.—gain², v. t. To make a gain or gains in; also, to unite or fasten by a gain or gains, as timbers; mortise.

gain³ (gān), v. [OF. gaignier, waignier (F. gagner), gain, from an OHG. verb meaning 'to pasture, hunt for food,' < OHG. weida (G. weide), pasture, hunting, = AS. wāth, Icel. veidhr, hunting.] I. tr. To obtain as a profit or advantage; succeed in getting; win; also, to attain or reach by effort (as, "Now spurs the lated traveller apace To gain the timely inn": Shakspeare's "Macbeth," iii. 3. 7); also, to win over to one's friendship or purposes (as, "To come, with presents laden, from the port, To gratify the queen, and gain the court": Dryden's tr. Virgil's "Æneid," i. 953); also, to make an increase of (as, the clock gains a minute a day). II. intr. To profit; benefit; also, to improve; make progress.—to gain on or upon, to encroach gradually on (as, "oceans daily gaining on the land": Tennyson's "Golden Year," 29); also, to win favor or influence with (as, "Such a one . . . gains upon you, not by a fulsome way of commending you . . . but liking whatever you propose or utter": Steele in "Tatler," 208); also, to advance nearer to (a person or thing pursued).—gain³, n. [OF. F. gain.] Profit or advantage; esp., pecuniary profit, or, pl., sums constituting profit; also, an increase or advance; also, a gaining or winning.—gain'a-ble, a. That may be gained.
gaine (gān), n. [F., < L. vagina, sheath.] The lower part of a sculptured figure, below the bust or the head, having the appearance of a quadrangular sheath inclosing the body and contracting toward the feet; also, a kind of pedestal of the same general shape, for holding a statuette or other ornamental object.

gain-er (gā'nēr), n. One who or that which gains.

gain-ful (gān'fūl), a. Profitable; lucrative.—gain'ful-ly, adv.—gain'ful-ness, n.

gain-giv-ing (gān'giv'ing), n. [Cf. gain in gainsay.] A misgiving. See Shakspeare's "Hamlet," v. 2. 226. [Obs. or archaic.] gain-less (gān'les), a. Without gain; unprofitable; useless.

gain-ly (gān'li), a. [See gain¹.] Proper, becoming, or suitable (now Sc. and prov. Eng.); also, graceful, shapely, or comely. Cf. ungainly.—gain'li-ness, n.

gain-say (gān'sā'), v. t.; -said (-sād' or -sed'), also -sayed (-sād'), -saying. [ME., for againsay, lit. 'say against': see again and say³.] To deny; contradict; dispute; also, to oppose; act against.—gain'say, n. A gainsaying; contradiction: as, "He . . . was the umpire in all disputes . . . giving his decisions with an air and tone admitting of no gainsay or appeal" (Irving's "Sketch-Book," Sleepy Hollow).—gain'say'er, n.

gainst, 'gainst (genst), prep. Against. [Poetic.]

gair-ish (gār'ish), etc. See garish, etc.

gait (gāt), n. [Scotch and north. Eng. spelling of gate² in various senses, but current in general literary use only in the following.] Manner of going, walking, or stepping: as, a slow gait; a limping gait; the various gaits of a horse.

—gait'ed, a. Having a gait: as, slow-gaited; "heavy-gaited oxen" (Parkman's "Oregon Trail," vi.).

gai-ter (gā'tēr), n. [F. guêtre; origin unknown.] A covering of cloth, leather, etc., for the ankle and instep, and sometimes also the lower leg, worn over the shoe, etc.; also, a cloth or leather shoe with elastic insertions at the sides.—gai'tered, a. Wearing gaiters.

ga-la (gā'lā). [F., < It. gala, festal pomp, finery; akin to E. gallant.] I. n. Festal pomp or dress; festivity; also, a festive occasion. II. a. Festive; festal.

ga-lac-ta-gogue (ga-lak'tā-gog). [Gr. γάλα (γαλακ-), milk, + ἀγωγός, leading, < ἄγω, lead.] I. a. Promoting the flow or secretion of milk; galactopoietic. II. n. A galactagogue agent or medicine.

ga-lac-tic (ga-lak'tik), a. [Gr. γαλακτικός, < γάλα (γαλακ-), milk, akin to L. lac (lact-), milk: cf. lacteal.] Of, pertaining to, or obtained from milk; also, in astron., pertaining to the Galaxy.

Gaine.— Renaissance sculpture: Maison de Pierre, Toulouse, France.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

galacto-. Form of Gr. γάλα (γαλακτ-), milk, used in combination.—gal-ac-tom-e-ter (gal-ak-tom'e-tēr), n. [See -meter.] An instrument for determining the richness of milk by its specific gravity.—gal-ac-toph'o-rous (-tof'ō-rus), a. [See -phorous.] Conveying or producing milk.—ga-lac-to-poi-et-ic (gā-lak'tō-poi-et'ik). [$\div$ Gr. ποιεῖν, make.] I. a. Producing milk; increasing the secretion of milk; galactagogue. II. n. A galactopoietic agent or medicine.—ga-lac-tor-rhe'a, ga-lac-tor-rhœ'a (-tō-rē'ā), n. [NL. (Gr. ροία, a flow, < ρεῖν, flow).] In pathol., an excessive flow of milk.

ga-la-go (gā-lā'gō), n.; pl. -gos (-gōz). [NL.; from native African name.] Any lemur of the African genus Galago and allied genera.

Thick-tailed Galago (G. crassicaudatus).

of the ginger family, esp. of China and the East Indies; also, any sedge of the genus Cyperus, esp. C. longus, an English plant with aromatic roots.

gal-an-tine (gal'an-tin or -tēn), n. [OF. F. galantine, earlier galatine; origin uncertain.] A kind of sauce for fish, etc.; also, veal, chicken, or other white meat boned, tied up, boiled, and served cold with its own jelly.

gal-an-ty-show (gā-lan'ti-shō), n. [Cf. It. galante, galant.] A miniature pantomime produced by throwing shadows of puppets on a wall or screen.

gal-a-te-a (gal-ā-tē'ā), n. [From the Galatea, a vessel in the British navy.] A stout striped cotton fabric used for clothing.

Ga-la-tian (gā-lā'shan). I. a. Of or pertaining to Galatia, an ancient inland division of Asia Minor, or its inhabitants. II. n. A native or inhabitant of Galatia; pl., the book of the New Testament called in full "The Epistle of Paul the Apostle to the Galatians."

gal-a-vant (gal-ā-vant'), v. i. See gallivant.

ga-lax (gā'laks), n. [NL., < Gr. γάλα (γαλακτ-), milk; so called from the white flowers.] An evergreen herb, Galax aphylla, of southeastern U. S., with a raceme of small white flowers.

Gal-ax-y (gā'lak-si), n. [F. galaxie, < LL. galaxias, < Gr. γαλαξίας, < γάλα (γαλακτ-), milk.] The Milky Way (as, "The galaxy, that milky way, Which nightly, as a circling zone, thou seest Powder'd with stars"; Milton's "Paradise Lost," vii. 579); hence [l. c.; pl. galaxies (-siz)], any brilliant or splendid assemblage, as of persons.

gal-ba-num (gal'bā-num), n. [L.; prob. from Heb.] A gum-resin with a peculiar disagreeable odor, obtained esp. from certain Asiatic plants of the apiaceous genus Ferula: used in medicine and the arts. See Ex. xxx. 34.

gale¹ (gāl), n. [Origin uncertain.] A strong wind, esp. one between a stiff breeze and a tempest; also, a breeze (poetic: as, "Wanton gales along the valleys play," Wm. Collins's "Oriental Eclogues," i. 15); fig., a noisy fit or outburst of laughter or the like (colloq.).

gale² (gāl), n. [AS. gagel = D. and G. gagel.] A shrub, Myrica gale, with a pleasant aromatic odor, growing in marshy places; often called sweet-gale.

gale³ (gāl), n. [Prob. a contr. of *gavel*².] A periodical payment of rent, interest, or the like; the amount paid.

ga-le-a (gā'lē-ā), n.; pl. galeæ (-ē). [L., helmet.] In zool., bot., etc., a helmet-like part.—ga'le-ate, ga'le-at-ed (-āt, -ā-ted), a. [L. galeatus, pp. of galeare, cover with a helmet, < galea.] Having a galea (as, the galeated curassow, of the South American genus Pauxi, having a horny protuberance on the head); also, helmet-shaped.—ga'le-i-form (-i-fōrm), a. Helmet-shaped.

Ga-len (gā'lēn), n. [From Galen, the Greek physician (born about A.D. 130).] A physician. See Shakspeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," ii. 3. 29.

ga-le-na (gā-lē'nā), n. [L., lead ore.] Native lead sulphide: a valuable ore of lead.—ga-len'ic¹ (-lē'n'ik), a. Pertaining to or containing galena.

Ga-len-ic² (gā-lē'n'ik), a. Of or pertaining to Galen, the celebrated Greek physician, or his principles or methods. Also Ga-len'i-cal.

ga-le-nite (gā-lē'nit), n. Same as galena.

ga-let (gā'let), n. [Gr. γαλέν, weasel.] Same as foussa.

Ga-li-cian¹ (gā-lī'shan). I. a. Of or pertaining to Galicia, a district of northwestern Spain, or its inhabitants or their language. II. n. A native or inhabitant of Galicia; also, the language of the Galicians, a dialect of Portuguese.

Ga-li-cian² (gā-lī'shan). I. a. Of or pertaining to Galicia, a region of central Europe north of the Carpathian Mountains, or its inhabitants. II. n. A native or inhabitant of Galicia, esp. a member of one of the indigenous Slavic (Polish and Ruthenian) peoples of this region, speaking their native Slavic tongues.

gal-i-dic-tis (gal-i-dik'tis), n. [NL., < Gr. γαλιδεις, young weasel, + ικτις, kind of marten.] Any of the carnivorous viverrine quadrupeds of the genus Galidictis, of Madagascar.

Gal-i-læ-an (gal-i-lē'an), a. and n. See *Galilean*¹.

Gal-i-læ-an¹ (gal-i-lē'an). I. a. Of or pertaining to Galilee, the northernmost division of Palestine in the time of Christ. II. n. A native or inhabitant of Galilee, as Jesus Christ ('the Galilean'); hence, a Christian.

Gal-i-læ-an² (gal-i-lē'an), a. Of or pertaining to Galileo Galilei (1564-1642), the celebrated Italian physicist and astronomer.

gal-i-lee (gal'i-lē), n. [OF. galilee, < ML. Galilæa, a galilee, orig. (L.) the province of Galilee: said to refer to the "Galilee of the Gentiles" in Mat. iv. 15.] A chapel or porch at the entrance of some medieval churches.

gal-i-ma-tias (gal-i-mā'shi-as or -mat'i-as), n. [F.; origin unknown: cf. gallimaufry.] Confused or unintelligible talk; gibberish.

gal-in-gale (gal'in-gāl), n. See galangal.

gal-i-ot, gal-li-ot (gal'i-ōt), n. [OF. F. galiote, < OF. galie, E. galley.] A small galley propelled by both sails and oars; also, a kind of Dutch cargo vessel.

gal-i-pot (gal'i-pot), n. [F. galipot; origin unknown.] A kind of turpentine which concretes on the stem of certain species of pine.

gall¹ (gāl), n. [AS. gealla = D. gal = G. galle = Icel. gall; akin to L. fel, Gr. γολή, gall, bile.] Bile, esp. that of the ox; also, the gall-bladder; fig., something very bitter or severe; also, bitterness of spirit; rancor; also, impudence or effrontery (slang).

Galeated Curassow.

Galidictis (G. striata).

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

gall² (gál), n. [AS. gealla, perhaps = gealla, E. *gall*¹.] A sore on the skin, esp. of a horse, due to rubbing; an excoriation; fig., something irritating or exasperating; a state of irritation; also, a bare spot; a spot of ground from which the soil has been washed away or which is unfit for cultivation (southern U. S.); an imperfection, blemish, or flaw. — gall², v. I. tr. To make sore by rubbing; also, to impair the surface of by rubbing; fig., to vex or irritate (as, "The sarcasms of the King soon galled the sensitive temper of the poet [Voltaire]"; Macaulay's "Essays," Frederic the Great); harass or annoy (as, "Where bowmen might in ambush wait . . . To gall an entering foe": Scott's "Lord of the Isles," i. 29). II. intr. To become chafed; also, to make galling or irritating remarks† (see Shakspeare's "Henry V.," v. 1. 78).

gall³ (gál), n. [OF. F. galle, < L. galla.] Any abnormal vegetable growth or excrescence developed on plants by the action of certain parasites, esp. insects; esp., a nut-like excrescence on the oak due to certain insects of the hymenopterous genus Cynips, yielding tannin, and used in dyeing and medicine.

gal-lant (gal'-ánt). [OF. F. galant, ppr. of OF. galer, be gay, make merry, connected with gale, gaiety, festivity, = It. gala, E. gala.]

I. a. Gay or showy, as in dress; also, splendid or fine; stately (as, "a gallant bark from Albion's coast": Cowper's "My Mother's Picture," 88); also, brave, high-spirited, or chivalrous (as, a gallant soldier; gallant conduct); also (pron. gal'-ánt or ga-lant'), polite and attentive to women; courtly; sometimes, amorous; erotic. II. n. A gay, dashing person, now always of the male sex; a man of fashion; sometimes, a man of spirit or mettle; also (pron. gal'-ánt or ga-lant'), a man particularly attentive to women; also, a suitor or lover; sometimes, a paramour. — gal'-lant, v. I. tr. To make gallant or fine; also (pron. ga-lant'), to play the gallant to; escort with courtly attentions. II. intr. (Pron. ga-lant'). To play the gallant. — gal'-lant-ly, adv. — gal'-lant-ness, n. — gal'-lant-ry, n.; pl. -ries (-riz). [F. galanterie.] Gay or fine appearance; finery; also, dashing courage; heroic bravery; sometimes, a gallant deed; also, the conduct of a gallant; gallant or courtly attention to women; a polite or courtly action or speech; sometimes, amorous intrigue; also, gallants collectively†; fashionable people†.

gal-lan-ty-show (ga-lan'ti-shō), n. See galanty-show.

gal-late (gal'át), n. In chem., a salt of gallic acid.

gall-blad-der (gál'blad'ér), n. The sac which receives the gall or bile from the liver.

gal-le-ass, gal-li-ass (gal'ē-as, -i-as), n. [OF. galeace, galice, < It. galeazza, aug. of galea, < ML. galea, E. galley.] A kind of large galley or ship formerly used in war.

gal-le-on (gal'ē-on), n. [Sp. galeón, < ML. galeo(n), < galea, E. galley.] A kind of large ship, usually with several decks, formerly used by the Spaniards and others: as, "three very great galleons, or Spanish ships, from the south seas" (Defoe's "Captain Singleton," xiv.).

gal-le-ry (gal'ē-ri), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). [OF. F. galerie, < ML. galeria; origin unknown.] A covered walk or promenade; a piazza or portico; a veranda; also, a raised platform or passageway along the outside or inside of the wall of a building; a balcony; specif., a balcony-like structure or platform at the stern or quarters of ships of the older type; also, a platform projecting from the interior walls of a church, theater, or the like, to provide seats or room for a part of the audience; specif., the highest of such platforms in a theater; also, the occupants of a gallery, esp. in a theater; hence, the less refined or cultured part of the public; also, any body of spectators or auditors, as the spectators of a golf-match; also, a long narrow apartment; a corridor; often, a room or building devoted to the exhibition of works of art; a collection of such works for exhibition; also, a room or building in which to take photographs, practise shooting, etc.; also, a passageway made or dug by an animal; in fort., an underground or covered passage; in mining, a level or drift; also, in jewelry, a setting having the sides perforated. — gallery gods, those who occupy seats in the gallery of a theater. [Colloq.] — to play to the gallery, to address one's self to those in the gallery, as an actor; hence, to seek popular applause or favor. — gal'-le-ry, v. t.; -ried, -rying. To provide with a gallery; dispose like a gallery. — gal'-le-ry-ite, n. One who occupies a seat in a gallery, as of a theater. [Colloq.]

gal-ley (gal'i), n.; pl. galleys (-iz). [OF. galie (F. galée), < ML. galea, < MGr. γαλέα; origin unknown.] An early form of sea-going vessel propelled by oars or by oars and sails; also, a state or pleasure barge; also, a large rowboat; also, the kitchen of a ship, or its stove or range; in printing, a long, narrow tray, usually of metal, for holding type which has been set; also, a galley-proof. — gal'-ley-proof, n. In printing, a proof taken from type on a galley. — gal'-ley=slave, n. A person condemned to work at the oar on a galley. Also fig. — gal'-ley-worm, n. A myriapod: so called from its resemblance to a many-oared vessel.

Printers' Galley.

gall-fly (gál'fli), n.; pl. -flies (-fiz). An insect, esp. of the hymenopterous genus Cynips, that causes galls on oaks, etc.

gal-liard (gal'yárd). [OF. F. gaillard; origin uncertain.] I. a. Sturdy, hardy, or valiant; also, lively or gay. [Archaic.] II. n. A galliard fellow (archaic); also, a spirited dance in triple rhythm, common in the 16th and 17th centuries; a piece of music written for, or in the rhythm of, this dance. — gal-liar-dise (gal'yár-dis), n. [F. gaillardise.] Gaiety, merriment, or revelry; also, a merry trick, or joke (as, "My budget bursteth sure with this! This were a crowning galliardise For king himself to tell in hall": Leigh Hunt's "Palfrey," v.). [Archaic.] gal-li-ass, n. See galleass.

gal-lic¹ (gal'ik), a. Pertaining to or derived from galls (vegetable growths): as, gallic acid (used esp. in making ink).

gal-lic² (gal'ik), a. Of or pertaining to gallium.

Gal-lic³ (gal'ik), a. [L. Gallicus, < Gallus, a Gaul.] Of or pertaining to the Gauls or Gaul (see Gaul); hence, of or pertaining to the French or France; French. — Gal-li-can (gal'i-kān), a. Gallic; hence, French; specif., eccles., noting or pertaining to the Roman Catholic Church in France; esp., noting or pertaining to a school or party of French Roman Catholics advocating a restriction of the papal authority in favor of the authority of general councils and of the bishops and temporal rulers (cf. ultramontane). — Gal'-li-cè (-sè), adv. [L., in the Gallic language.] In French. — Gal'-li-cism (-sizm), n. A French usage or idiom; also, the use of French idioms or expressions. — Gal'-li-cize (-siz), v. t. or i.; -cized, -cizing. To make or become Gallic; conform to French usage.

gal-li-gas-kins (gal-i-gas'kinz), n. pl. [Corruption of obs. F. garguesques, for garguesques, < It. Grechesco, Greek.] A kind of loose hose or breeches worn in the 16th and 17th centuries; hence, loose breeches in general; also, leggings or gaiters.

gal-li-mau-fry (gal-i-mâ'fri), n.; pl. -fries (-friz). [F., a ragout made of remnants; origin unknown.] A ragout or hash of various ingredients (obs. or prov. Eng.); hence, any heterogeneous mixture; a hodgepodge; a jumble; a confused medley.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n̄, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ", secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

gal-li-na-cean (gal-i-nā'shian). I. a. Gallinaceous. II. n. A gallinaceous bird.

gal-li-na-ceous (gal-i-nā'shius), a. [L. gallinaceus, < L. gallina, hen.] Belonging to or resembling the domestic fowls; belonging to the group or order Gallinaceæ, which includes the common poultry, also pheasants, grouse, partridges, etc.

gall-ing (gā'ling), p. a. That galls; chafing; irritating; distressing. — gall'ing-ly, adv. — gall'ing-ness, n.

gal-li-nip-per (gal'i-nip-ēr), n. [Origin obscure.] A large mosquito. [U. S.]

gall-in-sect (gāl'in'sekt), n. Any insect which causes galls, as a gall-fly.

gal-li-nule (gal'i-nūl), n. [NL. Gallinula, the typical genus, L. gallinula, chicken, dim. of gallina, hen.] Any of certain long-toed aquatic birds of the rail family, as Gallinula galeata ('Florida gallinule'), or G. chloropus, the moor-hen of Europe.

gal'li-ot, n. See galiot.

gal-li-pot¹ (gal'-i-pot), n. [Perhaps < galley + pot (as if brought or imported in galleys).] A small glazed pot used by apothecaries for holding medicines, etc.

gal'li-pot², n. See galipot.

gal-li-um (gal'i-um), n. [NL., < L. gallus, cock, tr. F. coq. from the name of the discoverer, Lecoq de Boisbaudran.] Chem. sym., Ga; at. wt., 69.9; sp. gr., 5.935. A rare, bluish-white, highly fusible metallic element.

gal-li-vant (gal-i-vant'), v. i. [Perhaps a humorous variation of gallant.] To gad about in a gay or frivolous manner.

gal-li-wasp (gal'i-wosp), n. [Origin uncertain.] A lizard, Celestus occiduus, about a foot long, found in the West Indies and Central America; also, a fish, Synodus fætens, of the Atlantic coast of North America, having a scaly lizard-like head.

gal-lize (gal'iz), v. t.; -lized, -lizing. [From L. Gall, who developed the process.] In wine-making, to add water and sugar to (the unfermented grape-juice) in order to increase the quantity of the wine produced. — gal-li-za-tion (gal-i-zā'shion), n.

gall-nut (gāl'nūt), n. Same as *gall*³.

Gal-lo- (gal'ō-). Form of L. Gallus, a Gaul, used in combination, often in the sense of 'French,' as in Gallo-American, Gallo-Celtic.

gal-lo-glass (gal'ō-glās), n. See gallowglass.

Gal-lo-ma-ni-a (gal-ō-mā'ni-ā), n. [See Gallo-.] A mania or passion for what is French. — Gal-lo-ma'ni-ac (-ak), n.

gal-lon (gal'ōn), n. [OF. galon, jalon, = ML. galo(n)-: cf. OF. jalle (F. jale), large bowl, jalaie, measure for wine, etc.] A dry or, esp., liquid measure of capacity containing 4 quarts, the liquid measure being equivalent in the U. S. to 231 cubic inches (old English 'wine-gallon'), and in Great Britain to 277.274 cubic inches ('imperial gallon'). See liquid measure, under liquid, a.; apothecaries' measure, under apothecary; and dry measure, under dry, a.

gal-loon (ga-lōn'), n. [F. galon, < galonner, trim with galloon, orig. adorn (the head or hair) with bands or ribbons; origin uncertain.] A braid or band-like trimming of worsted, silk, tinsel, gold or silver, etc. — gal-looned', a. Trimmed with galloon.

gal-loot (ga-lōt'), n. See galoot.

gal-lop (gal'ōp), v. [OF. galoper, waloper (F. galoper); from Teut.: cf. *wallop*¹.] I. intr. To move or run by leaps, as a horse; go at a gallop; hence, to ride at a gallop, or at full speed; in general, to go fast, as a person on foot, the pulse, the tongue, or time (see Shakspeare's "As You Like It," iii. 2. 329, 344); race; hurry (through, over, etc.)

in reading, reciting, etc. II. tr. To cause (a horse, etc.) to gallop; also, to drive or convey at a gallop; also, to traverse at a gallop† (as, "The golden sun . . . Gallops the zodiac in his glistening coach": Shakspeare's "Titus Andronicus," ii. 1. 7). — gal'lop, n. [OF. F. galop: cf. galop.] A fast gait of the horse (or other quadruped) in which in the course of each stride all four feet are off the ground at once; a run or ride at this gait; in general, a rapid rate of going, or a course of going at a rapid rate.

gal-lop-ade (gal-ō-pād'), n. [F. galopade, < galoper: see gallop.] A sidelong or curvetting kind of gallop; also, a sprightly kind of dance, or the music for it; a galop. — gal-lop-ade', v. i.; -aded, -ading. To dance a gallopade.

gal-lop-er (gal'ōp-ēr), n. An animal or a person that gallops.

Gal-lo-phil, Gal-lo-phile (gal'ō-fil), n. [See Gallo- and -phil.] A friend or admirer of the French; a Francophil.

Gal-lo-phobe (gal'ō-fōb), n. [See Gallo- and -phobe.] One who fears or hates the French, or French influences, tendencies, etc. — Gal-lo-pho'bi-a (-fō'bi-ā), n. [See -phobia.] Fear or hatred of the French.

gal-lop-ing (gal'ōp-ing), p. a. That gallops; going at a gallop; making rapid progress (as, galloping consumption).

gal-low (gal'ō), v. t. [Var. of gally.] To frighten. See Shakspeare's "King Lear," iii. 2. 44. [Now prov. Eng.]

Gal-lo-way (gal'ō-wā), n. One of a breed of small, strong horses first raised in Galloway, Scotland; hence, a small horse; also, one of a breed of hornless cattle peculiar to Galloway.

gal-low-glass, gal-lo-glass (gal'ō-glās), n. [Ir. galloglach, < gall, foreigner, + oglach, youth, servant, soldier.] A soldier or armed retainer of a chief in ancient Ireland or Scotland. See Shakspeare's "2 Henry VI," iv. 9. 26.

gal-lows (gal'ōz), n.; pl. gallowses or gallows. [AS. galga, gealga, = D. galg = G. galgen = Icel. gālgi, gallows, = Goth. galga, cross.] A wooden frame, consisting commonly of a cross-beam on two uprights, on which condemned persons are executed by hanging; hence, any similar structure, as for suspending or supporting something or for use in gymnastic exercise; pl., suspenders (now prov. or colloq.); also, sing., a gallows-bird or rascal (now prov. Eng.: see Shakspeare's "Love's Labour's Lost," v. 2. 12). — gal'lows, I. a. Fit for the gallows; villainous or rascally; hence, mischievous or wild, as children; spirited or smart; fine; great (as, a gallows lot of anything). [Prov. or slang.] II. adv. Extremely; exceedingly; very. [Prov. or slang.]

— gal'lows=bird, n. A person who deserves to be hanged. [Colloq.] — gal'lows=bitts, n. pl. Navut., a frame on the deck of a ship for supporting spare topmasts, etc. — gal'lows=tree, n. A gallows (for hanging). [Archaic.]

gal-lstone (gāl'stōn), n. A calculus or concretion formed in the gall-bladder; a biliary calculus.

gal-lus (gal'us), n., a., and adv. Prov. form of gallows.

gal-ly (gal'i), v. t.; -lied, -lying. [Cf. AS. āgælwān, alarm.] To frighten or scare (as, "He [a whale] was frightened, or 'gallied,' as they call it": H. Melville's "Omoo," xix.); also, to frighten away. [Now chiefly prov. or in whaling.]

gal-ly-gas'kins, n. pl. See galligaskins.

ga-loche (ga-losh'), n. See galosh.

ga-loot (ga-lōt'), n. [Origin obscure.] A fellow: often used in good-natured depreciation. [Slang.]

gal-op (gal'ōp), n. [F., = E. gallop, n.] A kind of lively round dance in duple time; also, a piece of music for, or in the rhythm of, this dance.

ga-lore (ga-lōr'). [Ir. go leor, Gael. gu leor, to sufficiency.] I. adv. In abundance. II. n. Abundance or plenty.

ga-losh (ga-losh'), n. [OF. F. galoche, prob., through L., < Gr. καλόπους, shoemaker's last, < κάλον, wood, + πούς, foot.] Formerly, a kind of patten or clog; now, an overshoe or rubber (usually in pl.).

galt (gālt), n. See gault.

ga-lumph (ga-lumf'), v. i. [Coined by C. L. Dodgson ("Lewis Carroll"), possibly < gallop + triumph, in "Through the Looking-Glass" (1871).] To gallop, prance, or go as in triumph. [Humorous.]

Florida Gallinule.

Gallows-bitts.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, arđent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; y, you;

gal-van-ic (gal-van'ik), a. [See galvanism.] Of, pertaining to, or produced by galvanism; voltaic; also, affecting or affected as if by galvanism.—galvanic battery, a voltaic battery (see battery).—galvanic pile. See *pile*², n.—gal-van'i-cal-ly, adv.

gal-va-nism (gal'vā-nizm), n. [From L. Galvani (1737–98), Italian physician, discoverer of galvanism.] Current electricity, esp. as produced by chemical action; the science treating of this; in med., the application of the ordinary voltaic or battery current (in distinction from that produced by an induction-coil, static apparatus, etc.) to the body, for therapeutic purposes.—gal'va-nist, n. One versed in galvanism.—gal'va-ni-za'tion (-ni-zā'shən), n. The act of galvanizing, or the state of being galvanized.—gal'-va-nize (-niz), v. t.; -nized, -nizing. To subject to galvanism; stimulate by or as by a galvanic current; also, to plate, as with gold, by means of galvanic electricity; by extension, to coat (iron) with zinc.—gal'va-niz-er (-ni-zēr), n.

galvano-. Form of galvanic or galvanism used in combination.—gal-va-no-cau-ter-y (gal'vā-nō-kā'tēr-i), n.; pl. -ies (-iz). A cautery heated by a galvanic current; also, cauterization by such means.—gal'va-no-cau'ter-i-za'tion (-i-zā'shən), n.—gal-va-nog'ra-phy (-nog'ra-fi), n. [+-graphy.] A process for producing by electrical deposition plates which can be printed from in the same way as etched copper plates.—gal-va-nom'e-ter (-nom'e-tēr), n. [+-meter.] An instrument for determining the strength, presence, or direction of an electric current.—gal'va-no-met'ric (-met'rik), a.—gal-va-nom'e-try, n.—gal'va-no-plas'ty (-plas'ti), n. [+-plasty.] The process of coating things with metal by means of electrolysis; esp., electrolytypy.—gal'va-no-plas'tic, a.—gal'va-no-scope (-skōp), n. [+-scope.] An instrument for detecting the existence and direction of an electric current.—gal'va-no-scop'ic (-skōp'ik), a.—gal-va-nos'-co-py (-nos'kō-pi), n.

gam (gam), n. [Origin obscure.] In whalers' speech, a herd or school of whales; also, a social meeting, visit, or the like, as between vessels at sea.—gam, v.; gammed, gammings. I. intr. In whalers' speech, to herd together or form a school, as whales; also, to have a social gam. II. tr. In whalers' speech, to have a social gam with.

ga-ma-grass (gä'mä-gräs), n. [Cf. grama.] A tall, stout grass, Tripsacum dactyloides, one of the largest grasses in the United States, used for fodder.

ga-mash-es (ga-mash'ez), n. pl. [F. gamaches; from Sp. and prob. Ar.] A kind of leggings or gaiters worn for protection against mud and wet. [Archaic or prov.]

gam-bade (gam-bād'), n. [F.: see gambol.] A leap, as of a horse; hence, a caper, prank, or frolic; a freakish action. Also gam-ba'do¹ (-bā'dō); pl. -dos or -does (-dōz).

gam-ba-do² (gam-bā'dō), n.; pl. -dos or -does (-dōz). [It. gamba, leg; see gambol.] One of a pair of large boots or gaiters fixed to a saddle instead of stirrups; hence, any long gaiter or legging.

gam-be-son (gam'bē-son), n. [OF. gambeson, wambizon; from Teut., and akin to E.

Gama-grass. — 1, the plant; 2, the spikes; 3, lower part of the spikes, showing male and female spikelets; a, a male spikelet; b, a female spikelet.

Gambeson (about 1375).

womb.] A medieval military garment of leather or cloth, sometimes padded, worn orig. under the haubergeon but later as the principal garment of defense.

gam-bier, gam-bir (gam'bēr), n. [Malay gambir.] An astringent extract obtained from the leaves and young shoots of Ouroouparia gambir, a tropical Asiatic rubiaceous shrub: used in medicine, dyeing, tanning, etc.

gam-bist (gam'bist), n. A player on the viola da gamba.

gam-bit (gam'bit), n. [It. gambetto, lit. 'a tripping up the legs,' < gamba, leg; see gambol.] In chess, a method of opening in which the player seeks by the sacrifice of a pawn or piece to obtain some advantage.

gam-ble (gam'bl), v.; -bled, -bling. [Prob. from a var. of ME. gamenen, < AS. gamenian, play, < gamen, E. *game*².]

I. intr. To play at any game of chance for stakes; hence, in general, to stake or risk money, or anything of value, on the issue of something involving chance or unknown contingencies (as, to gamble on the result of a race; to gamble in stocks). II. tr. To stake, as on the issue of a game; also, to squander (away) on games or matters of chance.

—gam'ble, n. An act or process of gambling; a venture in or as in gambling; hence, any matter or thing involving risk or uncertainty. [Chiefly colloq.]—gam'bler, n. One who gambles, esp. habitually or professionally.—gam'-bling, n. The act or practice of one who gambles; the playing of games of chance for stakes; the staking or risking of money or anything of value on a matter of chance or uncertainty.—gam'bling-house, n. A house in which gambling is carried on as a business.

gam-boge (gam-bōj' or -bōj'), n. [From Camboja, Cambodia, in Indo-China.] A gum-resin from various trees of the clusiaceous genus Garcinia, esp. G. hanburii, native in Cambodia, Siam, etc.: used as a yellow pigment and also medicinally as a cathartic.

gam-bol (gam'bol), n. [Earlier gambold, gambald, < F. gambade, a leap, < It. gambata, a kick, < gamba, leg, < LL. gamba, hoof.] A leap, spring, or skip, as in dancing or sport; a frolicsome movement; also, a skipping or frisking about; a frolic.

—gam'bol, v. i.; -boled or -balled, -boling or -bolling. To leap or skip about, as in dancing or sport; frisk; frolic.

gam-brel (gam'brel), n. [OF. gamberel, butcher's gambrel; origin uncertain.] A bent piece of wood or iron used by butchers to extend and hang a carcass on; also, the hock of an animal, esp. of a horse; also, a gambrel-roof.—gam'brel-roof, n. A roof whose ends are cut off in a vertical plane, and whose sides have two slopes (likened to a horse's gambrel), the lower one being the steeper.—gam'brel-roofed, a.

game¹ (gām), a. [Origin uncertain.] Lame, as a leg or arm: as, "Once I had a game leg, and then I went limping" (J. H. Newman's "Callista," iv.). [Colloq.]

game² (gām). [AS. gamen = OHG. and Icel. gaman, amusement, sport.] I. n. Fun, sport, or jest (now chiefly in 'to make game of,' to make fun of, or ridicule); also, an Orououparia gambir, the source of Gambier. — a, corolla laid open; b, calyx-tube laid open, showing the style and stigma; c, fruit with persistent calyx.

Garcinia hanburii, a source of Gamboge.

amusement or pastime (as, children's games; the game of blindman's-buff); often, a diversion in the form of a trial of chance, skill, or endurance, conducted according to set rules (as, card-games; the game of roulette; the game of chess, of billiards, or of golf; the game of baseball, of handball, or of football); also, the apparatus employed in playing any of certain games (as, a store selling toys and games); also, a single contest at play, or a definite portion of play in a particular game (as, to go to see a baseball-game; to play a rubber of three games at whist); the state of such a contest at a particular time, as indicated by the score (as, the game was two to one in the ninth inning); also, a particular manner of playing a game (as, he plays a good game; to be off one's game); also, the number of points required to win a game (as, in handball the game is 21 points); also, the highest count for cards taken in certain card-games, giving the player having it one or more points in the score; the ten of trumps in certain card-games; in fig. use, a proceeding carried on like a game (as, to play a waiting game; the game of diplomacy); a person's plan of action; a trick or dodge; also, amorous sport† (see Shakspere's "Troilus and Cressida," iv. 5. 63); also, the sport of hunting†; the chase†; also, the animal or animals pursued in the chase; fig., any object of pursuit, attack, etc. (as, "Widows are . . . the great game of your fortune-hunters": Addison, in "Spectator," 311); also, wild animals, including birds and fishes (cf. game-bird and game-fish), such as are hunted or taken for sport or profit; the flesh of wild animals, including game-birds, used for food; sometimes, a game-fowl or game-cock; also, fighting spirit, or pluck; also, a flock or herd of animals, now esp. swans, kept for pleasure. II. a.; compar. gamer, superl. gamest. Of or pertaining to animals hunted or taken as game; also, having the fighting spirit of a game-cock; plucky; courageous; also, having the spirit or will (for or to do something: colloq.).—game², v.; gamed, gaming. I. intr. To play, sport, or jest (now prov. Eng.); also, to play games, esp. games of chance for stakes; gamble. II. tr. To squander (away) in gaming: as, to game away one's patrimony.

game-bird (gām'bērd), n. A bird hunted for sport or profit, or protected by law.

game-cock (gām'kok), n. A cock bred and trained for fighting, or one of a fighting breed.

game-fish (gām'fish), n. A fish, esp. a food-fish, capable of affording sport to the angler in its capture.

game-fowl (gām'fowl), n. A fowl of any species regarded as game, or the object of hunting; also, a domestic fowl of a breed much used for fighting.

game-keep-er (gām'kē'pēr), n. A person employed as on an estate, to take care of game, prevent poaching, etc.

game-law (gām'lā), n. A law enacted for the preservation of game (wild animals, birds, and fishes), as by restricting the seasons and the manner of taking.

game-less (gām'les), a. Destitute of game, as a region.

game-ly (gām'li), adv. In a game or plucky manner.—game'-ness, n.

game-some (gām'sum), a. Full of play; sportive; frolicsome: as, "a hearty, jocund, rubicund, gamesome wag" (Irving's "Knickerbocker's New York," vii. 4).—game'-some-ly, adv.—game'some-ness, n.

game-ster (gām'stēr), n. One who plays at games, esp. at games of chance for stakes; a gambler; also, a frolicsome person† (see Shakspere's "Henry VIII.," i. 4. 45); also, a lewd person†.

gam-e-tal (gam'ē-tāl), a. In biol., pertaining to, or having the character of, a gamete; reproductive; generative.

gam-e-tan-gi-um (gam-ē-tan'ji-um), n.; pl. -gia (-ji-ā). [NL., < Gr. γαμετή, wife, γαμέτης, husband, + ἀγγεῖον, vessel.] In bot., an organ or body producing gametes.

gam-ete (gam'ēt or ga-mēt'), n. [Gr. γαμετή, wife, γαμέτης, husband, < γαμεῖν, marry, < γάμος, marriage.] In biol., either of the two germ-cells which unite to form a new organism.—ga-met-ic (ga-met'ik), a.—gam-e-to-phore (gam'ē-tō-fōr or ga-mē'-), n. [See -phore.] In bot., a part or structure producing gametes.—gam-e-to-phyte (gam'ē-tō-fit or ga-mē'-), n. [See -phyte.] In bot., the sexual form of a plant in the alternation of generations: opposed to sporophyte.

gam-ic (gam'ik), a. [Gr. γαμικός, of or for marriage, < γάμος, marriage.] In biol., sexual: opposed to agam-ic.

gam-in (gam'in, F. gā-mān), n. [F.; origin uncertain.] A neglected boy left to run about the streets; a street Arab.—ga-mine (gā-mēn), n. [F.] Fem. of gamin.—ga-mine-rie (gā-mēn-rē), n. [F.] The spirit, action, or language of a gamin.

gam-ing (gā'ming), n. The act or practice of one who games; the playing of games of chance for stakes; gambling.—gam'ing-house, n. A gambling-house.

gam-ma (gam'ā), n. [Gr. γάμμα.] The third letter (Γ, γ, = English G, g) of the Greek alphabet; the third of any series (esp. in scientific classification).—gamma rays. See under *ray*³, n.

gam-ma-di-on (ga-mā'di-on), n.; pl. -dia (-di-ā). [MGr. γαμμαδιον, γαμματίον, dim. of Gr. γάμμα, gamma.] An ornamental figure consisting of combinations of the Greek capital gamma, esp. in the form of a swastika or fylfot, or of a voided Greek cross.

gam-mer (gam'ēr), n. [Appar. a contr. of grandmother.] A rustic title or term for an old woman: as, "Gammer Gurton's Needle" (the title of a celebrated English comedy, published in 1575, the authorship of which has been attributed to several different persons, latterly to a certain William Stevenson). Cf. gaffer.

gam-mon¹ (gam'on), n. [Appar. < ME. and AS. gamen, E. game.] The game of backgammon; also, in this game, a victory in which the winner throws off all his men before his opponent throws off any.—gam'mon¹, v. t. In backgammon, to win a gammon over.

gam-mon² (gam'on), n. [Origin obscure: cf. gammon¹.] Deceitful nonsense; humbug; bosh. [Colloq.]—gam'mon², v. I. intr. To talk gammon; also, to make pretense. [Colloq.] II. tr. To ply with or deceive by gammon; humbug. [Colloq.]

gam-mon³ (gam'on), n. [OF. gambon, jambon (F. jambon), < gambe, jambe, leg, < LL. gamba, hoof.] The haunch or ham of a swine†; also, a smoked or cured ham; also, the lower end of a side of bacon.—gam'mon³, v. t. To cure by salting and smoking; make into bacon.

gam-mon⁴ (gam'on), v. t. [Origin unknown.] Naut., to fasten (a bowsprit) to the stem of a ship.

gam-mon-er (gam'on-ēr), n. One who gammons.

gam-mon-ing (gam'on-ing), n. Naut., the arrangement of ropes, chains, or iron bands serving to gammon a bowsprit.

gamo- Form of Gr. γάμος, marriage, in combination: used chiefly in biological and botanical terms, to denote sexual union, union of parts, etc.—gam-o-gen-e-sis (gam-ō-jen'-e-sis), n. In biol., sexual reproduction.—gam'o-ge-net'ic (-jē-net'ik), a.—gam'o-ge-net'ical-ly, adv.—gam-o-pet'a-lous (-pet'ā-lus), a. In bot., having the petals united.—gam-o-phy'l-lous (-fil'us), a. [+ -phyllous.] In bot., having the leaves of the perianth united.—gam-o-sep'a-lous (-sep'ā-lus), a. In bot., having the sepals united.

-gamous. [Gr. -γάμος, < γάμος, marriage.] An adjective termination meaning 'marrying,' 'married,' as in monogamous, polygamous, and used also with figurative applications in botanical and biological terms, as dichogamous, heterogamous, isogamous. Cf. -gamy.

gamp (gamp), n. [Said to be from the umbrella of Mrs. Sarah Gamp, in Dickens's "Martin Chuzzlewit."] An umbrella. [Humorous.]

gam-ut (gam'ut), n. [ML. gamma ut, < gamma, used to represent the first or lowest tone (G) in the medieval scale, and ut, later do.] The lowest note in the medieval scale of music; also, the whole series of recognized musical notes; sometimes, the major scale; fig., the whole range of anything.—gam-y (gā'mi), a.; compar. gamier, superl. gamiest. Abounding in game; also, having the flavor of game, esp. game that Gammoning. — 1, rope gammoning; 2, chain gammoning; 3, iron-strap gammoning.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʔu, then; y, you;

has been kept uncooked until slightly tainted (when it is considered by connoisseurs to be in proper condition for the table); also, game or plucky.

-gamy. [Gr. -γάμος, < -γάμος, marrying, married, < γάμος, marriage.] A noun termination meaning 'marriage,' as in monogamy, polygamy, and used figuratively in botanical and biological terms, as allogamy, apogamy, cleistogamy. Cf. -gamous.

gan (gan). Preterit of *gin*¹.

gan-der (gan'dér), n. [AS. gandra: see gannet.] The male of the goose.

gang (gang), v. [AS. gangan = OHG. gangan = Goth. gaggan, go: cf. go.] I. intr. To walk; go. [Now Sc. and prov. Eng.] II. tr. To arrange in gangs.—gang, n. [AS. gang.] A walking† or going†; ability to walk†; also, a way or passage (now Sc. and north Eng.); also, a pasture for cattle, or the right of pasturing (Sc.); also, a set of things such as are ordinarily taken together; a number of similar tools, machines, or the like, arranged to work together (as, a gang of saws or of plows); also, a set or company of persons employed or working together (as, a gang of laborers; a press-gang); a company of convicts, slaves, or the like (as, a chain-gang); any set of persons associated or going about together (usually with a disparaging force: as, a gang of roughs or of thieves; a political gang; "a gang of crazy heretics," Macaulay's "Hist. of Eng.," iv.); also, a herd, as of elk or buffalo (U. S.).—gang=drill, n. A machine having several drills so arranged that they may be operated together or independently.—gang'er¹, n. One who walks or goes. [Now Sc. and prov. Eng.]—gang'er², n. The foreman of a gang of workmen.

Gan-get-ic (gan-jet'ik), a. Of or along the river Ganges in India: as, Gangetic cities; the Gangetic crocodile (the gaval).

gan-gli-a (gang'gli-ä), n. Plural of ganglion.

gan-gli-ate, gan-gli-at-ed (gang'gli-ät, -ä-ted), a. Having ganglia.

gan-gling (gang'gling), a. [From gang, v.] Straggling, as a plant; also, awkwardly tall and slender, as a person; lank and loosely built.

gan-gli-on (gang'gli-on), n.; pl. ganglia (-ä) or -ons. [LL., kind of swelling, < Gr. γάγγλιον, tumor under the skin, on or near a tendon.] In pathol., an encysted tumor or enlargement in connection with the sheath of a tendon; also, an enlarged bursa; in anat., any aggregation of nerve-cells or mass of gray matter forming a nerve-center; in fig. use, a center of force, activity, or the like.—gan-gli-on'ic (-on'ik), a.

gang=plank (gang'plangk), n. A plank, often with cleats, or a long, narrow, flat structure, used as a temporary bridge in passing into and out of a ship, etc.

gang=plov (gang'plou), n. A plow with several shares, or a combination of plows in one frame.

gang-grel (gang'grēl), n. [From gang, v.: cf. gangling.] A vagabond or vagrant; also, a lank, loosely built person. [Archaic or prov.]

gang-grene (gang'grēn), n. [L. gangræna, < Gr. γάγγραινα, < γᾱίνω, gnaw.] In pathol., the dying of tissue, as from interruption of circulation; mortification.—gan'grene, v. t. or i.; -greded, -grending. To affect or become affected with gangrene.—gan-gre-nous (gang'grē-nus), a. Of the nature of, or affected with, gangrene.

gang-ster (gang'ster), n. A member of a gang of roughs, criminals, or the like, or of a political gang. [Colloq., U. S.]

gangue (gang), n. [F., < G. gang, mineral vein, lode.] The stony or earthy minerals occurring with the metallic ore in a vein or deposit.

gang-way (gang'wä), n. A passageway; naut., any of various passageways on a ship, as that between the rail and the cabins or houses on the deck; an opening in the rail or bulwarks for passing into or out of a ship; a gang-plank; in mining, a main passage or level.

gan-is-ter (gan'is-tēr), n. [Origin unknown.] A hard siliceous rock occurring in some English coal-seams, or an artificial mixture resembling it, used esp. as a refractory material in the lining of furnaces, etc.

gan-net (gan'et), n. [AS. ganot, akin to D. gent, gander, and AS. gandra, E. gander.] Any of the large totipalmate swimming birds of the genus Sula, as the solan, S. bassana, of the Atlantic coasts of Europe and North America, or the booby, S. leucogastra, of the southern Atlantic coast of the U. S.

gan-oid (gan'-oid). [Gr.

Gannet (Sula bassana), adult and young.

γάνος, brightness, + είδος, form, appearance.] I. a. Of fish-scales, having a smooth, shining enameled surface; also, belonging or pertaining to the Ganoidæ, a group of fishes many of which have such scales, including the sturgeons, etc. II. n. A ganoid fish.

gant-let¹, gaunt-let¹ (gánt'let, gánt'let or gánt'-), n. [Earlier gantlope, < Sw. gallopp, < gata, way, lane, + lopp, a running, course.] A former punishment, chiefly military, in which the offender, stripped to the waist, was compelled to run between two rows of men who struck at him with switches or other weapons as he passed: used chiefly in the phrase 'to run the gantlet' (often fig., to proceed under attacks from both sides, or under any like trying conditions: as, to run the gantlet of hostile or curious glances, or of criticism or ridicule).

gant-let² (gánt'let), n. Same as *gauntlet*².

gan-try, gaun-try (gan'tri, gán'-), n.; pl. -tries (-triz). [Cf. OF. gantier, var. of chantier, < L. cantherius, a supporting framework.] A frame for supporting a barrel or cask; also, a spanning framework or platform, as a bridge-like portion of certain cranes.

Gan-y-mede (gan'í-méd), n. [L. Ganymedes, < Gr. Γανυμήδης.] A Trojan youth of classical mythology who was carried off (according to one legend, by an eagle) to become cup-bearer to Zeus; hence, any youth who serves liquor; a cup-bearer; a pot-boy; in astron., the largest satellite of the planet Jupiter.

gaol (jäl), gaol-er (jäl'ér), etc. Archaic spellings of jail, jailer, etc., still current in Great Britain, esp. in official use.

gap (gap), n. [ME. gap, gappe, from Scand.: cf. Icel. gap, empty space, connected with gapa, gape: see gape.] A break or opening, as in a fence, wall, or the like; a breach; also, an opening between high rocks or in a mountain-range; a deep, sloping ravine or cleft cutting a mountain-ridge; in general, a vacant space or interval; a hiatus; a blank or deficiency in something; sometimes, a wide divergence; in aeronautics, the distance between one supporting plane of an aeroplane and another directly above or below it.—gap, v. t.; gapped, gapping. To make a gap, opening, or breach in: as, "Ready! take aim at their leaders—their masses are gapp'd with our grape" (Tennyson's "Defence of Lucknow," iii.).

Ganyমেদে and the Eagle.— Museo Nazionale, Naples.

gape (gäp, U. S. also gäp, popularly gap: cf. gaup, gawp), v. i.; gaped, gaping. [ME. gapen, prob. from Scand.: cf. Icel. gapa, Sw. gapa, Dan. gäbe, also D. gapen, G. gaffen, gape.] To open the mouth wide, as if to swallow something, or as the result of weariness, sleepiness, absorbed attention, astonishment, etc.; yawn; hence, to stare with open mouth, as in wonder; stare in wonder; also, to open like a mouth (as, "May that ground gape and swallow me alive, Where I shall kneel to him that slew my father!" Shakspeare's "3 Henry VI.," i. 1. 161); of a gap, etc., to be or become open wide.—gape, n. The act of gaping; a yawn; a stare, as with open mouth; also, the width of the open mouth;

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

also, a breach or rent; pl., a fit of yawning; also, a disease of poultry and other birds, attended with frequent gaping, due to infestation of the trachea and bronchi with a nematoid worm, Syngamus trachealis.—gap-er (gā'pēr, also gā'-), n. One who or that which gapes; specif., any of various broad-billed or fissirostral birds, as Cymbirhynchus macrorhynchus, an East Indian broadbill ('blue-billed gaper').—gape'=seed, n. An imaginary seed supposed to yield something to gape or stare at in wonder; hence, something to gape or stare at; an opportunity for gaping or staring; also, gaping or staring; also, one who gapes or stares.—gape'=worm, n. A nematoid worm, Syngamus trachealis, which causes the gapes in birds.—gap'ing-ly, adv.—gap'ing=stock, n. An object of gaping or open-mouthed wonder.

Blue-billed Gaper.

gap-py (gap'i), a. Having gaps, breaks, or hiatuses.

gap-toothed (gap'tōtht), a. Having gaps in the rows of teeth; having the teeth set wide apart.

gap-y (gā'pi, also gā'-), a. Affected with the gapes.

gar¹ (gār), n.; pl. gars or (esp. collectively) gar. [Short for garfish.] A garfish.

gar² (gār), v. t.; garred or gart, garring. [From Scand.: cf. Icel. gera, göra, make, do, akin to E. gear and yare.] To make, cause, or compel. [Chiefly Sc. and north. Eng.]

gar-rage (gā-rāzh', also gar'āj), n. [F., < garer, put in shelter.] A building for sheltering, cleaning, or repairing motor-cars; also, a shelter for flying-machines.—gar-rage', v. t.; -raged, -raging. To put or keep in a garage.

garb (gārb), n. [F. garbe (now galbe), < It. garbo, grace; from Teut., and akin to E. gear.] Grace or elegance, as of manners or appearance; also, bearing† or demeanor†; also, manner†, fashion†, or style† (as, "The appurtenance of welcome is fashion and ceremony: let me comply with you in this garb": Shakspeare's "Hamlet," ii. 2. 390); now, fashion or mode of dress, esp. of a distinctive or characteristic kind, or the dress or costume itself (as, official, military, or priestly garb; peasant garb; in the garb of a beggar); fig., outward covering, semblance, or form (as, "false rules pranked in reason's garb": Milton's "Comus," 759).—garb, v. t. To dress in a particular garb or manner.

gar-bage (gār'bāj), n. [ME.; possibly < OF. garbe, gerbe, sheaf.] Orig., the entrails or offal from an animal; hence, refuse animal and vegetable matter from a kitchen; in general, any foul refuse, or vile or worthless matter (sometimes fig., as of reading-matter).

gar-ble (gār'bl), v. t.; -bled, -bling. [It. garbellare, < Ar. gharbala, sift.] To free (spices, etc.) from refuse or dirt; sift or cleanse†; also, to take out the best of (now rare: as, to garble coins); also, to make unfair or misleading selections from (facts, statements, writings, etc.); mutilate so as to misrepresent.—gar'ble, n. Refuse, as of spices†; also, merchandise containing an admixture of waste†; also, a mixture of base and precious metal; also, the process of garbling.—gar'bler, n.

gar-board (gār'bōrd), n. [D. gaarboord.] In ship-building, one of the planks or plates on a ship's bottom, next to the keel.

gar-boil (gār'boil), n. [Obs. F. garbouil, < It. garbuglio.] Commotion; disorder; a tumult or disturbance (see Shakspeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," ii. 2. 67). [Obs. or archaic.]

gar-con (gār-sōn), n. [F. garçon, OF. garçun, = ML. garcio(n); origin unknown.] A boy or young man; a fellow; often, a male employee or servant; esp., a waiter.

G, G, Garboards; F, Frame; K, Keel.

gar-den (gār'dn), n. [OF. gardin, jardin (F. jardin); from Teut. (cf. G. garten), and akin to E. *yard*¹ and garth.] A plot of ground devoted to the cultivation of useful or ornamental plants, or the raising of herbs, vegetables, fruits, flowers, etc.; often, an inclosed plot of this kind adjoining a dwelling; also, a piece of ground, or other space, commonly with ornamental plants, trees, etc., used as a place of public resort (as, a botanical or zoölogical garden; a beer-garden; a roof-garden); also, a region of luxuriant vegetation or high cultivation (as, "Fruitful Lombardy, The pleasant garden of great Italy": Shakspeare's "Taming of the Shrew," i. 1. 4); a fertile and delightful spot.—garden of Eden. See Eden.—gar'den, v. I. intr. To cultivate or tend a garden. II. tr. To cultivate as a garden.—gar'den-er, n. One who lays out, cultivates, or tends gardens, esp. as a regular occupation; often, a person employed to take care of a garden.—gar'den-er=bird, n. A bird, Amblyornis inornata, of New Guinea, which builds a bower-like structure for pleasure or play, scattering flowers, fruits, and other bright objects on the ground before it. Cf. bower-bird.—gar-den-esque' (-esk'), a. [See -esque.] In the style or manner of a garden; garden-like.

gar-de-ni-a (gār-dē'ni-ā), n. [NL.; from Dr. Alexander Garden (1730-91).] Any of the evergreen trees and shrubs of the rubiaceous genus Gardenia, native in the warmer parts of the Old World, including species, as G. florida, the Cape jasmine, cultivated for their fragrant, wax-like white flowers.

gar-den-ing (gār'dn-ing), n. The cultivating of a garden; the work or art of a gardener.

gar-den-par-ty (gār'dn-pār'ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). A party or social gathering held in a garden or on the lawn or grounds of a house.

garde-robe (gärd'rōb), n. [OF. garderobe, warderobe (F. garde-robe), < garder, guard, keep, + robe, robe.] A room or place for keeping articles of dress, etc.; a wardrobe; also, its contents. [Archaic.]

gare-fowl (gār'foul), n. [Icel. geirfugl.] The great auk.

gar-fish (gār'fish), n. [AS. gār, spear.] Any of various fishes with a long, sharp (spear-like) snout or beak, esp. those of the family Belontiæ (as Tylosurus marinus, a species of the eastern U. S., frequently ascending rivers), and of the ganoid family Lepisosteidae (as Lepisosteus osseus, the 'long-nosed garfish,' and L. platystomus, the 'broad-nosed garfish' or 'short-nosed garfish,' both common in the central U. S.).

gar-ga-ney

(gār'ga-ni), n. [From It.] An old-world species of teal (duck), Querquedula circea.

Gar-gan-tu-an (gār-gan'tū-an), a. Of, like, or befitting Gargantua, the amiable giant and king, of enormous capacity for eating and drinking, in Rabelais's satire; hence, gigantic; enormous; prodigious.

gar-get (gār'get), n. [Cf. OF. gargate, throat.] An inflamed condition of the head or throat of cattle and swine; also, inflammation of the udder in cows, ewes, etc.; also, the pokeweed, Phytolacca decandra.

gar-gle (gār'gl), v.; -gled, -gling. [OF. F. gargouiller, < gargouille, throat: cf. L. gurgulio, gullet.] I. tr. To wash or rinse (the throat or mouth) with a liquid held in the throat Gardener-bird.

Broad-nosed Garfish.

fat, fāte, fār, fāll, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

and agitated by a gentle expiration of air. II. intr. To gargle the throat or mouth.—gar'gle, n. Any liquid used for gargling.

gar-goyle (gär'goil), n. [OF. gargouille, gargoule (F. gargouille), appar. the same word as gargouille, throat: see gargle.] A spout, often terminating in a grotesque head (animal or human) with open mouth, projecting from the gutter of a building for discharging rain-water clear of the wall.—gar'goyled, a. Provided with gar-goyles.

gar-i-bal-di (gar-i-bäl'di), n. [From Garibaldi Gargoyles, 13th century.—Sainte Chapelle, Paris.] A loose waist worn by women and children, made in imitation of the red shirts worn by the soldiers of Garibaldi; also, a fish, Hypsypops rubicundus, of a bright scarlet color, found along the coast of California.

gar-ish (gär'ish), a. [Origin uncertain; cf. ME. gauren, stare.] Glaring, or excessively bright (as, "the garish sun," Shakspeare's "Romeo and Juliet," iii. 2. 25; "the garish day," J. H. Newman's "Lead, Kindly Light"); esp., glaringly or unpleasantly bright, as colors or anything colored; crudely or vulgarly gay or showy, as dress, ornaments, etc.; gaudy; fig., pretentious, or excessively ornate, as structures, writings, etc.—gar'ish-ly, adv.—gar'ish-ness, n.

gar-land (gär'land), n. [OF. garlande = It. ghirlanda (whence F. guirlande); origin unknown.] A wreath or chaplet of flowers, leaves, or other material, for the head, worn for ornament or serving as a mark of distinction or honor (as, a garland of roses; the poet's garland of laurel); any wreath, festoon, or string of flowers, leaves, or the like, hung on something as a decoration, as on occasions of rejoicing (as, Christmas garlands); a decorative representation of such a wreath, festoon, or the like; sometimes, formerly, a crown, as of sovereignty† (see Shakspeare's "Richard III.," iii. 2. 40); fig., the crowning or chief ornament† (as, "Bellay, first garland of free Poësie That France brought forth"; Spenser's "Ruines of Rome," L'Envoy); also, a collection of choice short literary pieces, esp. in verse; an anthology; naut., a band, collar, or grommet, as of rope, for various purposes.—gar'land, v. t. To crown with a garland; deck with garlands; also, to form into a garland.—gar'land-age (-äj), gar'land-ry (-ri), n. A decoration of garlands; as, "gayest garlandage of flowers" (Tennyson's "Balin and Balan," 80).

gar-lic (gär'lik), n. [AS. gārleac, < gār, spear, + lēac, leek.] A hardy liliaceous plant, Allium sativum, whose strong-scented, pungent bulb is used in cookery and medicine; any of various other species of the same genus; also, the bulb of any such plant.—gar'lick-y, a. Of, like, or containing garlic.

gar-ment (gär'ment), n. [OF. garniment, garnement, < garnir, equip: see garnish.] Any article of clothing; a vestment.—gar'ment, v. t. To clothe: chiefly in garmented, pp.: as, "Earth was gaily garmented" (Joaquin Miller's "Walker in Nicaragua," ii. 1).—gar'ment-less, a. Without garments.—gar'ment-ure (-mən-tūr), n. Clothing; dress.

gar-ner (gär'nër), n. [OF. gernier, garnier, granier (F. grenier), < L. granarium: see granary.] A storehouse for grain; a granary; fig., a store of anything.—gar'ner, v. t. To store in a garner; fig., to collect or deposit as in a garner. II. intr. To be stored up; accumulate: as, gar-net¹ (gär'net), n. [ME. garnett; origin obscure.] Naut., a form of hoisting-tackle.

Sainte Chapelle, Paris.

Garibaldi.

"the wrath that garners in my heart" (Tennyson's "In Memoriam," lxxxii.).

gar-net² (gär'net), n. [OF. F. grenat, appar. (by reason of the red color) < L. granatum, pomegranate, prop. neut. of granatus, having grains or seeds, < granum, E. *grain*².] A hard, vitreous silicate mineral occurring in a number of varieties all of which have the same general formula but differ more or less in composition, the common deep-red transparent variety used as a gem being a silicate of iron and aluminium; also, the deep-red color of this gem.—gar-net-if'er-ous (-ne-tif'ē-rus), a. [See -ferous.] Yielding or containing garnets.

gar-nier-ite (gär'niër-ît), n. [From Jules Garnier, French geologist.] A native hydrous silicate of nickel and magnesium: an important ore of nickel.

gar-nish (gär'nish), v. t. [OF. garnir (garniss-), warnir, fortify, equip, prepare, warn, F. garnir, furnish, garnish; from Teut.: cf. warn.] To equip or furnish with something; now, esp., to fit out with something that adorns or decorates; ornament; embellish; often, to decorate (a dish) for the table, as with parsley; in law, to serve with a garnishment; garnishee.—gar'nish, n. Adornment or decoration; an ornament or embellishment; esp., something placed around or added to a dish for decorative effect; also, a fee, esp. one formerly paid in English jails by a new prisoner.—gar-nish-ee (-ē), n. In law, a person served with a garnishment.—gar-nish-ee, v. t.; -eed, -eeing. In law, to make (a person) a garnishee; also, to attach (money or property) by garnishment.—gar'nish-er, n. One who garnishes or decorates; in law, one who serves with a garnishment.—gar'nish-ment, n. Adornment; decoration; an ornament or embellishment; in law, a warning or notice, esp. a summons to appear in litigation already pending between others, or a warning served on a person, at the suit of a creditor plaintiff, to hold, subject to the court's direction, money or property in his possession belonging to the defendant.

gar-ni-ture (gär'ni-tūr), n. [F. garniture, < garnir: see garnish.] Anything that garnishes, furnishes, or decorates; appurtenances or outfit; adornment or embellishment.

gar-rote¹, etc., gar-rote², etc. See garrote, etc.

gar-pike (gär'pik), n. A garfish, esp. one of the family Lepisosteidae.

gar-ran (gar'an), n. [Ir. and Gael. gearran.] A kind of small, hardy horse bred in Ireland and Scotland: hence applied to similar horses elsewhere.

gar-ret (gar'et), n. [OF. garite (F. guérite), watch-tower, < garir, defend: see garrison.] A watch-tower†; also, that part of a house which is on the uppermost floor, esp. under a sloping roof; an attic.—gar-ret-ee (gar-e-tēr'), n. One who lives in a garret; esp., an impecunious author (as, "He . . . ate and drank with the keen appetite of a garreteer": Irving's "Tales of a Traveler," ii. 2).

gar-ri-son (gar'i-son), n. [OF. garison, warison, defense, deliverance (F. guérison, cure), < garir, warrir, defend, save (F. guérir, cure); from Teut. (cf. G. wehren, defend): cf. F. garnison, garrison, < garnir, E. garnish.] Defense†; means of defense†; also, a body of troops stationed in a fortified place; hence, the place where they are stationed.—gar'ri-son, v. t. To provide (a fort, town, etc.) with a garrison, for defense; defend by fortresses manned with troops, as a region; also, to occupy (a fort, etc.) as a garrison, as troops do; also, to put (troops, etc.) on duty in a garrison.

gar-ron (gar'ron), n. Same as garran.

gar-rot (gar'ot), n. [F. garrot.] The goldeneye (duck).

gar-rote (gar-rōt'), n. [Sp. garrote, orig. a stick (formerly used in drawing the cord tight in strangling), = F. garrot, cudgel, stick for tightening the cord about a pack.] A Spanish mode of capital punishment orig. by means of an instrument causing death by strangulation, later by one injuring the spinal column at the base of the brain; the instrument used; also, strangulation or throttling, esp. as a means of robbery.—gar-rote, v. t.; -roled, -roting. [Sp. garrotear.] To execute by the garrote; also, to throttle, esp. for the purpose of robbery.—gar-rot'er (-rō-tēr), n.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n̄, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

gar-rotte (gə-rot'), etc. [After F. garrotte, n., garrotter, v., < Sp. garrote.] Same as garrote, etc.

gar-ru-lous (gər-ō-lus), a. [L. garrulus, < garrire, chatter.] Given to much talking, esp. about trifles; talkative; chattering; also, wordy or diffuse, as speech.—gar-ru-li-ty (gə-rō'li-ti), gar'ru-lous-ness, n.—gar'ru-lous-ly, adv.

gar-ter (gər'tēr), n. [OF. gartier, gartier, < garet (F. jarret), the bend of the knee; prob. from Celtic.] A fastening, often in the form of a band passing round the leg, to keep the stocking up; also, the badge of the Order of the Garter, the highest order of knighthood in Great Britain; membership in the order; [cap.] the order itself; also [cap.], the principal king-of-arms in England (more fully, 'Garter king-of-arms').—gar'ter, v. t. To fasten with a garter; also, to invest with the garter of the Order of the Garter (as, "garter'd earls": Byron's "Don Juan," xiii. 68).—gar'ter-snake, n. Any of various harmless snakes of the genus Eutænia, having a brownish or greenish body with long yellow stripes.—gar'ter-stitch, n. The simplest knitting stitch, done without purling.

garth (gärth), n. [Icel. gardhr = AS. gearð, *E. yard*¹.] A yard or garden (archaic or prov. Eng.); esp., the open court inclosed by a cloister (in full, 'cloister-garth'); also, a dam or weir for catching fish.

gas (gas), n.; pl. gases (gas'ez). [Coined by J. B. van Helmont (1577-1644), Flemish chemist; suggested by Gr. χάος, chaos.] An æriiform elastic fluid possessing perfect molecular mobility and the property of indefinite expansion; in popular usage, any such fluid or mixture of fluids except air, as laughing-gas, or some combustible gaseous fluid burned for illuminating and heating purposes; sometimes, a material suspended in the air, etc., in the form of fine, mist-like particles; specif., an æriiform fluid, or a mist-like assemblage of fine particles suspended in the air, used in warfare as a means of asphyxiating, poisoning, or stupefying the enemy; also, empty talk (slang); also, gasoline (colloq.).—gas, v.; gassed, gassing. I. tr. To supply with gas; also, to treat or impregnate with gas (as, to gas lime with chlorine in the manufacture of bleaching-powder); also, to singe (fabrics, etc.) with a gas-flame to remove superfluous fibers; also, to affect, overcome, or asphyxiate with gas or fumes, as in an attack in battle (sometimes fig.). II. intr. To give off gas, as a storage-battery while being charged; also, to indulge in empty talk, or talk idly (slang).—gas'=at-tack', n. Milit., an attack in which asphyxiating or poisonous gases are employed, as by liberating the gases from cylinders and allowing the wind to carry the fumes to the enemy, or by the use of gas-shells.—gas'=bag, n. A bag for holding gas, as for the use of dentists; a bag to be inserted empty into a gas-main during repairs or alterations, and there inflated to serve as a plug; fig., an empty, voluble talker, or windbag (slang).—gas'=burn'er, n. The tip, jet, or end-piece of a gas-fixture, where the gas is caused to issue to be ignited.

Gas-con (gas'kən), n. [F.] A native of Gascony, a former province of southwestern France, the inhabitants of which were noted for their boastfulness; hence [l. c.], a boaster or braggart.—gas-con-ade' (-kə-nād'), n. [F. gasconnade.] Extravagant boasting; a boast or vaunt.—gas-con-ade', v. i.; -aded, -ading. To boast extravagantly; bluster.—gas-con-ad'er (-kə-nā'dēr), n.

ga-se-i-ty (ga-sē'i-ti), n. Gaseous state.

gas-e-lier (gas-ē-lēr'), n. [From gas + -elier in chandelier.] A chandelier adapted for burning gas.

gas-en-gine (gas'en-jin), n. An internal-combustion engine operated by illuminating gas, natural gas, or other gas supplied from without; often, any internal-combustion engine.

gas-e-ous (gas'ē-us), a. Of the nature of, in the form of, or pertaining to gas; specif., in engin., noting steam in the superheated condition.—gas'e-ous-ness, n.

gas-fit-ter (gas'fīt'ēr), n. One whose business is the fitting up of buildings with apparatus for the use of gas.—gas'=fit'ting, n. The work or business of a gas-fitter; pl., fittings for the employment of gas for illuminating and heating purposes.

gas-fix-ture (gas'fiks'tūr), n. A permanent fixture attached to a gas-pipe in the ceiling or wall of a room, as a more or less ornamental pipe (without or with branches) bearing a burner or burners and regulating devices.

gas=gan-grene (gas'gang'grēn), n. In pathol., a gangrenous infection developing in wounds, esp. deep wounds with closed spaces, due to bacteria which form gases in the subcutaneous tissues.

gash¹ (gash), v. t. [Earlier garse, < OF. garser, jarser, scarify (F. gercer, crack, chap); origin uncertain.] To make a long, deep wound or cut in (the flesh, etc.); slash: as, "Then sudden waved his flaming falchion round, And gash'd his belly with a ghastly wound" (Pope's tr. Homer's "Iliad," iv.).—gash¹, n. A long, deep wound or cut, esp. in the flesh; a slash; also, the mouth (slang, U. S.); also, the act or an act of gashing.

gash² (gash), a. [Cf. sagacious.] Sagacious; wise; also, dignified or respectable in appearance; trim. [Sc.] gas-i-fi-ca-tion (gas'i-fī-kā'shən), n. The process of gasifying; conversion into a gas.

gas-i-form (gas'i-fōrm), a. Having the form of a gas.

gas-i-fy (gas'i-fī), v. t. or i.; -fied, -fying. [See -fy.] To convert into or become a gas.

gas-ket (gas'ket), n. [Origin uncertain.] Naut., one of several bands or lines used to bind a furled sail to a yard, etc.; in mech., a strip of plaited hemp, tow, or the like, used to make a joint tight; hence, anything used as a packing, as a rubber or metal ring or disk. Also gas'kin (-kin).

gas-less (gas'les), a. Without gas, as for illumination.

gas-light (gas'lit), n. Light produced by the combustion of illuminating gas; also, a gas-burner, or the light from it.

gas-log (gas'log), n. A device resembling a piece (or several pieces) of firewood, used in a fireplace in which gas is burned.

gas-mask (gas'māsk), n. A mask-like or helmet-like device worn to protect against noxious gases, fumes, etc., as those employed in warfare or those incidental to certain industries, the air inhaled by the wearer being filtered through charcoal and chemicals.

gas-me-ter (gas'mē'tēr), n. An apparatus for measuring and recording the amount of gas produced or consumed.

gas-o-gene (gas'ō-jēn), n. Same as gazogene.

gas-o-lier (gas'ō-lēr'), n. Same as gaselier.

gas-o-line, gas-o-lene (gas'ō-lēn), n. [From gas + L. oleum, oil.] A volatile, inflammable liquid, consisting of a mixture of hydrocarbons, obtained in the distillation of petroleum, and used as a solvent, as fuel for internal-combustion engines, etc.: a term usually restricted to distillates having comparatively low boiling-points, those of higher boiling-points being usually known as naphtha or benzine.—gasoline engine or motor, an internal-combustion engine using gasoline for fuel.

gas-om-e-ter (gas-om'ē-tēr), n. [= F. gazomètre: see gas and -meter.] An apparatus for measuring, holding and measuring, or holding gas; commonly, a reservoir or storehouse for gas.—gas-om'e-try (-tri), n. [See -metry.] The art of measuring gases, or the science dealing with such measurements.—gas-o-met'ric (-ō-met'rik), a.

gasp (gāsp), v. [ME. gaspen, from Scand.: cf. Icel. geispa, Sw. gäspa, yawn.] I. intr. To catch the breath, or labor for breath, with open mouth; respire convulsively; pant, as for air; fig., to long with breathless eagerness (for or after). II. tr. To breathe or emit with gasps (often with away); also, to utter with gasps (often with out).—gasp, n. A gasping, as for breath; a short, convulsive effort to breathe (as, to be at the last gasp, to be at the point of expiring, ceasing, etc.); also, a short, convulsive utterance (as, "Then Balin told him brokenly, and in gasps, All that had chanced": Tennyson's "Balin and Balan," 592).—gasp'er, n.—gasp'-ing-ly, adv.

gas-range (gas'rānj), n. A cooking-stove or range in which gas is used as fuel.

gas-ser (gas'ēr), n. One who or that which gasses; a workman engaged in gassing fabrics, etc.; a well or boring yielding natural gas.

gas-shell (gas'shel), n. Milit., an explosive shell containing a liquid or other material which, when the shell bursts, is converted into an asphyxiating or poisonous gas or vapor.

gas-sing (gas'ing), n. The act of one who or that which gasses; the process by which a material is gassed; an affecting or overcoming with gas or fumes, as in battle.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒ, then; y, you;

gas-sy (gás'i), a.; compar. gassier, superl. gassiest. Full of or containing gas (as, "Big gassy . . . bubbles burst on the ooze": Masefield's "Daffodil Fields," iii.); of the nature of gas; also, given to or characterized by empty talk (slang). —gas-si-ness, n.

gast† (gást), v. t. [AS. gæstan, terrify: see aghost, ghastly, and ghost.] To strike aghast; terrify. See Shakspeare's "King Lear," ii. 1. 57. —gast, n. A fright. [Sc.]

gas-ter-o-pod (gas'ter-ō-pod), etc. Same as gastropod, etc.

gast-ness† (gást'nes), n. [See gast.] Terror; fright. See Shakspeare's "Othello," v. 1. 106.

gas-tral-gia (gas-tral'jiá), n. [NL., < Gr. γαστήρ (γαστρ-), belly, stomach, + άλγος, pain.] In pathol., pain in the stomach; esp., neuralgia of the stomach.

gas-trec-to-my (gas-trek'tō-mi), n. [Gr. γαστήρ (γαστρ-), belly, stomach, + ἐκ, out of, + -τομία, E. -tomy.] In surg., the excision of a portion of the stomach.

gas-tric (gas'trik), a. [Gr. γαστήρ (γαστρ-), belly, stomach.] Of or pertaining to the stomach; also, of the nature of a stomach. —gastric juice, in physiol., the digestive liquid secreted by the glands of the stomach, and containing pepsin and other enzymes.

gas-tril-o-quism (gas-tril'ō-kwizm), n. [Gr. γαστήρ (γαστρ-), belly, + L. loqui, speak.] Ventriloquism. —gas-tril'o-quist (-kwist), n. A ventriloquist. —gas-tril'o-quy (-kwi), n. Ventriloquy.

gas-tri-tis (gas-tri'tis), n. [NL., < Gr. γαστήρ (γαστρ-), belly, stomach.] In pathol., inflammation of the stomach, esp. of its mucous membrane. —gas-trit'ic (-trit'ik), a.

gastro-. Form of Gr. γαστήρ, belly, stomach, used in combination.

gas-tro-lith (gas'trō-lith), n. [See gastro- and -lith.] A calculus or stony concretion in the stomach.

gas-trol-o-gy (gas-trol'ō-jī), n. [Gr. γαστρολογία: see gastro- and -logy.] The science of catering to the stomach; gastronomy; also, the science of the structure, functions, and diseases of the stomach. —gas-trol'o-ger, gas-trol'o-gist, n. —gas-tro-log'i-cal (-trō-loj'i-kal), a.

gas-tro-nome (gas'trō-nōm), n. [F.] One versed in gastronomy; an epicure. Also gas-tron'o-mer (-tron'ō-mēr). gas-tro-nom-ic, gas-tro-nom-i-cal (gas-trō-nom'ik, -i-kal), a. [F. gastronomique.] Of or pertaining to gastronomy. —gas-tro-nom'i-cal-ly, adv.

gas-tron-o-mist (gas-tron'ō-mist), n. A gastronome.

gas-tron-o-my (gas-tron'ō-mi), n. [F. gastronomie, < Gr. γαστρονομία: see gastro- and -nomy.] The art or science of good eating.

gas-tro-pod (gas'trō-pod). [NL. Gastropoda, pl., < Gr. γαστήρ, belly, + πούς (ποδ-), foot.] I. n. Any of the Gastropoda, a class of mollusks including the snails, whelks, slugs, etc., the members of which usually have a muscular, disk-like foot on the ventral surface of the body by means of which they move about. II. a. Pertaining to the gastropods; belonging to the Gastropoda. —gas-trop'o-dous (-trop'ō-dus), a.

gas-tro-scope (gas'trō-skōp), n. [See gastro- and -scope.] An instrument for inspecting the interior of the stomach. —gas-tro-scop'ic (-skop'ik), a. —gas-tros'co-py (-tros'-kō-pi), n.

gas-trot-o-my (gas-trot'ō-mi), n. [See gastro- and -tomy.] In surg., the operation of cutting into the abdomen or the stomach.

gas-tro-vas-cu-lar (gas-trō-vas'kū-lār), a. [See gastro- and vascular.] In zool., serving alike for the functions of digestion and of circulation, as a cavity.

gas-tru-la (gas'trū-lā), n.; pl. -læ (-læ). [NL., dim. < Gr. γαστήρ (γαστρ-), belly, stomach.] In embryol., an embryo of a metazoan, consisting in typical cases of a cup-like body (developed from the blastula) with a wall formed by two layers of cells. —gas'tru-lar (-lār), a. —gas-tru-la'tion (-lā'shqn), n. In embryol., the formation of a gastrula; any process (as that of invagination) by which a blastula or other form of embryo is converted into a gastrula.

gas-works (gas'wérks), n. pl. or sing. An establishment where illuminating gas is manufactured.

gat¹ (gat). Old preterit of get.

gat² (gat), n. [= *gate*¹.] An opening between banks or cliffs, as along a coast. [Chiefly Eng.]

gat³ (gat), n. [Humorous abbr. of Gatling gun.] A gun, pistol, or revolver. [Slang.]

gate¹ (gāt), n. [AS. geat, gate, = D. and LG. gat = Icel. gat, hole, opening.] An opening for passage into and out of an inclosure such as a fenced yard, walled city, or fortification, esp. an opening closed by a movable barrier; also, a structure built about such an opening and containing the barrier; also, the barrier itself, as a swinging frame, often of openwork, in a fence or wall; a movable structure used to close any passageway, as a road, bridge, etc.; a contrivance for regulating the passage of water, steam, or the like, as in a dam, pipe, etc.; also, any means of access or entrance, as a pass or defile in a mountain-range; also, a sash or frame for a saw or a gang of saws; also, the number of persons who pay at the gate or entrance for admission to an athletic contest or other exhibition; hence, the total amount of money received from them; gate-money; in foundry, a channel or opening in a mold, as the opening through which metal is poured; the waste piece of metal cast in it. —gate¹, v. t.; gated, gating. To punish (an undergraduate) by confinement to the precincts of the college, etc.: as, "The Dean . . . gated him for a fortnight" (Hughes's "Tom Brown at Oxford," xii.). [Eng.]

gate² (gāt), n. [From Scand.: cf. Icel. gata, way, path, road, Sw. gata, Dan. gade, also G. gasse, Goth. gatwō, street.] A way, path, road, or street (now Sc. and prov. Eng., or as retained locally in street-names: as, Canongate and Cowgate, in Edinburgh, Scotland; Micklegate and Walmgate, in York, England); fig., way of proceeding, acting, or doing (now Sc. and prov. Eng.); also, manner of going, walking, or stepping (now usually spelled gait: see gait); also, the act of going or proceeding†; a journey, trip, or course (now north. Eng.).

gate-age (gāt'āj), n. The use of gates, as in controlling the flow of water; the gates used; area of gate-opening, as of a turbine-gate.

gā-teau (gā-tō), n.; pl. gâteaux (-tō). [F. gâteau, OF. gastel, wastel; prob. from Teut.] A cake.

gat-ed (gāt'ed), a. [See *gate*¹.] Provided with a gate or gates: as, "thy hundred-gated capitals" (Young's "Night Thoughts," ix. 922).

gate-house (gāt'hous), n. A house at or over a gate, used as the keeper's quarters, a fortification, a prison, etc.; specif., a house or structure at the gate of a dam, reservoir, etc., with apparatus for regulating the flow of the water.

gate-keep-er (gāt'kē'pēr), n.

One who has charge of a gate.

gate-legged, gate-leg (gāt'legd, -leg), a. Having the legs connected by crosspieces so as to look somewhat like a number of gates: applied esp. to a kind of table with folding flaps, each flap being supported when in use by a hinged gate-like arrangement of legs that may be pushed back to lower the flap.

gate-less (gāt'les), a. Having no gate, as a wall.

gate-man (gāt'man), n.; pl. -men. A gate-keeper.

gate-mon-ey (gāt'mun'ī), n. The receipts taken in at the gate or entrance, for admission to an athletic contest or other exhibition.

gate-post (gāt'pōst), n. The post on which a gate is hung, or the one against which it is closed.

Gate-house. — Vitry, France.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

gate-tow-er (gāt'tou'ēr), n. A tower built beside or over a gate, as of a city, as for the purpose of defending the passage.

gate-ward (gāt'wārd), n. [AS. geatweard.] A gate-keeper: as, "the heedful gate-ward" (Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," iv. 4). [Archaic.]

gate-way (gāt'wā), n. A passage or entrance which is or may be closed by a gate; also, a frame or arch in which a gate is hung; a structure built at or over a gate; also, any means of ingress or egress.

Gate-tower or Barbican, Walmgate Bar, York, England.

gate-wom-an (gāt'wūm'an), n.; pl. -women (-wim'en). A woman who has charge of a gate.

gath-er (gārn'ēr), v. [AS. gaderian, < gador, geador, together, akin to gæd, fellowship: cf. together and good.] I. tr. To bring (persons, animals, or things) together into one place, company, body, mass, or aggregate (as, "Gather the elders and all the inhabitants of the land into the house of the Lord": Joel, i. 14); assemble; add or join, as to an assemblage, company, or body (as, to be gathered to one's fathers, to die: see Judges, ii. 10); take (in) for addition to a company or body (as, to gather in a recruit); also, to get together from various places or sources, or gradually (as, to gather an army; to gather sticks for a fire; to gather materials for a book; to gather a store of knowledge); collect; accumulate; amass; also, to take (any crop or natural yield) from its place of growth or formation (as, to gather grain, fruit, or mushrooms; to gather honey, gums, or resins); pick or pluck (flowers, or a single flower, spray, fruit, etc.); in general, to take (as, to gather a person into one's arms; "Cast up the highway; gather out the stones," Isa. lxii. 10); take or pick (up), as from the ground or other place; also, to take on or acquire gradually, as by natural process (as, to gather dust or stains; a rolling stone gathers no moss; standing water gathers filth); acquire or gain in increasing measure (as, to gather speed or momentum; to gather strength or courage); also, to learn, or (more commonly) to conclude or infer, from observation, indications, evidence, etc. (as, "Gather the sequel by that went before," Shakspeare's "Comedy of Errors," i. 1. 96; we gathered from his letter that he was not satisfied); also, to assemble or collect (one's energies, faculties, thoughts, etc., or one's self), as for an effort or to meet some emergency (often with up); also, to draw into smaller compass (as, to gather the hair into a coil, or a garment into folds; to gather up the legs under one when sitting); contract (the brow) into wrinkles; draw (cloth, etc.) into fine folds or puckers on a thread run through; make narrower, as a drain. II. intr. To come together or assemble (as, to gather about the fire; to gather in crowds in the streets); also, to collect, accumulate, or form as by the collecting or accumulating of parts (as, tears gather in the eyes; clouds, storms, and darkness gather); grow as by accretion; come to a head, as a sore in suppurating; also, to become contracted into wrinkles, as the brow; contract or grow narrower, as a drain; naul., to make way; gain.—gath'er, n. A drawing together; a contraction; also, a fold or pucker in gathered cloth, etc. (usually in pl.).—gath'er-a-ble, a. That may be gathered.—gath'er-er, n.—gath'er-ing, n. The act of one who or that which gathers, or that which is gathered; esp., an assembly or meeting of persons, as for social or other purposes, or the persons present; a collecting or accumulating, or that which is collected (as, the book represents the gatherings of years); an inflamed and suppurating swelling; a contracted or narrower part, as of a drain.

gat-ing (gā'ting), n. The compulsory confinement of an undergraduate within the precincts of the college, etc., as a punishment. [Eng.]

Gat-ling (gat'ling) gun. [From R. J. Gatling (1818–1903), American inventor.] A machine-gun consisting of a revolving cluster of barrels around a central axis, each barrel being automatically loaded and fired during every revolution of the cluster.

gauche (gōsh), a. [F.; from Teut.] Left (as opposed to right); hence, awkward; clumsy; tactless; in math., skew; not plane; not perfectly symmetrical.—gauche-rie (gōsh-rē), n. [F.] Awkwardness, or an awkward movement, act, etc.: as, "if ever she committed an extreme gaucherie, calculated to set her aunt's teeth on edge" (H. Kingsley's "Geoffrey Hamlyn," vii.).

Gau-cho (gou'chō), n.; pl. -chos (-chōz). [Sp.] A native of the South American pampas, of mixed Spanish and Indian descent.

gaud (gād), n. [ME. gaude, prob. < L. gaudium, joy, gladness: see joy.] A prank; a trick; also, a plaything or toy (as, "An idle gaud which in my childhood I did dote upon": Shakspeare's "Midsummer Night's Dream," iv. 1. 172); now, esp., a showy ornament; a piece of finery; sometimes, a showy ceremony; vain display or ceremony (as, "with pomp and gaud": Campbell's "Lines on Poland").—gaud, v. I. intr. To make merry; sport; jest. II. tr. To adorn with showy ornament; paint; as the cheeks (see Shakspeare's "Coriolanus," ii. 1. 233).—gaud'er-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). Finery; fine or showy things; also, ostentatious show; also, something showy.—gaud'y, a.; compar. gaudier, superl. gaudiest. Joyful or festive (as, "Let's have one other gaudy night . . . fill our bowls once more": Shakspeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," iii. 13. 183); also, brilliant, bright, or showy (as, "gaudy plumage": Cowper's "On a Goldfinch"); usually, excessively showy (as, "Costly thy habit as thy purse can buy, But not express'd in fancy; rich, not gaudy": Shakspeare's "Hamlet," i. 3. 71); showy without taste; vulgarly showy; flashy.—gaud'i-ly, adv.—gaud'i-ness, n.—gaud'y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). [L. gaudium, joy.] A festival or merrymaking; now, chiefly, an annual college feast or banquet. [Eng.]

gauf-fer (gā'fēr), v. t. Same as goffer.

gauge (gā), etc. See *gagē*³, etc.

Gaul (gāl), n. [L. Gallus.] An inhabitant of ancient Gaul (equivalent to modern France and Belgium, with adjoining regions), esp. a member of the Celtic race as distinguished from other races settled there; hence, a Frenchman (humorous).—Gaul'ish, a.

gault (gālt), n. [Cf. Norw. gald, hard ground, Icel. gald, hard snow.] A thick, heavy clay (prov. Eng.); in geol., a series of beds of clay and marl of the Cretaceous system, occurring in southern England.

gaul-the-ri-a (gāl-thē'ri-ā), n. [NL.; named from Dr. Gaultier, Canadian physician.] Any of the aromatic evergreen shrubs constituting the ericaceous genus Gaultheria, as G. procumbens, the American wintergreen; in phar., oil of wintergreen.

gaum (gām), v. t. [Cf. *gum*².] To smear, as with something sticky; daub (something sticky) on a surface.

gaun (gān), ppr. Going. [Sc.]

gaunt (gānt or gānt), a. [ME. gawnt; origin uncertain.] Slim or slender, as persons; also, abnormally thin, as from hunger; lean; emaciated; haggard; often, tall, thin, and angular; lank; also, such as to cause leanness or emaciation (as, gaunt poverty); also, bleak, desolate, or grim, as places or things.

gaunt'let¹, n. See *gantlet*¹.

gaunt'let² (gānt'let or gānt'-), n. [OF. F. gantlet, dim. of gant, glove; from Teut.] A mediæval glove, as of mail or plate, to protect the hand from wounds; also, a glove with a cuff-like extension covering the wrist; also, the extension itself.—to take up the gauntlet, to take up from the ground a gaunt-

A, Gauntlet of plate, early 14th century. B, Gauntlet of plate, later 14th century. C, Gauntlet of mail forming part of the hauberk, 13th century.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

let thrown down by another in token of challenge (see phrase following); hence, in general, to accept a challenge; esp., to undertake to meet attacks on some opinion, cause, person, etc.—to throw down the gauntlet, to cast one's gauntlet to the ground in token of challenge, to be taken up by a person accepting the challenge (a custom of medieval times: see phrase preceding); hence, in general, to issue a challenge.—gaunt'let-ed, a. Wearing or having a gauntlet.
gaunt-ly (gānt'/li or gānt'-), adv. In a gaunt manner.
—gaunt'ness, n.

gaun-try (gān'/tri), n. See gantry.

gaup (gāp), v. i. See gawp.

gaur (gour), n. [Hind.] A large wild ox, Bos gaurus, of India, having a broad, protuberant forehead.

gauss (gous), n. [From K. F. Gauss: see Gaussian.] In elect., a unit used to measure the intensity of a magnetic field, equal to the intensity produced by a magnetic pole of unit strength at a distance of one centimeter.

Gauss-i-an (gous'i-ān), a. In math., pertaining to or named after Karl Friedrich Gauss (1777–1855), the German mathematician.

gauze (gāz), n. [F. gaze; origin uncertain.] A very thin, slight, transparent textile fabric of silk, cotton, or other fiber; also, some similar open fabric, as of wire; hence, a thin haze as, “And in circles, Purple gauzes, golden hazes, liquid mazes, Flung the torrent rainbow round”: Tennyson's “Vision of Sin,” ii.).—gauz'y, a.; compar. gauzier, superl. gauziest. Like gauze; thin as gauze.—gauz'i-ness, n.

ga-vage (gā-vāzh), n. [F., < gaver, gorge with food.] Forced feeding, as of poultry or human beings, as by means of a flexible tube and a force-pump.

gave (gāv), Preterit of give.

gav-el¹ (gav'el), n. [Origin uncertain.] A small mallet used by a presiding officer to signal for attention or order.

gav-el² (gav'el), n. [AS. gafol, tribute, tax: cf. gabell.] Rent: as, “a socager, paying rent or gavel” (Stubbs's “Constitutional Hist. of Eng.,” vii. § 75). [Obs. or hist.]

gav-el-kind (gav'el-kind), n. [ME. gavelkynde, gavelikind, < AS. gafol, E. gavel², + gecynd, E. kind¹.] The tenure in old English law of land let out for rent payable in forms other than military service; also, a land-tenure, chiefly in Kent, England, by which estates are divided equally among all the heritable heirs; the custom of such division.

ga-vi-al (gā'vi-āl), n. [Hind. ghariyāl.] A large crocodile, Gavialis gangeticus, with elongated jaws, found in the Ganges and certain other rivers of India.

ga-votte (gā-vot'), n. [F., < Pr. gavoto, dance of the gavots (Alpine mountaineers).] A minuet-like dance in moderately quick duple rhythm; also, a piece of music for, or in the rhythm of, this dance, often forming one of the movements in the suite, usually following the saraband.

gawd, n. and v. See gawd.

gawk (gāk), n. [Origin uncertain.] An awkward person; a fool or simpleton.—gawk, v. i. To act like a gawk; stare idly or stupidly. [Colloq.]—gawk'y, a.; compar. gawkier, superl. gawkiest. Awkward, clumsy, or clownish: as, “A lanky, gawky fellow . . . tumbles over everybody. I know him” (Thackeray's “Vanity Fair,” xiv.). II. n.; pl. -ies (-iz). A gawk: as, “She is . . . an awkward gawky” (Sheridan's “School for Scandal,” ii. 2).—gawk'i-ness, n.

gawp (gāp), v. i. [Var. of gape.] To gape or yawn; stare with the mouth open.

gay (gā), a.; compar. gayer, superl. gayest. [OF. F. gai; from Teut.] Having or showing lightness of heart or a joyous liveliness of mood, as persons or the spirits, bearing, actions, etc.; in general, cheerfully lively, as scenes, occasions, pleasures, music, etc.; also, given to or abounding in social or other pleasures, festivities, etc., as a person or a set of persons, a city, a social season, etc.; sometimes, given over to pleasure; dissipated; licentious; also, bright or showy, as colors, flowers, ornaments, dress, etc.; brightened or showily adorned (with: as, gay with color, flowers, or ribbons; “when all is gay with lamps,” Tennyson's “In Memoriam,” xcvi.); finely or showily dressed; fig., brilliant† (as, “Enjoy your dear wit, and gay rhetoric, That hath so well been taught her dazzling fence”: Milton's “Comus,” 790); also, in good health or condition (prov. or colloq.); also, fairly large or great, or considerable (Sc. and prov. Eng.).—the gay science [tr. Pr. gai saber], the art of poetry: so named with reference to the poetry of the troubadours: as, “He presented . . . Blondel, as king of minstrelsy, and his master in the gay science” (Scott's “Talisman,” xxvi.).—gay, adv. In a gay, lively, or showy manner (obs. or rare); also, fairly, considerably, or very (Sc. and prov. Eng.).

gay-al (gā'al or gā-yāl'), n. [Hindi gayāl.] A domesticated ox, Bos frontalis, with slender horns and white legs, common in parts of India: supposed to be a domesticated descendant of the gaur.

gay-e-ty (gā'ē-ti), gay-ly (gā'li), See gaiety, gaily.

gay-ness (gā'nes), n. The state or quality of being gay.

ga-za-bo (gā-zā'bō), n.; pl. -bos (-bōz).

[Var. of gazebo.] A gazebo (as, “that old gazabo on the top of the market-place”: Thackeray's “Vanity Fair,” xxviii.); also, a person gazed or stared at, as because of odd appearance (prov. or slang); a fellow (slang: as, the main gazabo, the chief person).

gaze (gāz), v.; gazed, gazing. [ME.; perhaps from Scand.: cf. Sw. dial. gasa, gaze, stare.] I. intr. To look steadily or intently; look with curiosity, wonder, etc. II. tr. To look steadily at: as, “Straight toward heaven my wondering eyes I turn'd, And gazed awhile the ample sky” (Milton's “Paradise Lost,” viii. 258). [Poetic.]—gaze, n. The act of gazing; a steady or intent look; also, the object gazed at†, or a gazing-stock† (as, “Then yield thee, coward, And live to be the show and gaze o' the time”: Shakspeare's “Macbeth,” v. 8. 24).

ga-ze-bo (gā-zē'bō), n.; pl. -bos (-bōz). [Origin uncertain; now associated with gaze.] A structure commanding an extensive prospect, as a turret, belvedere, balcony, projecting window, or the like; also, a gazabo (prov. or slang).

gaze-hound (gāz'hound), n. A hound that pursues by sight rather than by scent.

ga-zelle, ga-zel (gā-zel'), n. [F. gazelle, < Ar. ghazāl.] Any of various small antelopes of the genus Gazella and allied genera, noted for their graceful movements and lustrous eyes.

gaz-er (gā'zēr), n. One who gazes.

ga-zette (gā-zet'), n.

[F., < It. gazetta, gazette, orig. a Venetian coin (as the price of the gazette), dim. < L. gaza, treasure.] A newspaper (now chiefly or only in names of newspapers); also, an official government journal, esp. in Great Britain, containing lists of government appointments and promotions, of persons declared bankrupt, etc.; also, an official announcement (rare).—ga-zette', v. t.; -zetting. To publish, announce, or list in a gazette.—gaz-et-ter (gāz-e-tēr'), n. [F. gazetier, now gazetier.] A Gayal.

Head of Gavial.

Gazelle (Gazella dorcas).

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; †, primary accent; ″, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

writer in a gazette or newspaper (obs. or hist.); a journalist appointed and paid by the government to publish news (as, "Steele had been appointed Gazetteer . . . and thus had access to foreign intelligence earlier and more authentic than was . . . within the reach of an ordinary newswriter": Macaulay's "Essays," Addison); also, a geographical dictionary; an account of the divisions, places, seas, mountains, etc., of the world or any part of it, under their names, in alphabetic order.

gaz-ing-stock (gā'zing-stok), n. A person or thing gazed at, as with curiosity, wonder, or contempt.

gaz-o-gene (gaz'ō-jēn), n. [F. gazogène, < gaz, gas, + -gène: see -gen.] An apparatus for manufacturing aerated water.

gean (gēn), n. [F. guigne; origin uncertain.] The wild cherry, Prunus avium, of Europe.

ge-an-ti-cli-nal (jē'an-ti-klī'nāl), [Gr. γῆ, earth, + E. anticlinal.] In geol.: I. a. Noting or pertaining to an anticlinal fold which embraces a notable part of the earth's surface. II. n. A geanticlinal fold. — ge-an'ti-cline (-klīn), n. In geol., a geanticlinal fold.

gear (gēr), n. [ME. gere, prob. from Scand.: cf. Icel. gervi, görvi, gear, apparel, akin to AS. gearwe, pl., clothes, ornaments, armor, gearu, ready: see yare, also *gar*² and garb.] Apparel or attire (as, "From every side came noisy swarms Of Peasants in their homely gear": Wordsworth's "White Doe of Rylstone," iii.); armor or arms (archaic); harness or furniture for horses, etc.; also, apparatus or appliances generally; implements or tools; specif., the ropes, blocks, etc., belonging to a particular sail or spar; also, the appliances connected with the acting parts of a piece of machinery; a mechanism for transmitting or changing motion, as by toothed wheels; toothed wheels collectively; a toothed wheel which engages with another wheel or part; the connection or engagement of toothed wheels with each other, or of a machine or a machine part with a motor, shaft, or the like (as, in gear, or out of gear, fig., in, or out of, working order); also, movable property, or goods; possessions in general (Sc. and north. Eng.); matter, business, or an affair (archaic or prov.). — gear, v. I. tr. To provide with gear; harness (a draft-animal); esp., in mach., to provide with gearing; connect by gearing; put (machinery) into gear. II. intr. In mach., to fit exactly, as one part of gearing into another; come into or be in gear. — gear-ing, n. The parts collectively by which motion is transmitted in machinery, esp. a train of toothed wheels. — gear'=wheel, n. A wheel having teeth or cogs which engage with the teeth of another wheel or part to transmit or receive motion.

geck (gek), n. [MLG. geck = D. gek.] A fool; a dupe: as, "The most notorious geck and gull That e'er invention play'd on" (Shakspeare's "Twelfth Night," v. 1. 351). [Obs. or prov. Eng.] — geck, v. i. To mock or scoff; look derisively; toss the head, as in scorn: as, "Ye geck at me because I'm poor" (Burns's "Tibbie"). [Sc. and prov. Eng.]

geck-o (gek'ō), n.; pl. -os or -oes (-ōz). [Malay gēkoq.] A small, harmless lizard of the family Geckonidae, having toes with adhesive disks: common in warm countries.

gee¹ (jē), interj. A word of command to horses, etc., usually directing them to turn to the right. Cf. *haw*³. — gee¹, v. i. or t.; geed, geeing. To turn to the right. — gee¹, n. A horse. [Colloq., Eng.]

gee² (jē), v. i.; geed, geeing. [Origin obscure.] To work well, or answer the purpose; also, to agree, as persons or things or as one with another; get on or go well together: commonly in negative statements. [Colloq.]

geese (gēs), n. Plural of goose.

geest (gēst), n. [LG., dry or sandy soil.] In geol., old deposits produced by flowing water; coarse drift; gravel.

gee-zer (gē'zēr), n. [Dial. pron. of guiser.] A queer character; hence, in general, in vague, often good-natured depreciation, a fellow (as, a queer old geezer; who was that geezer with you last night?). [Slang, orig. prov. Eng.]

ge-gen-schein (gā'gen-shīn), n. [G., counter-glow.] In astron., same as counter-glow.

Ge-hen-na (gē-hen'ā), n. [LL., < Gr. Γέεννα, < Heb. Gē-Hinnōm.] The valley of Hinnom, near Jerusalem, regarded as a place of abomination (see 2 Kings, xxiii. 10), and used as a dumping-place for refuse, with fires kept burning to prevent pestilence; hence, the place of the future torment of the wicked; hell; also [l. c.], a place where prisoners are tortured (as, "the 'gehenna' or torture-room [at Tournay]": Motley's "Dutch Republic," ii. 8); in general, a place of extreme discomfort or suffering.

gei-sha (gā'shā), n.; pl. -sha or -shas (-shāz). [Jap.] A Japanese singing and dancing girl.

Geissler's (gis'lēr) tube. [From H. Geissler (1814-79), the (German) inventor.] A sealed glass tube with platinum connections at the ends, containing rarefied gas, which is made luminous by an electrical discharge.

gei-to-nog-a-my (gī-tō-nog'ā-mī), n. [Gr. γείτων, neighbor, + γάμος, marriage.] In bot., fertilization in which the pollination of a flower is effected by pollen from another flower on the same plant.

gel-a-da (jel'ā-dā), n. [Native name.] An Abyssinian baboon, Theropithecus gelada, notable for the long, heavy mane of the full-grown male.

gel-a-tin, gel-a-tine (jel'ā-tin), n. [F. gelatine, < L. gelare (pp. gelatus), freeze, congeal.] A brittle, nearly transparent, faintly yellow, inodorous and almost tasteless organic substance obtained by boiling in water the ligaments, bones, skin, etc., of animals, and forming the basis of jellies, glues, and the like; a preparation or product in which this substance is the essential constituent. — gel-a-ti-nate (jel'ā-ti-nāt or jē-lat'i-), v. i. or t.; -nated, -nating. To become or make gelatinous. — gel'a-ti-na'tion (-nā'shən), n. — gel'a-ti-nif'er-ous (-nif'ē-rus), a. [See -ferous.] Yielding gelatin. — gel-a-tin'i-form (-i-fōrm), a. [See -form.] Having the form or appearance of gelatin. — gel-a-ti-nize (jel'ā-ti-nīz or jē-lat'i-), v.; -nized, -nizing. I. intr. To become gelatinous. II. tr. To make gelatinous; also, to coat with gelatin, as paper. — gel'a-ti-ni-zā'tion (-ni-zā'shən), n. — gel-a-ti-noid (jel'ā-ti-noid or jē-lat'i-), [See -oid.] I. a. Resembling gelatin; gelatinous. II. n. A gelatinoid substance. — gel-at-i-nous (jē-lat'i-nus), a. Pertaining to or consisting of gelatin; also, of the nature or consistence of jelly; jelly-like. — gel-at'i-nous-ly, adv. — gel-at'i-nous-ness, n.

ge-la-tion (jē-lā'shən), n. [L. gelatio (n.), < gelare, freeze, congeal.] Solidification by cold; freezing.

geld¹ (geld), n. [AS. geld, gield, gild, payment, tribute, also gild (see *gild*¹), = D. and G. geld, money, = Icel. gjald, payment, = Goth. gild, tribute; from the Teut. verb represented by E. yield.] In Eng. hist., a payment; a tax; esp., the tax paid to the crown by landholders under the Anglo-Saxon and Norman kings.

geld² (geld), v. t.; gelded or gelt, gelding. [From Scand.: cf. Icel. gelda.] To castrate (used esp. of animals); sometimes, to spay; hence, to deprive of something essential; weaken; expurgate, as a book. — geld'ing, n. A castrated animal, esp. a horse; also, a eunuch.

gel-id (jel'id), a. [L. gelidus, < gelus, frost, icy cold.] Cold as ice; frosty; very cold; in general, cold; refreshingly cool, as water. — ge-lid-i-ty (jē-lid'i-ti), gel'id-ness, n. — gel'id-ly, adv.

gel-ig-nite (jel'ig-nit), n. [From gelatin + L. lignum, wood.] A powerful explosive containing nitroglycerin, soluble guncotton, powdered wood, and potassium or sodium nitrate.

Gelada.

Gecko.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fare; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, flect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ȳ, then; y, you;

gel-se-mi-um (jel-sē'mi-um), n. [NL., < It. gelsomino, jasmine.] A twining shrub of the genus Gelsemium, esp.

Flowering Branch of Gelsemium (G. sempervirens).

gem (jem), n. [OF. F. gemme, < L. gemma, bud, gem.] A bud or gemma; also, a precious stone, esp. when cut and polished for ornament; a jewel; also, a precious or semiprecious stone carved or engraved; fig., something likened to a gem because of its beauty, brilliance, perfection, worth, etc., often something small; something greatly prized; in cooking, a kind of muffin; in printing, a printing-type (4 point) of a size between brilliant and diamond (Eng.).—gem, v. t.; gemmed, gemming. To put forth in bud† (as, “The stately trees . . . gemm’d Their blossoms”: Milton’s “Paradise Lost,” vii. 325); also, to adorn with or as with gems; also, to extract gems from; search for gems in.

Ge-ma-ra (ge-mā'rā), n. [Aram. gemārā, completion.] In Jewish lit., a rabbinical commentary on the Mishnah, and with it forming the Talmud, or, as viewed by some, itself constituting the Talmud.—Ge-mar'ic (-mar'ik), a.

gem-el (jem'el), n. [OF. gemel (F. jumeau), < L. gemellus, dim. of geminus, twin.] A twin†; also, a hinge; also, a gemel-ring.—gem-el-ring, n. A finger-ring formed of two or more separable or interlocked circlets.

gem-i-nate (jem'i-nāt), v. t. or i.; -nated, -nating. [L. geminatus, pp. of geminare, to double, < geminus, twin.] To make or become double.—gem-i-nate, a. Combined in a pair or pairs; coupled; binate.—gem-i-na'tion (-nā'shən), n. [L. geminatio(n).] A doubling; duplication; repetition; in rhet., the immediate repetition of a word, phrase, etc., for rhetorical effect; in philol., the doubling of an originally single consonant sound; also, an orthographic doubling.

Gem-i-ni (jem'i-ni), n. pl. [L. pl. of geminus, twin.] The Twins, a zodiacal constellation containing the bright stars Castor and Pollux; also, as sing., the third sign of the zodiac (see zodiac); also [l. c.], as sing., a pair† (as, “Else you had looked through the grate, like a gemony of baboons”: Shakspeare’s “Merry Wives of Windsor,” ii. 2. 8).

gem-ma (jem'ā), n.; pl. gemmæ (-ē). [L., bud, gem: cf. gem.] In bot., a bud, esp. a leaf-bud; also, a bud-like body which separates from the mother plant and forms a new plant, as in mosses, liverworts, etc.; in zool., a bud or protuberance which develops into a new organism.

gem-mate (jem'āt), v. i.; -mated, -mating. [L. gemmatus, pp. of gemma, to bud, < gemma, bud: see gemma.] To put forth buds; increase by budding.—gem-mate, a. Having buds; increasing by budding.—gem-ma-tion (je-mā'shən), n. The act of putting forth buds; the arrangement of the leaf in the bud, or of the buds on the stalk; also, the process of reproduction by gemmæ.

gem-mif-er-ous (je-mif'ē-rus), gem-mip-a-rous (je-mip'ā-rus), a. [L. gemma, bud: see -ferous, -parous.] Producing buds; increasing by gemmation.

gem-mu-la-tion (jem-ū-lā'shən), n. [See gemma.] The formation of gemmules.

gem-mule (jem'ūl), n. [L. gemmula, dim. of gemma, bud: see gemma.] In bot., a small bud or gemma; in zool., a small gemma; a germinal mass of spores, as of sponges; the ciliated embryo of some coelenterates; in biol., one of the hypothetical living units conceived by Darwin as the bearers of the hereditary attributes of animals and plants.

gem-my (jem'i), a. Set with or as with gems (as, “The gemmy bridle glitter’d free”: Tennyson’s “Lady of Shalott,” iii.); jeweled; also, gem-like; brilliant.

ge-mot (ge-mōt'), n. [AS. gemōt, < ge, together, + mōt, meeting: see moot.] In Anglo-Saxon hist., a meeting; an assembly, as for judicial or legislative purposes.

gems-bok (gemz'bok), n. [S. Afr. D., ‘chamois buck.’] A large antelope, Oryx capensis (or gazella), of South Africa, having long, straight horns and a long, tufted tail.

Gemsbok.

-gen. [F. -gène, < Gr. -γενής, born, produced, < γεν-, bear, produce: see genius.] Anoun termination meaning ‘something produced, or growing,’ as in acrogen, endogen, exogen, and used also to mean ‘something that produces,’ as in hydrogen, oxygen, plasmogen.

gen-darme (zhoñ-därm), n.; pl. -darmes (-därmz, F. -därm). [F., formed as sing. < gens d'armes, men of arms (gens, pl. of gent, < L. gens: see gens).] Orig., in France, a mounted soldier in full armor, commanding a troop; later, a cavalryman; now, one of a corps of military police, esp. in France.—gen-dar-me-rie (zhoñ-där-mè-rè), n. [F.] Gendarmes collectively; the body of gendarmes. Also gen-dar-me-ry (jen-där'mē-ri).

gen-der (jen'dēr), n. [OF. gendre (F. genre), < L. genus (gener-), race, kind, sort, gender: cf. genus and genre.] Kind†, sort†, or class†; also, sex, male or female (now only humorous); in gram., each of the classes into which the words of a language are distinguished with reference to sex, actual or ascribed, or lack of sex (as, the masculine, feminine, or neuter gender); the property of belonging to, or having the form required by, one of these classes; the formal distinction of words into such classes, as a grammatical principle.

-gen'der, v. [OF. gendrer, < L. generare, < genus: cf. generate.] I. tr. To beget or procreate (offspring); in general, to give rise to (as, “Foolish and unlearned questions avoid, knowing that they do gender strifes”: 2 Tim. ii. 23). [Archaic.] II. † intr. To copulate; breed.—gen'der-less, a. In gram., without distinction of gender.

gene (jēn), n. [Gr. γεν-, bear, produce: see genius, and cf. -gen.] In biol., a hypothetical agent or element considered as being transmitted from parent to offspring, and regarded as determining, or entering into, the development of some particular character in the offspring.

gen-e-a-log-ic, gen-e-a-log-i-cal (jen'ē-a-loj'ik or jē'nē,-i-kəl), a. [See genealogy.] Pertaining to genealogy.—gen'e-a-log'i-cal-ly, adv.—gen-e-al'o-gist (-al'ō-jist), n. One who traces genealogies; one versed in genealogy.—gen-e-al'o-gize (-jiz), v.; -gized, -gizing. I. tr. To draw up a genealogy of. II. intr. To trace genealogies.

gen-e-al-o-gy (jen'ē-al'ō-jī or jē'nē-), n.; pl. -gies (-jiz). [OF. genealogie (F. généalogie), < LL. genealogia, < Gr. γενεαλογία, < γενεά, race, family, + λέγειν, speak.] An account of the descent of a person or family from an ancestor or ancestors; a pedigree; hence, a similar account of the descent of animals or plants from ancestral forms; also, lineage†; also, progeny†; also, the investigation of pedigrees as a department of study or knowledge.

gen-er-a (jen'ē-rā), n. Plural of genus.
gen-er-a-ble (jen'ē-rā-bl), a. [L. generabilis.] Capable of being generated or produced.

gen-er-al (jen'ē-rəl), a. [OF. general (F. général), < L. generalis, < genus, race, kind: see genus.] Pertaining to, affecting, including, or participated in by, all members of a class or group (as, the general welfare); not partial or particular; also, of or pertaining to a whole region or body (as, a general election); not local or sectional; also, common to many or most of a community, though not universal (as, a subject of general remark; the general practice); prevalent; usual; also, not limited to a precise application (as, general instructions or directions); not specific or special; applicable to a variety of cases, or to most cases (as, general principles; a general rule); applicable to all of the individuals forming a class (as, a general term); also, not restricted to one class, field, department, etc. (as, the general public; a general practitioner; a general dealer, store, or cargo); miscellaneous; also, considered with reference to, or comprising, the main elements, features, etc., irrespective of details and unimportant exceptions (as, the general tendency; a general knowledge of a subject); indefinite or vague (as, to refer to a matter in a general way); also, having extended command, or superior or chief rank (as, a general officer, see below; adjutant-general; attorney-general).—general officer, milit., an officer, as a brigadier-general, major-general, etc., ranking above a colonel, and entitled to command a force larger than a regiment.—general staff, milit., a body of officers whose duties include the consideration or preparation of plans for war, national defense, etc.: in the U. S. army called the General Staff Corps.—gen'er-al, n. The total† or whole†; the most part†; the general public (archaic: as, "The play . . . pleased not the million; 'twas caviare to the general," Shakspeare's "Hamlet," ii. 2. 457); also, a general fact, statement, principle, notion, etc. (now chiefly in pl., and as opposed to particulars, etc.: as, "It is by means of our knowledge of particulars that we ascend to generals," Hallam's "Literature of Europe," iii. 3. § 104); milit., a drum-beat or other signal calling troops to prepare to march; also, a general officer; in address and common speech, any officer whose title contains the term general, as a major-general, brigadier-general, adjutant-general, surgeon-general, etc.; in a restricted sense, in the U. S. army, an officer of the highest rank except the President, the title being conferred only by a special act of Congress; in European armies, an officer of a definite high rank, in Great Britain being just below a field-marshal; eccles., the chief of a religious order.—in general, with respect to the whole class referred to; also, as a general rule; commonly; usually; also, without exception†; also, in all things†.—gen'er-al, v. t.; -aled or -alled, -aling or -alling. To serve as general to.—gen'er-al-cy, n.; pl. -cies (-siz). The office or rank of a general.

gen'er-al-is-si-mo (jen'ē-rā-lis'i-mō), n.; pl. -mos (-mōz). [It., superl. of generale, general, < L. generalis: see general.] The supreme commander of all the forces of a country, or of several armies acting together.

gen'er-al-i-ty (jen'ē-rāl'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [LL. generalitas.] The state or quality of being general; also, something that is general; a general principle or proposition; a general or vague statement; also, the main body, greater part, or majority (as, "the generality of travellers": Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice," xxvii.); formerly, in France, a fiscal and administrative district.

gen'er-al-i-za-tion (jen'ē-rāl-i-zā'shən), n. The act or process of generalizing; an instance of this; also, a result of this process; a general inference.

gen'er-al-ize (jen'ē-rāl-iz), v.; -ized, -izing. I. tr. To make general; bring into general use or knowledge; also, to give a general (rather than specific or special) character to; sometimes, to make indefinite or without distinctive features; also, to infer inductively, as a general rule from particular facts; also, to infer a general principle, etc., from (facts, etc.). II. intr. To form general notions; also, to make general inferences; also, to deal or indulge in generalities.—gen'er-al-iz-er (-i-zēr), n.

gen'er-al-ly (jen'ē-rāl-i), adv. All together†, in a body†, or collectively†; also, universally†; with respect to the larger part, or for the most part (as, a claim generally recognized); in most cases, usually, or commonly (as, he generally comes at noon); also, in a general (rather than specific) way, or without reference to particular persons or things (as, generally speaking; a charge made against a class of persons generally; interested in all sports generally).—gen'er-al-ness, n.

gen'er-al-ship (jen'ē-rāl-ship), n. The office or rank of a general; also, the exercise of a general's functions; also, skill as a general; hence, management or tactics generally.

gen'er-ant (jen'ē-rānt). I. a. Generating; producing. II. n. A generator.

gen'er-ate (jen'ē-rāt), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [L. generatus, pp. of generare, < genus, race, kind: see genus, and cf. gender, v.] To produce (offspring); procreate; hence, to bring into existence; produce; evolve; also, to bring about; give rise to; in math., to form (a line, surface, figure, or solid) by the motion of a point, line, or figure.—gen'er-a-tion (-ē-rā'shən), n. [L. generatio(n-).] The act or process of generating; procreation; reproduction; the fact of being generated; descent or genealogy (now rare: as, "the book of the generation of Jesus Christ," Mat. i. 1); also, production by natural or artificial processes; evolution, as of heat or sounds; also, offspring† or progeny†; descendants†; also, the offspring of a given parent or of given parents, considered as a single degree or step in descent; a single degree or step in natural descent, as of human beings, animals, or plants; specif., a form or phase of a plant or animal, with reference to the manner of its reproduction (as, the asexual generation and the sexual generation: see alternation of generations, under alternation); also, the whole body of individuals born about the same general period (as, the last, present, or next generation; the rising generation); the time covered by their lives; a term of years (commonly 30) accepted as the average difference of age between one generation of a family and the next; also, a family†; a race†; a class of persons†.—gen'er-a-tive (-ē-rā-tiv), a. Having the power of generating; pertaining to generation.—gen'er-a-tor (-ē-rā-tōr), n. [L.] One who generates; also, something that generates or produces; specif., an apparatus for producing a gas or vapor; also, a machine by which mechanical energy is converted into electrical energy; a dynamo.—gen'er-a'trix (-ē-rā'triks), n. [L.] A female generator†; in math., a point, line, or figure whose motion gives rise to a line, surface, figure, or solid.

gen'er-ic (jē-ner'ik), a. [= F. générique, < L. genus (gener-), race, kind, E. genus.] Pertaining to or characteristic of a genus, kind, or class, esp. a zoological or botanical genus (as, generic characters or differences); applicable or referring to all of the individuals forming a genus or class (as, a generic name or term). Also gen'er-i-cal.—gen'er-i-cal-ly, adv. With reference to genus, kind, or class, esp. to zoological or botanical genus (as, generically identical or distinct; generically related or different); with reference to all of the members of a genus or class, rather than to a particular member of it (as, to use a term generically).

gen'er-os-i-ty (jen'ē-ros'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [L. generositas.] The quality of being generous; excellence of race or stock (archaic); freedom from meanness or smallness of mind or character; magnanimity; readiness or liberality in giving; munificence; also, a generous act.

gen'er-ous (jen'ē-rus), a. [F. généreux, < L. generosus, < genus, race, kind: see genus.] Of good birth or stock (archaic); also, gallant, spirited, or courageous (archaic); also, noble-minded or magnanimous, as persons; indicative of freedom from meanness or smallness of mind or character, as actions, etc.; also, munificent, liberal, or bountiful, as a giver or a gift; sometimes, fertile, as soil; hence, in general, furnished liberally (as, a generous table; a generous portion); abundant; full; ample; also, rich or strong, as wine.—gen'er-ous-ly, adv.—gen'er-ous-ness, n.

gen'er-sis (jen'ē-sis), n.; pl. geneses (-sēz). [L., < Gr. γένεσις, origin, origination, production, creation, < γεν-, bear, produce: see genius.] Origin; production; creation; mode of generation or formation; [cap.] the first book of the Old Testament, so named as containing an account of the creation of the world.

gen-et¹ (jen'et), n. See jennet.

gen-et² (jen'et or jē-net'), n. [OF. genete (F. genette), < Sp. ginita; from Ar.] Any of the small old-world carnivorous quadrupeds constituting the genus Genetta, esp. G. vulgaris, allied to the civet-cats but without a scent-pouch, and yielding a soft fur; also, the fur of such an animal, or an imitation of it, as from cat's fur.

g-e-n-e-th-li-ac (jē-neth'li-ak). [L.

Genet (Genetta vulgaris).

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, elect, agōny, intō, unite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thūn; ʒ, then; y, you;

genethliacus, < Gr. γενεθλιακός, pertaining to birth or nativity, < γενέθλη, birth, < γεν-, bear, produce: see genius.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the casting of nativities; also, pertaining to a birthday. II. n. One who is versed in genethliology (as, "Strange turns, in the world's affairs, Foreseen b' astrologers, soothsayers, Chaldeans, learned Genethliacs": Butler's "Hudibras," ii. 3); also, a birthday ode.—ge-eth-li-a-con (jen-eth-li'ā-kon), n.; pl. -ea (-kā). [L., < Gr. γενεθλιακόν, neut. of γενεθλιακός.] A birthday ode.—ge-neth-li-al'o-gy (-li-al'ō-jī), n. [Gr. γενεθλιαλογία, < γενέθλη, birth, + λέγειν, speak.] The art of casting nativities; astrology.

ge-net-ic (jē-net'ik), a. [From genesis.] Of or pertaining to genesis or origin. Also ge-net/i-cal, ge-net/i-cal-ly, adv.—ge-net/ics, n. The science of genesis, esp. the genesis of living organisms; in biol., that portion of evolutionary science which deals with natural development uncomplicated by artificial process.

gen-e-trix, gen-i-trix (jen'ē-triks, jen'i-), n. [L., fem. of genitor: see genitor.] A female parent; a mother.

ge-ne-va (jē-nē'vā), n. [D. genever, jenever, < F. genièvre, < L. juniperus, E. juniper.] An alcoholic liquor flavored with juniper-berries; Holland gin. See *gin*³.

Ge-ne-va (jē-nē'vā) bands. [From Geneva, city in Switzerland.] Two bands, or pendent strips, worn at the throat as part of a clerical garb: worn orig. by the Swiss Calvinist clergy.—Ge-ne-va Bi'ble. See under Bible.—Ge-ne-va Con-ven'tion. An international convention, orig. adopted at a conference at Geneva in 1864 but subsequently altered, providing for the neutrality of ambulances and hospitals, the protection of sanitary officers, military and naval chaplains, and civilians rendering help to the sick and wounded, etc., during war.—Ge-ne-va cross. A red Greek cross on a white ground, displayed in war, etc., to distinguish ambulances and hospitals, and persons serving them. Also called red cross.—Ge-ne-va gown. A loose, large-sleeved black preaching-gown worn by Protestant clergymen: so named from its use by the Swiss Calvinist clergy.

Ge-ne-van (jē-nē'vān). I. a. Of or pertaining to Geneva in Switzerland or, esp., its ecclesiastical organization; Calvinistic. II. n. A native or inhabitant of Geneva; also, an adherent of Geneva or Calvinistic theology; a Calvinist.

Gen-e-ve-se (jen-ē-vēs' or -vēs'), I. a. Of or pertaining to Geneva in Switzerland. II. n.; pl. -ve-se. A native or inhabitant of Geneva.

ge-ni-al¹ (jē-nī'al), a. [Gr. γένειον, chin, < γένυ, jaw; akin to E. chin.] In anat., of or pertaining to the chin.

ge-ni-al² (jē-nī'al), a. [L. genialis, pertaining to generation or to marriage, festive, jovial, pleasant, < genius: see genius.] Pertaining to generation, or generative (now rare); pertaining to marriage, or nuptial (now rare); also, conducive to growth, as climate, sunshine, etc.; hence, pleasantly warm, or mild (as, "a soft sunny morning in the genial month of May": Irving's "Sketch-Book," Royal Poet); also, cheering or enlivening (as, "I hail Thy genial loved return": Wm. Collins's "Ode to Evening," 20); also, sympathetically cheerful; kindly; jovial; also, natural† or innate† (as, "a theologian more by need than genial bent": Dryden's "Hind and the Panther," iii. 1147); also, of, pertaining to, or characterized by genius, or exalted natural capacity and aptitude.—ge-ni-al/i-ty (-nī-al'i-ti), n. Genial quality; mildness, as of weather; sympathetic cheerfulness, or kindness.—ge'nial-ize, v. t.; -ized, -izing. To render genial.—ge'nial-ly, adv.—ge'nial-ness, n.

-genic. [Gr. γεν-, bear, produce; or from E. -gen (or -geny) + -ic.] An adjective termination meaning 'producing,' 'produced,' or 'pertaining to production,' as in carpogenic, eugenic, hepatogenic, pathogenic, psycho-genic, pyrogenic, saprogenic, toxigenic.

ge-nic-u-late, ge-nic-u-lat-ed (jē-nik'ū-lāt, -lā-ted), a. [L. geniculatus, < geniculum, dim. of genu, knee: see genu.] Having knee-like joints or bends; bent at a joint like the knee.—ge-nic-u-la'tion (-lā'shqn), n. Geniculate state; a geniculate formation.

ge-nie (jē'ni), n. [F. génie, < L. genius: see genius.] A tutelary genius†; also, a jinni or spirit of Mohammedan mythology.

ge-niū (jē'nī), n. Latin plural of genius.

gen-i-pap (jen'i-pap), n. [From native name.] The edible fruit of a tropical American rubiaceous tree, Genipa americana, about the size of an orange and having an agreeable vinous flavor; also, the tree.

gen-i-tal (jen'i-tal), a. [L. genitalis, < gignere (pp. genitus), beget, bear: see genius.] Pertaining to generation, or to the organs of generation.

—gen-i-ta'li-a (-tā'li-ā), n. pl. [L.] The genitals.—

gen'i-tals, n. pl.

The genital organs, esp. the external genital organs, usually of the male.

gen-i-tive (jen'i-tiv). [L. genitivus, genetivus, lit. 'pertaining to generation' (< gen-, beget, produce: see genius), used to render Gr. γενικός, generic (ἡ γενική πρῶσις, the generic or genitive case), < γένος, race, kind: see genus.] In gram.: I. a. Pertaining to or indicating origin, source, possession, or the like: applied to a case in declension in Latin and other languages (corresponding in part to the possessive in English), or to its forms, constructions, etc.

II. n. The genitive case, or a word in that case.—gen-i-ti'val (-tī'vāl), a.

gen-i-tor (jen'i-tor), n. [L., < gignere (pp. genitus), beget, bear: see genius.] A male parent; a father; a progenitor. [Now rare.]

gen-i-to-u-ri-na-ry (jen'ī-tō-ū'ri-nā-rī), a. Noting or pertaining to the genital and urinary organs.

gen-i-trix (jen'i-triks), n. See genetrix.

ge-nius (jē'nīus), n.; pl. geniuses or (in senses meaning 'attendant spirit' and 'genie') genii (jē'nīi). [L., tutelary spirit, taste, inclination, talent, genius, orig. a male generative or creative principle, < gen- (as in gignere, pp. genitus, beget, bear) = Gr. γεν- (as in γίγνεσθαι, γενέσθαι, be born) = Skt. jan-, beget, bear, produce: see *genial*², genial, genus, genesis, and kin.] A tutelary or attendant spirit which, according to ancient belief, was allotted to each person at his birth; the attending or controlling spirit of a place, institution, etc.; also, either of two mutually opposed spirits, one good and the other evil, supposed to attend a person throughout his life; hence, a person who strongly influences for good or evil the character, conduct, or destiny of another; also, a personification of something immaterial, esp. as represented in art; a person or thing regarded as an embodied type of something (as, "I do remember him . . . like a man made after supper of a cheese-paring . . . a' was the very genius of famine": Shakspeare's "2 Henry IV.," iii. 2. 337); also, any demon or spirit, esp. a genie or jinni (now chiefly or only in pl. genii); also, a person's characteristic disposition or bent; distinctive character or spirit, as of a nation, period, language, or institution; the peculiar character or associations belonging to a place; also, natural ability or capacity (as, a task suited to one's genius); natural aptitude for something (as, to have a genius for finance, for politics, or for making friends); also, exalted or phenomenal natural capacity and aptitude, as for creative and original conceptions, esp. in literature, art, or science; also, a person having such capacity and aptitude (as, "Homer was the greater genius, Virgil the better artist": Pope's Preface, in tr. Homer's "Iliad").

Gen-o-ese (jen-ō-ēs' or -ēz'). I. a. Of or pertaining to Genoa, in northwestern Italy. II. n.; pl. -ese. A native or inhabitant of Genoa. Also Gen-o-ve-se (-vēs' or -vēs'), a. and *n.

-genous. [Gr. -γενής, born, produced, or γεν-, bear, produce (see -gen); or from E. -gen + -ous.] An adjective termination meaning 'produced' or 'producing,' as in alkaligenous, autogenous, isogenous.

Genipap. — Flowering branch and fruit.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; '', secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

genro (zhoŋr), n. [F.: see gender.] Genus; kind; sort; style; esp., style of art or literature with reference to subject, treatment, etc.; also, the style or kind of painting (or other art) that represents scenes from ordinary life (as distinguished from landscapes, historical subjects, etc.).

gens (jenz), n.; pl. gentes (jen'téz). [L. clan, race, people, < gen-, beget, produce: see genius.] A group of families in ancient Rome claiming descent from a common ancestor and united by a common name and common religious rites; in general, a tribe or clan.

gent¹ (jent), a. [OF. gent, < L. genitus, pp. of gignere, beget, bear: see genius.] Well-born or noble; hence, well-bred; also, elegant, graceful, or pretty (as, "He lov'd . . . a Lady gent": Spenser's "Faerie Queene," i. 9. 27).

gent² (jent), n. Shortened form of gentleman. [Now chiefly humorous or vulgar.]

gen-teel (jen-tél'), a. [F. gentil: see gentile.] Of gentle birth (archaic); hence, belonging or suited to polite society, as persons, manners, pursuits, dress, dwellings, etc. (as, "Do now send a genteel conveyance for them, for . . . they were most of them used to ride in their own carriages": Sheridan's "School for Scandal," iv. 1); well-bred or refined; gentlemanly or ladylike; elegant or stylish; nice or fine. [Now often used playfully or ironically, with implication of excessive reverence for or careful affectation of characteristics indicated by the word, which by many is now regarded with disfavor].—gen-teel'ly, adv.—gen-teel'ness, n.

gen-tes (jen'téz), n. Plural of gens.

gen-tian (jen'shan), n. [L. gentiana; said to be named from Gentius, an Illyrian king.] Any plant of the large genus Gentiana, comprising herbs having commonly blue flowers, less frequently yellow, white, or red, as G. crinila (one of the 'fringed gentians'), of eastern North America, with blue, delicately fringed corolla, and G. lutea, a yellow-flowered European species whose root is used in medicine; also, the root of G. lutea, or a preparation of it, used as a stomachic and tonic; also, any of various plants resembling the gentian.—gen'ti-a-na'ceous (-shi-ā-nā'shius), a. Belonging to the Gentianaceæ, or gentian family of plants.

gen-ti-a-nel-la (jen'shi-ā-nel'ā), n. [NL., dim. of L. gentiana, E. gentian.] Any of several species of gentian (sometimes regarded as being the typical members of a subgenus, Gentianella, or as comprising a single species, Gentiana acaulis), esp. a dwarf species native in the Alps and bearing large, intensely blue flowers.

gen-tile (jen'til or -til). [L. gentilis, belonging to a clan, race, or people, national, LL. foreign, pagan, heathen, < L. gens, clan, race, people: see gens.] I. a. Of or pertaining to a gens, tribe, or nation (as, gentile divisions; a gentile group); of a word, expressing race, nationality, or local extraction (as, a gentile noun or adjective, such as 'Arab,' 'Greek,' 'Peruvian'); also [often cap., and pron. only jen'til], of or pertaining to any people not Jewish; also, heathen or pagan; also, among Mormons, of or pertaining to those outside the Mormon community. II. n. A member of a gens; also, a noun or adjective indicating race, nationality, or local extraction; also [often cap., and pron. only jen'til], a person belonging to a non-Jewish nation; also, one neither a Jew nor a Christian; a heathen or pagan; also, among Mormons, one not a Mormon.—gen-til'ic (-til'ik), a. Tribal or national, as a name.—gen-til-ism (-til-izm), n. Heathenism; paganism.

gen-ti-li-tial (jen-ti-lish'al), a. [L. gentililis, gentiliculus, < gentilis: see gentile.] Pertaining to a particular gens, clan, or family; also, pertaining to a particular people or nation; national. Also gen-ti-li'tious (-lish'us).

gen-til-i-ty (jen-til'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [OF. gentilite, gentilism, heathenism, also (with sense from gentil: see gentile) gentle birth (F. gentilité, gentilism, the gentiles), < L. gentilitas, clan relationship, LL. paganism, heathenism, < L. gentilis: see gentile and gentile.] The relation of those belonging to the same Roman gens or clan; also, gentilism† or heathenism†; also, gentle birth; people of gentle birth†, or the gentry†; gentle manners† or courtesy†; also, the state or quality of being genteel (see note added to genteel); superior refinement, elegance, etc., as possessed or affected; pl., genteel ways, niceties, appearances, etc. (as, "Let him forsake a decent craft that he may pursue the gentilities of a profession to which nature never called him": George Eliot's "Silas Marner," ix.).

gen-tle (jen'tl), a.; compar. gentler, superl. gentilest. [OF. gentil, of good family, noble, excellent (F. gentil, nice, graceful, pretty), < L. gentilis: see gentile, and cf. genteel and jaunty.] Of good birth or family, or well-born, as persons (often opposed to simple); of excellent breed, as an animal (now only of a falcon: cf. falcon-gentle); good, superior, or honorable, as birth, blood, or family; also (from the association of certain characteristics with gentle birth), noble, gallant, or chivalrous (archaic: as, a gentle knight); courteous (archaic: as, "There fayrely then receives a gentle Squyre, Of myld demeanure and rare courtesee," Spenser's "Faerie Queene," i. 10. 7); refined, as manners or breeding; polite or fine, as a pursuit (as, the gentle art of angling; the gentle craft, see phrase below); mild, kindly, or amiable (as, a gentle lady; a gentle disposition; gentle words); considerate or forbearing (as, "For I have let men be, and have their way; Am much too gentle, have not used my power": Tennyson's "Marriage of Geraint," 467); of things, mild, or not severe, rough, or violent (as, a gentle wind, current, or stream; a gentle tap; gentle measures); soft or low, as sound; moderate, as heat; gradual, as a slope; of animals, tame, or easily handled or managed; of plants, cultivated (archaic: opposed to wild).—gentle reader, courteous or kind reader: an old expression still sometimes used by the author in addressing or mentioning the reader in the course of a book or the like.—the gentle craft, the trade of shoemaking (as in the title of Dekker's play, "The Shoemakers' Holiday; or, The Gentle Craft"); also, the sport of angling.—the gentle (or gentler) sex, the female sex.—gen'tle, n. A person of gentle birth or good family (archaic); also, a falcon-gentle; also, a maggot or larva of a flesh-fly, used as bait by anglers.—gen'tle, v. t.; -led, -ling. To make gentle or honorable† (as, "Be he ne'er so vile, This day shall gentle his condition": Shakspeare's "Henry V.," iv. 3. 63); also, to make mild; soften; also, to tame (a horse, etc.).—gen'tle-folk, n. Persons of good family and breeding: often (as orig.) in pl., gentlefolks.—gen'tle-heart'ed, a. Gentle in heart or disposition; mild; kindly.—gen'tle-hood (-húd), n. The character or breeding proper to gentle birth.

gen-tle-man (jen'tl-mən), n.; pl. -men. [ME. gentil man: cf. F. gentilhomme.] A man of gentle birth, or above the social rank of yeoman, esp. one who bears a coat of arms though not ranking among the nobility (Eng.); also, a man of gentle birth who recognizes and fulfils the obligations of honor attaching to his station (as, "And thus he bore without abuse The grand old name of gentleman": Tennyson's "In Memoriam," cxi.); also, a man of good breeding or polite manners (as, "With such true breeding of a gentleman, You never could divine his real thought": Byron's "Don Juan," iii. 41); often, a man of fine feelings or instincts (irrespective of social position or training), as shown by behavior and esp. by nice or generous consideration for others (as, "It is almost a definition of a gentleman to say he is one who never inflicts pain": J. H. Newman's "Idea of a University," i. 8); also, a man of superior social position or advantages; a man who lives on independent means without engaging in business, professional work, etc.; a polite term for any man (as a term of address, now only in the pl., as in addressing an audience, the term in the sing. being sir); also, a male personal servant, or valet, of a man of social position (sometimes called 'gentleman's gentleman').

Gentian (Gentiana lutea).

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, ásk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pùll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, flect, agôny, intô, ûnite; (obscured) errânt, operă, ardënt, actor, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

—gentlemen's agreement, an agreement binding as a matter of honor alone, as one not reduced to legal form or one whose terms could not be enforced at law.—gen'tle-man-at-arms', n. In England, one of a guard of forty gentlemen with their officers who attend the sovereign on state occasions.—gen'tle-man-hood (-hüd), n. The condition or character of a gentleman.—gen'tle-man-like, a. Gentlemanly.—gen'tle-man-ly, a. Like or befitting a gentleman; well-bred; polite.—gen'tle-man-li-ness, n.

gen-tle-ness (jen'tl-nes), n. The state or quality of being gentle.

gen-tle-wom-an (jen'tl-wüm'an), n.; pl. -women (-wim'en). [ME. gentil womman.] A woman of good family or breeding; also, a woman who attends upon a lady of rank.—gen'tle-wom'an-hood (-hüd), n. The condition or character of a gentlewoman.—gen'tle-wom'an-like, gen'tle-wom'an-ly, a. Like or befitting a gentlewoman.—gen'tle-wom'an-li-ness, n.

gen-tly (jen'tli), adv. In a gentle manner.

Gen-too' (jen-tō'). [Anglo-Ind., < Pg. gentio, gentile, pagan (applied to the Hindus as contrasted with the Mohammedans), < L. gentilis: see gentile.] I. n. An adherent of the Hindu religion; esp., a Telugu; also, the language of the Telugus. II. a. Of or pertaining to the Gentoos.

gen-too' (jen-tō'), n. [Cf. *Gentoo*¹.] A penguin, Pygoscelis taniata, of the Falkland Islands.

gen-trice (jen'tris), n. [OF. gentrise, var. of gentilise, < gentil, E. gentle.] Gentle birth, or persons of gentle birth; also, good breeding; honorable or noble feeling; generosity. [Archaic or Sc.]

gen-try (jen'tri), n. [ME.; appar. a var. of gentrice.] Gentle birth (archaic); the quality or rank of gentleman (archaic); also, the class of well-born and well-bred people, esp., as in England, the class next below the nobility; also, 'gentlemen' or persons of any particular class (used in playful or ironical civility: as, "Reader, if thou meetest one of these small gentry . . . it is good to give him a penny," Lamb's "Praise of Chimney-Sweepers"); also, courtesy† (see Shakespeare's "Hamlet," ii. 2. 22).

ge-nu (jē'nū), n.; pl. genua (jen'ū-ā). [L., the knee; akin to E. knee.] In anat., the knee; a knee-like part or bend.—genu valgum (val'gum). [L., properly, 'knee bent outward,' bow-leg (not knock-knee).] Knock-knee. Cf. genu varum.—genu varum (vā'rum). [L., properly, 'knee bent inward,' knock-knee.] Bow-leg. Cf. genu valgum.—gen-u-al (jen'ū-āl), a. Of or pertaining to the knee; knee-like.

gen-u-flect (jen'ū-flekt' or jen'ū-flekt), v. i. [ML. genuflectere, < L. genu, knee, + flectere, bend.] To bend the knee, as in worship; perform a genuflection.—gen-u-flec'tor (-flek'tōr), n.—gen-u-flex'ion, gen-u-flec'tion (-flek'shən), n. [ML. genuflexio(n).] The act of genuflecting; esp., a momentary sinking downward by bending one knee or both as a gesture of reverence or worship.

gen-u-ine (jen'ū-in), a. [L. genuinus, native, natural, authentic, genuine, < gen-, beget, produce: see genius.] Native or natural, rather than foreign or acquired; also, belonging to or proceeding from the original stock (as, a genuine Celtic people; a dog of the genuine Newfoundland breed); pure in race or breed; also, actually proceeding from the reputed source or author, as a relic, painting, signature, writing, etc. (as, "The political correspondence of Machiavelli, first published in 1767, is unquestionably genuine": Macaulay's "Essays," Machiavelli); authentic, or not spurious; also, being truly such, rather than counterfeit, pretended, or merely seeming (as, genuine regret; genuine worth or benefit; genuine cause for satisfaction); real or true; properly so called (as, a case of genuine lep-rosy); also, sincere, or free from pretense or affectation, as a person.—gen'u-ine-ly, adv.—gen'u-ine-ness, n.

ge-nus (jē'nus), n.; pl. genera (jen'ē-rā) or genuses. [L. genus (= Gr. γένος), race, stock, kind, sort, gender, < gen- (= Gr. γεν-), beget, bear, produce: see genius, and cf. gender.] A kind, sort, or class; in logic, a class or group of individuals including subordinate groups called species; in zool. and bot., a group or category ranking below a family and above a species; a group of animal or plant species (sometimes a single species) possessing certain structural characters different from those of any other.

-geny. [Gr. γένεα, < γενής, born, produced; or Gr. γεν-, bear, produce: see -gen.] A noun termination meaning 'production,' 'genesis,' 'origination,' or 'evolution,' as in autogeny, cosmogeny, epirogeny, phylogeny.

geo-. Form of Gr. γῆ, earth, used in combination.—ge-o-centric (jē-ō-sen'trik), a. In astron., as viewed or measured from the center of the earth (as, the geocentric latitude of a planet); also, having or representing the earth as a center (as, a geocentric theory of the universe).—ge-o-cen'tri-cal-ly, adv.—ge-o-chem'is-try, n. The science dealing with the chemical changes in, and the composition of, the earth's crust.—ge-o-chem'i-cal, a.—ge-o-cyc'lic (-sik'lik), a. [See cyclic.] Of or pertaining to the revolutions of the earth (as, a geocyclic machine, a machine for illustrating processes by which day and night and the seasons are produced); also, circling the earth periodically.

ge-ode (jē'ōd), n. [L. geodes, < Gr. γεώδης, earth-like, < γῆ, earth, + εἶδος, form.] A hollow concretionary or nodular stone frequently lined with crystals.—ge-o-dal (jē-ō-dāl), a.

ge-o-des-ic (jē-ō-des'ik), a. Of or pertaining to geodesy; pertaining to the extension of theorems of plane geometry to figures drawn on curved surfaces (as, a geodesic line, a line so drawn upon a curved surface, or any surface, as to coincide with the position of a string stretched across the surface between any two points in the line). Also ge-o-des'i-cal.

ge-od-e-sist (jē-ōd'e-sist), n. One versed in geodesy; a geodetic surveyor.

ge-od-e-sy (jē-ōd'e-si), n. [Gr. γεωδαισία, < γῆ, earth, + δαίω, divide.] That branch of applied mathematics which determines the shape and area of large tracts of country, the exact position of geographical points, and the curvature, shape, and dimensions of the earth; also, that branch of surveying which involves such applied mathematics.—ge-o-det'ic (jē-ō-det'ik), a. Pertaining to geodesy; geodesic. Also ge-o-det'i-cal.—ge-o-det'i-cal-ly, adv.—ge-o-det'ics, n. Geodesy.

ge-od'ic (jē-ōd'ik), a. Of, pertaining to, or resembling a geode.

ge-o-duck (jē'ō-duk), n. Erroneous form of goeduck for queduck.

ge-o-dy-nam-ic (jē'ō-dī-nam'ik), a. [See geo- and dy-namic.] Noting or pertaining to the natural forces and processes (volcanic, seismic, etc.) of the earth's interior and crust.—ge'o-dy-nam'ics, n. The science dealing with geodynamic phenomena.

ge-og-e-ny (jē-ōj'e-ni), n. [See geo- and -geny.] Geogony; also, that branch of geology which treats of the formation of the earth's crust.—ge-o-gen'ic (jē-ō-jen'ik), a.

ge-og-nost (jē'ō-gnost), n. [G. geognost, < Gr. γῆ, earth, + γνῶστος, one who knows.] One versed in geognosy.—ge-og-nos'tic (-nos'tik), a. Of or pertaining to geognosy.—ge-og-nos'ti-cal-ly, adv.

ge-og-no-sy (jē-ōg'nō-si), n. [G. geognosie, < Gr. γῆ, earth, + γνῶσις, knowledge.] That branch of geology which treats of the constituent parts of the earth, its envelop of air and water, its crust, and the probable condition of its interior.

ge-og-o-ny (jē-ōg'ō-ni), n. [See geo- and -gony.] The genesis or origination of the earth; a theory or account of the origin of the earth.

ge-og-ra-pher (jē-ōg'rā-fēr), n. One versed in geography.

Gentoo.

Geode (Quartz).

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

ge-o-graph-ic, ge-o-graph-i-cal (jē-ō-graf'ik, -i-kəl), a. [Gr. γεωγραφικός.] Of or pertaining to geography; having reference to position, extent, area, etc., on the earth.—ge-o-graphical mile. See under mile.—ge-o-graph'i-cal-ly, adv.

ge-og-ra-phize (jē-og'ra-fiz), v.; -phized, -phizing. I. intr. To pursue geographical researches. II. tr. To determine or describe the geographical character of.

ge-og-ra-phy (jē-og'ra-fi), n.; pl. -phies (-fiz). [L. geographia, < Gr. γεωγραφία, < γῆ, earth, + γράφειν, draw, write.] The science of the description of the earth in its external aspects, dealing with its form and movements, physical features, climate and products, inhabitants, and natural and political divisions, and the population, industries, etc., of the various countries; also, a treatise on this science; also, the topographical features of a region: properly referring to the earth, but sometimes used with reference to Mars, the moon, etc.

ge-oid (jē'oid), n. [Gr. γεοειδής, earth-like, var. of γεωδής: see geode.] An imaginary surface which coincides with the mean sea-level over the ocean and its extension under the continents; the geometrical figure formed by this surface.—ge-oi-dal (jē-oi'dəl), a.

ge-o-log-ic, ge-o-log-i-cal (jē-ō-loj'ik, -i-kəl), a. Of or pertaining to geology.—ge-o-log'i-cal-ly, adv.

ge-ol-o-gist (jē-ol'ō-jist), n. One versed in geology; specif., one employed in the investigation or exposition of the structure of the earth, or of any part of it (as, the geologist of an exploring expedition; a state geologist).

ge-ol-o-gize (jē-ol'ō-jiz), v.; -gized, -gizing. I. intr. To make geological investigations. II. tr. To study or describe the geological character of.

ge-ol-o-gy (jē-ol'ō-jī), n.; pl. -gies (-jiz). [NL. geologia, < Gr. γῆ, earth, + λογία, < λέγειν, speak.] The science which treats of the earth's crust, the strata of which it is composed, and the physical changes which it has undergone or is still undergoing; also, a treatise on this science.

ge-o-man-cy (jē'ō-man-sī), n. [OF. geomancie (F. géomancie), < ML. geomantia, < Gr. γῆ, earth, + μαντεία, divination.] Divination by means of signs connected with the earth, as by the figure made by a handful of earth thrown down at random; hence, divination by means of figures or lines formed by a number of dots jotted down at random.—ge'ō-man-cer (-sēr), n.—ge-o-man'tic, a.

ge-om-e-ter (jē-om'e-tēr), n. [L. geometra, geometres, < Gr. γεωμέτρης, land-measurer, geometer, < γῆ, earth, + μέτρον, measure.] One versed in geometry; a geometrician; also, a geometrid moth or its larva.

ge-o-met-ric, ge-o-met-ri-cal (jē-ō-met'rik, -ri-kəl), a. [L. geometricus, < Gr. γεωμετρικός, < γεωμετρία: see geometry.] Of or pertaining to geometry; according to the principles of geometry; also, resembling or employing the lines or figures in geometry.—ge-o-met'ri-cal-ly, adv.

—ge-om-e-tri-cian (jē-om-e-trish'an), n. One versed in geometry.

ge-om-e-trid (jē-om'e-trid). [NL. Geometridæ, < L. geometra: see geometer.] I. n. Any of the Geometridæ, a family of moths whose larvæ (called measuring-worms) progress by bringing the rear end of the body forward, thus forming a loop, and then advancing the front end. II. a. Belonging to the Geometridæ (family of geometrids).

ge-om-e-trism (jē-om'e-trizm), n. A movement in pictorial art, subsequent to cubism and first attracting attention in 1922, which characteristically involves representation by geometrical lines and figures.

ge-om-e-trize (jē-om'e-triz), v.; -trized, -trizing. I. intr. To work by geometrical methods; practise geometry. II. tr. To form geometrically.

ge-om-e-try (jē-om'e-trī), n.; pl. -tries (-triz). [OF. geometrie (F. géométrie), < L. geometria, < Gr. γεωμετρία, < γεω- μέτρον: see geometer.] That branch of mathematics which treats of the properties and relations of lines, surfaces, and solids; the science of magnitudes in space; also, a treatise on this subject.—analytical (or analytic) geometry, geometry treated by means of algebra, with reference, direct or indirect, to a system of coordinates.—descriptive geometry, the theory of making projections of any accurately defined figure such that from them can be deduced not only its projective, but also its metrical, properties; also, geometry in general treated by means of projections.—plane geometry, the geometry of figures whose parts all lie in one plane.—solid geometry, the geometry of solid figures; geometry of three dimensions.

ge-o-mor-phic (jē-ō-mōr'fik), a. [See geo- and -morphic.] Of or pertaining to the figure of the earth or the contours and forms of its surface; resembling the earth in form.

ge-oph-a-gy (jē-ōf'a-jī), n. [See geo- and -phagy.] The practice of eating earthy matter, as clay or chalk. Also ge-oph'a-gism (-jizm).—ge-oph'a-gist (-jist), n.

ge-oph-i-lous (jē-ōf'i-lus), a. [See geo- and -philous.] In zool., terrestrial, as certain snails; in bot., growing or rooting in the ground; fruiting underground.

ge-o-phone (jē'ō-fōn), n. [See geo- and -phone.] A device with which to detect sounds transmitted through the ground, and to determine their kind and the direction or location of their source: invented and used by the French, during the World War, for locating mining operations of the Germans, and afterward (with various modifications) employed in locating fires in coal-mines, rescuing imprisoned miners, etc.

ge-o-phys-ics (jē-ō-fiz'iks), n. [See geo-.] The physics of the earth; the science dealing with the relations between the features of the earth and the agencies that produce them.—ge-o-phys'i-cal, a.—ge-o-phys'i-cist (-sist), n.

ge-o-pon-ic (jē-ō-pon'ik), a. [Gr. γεωπονικός, < γεωπονία, tillage, < γεωπόνος, husbandman, < γῆ, earth, + πένησθαι, work.] Of or pertaining to tillage or agriculture; agricultural; hence, rustic; countrified.—ge-o-pon'ics, n. The art or science of agriculture.

ge-o-ra-ma (jē-ō-rā'mā), n. [F. géorama, < Gr. γῆ, earth, + ὄραμα, view.] A large hollow globe on the inside of which is depicted a map of the earth's surface, to be viewed by a spectator within the globe.

George (jōrj), n. A jewel showing a figure of St. George (the patron saint of England) on horseback encountering the dragon, worn as part of the insignia of the Order of the Garter (as, "Look on my George; I am a gentleman": Shakespeare's "2 Henry VI." iv. 1. 29); also, an English coin bearing the image of St. George†.

geor-gette (jōr-jet'), n. [For Georgette crêpe, so called from Mme. Georgette, French modiste.] A fine, thin, transparent variety of silk crape, with minute irregularities of surface.

Geor-gian¹ (jōr'jān), a. Of or pertaining to the four Georges, kings of Great Britain and Ireland (1714–1830), or the period of their reigns; also, of or pertaining to George V. (acceded to the throne in 1910), or the period of his reign; also, of or pertaining to the State of Georgia in the U. S. (named after George II.). II. n. A person, esp. a writer, of either of the Georgian periods in England; also, a native or inhabitant of the State of Georgia.

Geor-gian² (jōr'jān), a. Of or pertaining to Georgia in Transcaucasia, east of the Black Sea; also, of or pertaining to the Georgians or their language. II. n. A native or inhabitant of Georgia in Transcaucasia; one of a handsome race, of purest Caucasian type, inhabiting a large part of Transcaucasia, and speaking an agglutinative language which has no known connection with any other tongue; also, the language itself.

geor-gic (jōr'jik). [L. georgicus, < Gr. γεωργικός, < γεωργία, tillage, < γεωργός, husbandman, < γῆ, earth, + εργός, working, worker.] I. a. Pertaining to husbandry; agricultural. II. n. A poem on husbandry or agricultural matters: as, Virgil's "Georgics" (L. Georgica).

ge-o-stat-ic (jē-ō-stat'ik), a. [See geo- and -static.] Capable of sustaining the pressure of superincumbent earth or the like, as a type of arch.—ge-o-stat'ics, n. The statics of rigid bodies.

ge-o-syn-cli-nal (jē'ō-sin-klī'nəl). [See geo- and synclinal.] In geol.: I. a. Noting or pertaining to a synclinal fold which embraces a notable part of the earth's surface. II. n.

Geometrid, natural size. — a, larva; b, moth.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

A geosynclinal fold.—ge-o-syn'cline (-klin), n. In geol., a geosynclinal fold.

ge-o-tec-ton-ic (jē'ō-tek-ton'ik), a. [See geo- and tectonic.] Pertaining to the structure of the earth's crust or to the arrangement and form of the materials composing it.

ge-o-ther-mal, ge-o-ther-mic (jē-ō-thēr'mal, -mik), a. [See geo- and thermal.] Of or pertaining to the internal heat of the earth.

ge-o-trop-ic (jē-ō-trop'ik), a. [See geo- and -tropic.] In bot., tending toward the earth, or the center of the earth, as the roots of plants in growing; in general, taking a particular direction with reference to the earth (as, positively geotropic, see def. preceding; negatively geotropic, directed upward, away from the center of the earth; transversely geotropic, directed horizontally).—ge-o-trop'i-cal-ly, adv.—ge-ot-ro-pism (jē-ot'rō-pizm), n. In bot., geotropic tendency or growth.

ge-rah (gē'rā), n. [Heb.] An ancient Jewish weight and coin, equivalent to the twentieth part of a shekel.

ge-ra-ni-a-ceous (jē-rā-ni-ā'shius), a. [See geranium.] Belonging to the Geraniaceæ, or geranium family of plants.

ge-ra-ni-um (jē-rā-ni-um), n. [L., < Gr. γέρανιον, crane's-bill, < γέρανος, crane.] Any of the plants of the genus Geranium, most of which have pink or purple flowers, and some of which, as G. maculatum, have an astringent root used in medicine; crane's-bill; also, a plant of the allied genus Pelargonium, of which many species are well known in cultivation for their showy flowers (as the 'scarlet geranium' and the 'Lady Washington geranium') or their fragrant leaves (as the 'rose-geranium').

ger-a-to-lo-gy (jēr-a-tol'ō-jī), n. [Gr. γήρας (γήρατ-), old age; see -logy.] The science that treats of the decline of life, as in animals approaching extinction.

ger-bil, ger-bille (jēr'bil), n. [F. gerbille, < NL. gerbillus, dim. < jerboa, E. jerboa.] Any of numerous jerboa-like rodents (genus Gerbillus, etc.) of Asia, Africa, and southern Russia, belonging to the mouse family, and forming the subfamily Gerbillinæ.

Gerbil (Gerbillus longifrons).

ge-rent (jēr'rent), n. [L. gerens (gerent-), ppr. of gerere, bear, conduct, manage.] A manager; a ruler.

ger-fal-con (jēr'fā'kn or -fāl'kōn), n. [OF. gerfalcon: cf. OHG. gīr (G. geier), vulture, and E. falcon.] Any of various large falcons of the cold regions of the north.

germ (jērm), n. [F. germe, < L. germen, sprout.] The earliest rudiment of a living organism; an embryo in its early stages; a seed; a bud; also, a micro-organism, esp. when disease-producing; a microbe; in fig. use, that from which anything springs as if from a seed (as, "By thy first step awry thou didst plant the germ of evil": Hawthorne's "Scarlet Letter," xiv.); a formative principle.—germ theory, in biol., the theory of biogenesis; in pathol., the theory that infectious diseases, etc., are due to the agency of germs or micro-organisms.

Gerfalcon (Falco gyrfalco).

ger-man¹ (jēr'man). [OF. F. germain, < L. germanus, german.] I. a. Sprung from the same father and mother (as, a brother german; sisters german); sprung from the brother or sister of one's father or mother, or from brothers or sisters (as, a cousin german; cousins german, see under cousin); hence, akin or related, as persons; fig., related, relevant, or germane; also, genuine or true (obs. or archaic). II. n. One sprung from the same stock; a brother or sister; a near relative.

Ger-man² (jēr'man), a. [L. Germanus; prob. from Celtic.] Of or pertaining to Germany, its inhabitants, or their language; sometimes, pertaining to Germany, the Netherlands, etc., or to the group of related peoples or languages of these regions (as, High German; Low German: cf. the phrases under *German*², n.).—German Baptist Brethren. See Dunker.—German measles, in pathol., rubella.—German silver, a white alloy of copper, zinc, and nickel, used for making utensils, drawing-instruments, wire of high electrical resistance, etc.—German text, in printing, the modern German type, or an ornamental type resembling it. See type.—Ger-man², n.; pl. -mans. A native or inhabitant of Germany; also, the language, esp. the literary language, of Germany; sometimes, a member of any of the group of related peoples of Germany, the Netherlands, etc., or the group of languages, or a particular member of the group, spoken by them (see the phrases below); also [l. c.], an elaborate kind of dance; a cotillion; a party at which it is danced.—High German, an inhabitant of the more elevated parts of Germany, in the center and south; also, the language spoken there, including many dialects, one of which, the court and official dialect of Saxony, became and is now the literary language throughout the whole of Germany (divided into Old High German, extending from about 800 to about 1100; Middle High German, from about 1100 to about 1500; and modern German, from about 1500 on).—Low German, an inhabitant of the more low-lying parts of Germany in the north, or of the Netherlands, etc.; also, the group of dialects spoken by the Low Germans (divided into Old Low German, Middle Low German, and modern Low German, corresponding substantially to the periods of High German).—Ger'man-A-mer'i-can. I. a. Pertaining to Germany and America; also, noting or pertaining to Americans of German birth or descent. II. n. An American of German birth or descent.

ger-man-der (jēr-man'dēr), n. [ML. germandra, by corruption < Gr. χαμαίδρος, < χαμαί, on the ground, + δρῦς, tree, oak.] Any of the herbs or shrubs constituting the menthaceous genus Teucrium, as T. chamædrys, a purple-flowered European species, and T. canadense, an American species; also, a species of speedwell ('germander speedwell': see speedwell).

ger-mane (jēr-mān'), a. [Var. of *german*¹: cf. humane and human.] German, or akin; fig., closely related; relevant; pertinent.

Ger-man-ic (jēr-man'ik). [L. Germanicus.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the Germans; German; also, pertaining to the Teutonic race or any of the peoples belonging to it, or to the group of languages spoken by these peoples; Teutonic. II. n. The language or languages of the Germanic or Teutonic peoples.

Ger-man-ism (jēr'man-izm), n. Germander (Teucrium canadense) — a, a flower. n. Characteristic German quality; German modes of thought, action, etc.; attachment to or affectation of what is German; also, a German characteristic, usage, or idiom.

ger-ma-ni-um (jēr-mā'ni-um), n. [NL., < L. Germania, country of the Germans.] Chem. sym. Ge; at. wt., 72.5; sp. gr., 5.469. A rare metallic element with a grayish-white color.

Ger-man-izo (jēr'man-iz), v.; -ized, -izing. I. tr. To render German in character, sentiment, etc.; also, to translate into German. II. intr. To become German in habits, sympathies, etc.—Ger'man-i-za'tion (-i-zā'shōn), n.

Ger-ma-no- (jēr'mā-nō-). Form of L. Germanus, German, used in combination.—Ger'ma-no-mā'ni-a (-mā'ni-ā), n. A mania or passion for what is German.—Ger'ma-no-phil, Ger'ma-no-phil (-fil). [+ -phil, -phile.]

I. a. Friendly to Germany or the Germans. II. n. One who is friendly to Germany or the Germans.—Ger'ma-

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

no-phobe (-fōb), n. [+ -phobe.] One who fears or hates the Germans. — Ger'ma-no-pho'bi-a (-fō'bi-ā), n. [+ -phobia.] Fear or hatred of the Germans or of anything German.

germ-cell (jĕrm'sel), n. In biol., a germ or early rudiment of a living organism when it is a cell or has the morphological value of a cell; a fertilized ovum; also, a cell which is capable of producing a new organism, usually after union with another cell of the opposite sex; an ovum or a spermatozoon; also, one of the primitive cells which give rise to the ova and spermatozoa.

ger-men (jĕr'men), n. [L.: see germ.] A germ.

ger-mi-cide (jĕr'mi-sīd), n. [See germ and -cide.] An agent that kills germs or micro-organisms. — ger'mi-ci-dal (-sī-dəl), a.

ger-mi-cul-ture (jĕr'mi-kul-tūr), n. The culture of germs; the artificial cultivation of germs or micro-organisms in studying diseases.

ger-mi-na-ble (jĕr'mi-nā-bl), a. Capable of germinating.

ger-mi-nal¹ (jĕr'mi-nāl), a. [NL. germinalis, < L. germen: see germ.] Pertaining to a germ or germs; of the nature of a germ or germ-cell; fig., that is in the earliest stage of development (as, "Those germinal ideas . . . had been sprouting under cover": George Eliot's "Middlemarch," xxxvii.). — germinal vesicle, in biol., the nucleus of an ovum before the polar bodies are formed.

Ger-mi-nal² (zher-mē-nāl), n. [F. germinal, < L. germen: see germ.] In the calendar of the first French republic, the seventh month of the year, extending from March 21 to April 19.

ger-mi-nant (jĕr'mi-nānt), a. Germinating.

ger-mi-nate (jĕr'mi-nāt), v.; -nated, -nating. [L. germinatus, pp. of germinare, < germen: see germ.] I. intr. To begin to grow or develop; develop into a plant or individual, as a seed or the embryo of a seed, or, hence, as a spore, bulb, or the like; sprout; start to vegetate; put forth shoots. Also fig. II. tr. To cause to sprout; fig., to cause to develop; produce. — ger-mi-na'tion (-nā'shən), n. [L. germinatio(n)-.] The act or process of germinating. — ger'mi-na-tive (-nā-tiv), a. Capable of germinating or developing; pertaining to germination. — ger'mi-na-tor (-nā-tŏr), n.

germ-less (jĕrm'les), a. Without germs.

germ-plasm, germ-plas-ma (jĕrm'plazm, -plaz'mā), n. In biol., that part of the protoplasm of a cell by which hereditary characteristics are supposed to be transmitted: now usually identified with chromatin.

ger-mule (jĕr'mūl), n. A small or incipient germ.

ge-on-tic (jĕ-rŏn'tik), a. [Gr. γεροντικός, < γέρων (γερωντ), old man.] Of or pertaining to old age; senile.

ger-on-toc-ra-cy (jĕ-rŏn-tŏk'rā-si), n. [Gr. γέρων (γερωντ), old man: see -cracy.] Government by old men; also, a governing body consisting of old men.

-gerous. [L. -ger, < gerere, bear.] An adjective termination meaning 'bearing,' 'producing,' as in dentigerous, lanigerous, proligerous.

ger-ry-man-der (ger'i-man-dēr), n. [From Elbridge Gerry, the governor of Massachusetts in 1812 when a district in the State was so formed, + (sala) mander, with allusion to the shape of the district.] In U. S. politics, an arbitrary arrangement of the political divisions of a State, county, etc., made so as to give one party an unfair advantage in elections. — ger-ry-man'der, v. t. To subject (a State, county, etc.) to a gerrymander; hence, in general, to manipulate unfairly. — ger-ry-man'der-er, n.

ger-und (jĕr'und), n. [LL. gerundium, < L. gerere, bear, conduct, carry on.] In gram., a form of the Latin verb used as a substantive in the oblique cases of the singular, but retaining certain functions of the verb, as that of governing an object or taking adverbial qualifiers, as audiendi ('of hearing') in cupidus te audiendi ('desirous of hearing you'); hence, any of various analogous forms in other languages, as the English verbal noun in -ing in certain uses, as in 'a man noted for readily overcoming difficulties.'

— ger'und=grind'er, n. A teacher of Latin grammar; a pedagogue. [Humorous or contemptuous.] — ge-run-di-al (jĕ-run'di-əl), a. — ge-run'dive (-div). [LL. gerundivus.] In gram.: I. a. Resembling a gerund. II. n. A Latin verbal adjective, of the nature of a future passive participle, having the same suffix as the gerund, and expressing necessity, fitness, etc., as legendus ('to be read') in liber legendus ('a book to be read,' or 'a book that should be read'); also, an analogous verbal adjective in other languages.

— ger-un-di'val (-un-dī'val), a. — ge-run'dive-ly, adv.

ges-so (jes'sō), n. [It., < L. gypsum: see gypsum.] Gypsum, or plaster of Paris, now esp. as prepared for use in painting, sculpture, etc.; any plaster-like preparation applied to a surface to fit it for painting, gilding, or the like; a prepared surface of plaster or plaster-like material as a ground for painting, etc.

gest¹ (jest), n. [OF. F. geste, < ML. gesta, pl., deeds, p. op. pp. neut. pl. of L. gerere, bear, conduct, carry on.] A deed or exploit (as, the gests of Alexander the Great, a favorite theme of poets in the middle ages); hence, a narrative, esp. in verse, of deeds or events; a metrical romance or history; in general, a story or tale. [Archaic.]

gest² (jest), n. [OF. F. geste, < L. gestus, < gerere: see *gest*¹.] Bearing or deportment; also, a gesture (as, "The Porter eke to her did lout with humble gestes": Spenser's "Faerie Queene," ii. 9. 26). [Archaic.]

gest³ (jest), n. [Earlier gist, < OF. giste (F. gîte), < gesir, lie: see gist.] A stopping-place in or a stage or distinct portion of a journey, esp. a royal progress (usually in pl.); also, the time of stopping, as in the course of a journey (see Shakspeare's "Winter's Tale," i. 2. 41).

ges-tate (jes'tāt), v. t.; -tated, -tating. [L. gestatus, pp. of gestare, carry, freq. of gerere, bear.] To carry in the womb during the period from conception to delivery; fig., to form and gradually mature (a project, etc.) in the mind. — ges-ta'tion (-tā'shən), n. [L. gestatio(n)-.] A carrying or being carried (now rare); also, the act or period of carrying young in the womb from conception to delivery; pregnancy. — ges'ta-tive (-tā-tiv), a. Of or pertaining to gestation.

ges-ta-to-ri-al (jes-tā-tō-ri-əl), a. [L. gestatorius, < gestare, carry: see gestate.] Of or for carrying: applied to a chair in which the Pope is carried on certain occasions.

geste (jest), n. See *gest*¹.

ges-tic (jes'tik), a. [See *gest*².] Of or pertaining to bodily action or motion, esp. dancing: as, "And the gay grandsire, skill'd in gestic lore, Has frisk'd beneath the burden of threescore" (Goldsmith's "Traveller," 253).

ges-tic-u-lant (jes-tik'ū-lant), a. Gesticulating.

ges-tic-u-late (jes-tik'ū-lāt), v.; -lated, -lating. [L. gesticulatus, pp. of gesticulari, < gesticulus, a gesticulation. dim. of gestus, bearing, gesture, E. *gest*².] I. intr. To make or use gestures, esp. in an animated or excited manner. II. tr. To express by gesticulation. — ges-tic-u-la'tion (-lā'shən), n. [L. gesticulatio(n)-.] The act of gesticulating; an animated or excited gesture. — ges-tic'ū-la-tive (-lā-tiv), ges-tic'ū-la-to-ry (-tŏ-ri), a. Characterized by or making gesticulations. — ges-tic'ū-la-tor (-lā-tŏr), n.

ges-tion (jes'chŏn), n. [L. gestio(n)-, < gerere, bear, conduct, manage.] Conduct or management. [Archaic.]

ges-ture (jes'tūr), n. [ML. gestura, < L. gerere, bear, conduct.] Carriage or posture of the body; also, a movement of the body or of any part of it, as the hand, to express thought, feeling, or meaning or to emphasize or illustrate speech (as, a gesture of impatience; a gesture of command or warning; the gestures of an orator); the use of such movements, as in speaking; also, in recent use, any action or proceeding intended for effect or to impress others; a demonstration, as of power, purpose, principles, spirit, etc., often a mere demonstration or empty show; sometimes, a more or less spectacular action affording a display of fine spirit or feeling, high-mindedness, generosity, pride, etc. (as, this refusal of special honors was viewed as a gesture, or as a fine or superb gesture). — ges'ture, v.; -tured, -turing. I. intr. To make or use gestures; gesticulate. II. tr. To express by gestures. — ges'tur-er, n.

get (get), v. t.; pret. got (archaic gat), pp. got or (now less frequently, and chiefly in U. S.) gotten, ppr. getting. [ME. geten, from Scand.: cf. Icel. geta = AS. -gitan, -gietan (in compounds: see beget, forget) = OHG. -gezzan (G. -gessen in vergessen, forget) = Goth. -gitan, akin to L. -hendere in prehendere, seize, take, and to Gr. χαρδάνειν, hold, contain.] To become possessed of or obtain by effort or contrivance; earn, as one's living; gain or win (as, to get little for one's trouble; to get the start of a competitor); attain or achieve, as reputation, etc.; learn, or commit to memory, as lessons or a part in a play; ascertain by calculation, experiment, etc.; obtain by entreaty, insistence, etc., as permission or a confession; also, to receive, as a gift, salary, payment, etc.; acquire, or come to have (as, one gradually gets skill through practice); catch or contract (a disease or illness); receive, meet with, or suffer (a blow, defeat, etc.); receive as punishment or penalty (as, to get a thrashing; to get ten days in jail); also, to seek out and obtain, or procure, or secure (something required); succeed in finding, as a thing or a person; lay hold on, or capture; corner, as in an argument (colloq.); get into one's power, or do for (slang, U. S.); also, to reach, or arrive at (a place)†; also, to succeed in bringing, taking, putting, sending, etc. (away, in, into, out, over, through, etc.); betake (one's self: archaic: as, "Go get thee hence," Shakspeare's "Two Gentlemen of Verona," iv. 4. 64); bring into a particular position, situation, or condition (as, to get one's self into trouble; to get a fire under control; to get dinner ready); cause (a person or thing) to be (as specified: as, to get a friend appointed to an office; to get one's hair cut); induce or cause to do something (as, we got him to speak; we could not get the fire to burn; you must get the janitor to fix that lock); also, to beget (now usually of animals). The past participle got is often used colloquially after have ('have got,' 'has got') in the sense of have alone: as, I have got (have) a cold; I have got (have, or am obliged) to go.—to get up, to prepare, arrange, or organize; contrive, devise, or concoct; work up, as an emotion or feeling; acquire a knowledge of, as a subject; do up, as linen; dress or array, as the person; produce in a specified manner or style with respect to appearance or externals, as a book.—get, v. i. To succeed in coming or going (away, in, into, out, over, through, etc.); make one's way (as specified); come to or arrive in a place specified or implied (as, he will get to Bombay in May; his boat got in yesterday; he got here last night); bring one's self into a particular place, situation, or condition (as, to get into position; to get into a rage); come or attain (followed by an infinitive: as, I did not get to see him; they never got to be friends); come to be, or become (as, to get sick; to get well; conditions are getting better); also, to be off (slang: often in the form git).—to get along. Same as to get on, below.—to get away, to escape; also, to start, as in a race.—to get even with, to square accounts with; retaliate upon.—to get off, to escape; evade consequences; also, to start, as on a journey.—to get on, to make progress; proceed; advance; also, to fare in a specified manner; often, to succeed or prosper; manage, as without something specified; also, to maintain harmonious relations, or agree, as with a person.—to get over, to surmount or overcome (a difficulty, etc.); cease to be troubled by (something); recover from (a shock, illness, etc.).—to get round, to circumvent or outwit; also, to cajole.—to get up, to arise; raise one's self to a sitting or standing posture; rise from bed; also, to ascend or mount; also, as a command to a horse ('get up!'), go! go ahead!—get, n. A getting, or what is got, obtained, or gained (now chiefly prov. or colloq.); also, a begetting, or an offspring, or progeny (now usually of animals); contemptuously, a child or brat (Sc. and north. Eng.).—get'a-way, n. A getting away; an escape; the start, as of a race. [Colloq.]—get'ta-ble, get'a-ble, a. That can be got or procured; obtainable.—get'ter, n.—get'=up, n. Style of dress, equipment, etc.; style of production with respect to appearance or externals, as of a book. [Colloq.]

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agony, into, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

gew-gaw (gŭ'gà). [Origin uncertain.] I. n. A showy trifle; a trumpery ornament; a bit of gaudy or useless finery; a bauble; a gimcrack. II. a. Showy but trifling; trumpery.—gew'gawed, a. Decked with gewgaws.

gey (gā), a. and adv. Scotch form of gay. gey-ser (gi'sér or -zér), n. [Icel. Geysir, name of a hot spring in Iceland, < geysa, rush furiously, gush.] A hot spring which intermittently sends up fountain-like jets of water and steam into the air.—gey'-ser-ic, a. Pertaining to or of the nature of a geyser.—gey'ser-ite (-it), n. A variety of opaline silica deposited about the orifices of geysers and hot springs.

Giant Geyser, Yellowstone National Park, United States.

Geyserite.

ghaist (gāst), n. Scotch form of ghost.

ghar-ry (gar'i), n.; pl. gharries (-iz). [Hind. gāri.] A cart, carriage, or other wheeled vehicle. [Anglo-Ind.]

ghast¹† (gāst), v. t. See gast.

ghast² (gāst), a. [From ghastly.] Ghastly. [Archaic or poetic.]

ghast-ful (gāst'fŭl), a. [ME. gastful, < AS. gāstan: see ghastly.] Fearful, frightened, or timid; also, frightful or dreadful. [Obs. or archaic.]

ghast-ly (gāst'li), a.; compar. ghastlier, superl. ghastliest. [ME. gastly, < AS. gāstan, terrify, E. gast: cf. ghost.] Orig., terrifying or terrible, as fiends, furies, etc.; later, exciting horror, as from association with or suggestion of death (as, ghastly wounds or carnage; ghastly traces of a struggle; ghastly shrieks); horrible, frightful, or dreadful, esp. in a sickening way (as, a ghastly threat; a ghastly tale); shocking (sometimes used in exaggeration: as, a ghastly failure); also, like or suggestive of a dead person or a ghost, as the face, appearance, color, etc. (as, "faces . . . ghastly with guilt and fear": Hawthorne's "Twice-Told Tales," David Swan); pallid; also, terrified.—ghast'li-ly, adv.—ghast'li-ness, n.—ghast'ly, adv. In a ghastly manner; horribly; with a death-like aspect; deathly (pale, sick, etc.).

ghat, ghaut (gāt), n. [Hind. ghāt.] In India, a mountain-pass, or a path of descent from a mountain; hence (incorrectly, as used by Europeans), a mountain-range (as, the Eastern and Western Ghats, parallel respectively with the eastern and western coasts of southern India); also, a passage or stairway descending to a river (as, the ghats along the Ganges at Benares, down which the Hindus come to bathe in the sacred river); a landing-place.

Ghat, Benares.

gha-wa-zi (gā-wā'zē), n. pl. [Ar. ghawāzī.] In Egypt, a class of public dancing-girls. Cf. almah.

ghaz-al (gaz'al), n. [Pers. and Ar. ghazal.] A kind of short Oriental poem, usually of erotic character, in which the first two lines rhyme, with a corresponding rhyme in the second line of each succeeding couplet.

gha-zi (gā'zē), n.; pl. -zis (-zēz). [Ar. ghāzī.] Among Mohammedans, a warrior or champion fighting against infidels; a fanatic who has devoted himself to the destruction of infidels; also, a title of honor conferred for distinguished military service against infidel enemies.

Ghe-ber (gē'bér or gā'-), n. See Gueber.

ghee (gē), n. [Hind. ghī.] In the East Indies, a kind of liquid butter, clarified by boiling, made from the milk of cows and buffaloes.

gher-kin (gēr'kin), n. [D. agurkje; from Slavic.] The small, immature fruit of some common variety of cucumber, or the fruit of some small-fruited variety, used for pickling; also, the small, spiny fruit of a cucurbitaceous vine, Cucumis anguria, of the West Indies, the southern U. S., etc., used in pickling as a substitute for the ordinary cucumber; the plant yielding this fruit.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; û, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

ghet-to (get'tō), n.; pl. ghettos (-ōz), It. ghetti (-tē). [It.] A quarter in a city, as formerly in Italy, in which Jews were required to live; hence, any quarter inhabited chiefly by Jews.

Ghib-el-line (gib'el-lin). [It. Ghibellino, < G. Waiblingen, name of an estate belonging to the imperial family.] I. n. A member of the imperial and aristocratic party of medieval Italy, opposed to the Guelphs. II. a. Of or pertaining to the Ghibellines.

Ghoor-ka (gōr'kā), n. See Gurkha.

ghost (gōst), n. [AS. gāst = D. geest = G. geist, spirit; prob. akin to E. ghost and ghastly.] The spirit, as the vital or the psychical principle (now chiefly in 'to give up the ghost,' to die); also, a spirit, or spiritual being (as, the Holy Ghost, the third person of the Trinity); sometimes, an evil spirit†, or demon†; also, a spirit conceived as surviving bodily death and manifesting itself to the living; a specter or apparition; fig., a mere shadow or semblance (as, the ghost of a smile; not the ghost of an idea, or of a chance); also, one who does literary or other work for a person who takes the credit; in optics, a bright spot or secondary image, as from a defect of the instrument.—the ghost walks, the salaries are paid or forthcoming: as, this is the day the ghost walks. [Orig. theatrical slang.]—ghost, v. I. intr. To give up the ghost†, or die†; also, to go (about, etc.) like a ghost or disembodied spirit. II. tr. To appear to or haunt, as a ghost does: as, "Julius Caesar, Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted" (Shakspeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," ii. 6. 13).—ghost'-dance, n. A religious dance of western North American Indian tribes, originating in connection with a Messianic doctrine which was put forth about 1888 and led to serious disturbances in 1890, and which prophesied the return of the dead and the extinction of the whites.—ghost'-hood (-hūd), n. The state of a ghost.—ghost'-land (-land), n. The land or region of ghosts.—ghost'-like, a. and adv.—ghost'-ly, a.; compar. ghostlier, superl. ghostliest. [AS. gāstlic.] Spiritual (archaic or literary: as, ghostly counsel; ghostly father, a father confessor); also, of the nature of, resembling, or pertaining to a ghost or disembodied spirit; suggestive of ghosts; spectral; shadowy.—ghost'-li-ness, n.—ghost'-sto-ry, n. A story about or involving ghosts; hence, any story or statement to which no credence should be given.

ghoul (göl), n. [Ar. ghūl.] An evil demon of Oriental story, supposed to feed on human beings, and esp. to rob graves and prey on corpses; hence, any one who preys upon the dead, as a body-snatcher or grave-robber or one who robs the unburied dead after some great catastrophe; fig., one who revels in what is revolting to ordinary human instincts.—ghoul'-ish, a. Of, like, or befitting a ghoul.—ghoul'-ish-ly, adv.

ghyll (gil), n. See *gill*².

gi-ant (jī'ant). [OF. geant, jaiant (F. géant), < L. gigas (gigant-), < Gr. γίγας (γίγαντ-).] I. n. One of a race of beings in Greek mythology, of more than human size and strength, who were subdued by the Olympian gods; hence, in general, an imaginary being of human form but superhuman size, strength, etc.; also, a person or thing of unusually great size; fig., one who towers or is eminent above others in endowments, achievements, importance, etc. (as, an intellectual giant; giants in the field of science or industry). II. a. Giant-like; gigantic; of extraordinary size (as, the giant cactus, Cereus giganteus, see cereus; the giant fennel, see fennel); fig., great or eminent above others.—gi'-ant-ess, n. A female giant.—gi'-ant-ism, n. The state of being a giant, or of gigantic size; in physiol., etc., abnormally great development in size or stature; gigantism.—gi'-ant-pow'-der, n. A form of dynamite composed of nitroglycerin and kieselguhr.

giaour (jour), n. [Turk. giaur, < Pers. gaur, var. of gabr: see Gueber.] In Mohammedan use, an infidel, esp. a Christian: as, "Who falls in battle 'gainst a Giaour Is worthiest an immortal bower" (Byron's "Giaour").

gib¹ (gib), n. [Origin obscure.] A hook (prov.); in a machine, etc., a piece of metal fitted in to hold parts together or in place.—gib¹, v. t.; gibbed, gibbing. To secure with a gib or gibs.

gib² (gib), n. [From Gib, for Gilbert, man's name.] A cat, esp. a male cat, often one that has been castrated. [Now prov. Eng. and Sc.]

gib-ber¹ (jib'ēr or gib'ēr), v. i. [Imit.: cf. gibberish (recorded earlier), also jabber.] To speak rapidly and inarticulately; chatter senselessly: as, "The graves stood tenantless and the sheeted dead Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets" (Shakspeare's "Hamlet," i. 1. 116).—gib'-ber¹, n. Gibbering utterance.

gib-ber² (gib'ēr), n. [Native Australian.] A large stone; a boulder. [Australia.]

gib-ber-ish (gib'ēr-ish), n. [Cf. *gibber*¹.] Rapid, unintelligible talk; meaningless chatter; jargon.

gib-bet (jib'et), n. [OF. F. gibet, appar. dim. of OF. gibe, staff, bill-hook.] A gallows; esp., an upright post with a projecting arm at the top, from which formerly the bodies of criminals were suspended after execution; also, the projecting beam of a crane.—gib'-bet, v. t. To put (a person) to death by hanging on a gallows; also, to hang or expose (a body after execution) on a gibbet; hence, fig., to hold up to public scorn (as, "Was he to be gibbeted in the press?" Trollope's "Warden," v.); also, to hang or suspend (something) on a support (as, "swifter than he that gibbets on the brewer's bucket": Shakspeare's "2 Henry IV.," iii. 2. 282).

gib-bon (gib'on), n. [F. gibbon; origin unknown.] Any of the small, slender, long-armed anthropoid apes of the genus Hylobates, of arboreal habits, found in the East Indies: in some respects closely approaching man.

gib-bose (gib'ōs or gib-bōs), a. [L. gibbosus, < gibbus, hump.] In bot., zool., etc., protuberant; having a protuberance; gibbous.

gib-bos-i-ty (gi-bos'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). The state of being gibbous or gibbose; also, a protuberance or swelling.

gib-bous (gib'us), a.

[See gibbose.] Protuberant; convex; of a heavenly body, so illuminated as to be convex on both margins, as the moon when more than half full but less than full; also, humpbacked.—gib'-bous-ly, adv.—gib'-bous-ness, n.

gib-cat (gib'kat), n. Same as *gib*², n. [Archaic or prov.]

gibe (jib), v.; gibed, gibing. [Origin uncertain.] I. intr. To jest in a bantering or derisive way (as, "He would familiarly gybe and jest with him": E. K., in Spenser's "Shepherd's Calendar," Feb., Embleme); utter a mocking fling; scoff; jeer. II. tr. To gibe at; banter; deride; also, to dismiss with gibes (as, "You . . . with taunts Did gibe my missive out of audience": Shakspeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," ii. 2. 74).—gibe, n. A gibing remark; a derisive or mocking fling.

Gib-e-on-ite (gib'ē-on-it), n. [From the inhabitants of Gibeon, whom Joshua, to punish them for deception, made "hewers of wood and drawers of water" for the Israelites: see Josh. ix.] One compelled to toil for others; a drudge.

gib-er (jī'bēr), n. One who gibes.

gib-ing (jī'bing), p. a. That gibes; deriding; mocking; jeering.—gib'-ing-ly, adv.

gib-let (jib'let), n. [OF. gibelet, dish of game.] The heart, liver, gizzard, or some other edible part, as the end of the wing, removed from a fowl before cooking: usually in pl.

Gi-bral-tar (ji-brāl'tār), n. [From Gibraltar, the British fortress on the Mediterranean coast of Spain.] An impregnable stronghold; also, a kind of candy.

gi-bus (jī'bus, F. zhē-būs), n. [From Gibus, the first (French) maker.] An opera-hat or crush-hat.

gid (gid), n. [From giddy.] A kind of staggers in sheep, etc., due to infestation of the brain with a larval form of the tapeworm Tænia cænurus.

gid-dy (gid'i), a.; compar. giddier, superl. giddiest. [AS. gidig, mad; perhaps orig. 'possessed by a god,' and akin to fat, fāte, fār, fall, ask, fāre; net, mē, hūr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, unite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

Gibbon (Hylobates lar).

E. god.] Mad† or insane†; hence, furious or wild (prov. Eng.); also, having a confused, whirling sensation; affected with vertigo; dizzy; attended with or causing dizziness (as, a giddy climb; "giddy precipices," Irving's "Conquest of Granada," lxxxviii.); also, whirling, as motion or something moving; fig., unstable† (as, "An habitation giddy and unsure Hath he that buildeth on the vulgar heart": Shakspeare's "2 Henry IV.," i. 3. 89); also, frivolously light, unsteady, or changeable, as the mind, fancy, persons, etc.; esp., readily swayed by wild impulses, exuberant spirits, etc.; flighty; volatile.—gid/di-ly, adv.—gid/di-ness, n.—gid/dy, v. t. or i.; -died, -dying. To make or become giddy.

gier=ea-gle† (jēr'ē'gli), n. [D. gier=G. geier, vulture: cf. gerfalcon.] A bird mentioned in the Authorized Version of the Bible (Lev. xi. 18, and Deut. xiv. 17): called vulture in the Revised Version.

gift (gift), n. [ME. gift, prob. from Scand.: cf. Icel. gift, gipt, gift, = AS. gift, payment for a wife, pl. marriage, related to Icel. gefa, AS. gifan, E. give.] The act of giving (as, to get a thing by gift; "I will not take her on gift of any man," Shakspeare's "As You Like It," iii. 3. 69); also, the power or right of giving (as, certain offices are in his gift); also, something given; a present; sometimes, formerly, a bribe† (see 2 Chron. xix. 7); often, a quality, faculty, or special ability regarded as bestowed by God or nature; a natural endowment; a talent.—gift, v. t. To present with a gift or gifts; endow with natural gifts (chiefly as in gifted, p. a.); sometimes, to present or endow (with: as, to be gifted by nature with a sense of humor); also, to give (something) as a gift (chiefly Sc.).—gift'ed, p. a. Endowed with natural gifts; talented.—gift'ed-ness, n.—gift=horse, n. A horse given as a present.—To look a gift-horse in the mouth, to criticize, or find fault with, a present or favor received: with allusion to the custom of ascertaining the age of horses by examining their teeth.—gift'ie, n. A Scotch diminutive form of gift (special faculty): as, "O wad some Pow'r the giftie gie us To see oursels as others see us!" (Burns's "To a Louse").—gift'-less, a. Having no gift to offer; also, having received no gift; also, destitute of natural gifts or endowments.

gig¹ (gig), n. [Origin obscure; perhaps imit.] Something that whirls, as a top†; a machine for teasing cloth; also, a giddy or flighty girl†; an odd character or figure (slang, Eng.); also, a joke or trick, or sport or fun (now prov. Eng. and Sc.); also, a light, two-wheeled, one-horse carriage; also, a ship's boat for either rowing or sailing; a long rowboat used chiefly for racing; also, a special combination of three numbers in the game of policy.—gig¹, v.; gigged, gigging. I. intr. To ride in a gig. II. tr. To tease (cloth) with a gig.

gig² (gig), n. [From fizgig.] A fish-spear; also, a device, commonly four barbless hooks secured back to back, for dragging through a school of fish in order to hook them through the body.—gig², v. t. or i.; gigged, gigging. To spear or take (fish) with a gig.

gi-gan-te-an (ji-gan-tē'an), a. [L. giganteus.] Gigantic.
gi-gan-tesque (ji-gan-tesk'), a. [F. gigantesque, < It. gigantesco, < gigante, < L. gigas: see giant.] Of a gigantic kind; befitting a giant.

gi-gan-tic (ji-gan'tik), a. [L. gigas (gigant): see giant.] Of, like, or befitting a giant; hence, huge; enormous; immense.—gi-gan'ti-cal-ly, adv.—gi-gan'ti-cide (-sīd), n. [See -cide.] The killer, or the killing, of a giant.—gi-gan'tic-ness, n.—gi-gan'tism (-tizm), n. In physiol., etc., gigantic development; giantism.—gi-gan'tize (-tiz), v. t.; -tized, -tizing. To cause to appear gigantic.

gi-gan-tom-a-chy (ji-gan-tom'ā-ki), n.; pl. -chies (-kiz). [LL. gigantomachia, < Gr. γίγαντομαχία, < γίγας (γυγαντ), giant, + μάχεσθαι, fight.] A war of giants, esp. the war of the giants of Greek mythology against the Olympian gods; also, a representation of this, as in sculpture.

gi-gan-to-sau-rus (ji-gan-tō-sā'rus), n. [NL., < Gr. γίγας (γυγαντ), giant, + σαῦρος, lizard.] An extremely large dinosaurian reptile of the extinct genus Gigantosaurus.

gig-gle (gig'li), v. i.; -gled, -gling. [Imit.] To laugh in a light, silly or undignified way, as from levity, youthful spirits, or ill-controlled amusement; titter.—gig'gle, n.

A giggling laugh; a titter.—gig'gler, n.—gig'gle-some (-sum), gig-gly (gig'li), a. Inclined to giggle.

gig-lamp (gig'lamp), n. A lamp attached to a gig; hence, a firefly (local); also, pl., spectacles (slang).

gig-let, gig-lot (gig'let, -lot), n. [Appar. < gig¹.] A wanton woman†; also, a giddy girl.

gi-glio (jē'lyō), n. [It., < L. lilium, E. lily.] The heraldic lily of the arms of Florence, Italy, a form of the fleur-de-lis with two slender added members issuing one at each side of the central petal, between it and the side petals.

gig-o-lo (jig'ō-lō), n.; pl. -los (-lōz). [F.] A male professional dancing-partner employed to dance with women.

gig-ot (jig'ot), n. [F. gigot; origin unknown.] A leg of mutton, veal, or the like. [Now Sc. and prov. Eng.]

gigue (zhēg), n. [F., < E. jig.] In music, a jig, often forming the concluding movement in the suite.

Gi-la (hē'lā) mon'ster. [From the Gila River, in Arizona.] A large, venomous lizard, Heloderma suspectum, of New Mexico, Arizona, etc., having the skin studded with tubercles like nail-heads in a yellow or orange and black coloration; sometimes, a closely allied lizard, the caltetepon, H. horridum, of Mexico.

Gila Monster (Heloderma suspectum).

gil-bert (gil'bért), n. [From W. Gilbert (1540–1603), English scientist.] In elect., a unit of magnetomotive force equal to .7958 ampere-turn.

gild¹, gild (gild), n. [AS. gild, gield, or the related Icel. gildi, gild, also payment, tribute: see geld¹.] A society of persons organized to further common interests and purposes; esp., one of the associations, numerous in the middle ages, each composed of persons belonging to and regulating a particular trade or industry (as, a gild of merchants or of craftsmen; "In the 11th century gilds of wool weavers existed at Cologne and Mainz," Encyc. Brit., 11th ed., XXVI. 404); in modern use, often, a charitable or benevolent society, as in a church.—gild socialism. See under socialism.—national gild. See gild socialism, under socialism.

gild² (gild), v. t.; gilded or gilt, gilding. [AS. gyldan, < gold, E. gold.] To coat with gold, gold-leaf, or some gold-colored finishing substance; also, to color like gold (as, the sun gilds the clouds); fig., to give a bright, pleasing, or specious aspect to (as, "Love gilds the scene," Sheridan's "Rivals," Epilogue; to gild folly or vice); sometimes, to render attractive as wealth does (as, "Cursed be the gold that gilds the straiten'd forehead of the fool!" Tennyson's "Locksley Hall," 62); also, to make red, as with blood (obs. or archaic: see Shakspeare's "Macbeth," ii. 2. 56).—gild'ed, p. a. Coated with or as with gold; also, colored like gold; fig., presented under a fair or specious aspect (as, gilded vice); also, wealthy (as, the gilded youth of the period).—gild'er, n.

gild-hall, gild-hall (gild'hál), n. The hall where a gild assembles; often, a town hall.

gild-ing (gil'ding), n. The act of one who or that which gilds; also, the gold-leaf or other material with which anything is gilded, or the golden surface produced.

gilds-man, gilds-man (gildz'man), n.; pl. -men. A member of a gild; also, an advocate of gild socialism.

gi-let (zhē-lā), n. [F.] A waistcoat; a vest.

gil-guy (gil'gi), n. [From gil- (origin and meaning uncertain) + guy¹.] Naut., a temporary or makeshift contrivance of rope, as about the rigging of a ship; in general (indefinitely and more or less contemptuously), a contrivance or 'contraption'; a gimcrack.

gill¹ (gil), n. [ME.: cf. Sw. gäl, Dan. gjælle.] A respiratory organ of a fish or other animal that breathes in or under water (usually in pl.); also, pl., the wattles of a fowl; the flesh under the jaws in man; the radiating plates on the under side of the cap of a mushroom.—gill¹, v. t. To gut or clean (fish); also, to catch (fish) by the gills in a gill-net; also, to cut away the gills of (a mushroom).

(variable) đ as d or j, ş as s or sh, ţ as t or ch, ş as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ʹ, primary accent; ˘, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

gill² (gil), n. [Icel. gil.] A narrow valley, esp. one with a stream running through it; a ravine; a glen; also, a stream in a ravine; a mountain stream; a brook. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

gill³ (jil), n. [OF. gille, gelle, vessel or measure for wine; cf. gallon.] A liquid measure equal to one fourth of a pint.

Gill⁴, Jill (jil), n. [From Gill, for Gillian (= Juliana), woman's name.] A popular name for a girl or woman, often used, in connection with Jack, to denote a girl friend, a sweetheart, or a wife; [l. c.] a girl or woman; also, the ground-ivy.

gilled (gild), a. Having gills, as fishes.

gill-flirt (jil'flért), n. [See *Gill*⁴.] A giddy girl or young woman. [Archaic.]

gill-lie (gil'li), n. [Gael. gille, giolla, lad, servant.] Orig., a male attendant on a Highland chieftain; now, commonly, a sportsman's attendant. [Sc.]

gill-net (gil'net), n. A curtain-like net, suspended vertically in the water, with meshes of such a size as to catch by the gills a fish that has thrust its head through.

gill'y, n. See gillie.

gill-ly-flow-er (jil'i-flou'ér), n. [Corruption of ME. gülofre, < OF. gülofre, girofre (F. girofle), clove, < L. caryophyllon, < Gr. καρυόφυλλον, clove-tree, < κάρυον, nut, + φύλλον, leaf.] The clove-pink (archaic or prov.); also, one of various other flowers, as the wallflower, Cheiranthus cheiri, or the common stock-gillyflower, Matthiola incana.

gill-py (gil'pi), n.; pl. -pies (-piz). [Origin obscure.] A frolicsome young fellow; also, a lively young girl (see Burns's "Halloween," 129). [Sc.]

gill-rav-age (gil-rav'áj), n. [Origin obscure.] Boisterous merrymaking; riotous sport. [Sc.]—gill-rav'age, v. i.; -aged, -aging. To make merry in a riotous or disorderly way. [Sc.]—gill-rav'ag-er, n.

gill-son-ite (gil'son-it), n. [From S. H. Gilson, of Salt Lake City, Utah.] Same as uintahite.

gilt (gilt). Preterit and past participle of *gild*².—gilt, p. a. Gilded; golden in color.—gilt, n. The gold or other material applied in gilding; gilding.—gilt'edged', a. Having the edges gilded, as paper; fig., of the highest order or quality, as securities.—gilt'head, n. Any of various fishes with golden spots or streaks on the head, as several species of bonito.

gim-bal (jim'bal), n. [Var. of gimmel, for gemel.] A gimmel† or gemel-ring†; pl., a contrivance for keeping a suspended object, as a ship's compass, horizontal, being usually a pair of rings pivoted to swing, one within the other, on axes at right angles to each other.

gim-crack (jim'krak). [Origin uncertain.] I. n. A showy, useless trifle; a trivial knickknack; any trumpery article or object; a toy; a contrivance or 'contraption' (as, "He has great doubts of those new gimcracks, the steamboats": Irving's "Sketch-Book," Little Britain). II. a. Showy but unsubstantial or useless; trumpery.—gim'crack'er-y (-ér-i), n. Gimcracks collectively; gimcrack articles or ornaments.

gim-let (jim'let), n. [OF. guimbelet (F. gibelet); from Teut., and akin to E. wimble.] A small tool for boring holes, consisting of a steel shaft with a pointed screw at one end and a transverse handle at the other.—gim'let, v. t.; -leted or -letted, -leting or -letting. To pierce with or as with a gimlet; also, to turn round like a gimlet.

gim-mal (jim'al), n. [= gemel.] A gemel-ring.

gimp¹ (gimp), n. [Origin uncertain.] A flat trimming made of silk, worsted, or other cord, sometimes stiffened with wire, used on garments, curtains, furniture, etc.

gimp² (gimp), n. [Origin unknown.] Energy; vim. [Colloq.]

gin', gin (gin), v.; pret. gan, pp. gun, ppr. ginning. Shortened form of begin. [Archaic or poetic.]

gin² (jin), n. [= engine.] Ingenuity†; artifice†; also, a scheme† or device†; also, a mechanical contrivance (archaic); an engine of war†; an engine of torture†; an apparatus for hoisting; a machine for separating cotton from its seeds ('cotton-gin'); also, a trap or snare for game, etc. (often fig.).—gin², v. t.; ginned, ginning. To clear (cotton) of seeds with a gin; also, to catch (game, etc.) in a gin (also fig.: as, "Destiny has her nets round him . . . soon he will be ginned!" Carlyle's "Essays," Count Cagliostro, ii.).

gin³ (jin), n. [Abbr. of geneva.] A distilled alcoholic liquor made in Holland from rye or other grain, and flavored with juniper-berries; a similar liquor made in imitation of it.

ging[†] (ging), n. [AS. genge; akin to gang.] A company; a gang. See Shakspeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor," iv. 2. 123.

gin-ger¹ (jin'jér), n. [OF. gingibre (F. gingembre), < L. zingiber, < Gr. ζιγγίβερος, ginger; of Eastern origin.] The pungent, spicy rhizome of any of the reed-like plants of the genus Zinziber, esp. of Z. zingiber (or officinale), variously used in cookery and medicine; any of these plants, native in the East Indies, but now cultivated in most tropical countries; hence, spiciness or piquancy (colloq.); spirit or animation (colloq.); also, a light sandy or tawny color.—gin'ger¹, v. t. To treat or flavor with ginger; hence (colloq.), to impart spiciness or piquancy to; make spirited or lively.

gin-ger² (jin'jér), a. [Back-formation from gingerly.] Gingerly. [Now chiefly prov.]

gin-ger-ale (jin'jér-ál'), n. A non-alcoholic effervescent drink similar to ginger-beer.

gin-ger-beer (jin'jér-bér'), n. A non-alcoholic effervescent drink containing water, sugar or molasses, yeast, etc., flavored with ginger.

gin-ger-bread (jin'jér-bred).

I. n. A kind of cake flavored with ginger: often made in fanciful shapes, and sometimes gilded (as, "As if the poet, purposing to wed, Should carve himself a wife in gingerbread": Cowper's "Table Talk," 555). II. a. Showy; gaudy; tawdry.—gin'ger-bread-tree, n. The doom-palm; also, a tree, Parinarium macrophyllum, of western Africa, with a large, edible farinaceous fruit ('gingerbread-plum').

gin-ger-ly (jin'jér-li), a. [Cf. OF. gensor, gentior, pretty, orig. compar. of gent, E. *gent*¹.] I. adv. Daintily† or mincingly† (as, to dance gingerly); hence, with extreme care or caution in stepping, handling, proceeding, etc.; cautiously; warily. II. a. Dainty† or mincing†; also, cautious or wary.—gin'ger-li-ness, n.

gin-ger-snap (jin'jér-snap); n. A small, thin, brittle cake spiced with ginger.

gin-ger-y (jin'jér-i), a. Ginger-like; hot; pungent; spicy; also, of the color ginger.

ging-ham (ging'am), n. [Malay ginggang, lit. 'striped.'] A cotton fabric woven of dyed yarns, esp. in striped, checked, or plaid patterns.

gin-gi-li (jin'ji-li), n. [Hind. jinjali, < Ar. juljulan.] The sesame (plant), or its oil.

gin-gi-val (jin'ji-val), a. [L. gingiva, gum.] Of or pertaining to the gums.—gin-gi-vi'tis (-ji-vi'tis), n. [NL.] In pathol., inflammation of the gums.

ging-ko (ging'kō or jing'-), n. See ginkgo.

gin-gly-mus (jing'gli-mus or jing'-), n.; pl. -mi (-mī). [NL., < Gr. γίγγλυμος.] In anat., a hinge-like joint, as that of the elbow.—gin'gly-moid, a.

gink (gingk), n. [Origin obscure.] A person; a fellow. [Slang.]

gink-go (gingk'gō or jingk'-), n. [Jap. ginkgo.] A large, ornamental gymnospermous tree, Ginkgo biloba, native in Japan and China, yielding an edible fruit or nut.

gin-mill (jin'mil), n. A liquor-saloon. [Slang, U. S.]

gin-ner (jin'ér), n. One who gins cotton.—gin'ner-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). A mill for ginning cotton.—gin'ning, n. The act of separating the fiber of cotton from the seeds; pl., the fiber, or the amount of fiber, so separated.

gin-ny (gin'i), n.; pl. ginnies (-iz). [See guinea.] An Italian, or any foreigner of similar appearance; a guinea. [Slang, U. S.]

Ginger-plant (Zinziber zingiber).—
a, flower on larger scale.

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, ásk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardgu, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

gin-seng (jin'seng), n. [From Chinese.] Either of two araliaceous plants, Panax ginseng of China, Korea, etc., and P. quinquefolium of North America, yielding an aromatic root which is extensively used in medicine by the Chinese; also, the root itself, or a preparation made from it.

gip (jip), n. and v. See gyp.

gip-on (jip'on), n. A jupon or tunic: as, "With nought to fence his dauntless breast But the close gip-on's under-vest" (Scott's "Bridal of Triermain," iii. 18). [Archaic.]

Gip-sy, Gyp-sy (jip'si), n.; pl. -sies (-siz). [Corruption of Egyptian.] [Also l. c.] One of a nomadic, tawny-skinned, black-haired race of Hindu origin, now found in many parts of the world; [cap.] the language of these people; Romany; hence [l. c.], any person of similar vagrant life; a dark-complexioned person; an artful girl.—gipsy ring, a finger-ring having a stone or stones set low within a comparatively broad, flat band.—gip'sy, gyp'sy, v. i.; -sied, -syng. To live or rove like a Gipsy; often, to picnic (as, "There is to be a village picnic—a gypsying they call it—at East Egdon": Hardy's "Return of the Native," iv. 3).—gip'sy-dom (-dom), n. The life or habits of Gipsies; also, Gipsies collectively.—gip'sy-fy (-fi), v. t.; -fied, -fying. To make like a Gipsy in appearance or character.—gip'sy-hood (-hüd), n. The state of a Gipsy; also, Gipsies collectively.—gip'sy-ish, a. Gipsy-like.—gip'sy-ism, n. The life or habits of Gipsies.—gip'sy-moth, n. A moth Portheia (or Ocneria) dispar, whose larva is very destructive to trees.—gip'sy-ry (-ri), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). A colony of Gipsies; a place of encampment of Gipsies.

gi-raffe (ji-raf'), n. [F. giraffe (now girafe), < Ar. zarāfah.] A tall, long-necked, spotted ruminant quadruped, Giraffa camelopardalis, of Africa, the tallest of existing quadrupeds; the camelopard; [cap.] in astron., the northern constellation Camelopardalis.—gi-raf'fine (-raf'in), a.

gir-an-dole (jir'an-döl), n. [F. girandole, < It. girandola, < girare, turn, < L. gyrare: see gyrate.] A kind of rotating and radiating firework; also, a jet of water, or series of jets, of similar character; also, a branched support for candles or other lights.

gir-a-sol, gir-a-sole (jir'a-sol, -söl), n. [F. girasol, < It. girasole, < girare, turn, + sole, sun.] A variety of opal which reflects a reddish glow in a bright light.

gird¹ (gêrd), v. t.; girt or girded, girding. [AS. gyrdan = D. gorden = G. gürten = Icel. gyrdha, gird; prob. akin to E. *yard*¹.] To bind or encircle (a person, the waist, etc.) with a belt or girdle; also, to equip with a sword or weapon at the belt; also, to attach (a weapon) at one's belt; put on (clothing, armor, etc.): as, "Warn Lanark's knights to gird their mail," Scott's "Lord of the Isles," v. 34); in fig. use, to equip (one's self) for action (as, to gird one's self for a task); also, to invest or induce (as, "The Son On his great expedition now appear'd, Girt with omnipotence": Milton's "Paradise Lost," vii. 194); also, in general, to surround; confine; hem in.

gird² (gêrd), v. [ME. girden; origin uncertain.] I. tr. To strike or smite; also, to gibe or jeer at; taunt. II. intr. To rush or spring (now prov.); also, to gibe; jeer.—gird², n. A stroke; also, a gibe.

gird-er¹ (gêr'dêr), n. One who or that which girds, binds, etc.; specif., one of the principal horizontal timbers which support the joists in certain floors; in structural work, any main horizontal supporting member or beam, as of wood or iron.

gird-er² (gêr'dêr), n. One who girds or gibes.

gird-le¹ (gêr'dl), n. A girdle. [Sc. and prov. Eng.]

gird-le² (gêr'dl), n. [AS. gyrdel, < gyrdan, E. *gird*¹.] A belt, cord, sash, or the like, worn about the waist; hence, any encircling band; a zone or ring of something; compass or circuit (as, "Suppose within the girdle of these walls Are now confined two mighty monarchies": Shakspeare's "Henry V.," Prologue, 19); specif., the line about a brilliant or other cut stone at the junction of the upper and lower faces; also, a ring made about a tree-trunk, etc., by cutting the bark.—gird'le³, v. t.; -dled, -dling. To encircle with or as with a girdle; encompass; specif., to cut away the bark in a ring about (a tree, branch, etc.), thus causing decay.—gird'ler, n. A maker of girdles or belts; also, one who girdles; specif., a beetle, as Oncideres cingulatus, which girdles twigs on which it has deposited eggs.

girl (gêrl), n. [ME. gurle, girle, child; origin obscure.] A child or young person of either sex; now, a child or young person of the female sex; often, a young unmarried woman; sometimes, a familiar term for any woman; also, a female servant (colloq.); also, a sweetheart (colloq.).—Girl Guide, a member of an organization of girls (Girl Guides), in England and elsewhere, a sister organization of the Boy Scouts. See Boy Scout, under boy.—Girl Scout, a member of an organization of girls (Girl Scouts), founded in the U. S. in 1912, and patterned after the Girl Guides (see above), and aiming to develop in its members good health, good citizenship, knowledge of home-making, and high womanly character.—girl'hood (-hüd), n. The state or time of being a girl; also, girls collectively.—girl'ish, a. Of, like, or befitting a girl.—girl'ish-ly, adv.—girl'ish-ness, n. girn (gêrn), v. i. [Var. of *grin*¹.] To show the teeth, as in pain or rage; snarl; whine. [Now only Sc. and north. Eng.]

Gi-ron-dist (ji-ron'dist), n. [F. Girondiste.] A member of a French political party of moderate republicans (1791–1793), whose leaders were deputies from the department of the Gironde.

girt¹ (gêrt). Preterit and past participle of *gird*¹.

girt² (gêrt), v. t. Same as *gird*¹.

girt³ (gêrt), n. and v. Same as *girth*¹.

girth¹ (gêrth), n. [ME. girth, gerth, from Scand.: cf. Icel. gjörðh, girdle, girth; akin to E. *gird*¹.] A band or girdle; specif., a band passed under the belly of a horse, etc., to secure a saddle or pack on its back; also, the measure around anything; circumference; compass.—girth¹, v. I. tr. To girdle; encircle; also, to equip, bind, or fasten with a girth. II. intr. To measure a specified amount in girth.

girth² (gêrth), n. Same as girth. [Obs. or archaic.]

gi-sarme, gui-sarme (gi-zärm'), n. [OF.; origin uncertain.] A long-handled mediæval military weapon in various forms, esp. one having a long blade prolonged into a straight, sharp point, with a hook on one side of the blade and a projecting point on the other.

gist (jist), n. [OF. gist (F. gît), 3d pers. sing. pres. ind. of gesir (F. gésir), lie, rest, < L. jacere, lie.] The ground on which a legal action rests; hence, the substance or pith of a matter (as, to give one the gist of an argument in a few words); the essential part.

git (git), v. Prov. or vulgar form of get.

gi-ta-na (ji-tä'nä, Sp. hē-tä'nä), n.; pl. -nas (-näs, Sp. -näs). [Sp., orig. 'Egyptian': cf. Gipsy.] In Spanish use, a Branch and Root of Ginseng (Panax ginseng).

Female Gipsy-moth, with Larva. (Reduced.)

Giraffe.

Gipsy woman.—gi-ta-no (ji-tä'nō, Sp. nē-tä'nō), n.; pl. -nos (-nōz, Sp. -nōs). [Sp.] In Spanish use, a Gipsy man: as, "The Gitano, or gipsy of Spain, is not the mere vagrant we see on our commons and road-sides" (Bulwer-Lytton's "Caxtons," xvi. 3).

git-ter (git'ēr), n. [G., grating.] A diffraction grating. See *grating*¹.

git-tern (git'ēr), n. [OF. guiterne: cf. guitar.] An old musical instrument of the guitar kind.

gius-to (jös'tō), a. [It., < L. justus, just.] In music, just; regular; suitable; strict.

give (giv), v. t.; pret. gave, pp. given, ppr. giving. [AS. gīfan, giefan, = D. geven = G. geben = Icel. gefa = Goth. giban, give: cf. gift.] To deliver or hand over to another gratuitously (as, to give one a present); deliver to another in exchange for something (as, I gave it to him for $5; I gave a good price for it); deliver to another without reference to ownership (as, please give me a drink); grant, bestow, or confer, as power, permission, etc.; commit (as, to give a person into custody); deliver as a pledge (as, to give one's word of honor); present or offer (as, to give a toast); furnish or provide (as, to give aid to the enemy); set forth or show (as, the newspaper gave a long account; the house gave no sign of life); deal or administer (as, to give one a blow); impart or communicate (as, to give advice; to give a twist to a rope); assign, allot, or award (as, to give a contract to a person); designate or appoint (a day or time); assign as a basis of calculation, reasoning, etc. (as, given these premises, only one conclusion is possible); attribute or ascribe (as, to give credit to another); account† or consider† (as, "Men's reports Give him much wrong'd": Shakspeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," i. 4. 40); deliver or produce (a lecture, play, etc.); afford or yield (as, to give satisfaction); make (a movement: as, to give a start); put forth, emit, or utter (as, to give a cry); issue or deliver (a command, decision, etc.); execute (only in pp., in and of documents: as, given under my hand Feb. 1, 1787); cause or occasion (as, to give trouble); do or perform (as, to give battle or chase); relinquish or surrender (as, to give ground, to give place, or to give way: see below); sacrifice (as, to give one's life for one's country); dedicate or devote (as, to give one's mind to a subject).—to give a good account of one's self, to bear one's self creditably.—to give away, to give as a present, etc.; make over to another; hand over (the bride) to the bridegroom at a wedding; also (slang), to cause or permit (a secret, etc.) to be known; let out; betray (a person).—to give ground, to retire before a superior force; hence, to yield place; relax efforts.—to give place, to give ground; hence, to yield precedence; resign or relinquish one's or its place (to another).—to give rise to, to give origin to; occasion; result in.—to give up, to surrender; hand over or part with; forsake or abandon, as a person; desist from or relinquish, as labors or a task; abandon as hopeless or useless, as a contest, etc.; abandon hope of seeing (a person), solving (a problem), performing (a feat), curing (a sick person), etc.; also, to devote entirely (to); addict (to).—to give way, to retreat before an advancing force; make way or give place, as to another; yield, as under pressure; break down, or fail; yield to emotional strain, as a person; abandon one's self, as to despair, etc.—give, v. i. To make a gift or gifts; also, to yield, as to pressure, strain, etc.; draw back; relax; break down, or fail; also, to afford a passage or view (a French use: as, a window that gives upon a court).—to give in, to yield; submit.—to give out, to break down, or fail; become exhausted, as a supply.—to give up, to leave off, or stop; abandon effort, hope, etc.; succumb.—give, n. The act of giving; esp., the act or fact of yielding to pressure, strain, etc.; elasticity.—giv'en, p. a. Bestowed as a gift; conferred (as, a given name, a Christian name: see under Christian, a.); also, stated, fixed, or specified (as, at a given time); assigned as a basis of calculation, reasoning, etc.; also, addicted or disposed (often with to).—giv'er, n.

giz-zard (giz'ärd), n. [OF. giser (F. gésier), < L. gigeria, pl., entrails of poultry.] The grinding or muscular stomach of birds, the organ in which the food is triturated after leaving the preceding glandular stomach. Cf. stomach.

gla-bel-la (glä-bel'ä), n.; pl. glabellæ (-ë). [NL., prop.

fem. of L. glabellus, smooth, hairless, dim. of glaber: see glabrous.] In human anat., a small space on the forehead immediately above and between the eyebrows.—gla-bel'lar (-bel'är), a.—gla-bel'um (-bel'um), n.; pl. glabella (-ä). [NL.] Same as glabella.

gla-brate (glä'brät), a. [L. glabratus, pp. of glabrare, make hairless, < glaber: see glabrous.] In zool., smooth; glabrous; in bot., becoming glabrous; somewhat glabrous.

gla-brous (glä'brus), a. [L. glaber, smooth, hairless; akin to E. glad.] In zool. and bot., smooth; having a surface devoid of hair or pubescence.

gla-cé (glä-sä), a. [F., pp. of glacer, < L. glaciare, freeze, < glacies, ice.] Frozen; frosted or iced, as cake; candied, as fruit or nuts; finished with a gloss, as kid or silk.

gla-cial (glä'shial), a. [L. glacialis, < glacies, ice.] Abounding in, consisting of, or cold as ice; icy; specif., characterized by the presence of ice in extensive masses or glaciers (as, the glacial epoch or period, a geological epoch, the Pleistocene, during which much of the northern hemisphere was covered by great ice-sheets); due to or associated with the action of ice or glaciers; of or pertaining to glaciers or the glacial epoch; in chem., having or tending to assume an ice-like form, as certain acids.—glä'cial-ist, n. A specialist in glacial geology; also, one who explains geological phenomena by the action of ice.—glä'cial-ly, adv.

gla-ci-a-ri-um (glä-shi-ä'ri-um), n.; pl. -ria (-ri-ä). [NL., < L. glacies, ice.] A skating-rink having a floor of artificial ice.

gla-ci-ate (glä'shi-ät), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [L. glaciatus, pp. of glaciare, freeze, < glacies, ice.] To freeze†; also, to cover with ice or glaciers; affect by glacial action.—glä-ci-a'tion (-ä'shön), n. Freezing†; also, a covering or being covered with ice; glacial action or effect.

gla-cier (glä'shi-er or glä'si-er), n. [F., < glace, < L. glacies, ice.] An extended mass of ice formed from snow falling and accumulating on high mountains or elsewhere above the snow-line, and moving (in most cases, very slowly) downward to lower levels (as, the river-like alpine or valley glaciers of mountainous regions; the broad continental or polar glaciers, as those of Greenland and the antarctic region); also, a vessel for holding ice to cool wine.—glä'ciered, a. Having glaciers.

glacio- Form of L. glacies, ice, in combination: sometimes used with special reference to glaciers.—glä-ci-ol-o-gy (glä-shi-ol'ō-jī), n. [+ -logy.] The science that treats of the formation and action of glaciers.—glä'ci-o-na'tant (-ō-nä'tant), a. [See natant.] Pertaining to or produced by floating ice.

glä-cis (glä'sis, F. glä-sē), n. [F., orig. 'icy or slippery place,' < glacer, freeze, make icy: see glacé.] A gentle slope; in fort., a bank of earth in front of a counterscarp or covered way, having an easy slope toward the field or open country.

gläd (gläd), a.; compar. gladder, superl. gladdest. [AS. glæd = Icel. gladhr, bright, glad, = D. glad and G. glatt, smooth; akin to L. glaber, smooth, hairless (see glabrous).] Bright, as in luster or color†; also, cheerful, jocular, or merry (as, "a troop of damsels glad": Tennyson's "Lady of Shalott," ii.); joyful or happy, as for a special reason (as, "A wise son maketh a glad father": Prov. x. 1); delighted or pleased (with of, at, etc., or an infinitive or clause: as, glad of one's success; glad at the news; glad to go; glad that one has come); characterized by or showing cheerfulness, joy, or pleasure, as feelings, looks, smiles, utterances, etc.; attended with or causing joy or pleasure (as, a glad occasion; glad tidings); also, of natural scenes, seasons, circumstances, etc., delightful, pleasant, or genial (as, glad climes; the glad month of May; the glad sunshine).—gläd, v.; gladdened, gladding. I. tr. To make glad: as, "The hour's gone by, When Albion's lessening shores could grieve or glad mine eye" (Byron's "Childe Harold," iii. 1). [Archaic.] II. † intr. To be glad.

gläd-den (gläd'n), v. I. tr. To make glad; cheer; delight; brighten. II. intr. To be glad; rejoice.—gläd'den-er, n.

gläde (gläd), n. [Perhaps related to glad, as meaning a bright (open) space.] An open space or passage, natural or artificial, in a wood or forest (as, "She guided them through . . . the wood to a little open gläde . . . surrounded by fat, fäte, fär, fall, ask, färe; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviäry, ãlect, agony, into, quite, (obscured) errant, operä, ardent, actor, nature; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

trees and bushes": Scott's "Guy Mannering," liii.); also, an opening, or a place left unfrozen, in the ice of a river or lake (local, U. S.); also, a stretch of smooth ice (local, U. S.); also, an everglade (local, U. S.).

glad-ful (glad'fŭl), a. Full of gladness; joyful; gladsome. [Archaic.] glad-i-ate (glad'i-āt or glā'di-), a. [NL. gladiator, < L. gladius, sword.] In bot., sword-shaped.

glad-i-a-tor (glad'i-ā-tŏr), n. [L., < gladius, sword.] Among the ancient Romans, a person (often a slave or a captive) who fought in public, with a sword or other weapon, against other gladiators or against wild beasts, for the entertainment of the people; also, in general, a professional swordsman or fencer†; fig., a skilled contender in any field or cause.—glad'i-a-tŏ-ri-al (-ā-tŏ-ri-āl), a.—glad'i-a-tor-ship, n.

glad-i-o-lus (glā'di-ŏ-lus, commonly glad-i-ŏ'lus), n.; pl. -luses or -li (-li). [L., dim. of gladius, sword.] Any plant of the iridaceous genus Gladiolus, native esp. in South Africa, with erect, gladiate leaves and spikes of handsome, variously colored flowers: familiar in gardens.

glad-ly (glad'li), adv. In a glad manner.—glad'ness, n.

glad-some (glad'sum), a. Glad; cheerful or joyous; joyful or happy; delightful or pleasant. [Now poetic or literary.]—glad/some-ly, adv.—glad/some-ness, n.

Glad-stone (glad'stŏn), n. [From W. E. Gladstone (1809–98), English statesman.] A kind of four-wheeled pleasure-carriage with a calash-top, two inside seats, and seats for driver and footman; also, a kind of light traveling-bag opening into compartments (short for Gladstone bag).

Glag-o-lit-ic (glag-ŏ-lit'ik), a. [Slav. glagol, word.] Denoting an ancient Slavic alphabet still used in service-books in some Roman Catholic dioceses in Dalmatia, etc.

glair (glār), n. [OF. F. glaire, < L. clarus, clear.] The (uncooked) white of an egg; a size or glaze made from it; also, any similar viscous substance.—glair, v. t. To smear with glair.—glair'e-ous (-ē-us), a. Glairy.—glair'y, a. Of the nature of glair; viscous; also, covered with glair.—glair'i-ness, n.

glave (glāv), n. [OF. glave, lance, sword (F. sword): cf. L. gladius, sword.] A lance†; also, a kind of halberd†; also, a sword, esp. a broadsword (archaic).—glaved, a. Armed with a glave.

glam-or-ous (glam'ŏr-us), a. Full of glamour, magic influence, or alluring charm: as, "That thought shone out . . . like a glamorous flower" (Galsworthy's "Patrician," ii. 11).—glam'or-ous-ly, adv.

glam-our (glam'ŏr), n. [Orig. Sc., corruption of grammar: cf. gramary.] Magic or enchantment (as, "Like that maiden in the tale, Whom Gwydion made by glamour out of flowers": Tennyson's "Marriage of Geraint," 743); magic influence; spell; witchery; hence, alluring and often illusory charm.—glam'our, v. t. To affect with glamour; bewitch; charm.—glam'our-ous, etc. See glamorous, etc.

glance¹ (glāns), v.; glanced, glancing. [ME. glunche, glenche: cf. the earlier glent.] I. intr. To glide off in an oblique direction from an object struck, as a weapon, missile, etc.; dart off or aside; also, to allude obliquely or in passing, often by way of censure or satire; also, to look quickly or briefly (as, to glance at or over something); also, to gleam or flash. II. tr. To direct obliquely, as something aimed or cast; also, to direct (the eye, etc.) in a glance or brief look; convey by a glance of the eye; also, to cast or reflect, as a gleam; also, to glance at or allude to in speaking† (see Shakspeare's "Comedy of Errors," v. i. 66); also, to cast a glance or brief look at; catch a glimpse of.—glance¹, n. A glancing off, as of a missile after striking; a stroke in cricket in which the ball is allowed to glance off from the bat; also, an allusion or reference, as in passing; also, a quick or brief look; also, a gleam or flash, as of light (as, "swift as the lightning glance": Milton's "Samson Agonistes," 1284).

glance² (glāns), n. [G. glanz, lit. 'brightness,' 'luster.'] In mining and mineral., any of various ores having a luster which indicates their metallic nature.—glance'-coal, n. [G. glanzkohle.] Any hard, lustrous coal, esp. anthracite.

gland¹ (gland), n. [F. glande, OF. glandre, < L. glandula, gland, dim. of glans (gland-), acorn.] In anat., an organ by which certain constituents are separated from the blood for use in the body or for ejection from it, or by which certain changes are produced in the blood or lymph; also, any of various organs or structures likened to true glands; in bot., a secreting organ or structure, esp. one on or near a surface; also, any similar prominence or appendage which does not secrete.

gland² (gland), n. [Origin uncertain.] In mach., the cover or adjustable member of a stuffing-box, by which the packing is compressed; also, any of various devices for clamping parts together.

gland-der (glan'dēr), n. [OF. glandre, glandular swelling, gland: see *gland*¹.] A glandular swelling†; pl. (construed as sing.), in pathol., a contagious disease of horses, mules, etc., communicable to man, due to a micro-organism (Bacillus mallei), and characterized by swellings beneath the jaw and a profuse mucous discharge from the nostrils.—glan'-dered, a. Affected with glanders.—glan'-der-ous, a. Pertaining to or affected with glanders.

gland-if-er-ous (glan-dil'ē-rus), a. [L. glandifer, < glans (gland-), acorn, + ferre, bear.] Acorn-bearing; producing mast or nuts.

gland-i-form (glan'di-fŏrm), a. [L. glans (gland-), acorn: see form.] Acorn-shaped; also, gland-like.

gland-ular (glan'dŭ-lār), a. Of, pertaining to, or resembling a glandule or gland; consisting of, containing, or bearing glands.—glan'du-lar-ly, adv.

gland-ule (glan'dŭl), n. [L. glandula: see *gland*¹.] A gland; a small gland.—glan-du-lif'er-ous (-dŭ-lif'ē-rus), a. [See -ferous.] Bearing glandules.—glan'du-lous, glan'-du-lose (-lŏs), a. [L. glandulosus.] Containing glands; gland-like; glandular.

glans (glanz), n.; pl. glandes (glan'dēz). [L., lit. 'acorn.'] In anat., the head of the penis (more fully glans penis) or of the clitoris (more fully glans clitoridis).

glare¹ (glār), v.; glared, glaring. [ME. glaren = MLG. glaren; prob. akin to E. glass.] I. intr. To shine with a strong, dazzling light; hence, to be intensely bright in color; be too brilliantly ornamented; fig., to be obtrusively conspicuous (as, "a writer . . . whose ungenerous prejudice against the house of Stuart glares in misrepresentation": Boswell's "Johnson," 1778); also, to look with a fierce or piercing stare (as, "Each upon his rival glared": Scott's "Lady of the Lake," ii. 34). II. tr. To send forth or express with a glare.—glare¹, n. A strong, dazzling light; dazzling brilliance of light; shine; hence, dazzling or showy appearance; showiness; also, a fierce or piercing look.

glare² (glār). [Origin uncertain: cf. mod. Icel. glærungr, glassy sheet of ice, glær, glass.] I. n. A bright, smooth surface, as of ice. [U. S.] II. a. Bright and smooth, as ice; glassy. [U. S.]

glar-ing (glār'ing), p. a. That glares; dazzling; excessively bright, as color; obtrusively conspicuous, as defects or errors; staring fiercely or piercingly, as the eyes.—glar'-ing-ly, adv.—glar'-ing-ness, n.

glar-y¹ (glār'i), a. Of a dazzling brilliance or luster; glaring.

glar-y² (glār'i), a. Smooth and slippery, as ice. [U. S.]

glass (glās), n. [AS. glæs = D. and G. glas, glass: cf. *glare*¹.] A hard, brittle, more or less transparent, artificially prepared substance, usually consisting of a silicate or a mixture of silicates (the ordinary variety used for windows, etc., being a silicate of calcium and sodium: cf. crown-glass and flint-glass); also, any artificial or natural substance having similar properties or composition, as fused borax, obsidian ('volcanic glass'), etc.; also, things made of glass, collectively; glassware; also, something made of glass; a glass vessel, esp. one to drink from, or the contents of such a vessel, an hour-glass, or the like, or the length of time measured by it (as, "Our ship—Which, but three glasses since, we gave out split—Is tight": Shakspeare's "Tempest," v. I. 223); a pane or plate of glass; a looking-glass; a crystal for a watch; a lens; an optical instrument, as a telescope, field-glass, microscope, etc.; pl., spectacles or eye-glasses; sing., a barometer; a thermometer.—liquid glass, soluble glass. See water-glass.—stained glass. See under stained.—glass, a. Made of glass; also, furnished or fitted with panes of glass; glazed.—glass, v. t. To fit with panes of glass; also, to cover or protect with glass; also, to make glassy; also, to reflect in or as in a glass mirror.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; †, primary accent; ‡, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

glass-blow-er (glás'blō'ēr), n. One who fashions glass by glass-blowing.—glass=blow'ing, n. The art or process of inflating, and thus shaping, a mass of glass by taking it up while hot and soft on the end of a hollow tube and then blowing through the tube; loosely, the making of ornaments, etc., by the twisting, drawing out, uniting, etc., of pieces of hot, soft glass.

glass-eye (glás'i), n. A thrush, Turdus jamaicensis, of Jamaica; also, the wall-eyed pike-perch, Stizostedion vitreum.

glass-ful (glás'fúl), n.; pl. -fuls. As much as a glass holds.

glass-house (glás'hous), n. An establishment where glass is made; also, a building made chiefly of glass, esp. a greenhouse; a glass-roofed room, as for use in photography.

glass-i-ly (glás'i-li), adv. In a glassy manner.—glass'i-ness, n.

glass-ine (glás-ēn'), n. A thin, transparent paper used for book-wrappers, transparent panels in envelopes, etc.

glass=pa-per (glás'pā'pēr), n. Paper covered with finely powdered glass, used for polishing, etc.

glass=snake (glás'snāk), n. A limbless, snake-like lizard, Ophiosaurus ventralis, of the southern U. S., having an extremely fragile tail; also, any of certain similar lizards of Europe and Asia.

glass-ware (glás'wār), n.

Articles made of glass.

glass-work (glás'wérk), n.

The manufacture of glass and glassware; also, the fitting of glass; glazing; also, articles of glass collectively; glassware; ornamentation made of glass.—glass'=works, n. pl. or sing. An establishment where glass is made.

glass-wort (glás'wért), n. Any of the herbs with succulent leafless stems constituting the chenopodiaceous genus Salicornia, growing in salt-water marshes, alkaline regions, etc., and formerly much used (when burned to ashes) as a source of soda for glass-making; also, the saltwort, Salsola kali ('prickly glasswort').

glass-y (glás'i), a.; compar. glassier, superl. glassiest. Of the nature of glass; vitreous; also, resembling glass, as in transparency, smoothness, etc.; often, having a fixed, unintelligent stare, as the eye or glance.

Glauber's (glou'bérs) salt. [From J. R. Glauber (1604-68), German chemist.] Sodium sulphate, used as a cathartic, etc.

glau-ces-cent (glā-sēs'ēnt), a. [See glaucous and -escent.] Somewhat glaucous.

glau-co-ma (glā-kō'mā), n. [L., < Gr. γλαύκωμα, < γλαυκός, gray: see glaucous.] In pathol., a disease of the eye, characterized by increased tension within the eyeball with progressive diminution or loss of vision.—glau-com'a-tous (-kom'ā-tus), a.

glau-co-nite (glā'kō-nīt), n. [Gr. γλαυκός, bluish-green: see glaucous.] A greenish mineral consisting essentially of a hydrous silicate of iron and potassium, and occurring in greensand, clays, etc.—glau-co-nit'ic (-nit'ik), a.

glau-co-sis (glā-kō'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. γλαύκωσις, < γλαυκός, gray: see glaucous.] Same as glaucoma.

glau-cous (glā'kus), a. [L. glaucus, < Gr. γλαυκός, gleaming, silvery, gray, bluish-green.] Of a light bluish-green or greenish-blue color (as, "the glaucous caverns of old Ocean": Shelley's "Prometheus Unbound," ii. l. 44); in bot., covered with a whitish bloom, as a plum.

glave, glaved. See glave, glaved.

glaze (glāz), v.; glazed, glazing. [ME. glasen; < glass.]

I. tr. To furnish or fit with glass, as a window; cover with glass, as a picture; also, to produce a vitreous or glossy surface on (pottery, biscuit, etc.), as by coating the ware with the proper materials and then firing in a kiln, or by throwing salt into the kiln at a certain stage of the firing, or by other methods; in general, to cover with a smooth and lustrous coating; give a glassy surface to, as by polishing; in oil-painting, to cover (a painted surface) with a thin layer of transparent color; lay (a transparent color) over a painted surface. II. intr. To become glazed or glassy.—glaze, n.

The vitreous or glossy surface or coating on glazed pottery, etc., or the substance or material used to produce such a surface; also, any smooth, glossy surface or coating or a substance for producing it; a glassy coating of ice, esp. as formed by rain which freezes upon striking the ground, etc.; in oil-painting, a thin layer of transparent color spread over a painted surface; in cooking, stock cooked down to a thin paste, for applying to the surface of meats.—glaz-er (glā'zēr), n. One who or that which glazes.

glaz-ier (glā'zhēr), n. [ME. glasier, < glas, E. glass.] One who fits windows, picture-frames, etc., with glass.—glaz-ier-y, n. Glaziers' work.

glaz-ing (glā'zing), n. The act of furnishing or fitting with glass; the business of a glazier; glass set, or to be set, in frames, etc.; also, the act of applying a glaze; the glaze applied; the glassy surface or appearance of anything glazed.

glaz-y (glā'zi), a. Glaze-like; glazed; glossy; shiny.

gleam (glēm), n. [AS. glæm, akin to OS. glīmo, brightness, OHG. glīmo, glow-worm, and E. glimmer.] Brightness; shine; esp., a transient or partial shining; a flash or beam of light; an interval of sunshine, as between showers (now prov. Eng.); fig., a brief or slight manifestation or appearance, as of feeling, intelligence, hope, etc.—gleam, v. I. intr. To send forth a gleam or gleams; shine, esp. with a flash or beam of light; fig., to appear suddenly and clearly, like a flash of light. II. tr. To send forth in gleams.—gleam'-ing-ly, adv.—gleam'y, a. Gleaming; shining; intermittently bright; of weather, etc., having intervals of sunshine (now chiefly prov. Eng.: as, "antique castles seen through gleamy showers," Wordsworth's "Descriptive Sketches," 225).

glean (glēn), v. [OF. glener (F. glaner), < LL. glenare; origin uncertain.] I. tr. To gather (grain, etc.) after the reapers or regular gatherers; strip (a field, vineyard, etc.) of what is left by the reapers or regular gatherers; hence, to collect in scattered or fragmentary quantities; gather slowly and assiduously. II. intr. To gather what is left by reapers (as, "The poor are allowed to enter and glean upon another's ground after the harvest without being guilty of trespass": Blackstone's "Commentaries," III. 212); hence, to collect or gather anything little by little or slowly.—glean'a-ble, a. That may be gleaned.—glean'er, n.—glean'ing, n. The act of one who glean; also, that which is gleaned (usually in pl.).

glebe (glēb), n. [L. gleba, glæba, clod, soil, land.] The soil (now only poetic: as, "The glebe of fifty kingdoms shall be till'd To feed his dazzling, desolating train," Campbell's "Power of Russia"); a cultivated field (now only poetic); a portion of land belonging to an ecclesiastical benefice.

gled (gləd), n. Scotch form of glede.

glede (gləd), n. [AS. glida = Icel. glædha; akin to E. glide.] The common European kite, Milvus iclinus; also, any related bird, as the osprey.

gledge (glēj), v. i.; gledged, gledging. [Var. of glegl.] To look obliquely, furtively, or slyly. [Sc.]-gledge, n. A side glance; a sly look. [Sc.]

glee¹ (glē), n. [AS. glēo = Icel. glý.] Entertainment†, sport†, or pleasure†; also, merriment or mirth (as, "Full well they laugh'd with counterfeited glee At all his jokes": Goldsmith's "Deserted Village," 201); joy or delight; also, musical entertainment† or music†; specif., a kind of unaccompanied part-song, grave or gay, for three or more voices.

glee² (glē), v. and n. See gley.

glee=club (glē'klub), n. A club or company organized to sing glees and other songs.

gleed¹ (glēd), p. a. See gleyed.

gleed² (glēd), n. [AS. glēd = D. gloed = G. glut = Icel. glōdh; akin to E. glow.] A live or burning coal (archaic or prov.); a fire or flame (obs. or prov.); pl., cinders or coke (prov. Eng.).

glee-ful (glē'fúl), a. Full of glee; merry; joyous.—glee'-ful-ly, adv.—glee'-ful-ness, n.

gleek¹ (glēk), n. [Origin uncertain.] A gibe, gird, or jest (obs. or Sc.); also, a coquettish glance†.—gleek¹, v.

Glass-snake (Ophiosaurus ventralis).

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pùll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, elect, agōny, intō, ûnite; (obscured) errant, operâ, ardent, actor, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; tñ, then; y, you;

I. tr. To ridicule; also, to trick. [Obs. or prov.] II. intr. To gibe; jest: as, "I have seen you gleeking and galling at this gentleman" (Shakspere's "Henry V.," v. 1. 78). [Obs. or Sc.]

gleek² (glēk), n. [OF. glic.] An old game at cards, played by three persons.

glee-man (glē'man), n.; pl. -men. [AS. glēomann.] A professional entertainer, esp. a singer or minstrel. [Now only hist.]

glee-some (glē'sum), a. Gleeful.—glee'some-ly, adv.—glee'some-ness, n.

gleet (glēt), n. [OF. glette, slime, mucus, pus, foul matter (F. litharge).] Slimy matter (now only Sc.); also, a thin, morbid discharge, as from a wound; specif., a morbid discharge from the urethra.

gleg¹ (gleg), v. i.; glegged, glegging. [= gley.] To squint; look obliquely or furtively; peep. [Prov. Eng.]—gleg¹, n. A squint; a side glance; a peep. [Prov. Eng.]

gleg² (gleg), a. [Icel. glegg, glögg, clear-sighted, = AS. glēaw, wise.] Quick of perception or apprehension; sharp-sighted; quick-witted; also, quick in action; also, lively or cheerful (as, "Dr. Dinwiddie was a gleg man, of a jocose nature": Galt's "Annals of the Parish," xxxvii.); also, sharp, as a knife. [Sc. and north. Eng.]—gleg²*ly*, adv.—gleg²*ness*, n.

glen (glen), n. [Gael. gleann = W. glyn.] A narrow valley; a depression or hollow between hills.

glen-gar-ry (glen-gar'i), n. [From Glengarry, valley in Inverness-shire, Scotland.] A Scotch cap with straight sides diminishing in height toward the back, a hollow or crease along the top, and sometimes short ribbon streamers at the back: sometimes worn as part of military dress.

gle-noid (glē'noid), [Gr. γληνοειδής, < γλήνη, socket of a joint, + είδος, form.] In anat.: I. a. Shallow or slightly cupped, as the articular cavities of the scapula and the temporal bone; pertaining to such a cavity. II. n. A glenoid cavity.

glent (glent), v. i. [ME. glenten; prob. from Scand.] To glance, glide, or dart off or aside; also, to glance or look quickly or briefly; also, to gleam or flash, as something bright; glint. [Now prov. Eng. and Sc.]—glent, n. A darting movement; also, a glance or look; a glimpse; also, a gleam or flash; a glint. [Now prov. Eng. and Sc.]

gley, glee² (gli or glē, glē), v. i. [ME. gleyen, gleien, glien; origin uncertain.] To squint; look obliquely or sideways. [Sc. and north. Eng.]—gley, glee², n. A squint; a side glance. [Sc. and north. Eng.]—gleyed, gleed¹ (glid or glēd, glēd), p. a. Squint-eyed; also, crooked; wrong. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

glib (glib), a.; compar. glibber, superl. glibbest. [Cf. D. glibberen, slide, slip.] Smooth and slippery, as ice (now chiefly prov.); fig., easy, as action or manner; also, ready and fluent, as speakers, utterance, etc.; plausibly voluble.—glibly*, adv.—glibness*, n.

glide (glid), v.; glided, gliding. [AS. glidan = D. gliden = G. gleiten, glide: cf. glede.] I. intr. To move smoothly along, as if without effort or difficulty, as a flying bird, a flowing stream, a boat, a carriage, a skater, etc.; also, to go quietly, stealthily, or unperceived (in, out, etc.); slip; steal; also, to pass quietly or imperceptibly (along, away, by, etc.), as time, life, etc.; pass by gradual or insensible change, as into a state, or as one thing into another; in aëronautics, to move in the air, esp. at an easy angle downward, by the action of gravity or of air-currents, or by virtue of momentum already acquired, as a gliding-machine, or an aëroplane with the engine shut off (as, the gliding angle, the angle the path of an aëroplane makes with the horizontal when it is gliding to earth in still air without any action of the propeller). II. tr. To cause to glide.—glide, n. The act of gliding; a gliding movement, as in dancing, or a dance in which such movements are employed; in music, a slur; in phonetics, a fleeting sound produced in passing from one definite speech-sound to another, or in entering upon or passing from a definite speech-sound.—glid-er (gli'dēr), n. One who or that which glides; in aëronautics, a gliding-machine.—gliding-ly*, adv.—gliding-machine*, n. In aëronautics, an apparatus (commonly a structure built more or less like an aëroplane but having no motor) for gliding through the air from a higher to a lower level by the action of gravity, or from a lower to a higher level by the action of air-currents.

gliff (glif), v. [Origin obscure.] I. intr. To glance. [Obs. or Sc.] II. tr. To glance at; also, to frighten. [Sc. and north. Eng.]—gliff, n. A glimpse or slight view; also, a touch, trace, or suggestion of something; also, a moment or brief time; also, a fright or scare. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

glim (glim), n. [Cf. glimmer.] A light, as a lamp or candle; also, an eye. [Slang or prov.]

glim-mer (glim'ēr), v. i. [ME. glimeren, flegmeren, = G. glimmern = Sw. glimra = Dan. glimre; a freq. form akin to D. and G. glimmen, Sw. glimma, glimmer, glow, and E. gleam.] To shine faintly or unsteadily; twinkle; flicker, as a candle about to go out; fig., to fail gradually and perceptibly; also, to appear faintly or dimly.—to go glimmer-ing, to be gradually extinguished, like a candle flickering out: said of hopes, prospects, etc.—glimmer*, n. A faint or unsteady shining; a tremulous play of light; a faint gleam; also, a faint glimpse; a dim perception or notion; an inkling.—glimmer-ing*, n. The act or the light of something that glimmers; a glimmer; also, a faint glimpse; an inkling.—glimmer-ing-ly*, adv.

glimpse (glimps), v.; glimpsted, glimping. [ME. glimsen = MHG. glimsen; akin to E. glimmer.] I. intr. To shine briefly, gleam, or flash (archaic); also, to appear momentarily or slightly (archaic: as, "And glimping over these, just seen, High up, the topmost palace spire," Tennyson's "Day-Dream," 67); also, to look briefly, or glance. II. tr. To show in a glimpse; also, to catch a glimpse of.—glimpse, n. A gleam, as of light (archaic: as, "the glimpses of the moon," Shakspere's "Hamlet," i. 4. 53); also, a momentary or slight appearance or show of something (as, "With looks . . . wherein appear'd Obscure some glimpse of joy": Milton's "Paradise Lost," i. 524); a slight touch or trace shown; also, a momentary or slight view or sight of something (as, to catch a glimpse of a house through the trees).—glimpser*, n.

glint (glint), v. [Var. of glent.] I. intr. To glance or glide off (archaic or prov.); also, to glance or look (now prov. Eng. and Sc.); also, to gleam or flash, as light or something bright (as, "Ruddy arrows of the sun glinted among the boughs": Tarkington's "Gentleman from Indiana," xix); show a sudden brief or varying brightness, as something that catches the light on one part or another. II. tr. To cause to glint; cast or reflect (light) in glints (as, "The sun's last glance was glinted back, From spear and glaive, from targe and jack": Scott's "Lady of the Lake," v. 10).—glint, n. A glance, look, or glimpse (prov. Eng. and Sc.); also, a gleam or flash; a glinting brightness.

gli-o-ma (gli-ō'mā), n.; pl. -mas or -mata (-mā-tā). [NL., < Gr. γλία, glue; see -oma.] In pathol., a tumor arising from and consisting largely of neuroglia.—gli-om'a-tous* (-om'ā-tus), a.

glis-sade (gli-sād' or -sād'), n. [F., < glisser, slip, slide; from Teut.] The act of sliding, as down a slope of ice or snow or on any surface (as, "The figure . . . descended . . . with the glissade of a water-drop down a bud": Hardy's "Return of the Native," i. 2); a slide; in dancing, a sliding or gliding step to the right or left.—glis-sade'*, v. i.; -saded, -sading. To perform a glissade.

glis-san-do (glē-sān'dō). [It., < F. glissant, ppr. of glisser, slide: see glissade.] In music: I. a. Performed with a gliding effect, as, on a pianoforte, by sliding the back of the finger rapidly over the white keys. II. n. A gliding effect; a glissando passage.

glis-ten (glis'n), v. i. [AS. glisnian: cf. glister and glitter.] To shine with a sparkling light or luster, as snow, dew, armor, satin, the eyes, etc.; sparkle.—glisten*, n. A glistening; a sparkling luster; sparkle.—glisten-ing-ly*, adv. glis-ter (glis'tēr), v. i. [ME. glistren; akin to glisten and prob. glitter.] To glisten; sparkle; glitter: as, "All that glisters is not gold" (Shakspere's "Merchant of Venice," ii. 7. 65). [Archaic or prov.]—glister*, n. A glistening or glistening; glitter. [Archaic or prov.]

glit-ter (glit'ēr), v. i. [ME. gliteren = Icel. glitra = G. glitzern; a freq. form akin to Icel. glita, OS. glitan, OHG. glizan, G. gleissen, shine, glitter, and prob. to E.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ˝, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

glister and glisten.] To shine with a brilliant, sparkling light or luster (as, "The gemmy bridle glitter'd free, Like to some branch of stars we see Hung in the golden Galaxy": Tennyson's "Lady of Shalott," iii.); sparkle vividly or with intense brightness; fig., to make a brilliant or splendid appearance or show.—glit'ter, n. A glittering; glittering light or luster; brilliance; splendor.—glit'ter-ing-ly, adv.—glit'ter-y, a. Glittering; sparkling.

gloom (glōm), v. i. [Back-formation from gloaming.] To become dusk; grow dark. [Chiefly Sc. and north. Eng.]—gloom, n. The gloaming. See Keats's "La Belle Dame sans Merci," xi. [Prov. or poetic.] gloom-ing (glō'ming), n. [AS. glōmunga, < glōm, twilight.] Evening twilight; dusk: as, "The bats their wavering wings extend Soon as the gloaming spreads her waning shade" (Byron's "Elegy on Newstead Abbey"). [Sc. and north. Eng., and hence adopted into general poetic and literary use.]

gloat (glōt), v. i. [Cf. Icel. glotta, grin, smile scornfully, G. glozen, stare.] To cast sidelong or furtive glances; also, to cast amorous glances; also, to gaze intently or dwell mentally upon something with satisfaction, esp. upon something that gratifies an evil passion or a corrupt propensity.—gloat'er, n.—gloat-ing-ly, adv.

glo-bate (glō'bāt), a. [L. globatus, pp. of globare, form into a ball, < globus, E. globe.] Having the form of a globe. Also glo'bat-ed (-bā-ted).

globe (glōb), n. [F. globe, < L. globus, round body or mass, ball, globe.] A spherical body; a sphere; a ball; often, the earth (usually with the); hence, any planet or other celestial body; also, a sphere on whose surface is depicted a map of the earth ('terrestrial globe') or of the heavens ('celestial globe'); also, a golden ball borne as an emblem of sovereignty (as, "With crown, with sceptre, and with globe, Emblems of empery": Scott's "Bridal of Triermain," iii. 35); also, anything more or less spherical in shape, as the eyeball, a kind of glass lamp-shade, or a glass vessel for holding water in which to exhibit living fish.—globe, v.; globed, globing. I. tr. To form into a globe; also, to provide with a globe or globes. II. intr. To take the form of a globe.—globe'=fish, n. Any of various fishes (genera Tetraodon, Diodon, etc.) which can assume a more or less globular form by inflating the body.—globe'=flow'er, n. A Terrestrial Globe.

Globe-fish (Tetraodon lineatus).Globe-flower (Trollius europæus).

ranunculaceae plant, Trollius europæus, of Europe, having pale-yellow globe-like flowers; also, an American species, T. latus, with spreading sepals.—globe'let, n. A little globe; a drop.—globe'=trot'ter, n. One who travels rapidly and widely over the world, esp. for sight-seeing. [Colloq.]—globe'=trot'ting, n. and a.

glo-bi-ge-ri-na (glō'bi-je-rī'nā), n.; pl. -næ (-nē). [NL., < L. globus, globe, + gerere, bear.] Any member of the genus Globigerina, which comprises small foraminifers of pelagic habits, having a shell with globular chambers which forms the chief constituent of large deposits ('globigerina ooze' or 'globigerina mud') on the bottom of the ocean.—glo-big-er-ine (glō-bij'e-rin), a. and n.

glo-bin (glō'bin), n. [L. globus, E. globe.] In physiol. chem., a proteid substance formed in the decomposition of hemoglobin.

glo-boid (glō'boid), [L. globus, E. globe: see -oid.] I. a. Approximately globular. II. n. A globoid figure or body.

glo-bose (glō-bōs' or glō'bōs), a. [L. globosus, < globus, E. globe.] Globe-like in form; globular, or approximately so.—glo-bose'ly, adv.—glo-bos'i-ty (-bos'i-ti), n.—glo-bous (glō'bus), a.—Globose.

glob-u-lar (glōb'ū-lār), a. Having the form of a globule or globe; spherical; round; also, composed of globules.—glob-u-lar'i-ty (-lār'i-ti), n.—glob'u-lar-ly, adv.

glob-ule (glōb'ūl), n. [F. globule, < L. globulus, dim. of globus, E. globe.] A globe or sphere of small size; a small spherical body or structure, as a pill, a blood-corpuscle, etc.—glob'u-lin (-ū-lin), n. In physiol. chem., any of a group of proteids which are insoluble in pure water.—glob'u-lite (-lit), n. One of the minute rounded bodies seen in vitreous igneous rocks, etc., when examined under the microscope: supposed by some authorities to represent a rudimentary stage in crystallization.—glob-u-lit'ic (-lit'ik), a.

glo-child-i-ate (glō-kid'i-āt), a. [Gr. γλῶχίς, point of an arrow.] In bot. and zool., barbed at the tip, as a hair or bristle; bearing barbs.—glock-en-spiel (glok'en-spēl), n. [G., < glocke, bell, + spiel, play.] A musical instrument consisting of a series of small bells, or of metal bars or tubes, mounted on a support or in a frame and struck with hammers.

glom-er-ate (glom'e-rāt), a. [L. glomeratus, pp. of glomerare, wind or form into a ball, < glomus, ball: see glomerule.] Gathered into a rounded mass; compactly clustered.—glom-er-a'tion (-rā'shən), n. Glomerate condition; also, a glomerate mass.

glom-er-ule (glom'e-röl), n. [NL. glomerulus, dim. of L. glomus, ball (of yarn, thread, etc.).] A compact cluster, as of capillary blood-vessels; in bot., a cyme condensed into a head-like cluster.—glo-mer-u-lar (glō-mer'ū-lār), a.

glon-o-in (glon'ō-in), n. [Said to be < gl(ycerin) + o(xygen) + n(itrogen).] Nitroglycerin: esp. so called in medicine.—gloom (glōm), v. [ME. gloumen, gloumben, frown, lower: cf. MLG. gloemen, make turbid.] I. intr. To frown or scowl; also, to look dismal or dejected; also, to become dark or cloudy, as the sky; lower; also, to appear as a dark object; have a dark or somber appearance. II. tr. To make gloomy; also, to make dark or somber.—gloom, n. A frown or scowl (Sc.); also, a despondent look, as on a person's countenance; a state of melancholy or depression; pl., low spirits; also, sing., darkness; deep shade; a dark or deeply shaded place.—gloom'i-ness, n.—gloom'i-ly, adv. In a gloomy manner.—gloom'i-ness, n.—gloom'ing, n. [Prob. in part associated with gloaming.] The action of one that glooms; a frown; a fit of sullenness; sometimes, gloaming or twilight (poetic).—gloom'less, a. Free from gloom.—gloom'y, a.; compar. gloomier, superl. gloomiest. Affected with, characterized by, or expressive of gloom, or depression of spirits; melancholy; causing gloom, or depressing (as, a gloomy prospect); also, full of gloom or darkness; dark; deeply shaded.

Glo-ri-a (glō'ri-ā), n. [L., glory.] In Christian liturgical worship, the great, or greater, doxology beginning "Gloria in excelsis Deo" (Glory be to God on high), the lesser doxology beginning "Gloria Patri" (Glory be to the Father), or the response "Gloria tibi, Domine" (Glory be to thee, O Lord); [also l. c.] a repetition of any one of these; a musical setting for any one of these, esp. the first; also [l. c.], a halo, nimbus, or aureola, or an ornament in imitation of one; also, a fabric made of silk and wool (or cotton), used for umbrellas, dresses, etc.

glo-ri-ette (glō-ri-et'), n. [F., < L. gloria, E. glory, n.] A pavilion or kiosk, as in a park; a summer-house.

glo-ri-fi-a-ble (glō'ri-fi-ā-bl), a. That may be glorified.

glo-ri-fi-ca-tion (glō'ri-fi-kā'shən), n. The act of glorifying, or the state of being glorified; exaltation to the glory of heaven; ascription of glory or praise; sometimes, a doxology; also, a celebration or jubilation (colloq.); also, a glorified or more splendid form of something (colloq.).

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; y, you;

glo-ri-fied (glō'ri-fid), p. a. Made glorious; often, invested with a glory, magnificence, or dignity not naturally belonging.

glo-ri-fy (glō'ri-fi), v. t.; -fied, -fying. [OF. F. glorifier, < LL. glorificare, < L. gloria, glory, + facere, make.] To render glorious; invest with glory; sometimes, to exalt to the glory of heaven; often, to promote the glory of (God); ascribe glory and praise in adoration to (God); in general, to magnify with praise; extol; also, to invest with radiance or beauty (as, "The bright sun glorifies the sky": Shakspeare's "Venus and Adonis," 485); also, to transform into something more splendid; present in a highly favorable aspect.—glo'ri-fi-er (-fi-ēr), n.

glo-ri-ole (glō'ri-ōl), n. [F. glorirole, < L. gloriola, dim. of gloria, E. glory, n.] A petty glory or distinction†; also, a halo, nimbus, or aureola.

glo-ri-ous (glō'ri-us), a. [OF. glorios (F. glorieux), < L. gloriosus, < gloria, E. glory, n.] Full of glory; entitled to renown; illustrious; also, conferring glory (as, a glorious victory); entitling to renown; also, splendid or magnificent (as, "the glorious planet Sol": Shakspeare's "Troilus and Cressida," i. 3. 89); admirable, delightful, or fine (as, to have a glorious time; "The weather was glorious," Lever's "Harry Lorrequer," xlv.); also, elated or hilarious from drink (colloq.); also, vainglorious†.—glo'ri-ous-ly, adv.—glo'ri-ous-ness, n.

glo-ry (glō'ri), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). [OF. glorie (F. gloire), < L. gloria, glory, fame, vainglory, boasting.] Exalted praise, honor, or distinction, accorded by common consent (as, "The paths of glory lead but to the grave": Gray's "Elegy," ix.); renown; also, something that renders honored or illustrious; a distinguished ornament; an object of pride; also, adoring praise or thanksgiving (as, "Fear God, and give glory to him": Rev. xiv. 7); also, majesty and splendor, as of God (as, "He . . . looked up stedfastly into heaven, and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God": Acts, vii. 55); the splendor and bliss of heaven (as, "Thou, bright saint, high sit'st in glory": Milton's "Epitaph on the Marchioness of Winchester"); heaven (as, to go to glory); also, brightness, brilliance, or radiant beauty (as, "One star differeth from another star in glory," 1 Cor. xv. 41; "What will be the morning glory, when at dusk thus gleams the lake?" Browning's "La Saisiaz"); some feature or thing characterized by such beauty; also, a state of splendor, magnificence, or greatest prosperity (as, the Spanish monarchy in the days of its glory); a state of fullest gratification or enjoyment (as, to be in one's glory); also, a ring, circle, or surrounding radiance of light represented about the head or the whole figure of a sacred person, as Christ, a saint, etc.; a halo, nimbus, or aureola; hence, any ring or circle of light; also, vainglory† (as, "In military commanders and soldiers, vain glory is an essential point; for as iron sharpens iron, so by glory one courage sharpeneth another": Bacon's "Essays," Of Vain Glory).—glo'ry, v. i.; -ried, -rying. [L. gloriari, pride one's self, boast, < gloria.] To exult with triumph; rejoice proudly; also, to boast†.—glo'ry=hole, n. A receptacle or place, as a drawer or a room, into which things are put without attempt at order; naut., a lazaretto.—glo'ry-ing-ly, adv.—glo'ry=pea, n. Same as chianthus.

Glory. — Figure of Christ, façade of Cathedral of Angoulême, France; 12th century.

glose (glōz), n. and v. See *gloze*².

gloss¹ (glos), n. [Cf. D. (obs.) gloos and MHG. glose, a gleam, glow, Icel. glossi, a blaze.] A superficial luster, as of satin; also, an external show; a specious appearance; also, the glow of a fire (Sc. and north. Eng.).—gloss¹, v. t.

To put a gloss or luster upon; also, to give a fair or specious appearance to (often with over).

gloss² (glos), n. [Later form (conformed to L. glossa) of glose, gloze, < OF. glose, < L. glossa, a word needing explanation, the explanation, < Gr. γλῶσσα, tongue, language, foreign or other word needing explanation: cf. *gloze*².] An interlinear or marginal interpretation of a foreign or otherwise difficult word, phrase, etc., in a text; also, an interpretation or definition of a word, phrase, etc., given in a glossary or dictionary; in general, an explanation or comment; also, a series of verbal interpretations of a text; an interlinear translation of a text; a collection or list of verbal explanations of a text; a glossary; sometimes, an artfully misleading or false interpretation.—gloss², v. I. tr. To insert glosses on; annotate; also, to give a specious interpretation of; explain away. II. intr. To make glosses; comment.

glos-sal (glos'al), a. [Gr. γλῶσσα, tongue.] Of or pertaining to the tongue.

glos-sa-ri-al (glo-sā'ri-al), a. [See glossary.] Of, pertaining to, or of the nature of a glossary.—glos-sa'ri-an, n. A glossarist.—glos-sa-rist (glos'a-rist), n. A writer of glosses; a commentator; the compiler of a glossary.—glos-sa-rize (-riz), v. t.; -rized, -rizing. To enter and explain in a glossary.

glos-sa-ry (glos'a-ri), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). [L. glossarium, < glossa, E. *gloss*².] A collection of glosses; a list with explanations, as of difficult, dialectal, or technical terms; a vocabulary or dictionary of limited scope: as, a glossary to Shakspeare's works; a glossary of Scottish words and phrases; a glossary of the mining and mineral industry.

glos-sa-tor (glo-sā'tor), n. [ML., < glossare, to gloss, < L. glossa, E. *gloss*².] A writer of glosses; a commentator; esp., one of the medieval commentators on the texts of the civil and canon law.

gloss-er¹ (glos'ēr), n. One who puts a gloss or luster on something.

gloss-er² (glos'ēr), n. A writer of glosses; a glossarist.

gloss-i-ly (glos-i-li), adv. In a glossy manner.—gloss'i-ness, n.

glos-si-tis (glo-sī'tis), n. [NL., < Gr. γλῶσσα, tongue.] In pathol., inflammation of the tongue.

gloss-less (glos'les), a. Without gloss or luster.

gloss-o-graph (glos'ō-gráf), n. [Gr. γλωσσογράφος, < γλῶσσα (see *gloss*²) + γράφειν, write.] A writer of glosses; a commentator. Also glos-sog-ra-pher (glo-sog'rā-fēr).—glos-sog'ra-phy, n. The writing of glosses.

glos-sol-o-gy (glo-sol'ō-jī), etc. Same as glottology, etc.

gloss-y (glos'i), a.; compar. glossier, superl. glossiest. Having a gloss; lustrous; smooth and shining; also, having a specious appearance (as, "glossy duplicity": Boswell's "Johnson," 1754); plausible.

glost (glost), n. [Var. of *gloss*¹.] In ceram., glaze.—glost'=kiln, glost'=ov'en, n. A kiln or oven in which pottery or biscuit is fired in the glazing process.

glot-tal (glot'al), a. Of, pertaining to, or produced in the glottis. Also glot'tic¹.

glot-tic² (glot'ik), a. [Gr. γλωττικός, < γλῶττα, γλῶσσα, tongue, language.] Pertaining to language; linguistic.

glot-tis (glot'is), n. [NL., < Gr. γλωττις, < γλῶττα, γλῶσσα, tongue.] In anat., the opening at the upper part of the larynx, between the vocal cords.

glot-tol-o-gy (glo-tol'ō-jī), n. [Gr. γλῶττα, γλῶσσα, tongue, language: see -logy.] The science of language; comparative philology.—glot-to-log-ic, glot-to-log-i-cal (glot-ō-loj'ik, -i-kal), a.—glot-tol'o-gist, n.

glove (gluv), n. [AS. glōf = Icel. glöfi.] A covering for the hand, esp. one having a separate sheath for each finger (cf. mitten); sometimes, specif., a boxing-glove.—glove, v. t.; gloved, gloving. To cover with or as with a glove; provide with gloves; also, to serve as a glove for.—glove-less, a. Without a glove; not gloved.—glov-er (gluv'ēr), n. One who makes or sells gloves.

glow (glō), v. [AS. glōwan = D. gloeien = G. glühen = Icel. glōa, glow: cf. *gleed*².] I. intr. To emit bright light and heat without flame; be incandescent; also, to shine like something intensely heated; also, to exhibit a strong, bright color; be lustrously red or brilliant; also, to be excessively hot (as, "The torrid zone *Glow*s with the passing and repassing sun": Dryden's tr. Virgil's "Georgics," i. 323); feel an intense sensation of heat; burn or be animated as with emotion or passion (as, to glow with resentment). II. tr. To cause to glowf.—glow, n. The state of glowing; light such as is emitted by a body heated to luminosity; incandescence; also, brightness of color; vivid redness; also, a state of bodily heat; warmth of emotion or passion.—glow'er¹, n. One who or that which glows; specif., the light-giving rod in a Nernst lamp.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; û, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ", secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

glow'er² (glou'ér), v. i. [Origin uncertain: cf. ME. glören, stare, glare.] To stare or gaze intently (Sc.); also, to look angrily or with sullen dislike or discontent (as, "He . . . stood glowering in sullen suspense": Galsworthy's "Patrician," ii. 5); scowl.—glow'er², n. A glowering look.—glow'er-ing-ly, adv.

glow-ing (glô'ing), p. a. That glows; incandescent; brilliantly luminous; rich and warm in coloring; exhibiting the glow of health, excitement, etc.; ardent or impassioned.—glow-ing-ly, adv.

glow-lamp (glô'lamp), n. An incandescent electric lamp.

glow-worm (glô'wërm), n. Any of various luminous insects or insect larvae; esp., a European beetle, Lampyrus noctiluca, the wingless female of which emits a greenish light from the end of the abdomen.

glow-in-ia (glok-sin'i-ä), n. [NL.; from B. P. Gloxin, German botanist.] Any of the tropical American plants constituting the genus Gloxinia (family Gesneriaceæ), little known in cultivation; also, a widely cultivated plant, Sinningia speciosa, of the same family, having large white, red, or purple bell-shaped flowers (so called because orig. referred to the genus Gloxinia).

gloze¹ (glöz), v. i.; glozed, glozing. [Cf. *gloss*¹.] To blaze, as a fire. [Sc.]—gloze¹, n. The blaze or clear flame of a fire. [Sc.]

gloze² (glöz), n. [ME. glose, < OF. glose: see *gloss*².] A gloss, or explanatory note; also, flattery or deceit; a flattering speech, etc.; also, a specious show; a pretense; a disguise. [Now rare.]—gloze², v.; glozed, glozing. [ME. glosen, < OF. gloser, < glose.] I. tr. To make glozes or glosses upon; interpret; also, to palliate with specious representations (as, "Fawning fools . . . With the tongue of flattery gloze deeds which God and Truth condemn": Whittier's "Lines Suggested by a Visit to Washington"); explain away; extenuate; also, to flatter or wheedle (archaic). II. intr. To make glosses; comment; also, to talk speciously, or use flattering language (now rare).

glu-case (glô'käs), n. [See glucose and -ase.] In chem., an enzyme present in certain species of yeast, etc., and capable of converting maltose into glucose.

glu-ci-num (glô-si'num), n. [NL., < Gr. γλυκύς, sweet (some of the salts having a sweet taste).] Chem. sym., Gl (or Be); at. wt., 9.1; sp. gr., 1.85. A white metallic element occurring combined in certain minerals. Also called beryllium.—glu-cin'ic (-sin'ik), a.

glu-co-pro-te-id (glô-kô-pro'te-id), n. [Gr. γλυκύς, sweet, + E. protein.] In physiol. chem., any of a class of proteid compounds which contain a carbohydrate group.

glu-cose (glô'kôs), n. [F. glucose, perhaps < Gr. γλεῦκος, must, sweet new wine (cf. grape-sugar as a name for the common form of glucose), but usually referred to γλυκύς, sweet: cf. -ose².] In chem., a sugar, C₆H₁₂O₆, having three optically different forms, the common or dextrorotatory form occurring in many fruits, animal tissues and fluids, etc., and having a sweetness about one half that of ordinary sugar; in com., a syrup obtained by the incomplete conversion of starch into common glucose.—glu-co-side (glô'-kô-sid or -sid), n. In chem., any of an extensive group of compounds which yield a sugar (usually glucose) and some other substance or substances when treated with a dilute acid or alkali, or when decomposed by a ferment or enzyme.—glu-co-su'ri-a (-sü'ri-ä), n. Same as glycosuria.

glue (glô), n. [OF. F. glu, < LL. glus (glut-), glue: cf. gluten.] An impure gelatin obtained by boiling skins, hoofs, and other animal substances, in water, and used for various purposes in the arts, esp. as an adhesive medium in uniting substances; any of various preparations of this substance; also, any similar adhesive material.—glue, v. t.; glued, gluing. To join or fasten with glue or other viscous substance; hence, to fix or attach firmly as if with glue; cause to adhere closely.—glu'er, n.—glue'y, a. Like glue; viscid; sticky; also, full of or smeared with glue.

glum (glum), a.; compar. glummer, superl. glummiest. [Akin to gloom.] Sullen or frowning, as persons; gloomy as from dissatisfaction; dismal or dejected (as, "Why should folk be glum . . . When Nature herself is glad?" Whittier's "Cobbler Keesar's Vision").

glu-ma-ceous (glô-mä'shius), a. [See -aceous.] In bot., glume-like; consisting of or having glumes.

glume (glôm), n. [L. gluma, hull or husk (of grain), < glubere, peel.] In bot., one of the characteristic bracts of the inflorescence of grasses, sedges, etc.

glum-ly (glum'li), adv. In a glum manner.—glum'ness, n. glump (glump), v. i. [Cf. glum.] To be sullen; sulk. [Sc. and prov. Eng.]—glump'ish, glump'y, a. Glum.

glut¹ (glut), v. t.; glutted, glutting. [OF. gloutir, glotir, < L. glutire, glutture, swallow, gulp down: cf. glutton.] To swallow; gulp. [Now chiefly Sc. and north. Eng.]—glut¹, n. A swallow; a gulp; a draft. [Now Sc. and north. Eng.]

glut² (glut), v.; glutted, glutting. [ME. glouten, glotten: cf. OF. glout, glot, gluttonous, greedy, glouton, glutton, also gloutir, swallow, E. *glut*¹.] I. tr. To feed or fill to satiety; sate; hence, to indulge to the utmost; also, to feed or fill to excess; hence, to surfeit or cloy; also, to choke up, as a channel; also, to overstock, as a market. II. intr. To eat to satiety.—glut², n. The act of glutting, or the state of being glutted; also, a full supply; a surfeit, or excessive supply (as, "They had had a glut of Christian blood": J. H. Newman's "Callista," xxvii.); in com., a supply of mercantile goods greatly in excess of the demand.

glu-tæ-us, glu-te-us (glô-tê'us), n.; pl. glutæi, glutei (-i). [NL., < Gr. γλουτός, rump, pl. buttocks.] In anat., any of several muscles of the buttocks.—glu-tê'al (-äl), a. In anat., pertaining to the buttock muscles, or to the buttocks.

glu-ten (glô'ten), n. [L. gluten, glue, akin to LL. glus, E. glue.] Glue, or some gluey substance; esp., the tough, viscid nitrogenous substance which remains behind when the flour of wheat or other grain is washed with water to remove the starch.—gluten bread, bread made from gluten flour.—gluten flour, wheat flour from which a part of the starch has been removed, thus increasing the proportion of gluten.

glu-te-us (glô-tê'us), n. See glutæus.

glu-ti-nous (glô'ti-nus), a. [L. glutinosus, < gluten, glue.] Of the nature of glue; gluey; viscid; sticky.—glu-ti-nos'i-ty (-nos'i-ti), glu'ti-nous-ness, n.—glu'ti-nous-ly, adv.

glut-ton (glut'n), n. [OF. F. glouton, < L. gluto(n), gluto(n), < glutire, swallow, E. *glut*¹.] One who eats to excess; a gormandizer; hence, one who indulges in something excessively or inordinately; one who is excessively fond of a specified object, etc.; in zool., a thick-set, voracious mammal, Gulo luscus, of the weasel family, measuring from 2 to 3 feet in length, and inhabit-fat, fâte, fâr, fäll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviary. glect, agôny, intô, unite; (obscured) errant, operâ, ardent, actôr, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; then, then; y, you

Glutton (Gulo luscus).

ing northern regions (the kind found in America, usually called the wolverene, being practically identical with that of Europe and Asia).—glut/ton-ize, v. i. or t.; -ized, -izing. To feast or devour like a glutton.—glut/ton-ous, a. Given to or characterized by excessive eating; voracious; hence, greedy; insatiable.—glut/ton-ous-ly, adv.—glut/ton-ous-ness, n.—glut/ton-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). Excess in eating; voracity.

gly-cer-ic (gli-ser'ik or glis'e-rik), a. Pertaining to or derived from glycerin: as, glyceric acid (an acid obtained by the oxidation of glycerin).

gly-cer-ide (glis'e-rid or -rid), n. In chem., an ester of glycerin.

gly-cer-in, gly-cer-ino (glis'e-rin), n. [F. glycérine, < Gr. γλυκερός, sweet.] A clear, colorless, odorless liquid ($C_3H_5.O_3H_3$, a compound of the alcohol class), of thick, syrupy consistence and sweet taste, obtained by the saponification of natural fats and oils, and used in the arts, in medicine, etc.—gly-cer-in-ate (-ät), v. t.; -ated, -ating. To mix or treat with glycerin.—gly-cer-ite (glis'e-rit), n. In phar., any of a class of preparations consisting of a medicinal substance dissolved or suspended in glycerin.—gly-cer-ol (glis'e-rol or -röl), n. Same as glycerin.—gly-cer-olate (glis'e-rö-lät), n. Same as glyceride.—gly-cer-yl (glis'e-ryl), n. [See -yl.] In chem., the hypothetical trivalent radical (C_3H_5) in glycerin and the glycerides.

gly-co-gen (gli'kō-jen), n. [Gr. γλυκός, sweet: see -gen.] In chem., a white, amorphous, tasteless carbohydrate found in the liver and other animal tissues.—gly-co-gen'ic, a.

gly-col (gli'kol), n. [From glyc(erin) + (alcohol).] In chem., a colorless, sweet-tasting liquid, $C_2H_4(OH)_2$, of the alcohol class, regarded as intermediate between glycerin and ethyl alcohol; also, any of a group of alcohols of a similar type.—gly/co-late (-kō-lät), n. In chem., a salt or ester of glycolic acid.—gly-col'ic, a. Pertaining to or derived from glycol: as, glycolic acid (a crystalline compound produced from glycol).

Gly-con-ic (gli-kon'ik). [From Glycon, Greek lyric poet.] [Also l. c.] In anc. pros.: I. a. Noting or pertaining to a form of verse, usually catalectic, consisting of four feet (three trochees and one dactyl, the dactyl commonly being the second foot) or of three feet (a spondee and two dactyls). II. n. The Glyconic meter; a Glyconic verse.

gly-cose (gli'hōs), n. Same as glucose.

gly-co-su-ri a (gli-kō-sū-ri-ä), n. [NL., < E. glycose (glucose) + Gr. οὔρον, urine.] In pathol., a condition in which glucose is present in the urine, as in diabetes.—gly-co-su-ric, a.

glyph (glif), n. [Gr. γλυφή, carving, < γλύφειν, carve: cf. *cleave*².] In arch., an ornamental channel or groove, usually vertical, as in a Doric frieze; in archæol., a pictograph or hieroglyph.—glyph'ic, a. [Gr. γλυφικός.] Of or pertaining to carving; sculptured.

gly-phog-ra-phy (gli-fog'ra-fī), n. [Gr. γλυφή, carving: see -graphy.] An electrotype process by which a plate with a raised surface suitable for printing is made from an engraved plate.

glyp-tic (glip'tik), a. [Gr. γλυπτικός, < γλύφειν, carve.] Of or pertaining to carving or engraving, esp. on precious stones.—glyp-ti'cian (-tish'an), n. A cutter of precious stones; a lapidary.—glyp'tics, n. The art of carving or engraving, esp. on precious stones.

glyp-to-don (glip'tō-don), n. [NL., < Gr. γλυπτός, carved, + δόντος (δόντ-), tooth.] Any animal of the extinct genus Glyptodon, comprising large, armadillo-like edentate mammals with solid carapace and fluted teeth, found in the Pleistocene deposits of South America, Mexico, etc.—glyp'to-dont (-dont), a. and n.

glyp-tog-ra-phy (glip-tog'-ra-fī), n. [Gr. γλυπτός, carved: see -graphy.] The art or process of engraving on gems or the like; also, the description or study of engraved gems, etc.

glyp-to-thek (glip-tō-tāk'), n. [G., < Gr. γλυπτός, carved, + θήκη, case, repository.] A gallery or museum of sculpture.

Glyptodon (G. clavipes).

gnar, gnarr (när), v. i.; gnarred, gnarring. [Imit.] To snarl; growl.

gnarl¹ (närl), v. i. [Freq. of gnar.] To snarl. See Shakespeare's "2 Henry VI.," iii. 1. 192. [Obs. or prov.]

gnarl² (närl), n. [Cf. knarl and knurl.] A knotty protuberance on a tree; a knot in wood.—gnarled, a. [Cf. knurled.] Full of or covered with gnarls, as a tree; knotted; twisted; rugged. Also fig. Also gnarl'y.

gnash (nash), v. [Var. of earlier gnast: cf. Icel. gnastan, a gnashing.] I. tr. To strike or grind (the teeth) together, esp. in rage or pain; also, to strike or grind the teeth together upon; bite with grinding teeth (as, "I strove . . . To rend and gnash my bonds in twain": Byron's "Prisoner of Chillon," vii.). II. intr. To gnash the teeth; of the teeth, to strike or grind together.

gnat (nat), n. [AS. gnæt.] In English use, any of certain small dipterous insects (mosquitoes) of the family Culicidæ, esp. Culex pipiens; in American use, any of various small dipterous insects of the families Simuliidæ, Chironomidæ, etc., as the black-fly, Simulium venustum, a small black-bodied blood-sucking fly of the wooded regions of the northern U. S. and Canada; a midge.—to strain at a gnat and swallow a camel, fig., to make difficulties over something small or easy and have no trouble with something large or difficult. See Mat. xxiii. 24.—gnat'-catch'er, n. Any of various small American insectivorous birds of the genus Poliophtila.

Gnat (Culex pipiens). (Small figure natural size.)

gnath-ic (nath'ik), a. [Gr. γνάθος, jaw.] Of or pertaining to the jaw.

gnath-i-on (nath'i-on), n. [NL., dim. < Gr. γνάθος, jaw.] In craniol., the foremost median point of the lower border of the lower jaw.

-gnathous. Adjective termination from Gr. γνάθος, jaw, as in orthognathous, prognathous.

gnaw (nä), v.; pret. gnawed, pp. gnawed or gnawn, ppr. gnawing. [AS. gnagan = G. nagen = Icel. gnaga, gnaw.] I. tr. To bite persistently, esp. so as to remove portions; wear away or remove by persistent biting; also, to corrode; consume. Often fig. II. intr. To bite persistently; also, to produce an effect as of persistent biting; cause corrosion. Often fig.—gnaw'er, n.—gnaw'ing, n. The act of one who or that which gnaws; also, a persistent pain suggesting gnawing, as in the bowels (as, the gnawings of hunger).—gnaw'ing-ly, adv.

gneiss (näs), n. [G.] A metamorphic rock consisting essentially of the same mineral elements as granite, but having a more or less distinctly foliated arrangement of the constituent elements, esp. of the mica.—gneiss'ic, a. Pertaining to, of the nature of, or resembling gneiss.—gneiss'-oid, a. Resembling gneiss, as in structure.—gneiss'ose (-ös), a. Gneissic.

gnome¹ (nōm), n. [F., < NL. gnomus (used by Paracelsus); origin uncertain: cf. syolph.] One of a race of diminutive beings fabled to inhabit the interior of the earth and to act as the guardians of its treasures; a kobold; hence, an odd-looking, dwarfish person.

Blue-gray Gnatcatcher (Poliophtila cerulea).

gnome² (nōm), n. [L., < Gr. γνώμη, judgment, opinion, maxim, < γινώσκειν, know.] A short, pithy expression of a general truth; an aphorism; a maxim.

gnome-owl (nōm'oul), n. [See *gnome*¹.] Any owl of the genus Glaucidium, of both hemispheres, comprising small species with imperfect facial disk, as G. gnoma of western North America.

gno-mic (nō'mik), a. [Gr. γνωμικός.] Dealing in, containing, or pertaining to gnomes; aphoristic; sententious. Also gno'mi-cal. — gno'mi-cal-ly, adv.

gnom-ist (nō'mist), n. A writer of gnomes.

gnom-mon (nō'mon), n.

[L., < Gr. γνώμων, one who knows, a judge, an indicator, < γινώσκειν, know.] Any object which serves to indicate the hour of the day by casting its shadow upon a marked surface; esp., the vertical triangular plate of a sun-dial; also, a vertical shaft, column, obelisk, or the like, used (esp. by the ancients) as an astronomical instrument for determining the altitude of the sun, the position of a place, etc., by noting the length of the shadow cast at noon; in geom., the part of a parallelogram which remains after a similar parallelogram has been taken away from one of its corners. — gno-mon-ic (nō-mon'ik), a. [L. gnomonicus, < Gr. γνωμονικός.] Pertaining to the gnomon or the sun-dial, or to the art of dialing. — gno-mon'ics, n. The art or science of dialing.

gno-sis (nō'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. γνώσις, < γινώσκειν, know.] Knowledge; esp., a special knowledge of spiritual things; mystical knowledge.

-gnost. Noun termination from Gr. γνώστης, one who knows, as in bibliognost, geognost.

gnos-tic (nos'tik). [Gr. γνωστικός, < γινώσκειν, know.]

I. a. Pertaining to knowledge; also, possessing knowledge, esp. esoteric knowledge of spiritual things; also [cap.] pertaining to or characteristic of the Gnostics. II. n. [cap.] A member of any of certain sects among the early Christians who claimed to have superior knowledge of spiritual things, and who explained the world as created by powers or agencies arising as emanations from the Godhead. — Gnos'ti-cism (-ti-sizm), n. The doctrines of the Gnostics. — Gnos'ti-cize (-siz), v.; -cized, -cizing. I. intr. To adopt or maintain Gnostic views. II. tr. To explain on Gnostic principles; give a Gnostic coloring to.

-gnosy. Noun termination from Gr. γνώσις, knowledge, as in astrognosy, geognosy.

gnu (nō or nū), n. [Kafir ngu.] Any of several African antelopes constituting the genus Catoblepas (or Connochates), characterized by an ox-like head, curved horns, and a long, flowing tail; a wildebeest.

go (gō), v. i.; pret. went, pp. gone, ppr. going. [AS. gān = D. gaan = MLG. gān = OHG. gān, gēn, G. gehen, go: cf. gang, v.]

Gnome-owl (Glaucidium gnoma).

Gnomon, EFGBCD.

Gnu (Catoblepas gnu).

To move or pass along; walk, run, ride, travel, etc.; proceed; take a specified direction (as, to go straight); continue, or be habitually, in particular circumstances (as, to go in rags); keep or be in motion, act, or work, as a clock or other mechanism; act or operate with sound, as a bell or a gun; pass or elapse, as time; circulate, pass current, or be accepted, as coin or notes; be known (as, to go by a name, or under an alias); have a general course, tendency, character, etc. (as, good as things go; as prices go); harmonize, or be compatible (as, colors that go well together); turn out or result (as, how did the match go?); prove successful, as a play; also, to move or pass away or out, or depart (opposed to come or arrive); begin, or come into, action (as, here goes!); be loosed or freed (as, let go his hand); pass, or pass away, by sale, expenditure, etc.; be given up or relinquished (as, Greek is going, Latin will go next); be lost, or come to an end (as, his eyesight is going); die (as, his wife went first); fail, or give way (as, when he stooped over, the stitches went); wear through, as a garment; also, to move or proceed toward or to a particular place, destination, etc. (as, to go to Jericho: see Jericho); resort, or have recourse (as, to go to court over a dispute); carry an action to a given point or stage (as, to go as high as $10 for a thing); be capable of passing, entering, or being contained (as, a book that will go into one's pocket; four goes in twelve three times); belong as to place (as, this book goes on the top shelf); pass, be awarded, or be transferred to a particular recipient (as, the first prize went to a dark horse; the property went to his son); be applied or appropriated (as, all the income went to making repairs); contribute to a result (as, the items which go to make up a total); conduce or tend (as, this goes to show that you cannot depend on appearances); reach or extend (as, his memory does not go back very far); pass into a particular condition (as, to go to ruin); become (as, to go mad). Also used in the present participle going, followed by an infinitive, to express futurity ('about, intending, or destined' to do something): as, it is going to rain; he is going to write; who is going to win? — go to! formerly, set to work! begin! (as, "Go to, let us make brick": Gen. xi. 3); now, an expression of disapprobation, protest, or derision (archaic: as, "Go to, go to, thou art a foolish fellow," Shakspeare's "Twelfth Night," iv. 1. 3). — to go about, to change the course of a vessel by tacking or wearing. — to go for, to be taken or valued as; also, to attack or assail (colloq.). — to go in for, to make (a thing) one's particular object, principle, interest, amusement, etc. — to go off, to be discharged, as firearms; explode, as powder, etc. — to go through, to proceed to the end of; also, to undergo or experience; also, to exhaust, as a fortune; also, to subject to a search, as for valuables. — to go under, to be submerged or overwhelmed; succumb; be ruined. — to go up, to rise or ascend; advance or increase; also (colloq.), to go to ruin; become bankrupt. — to go west, to die. [Colloq., first in British soldiers' use.] — to go with, to accompany; associate with; also, to frequent the society of, as an admirer or lover (vulgar); also, to harmonize with. — to go without, to get along without; do without. — go, v. t. To go or proceed on, through, etc.; also, to go to the extent of, or venture as far as (colloq.); endure or tolerate (colloq.); risk or wager (colloq.): as, to go $5 on a thing; to go a person one better, fig., to go beyond or surpass him in some respect). — go, n.; pl. goes (gōz). The act of going (as, the come and go of the seasons); energy, spirit, or animation (colloq.); a proceeding, turn of affairs, or state of things (colloq.): as, this is a pretty go!; a turn, chance, or attempt at something (colloq.); a portion, as of liquor (colloq.); something that goes, or proves successful (colloq.); a compact, or something fully agreed upon (colloq.): as, it's a go!; the fashion, style, or rage (colloq.): as, a thing which is all the go); in English universities, the first or preliminary examination for the degree of B. A. ('little go'), or the final examination for this degree ('great go'). — on the go, constantly going. [Colloq.] go-a (gō'ā), n. [Tibetan dgoba.] An antelope, Procapra picticauda, of the Tibetan plateau.

goad (gōd), n. [AS. gād.] A stick with a pointed end, for driving cattle, etc.; hence, anything that pricks or wounds like such a stick; a stimulus. — goad, v. t. To prick or drive with a goad; hence, to irritate; incite; urge by harassing.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, quīte; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

goaf (gōf), n.; pl. goaves (gōvz) or goafs. [Origin obscure.]

In coal-mining, a space from which coal has been worked away; also, the refuse left in old workings.

go-a-head (gō'a-hed'), a. Energetic; enterprising; progressive: as, "You would fancy that the go-ahead party try to restore order, and help business on" (Kingsley's "Two Years Ago," xiv.). [Colloq.]

goal (gōl), n. [ME. gol, boundary, limit: cf. AS. gēlan, hinder, impede.] A boundary or limit; also, the terminal point in a race; a pole or other object by which this is marked; hence, that toward which effort is directed; the aim or end; also, in various games, a bound or structure toward which the players strive to advance the ball, etc.; the advancement of the ball, etc., to, through, or into the goal; the score made by accomplishing this.

Go-a (gō'a) pow'der. [From Goa, Portuguese territory in southwestern India.] A bitter powder obtained from the interspaces of the wood of a large leguminous tree, Vouacarpoua (or Andira) araroba, of Brazil, and used in the preparation of remedies for skin-diseases: so called from its being exported from Brazil to Goa in India.

goat (gōt), n. [AS. gāt = D. geit = G. geiss = Icel. geit = Goth. gaits, goat; akin to L. hædus, kid.] Any animal of the genus Capra (family Bovidae), comprising various agile hollow-horned ruminants closely related to the sheep, found native in rocky and mountainous regions of the Old World, and including domesticated forms common throughout the world; also, any of various allied animals, as Oreamnos montanus ('Rocky Mountain goat'), a ruminant of western North America; also, a lustful man; also, one who serves as a scape-goat, or suffers in the place of others (slang); also [cap.], in astron., the zodiacal constellation or sign Capricorn.

goat-ee (gō-tē'), n. [From goat.] A man's beard trimmed to a tuft hanging from the chin, like that of the he-goat.

goat-fish (gōt'fish), n. Any of certain mullets (family Mullidae) with barbels at the chin, as Pseudupeneus maculatus, a food-fish of tropical American seas.

goat-herd (gōt'hêrd), n. One who tends goats.

goat-ish (gō'tish), a. Like, or characteristic of, a goat; lustful.—goat-ish-ness, n.

goat-ling (gōt'ling), n. A young goat.

goat's-beard (gōts'bêrd), n. A cichoriaceous plant, Tragopogon pratensis, with a long and coarse pappus; also, a Wild Goat (Capra aegagrus).

Rocky Mountain Goat (Oreamnos montanus).

rosaceous herb, Aruncus aruncus, with long, slender spikes of small flowers in large panicles.

goat-skin (gōt'skin), n. The skin or hide of a goat, or leather made from it.

goat's-rue (gōts'rō), n. A European leguminous herb, Galega officinalis, formerly used in medicine; also, an American leguminous herb, Cracca virginiana.

goat-suck-er (gōt'suk'êr), n. A non-passerine nocturnal bird, Caprimulgus europæus, of Europe, with flat head and wide mouth, formerly supposed to suck the milk of goats; also, any of the group of chiefly nocturnal or crepuscular birds to which this species belongs, sometimes regarded as including two families, the Caprimulgidae ('true goatsuckers') and the Podargidae (frogmouths), and sometimes only one family, the Caprimulgidae, which is then divided into the subfamilies Caprimulginae and Podarginae. See whippoorwill and frogmouth.

Goatsucker (Caprimulgus europæus).

goat-y (gō'ti), a. Goat-like; goatish.

gob¹ (gob), n. [ME. gobbe, lump, mass: cf. gobbet.] A mass or lump; also, a large mouthful. [Now prov. or colloq.]

gob² (gob), n. [Cf. Gael. and Ir. gob, beak, mouth.] The mouth. [Prov. or slang.]

gob³ (gob), n. Same as goaf.

gob⁴ (gob), n. [Cf. gob¹.] A sailor in the naval service. [Slang.]

go-bang (gō-bang'), n. [Jap. goban, checker-board.] A game of Japanese origin, played on a checker-board by two players, each endeavoring to get five pieces in a row before his opponent does.

gobbe (gob), n. [Surinam name.] A creeping leguminous plant, Voandzeia subterranea, which ripens its edible pods and seeds underground, and is extensively cultivated in Africa and South America.

gob-bet (gob'et), n. [OF. F. gobet, mouthful, morsel, piece, akin to gober, swallow, gulp down; said to be from Celtic.] A portion or piece, as of raw flesh; a lump or mass. [Now chiefly prov. or archaic.]

gob-ble¹ (gob'l), v. t.; -bled, -bling. [Appar. < gob¹.] To swallow hastily in large pieces; gulp; also, to seize upon greedily or eagerly (colloq.).

gob-ble² (gob'l), v. i.; -bled, -bling. [Imit.] To utter the characteristic throaty cry of a turkey-cock, or some sound resembling it: as, "Regiments of turkeys were gobbling through the farm-yard" (Irving's "Sketch-Book," Sleepy Hollow).—gob-ble², n.

gob-bler¹ (gob'lêr), n. One who or that which gobbles food, etc.

gob-bler² (gob'lêr), n. A turkey-cock.

Gob-e-lin (gob'ê-lin or gō'bē, F. gob-laîn), a. Made at the French national tapestry factory, in Paris, of the Gobelins (orig. a dye-house of a family named Gobelin); resembling, or suggestive of, the tapestry made at the Gobelins.

gobe-mouche (gob-mōsh), n. [F. gobe-mouches, 'swallow-flies.'] A credulous person.

go-be-tween (gō'bē-twēn'), n. One who goes to and fro as agent between persons or parties: as, "A prophet . . . is the go-between of gods and men" (Dunsany's "Laughter of the Gods," iii.).

go-bi-oid (gō'bi-oid). I. a. Resembling the goby (fish). II. n. A gobioid fish.

gob-let (gob'let), n. [OF. F. gobelet, dim. of OF. gobel, cup; origin uncertain.] A bowl-shaped drinking-vessel without a handle (archaic); now, specif., a drinking-glass with a foot and stem.

gob-lin (gob'lin), n. [OF. F. gobelin: cf. ML. cobalus, < Gr. κόβαλος, rogue, mischievous goblin.] A grotesque, mischievous sprite or elf.—gob/lin-ize, v. t.; -ized, -izing. To transform into a goblin.—gob/lin-ry, n. The acts or practices of goblins.

gob-stick (gob'stik), n. [See gob.²] A stick for removing a hook from a fish's mouth or gullet.

go-by (gō'bi), n.; pl. -bies (-biz). [L. gobius, cobius, < Gr. κωβίος, kind of fish.] Any member of the Gobiidae, a family of acanthopterygian marine and fresh-water fishes, mostly small and usually having the ventral fins united to form a suction disk that enables them to cling to rocks.

go-by (gō'bī), n. A going by; a passing, esp. without noticing or being noticed: as, to give one the go-by.

go-cart (gō'kärt), n. A small framework with casters, in which children learn to walk; also, a kind of small wheeled chair or vehicle for small children to ride in; also, a child's cart or wagon; also, a hand-cart; also, a kind of light carriage.

god (god or gōd), n. [AS. god = D. god = G. gott = Icel. goð = Goth. guth, god: cf. Skt. hū-, call upon, invoke.] A personal being conceived as superior to nature and mankind and entitled to worship; a deity, esp. a male deity, presiding over some portion of worldly affairs; also, an image of a deity, to which worship is addressed; an idol; hence, any person or thing made the object of adoration or supreme respect (as, "Sir Aylmer Aylmer, that almighty man, The county God": Tennyson's "Aylmer's Field," 14); also, one of the occupants of the gallery in a theater (colloq.); also [cap.], the one Supreme Being, the creator and ruler of the universe; sometimes, the Supreme Being considered with reference to a particular attribute (as, the God of justice; the God of mercy); also [cap. or l. c.], a supreme being according to some particular conception (as, the God of pantheism).

—god, v. t.; godded, godding. To make into a god; deify; idolize.—god/child, n.; pl. -children. One for whom a person (godparent) stands sponsor at baptism.—god/daugh/ter, n. A female godchild.

god-den (god-den'), n. and interj. See good-den.

god-dess (god'es), n. A female god or deity; hence, a woman of extraordinary or stately beauty; also, a woman whom one adores.—god/dess-hood (-hūd), god/dess=ship, n.

go-dev-il (gō'dev'li), n. A rough sled for holding one end of a log or the like while it is being dragged.

god-fa-ther (god'fā'thēr), n. A man who stands sponsor for a child at baptism; hence, a male sponsor, as at confirmation; pl., jocularly, jurymen who convict a person of a capital offense (cf. Shakspeare's "Merchant of Venice," iv. 1. 398).—god'fa'ther, v. t. To act as godfather to; be sponsor for.

God-fear-ing (god'fēr'ing), a. Having a reverential fear of God.

God-for-sak-en (god'fqr-sā'kn), a. Forsaken, or seemingly forsaken, by God; abandoned to evil and its penalties (as, a band of God-forsaken robbers); forlorn, desolate, or miserable (as, a God-forsaken spot or place).

god-head (god'hed), n. Godhood or godship; also, a god; [cap.] the essential being of God; the Supreme Being.

god-hood (god'hūd), n. Divine character; godship.

god-less (god'les), a. Having or acknowledging no God; having or showing no reverence for God; irreligious; ungodly.—god/less-ly, adv.—god/less-ness, n.

god-like (god'lik), a. Like or befitting a god, or God.—god/like-ness, n.

god-ling (god'ling), n. A little god; a minor or petty deity.

god-ly (god'li), a.; compar. godlier, superl. godliest. Divine (archaic); also, conforming to God's laws; pious; religious; righteous.—god/li-ly, adv.—god/li-ness, n.—god/ly, adv. In a godly manner.

god-moth-er (god'muθ'ēr), n. A woman who stands sponsor for a child at baptism; hence, in general, a female sponsor.

go-down (gō-doun'), n. [Malay gadong.] In India and eastern Asia, a warehouse.

god-par-ent (god'pār'ent), n. A godfather or godmother.

god-droon (go-drōn'), n. [F. godron, OF. goderon; origin unknown.] A convex rounded ornament of great variety in form, repeated in a band or the like, as in a molding, on silverware, etc.; also, a convex rounded fold or plait in cloth, etc.—go-drooned', a. Ornamented with godroons.

God's-a-cre (godz'ā'kēr), n. [= G. Gottesacker, 'God's field.'] A churchyard; a burial-ground: as, "the churchyard, or, as the Germans more devoutly say, God's-acre" (Longfellow's "Hyperion," ii. 9).

god-send (god'send), n. [For the earlier God's send.] A thing regarded as sent by God; an unexpected but particularly welcome acquisition or advantage; a timely piece of good fortune.

god-ship (god'ship), n. The rank or character of a god; with his, your, etc., a title for a god.

god-son (god'sun), n. A male godchild.

God-speed (god'spēd'), n. [From the expression 'God speed (you).'] A wish of success to one setting out on a journey or undertaking.

God-ward, God-wards (god'wärd, -wärdz), adv. Toward God.

god-wit (god'wit), n. [Origin uncertain.] Any bird of the genus Limosa, which comprises wading birds of the snipe family, characterized by a long bill curved slightly upward.

goe-duck (gwē'duk), n. See gweduc.

go-er (gō'ēr), n. One who or that which goes.

goe-thite (gē'tit), n. See göthite.

gof-fer (gof'ēr), v. t.

[F. garifrer, < garfre, honeycomb, waffle: see wafer.] To flute (a frill, etc.), as with a heated iron; impress (book-edges, etc.) with an ornamental pattern.

gog-gle (gog'li), v.; -gled, -gling. [ME. gogelen; perhaps from Celtic.] I. intr. To turn or roll the eyes to one side or another; roll the eyes staringly; stare; of eyes, to roll or bulge and stare. II. tr. To roll (the eyes).—gog'gle, n. A goggling look; also, pl., a kind of protective spectacles with the glasses set in short tubes that spread at the base (toward the face); hence, any large or conspicuous spectacles.—gog'gle=eye, n. A rolling or bulging staring eye.

—gog'gle-eyed, a.

gog-let (gog'let), v.; [Pg. gorgoleta.] In India, etc., a long-necked vessel, usually of porous earthenware, used as a water-cooler.

go-ing (gō'ing), n. The act of a person or thing that goes; proceeding or course (usually in pl.: as, "His eyes are upon the ways of man, and he seeth all his goings," Job, xxxiv. 21); gait; departure (as, "The day is placid in its going": Wordsworth's "White Doe of Rylstone," i.); also, the manner or kind (good, bad, rough, etc.) of walking, driving, sledding, etc., esp. from the condition of the ground.—go'ing, p. a. That goes; moving or working, as machinery; in operation; in existence; departing.—go'ings-on', n. pl. Actions; conduct; behavior: used chiefly with depreciative force. [Colloq.]

goi-ter, goi-tre (goi'tēr), n. [F. goitre, < goitreux, goitrous, < L. guttur, throat.] In pathol., a morbid enlargement of the thyroid gland, on the front and side of the neck.

—goi'tered, goi'tred, a. Affected with or as with goiter.

—goi'trous, a. Pertaining to, abounding in, or affected with goiter.

Gol-con-da (gol-kon'dä), n. [From Golconda, an ancient city of India, famed for diamond-cutting.] A mine or source of wealth.

gold (göld). [AS. gold = D. goud = G. gold = Icel. gull = Goth. guth, gold; prob. akin to E. yellow.] I. n. Chem. sym., Au (see aurum); at. wt., 197.2; sp. gr., 19.3. A precious yellow metal, highly malleable and ductile, and free from liability to rust; also, coin made of it; hence, money; wealth; also, something likened to this metal in brightness, preciousness, etc. (as, "The king's a bawcock, and a heart of gold": Shakspeare's "Henry V.," iv. 1. 44); also, a bright or lustrous yellow. II. a. Consisting or made of gold; also, like gold; of the color of gold; gilded; also, pertaining to gold.—gold brick. See entry below.—gold certificate. See under certificate, n.—gold standard. See standard, n.

Marbled Godwit (Limosa fedoa).

fat, fāte, fār, fall, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nór; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

—gold'=bear'/ing, a. Containing or yielding gold; auriferous.—gold'=beat'/er, n. One who beats gold into thin sheets.—gold=beaters' skin, the prepared outside membrane of the large intestine of the ox, used by gold-beaters to lay between the leaves of the metal while they beat it.—gold'=beat'/ing, n.—gold'=bee'/tle, n. Any of certain beetles characterized by a golden luster, as Coptocycla aurichalcea, a small beetle which feeds on the sweet potato and allied plants.—gold brick. A brick-shaped mass of gold for which a swindler receives a price but delivers a spurious substitute; also, a brick of base metal or the like sold as gold; hence, anything of supposed value which turns out to be spurious or worthless. [Colloq.]—gold'=brick, v. t. To swindle, as by means of a gold brick. [Colloq.]—gold'=bug, n. A gold-beetle; also, an advocate of the single gold standard in finance (slang).—gold'crest, n. A kinglet with a yellow crest, esp. Regulus cristatus, a small European bird.—gold'=cure, n. A treatment for the drink habit in which the chief remedy employed is said to be chloride of gold.—gold'=dig'/ger, n. One who digs or seeks for gold in a gold-field; hence (colloq.), one who seeks to get money or profit by calculated, often unscrupulous, ways; esp., a woman who uses her feminine arts or seductions to extract profit from men.—gold'=dig'/ging, n. The action or work of digging for gold; also, pl., a region where digging or seeking for gold, esp. by placer mining, is carried on.—gold'=dust, n. Gold in fine particles.

gold-en (gôl'dn), a. Made or consisting of gold (as, "Every door is barr'd with gold, and opens but to golden keys": Tennyson's "Locksley Hall," 100); also, containing or yielding gold; also, of the color of gold; yellow; bright or shining, like gold; also, resembling gold in value; most excellent; exceedingly favorable, as an opportunity; of great utility or importance, as a rule or precept; flourishing or joyous, as a time or period.

—golden age, the finest or most flourishing period. See ages in mythology, under age, n.—golden calf, the golden idol set up by Aaron (see Ex. xxxii.), or either of the two similar idols set up by Jeroboam (see 1 Kings, xii. 28, 29); hence, wealth as an object of undue regard.—golden eagle, a large eagle, Aquila chrysaëtus, of both eastern and western hemispheres: so called because of the ruddy-brown feathers on the back of the neck.—golden fleece, in Gr. myth., the fleece of gold taken from the ram on which Phrixus was carried to Colchis, recovered from King Æetes expedition under Jason. Also used in the title of the Order of the Golden Fleece, an order of knighthood for royalty and the highest nobility, founded by Philip the Good of Burgundy in 1429, and subsequently maintained separately in Austria and Spain.—golden mean, the happy medium between extremes.—golden number, the number of any year in the Metonic cycle of 19 years (see Metonic), so called because important in calculating the date of Easter: found for any year of the Christian Goldcrest (Regulus cristatus).

Golden Eagle.

by the Argonautic

Badge of the Order of the Golden Fleece.

era by adding 1 to the number of the year and dividing by 19, when the remainder, or 19 if there is no remainder, will be the golden number.—golden robin, the Baltimore oriole (see oriole).—golden rose, a rose made of pure gold, blessed by the Pope on the fourth Sunday of Lent, and occasionally sent as a mark of special honor to some Catholic sovereign or other notable person, or to some church, city, etc.—golden rule, the rule, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them" (Mat. vii. 12).

—gold'en, v. t. or i. To make or become golden.—gold'en-eye, n. Any duck of the genus Clangula; a garrot; esp., C. clangula, found throughout the northern hemisphere.—gold'en-ly, adv.—gold'en-ness, n.—gold'en-rod, n. Any plant of the asteraceous genus Solidago, most species of which bear numerous small yellow flowers, often arranged in panicles; also, any of various related asteraceous plants, as Brachy-chæta sphacelata ('false goldenrod').

—gold'en-seal, n. A ranunculaceous herb, Hydrastis canadensis, with a thick yellow rootstock.

gold=field (gôld'fêld'), n. A district in which gold is mined.

gold=filled (gôld'fild'), a. Containing a filling of cheaper metal within a layer of gold.

gold=finch (gôld'fîch'), n. A European fringilline song-bird, Carduelis elegans, having wings marked with yellow; also, any of certain small American finches, esp. Chrysomitris (or Spinus) tristis, the male of which has yellow body-plumage in summer.

gold=fin=ny (gôld'fîn'î), n.; pl. -finnies (-fîn'iz). The cunner, Crenilabrus melops, which is beautifully colored; also, any of various related fishes.

gold=fish (gôld'fîsh'), n. A small fish, Carassius auratus, of the carp family, and orig. native in China, prized for aquariums, etc., because of its golden coloring (produced by artificial selection); also, a red marine fish, Hypsopops rubicundus, of California; the garibaldi. See cut below.

gold=foil (gôld'fôil'), n. Gold beaten into a thin sheet.

gold=i=locks (gôl'di-loks), n. A American Goldfinch (Chrysomitris tristis). person with golden hair; also, a species of buttercup, Ranunculus auricomus; also, any of several cultivated plants of the genus Chrysocoma, with heads of yellow flowers.

gold=leaf (gôld'lêf'), n. Gold beaten into a very thin sheet: used for gilding, etc.

gold=less (gôld'les'), a. Without gold: as, "the goldless age, where gold disturbs no dreams" (Byron's "Island," i. 10).

Goldeneye.—Rocky Mountain Garrot (Clangula islandica).Goldenrod (Solidago nemoralis).Goldfish (Carassius auratus).

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ", secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

gold-mine (göld'min), n. A mine yielding gold; fig., a source of great wealth.

gold-of-pleas-ure (göld'ov-plezh'ür), n. A brassaceous herb, Camelina sativa, with small yellowish flowers.

gold-smith (göld'smith), n. [AS. goldsmith.] One who makes articles of gold (formerly often acting also as a banker: as, "He gave me a bill upon his goldsmith, in London, of two thousand pounds," Steele, in "Guardian," 2). — gold'smith-bee-tle, n. A large yellowish scarabæid beetle, Cotalpa lanigera.

gold-stick (göld'stik), n. In England, a gilded rod carried on state occasions by certain members of the royal household; also, the bearer of it.

gold-stone (göld'stön), n. Aventurine (glass).

gold-thread (göld'thred), n. A white-flowered ranunculaceous herb, Coptis trifolia, with a slender yellow root; also, the root itself, used in medicine.

gold-y-locks (göld'di-loks), n. See goldilocks.

go-lem (gö'lem), n. [Heb., embryo, something unformed or incomplete.] In Jewish legend, a figure constructed to represent a human being, and endowed with life, by human agency; hence, fig., an automaton; a blockhead.

golf (golf, also gof), n. [Origin uncertain.] An outdoor game, which was popular in Scotland as early as the middle of the 15th century, in which a small resilient ball is driven with special clubs into a series of holes distributed over a course, or links, having natural or artificial obstacles, or hazards, the object being to get the ball into each hole in as few strokes as possible. Cf. match-play and medal-play. — golf, v. i. To play golf. — golf's-club, n. Any of the various implements for striking the ball in golf; also, a club of golf-players. — golf'er, n. — golf's-links, n. pl. The ground or course over which golf is played: sometimes construed as sing.

Gol-go-tha (gol'gö-thä), n. [From Golgotha, repr. the Aramaic name for Calvary (Aram. gogolthä, Heb. gulgöleth, skull): see John, xix. 17.] A place of interment; a graveyard; a charnel.

go-li-ard (gö'li-ärd), n. [OF. goliard, appar. lit. 'glutton,' < L. gula, throat, palate, gluttony.] One of a class of wandering students in Germany, France, and England, chiefly in the 12th and 13th centuries, noted for their rioting and intemperance, and as the authors of satirical Latin verse. — go-li-ar'dic (-är'dik), a.

Go-li-ath (gö-li'äth), n. [From the Philistine champion: see 1 Sam. xvii. 4.] A giant; also [l. c.], any of the large lamellicorn African beetles constituting the genus Goliathus, esp. G. giganteus which sometimes grows to the length of four inches; any of various large beetles of related genera.

gol-ly (gol'i), n. A minced form of God: often used interjectionally, as a mild oath: as, "My folks to hum air full ez good ez his'n be, by golly!" (Lowell's "Biglow Papers," i. 2. 25).

go-losh (gö-losh'), n. Same as galosh.

go-lup-tious (gö-lup'shus), a. [Made word.] Delicious; delightful. [Slang.]

gom-been (gom-bén'), n. [Ir. gaimbín.] Usury. [Ir.]

gom-er-el (gom'ë-rel), n. [Also gomeril; origin obscure.] A fool, simpleton, or blockhead: as, "our auld daft laird here and his gomerils o' sons" (Scott's "Rob Roy," xiv.). [Sc. and prov. Eng.]

Go-mor-rah, Go-mor-rha (gö-mor'ä), n. An ancient city which was destroyed (together with Sodom) for the wickedness of its inhabitants (see Gen. xviii.-xix.); hence, any extremely wicked place. See Sodom.

gom-pho-sis (gom-fö'sis), n. [NL., < Gr. γόμφωσις, < γομφών, fasten with bolts, < γόμφος, a bolt.] In anat., an immovable articulation in which one bone or part is received in a cavity in another, as a tooth in its socket.

go-mu-ti (gö-mö'ti), n. [Malay.] A sago-palm, Saguerus pinnatus, of the East Indies; also, a black, horsehair-like fiber obtained from it, used for making cordage, etc.

-gon. [Gr. -γωνος (neut. -γωνον), or -γωνιος, -angled, -angular, < γωνία, angle.] A termination of nouns denoting geometrical figures having a certain number or kind of angles, as in hexagon, orthogon, pentagon, polygon.

gon-do-la (gon'dö-lä), n. [It. gondola, dim. of gonda, boat; origin uncertain.] A long, narrow boat with a high peak at each end and often a small cabin near the middle, used on the Venetian canals and usually propelled at the stern by a single oar or pole; also, a kind of lighter (U. S.); also, a railway freight-car with low sides and no top (U. S.); also, a car of a dirigible balloon. — gon-do-lier' (-lër'), n. [It. gondoliere.] A man who rows or poles a gondola.

gone (gòn). Past participle of go. — gone, p. a. That has departed or passed away (as, gone ages); lost, undone, or hopeless (as, a gone case); much advanced or deeply involved (chiefly in 'far gone'); weak and faint (as, a gone feeling); infatuated or enamoured (usually followed by on or upon: colloq.). — gone'ss, n. Gone state; a sinking sensation; faintness. — gon-er (gón'ër), n. A person or thing that is dead, lost, or past recovery: as, "Tom, we're goners! Can you pray?" (Mark Twain's "Tom Sawyer," ix.). [Colloq.]

gon-fa-lon (gon'fä-lon), n. [It. gonfalone = F. gonfalon, gonfanon, OF. gonfanon, gunfanun, < OHG. gundfano, 'war banner': cf. fanon.] A banner suspended from a cross-bar, and often having several streamers or tails: the form of standard used esp. by the medieval Italian republics.

— gon'fa-lo-nier' (-lō-nër'), n. [It. gonfaloniere.] The bearer of a gonfalon; a standard-bearer; esp., the chief magistrate or some other official in several medieval Italian republics.

gon-fa-non (gon'fä-non), n. [OF.: see gonfalon.] Same as gonfalon. [Obs. or archaic.]

gong (gong), n. [Malay.] A shallow, bowl-shaped metallic instrument which produces a sonorous sound when struck with a stick having a padded or covered head; also, a saucer-shaped bell sounded by a hammer.

go-nid-i-um (gö-nid'i-um), n.; pl. -ia (-i-ä). [NL., dim. < Gr. γόνος, offspring, seed, < γεν-, bear, produce: see genius.] In bot., among thallophytes, a reproductive body produced asexually; also, one of the algal cells inclosed in the thallus of a lichen. — go-nid'i-al, a.

go-ni-om-e-ter (gö-ni-om'e-tër), n. [Gr. γωνία, angle: see -meter.] An instrument for measuring solid angles, as of crystals; also, a radiogoniometer. — go-ni-om'e-try, n. [See -metry.] The measurement of angles. — go'ni-om-et'ric, go'ni-o-met'ri-cal (-ö-met'rik, -ri-kal), a.

go-ni-on (gö'ni-on), n.; pl. gonia (-ä). [NL., < Gr. γωνία, angle.] In craniol., that point on either side of the lower jaw at the vertex of the angle made by the inferior and posterior borders.

go-ni-o-sta-tion (gö'ni-ö-stä'shön), n. [Gr. γωνία, angle, + E. station.] A place where observations are made with a radiogoniometer.

gon-o-coc-cus (gon-ö-kok'us), n.; pl. -cocci (-kok'si). [NL., < Gr. γόνος, offspring, seed, + NL. coccus: see coccus.] The micro-organism Micrococcus gonorrhææ, which causes gonorrhæa.

gon-oph, gon-oph (gon'gf), n. [Heb. gannābh, thief.] A thief; a pickpocket: as, "He's as obstinate a young gonoph as I know" (Dickens's "Bleak House," xix.). [Slang.]

gon-o-phore (gon'ö-för), n. [Gr. γόνος, offspring, seed: see -phore.] In bot., a prolongation of the axis of a flower above the perianth, bearing the stamens and pistil; in zool., one of the generative buds or receptacles of the reproductive elements in hydrozoans.

Venetian Gondola.

One form of Goniometer.

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, ásk, färe; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nór; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviäry, èlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, arđent, actōr, natŭre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

gon-or-rhe-a, gon-or-rhœ-a (gon-q-rê'ä), n. [LL. gonorrhea, < Gr. γονόρροια, < γόνος, offspring, seed, + ροία, a flow, < ρεῖν, flow.] In pathol., a contagious, purulent inflammation of the urethra or the vagina, due to the gonococcus.—gon-or-rhe'al, gon-or-rhœ'al, a.

-gony. [Gr. -γονία, < γένε-, bear, produce: cf. -geny.] A noun termination meaning 'production,' 'genesis,' 'origin,' as in cosmogony, theogony.

goo (gō), n. [Origin unknown.] Sticky matter. [Slang.]

goo-ber (gō'bër), n. [Angola nguba.] The peanut. [Southern U. S.]

good (gùd), a.; compar. better, superl. best. [AS. gōd = D. goed = G. gut = Icel. gōðr = Goth. gōths, good; perhaps orig. meaning 'fitting, suitable,' and akin to E. gather.] In general, of commendable quality or character; satisfactory, fair, excellent, or fine (with varying force, increased by emphatic utterance or by context: as, a good horse, pen, or farm; good wine, music, or drawing; a really good book, game, or performance); genuine, as money, jewels, etc.; sound or valid, as judgment, reasons, excuses, claims, etc.; reliable, safe, or sure, as a trader or debtor, securities, promises, etc.; often, morally excellent, righteous, or virtuous, as persons, conduct, motives, intentions, etc.; well-behaved, as a child; right or proper (as, do whatever seems good to you in the matter); kind, beneficent, or friendly (as, to be good to the poor; to say a good word for one; a good turn; mutual good feeling); honorable or worthy (much used, esp. formerly, as an epithet of respect: as, good sir; my good friend; Mr. Hood and his good lady: cf. goodman); of fair repute, social standing, etc. (as, a good name; good birth or family); holy (as, Good Friday: see phrase below); also, satisfactory for the wishes or purposes (cf. good day, below); favorable, as news, weather, conditions, etc.; advantageous, beneficial, or useful (as, a good idea or plan; drugs good for fever: cf. good-for-nothing); wholesome, as food; sound or unimpaired, as the health, condition, etc.; cheerful or courageous, as the spirits, heart, etc.; agreeable or pleasant (as, to have a good time); genial or jovial (as, a good fellow); competent or skilful (as, a good manager; a good doctor, draftsman, or driver); skilful or clever (at: as, to be good at arithmetic); to be relied on (for: as, his credit is good for the sum specified); also, satisfactory in quantity or degree; adequate, sufficient, or ample (as, to give good measure or weight; a good supply of provisions); full (as, a good day's journey); fairly great (as, a good deal; a good while).—Good Book, the Bible.—good cheer, cheerful spirits, or courage (as, to be of good cheer); also, feasting and merrymaking (as, to make good cheer); good fare or food, as for feasting (as, to be fond of good cheer).—good day, evening, morning, etc., short for I wish you (or I bid you, or God give you) a good day, evening, etc.: used in salutation at the time of day appropriate, upon meeting or parting.—Good Friday, the Friday before Easter, a holy day of the Christian church, observed as the anniversary of Christ's crucifixion.—good graces. See under grace, n.—good morrow, good morning: a salutation used at meeting in the morning. [Archaic].—good night, a salutation used at night upon parting or going to sleep.—good Samaritan. See Samaritan, n.—Good Shepherd, a title given to Jesus Christ (see John, x. 11).—good speed, good fortune, or success (as, to wish a person good speed); also, a good rate of progress or motion.—to make good. See under make, v. t. and i.—good, n. That which is good; excellence or merit (as, to discern the good in a book); righteousness (as, to be a power for good in the world); kindness or good deeds (as, to do good); well-being, advantage, or benefit (as, to work for the common good); profit, worth, use, or service (as, that knife is of no good, or, elliptically, that knife is no good; what is the good of that? what good will that do?); also, a good, commendable, excellent, or desirable thing (as, "And cherished peaceful days For their own sakes, as mortal life's chief good": Wordsworth's "Excursion," iii. 365); pl., possessions, esp. movable effects or personal chattels (as, household goods); also, articles of trade, wares, or merchandise (as, to sell goods: cf. dry-goods); also, cloth or textile material (U. S., and often construed as sing.: as, will these goods, or this goods, wash well?).—for good (and all), finally and permanently; forever: as, to leave a place for good, or for good and all.

—to the good, to or on the side of profit or advantage, as an excess in one's favor: as, to come out $5 to the good in a transaction; to have two points to the good in a game.

—good, interj. That is good: an elliptical expression of commendation or satisfaction.—good, adv. Well. [Now colloq. or vulgar.]

good-bye, good-bye (gùd-bí'). [Contr. of God be with you.]

I. interj. Farewell: a conventional expression used at parting. II. n.; pl. -bys, -byes (-bíz'). A farewell.

good-den (gùd-den'), n. and interj. Contraction of good even, 'good evening,' as used in salutation. [Obs. or prov.]

good=fel-low-ship (gùd/fel'ō-ship), n. Agreeable or jovial companionship; conviviality; also, friendly fellowship.

good=for=noth-ing (gùd'fgr-nuth'ing). I. a. Worthless.

II. n. A worthless person.—good'=for=noth'ing-ness, n.

good=hu-mored (gùd'hū'mòrd), a. Having or showing good humor, or a pleasant or amiable temper or mood.

—good'=hu'mored-ly, adv.—good'=hu'mored-ness, n.

good-ish (gùd'ish), a. Rather good; fairly good: as, a good-ish horse; a goodish distance.

good=look-ing (gùd'lùk'ing), a. Of good appearance; comely; handsome.

good-ly (gùd'li), a.; compar. goodlier, superl. goodliest. [AS. gōdlic.] Of good or fine appearance (as, "A goodly apple rotten at the heart: O, what a goodly outside falsehood bath!" Shakspeare's "Merchant of Venice," i. 3. 102); also, of a good quality or kind (as, a goodly gift; a goodly place or time); excellent or fine; also, of good size or ample amount (as, a goodly stature; a goodly sum); rather large; considerable. [Now chiefly literary].—good'li-ness, n.

good-man (gùd'man or gùd'man'), n.; pl. -men. The master of a household; also, a husband; also, a title of respect applied esp. to a farmer or yeoman. [Archaic or prov.]

good=na-tured (gùd'nā'tùrd), a. Having or showing good nature, or a pleasant or complaisant disposition or mood; good-humored.—good'=na'tured-ly, adv.—good'=na'tured-ness, n.

good-ness (gùd'nes), n. [AS. gōdnes.] The quality or state of being good; excellence; virtue; kindness; beneficence.

Also used, now more or less vaguely but orig. with reference to the goodness of God, or to God, in various exclamatory or emphatic expressions: as, for goodness' sake! goodness gracious! my goodness! goodness knows!

—thank goodness!

goods (gùdz), n. pl. See good, n.

good=tem-pered (gùd'tem'pèrd), a. Having or showing a good temper; amiable.—good'=tem'pered-ly, adv.

good-wife (gùd'wif'), n.; pl. -wives (-wivz'). The mistress of a household; also, a title of respect for a woman. [Archaic or prov.]

good-will (gùd'wil'), n. Friendly disposition; benevolence; favor; cheerful acquiescence; readiness or zeal; in business, the advantage due to custom or patronage, as distinct from the value of stock, property, etc.

good-y¹ (gùd'i). [From good, a.] I. a. Weakly or sentimentally good or pious; ostentatiously affecting goodness; goody-goody. II. n.; pl. -ies (-iz). A goody person; also, something considered especially good to eat, as a sweetmeat or bonbon (usually in pl.).

good-y² (gùd'i), n.; pl. -ies (-iz). [From goodwife.] A term of civility formerly applied to a woman in humble life (as, "Old Goody Blake was old and poor": Wordsworth's "Goody Blake and Harry Gill," 21); hence, any such woman; at Harvard University, a woman who takes care of students' rooms.

good-y=good-y (gùd'i-gùd'i). I. a. Same as goody¹, a.: as, "goody-goody expressions" (G. B. Shaw's "Man and Superman," i.). II. n. A goody person.—good'y=good'i-ness, n.

goo-ey (gō'i), a. Like goo; sticky; viscid. [Slang.]

goo-ral (gō'ral), n. Same as goral.

Goor-kha (gōr'kâ), n. See Gurkha.

goo-roo (gō'rō), n. See guru.

goo-san-der (gō-san'dér), n. [Origin uncertain.] Either of the two common mergansers, Mergus americanus and M. merganser.

goose (gös), n.; pl. geese (gēs). [AS. gōs (pl. gēs) = D. and G. gans = Icel. gās, goose; akin to L. anser, Gr. χην, Skt. hansa, goose.] Any of numerous wild or domesticated web-footed birds of the family Anatidae, esp. of the genus Anser and allied genera, mostly larger and with a longer neck than the ducks; the female of this bird, as distinguished from the male (or gander); the flesh of the goose; also, a silly or foolish person; a simpleton; also, a tailors' smoothing-iron with a curved handle (pl. gooses); also, a game played with counters†.

Chinese Goose (Cygnopsis cygnoides).

goose-ber-ry (gös'ber'i or göz'-), n.; pl. -berries (-iz). [Appar. < goose + berry.] The small, edible, acid, globular fruit or berry of certain wild or cultivated shrubs of the grossulariaceae genus Ribes (which includes also the currant), esp. R. grossularia; the shrub itself; also, any of various similar fruits or shrubs; also, a chaperon or third person accompanying an unmarried pair.

goose=egg (gös'eg), n. The egg of a goose; also, in athletic and other contests, a zero, indicating a miss or a failure to score.

goose=fish (gös'fish), n. The angler, Lophius piscatorius. [U. S.]

goose=flesh (gös'flesh), n. A rough condition of the skin, resembling that of a plucked goose, induced by cold or fear.

goose-foot (gös'füt), n.; pl. -foots. Any plant of the genus Chenopodium, containing many widely distributed herbs with toothed or entire, often mealy leaves and clusters of minute green flowers; hence, any chenopodiaceous plant.

goose-girl (gös'gêrl), n. A girl in charge of geese.

goose=grease (gös'grēs), n. The melted fat of the goose: used in domestic medicine as an ointment.

goose-herd (gös'hêrd), n. One who takes care of geese.

goose-neck (gös'nek), n. Something curved like the neck of a goose, as an iron hook for attaching a boom to a mast, or a kind of movable stand for an incandescent electric lamp.

goose-quill (gös'kwil), n. One of the large feathers or quills of a goose; hence, a pen made from such a feather (as, "Many wearing rapiers are afraid of goose-quills": Shakspeare's "Hamlet," ii. 2. 359).

Gooseneck of a Spanker-boom.

goose=skin (gös'skin), n. Same as goose=flesh.

goose-step (gös'step), n. A military exercise in which the body is balanced on one foot (without advancing) while the other foot is swung forward and back; also, a marching step of the German infantry, in which the legs are swung high with straight, stiff knees.

go-pher (gö'fêr), n. [F. gaufre, honeycomb (with allusion to the burrow).] Any of various burrowing rodents of the genera Geomys, Thomomys, etc. (family Geomyidae), of western and southern North America, with large cheek-pouches (also called pocket-gopher and pouched rat); also, any of various ground-squirrels of western North America, as Citellus (or Pocket-gopher (Thomomys talpoides).

Spermophilus tridecemlineatus (the destructive rodent from which Minnesota is named the 'Gopher State'), and Citellus (or Spermophilus) richardsoni (a destructive rodent, the so-called flickertail, from which North Dakota is called the 'Flickertail State'); also, an edible, burrowing land-tortoise, Xerobates (or Testudo) polyphemus, of the southern U. S.; also, a burrowing snake, Composoma corais, of the southern U. S.

go-pher=wood (gö'fêr-wüd), n. [Heb. gopher.] An unidentified wood used in the construction of Noah's ark (see Gen. vi. 14); also, the yellow-wood, Cladrastis lutea, of the U. S.

go-pu-ra (gö'-pö-rä), n. [Skt. gōpura, city gate.] In southern India, a temple gateway surmounted by a massive pyramidal tower arranged in stories.

Gopura of the Great Temple, Srirangam, India.

go-ral (gö'ral), n. [E. Ind.] A goat-like antelope, Cemas goral, of central Asia.

gor-bel-ly (gôr'bel'i), n.; pl. -bellies (-iz). [Cf. *gore*¹.] A prominent belly, or a person having one. [Obs. or prov.]—gor'bel'lied, a.

gor-cock (gôr'kok), n. [Origin of gor- obscure.] The moor-cock, or male red grouse.

gor-crow (gôr'krô), n. [See *gore*¹.] The carrion-crow, Corvus corone.

Gor-di-an (gôr'di-än), a. Pertaining to Gordius, an ancient king of Phrygia, who tied a knot (the 'Gordian knot') which was to be undone only by one who should rule Asia, and which was summarily cut by Alexander the Great; hence, resembling this knot; intricate.

gore¹ (gôr), n. [AS. gor, dung, dirt.] Dirt, slime, or mire (now prov. Eng.); also, blood, esp. when clotted.

gore² (gôr), n. [AS. gāra, point of land, = D. geer = G. gehre = Icel. geiri, gore; akin to AS. gār, spear.] A triangular piece or tapering strip of land, as between fields; also, a triangular piece of cloth, etc., inserted in a garment, a sail, etc., to give greater width or secure the desired shape or adjustment; one of the breadths (mostly more or less tapering, or shaped) of a woman's skirt; hence, a triangular or tapering piece of anything.—gore³, v. t.; gored, goring. To shape like a gore; also, to make or furnish with a gore or gores.

gore³ (gôr), v. t.; gored, goring. [ME. goren, gorren, pierce, stab: cf. AS. gār, spear.] To stab or pierce deeply†; specif., of an animal, to pierce with the horns or tusks.

gored (görd), a. Having a gore or gores: as, a five-gored skirt.

gorge (gôrj), n. [OF. F. gorge, throat; origin uncertain.] The throat (archaic); the crop of a hawk (archaic); the maw (archaic); also, that which is swallowed; the contents of the stomach (also fig.: as, one's gorge rises in disgust or resentment); hence, a choking mass, as of ice in a river; also, a gorging or gluttonous meal; also, a narrow passage between steep, rocky walls, esp. one through which a stream runs; in fort., the rear entrance or part of a bastion or outwork; in mech., the groove in the circumference of a pulley.—gorge, v.; gorged, gorging. [OF. F. gorger.] I. tr. To fill the gorge of; stuff with food; satiate; glut; hence, to choke up; also, to swallow, esp. greedily (as, "Though they see the hook and the string . . . they gorge the bait never-fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, färe; net, mē, hêr; pin, pine; not, nôte. möve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviârý, flect, agôny, intô, ûnite; (obscured) errant, operâ, ardent, actor, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; y, you; theless": Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," xiv.). II. intr. To fill the gorge; eat greedily: as, "They . . . like hounds of a base breed, Gorge from a stranger's hand, and rend their master" (Shelley's "Hellas," 469).—gorged, a. Having a gorge or throat; in her., having the neck encircled with a collar, coronet, or the like.

gor-geous (gôr'jus), a. [OF. gorgias; origin uncertain.] Splendid in dress, appearance, or coloring; showily rich or ornate; sumptuous; magnificent.—gor'geously, adv. —gor'geous-ness, n.

gor-ger (gôr'jër), n. One who or that which gorges, or eats to repletion; a glutton.

gor-ger-in (gôr'jê-rin), n. [F., < gorge, throat.] In arch., the neck-like portion of a capital of a column, or a feature forming the junction between a shaft and its capital.

gor-get (gôr'jet), n. [OF. gorgete, dim. of gorge, throat.] A piece of armor for the throat (as, "Unfix the gorget's iron clasp, And give him room for life to gasp!" Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," v. 22); hence, a collar; also, a kind of covering for the neck and breast, formerly worn by women; also, a necklace; also, a crescent-shaped badge suspended from the neck, formerly worn by military officers; also, a patch on the throat of a bird or other animal, distinguished by its color or otherwise (as, "the golden-winged woodpecker, with . . . his broad black gorget": Irving's "Sketch-Book," Sleepy Hollow); also, a grooved surgical instrument used in operations for stone, etc. gor-gi-o (gôr'ji-ô). I. n.; pl. os (-ôz). The Romany name for any one not of the Gipsy race. See Borrow's "Romany Rye," x. II. a. Of or pertaining to the gorgios: as, "Out of the dark of the gorgio camp . . . Gipsy, come away!" (Kipling's "Gipsy Trail").

1, Gorget (a) attached to the brigandine; 15th century. 2, Gorget (a) worn over mail; early 15th century.

Gor-gon (gôr'gôn), n. [L. Gorgo(n)-, < Gr. Γοργώ, < γοργός, grim, terrible.] Any of three sisters, Stheno, Euryale, and Medusa, of Greek legend, whose heads were covered with snakes instead of hair, and whose terrific aspect turned the beholder to stone; esp., Medusa, the only mortal one of the three, who was slain by Perseus, and whose head was fixed on the shield of Athens; [L. c.] a gorgoneion; also, a terrible or repulsive woman.—gor-gone-ion (-gô-ni'ôn), n.; pl. -neia (-ni'ä). [NL., < Gr. Γοργόνειον.] A representation of the head of a Gorgon, esp. that of Medusa.—gor-go-ni-an (-gô-ni-än), a. Of, pertaining to, or characteristic of a Gorgon, esp. Medusa; Gorgon-like; terrible; petrifying; also, of a shield, bearing a gorgoneion.—gor'gon-ize, v. t.; -ized, -izing. To petrify as by the look of a Gorgon; also, to stare at with a Gorgon's look (as, "He . . . Gorgon-ized me from head to foot with a stony British stare": Tennyson's "Maud," i. 13. 2).

Gor-gon-zo-la (gôr-gôn-zô'lä) cheese. [From Gorgonzola, town in northern Italy.] A strongly flavored, hard-pressed variety of milk cheese veined with mold.

gor-hen (gôr'hen), n. [See gorcock.] The female red grouse.

go-ril-la (gô-ril'ä), n. [NL., < Gr. γορίλλα; of African origin.] A large, fierce, powerful anthropoid ape, Gorilla.

Gorilla gorilla (or savagei), of western equatorial Africa; also, as applied contemptuously to persons, an ugly brute; a brutal fellow.

gor-i-ly (gôr'i-li), adv. In a gory manner.—gor'i-ness, n.

gor-ing (gôr'ing), n. A making or furnishing with a gore or gores; also, the gore or gores. See *gore*².

gor-mand (gôr'mänd), n. [= gourmand.] A glutton; also, a gourmand.—gor'man-dize (-mänd-iz), n. [= gourmandise.] Gluttony; also, luxury in eating (obs. or rare).

—gor'man-dize, v. t. or t.; -dized, -dizing. To eat like a glutton; feed or devour voraciously.—gor'man-diz-er (-di-zër), n.

gorse (gôrs), n. [AS. gorst.] Furze.—gors'y, a. Abounding in or overgrown with gorse.

gor-y (gôr'i), a.; compar. gorier, superl. goriest. Covered or stained with gore; bloody; also, resembling gore.

gosh (gosh), n. A minced form of God: often used interjectionally, as a mild oath.

gos-hawk (gos'hâk), n. [AS. gōshafoc, 'goose hawk.'] Any of various powerful, short-winged hawks, esp. Astur palumbarius, of Europe, formerly much used in falconry, and A. atricapillus, of America.

American Goshawk (Astur atricapillus).

Go-shen (gô'shën), n. [From Goshen.

in Egypt, where the Israelites were permitted to dwell, exempt from the plagues.] A land or place of plenty and comfort, free from ills.

gos-let (goz'let), n. [Dim. of goose: cf. gosling.] A very small goose of the genus Nettapus, of several species, found in India, Africa, Australia, etc.

gos-ling (goz'ling), n. [ME.; dim. of goose.] A young goose; also, a foolish, inexperienced person; also, a catkin.

gos-pel (goz'pel). [AS. godspel, appar. orig. gōd spel, 'good tidings': see good and *spell*², and cf. evangel.] I. n. Glad tidings, esp. concerning salvation and the kingdom of God as announced to the world by Christ; hence, the body of doctrine taught by Christ and the apostles; Christian revelation; also, the story of Christ's life and teachings, esp. as contained in the first four books of the New Testament; [usually cap.] one of these books; hence [L. c.], something taken as a guide to action (as, "The law of the land is his gospel": Steele, in "Spectator," 456); a doctrine regarded as of prime importance (as, "the propagators of this political gospel": Burke's "Revolution in France," 18); also, something infallibly true or implicitly believed (colloq.: as, "Those holier mysteries which the wise and just Receive as gospel," Byron's "Don Juan," xvi. 6); specif. [often cap.], eccles., an extract from one of the four Gospels, forming part of the eucharistic service in certain churches.

II. a. Pertaining to the gospel; accordant with the gospel; evangelical.—gos'pel-†, v. t.; -peled or -pelled, -pel-ing or -pelling. To evangelize. See Shakespeare's "Macbeth," iii. 1. 88.—gos'pel-er, gos'pel-ler, n. One of the four evangelists; also, one who professes the faith of the gospel, or claims for his party the exclusive possession of the true gospel; specif., eccles., one who reads or sings the gospel in the eucharistic service.—gos'pel-ize, v. t.; -ized, -izing. To make accordant with the gospel; also, to instruct in the gospel; evangelize.

gos-sa-mer (gos'a-mër). [ME. gossomer, gosesomer, appar. orig. 'goose summer,' for a mild late autumn period when geese were in season, and hence for the filmy matter seen in the air at that period.] I. n. A fine filmy substance, consisting of cobweb formed by various small spiders, seen on grass and bushes, or floating in the air in calm weather esp. in autumn; a thread or a web of this substance; hence, an extremely delicate variety of gauze; any thin, light fabric; in England, a very light silk hat, or, facetiously, any hat; in the U. S., a thin waterproof outer garment, esp.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ˝, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

for women. II. a. Of or like gossamer; thin and light. —gos'sa-mer-y, a. Of or like gossamer; filmy; flimsy.

gos-san (gos'an or goz'-), n. [Cornish.] In mining, decomposed rock of a reddish or ferruginous color, which often forms a large part of the outcrop of a metallic vein.

gos-sip (gos'ip), n. [AS. godsibb, < god, God, + sibb, related, E. sib.] A godparent, in relation either to the child baptized (archaic or prov.) or to the child's parents (obs.); a friend or familiar acquaintance, esp. a woman (archaic); a person, esp. a woman, given to tattle or idle talk or the spreading of reports about others (as, "a set of malicious, prating, prudent gossips, both male and female, who murder characters to kill time": Sheridan's "School for Scandal," ii. 3); also, current talk, rumor, or scandal; also, light, familiar talk or writing. —gos'sip, v.; -siped, -siping. I. tr. To stand godparent to† (see Shakspeare's "All's Well," i. 1. 189); also, to repeat like a gossip (as, to gossip scandal).

II. intr. To act as a familiar acquaintance or boon companion† (as, "With all my heart, I'll gossip at this feast": Shakspeare's "Comedy of Errors," v. 1. 407); also, to talk idly, esp. about other people; go about tattling. —gos'sip-er, n. —gos'sip-ing, n. A christening or christening-feast (prov. Eng.); a meeting of friends, as at a woman's lying-in (prov. Eng.); a merrymaking (prov. Eng.); also, indulgence in gossip or idle talk; idle talk; a meeting of which gossip is the chief feature. —gos'sip-ing-ly, adv. —gos'sip-mong'er (-mung'gèr), n. One who retails gossip or current talk. —gos'sip-red (-red), n. The relation of a gossip; also, gossip; idle talk. —gos'sip-ry, n. Gossiped; also, gossip or small talk; also, a body of gossips. —gos'sip-y, a. Given to or characterized by gossip.

gos-soon (go-sôn'), n. [F. garçon.] A boy; a male servant. [Ireland.]

got (got). Preterit and past participle of get.

Goth (goth), n. [LL. Gothi, pl.: cf. Goth. Gut-thiuda, 'Goth people.†] One of a Teutonic race which in the 3d, 4th, and 5th centuries overran the greater part of the Roman Empire; hence, a barbarian, or rude, ignorant person (as, "He must be a Goth and a barbarian if he did not enter into the spirit of such a happy . . . contrivance": Smollett's "Humphry Clinker," Oct. 3). See Ostrogoth and Visigoth.

Go-tham (gô'tham or goth'am), n. [So called by Washington Irving, in "Salmagundi," after an English village of Gotham (pron. gô'tam), proverbial for the foolishness of its inhabitants.] The city of New York. —Go'tham-ite (-it), n. An inhabitant of Gotham.

Goth-ic (goth'ik). [LL. Gothicus.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the Goths or their language; also, Teutonic† or Germanic†; also [also l. c.], of, pertaining to, or characteristic of the middle ages; medieval; romantic, as opposed to classical; disparagingly, of or pertaining to the dark ages, barbarous, or rude (as, "O! more than Gothic ignorance": Fielding's "Tom Jones," vii. 3); [cap.] in arch., noting or pertaining to a style, prevalent in western Europe from the 12th to the 16th century, characterized chiefly by the pointed arch and the comparatively great height of many of the buildings.

II. n. [cap.] The language of the Goths, perhaps the earliest recorded of the Teutonic tongues, preserved chiefly in the remains of the translation of the Bible made by Ulfilas in the 4th century; also, Gothic architecture or decoration; [l. c.] a square-cut printing-type, without serifs or hair-lines (see type). —Goth'i-cal-ly, adv. —Goth'i-cism (-i-sizm), n. Adherence to Gothic ideas, etc.; a Gothic idiom; also, conformity or devotion to the Gothic style of architecture; also [also l. c.], barbarism; rudeness. —Goth'i-cize (-siz), *v. t.; -cized, -cizing. [Also l. c.] To make Gothic, as in character or style; render medieval.*

gô-thite, goe-thite (gê'tit), n. [From Goethe, the German poet.] A mineral consisting of a hydrous oxide of iron.

got-ten (got'n). Past participle of get. See get.

gouache (gwâsh), n. [F., < It. guazzo.] A method of painting with opaque colors prepared by mixing pigments with water, gum, and honey; also, an opaque color used in, or a painting executed by, this method.

gouge (gouj or göj), n. [OF. F. gouge, < ML. gubia, gubia; prob. from Celtic.] A chisel whose blade has a concavo-convex cross-section; also, the act or an act of gouging, or a groove or hole made by gouging; fig., an imposition or swindle (colloq., U. S.). —gouge, v. t.; gouged, gouging. To work upon with or as with a gouge, as in making grooves or holes; make with or as with a gouge, as a channel; also, to dig or force out with or as with a gouge; force out (a person's eye), as with the thumb; force out the eye of (a person), as with the thumb; also, fig., to impose upon or swindle (colloq., U. S.). —gou-ger (gou'jèr or gö'-), n.

gou-lash (gö'lâsh), n. [Hung. gulyas-hus, 'herdsman's meat.†] A stew of beef, veal, vegetables, etc., with paprika or other seasoning.

goum (göm), n. [F.; from Ar.] An Arab tribal contingent in the French military service.

gou-pen (gou'pèn), n. See gowpen.

gou-ra (gô'râ), n. [NL.; from native name.] Any bird of the genus Goura, comprising large pigeons (the crowned pigeons) of New Guinea, etc., with immense erect crests.

gourd (görd or görd), n. [OF. F. gourde, < L. cucurbita, gourd.]

The fruit of any of various cucurbitaceous plants, esp. the fruit of Lagenaria vulgaris (or lagenaria) ('bottle-gourd'), whose dried shell is used for bottles, Goura (G. coronata).

bowls, etc., or that of certain forms of Cucurbita pepo sometimes cultivated for ornament; also, a plant bearing such a fruit; also, the dried shell of, or a vessel made from, such a fruit; hence, a gourd-shaped vessel. —gourd'-shaped, a. Having the shape of a gourd; typically, having a globular body and a long, slender neck, as a flask or bottle.

gour-mand (gôr'mand, F. gôr-mân), n. [OF. F. gourmand, gluttonous; origin unknown.] A glutton†; also, one fond of good eating; an epicure. —gour-man-dise (gôr-mân-déz), n. [F., < gourmand.] The tastes or practices of a gourmand. —gour-man-dize (gôr'mân-diz), v., etc. Same as gormandize, v., etc.

gour-met (gôr-mä), n. [F. gourmet, OF. gourmet, groumet, wine-taster, wine-merchant's man: cf. *groom*¹.] A connoisseur in the delicacies of the table; an epicure.

gous-ty (gous'ti), a. [Origin obscure.] Large and empty; dreary; desolate. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

goût¹ (gö), n. [F., < L. gustus, taste.] Taste (in various senses).

gout² (gout), n. [OF. goute (F. goutte), < L. gutta, a drop, ML. gout.] A drop of liquid; a splash; a clot of blood; also, a constitutional disease characterized by painful inflammation of the joints (chiefly those in the feet and hands, and esp. in the great toe), and by excess of uric acid in the blood. —gout'y, a. Diseased with or subject to gout; also, pertaining to or of the nature of gout; causing gout; also, swollen as if from gout. —gout'i-ly, adv. —gout'i-ness, n.

gov-ern (guv'èrn), v. [OF. gouverner (F. gouverner), < L. gubernare, < Gr. κυβερνᾶν, steer, guide, govern.] I. tr. To rule by right of authority, as a sovereign does; direct and control the actions and affairs of (a people, state, etc.); also, to exercise a directing or restraining influence over (as, the motives governing a person's decision); guide in conduct or action; regulate; also, to hold in check (as, to govern the temper); also, to serve as or constitute a law or rule for (as, the principles governing a case); in gram., to require (a word) to be in a particular case or mode; necessitate (a particular case or mode). II. intr. To exercise the function of government; also, to have predominating influence. —gov'ern-a-ble, a. That may be governed. —gov'ern-ance, n. [OF. F. gouvernance.] Government; exercise of authority; control; method or system of government or management; also, conduct† or behavior†.

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pùll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, glect, agôny, intî, ûnite; (obscured) errant, operâ, ardent, actôr, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; tñ, then; y, you;

gov-er-ness (guv'ér-nes), n. [For earlier governeress, < OF. gouverneresse, fem. of gouverneur, gouverneur, E. governor.] A female governor or ruler (obs. or rare); an instructress or female teacher, esp. in a private household; also, the wife of a governor (now only humorous).

gov-ern-ment (guv'érn-mént), n. [F. gouvernement.] The act of governing; rule; control; regulation; specif., the direction of the affairs of a state, etc.; political rule and administration; also, the function or office of governing (as, "The government I cast upon my brother": Shakspeare's "Tempest," i. 2. 75); also, the form or system of rule by which a state, community, or the like is governed (as, monarchical or republican government; episcopal government); form of polity; also, the governing body of persons in a state, etc.; the administration; also, a body politic, or state; also, a country governed; more frequently, a portion of a country, ruled by a governor; a province; also, conduct or behavior; in gram., the influence of one word in determining the case or mode of another word, according to established usage.

—gov-ern-men'tal (-mén'tal), a. Of or pertaining to government or a government. —gov-ern-men'tal-ly, adv.

gov-er-nor (guv'ér-nór), n. [OF. gouverneur (F. gouverneur), < L. gubernator, steersman, director, < gubernare, E. govern.] A steersman† (as, "Behold also the ships, which though they be so great . . . yet are they turned about with a very small helm, whithersoever the governor listeth": Jas. iii. 4); also, one who governs; a ruler or chief magistrate; one appointed to govern a province, town, fort, or the like; the executive head of a State in the U. S.; the representative of the crown in a British colony or dependency; one charged with the direction or control of an institution, society, etc.; a tutor†; a person regarded as governing, as an employer, one's father, etc. (colloq.); in mach., a device for regulating a supply of steam, gas, etc., esp. for insuring uniform speed, as in a steam-engine. —gov'er-nor-gen'er-al, n.; pl. governors-general. A governor who has under him subordinate or deputy governors. —gov'er-nor-gen'er-al-ship, n. —gov'er-nor-ship, n.

gow-an (gou'an), n. [Origin uncertain.] Any of various yellow or white field-flowers, esp. the English daisy, Bellis perennis. [Sc. and north. Eng.] —gow'aned, gow'an-y, a.

gouk (gouk), n. [From Scand.: cf. Icel. gaukr and AS. gēac, cuckoo, G. gauch, cuckoo, fool.] The cuckoo; also, a fool or simpleton. [Chiefly Sc. and north. Eng.]

gown (goun), n. [OF. goune, gone, < ML. gunna; origin uncertain.] A loose, flowing outer garment in various forms, worn by men or women as an article of ordinary attire or as distinctive of office, profession, or status (as, a dressing-gown; a nightgown; a judge's gown; an academic gown); also, a flowing outer garment worn by the ancients, esp. the Roman toga; hence, the dress of peace (as, "He Mars depos'd, and arms to gowns made yield": Dryden's "Stanzas on Oliver Cromwell," xx.); also, a woman's dress, robe, or frock, comprising waist and skirt (either joined or separate). —gown, v. t. or i. To dress in, or put on, a gown. —gown's-man (-mán), n.; pl. -men. A man who wears a gown as an indication of his office, profession, or status, as a judge, lawyer, clergyman, or member of a university; also, a beadsman (Sc.); also, a civilian, in distinction from a soldier.

gow-pen (gou'pén), n. [= Icel. gaupn.] The two hands held together in the form of a bowl; also, as much as can be contained in the hands held thus; a double handful; hence, a great quantity. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

goz-zan (goz'zán), n. See gossan.

Graaf-i-an (grá'f-i-án), a. Pertaining to or named after Regnier de Graaf (1641-73), a Dutch physician and anatomist. —Graafian follicle or vesicle, in anat., one of the small ovum-containing sacs or bodies present in an ovary.

grab¹ (grab), n. [Ar. gharāb.] A vessel used on the Malabar coast, etc., having a long, sharp prow and usually two masts.

grab² (grab), v.; grabbed, grabbing. [= MLG. graben = Sw. grabba; perhaps akin to E. grasp.] I. tr. To seize suddenly and eagerly; snatch; hence, to take possession of in an unscrupulous manner (as, to grab land); also, to capture or arrest (a person). II. intr. To make a grab or snatch, as at something. —grab², n. The act of grabbing; a sudden, eager grasp or snatch; seizure or acquisition by violent or unscrupulous means; also, that which is grabbed; also, one who or that which grabs; a mechanical device for gripping objects. —grab/ba-ble, a. That may be grabbed.

—grab'=bag, n. A bag or receptacle containing various articles from which a person is permitted to 'grab' or draw one (without seeing or examining it), usually on payment of a small sum, as at a fair. Also fig. —grab'ber, n.

grab-ble (grab'l), v.; -bled, -bling. [Freq. of *grab*²: cf. D. grabbelen.] I. intr. To feel or search with the hands; grope; also, to sprawl or scramble. II. tr. To catch hold of; clutch; as, "The speaker slowly rose, grabbling the face of the rock" (G. W. Cable's "John March, Southerner," xxii.).

grab=line (grab'lin), n. Naut., any of certain lines or ropes on a ship for taking hold of if necessary, as one for boatmen to hold on to when coming alongside. Also grab=rope.

grace (grās), n. [OF. grace (F. grâce), < L. gratia, < gratus, dear, pleasing, agreeable, thankful, grateful.] That quality of form, manner, movement, deportment, language, or anything else, which renders it pleasing or agreeable; elegance or beauty of form, manner, motion, or act (as, "Grace was in all her steps": Milton's "Paradise Lost," viii. 488); a pleasing or attractive quality or endowment (as, "Chastity, good-nature, and affability are the graces that play in her countenance": Steele, in "Spectator," 4); also, aspect or demeanor with reference to pleasingness, creditableness, graciousness, willingness, etc. (as, to do a thing with a good grace; to yield with a bad or ill grace); also, favor or goodwill, or the manifestation of it, esp. as by a superior (as, to enjoy the grace of the sovereign; king by the grace of God); honor† (as, to do a person grace); a particular favor accorded, offered, or sought (archaic); a privilege or dispensation bestowed by authority (obs. or hist.); a fate or destiny allotted†; also, the free, unmerited favor and love of God; the influence of God operating in man to regenerate or strengthen (as, "But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound": Rom. v. 20); the condition of one under this influence; a virtue or excellence of divine origin (as, the Christian graces); moral strength (to do something: as, grace to perform a duty or to endure affliction); sense of right or propriety (as, to have the grace to blush for a fault); virtue, potency, or efficacy, as in herbs†; also, favor shown in granting a delay or temporary immunity, or the time allowed (as, "Stay a little! One golden minute's grace!" Tennyson's "Lancelot and Elaine," 680; days of grace, see under day); mercy, clemency, or pardon (as, a parliamentary act of grace); also, pl., thanks†; sing. (formerly pl.), a short prayer before or after a meal, in which thanks are given and a blessing is asked; also [usually cap.], with your, his, etc., a formal title used in addressing or mentioning a duke, duchess, or archbishop, and formerly also a sovereign; [l. c.] in music, an embellishment consisting of a note or notes not essential to the harmony or melody, as an appoggiatura, a trill, etc.; [cap.] in class. myth., one of three sister goddesses, commonly given as Aglaia ('brilliance'), Euphrosyne ('joy'), and Thalia ('bloom'), presiding over all beauty and charm in nature and humanity. —good graces, favor or liking: as, to be in the good graces of a person. —grace, v. t.; graced, gracing. To lend or add grace to; adorn, as with something added, or as the thing added does; embellish; also, to show favor or be gracious to†; favor or honor with something specified (as, "Please 't your highness To grace us with your royal company": Shakspeare's "Macbeth," iii. 4. 45); gratify† or delight†; in music, to add grace-notes, cadenzas, etc., to. —grace'=cup, n. A cup of wine or the like passed round, after the saying of grace at table, for a last draft or health; also, the draft itself; a parting draft. —grace'ful, a. Characterized by grace, as of form, manner, movement, verbal expression, etc.; pleasingly elegant; admirably easy or effective; felicitous; also, full of spiritual grace†. —grace'ful-ly, adv. —grace'ful-ness, n. —grace'less, a. Wanting grace, pleasing elegance, or charm; also, destitute of spiritual grace; unregenerate or ungodly; without any sense of or regard for right or propriety (as, a graceless young scamp; "She knows very well what graceless dogs sailors are," H. Melville's "Omoo," lxxvii.: cf. scapegrace). —grace'less-ly, adv. —grace'less-ness, n. —grace'=note, n. In music, a note not essential to the harmony or melody, added as an embellishment; esp., an appoggiatura.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

gracile (gras'il), a. [L. gracilis, slender, thin.] Slender; thin; lean; sometimes, in recent use (by erroneous association with grace), gracefully slender.—gracil-i-ty (gras'il-i-ti), n.

gracious (grā'shus), a. [OF. gracios (F. gracieux), < L. graciosus, < gratia, E. grace.] Pleasing, agreeable, or graceful (archaic: as, a gracious scene; "Then playing with the blade he prick'd his hand, 'A gracious gift to give a lady, this!'" Tennyson's "Aylmer's Field," 240); also, enjoying grace or favor†; fortunate† or happy†; also, characterized by or disposed to show grace or favor; kind, benevolent, or courteous; now, usually, kind, indulgent, or beneficent in a condescending or patronizing way (as, to be gracious to inferiors; to vouchsafe a gracious reply; a gracious smile); also, merciful or compassionate (as, "Thou art a God ready to pardon, gracious and merciful": Neh. ix. 17); also, full of spiritual grace†, righteoust†, or virtuoust†.—grac-i-os-i-ty (-shi-os'i-ti), gracious-ness, n.—gracious-ly, adv.

grack-le (grak'l), n. [L. graculus, jackdaw.] Any of various birds of the old-world family Sturnidæ (starlings), or of the American family Icteridæ (American starlings, blackbirds, etc.), as the crow-blackbird, Quiscalus purpureus ('purple grackle').

grate (grā'dāt), v.; -dated, -dating. [Back-formation from gradation.] I. intr. To pass by insensible degrees, as one color into another. II. tr. To cause to grate; also, to arrange in steps or grades.

Rusty Grackle (Scolecophagus ferrugineus), of eastern North America.

grada-tim (grā-dā'tim), adv. [L., < gradus, step, E. grade.] Step by step; by degrees; gradually.

grada-tion (grā-dā'shən), n. [L. gradatio(n), < gradus, step, E. grade.] An advancing, step by step†; a gradual progress†; hence, any process or change taking place or conducted through a series of stages, by degrees, or gradually; the passing of one tint or shade of color into another by insensible degrees, as in painting; occurrence or arrangement in a series of degrees or grades (as, a variety of forms exhibiting gradation); also, a series of successive stages, degrees, or grades (obs. or rare); a stage, degree, or grade in such a series (usually in pl.: as, to pass by gradations from one form or condition into another; gradations of color); also, succession† (as, "Preferment goes by letter and affection, And not by old gradation, where each second Stood heir to first": Shakspeare's "Othello," i. 1. 37); in philol., ablaut.—grada-tion-al, a. Pertaining to or exhibiting gradation.—grada-tion-al-ly, adv.

grada-tive (grā-dā'tiv), a. [L. gradus, step, E. grade.] Proceeding step by step, or by degrees or grades. Also grad-a-to-ry (grad'ā-tō-rī).

grade (grād), n. [L. gradus, step, stage, degree.] A step or stage in a course or process; hence, a degree in a scale, as of rank, advancement, quality, value, intensity, etc.; a class of persons or things of the same relative rank, quality, etc.; a single division of a school classified according to the progress of the pupils (American public schools commonly being divided into eight grades below the high school division); also, a hybrid animal; an animal, particularly a cow or bull or a sheep, resulting from a cross between a parent of ordinary breed and one of superior breed; also, the degree of inclination from the horizontal, or the rate of ascent or descent, in a road, railroad, etc.; an inclined portion of a road, etc.; a slope or gradient; also, degree of altitude; level.—at grade, on the same level: as, a railroad which crosses a highway or another railroad at grade.—grade crossing, a crossing of a railroad and a highway or another railroad at grade, or on the same level.—grade, v.; graded, grading. I. tr. To arrange in a series of grades; class according to rank, advancement, merit, etc.; sort according to size, quality, etc.; determine the grade of; also, to cause to pass by degrees, as from one color or shade to another; also, to reduce (the line of a road, railroad, etc.) to a level or to practicable degrees of inclination; also, to cross (an animal) with one of a better breed; improve (a stock, etc.) by crossing with animals of purer blood. II. intr. To be graded; be of a particular grade or quality.

-grade. [L. -gradus, < gradi, walk, go: see gradient.] An adjective (and noun) termination meaning 'walking,' 'moving,' 'going,' as in cirrigrade, plantigrade, retrograde.

grade-ly (grād'li), a. [Var. of graitfully.] Orderly, decent, or respectable; proper; good; also, handsome, comely, or fine; also, great; thorough. [Sc. and prov. Eng.].—grade-ly, adv. Decently; properly; well; also, thoroughly; very. [Sc. and prov. Eng.].

grad-er (grā'dēr), n. One who or that which grades.

gra-di-ent (grā'di-ent), [L. gradiens (-ent-), ppr. of gradi (pp. gressus), walk, go, < gradus, step, E. grade.] I. a. Progressing by taking steps with the feet, as an animal; walking; gressorial; also, rising or descending by regular degrees of inclination. II. n. The degree of inclination, or the rate of ascent or descent, in a railroad, etc.; grade; also, an inclined portion of a road, etc.; a grade; in physics, the rate at which a variable quantity, as temperature or pressure, changes in value; a curve representing such a rate of change.—gra'di-ent-er, n. A surveyors' instrument for fixing grades, etc., consisting essentially of a telescope, a spirit-level, and a graduated vertical arc, mounted on a tripod.

gra-din (grā'din, F. grā-dañ), n. [F., < It. gradino, dim. of grado, < L. gradus, step, E. grade.] One of a series of steps or seats raised one above another; eccles., a shelf or one of a series of shelves behind and above an altar. Also gra-dine (grā-dēn').

grad-u-al (grad'ū-āl), [ML. gradualis (as n., graduale), < L. gradus, step, E. grade.] I. a. Consisting of or arranged in steps, stages, or degrees, as a scale†; also, proceeding step by step, or by orderly stages or degrees, as a process; taking place, changing, moving, etc., by degrees or little by little; rising or descending at an even, moderate inclination, as a slope. II. n. Eccles., an antiphon sung between the epistle and the gospel in the eucharistic service (so called because orig. sung on the steps of the ambo: see etym.); also, a book containing the words and music of the graduals, the introits, and the other parts of the eucharistic service which are sung by the choir.—grad'u-al-ly, adv. In a gradual manner; by orderly stages; by degrees; little by little.—grad'u-al-ness, n.

grad-u-ate (grad'ū-āt), v.; -ated, -ating. [ML. graduatus, pp. of graduare, admit to an academic degree, < L. gradus, step, E. grade.] I. tr. To confer a degree or diploma upon at the close of a course of study, as in a university, college, or school; also, to divide into or mark with degrees, as the scale of a thermometer; arrange in grades or gradations; establish gradation in. II. intr. To receive a degree or diploma on completing a course of study; also, to pass by degrees; change gradually.—grad'u-ate. I. a. That has been graduated (as, a graduate student); of or pertaining to graduates (as, a graduate school). II. n. One who has received a degree or diploma on completing a course of study, as in a university, college, or school; also, a graduated vessel, as of glass, for measuring.—grad'u-at-ed (-ā-ted), p. a. Marked so as to indicate degrees or quantities; arranged in grades or gradations.—grad-u-a'tion (-ā'shən), n. [ML. graduatio(n).] The act of graduating, or the state of being graduated; the ceremony of conferring degrees or diplomas, as at a college or school; also, marks or a mark, as on an instrument or a vessel, for indicating degree, quantity, etc.—grad'u-a-tor, n.

gra-dus (grā'dus), n. [Short for L. gradus ad Parnassum, 'steps to Parnassus.'] A dictionary of prosody, for aid in writing Latin or Greek verses: as, "instead of sweet knowledge . . . doggerel grammars and graduses" (Kinglake's "Eothen," iv.).

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ſlect, agony, intō, ſuite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ſu, then; y, you;

Græ-cism (grē'sizm), Græ-cize (grē'siz), Græco-, etc. See Grecism, Grecize, Greco-, etc.

graf (gräf), n.; pl. grafen (grä'fen). [G. graf = D. graaf: cf. burggrave, landgrave, margrave.] In German use, a nobleman ranking below a fürst, and corresponding to an English earl; a count.

graff (gräf), n. and v. Older form of *graff*¹.

graf-fi-to (gräf-fē'tō), n.; pl. -ti (-tē). [It., ult. < Gr. γράφειν, mark, draw, write.] In archæol., an ancient drawing or writing scratched on a wall or other surface; in art, a method of decoration in which designs are scratched through a superficial layer, as of plaster, showing a ground of different color beneath.

graft¹ (gräft), n. [Earlier graff, < OF. grafe, greife (F. greffe, orig. stylus, pencil, < L. graphium, < Gr. γραφειον, stylus, < γράφειν, write.) A shoot or part of a plant (the scion) inserted in a groove, slit, or the like in another plant or tree (the stock) so as to Graftito, found on wall of the Domus Gelotiana, Rome. become nourished by and united with it, the scion usually bearing flowers, fruit, etc., like the plant from which it was taken, and the stock usually retaining its own characteristics; the plant or tree (the united stock and scion) resulting from such an operation; the place where the scion is inserted; also, a portion of living tissue transplanted by surgery from one part of an individual to another, or from one individual to another, with a view to its adhesion and growth; in fig. use, anything inserted in or fixed upon something else to which it did not originally belong; an extraneous addition; also, the act of grafting.—graft¹, v. I. tr. To insert (a graft) into a plant or tree; insert a scion of (one plant) into another plant; fix a graft or grafts upon (a plant or tree); in surg., to transplant (a portion of living tissue) as a graft; in fig. use, to insert or fix as if by grafting (as, to graft a pagan custom upon Christian institutions). II. intr. To insert a graft or grafts; also, to become grafted.

graft² (gräft), n. [Cf. prov. Eng. or slang graft, work, a job or trade, perhaps orig. 'digging': cf. *grave*¹.] The acquisition of gain or advantage by dishonest, unfair, or sordid means, esp. through the abuse of one's position or influence in politics, business, etc., as by corrupt agreement or connivance or private or secret practices; a particular instance, method, or means of thus acquiring gain; also, the gain or advantage acquired. [Colloq.]—graft², v. i. or t. To practise graft, or obtain by graft. [Colloq.]

graft-age (gräft'āj), n. The process of grafting on trees, etc.

graft-er¹ (gräft'ēr), n. One who grafts on trees, etc.; also, the original plant from which a scion has been taken for grafting; also, a saw designed specially for use in grafting.

graft-er² (gräft'ēr), n. One who practises graft; one who accepts or obtains graft. [Colloq.]

Gra-ham (grā'ham) bread. [From Sylvester Graham (1794–1851), American dietetic reformer.] Bread of a light brownish color made of unbolted wheat flour (Graham flour).—Gra-ham-ism, n. The vegetarian system of diet.

Grail (grāl), n. [OF. graal, < ML. gradalis, dish, vessel; origin uncertain.] A platter (also taken as a chalice) which according to medieval legend was used by Christ at the Last Supper, and in which Joseph of Arimathea received the last drops of Christ's blood at the cross: often called Holy Grail.

grain¹ (grān), n. [From Scand.: cf. Icel. grein, Sw. and Dan. gren, branch.] A bough or branch (now prov.); one of the prongs of a fork (now prov.); pl., an iron instrument with barbed prongs, for spearing or harpooning fish (often construed as sing.).

Grains with Five Prongs.

grain² (grān), n. [OF. F. grain, also graine, < L. granum, grain, seed.] A small, hard seed; specif., the seed-like fruit, or caryopsis, of a cereal plant, as wheat, rice, maize, etc.; a corn; collectively, the seed-like fruits of wheat and other cereal plants in mass, or the plants themselves (in British use, commonly called corn); a particular species of such fruits or plants; pl., the refuse of grain after brewing or distilling; also, sing., any small, hard particle, as of sand, gold, pepper, gunpowder, etc.; also, a unit of weight (orig. the weight of a plump grain of wheat) equal in apothecaries' weight to one twentieth of a scruple, and in troy weight to one twenty-fourth of a pennyweight (27.34 or 27½ grains being equivalent to 1 dram avoirdupois) (there are 5,760 grains to the pound in both apothecaries' weight and troy weight, and 7,000 to the pound in avoirdupois weight); fig., the smallest possible amount of anything (as, there is not a grain of truth in that statement); also, kermes or cochineal, or the red dye made from either; any red dye; dye or color in general, esp. when fast; color or hue (as, "a robe of darkest grain": Milton's "Il Penseroso," 33); also, granular texture or appearance; specif., the side of leather from which the hair has been removed, the marking on such a side, or a more or less similar superficial finish or marking produced artificially; also, the size and arrangement of constituent particles of any substance; texture; also, fibrous constitution; the fibers in a piece of wood; the arrangement or direction of fibers in wood, or the resulting appearance or markings; lamination or cleavage of stone, coal, etc.; fig., temper or natural character (as, it goes against the grain to submit to this).—grains of paradise, the pungent, peppery seeds of either of two zingiberaceous plants, Amomum melegueta and A. granum-paradisi, of Africa: used to strengthen cordials, etc., and in veterinary medicine.—in grain, in kermes or other red dye, or in a fast color, or through the fiber (as, to dye a thing in grain); hence, indelible, firmly fixed, or ingrained (see Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," i. 5. 255); also, in substance or nature (as, a scoundrel in grain).—with a grain of salt, with some reserve or allowance, as in accepting or believing a statement.—grain², v. t. To form into grains; granulate; also, to dye in grain; also, to give a granular appearance to; also, to paint in imitation of the grain of wood, etc.; in tanning, to remove the hair from (skins); soften and raise the grain of (leather); finish with a particular grain.—grained, a. Having grains or a granular structure; also, having a fibrous structure or appearance.—grain/el'e-va-tor, n. See elevator.—grain'er, n.—grain'ing, n. Painting in imitation of the grain of wood, etc.—grain'-less, a. Without grains or grain; not grained.

grains (grānz), n. pl. or sing. See *grain*¹.

grain-y (grā'ni), a. Grain-like or granular; also, full of grains or grain; also, resembling the grain of wood, etc.

grai-th (grāth), v. t. [From Scand.: cf. Icel. greidha, make ready, < greidhr (= AS. geræde), ready: cf. ready.] To make ready; prepare; equip. [Now Sc. and prov. Eng.] —grai-th, n. [Cf. Icel. greidhi.] Readiness; order; preparation; also, equipment; harness; apparatus; also, possessions; also, material; stuff. [Now Sc. and prov. Eng.]

—grai-th'ly, a. [Cf. gradely.] Tidy; trim; decent; good. [Now prov. Eng.]

gral-la-to-ri-al (grāl-a-tō'ri-āl), a. [L. grallator, one who goes on stilts, < grallæ, stilts.] Belonging or pertaining to the wading birds, as the storks, herons, etc., many species of which are remarkable for their long legs.

gram¹ (gram), n. [Pg. grão, < L. granum, *E. grain*².] In the East Indies, the chick-pea, Cicer arietinum, there used as a food for both man and cat.

Grallatorial Birds. — 1, stork; 2, heron; 3, crane.

(variable) đ as d or j, ş as s or sh, ţ as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ", secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

tle; also, any of various other plants, as Phaseolus mungo ('green gram'), a bean cultivated in India as a food crop.

gram², gramme (gram), n. [F. gramme, < LL. gramma, < Gr. γράμμα, a small weight, orig. something drawn or written, a character or letter, < γράφειν, write.] In the metric system, a unit of mass (weight), intended to be, and being very nearly, equal to the mass (weight) of a cubic centimeter of water at its maximum density, but actually being equal to one thousandth of a certain platinum-iridium block, forming the standard kilogram, preserved at the International Bureau of Weights and Measures, near Paris: equivalent to a weight of 15.432 grains.

-gram. [Gr. γράμμα, something drawn or written, γράμμα, something drawn or written, character, letter, or γραμμή, line, all < γράφειν, mark, draw, write.] A termination of nouns denoting something drawn or written, as diagram, epigram, monogram, pentagram, radiogram, telegram. Cf. -graph and -graphy. [For -gram in terms of the metric system, see gram².]

gram-ma (grā'mā), n. [Sp. grama, kind of grass.] Any of various pasture grasses of the western and southwestern U. S., esp. those of the genus Bouteloua, as B. oligostachya ('blue grama'), the commonest species. Also gra'ma-grass.

gram-a-ry, gram-a-rye (gram'a-ri), n. [ME. grammarie, gramarye: cf. OF. gramaire, grammar (see grammar), also magic.] Grammar; learning; occult learning, or magic (archaic: as, "dark words of gramarye," Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," iii. 14).

gram-at-om (gram'at'əm), n. In chem., that quantity of an element whose weight in grams is numerically equal to the number which expresses the atomic weight of the element.

gram-mer-cy (grā-mēr'si), interj. [OF. grant merci: see grand and mercy.] Great thanks; many thanks; also, an exclamation of surprise or sudden feeling (as, "Gramercy! they for joy did grin": Coleridge's "Ancient Mariner," iii.). [Archaic.]

gram-i-na-ceous (gram-i-nā'shi-us), a. Gramineous.

gram-min-e-ous (grā-min'ē-us), a. [L. gramineus, < gramen (gramin-), grass.] Of or like grass; belonging to the Gramineæ (or Poaceæ), the grass family of plants.

gram-i-niv-o-rous (gram-i-niv'ō-rus), a. [L. gramen (gramin-), grass, + vorare, devour.] Feeding or subsisting on grass.

gram-ma-logue (gram'a-log), n. [Gr. γράμμα, character, letter, + λόγος, word.] In shorthand, a word represented by a single sign; also, a logogram.

gram-mar (gram'ār), n. [OF. gramaire (F. grammaire), < L. grammatica, < Gr. γραμματική, grammar, prop. fem. of γραμματικός: see grammatic, and cf. gramary and glamour.] The study or science of the usages of language or of a particular language, esp. as regards the classes, forms, and inflections of words, the combination of words into sentences, the principles of correct usage, etc.; a treatise on this subject; also, manner of speech or writing with reference to conformity to established or correct usage (as, "He had German enough to scold his servants . . . but his grammar and pronunciation were extremely bad": Macaulay's "Essays," Frederic the Great); speech or writing in accordance with established grammatical usage (as, that sentence is not grammar); also, grammatical forms and usages collectively (as, a language having little grammar); also, the elements of any science, art, or subject (as, the grammar of painting); a book presenting them (as, a grammar of ornament).—gram-ma-ri-an (grā-mā'ri-an), n. One versed in grammar.—gram'mar-less, a. Destitute of grammar or grammatical forms, as a language; also, not conforming to grammatical rules, as speech; ignorant of grammar, as a person.—gram'mar-school, n. Formerly, a school for teaching Latin; now, esp. in England, a secondary school in which Latin and Greek are among the principal subjects taught; in the U. S., a graded public school intermediate between a primary school and a high school.

gram-mat-ic (grā-mat'ik), a. [L. grammaticus, < Gr. γραμματικός, pertaining to letters, language, or grammar, < γράμμα, character, letter, orig. something written, < γράφειν, write.] Of or pertaining to grammar.—gram-mat'i-cal, a. Of or pertaining to grammar (as, a grammatical rule; a grammatical error); also, in accordance with the rules of grammar (as, that sentence is not grammatical).—gram-mat'i-cal-ly, adv.

gram-mat-i-cas-ter (grā-mat'i-kas-tēr), n. [ML., < L. grammaticus, a grammarian, orig. adj.: see grammatic.] A petty grammarian.

gramme (gram), n. See gram².

gram-mol-e-cule (gram'mol'e-kūl), n. In chem., that quantity of a substance whose weight in grams is numerically equal to the number which expresses the molecular weight of the substance.

gram-o-phone (gram'ō-fōn), n. [Gr. γράμμα, something written, + φωνή, sound.] An instrument invented in 1887 by Emile Berliner, for recording and reproducing speech, music, and other sounds, differing from the original phonograph and the original graphophone in employing for its record, instead of a rotating cylinder with indentations or incisions of varying depth in a line of one direction, a thin rotating disk with a groove of even depth and varying (zigzag) direction; in general, any sound-reproducing machine employing a disk record, whether with a groove of even depth and varying direction or with incisions of varying depth in a line of one direction. Cf. phonautograph, phonograph, and graphophone.

gram-pus (gram'pus), n. [For ME. grapeys, graspeys, < OF. graspeis, craspois, < ML. crassus piscis, 'fat fish.']

A cetacean, Grampus griseus, of the dolphin family, widely distributed in northern seas; also, any of various related cetaceans, as the caaing-whale, Globicephalus melas, or the killer, Orca gladiator.

Grampus (Grampus griseus).

gran-a-dil-la (gran'a-dil'ā), n. [Sp., dim. of granada, pomegranate: see grenade.] The large edible fruit of certain species of passion-flower, esp. Passiflora quadrangularis; also, a plant yielding this fruit.

gran-a-ry (gran'a-ri), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). [L. granarium, < granum, E. grain².] A storehouse or repository for grain, esp. after it has been threshed or husked; fig., a region abounding in grain.

grand (grand), a. [OF. grand, grant (F. grand, fem. grande), < L. grandis, large, full-grown, advanced in years, great, grand.] Of great, notable, or imposing size (as, "I was of late as petty to his ends As is the morn-dew on the myrtle-leaf To his grand sea": Shakspeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," iii. 12. 10); imposing in size and appearance or general effect (as, grand old trees; grand mountain scenery; buildings or statues on a grand scale); hence (without reference to size), stately, majestic, or elegantly dignified, as persons or their appearance, manner, air, etc.; lofty, as ideas, language, or style; magnificent or splendid, as a palace, a coach, festivities, display, etc.; noble or fine (as, a grand old man; "the grand old name of gentleman," Tennyson's "In Memoriam," cxi.); first-rate, capital, or 'splendid' (colloq. or vulgar: as, to have a grand time; grand weather; the dinner was just grand); also, highest, or very high, in rank or official dignity (as, a grand marshal; a grand jury: cf. grand duke, below); chief or arch (as, "Sin and Death, the two grand foes": Milton's "Paradise Regained," i. 159); main or principal (as, the grand entrance or staircase of a building: cf. grand stand, below); of the highest importance (as, the grand elixir of the alchemists; the grand question, resource, or desideratum); of great importance, distinction, or pretensions (as, grand personages; a grand international congress); also, complete or comprehensive (as, a grand total); in genealogy, one degree more remote in ascent or descent (used in compounds: see grandaunt, grandchild, etc., and cf. great).—Grand Army of the Republic, a society, founded in 1866, composed of men who served in the U. S. army or navy during the Civil War, its objects being to preserve fraternal feeling, strengthen loyal sentiment, and aid needy families of members. Abbreviated fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, ásk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, ēlect, agōny, intŭ, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operâ, ardent, actor, natŭre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

G. A. R.—grand climacteric. See climacteric.—grand duchess, the wife or widow of a grand duke; also, a woman who governs a grand duchy in her own right; in Russia, a daughter of a czar or of a czar's son.—grand duchy, a territory ruled by a grand duke or grand duchess.—grand duke, the sovereign of a territory called a grand duchy (ranked next below a king); in Russia, a son of a czar or of a czar's son.—grand jury. See under jury.—Grand Lama. See *lama*².—grand larceny. See larceny.—grand opera. See under *opera*².—grand piano. See under *piano*².—grand stand, the principal stand for spectators at a race-course, athletic field, etc.—grand tour. See under tour, n.—grand vizier. See vizier.

gran-dam, gran-dame (gran'dam, -dām), n. [OF. grand, grand, + dame, E. dame.] A grandmother; hence, an ancestress; in general, an old woman. [Archaic or prov.]

grand-aunt (grand'ant), n. [See grand, def.] An aunt of one's father or mother; a great-aunt.—grand/child, n.; pl. -children. A child of one's son or daughter.—grand-daugh'ter, n. A daughter of one's son or daughter.

grande dame (grānd dām). [F.] A grand or great lady.

gran-dee (gran-dē'), n. [Sp. and Pg. grande, < L. grandis, E. grand.] A Spanish or Portuguese nobleman of the highest rank; hence, any person of high rank or great eminence (as, political *grande*es).

gran-deur (gran'dūr), n. [F. grandeur, < grand: see grand.] The state or quality of being grand; imposing greatness; majesty; sublimity; magnificence; exalted rank, dignity, or importance.

grand-fa-ther (grand'fā'thēr), n. The father of one's father or mother; hence, a forefather.—grand/fa'ther-ly, a.

gran-dil-o-quent (gran-dil'ō-kwēnt), a. [L. grandis, great, grand, + loquens (loquent-), ppr. of loqui, speak.] Speaking or expressed in a lofty or pompous style; bombastic.—gran-dil'o-quence, n.—gran-dil'o-quent-ly, adv.—gran-dil'o-quous (-kwus), a. [L. grandiloquus.] Grandiloquent.

gran-di-ose (gran'di-ōs), a. [F. grandiose, < It. grandioso, < L. grandis, E. grand.] Grand in an imposing or impressive way; also, affectively grand or stately, or pompous (as, "a grandiose aping of Cæsar, Alexander, and Charlemagne": H. G. Wells's "Outline of History," xxxviii. § 3).—gran-di-ose-ly, adv.—gran-di-os/i-ty (-ōs'i-ti), n.

gran-di-o-so (gran-dē-ō'sō), a. [It.: see grandiose.] In music, grand or stately.

Gran-di-so-ni-an (gran-di-sō'ni-an), a. Pertaining to or characteristic of Sir Charles Grandison, the hero of a novel of that name by Samuel Richardson (published in 1753), represented by the author as his ideal of the perfect gentleman.

grand-ly (grand'li), adv. In a grand manner; imposingly; majestically; magnificently; splendidly.

grand-ma (grand'mā), n. [See grand, def.] Shortened form of grandmother. [Colloq.]—grand'mam-ma', n. A familiar equivalent of grandmother.—grand/moth'er, n. The mother of one's father or mother; hence, an ancestress.—grand/moth'er-ly, a.—grand'neph'ew, n. A son of one's nephew or niece.

grand-ness (grand'nes), n. The quality of being grand.

grand-niece (grand'nēs), n. [See grand, def.] A daughter of one's nephew or niece.—grand/pa, n. Shortened form of grandpapa. [Colloq.]—grand/pa-pa', n. A familiar equivalent of grandfather.—grand/par'ent, n. A parent of a parent.—grand/sire, n. A grandfather; hence, a forefather; in general, an old man. [Archaic or prov.]—grand/son, n. A son of one's son or daughter.—grand/un'cle, n. An uncle of one's father or mother; a great-uncle.

grane (grān), v. and n. Scotch form of groan.

grange (grānj), n. [OF. F. grange, < ML. granea, < L. granum, E. *grain*².] A granary (archaic: as, "For their teeming flocks and granges full, In wanton dance they praise the bounteous Pan," Milton's "Comus," 175); also, a farm; often, a country dwelling-house with its various farm-buildings; formerly, an outlying farm-house with barns, etc., belonging to a feudal manor or a religious establishment, where crops and tithes in kind were stored; also, in the U. S., a lodge or local branch of the "Patrons of Husbandry," a secret association for promoting the interests of agriculture; also [cap.], with the, in popular use, the association itself.—gran-ger (grān'jēr), n. A farm-steward; in the U. S., a member of a grange; also, a farmer.—gran/ger-ism¹, n. The principles and methods of the association of grangers in the U. S.

gran-ger-ism² (grān'jēr-izm), n. The practice of grangerizing books.

gran-ger-ize (grān'jēr-iz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. [From J. Granger, whose "Biographical History of England" (1769) was arranged for such illustration.] To illustrate (a book) with additional prints, engravings, etc., as from other books.—gran/ger-i-za'tion (-i-zā'shən), n.—gran/ger-iz-er (-i-zēr), n.

gran-ite (gran'it), n. [It. granito, orig. pp., "grained," of granire, < grano, < L. granum, E. *grain*².] A granular igneous rock composed chiefly of feldspar (orthoclase) and quartz, usually with one or more other minerals, as mica, hornblende, etc.: much used in building, and for monuments, etc.—gran/ite-ware, n. Pottery with a speckled appearance like granite; also, a variety of pottery of unusual hardness; also, a kind of ironware with a gray, stone-like enamel.—gran-nit-ic (gra-nit'ik), a. Of or like granite.—gran-i-toid (gran'i-toid), a. [See -oid.] Granite-like.

gran-niv-o-rous (gran-niv'ō-rus), a. [L. granum, grain, seed, + vorare, devour.] Feeding on grain or seeds.

gran-ny (gran'i), n.; pl. grannies (-iz). [Dim. of grandam, or of grandmother.] A grandmother (colloq.); an old woman (colloq.); a nurse or midwife (southern U. S.); one exhibiting the fussiness, mental weakness, or other traits of an old woman (colloq.).—gran/ny-knot, n. The ordinary knot tied by landmen, derided by seamen because difficult to untie when jammed.

gran-o-phyre (gran'ō-fir), n. [G. granophyr, < granit, granite, + porphyry, porphyry.] Any of a class of porphyritic igneous rocks in which the ground-mass is a mixture of crystals.—gran-o-phyric (-fir'ik), a.

grant (grānt), v. [OF. graanter, creanter, promise, assure, authorize, grant, confirm, approve, < L. credens (credent-), ppr. of credere, trust, believe.] I. tr. To agree or accede to (a request, etc.); also, to give or accord, esp. in answer to a request (as, to grant permission); also, to bestow or confer (a right, etc.), esp. by a formal act; transfer or convey (property), esp. by deed or writing; also, to admit or concede, as for the sake of argument. II. † intr. To agree or consent; as, "The soldiers should have toss'd me on their pikes Before I would have granted to that act" (Shakspeare's "3 Henry VI." i. l. 245).—grant, n. The act of granting; also, that which is granted, as a privilege or right, a sum of money, or a tract of land; in law, a transfer or conveyance of property by deed or writing.—grant/a-ble, a. That may be granted.—grant-ee', n. In law, one to whom a grant is made.—grant'er, n. One who grants.—grant/or, n. In law, one who makes a grant.

gran-u-lar (gran'ū-lār), a. [LL. granulum: see granule.] Composed of, containing, or bearing granules or grains; also, of the nature of granules.—granular lids or eyelids, eyelids affected with trachoma.—gran-u-lar/i-ty (-lar'i-ti), n.—gran'u-lar-ly, adv.

gran-u-late (gran'ū-lāt), v.; -lated, -lating. [LL. granulum: see granule.] I. tr. To form into granules or grains; also, to raise in granules; make rough on the surface. II. intr. To become granular; in pathol., to develop granulations, as a wound.—gran'u-lat-ed (-lāt-ed), p. a. Formed into or consisting of grains; also, having the surface raised in small grain-like elevations; hence, mottled; in pathol., characterized by the presence of small grain-like bodies; having granulations.—gran-u-la'tion (-lā'shən), n. The act or process of granulating; granulated condition; also, a granular formation; one of the grains of a granulated surface; in pathol., the formation of small grain-like bodies, esp. in the process of healing; also, a small grain-like body or elevation, esp. one of those which form on the surface of wounds, etc., during healing.—gran/u-la-tor, n.

gran-ule (gran'ul), n. [LL. granulum, dim. of L. granum, E. *grain*².] A little grain; a small particle; a pellet; a corpuscle; a spore; a small grain-like elevation.—gran/u-lite (-ū-lit), n. In petrol., any of various fine-grained or even-grained gneisses and granites, consisting chiefly of (variable) g as cl or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

feldspar and quartz.—gran-u-lit'ic (-lit'ik), a.—gran'u-lose (-lōs), n. That portion of the starch-granule which is acted upon by diastase and the saliva.—gran'u-lous, a. Granular.

grape (grāp), n. [OF. grape, crape (F. grappe), cluster of fruit or flowers, orig. hook; from Teut. (cf. G. krapf, hook), and akin to E. cramp: cf. grapnel and grapple.] The edible, pulpy, smooth-skinned berry or fruit which grows in clusters on vines of the genus Vitis, and from which wine is made; any vine bearing this fruit; also, mil'it., grape-shot (as, "a fire of musketry and grape": Byron's "Don Juan," vii. 29); also, pl., in vet. science, a morbid growth on the leg of a horse, resembling a bunch of grapes.—grape'=fruit, n. The roundish, usually pale-yellow, edible fruit yielded by certain varieties of the tropical or semitropical tree Citrus decumana, resembling the orange but larger, and having a better rind and an acid pulp (also called shaddock, which term however is usually restricted to the pear-shaped fruit yielded by other varieties of this tree). See shaddock and citrus.—grape'=hy'a-cinth, n. Any plant of the liliaceous genus Muscari, as M. botryoides, a species whose globular blue flowers resemble minute grapes.—grap-er-y (grā'pēr-i), n.; pl. -ies (-iz). An inclosure, as a glass-house, where grapes are grown; a plantation of grape-vines.—grape'=shot, n. A cluster of small cast-iron balls used as a charge for a cannon.—grape'=stone, n. A seed of a grape.—grape'=sug'ar, n. Dextroglucose.—grape'=vine, n. A vine that bears grapes; also, an imaginary telegraph line by which mysterious reports are popularly said to be transmitted (commonly 'grape-vine telegraph'); hence, an unauthenticated or baseless report; a canard; also, a complicated movement or figure in dancing.

Grape-shot.

graph (grāf), n. [Gr. γραφία, drawing, delineation, writing, < γράφειν, mark, draw, write.] A diagrammatic representation of a system of connections or relations by means of a number of spots or circles; in math., a curve as representing an equation or function.—graph, v. t. In math., to draw or plot (a curve) from its equation or function; also, to draw a curve representing (an equation or function).

—graph. [Gr. γράφος, drawn or written, something drawn or written, γράφος, drawing or writing, one who draws or writes, or γραφία, a drawing or writing, all < γράφειν, mark, draw, write; many E. words in -graph being referred directly to Gr. γράφειν.] A termination of adjectives meaning 'drawn or written' (in some manner), as autograph, holograph, and of nouns meaning 'something drawn or written,' 'writer,' 'apparatus for drawing, writing, recording, etc.,' as allograph, bibliograph, diagraph, paragraph, phonograph, photograph, radiograph, seismograph, also of verbs, as aërograph. Cf. -gram and -graphy.

graph-ic (grāf'ik), a. [L. graphicus, < Gr. γραφικός, pertaining to drawing, painting, or writing, < γραφία: see graph.] Of or pertaining to drawing, engraving, painting, etc. (as, the graphic arts); also, exhibiting as in a picture (as, a graphic description of a person or a scene); lifelike; vivid; also, of or pertaining to writing (as, graphic symbols); presenting an appearance like writing or printing (as, graphic gold, ore, or tellurium, same as sylvanite); noting, pertaining to, or possessing that kind of texture produced in a rock when certain constituents crystallize in such a way as to appear like written characters on the surfaces or sections of the rock; also, pertaining to the use of diagrams, graphs, mathematical curves, or the like; diagrammatic; pertaining to the determination of values, solving of problems, etc., by direct measurement on diagrams instead of by ordinary calculations. Also graph'i-cal.—graph'i-cal-ly, adv.—graph'ic-ness, n.—graph'ics, n. The art of drawing, esp. as concerned with mathematics, engineering, etc.; the science of calculating by means of diagrams.

graph-ite (grāf'it), n. [G. graphit, < Gr. γράφειν, mark, draw, write.] Soft native carbon, having an iron-gray color and metallic luster, used in lead-pencils and crucibles, as a lubricant, etc.—gra-phit-ic (grā-fit'ik), a.—graph'i-tize (-i-tiz), v. t.; -tized, -tizing. To convert into graphite; also, to cover (the surface of an object) with graphite.—

graph'i-ti-za'tion (-ti-zā'shən), n.—graph'i-toid, graph-i-toi'dal (-toid, -toi'dal), a. Resembling graphite.

gra-phol-o-gy (grā-fol'ō-jī), n. [Gr. γραφία, writing; see -logy.] The study of handwriting, esp. as regarded as an expression of the writer's character.—gra-phol'o-gist, n.

graph-o-ma-ni-a (grāf'ō-mā'ni-ä), n. [NL., < Gr. γραφία, writing, + μανία, E. mania.] A mania for writing.—graph-o-ma'ni-ac (-ak), n.

graph-o-phone (grāf'ō-fōn), n. [Gr. γράφειν, write, + φωνή, sound.] An instrument invented in 1886 by Charles S. Tainter and Chichester A. Bell, for recording and reproducing speech, music, and other sounds, being of the phonograph type but substituting for the tin-foil cylinder of the original phonograph, into which the record was merely indented, a wax or similar cylinder into which the record of the sound-vibrations is cut or engraved in a line of one direction but of varying depth; in later use, any of various sound-reproducing machines employing either a cylinder record or a disk record (the term having at times been loosely used, but being now restricted to a particular make of machines and constituting a proprietary name, registered as a trade-mark in the U. S. in 1921). Cf. phonograph and gramophone.

—graphy. [Gr. γραφία, < γράφος, drawing or writing, one who draws or writes, < γράφειν, mark, draw, write; many E. words in -graphy being referred directly to Gr. γράφειν.] A termination of nouns denoting some process or form of drawing, representing, writing, recording, describing, etc., or an art or science concerned with some such thing, as in biography, choreography, geography, hydrography, orthography, photography, telegraphy, topography. Cf. -gram and -graph.

grap-nel (grāp'nel), n. [ME. grapnel, dim. < OF. grapin, kind of hook, dim. of grape, hook: see grape.] An instrument with one or more hooks for seizing and holding something, as one thrown by a rope for catching on an enemy's ship; also, a small anchor with three or more flukes; also, any of various implements for clutching or grasping.

Grapnel (Anchor).

grap-ple (grāp'l), n. [Appar. a dim. form < OF. grape, hook (see grape and grapnel); in later senses, < grapple, v.] A grapnel; also, the act of grappling; a grip or close hold, as in wrestling; a close encounter.—grap-ple, v.; -pled, -pling. I. tr. To seize, hold, or fasten with a grapple; fig., to fasten as with a grapple, or attach firmly (as, "Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried, Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel": Shakspeare's "Hamlet," i. 3. 63); also, to seize and hold (an opponent) firmly in a struggle; engage in a struggle or close encounter with. II. intr. To use a grapple; also, to hold or make fast to something as with a grapple; also, to seize another, or each other, in a firm grip, as in wrestling; clinch; contend (with) in a close encounter (often fig.).—grap'pler, n.—grap'pling, n. That by which anything is seized and held; a grapnel.—grap'pling-i'ron, n. A device with one or more iron claws or hooks for grappling; a grapnel.

grap-to-lite (grāp'tō-lit), n. [Gr. γραφτός, marked, written, + λίθος, stone.] Any of a group of Paleozoic coelenterate organisms whose fossils found in hard shales resemble hieroglyphics.—grap-to-lit'ic (-lit'ik), a.

Block of Stone containing Graptolites.

grap-y (grā'pi), a. Of or like grapes.

grasp (grāsp), v. [ME. graspen, grapsen; prob. akin to AS. grāpian, E. grape.] I. tr. To seize and hold by or as by clasping with the fingers; seize upon; hold firmly; also, to lay hold of with the mind; comprehend. II. intr. To make the motion of seizing; seize something firmly or eagerly.—grasp, n. A grasping or gripping; a grip of the hand; power of seizing and holding (as, to have a thing within one's grasp); also, hold, possession, or mastery (as, to wrest power from the grasp of a usurper); also, mental hold

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, unite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

or comprehension (as, a subject beyond one's grasp); esp., broad or thorough comprehension.—grasp'a-ble, a. That may be grasped.—grasp'er, n.—grasp'ing, p. a. That grasps; fig., avaricious or greedy (as, "Stelling is moderate in his terms—he's not a grasping man": George Eliot's "Mill on the Floss," i. 3).—grasp'ing-ly, adv.—grasp'-ing-ness, n.—grasp'less, a. Without grasp or grip; incapable of grasping; also, not to be grasped.

grass (grās), n. [AS. græs, gærs, = D., G., Icel., and Goth. gras, grass; from the Teut. root whence E. grow and green.] Herbage in general, or the plants on which grazing animals pasture; specif., any plant of the family Gramineæ (or Poaceæ), characterized by jointed stems, sheathing leaves, flower-spikelets, and fruit consisting of a seed-like grain or caryopsis ('true grasses'); popularly, any of the plants of this family on which animals are pastured or which are cut and dried as hay; any of various similar plants, as sedges, rushes, etc., of related and other families; also, a blade of grass (now rare); also, pasture, or the condition of being at pasture (as, to put animals to grass); pasture-land (as, half of the farm is grass); also, the yearly growth of grass; hence, the season of the new growth of grass (as, a horse five years old next grass); also, the grass-covered ground.—grass, v. I. tr. To feed with growing grass; pasture; also, to cover with grass or turf; also, to lay on the grass, as for the purpose of bleaching; also, to knock, throw, or bring to the grass or ground (colloq.). II. intr. To produce grass; become covered with grass; also, to feed on growing grass; graze.

grass-cloth (grās'klōth), n. Any of several kinds of cloth made from the fibers of grasses or other plants; esp., a thin, light fabric woven in China and the East from the fiber of the ramie and other urticaceous plants.

grass-finch (grās'fīnch), n. A common sparrow, Poæetes gramineus, of North America; also, any of various weaver-birds, esp. of the Australian genus Poëphila.

grass-green (grās'-grēn'), i. a. Of the green color of grass; also, green with grass. II. n. The green color of grass.

grass-grown (grās'grōn), a. Overgrown with grass.

grass-hop-per (grās'hōp'ēr), n. Any of numerous orthopterous insects with hind legs fitted for leaping, as the locusts, certain katydids, etc.

grass-land (grās'land), n. Land kept under grass; meadow-land; permanent pasture.

grass-less (grās'les), a. Without grass.

grass-plot, grass-plat (grās'plot, -plat), n. A plot of ground covered with grass; a lawn.

grass=snipe (grās'snīp), n. The pectoral sandpiper.

grass-tree (grās'trē), n. Any member of the Australian liliaceous genus Xanthorrhæa, comprising plants with a stout, woody stem bearing a tuft of long, grass-like leaves and a dense flower-spike; also, any of various similar plants of Australasia.

grass-widow (grās'wid'ō), n. [From grass + widow; the original force of grass being uncertain.] A discarded mistress, or an unmarried mother of a child (now prov. Eng.); also, a woman who is separated or who lives apart from her husband (whether by reason of divorce or otherwise).

—grass'=wid'ow-er, n. A man who is separated or who lives apart from his wife.

grass-y (grās'i), a. Covered with grass; pertaining to or consisting of grass; grass-like.

grate¹ (grāt), n. [ML. grata, < L. cratis, wickerwork, hurdle: cf. crate.] A framework of parallel or crossed bars used as a partition, guard, cover, or the like; also, a frame of metal bars for holding fuel in burning, as in a fireplace or a furnace; hence, a fireplace; also, a cage for animals or human beings; a prison; in mining and metal, a screen or sieve for separating or grading ore.—grate¹, v. t.; grated, grating. To furnish with a grate or grates.

grate² (grāt), v.; grated, grating. [OF. grater (F. gratier); from Teut. (cf. G. kratzen, scratch).] I. tr. To scratch; scrape, or scarify; hence, to wear down or away by rough friction (archaic); more commonly, to reduce to small particles by rubbing against a rough surface or instrument (as, to grate a nutmeg); pulverize with a grater; also, to rub harshly together, as the teeth; rub against with a harsh, jarring sound (as, a boat grates the shore); produce by rough friction (poetic: as, "Open fly . . . The infernal doors, and on their hinges grate Harsh thunder," Milton's "Paradise Lost," ii. 881); declare or utter with harsh sound; also, fig., to fret, irritate, or vex (now rare: as, "Grating so harshly all his days of quiet With turbulent and dangerous lunacy," Shakspeare's "Hamlet," iii. 1. 3). II. intr. To scrape or rub with rough or noisy friction, as one thing on or against another; make a sound as of rough scraping; sound harshly, or jar, as on the ear; fig., to have an irritating or unpleasant effect, as on the feelings.

grate-ful (grāt'fūl), a. [Obs. grate, pleasing, also thankful (< L. gratus: see grace), + -ful.] Pleasing to the mind or the senses; agreeable or welcome (as, a grateful task; grateful news); refreshing (as, grateful shade or breezes; grateful slumber; grateful fruits); also, warmly or deeply appreciative of kindness shown to one's self or to any person or thing that one is interested in; pleasurablely sensible of indebtedness for benefits received; thankful; actuated by or betokening gratitude, as feelings, actions, or words.—grate'ful-ly, adv.—grate'ful-ness, n.

grat-er (grā'tēr), n. One who or that which grates; esp., an implement for grating; an instrument with a rough, indented surface for rubbing off small particles of a substance (as, a nutmeg-grater).

grat-i-cule (grat'i-kūl), n. [F., < ML. graticula, for L. craticula, gridiron: see grille.] A design or plan divided into squares to facilitate copying.

grat-i-fi-ca-tion (grat'i-fi-kā'shōn), n. [L. gratificatio(n).] The act of gratifying, or the state of being gratified; also, something that gratifies; a source of pleasure or satisfaction; a reward, recompense, or gratuity (archaic).

grat-i-fi-er (grat'i-fi-ēr), n. One who gratifies.

grat-i-fy (grat'i-fi), v. t.; -fied, -fying. [F. gratifier, < L. gratificari, do a favor to, oblige, gratify, < gratus, pleasing, thankful, + facere, make.] To give pleasure to (persons) by satisfying desires or humoring inclinations or feelings; please by something especially desired or acceptable; satisfy (desires, appetites, etc.); indulge or humor (tastes, feelings, etc.); also, to reward or requite as in gratitude (as, "to gratify his noble service": Shakspeare's "Coriolanus," ii. 2. 44); remunerate, or give a gratuity to (archaic).—grat'i-fy-ing-ly, adv.

gratin (grā-tān), n. [F., < gratter, scrape: see grate.] A browned crust, as of bread-crumbs with butter or grated cheese on a baked dish of food; a dish with such a crust; this manner of preparing food.—grat-i-nate (grat'i-nāt), v. t.; -nated, -nating. [= F. gratiner.] To prepare or cook (food) in the gratin manner.

grat-ing¹ (grā'ting), n. A grate, or framework of parallel or crossed bars; a lattice cover for a ship's hatchway in fair weather; in optics, a series of fine parallel lines or scratches ruled very close together on a glass or polished metal surface, used to produce spectra by diffraction ('diffraction grating').

grat-ing² (grā'ting), p. a. That grates; harsh or jarring in sound, or as sound; irritating or unpleasant in effect.—grat'ing-ly, adv.

gra-tis (grā'tis). [L. gratis, for gratius, by favor or kindness, abl. pl. of gratia, favor, E. grace.] I. adv. For nothing; without charge or pay; gratuitously. II. a. Free of cost; gratuitous.

grat-i-tude (grat'i-tūd), n. [OF. F. gratitude, < ML. gratitudo, < L. gratus, pleasing, thankful: see grace.] The quality or feeling of being grateful or thankful; grateful sense of indebtedness for kindness or benefits enjoyed.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n̄, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

gra-tu-i-tous (grā-tū'i-tus), a. [L. gratuitus, < gratia, favor: cf. gratis.] Freely bestowed or obtained; costing the recipient nothing; free; also, being without reason, cause, or justification (as, "He has indulged in gratuitous suppositions," H. James's "Portrait of a Lady," xlix.; a gratuitous insult); unwarranted; uncalled-for. — gra-tu'i-tous-ly, adv. — gra-tu'i-tous-ness, n.

gra-tu-i-ty (grā-tū'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [F. gratuité, < ML. gratuitas, < L. gratia, favor: cf. gratuitous and gratis.] A gift or present, usually of money; a bounty, as to soldiers; often, a gift of money, over and above payment due for service, to a servant, porter, cabman, etc. (as, "Rainscourt . . . dismissed the post-boys with a handsome gratuity": Marryat's "King's Own," xviii.); a tip; a douceur.

grat-u-lant (grat'ū-lant), a. Gratulating; expressing joy. [Archaic.]

grat-u-late (grat'ū-lāt), v. t.; -lated, -lating. [L. gratulatus, pp. of gratulari, express joy, congratulate, thank, < gratus, pleasing, thankful: see grace.] To express joy at; greet, salute, or hail with joy (as, "Where this night are met in state Many a friend to gratulate His wish'd presence": Milton's "Comus," 949); offer congratulations or felicitations upon (some happy event, etc.); also, to express joy or offer congratulations to; congratulate or felicitate. [Archaic.] — grat-u-la'tion (-lā'shən), n. [L. gratulatio(n)-.] The expression of joy at something welcome or fortunate; congratulation or felicitation; a speech of congratulation; also, a feeling of joy at something welcome or gratifying; gratification. — grat'u-la-to-ry (-lā-tō-ri), a. Expressing joy or gratification; congratulatory.

grau-wack-e (grou'vāk'è), n. [G.] Graywacke.

gra-va-men (grā-vā'men), n.; pl. -amina (-vam'i-nā). [LL., < L. gravare, load, weigh down: see grieve.] A grievance; also, that part of an accusation which weighs most heavily against the accused; the burden or substantial part of a charge or complaint.

grave¹ (grāv), v. t.; pret. graved, pp. graved or graven, ppr. graving. [AS. grāfan = D. graven = G. graben = Icel. grafa = Goth. graban, dig: cf. *grave*², groove, and graveure.] To dig (archaic or prov.); also, to bury (archaic or prov.); also (archaic), to carve or sculpture (an image, etc.); incise or engrave (letters, designs, etc.), as on a surface; fig., to impress deeply, as on the mind or memory (as, "Until my heart shall cease to beat . . . That kind blue eye, and golden hair, Eternally are graven there": Praed's "Reminiscences of My Youth").

grave² (grāv), n. [AS. græf = D. graf = G. grab, grave; from the Teut. root seen in E. *grave*¹.] An excavation made in the earth to receive a dead body in burial; the place of interment of a corpse; a tomb or sepulcher; any place that becomes the receptacle of what is dead (lit. or fig.: as, a watery or a fiery grave; the province became the grave of dead reputations); also, death (sometimes personified: as, "O grave, where is thy victory?" 1 Cor. xv. 55).

grave³ (grāv). [F. grave, < L. gravis, heavy, weighty, important, grievous, low in pitch.] I. a.; compar. graver, superl. gravest. Heavy to lift or carry (obs. or archaic); fig., weighty, momentous, or important (as, grave cares or responsibilities; grave matters or considerations); involving important or critical issues or serious consequences (as, grave questions, doubts, symptoms, or news; a grave situation); also, of great personal importance or authority (archaic: as, "most potent, grave, and reverend signiors," Shakspeare's "Othello," i. 3. 76); also, dignified, sedate, or sober, as persons or their aspect, deportment, speech, etc.; solemn, as ceremonies, music, etc.; serious, earnest, or in earnest (rather than gay, smiling, or jesting); also, sober or somber, as colors, dress, etc.; also, low in pitch, as sound (opposed to acute); noting or having a particular accent (˘) indicating orig. a comparatively low pitch (as in ancient Greek), later quality of sound (as in the French père), distinct syllabic value (as in belovèd), etc. II. n. The grave accent.

grave⁴ (grāv), v. t.; graved, graving. [Origin obscure.] Naut., to clean (a ship's bottom or a ship) by burning or scraping off accretions and paying it over with pitch.

gra-ve⁵ (grāvā), a. [It., < L. gravis, E. *grave*³.] In music, grave; solemn; slow.

grave-clothes (grāv'klōthz), n. pl. The clothes or dress in which a dead body is interred; cerements: as, "Like a ghost he seem'd whose grave-clothes were unbound" (Spenser's "Faerie Queene," ii. 11. 20).

grav-el (grav'el), n. [OF. gravele (F. gravelle), dim. of grave, gravel, sandy shore; from Celtic.] Sand†; also, small stones and pebbles, or a mixture of these with sand; in pathol., small calculi or concretions formed in the kidneys; the disease characterized by such concretions. — grav'el, v. t.; -eled or -elled, -eling or -elling. To cover or lay with gravel, as walks, roads, etc.; also, to bury under or choke with gravel or sand†; also, to run (a vessel) aground, as on a beach†; fig., to 'stick,' or bring to a standstill from perplexity or embarrassment; puzzle, pose, or nonplus (as, "The wisest doctor is gravelled by the inquisitiveness of a child": Emerson's "Essays," Intellect); also, to be a cause of irritation to (colloq., U. S.). — grav'el-blind, a. Blind or dim-sighted to a degree greater than sand-blind and less than stone-blind: orig. a humorous Shaksperian use ("O heavens, this is my true-begotten father! who, being more than sand-blind, high-gravel blind, knows me not": "Merchant of Venice," ii. 2. 38).

grave-less (grāv'les), a. Without a grave; unburied: as, "Till . . . my brave Egyptians all . . . Lie graveless" (Shakspeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," iii. 13. 166).

grav-el-ly (grav'el-i), a. Abounding in, consisting of, or resembling gravel.

grave-ly (grāv'li), adv. In a grave manner; seriously.

grav-en (grāv'n), p. a. Carved; sculptured; engraved. [Archaic.] grave-ness (grāv'nes), n. Grave character; seriousness; gravity.

gra-ve-o-lent (grā-vē'ō-lent), a. [L. graveolens (-ent-), < gravis, heavy, + olens, ppr. of olere, emit a smell.] Having a strong, unpleasant smell; rank; fetid.

grav-er (grāv'vēr), n. One who carves or engraves (archaic); also, any of various tools for cutting, engraving, etc., as an engraver's burin.

grave=rob-ber (grāv'rob'ēr), n. One who robs graves, as of bodies or valuables buried in them; esp., one who steals dead bodies from graves; a body-snatcher. — grave=rob'bing, n.

Graves¹ (grāv), n. [From the Graves, gravelly districts in the Gironde department, France.] A class of Bordeaux wines, red and white, esp. the white.

graves², greaves (grāvz, grēvz), n. pl. [LG. greve = G. griebe.] The sediment of melted tallow or animal fat, pressed into cakes for dogs' food, fish-bait, etc.

grave-stone (grāv'stōn), n. A stone placed upon or at a grave, to mark the spot.

grave-ward (grāv'wārd), adv. and a. Toward the grave.

grave-yard (grāv'yārd), n. A yard for graves; a cemetery.

grav-id (grav'id), a. [L. gravidus, < gravis, heavy, E. *grave*³.] Heavy with young; pregnant. — gra-vid-i-ty (gra-vid'i-ti), n.

gra-vif-ic (gra-vif'ik), a. [L. gravis, heavy, + facere, make.] Making heavy; producing weight.

grav-i-grade (grav'i-grād), [L. gravis, heavy, + gradi, walk.] I. a. Walking with heavy steps; specif., of or pertaining to the Gravigrada, a group of extinct edentate animals including the megathere and the mylodon. II. n. A gravigrade animal.

gra-vim-e-ter (gra-vim'e-tēr), n. [L. gravis, heavy: see -meter.] An instrument for determining specific gravities.

— grav-i-met-ric, grav-i-met-ri-cal (grav-i-met'rik, -ri-kal), a. Of or pertaining to gravimetry. — grav-i-met'ri-cal-ly, adv. — gra-vim'e-try, n. [See -metry.] The measurement of weight; the determination of specific gravities.

grav-ing-dock (grāv'ing-dok), n. A dry-dock: so called because used in graving or cleaning the bottoms of ships.

grav-i-tate (grav'i-tāt), v.; -tated, -tating. [NL. gravitatus, pp. of gravitare, < L. gravis, E. gravity.] I. intr. To move or tend to move toward a body by the force of gravity or of gravitation; esp., to tend toward the lowest level; settle down; fig., to have a natural tendency, or be strongly attracted, toward some point or object of influence. II. tr. To cause to move downward by the force of gravity.—grav-i-ta'tion (-tā'shən), n. [NL. gravitatio(n-).] The act or process of gravitating; also, the attraction or force by which all bodies in the universe tend to move toward one another, and to which, in the case of the earth, the fall of bodies is due; also, fig., natural tendency toward some point or object of influence (as, the gravitation of population toward the cities).—grav-i-ta'tion-al, a. Of or pertaining to gravitation.—grav-i-ta'tion-al-ly, adv.—grav-i-ta-tive (-tā-tiv), a. Of or pertaining to gravitation; tending or causing to gravitate.

Wood-engraver's Gravers. — A, ordinary graver; B, tint-tool or liner; C, lozenge-graver.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, clect, agōny, intō, unīte; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ru, then; y, you;

grav-i-tom-e-ter (grav-i-tom'e-tēr), n. [From gravity + -meter.] An instrument for determining specific gravities.

grav-i-ty (grav'i-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [F. gravité, < L. gravitas, < gravis, heavy, E. *grave*³.] Heaviness or weight (as, the center of gravity; specific gravity); specif., terrestrial gravitation; the attraction or force by which terrestrial bodies tend to move toward the center of the earth; precisely, the downward acceleration of terrestrial bodies due to the gravitation of the earth modified by centrifugal force, etc.; also, loosely, gravitation in general; also, fig., the quality or state of being grave; weightiness or importance; serious or critical character, as of news, occurrences, a case or situation, etc.; personal importance or authority; dignity or sedateness of aspect, deportment, etc.; solemnity, as of ceremonies; seriousness, earnestness, or unsmiling demeanor (as, to find it difficult to preserve one's gravity); lowness in pitch, as of sounds; also, something grave, serious, or solemn, as a remark, subject, or matter.—center of gravity. See under *center*², n.—specific gravity. See under specific, a.

gra-vure (grā-vūr' or grā'vūr), n. [F., engraving, < graver, engrave; from Teut., and akin to E. *grave*¹.] Photogravure; a plate or print produced by photogravure.

gra-vy (grā'vi), n.; pl. -vies (-viz). [ME. gravey, grave; origin obscure.] The fat and juices that drip from meat in cooking; these juices made into a dressing for meat, vegetables, etc.—gra'vy-boat, n. A small boat-shaped (or other) vessel for serving gravy or sauce.

gray, grey (grā), a. [AS. græg = D. grauw = G. grau = Icel. grár, gray.] Of a color between white and black, having little or no positive hue; ash-colored; lead-colored; hence, not bright (as, a gray day); dismal or gloomy (as, a gray existence); also, dressed or habited in gray (as, a gray friar; see below); also, gray-haired (as, "Who knows not this, tho' grey, is still a child": Young's "Night Thoughts," ii. 386); hence, old or ancient (as, "Who pious gather'd each tradition grey, That floats your solitary wastes along": Scott's "Vision of Don Roderick," Introd., v.); pertaining to old age; mature, as experience.—gray friar, a Franciscan friar: from the gray color of the original habit of the order.—gray goose, the graylag.—gray mare, a wife who rules her husband: in allusion to the proverb 'the gray mare is the better horse,' referring to such a wife.—gray matter, in anat., nervous tissue, esp. of the brain and spinal cord, containing both fibers and nerve-cells, and of a dark reddish-gray color (cf. white matter, under white, a.); hence (colloq.), brains or intellect.—gray, grey, n. A gray color; also, something of this color; a gray or subdued light (as, "in the gray of the daybreak": Longfellow's "To the Driving Cloud," 30); gray material or clothing; a gray horse (as, "Mrs. Mantrap . . . who drives her greys in the park": Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," xxxvii.).—gray, grey, v. I. intr. To become gray. II. tr. To make gray; also, to make dull in appearance, as glass, a photograph, etc.—gray-back, grey-back, n. A Confederate soldier during the American Civil War (in allusion to the gray uniform: colloq.); also, any of various animals, as a bird, the knot, Tringa canutus, and a whale, Rhachianectes glaucus, of the northern Pacific.—gray/beard, grey/beard, n. A man with a gray beard; hence, an old man; also, a large jug for holding spirits; a bellarmine.—gray/fish, grey/fish, n. The common dogfish, Squalus acanthias.—gray'=head'ed, grey'= head'ed, a. Having a gray head of hair; hence, old or ancient (as, a gray-headed error); of or pertaining to old age or old men (as, gray-headed wisdom).

gray-hound (grā'hound), n. See greyhound.

gray-ish, grey-ish (grā'ish), a. Having a tinge of gray.

gray-lag, grey-lag (grā'lag), n.

[Perhaps named from its lagging behind other species in migrating.] The common gray wild goose, Anser cinereus (or ferus), of Europe.

Graylag.

gray-ling (grā'ling), n. [From gray + *-ling*¹.]

Any of the freshwater fishes constituting the genus Thymallus, allied to the trout, but having a longer and higher dorsal fin.

gray-ly, grey-ly (grā'li), adv.

With a gray hue or tinge: as, "A hazy light Spread greyly eastward"

Alaska Grayling (Thymallus signifer).

(Keats's "Endymion," i.).—gray'ness, grey'ness, n.

gray-wack-e, grey-wack-e (grā'wak'è), n. [G. grauwacke, 'gray wacke': see wacke.] In geol., a compact aggregate of grains of various siliceous rocks, held together by a paste which is usually siliceous.

graze¹ (grāz), v.; grazed, grazing. [Origin obscure.] I. tr. To touch or rub lightly in passing; also, to scrape the skin from (a part of the body). II. intr. To touch or rub something lightly, or so as to produce slight abrasion, in passing.—graze¹, n. A grazing, or touching or rubbing lightly in passing; a slight abrasion.

graze² (grāz), v.; grazed, grazing. [AS. grasian, < græs, E. grass.] I. intr. To feed on growing herbage, as cattle, etc., do; also, to pasture cattle, etc. II. tr. To feed on (growing grass, etc.): as, "Flocks Grazing the tender herb," Milton's "Paradise Lost," iv. 253; put cattle, etc., to feed on (grass, land, etc.): as, "You may graze the ground, when the trees are grown up," Johnson, in Boswell's "Johnson," April 18, 1783; also, to put (cattle, etc.) to pasture; tend (cattle, etc.) while at pasture.—graze², n. A grazing, or feeding on grass.—graz-er (grā'zēr), n. An animal that grazes.—graz-ier (grā'zhēr), n. One who grazes cattle for the market.—graz'ing, n. The act of one who or that which grazes or pastures; also, pasture-land; a pasture.

gra-zi-o-so (grā-tsē-ō'sō), a. [It., < L. gratiosus, E. gracious.] In music, graceful.

grease (grēs), n. [OF. graisse, craisse (F. graisse), < L. crassus, fat.] The melted or rendered fat of animals, esp. when in a soft state; hence, fatty or oily matter in general; also, wool as shorn, before being cleansed of the oily matter; in hunting, the fat or fatness of game, with reference to the season for killing; in vet. science, an inflammation of a horse's skin in the fetlock region, attended with an oily secretion.

—grease (grēs or grēz), v. t.; greased, greasing. To smear or anoint with grease; also, to soil with grease; also, to lubricate with grease; hence, to cause to run easily; often, to bribe (as, "Envy not the store Of the greas'd advocate, that grinds the poor": Dryden's tr. Persius's "Satires," iii. 139); in vet. science, to cause (a horse) to become affected with grease.—grease'=bush, n. Greasewood.—grease'=paint', n. A mixture of tallow or hard grease and a pigment, used by actors for painting their faces.—greas-er (grē'sēr or grē'zēr), n. One who or that which greases; also, a

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

Mexican or Spanish-American (slang, U. S.).—grease-wood, n. A chenopodiaceous shrub, Sarcobatus vermiculatus, of the alkaline regions of the western U. S., containing a small amount of oil and used for fuel; also, any of various similar shrubs.

—greas-y (grē'si or grē'zi), a.; compar. greasier, superl. greasiest. Composed of or containing grease; oily; unctuous; often, containing much grease, as food; also, smeared or soiled with grease; also, grease-like, as in appearance or feel; hence, slippery; also, dirty, as the weather; also, indecent, as language; in vet. science, affected with the disease called grease.—greas-i-ly, adv.—greas'i-ness, n.

great (grāt), a. [AS. grēat = D. groot = G. gross, great.] Unusually or comparatively large in size or dimensions (as, a great house, tree, lake, cloud, or fire); big; large; hence, big with child or young; pregnant; full, as with courage or sorrow; also, large in number, or numerous (as, a great crowd; a great many); unusual or considerable in degree (as, a great rise in temperature; great velocity); of long duration (as, a great while); loud (as, a great cry; a great noise); in general, beyond what is ordinary, as in extent, scope, character, etc. (as, great kindness; great authority; great ignorance; a great joke); of much consequence, or important (as, the great point to be noted; great issues are at stake; no great matter); chief or principal (as, the great seal: see phrase below); notable or remarkable (as, a great occasion; a great miracle); distinguished, illustrious, or famous, as persons or things (often in titles: as, Alexander the Great); of high rank, official position, social standing, etc. (as, great nobles; great personages; the great man of the town); of extraordinary powers, abilities, or achievements (as, a great poet or composer; a great statesman; a great race-horse); of unusual excellence or merit, admirable, or fine (as, a great poem; great achievements); of noble or lofty character, as persons, thoughts, utterances, acts, ends, etc.; in general (often playful) characterization, first-rate, capital, fine, amusing, etc. (colloq.: as, we had a great time; he is a great old fellow); also, being such in an extreme degree (as, great friends; a great rogue); incessant or persistent (as, a great talker; a great traveler); also, skilful or expert (at: colloq.: as, to be great at golf or at mathematics); having the taste or interest strongly fixed (on: colloq.: as, to be great on art or on social reform); much addicted to something (with on: colloq.: as, to be great on finding fault); also, much in use or favor (as, 'humor' was a great word with the old physiologists); intimate or friendly (now prov. Eng. and Sc.); in genealogy, one degree more remote in ascent (through a parent or ancestor) or in descent (through a direct descendant, a nephew or niece, etc.) than a relationship specified (used in compounds: as, great-grandfather, a parent's grandfather; great-great-grandfather, a parent's great-grandfather; great-grandson, a son's or daughter's grandson; great-great-grandson, a son's or daughter's great-grandson; great-aunt, a father's or mother's aunt, a grandaunt; great-niece, a nephew's or niece's daughter, a grandniece; great-uncle, a grand-uncle; great-nephew, a grandnephew: cf. grand).—Great Bear. See *bear*², n.—great circle. See under circle, n.—great Dane. See Dane.—Great Dog. See dog, n.—great go. See go, n.—great gross. See under gross, n.—Great Lakes, a chain of five large fresh-water lakes (Superior, Michigan, Huron, Erie, and Ontario) between the U. S. and Canada.—Great Mogul. See Mogul.—great primer. See under *primer*².—Great Russians. See under Rus- sian, n.—great seal, the principal seal of a government or state.—Great War. Same as World War (see under world).—Great White Way, a popular name for Broadway, New York, for some distance north and south from 42d Street, in allusion to the brilliant illumination at night.

Greasewood (Sarcobatus vermiculatus).—1, branch with female flowers; 2, branch with fruits; a, a female flower; b, the fruit.

great-coat (grāt'kōt), n. A heavy overcoat. [Chiefly Eng.] great-en (grā'tn), v. I. tr. To make great or greater; enlarge; increase. II. intr. To become great or greater: as, "Life greatens in these later years" (Whittier's "Snow-Bound").

great-heart-ed (grāt'hār'ted), a. Having or showing a great, noble, or generous heart; magnanimous.—great'=heart'ed-ness, n.

great-ly (grāt'li), adv. In a great manner or degree.—great'-ness, n.

greave (grēv), n. [OF. greve, shin, greave; origin unknown.] A piece of armor for the leg below the knee.

greaves, n. pl. See *graves*².

grebe (grēb), n. [F. grèbe.] Any of the diving birds constituting the family Podicipedidae, related to the loons, but having lobate instead of webbed toes, and a merely rudimentary tail, as Podiceps cristatus ('crested grebe') or P. fluvialis ('little grebe') of Europe, or Podilymbus podiceps ('pied-billed grebe') of America; also, the plumage of the breast of these birds, of a silvery luster and satiny texture, much used for millinery, etc.

Gre-cian (grē'shan), [L. Græcia, Greece, < Græcus, Greek.] I. a. Of or pertaining to Greece or its inhabitants; Greek. II. n. A Greek; also, a Horned Grebe (Podiceps cornutus, or Colymbus auritus), of the northern hemisphere.

"There arose a murmuring of the Grecians [Revised Version Grecian Jews] against the Hebrews": Acts, vi. 1); also, one versed in the Greek language or literature.—Gre'-cism (-sizm), n. [L. Græcus, Greek.] An idiom or peculiarity of the Greek language; also, the spirit of Greek thought, art, etc.; adoption or imitation of this.—Gre'-cize (-siz), v.; -cized, -cizing. I. tr. To impart Greek characteristics to; also, to translate into Greek. II. intr. To conform to what is Greek; adopt Greek speech, idioms, customs, etc.

Gre-co, Græ-co (grē'kō-). Form of L. Græcus, Greek, used in combination, as in Greco-Latin, Greco-Roman, Greco-Turkish.—Gre-co-ma'ni-a (-mā'ni-ā), n. A mania or passion for what is Greek.—Gre-co-ma'ni-ac (-ak), *n.—Gre-co-phil, Gre'co-phil (-fil), n. [See -phil.] A lover or admirer of Greece or the Greeks.*

gree¹ (grē), n. [OF. gre, < L. gradus, step, E. grade.] A step, stage, or degree; also, superiority, mastery, or victory, or the prize for a victory (now only Sc.: as, "That sense and worth, o'er a' the earth, May bear the gree," Burns's "For A' That," 36).

gree² (grē), n. [OF. gre (F. grê), < L. gratus, pleasing.] Favor or good-will (as, to take a thing in gree); also, will, accord, or consent (as, by one's gree); also, satisfaction, as for an injury done (as, to make gree). [Obs. or archaic.] gree³ (grē), v. t. or i.; greed, greeing. [For agree.] To bring or come into accord; harmonize; agree. [Now Sc. and prov. Eng.]

greed (grēd), n. [Back-formation from greedy.] Greedy desire; inordinate or rapacious longing, esp. for wealth.

greed-y (grē'di), a.; compar. greedier, superl. greediest. [AS. grædig, akin to grædum, with greed, Icel. gráðr, hunger, greed, Goth. grēdus, hunger.] Having an inordinate desire for food or drink; ravenous; voracious; also, eager for gain, wealth, etc.; avaricious; covetous; in general, having eager desire (as, greedy of praise); keenly desirous; eager.—greed'i-ly, adv.—greed'i-ness, n.

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pîne; not, nôte, môve, nôr; up, lûte, pùll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errânt, operă, ardēt, actor, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

gree-gree (grē'grē), n. [Afr.] An African charm, amulet, or fetish.

Greek (grēk), n. [AS. Grēcas, also Crēcas, pl., < L. Græcus, < Gr. Γραικός, a Greek.] A native or inhabitant of Greece, ancient or modern; a member of the Greek race; also, a member of the Greek Church; also, a wily person; a swindler or sharper; a cheat at cards; also, a merry fellow; a boon companion; also, the language of the people of Greece (divided for convenience into ancient or classical Greek, extending to A.D. 200; Late Greek, from 200 to 600; Middle Greek, from 600 to 1500; and modern, or New, Greek, from 1500 on), esp. that of the classical period; hence, anything unintelligible, as speech, statements, etc. (colloq.: as, the letter, being in French, was Greek to him).

 Since Greek is the only language printed in this dictionary in other than Roman (or English) letters, the Greek alphabet, with the Roman equivalents, is here given:

Form.	Equivalent.	Name.	Form.	Equivalent.	Name.
A α	a	alpha	N ν	n	nu
B β	b	beta	Ξ ξ	x	xi
Γ γ	g	gamma	Ο ο	o (short)	omicron
Δ δ	d	delta	Π π	p	pi
E ε	e (short)	epsilon	Ρ ρ	r	rho
Z ζ	z	zeta	Σ σ, s	s	sigma
H η	e (long)	eta	T τ	t	tau
Θ θ, ϑ	th	theta	Υ υ	u, y	upsilon
I ι	i	iota	Φ φ	ph	phi
K κ	k, c	kappa	Χ χ	kh, ch	chi
Λ λ	l	lambda	Ψ ψ	ps	psi
M μ	m	mu	Ω ω	o (long)	omega —Greek, a. Of or pertaining to Greece, the Greeks, or their language; also, pertaining to the Greek Church.

—Greek calends. See under calends.—Greek Church, the Christian church of the countries in communion or doctrinal agreement with the patriarch of Constantinople, comprising the former Eastern (Roman) Empire, and countries evangelized from it, as Russia (also called Eastern Church: cf. Western Church, under western, a.); also, that part of this church which constitutes the established church in Greece.—Greek cross, a cross consisting of an upright crossed in the middle by a horizontal piece of the same length.—Greek fire, any of various combustible compositions (consisting of substances such as pitch, asphalt, inflammable oils, sulphur, etc.) used by the Greeks and others in medieval warfare.—Greek'ish, a. Greek or Grecian (archaic); also, like what is Greek; after the Greek type.

green (grēn), a. [AS. grēne = D. groen = G. grün = Icel. grænn, grænn, green; from the Teut. root whence E. grow and grass.] Of the color of growing herbage and foliage (in the spectrum, being intermediate between yellow and blue); also, covered with a growth of herbage or foliage (as, green fields); verdant; characterized by the presence of verdure (as, a green Christmas); hence, mild or temperate (as, a green winter); also, having a pale or sickly color, as from fear, jealousy, or illness; also, full of life and vigor (as, "His green old age seemed to be the result of health and benevolence": Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield," xiv.); vigorous; undecayed; also, not fully developed or perfected in growth or condition; unripe or immature; unseasoned, as timber; not dried, cured, etc.; raw or underdone, as meat; not fired, as bricks or pottery; also, immature in age, judgment, etc.; untrained; inexperienced; hence, simple or gullible; also, fresh, recent, or new (as, a green wound).—green cheese, new or fresh cheese; also, cheese colored green, as by means of sage. In popular expressions the belief that the moon is made of green cheese is taken as a type of foolish credulity or utter absurdity.—green corn, the unripe and tender ears of maize, esp. when used as a table vegetable.—green dragon, an American araceous herb, Arisæma dracontium, with a greenish-gray back.—green soap, a young goose, suitable for market.—green monkey, a monkey, Cercopithecus sabæus (or callitrichus), of western Africa, with a greenish-gray back.—green soap. See under soap, n.—green tea. See under tea.—green, n. A green color; also, a green dye or pigment; also, any of various things of green color; green material or clothing; grassy land; a plot of grassy ground; a piece of grassy ground constituting a town or village common; the whole course or links on which golf is played, or a putting-green alone; pl., fresh leaves or branches of trees, shrubs, etc., used for decoration; the leaves and stems of plants, as spinach, used for food.—green, v. i. or t. To become or make green: as, "Spring came again greening the hawthorn buds" (Masefield's "Daffodil Fields," iii.).

green-back (grēn'bak), n. A U. S. legal-tender note (officially called 'United States note') issued against the credit of the country and not against gold or silver on deposit (so called because the back is printed in green); by extension, any piece of U. S. paper money having the back printed in green; also, any of various animals, as the American golden plover (Charadrius dominicus), a European garfish (Belone vulgaris), etc.—Greenback party, in U. S. hist., a former political party, organized in 1874, opposed to the retirement, or the reduction in amount, of the greenback currency, and aiming to make such notes the only paper currency.—Green'back'er, n.

green-bri-er (grēn'bri'ēr), n. Any plant of the genus Smilax (see smilax), esp. S. rotundifolia, of the eastern U. S., a climbing plant with prickly stem and thick leaves.

green-cod (grēn'kod), n. The cultus-cod.

green-er (grē'nēr), n. A green or inexperienced workman, esp. a foreigner. [Slang, Eng.]

green-er-y (grē'nēr-i), n.; pl. -ies (-iz). Green foliage or vegetation; verdure; also, a place where green plants are reared or kept.

green-eyed (grēn'id), a. Having green eyes (as, the green-eyed monster, jealousy: see Shakspeare's "Othello," iii. 3. 166); hence, having the mental perception disturbed by jealousy.

green-finch (grēn'finch), n. A European finch, Ligurinus chloris, with green and yellow plumage; also, the Texas sparrow.

green-gro-cer (grēn'grō'sēr), n. A retailer of fresh vegetables and fruit.—green'gro'cer-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz).

green-heart (grēn'härt), n. The bebeeru (tree), or its hard, durable wood.

green-horn (grēn'hörn), n. [In allusion to the immature horns of a young animal.] A raw, inexperienced person (as, "mere greenhorns, men unused to Indian life": Irving's "Captain Bonneville," vii.); a foreigner lately arrived; hence, one easily imposed upon.

green-house (grēn'hous), n. A glass-house for the cultivation or protection of tender plants; in ceram., a house where pottery is dried before being placed in the kiln.

green-ing (grē'ning), n. A kind of apple the ripe skin of which is green.

green-ish (grē'nish), a. Somewhat green; having a tinge of green.

green-let (grēn'let), n. [See -let.] A vireo (bird).

green-ling (grēn'ling), n. Any of the acanthopterygian fishes constituting the family Hexagrammidae, found about rocks and kelp in the northern Pacific Ocean.

green-ly (grēn'li), adv.

With a green color or tinge; also, with vigorous growth or life; also, with inexperience; with the awkwardness or simplicity of inexperience (as, "I must assist you, I reckon, for you are setting very greenly about this gear": Scott's "Monastery," xxx.).—green'ness, n.

green-ock-ite (grē'nok-it), n. [Named (1840) from Lord Greenock.] A rare mineral consisting of cadmium sulphide.

green-room (grēn'röm), n. A retiring-room in a theater, for the use of the actors and actresses when not required on the stage; also, a room for the reception of new cloth from the weaving factory, or one in which to dry pottery before burning.

green-sand (grēn'sand), n. A variety of sandstone containing a silicate of iron and potassium (glauconite) which imparts to it a greenish hue. See *marl*¹, n.

Greenling (Hexagrammos stelleri).

(variable) đ as d or j, ş as s or sh, ţ as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

green-shank (grēn'shank), n. An old-world sandpiper, Totanus glottis (or nebularius).

green-sick-ness (grēn'sik'nes), n. Chlorosis. — green'-sick, a.

green-stone (grēn'stōn), n. Any of various dark-greenish eruptive rocks; also, nephrite.

green-sward (grēn'swārd), n. Turf green with grass. — green'sward'ed, a.

greenth (grēnth), n. Green color, as of vegetation; verdure.

Green-wich (grin'ij) time. The mean solar time of the meridian of Greenwich, near London.

green-wood (grēn'wūd), n. A wood or forest when green, as in summer.

green-y (grē'ni). I. a. Greenish. II. n; pl. greenies (-niz). A greenhorn; a freshman at a college, etc. (as, "He was entered among the greenies of this famous university [at Leyden]": Southey's "Doctor," ch. 1.). [Colloq.]

greet¹ (grēt), v. i. [AS. grētan, grētan, = Icel. grāta = Goth. grētan, weep.] To cry; weep; lament. [Now Sc. and north. Eng.]

greet² (grēt), v. [AS. grētan = D. groeten = G. grüssen, greet.] I. tr. To address with some form of salutation; salute; hail; welcome; also, to meet (the eye, etc.). II. intr. To give salutations on meeting. — greet'er, n. — greet'ing, n. The act or words of one who greets; a salutation; a welcome.

greg-a-rine (grēg'a-rin), n. [NL. Gregarina, the typical genus, < L. gregarius, E. gregarious.] One of the Gregarinida, a group of protozoans which are parasitic in insects, worms, crustaceans, etc.

gre-ga-ri-ous (grē-gā'ri-us), a. [L. gregarius, < grex (greg-), flock, herd.] Living in flocks or herds, as animals; hence, disposed to associate with others, as persons; also, pertaining to a flock or crowd; in bot., growing in open clusters. — gre-ga'ri-ous-ly, adv. — gre-ga'ri-ous-ness, n.

Greg-go-ri-an (grē-gō'ri-an), a. Of or pertaining to Gregory I., pope from 590 to 604 (as, Gregorian music, the liturgical music of the Roman Catholic and other churches), or Gregory XIII., pope from 1572 to 1585 (as, the Gregorian calendar, the reformed Julian calendar now in use, according to which the ordinary year consists of 365 days, and a leap-year of 366 days occurs in every year whose number is exactly divisible by 4 except centenary years whose numbers are not exactly divisible by 400, as 1700, 1800, and 1900: see New Style, at style, n.).

Greg-o-ry's (grēg'ō-riz) pow'der. [From J. Gregory (1753–1821), Scotch physician.] A powder composed of rhubarb, magnesium oxide, and ginger: used as a laxative.

grei-sen (grī'zn), n. [G.] A rock composed chiefly of quartz and mica, common in the tin mines of Saxony, etc., and supposed to be an altered form of granite.

gre-mi-al (grē'mi-əl). [LL. gremialis (as n., ML. gremiale), < L. gremium, lap, bosom.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the lap or bosom; hence, intimate; also, dwelling within the bosom of a university, society, etc.; resident; also, of or pertaining to the internal affairs of a corporation or society, or confined to its members. II. n. A cloth placed on a bishop's lap when he sits in celebrating mass or in conferring orders; also, a resident member of a university, society, etc.

gre-nade (grē-nād'), n. [F. grenade = Sp. granada, pomegranate, grenade, < L. granatus, having grains or seeds (granatum, pomegranate), < granum, E. *grain*².] A pomegranate; also, a small explosive shell, usually thrown from the hand; also, a missile of glass which disperses volatile chemical contents on breaking, as for extinguishing fire.

gren-a-dier (gren-ā-dēr'), n. [F., < grenade, E. grenade.]

Greenshank.

Orig., a soldier who threw grenades; later, a member of a company composed of the tallest men of a regiment (hence applied contemptuously to a tall, masculine woman); now, in the British army, a member of the first regiment of household infantry ("Grenadier dil'a").

gren-a-dil-la (gren-ā-dil'ā), n. Same as granadilla.

gren-a-dine (gren-ā-dēn'), n. [F. grenadine, < grenade, pomegranate: see grenade.] A syrup made from pomegranate juice; also, a thin openwork fabric of silk, wool, or other fiber, used for women's dresses, etc.

Gresh-am's (grēsh'amz) law.

[From Sir T. Gresham (died 1579), English financier.] In British polit. econ., the tendency of the inferior of two forms of currency in circulation together to circulate more freely than, or to the exclusion of, the superior, due to the hoarding of the latter: observed and commented on by Gresham, but well explained by earlier economic writers.

gres-so-ri-al (grē-sō'ri-āl), a. [NL. gressorius, < L. gradi, walk, go: see gradient.] Having the habit of walking; adapted for walking, as the feet of some birds. Also gres-so'ri-ous.

grew (grō). Preterit of grow.

grew'some, etc. See gruesome, etc.

grey (grā), etc. See gray, etc.

grey-hound (grā'hound), n. [AS. grīghund = Icel. grey-hundr, greyhound (Icel. grey, dog); not connected with gray.] One of a breed of tall, slender dogs notable for keen sight and for fleetness; fig., a swift ship, esp. an ocean steamship.

grib-ble (grib'l), n. [Origin obscure.] A small marine isopod crustacean, Limnoria terebrans, which destroys submerged timber by boring into it; also, any of certain related species.

grice (grīs), n. [ME. grise, from Scand.: cf. Icel. griss, Sw. and Dan. gris.] A young pig. [Now Sc. and prov. Eng.]

grid (grid), n. [Back-formation from gridiron.] A grating; also, a gridiron; in elect., a ridged or perforated lead plate used in a storage-battery; in wireless teleg. and teleph., one of the interior elements of a vacuum-tube (see vacuum-tube).

grid-dle (grid'l), n. [OF. gredil, var. of greil, gridiron: see *grill*¹.] A gridiron (now prov.); also, a plate, as of iron or soapstone, on which cakes are cooked over a fire. — grid'-dle, v. t.; -dled, -dling. To cook on a griddle. — grid'-dle-cake, n. A thin cake of batter cooked on a griddle; a flapjack.

gride (grid), v. t. or i.; grided, griding. [Var. of *gird*².] To pierce or cut (archaic); also, to grate or scrape harshly. — gride, n. A griding or grating sound: as, "The gride of hatchets fiercely thrown, On wigwam-log and tree and stone" (Whittier's "Mogg Megone," iii.).

grid-i-ron (grid'i'ern), n. [ME. gredirne, earlier gredire, appar. an altered form of gredil, E. griddle.] A utensil having parallel bars to broil meat, etc., on; also, something resembling this; a framework on which victims were formerly tortured by fire; a frame for supporting a ship undergoing repairs, etc.; a structure above the stage of a theater, from which the drop-scenes, etc., are manipulated; in foot-ball, the field of play, so called on account of the transverse white lines crossing it every five yards (U. S.). — grid'i'ron, v. t. To mark with parallel bars or lines like those of a gridiron.

grid-leak (grid'lēk), n. In wireless teleg. and teleph., a high-resistance device which permits excessive charges on the grid to leak off or escape.

grief (grēf), n. [OF. F. grief, < grever, E. grieve.] Hardship or trouble caused or endured; an injury, wrong, British Grenadier of 1745, blowing his fuse to light a grenade.

fat, fāte, fūr, fall, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, flect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

or grievance†; displeasure† or offense†; also, a wound†, sore†, or ailment†; physical suffering or pain† (as, "Can honour . . . take away the grief of a wound? no": Shakspeare's "1 Henry IV.," v. i. 134); now, keen mental suffering or distress over affliction or loss; sharp sorrow; painful regret; a cause or occasion of keen distress or sorrow (as, "A foolish son is a grief to his father": Prov. xvii. 25); also, mischance or disaster (as, to come to grief).—grief'-ful, a. Full of grief; sorrowful.—grief'-less, a. Free from grief.—grief'-strick'en, a. Stricken or smitten with grief or sorrow; afflicted.

griev-ance (grē'vans), n. [OF. greivance, < grever, E. grieve.] Oppression† or injury†; suffering† or distress†; also, something oppressive or annoying; a wrong (real or fancied); a matter for resentment or complaint.

grieve (grēv), v.; grieved, grieving. [OF. F. grever, < L. gravare, load, weigh down, oppress, < gravis, heavy, E. grave.] I. tr. To oppress†, injure†, or wrong†; vex†, displease†, or offend†; also, to hurt or pain physically†; also, to visit with affliction or trouble (obs. or archaic: as, "He doth not afflict willingly nor grieve the children of men," Lam. iii. 33); in later use, to distress mentally, or cause to feel grief or sorrow (as, to be grieved by sad news, unkind words, or wrong-doing); also, to feel or show grief for (poetic). II. intr. To feel grief; sorrow; mourn.—griev'er, n.—griev'-ing-ly, adv.

griev-ous (grē'vus), a. [OF. grevos, < grever, E. grieve.] Burdensome or oppressive, as a tax; hence, bringing serious suffering or distress, as injury, wrong, trouble, etc.; severe, as pain, wounds, etc.; heinous, as a fault or crime; also, causing grief or sorrow (as, "This news is bad indeed . . . 'Tis very grievous to be thought upon": Shakspeare's "Richard III.," i. i. 141); full of or expressing grief (as, a grievous cry); sorrowful.—griev'-ous-ly, adv.—griev'-ous-ness, n.

griff (grif), n. [Origin obscure.] A deep, narrow glen or ravine. [North. Eng.]

griff² (grif), n. [F. griffe.] A claw; also, part of a loom. See *griffe*¹.

griff³ (grif), n. See *griffe*².

griff⁴ (grif), n. Same as *griffin*³.

griffe¹ (grif), n. [F. griffe, claw; from Teut., and akin to E. gripe.] In looms, a series of horizontal parallel bars for raising and lowering the hooks that lift the warp threads; in arch., an ornament at the base of a column, projecting from the torus toward a corner of the plinth.

Griffes.—1, from Vézelay, France; 2, from Poissy, France; end of 12th century.

griffe²

(grif), n. [F.] The offspring of a negro and a mulatto; also, a mulatto; also, a person of mixed negro and American Indian blood. [Southern U. S.]

grif-fyn¹ (grif'in), n. [OF. grifon, gripon (F. griffon), < L. griffus, for gryps, < Gr. γρύψ, (fabulous) griffin.] A fabulous monster usually having the head and wings of an eagle and the body of a lion; also, a vulture of the genus Gyps, esp. G. fulvus of southern Europe.

grif-fin² (grif'in), n. Same as *griffe*².

grif-fin³ (grif'in), n. [Origin uncertain: cf. *griffin*¹.] In India and the East, a new-comer or greenhorn; also, a racehorse that runs for the first time.—grif-fin-hood (-hūd), n. The state or time of being a griffin.

Medieval Griffin.—Porch of the Duomo, Verona, Italy.

grif-fon (grif'on), n. [F. griffon: see *griffin*¹.] A griffin (either fabulous monster or vulture); also, one of a breed of coarse-haired hunting-dogs combining the qualities of the pointer and the setter; also, a small, wiry-haired pet dog of Belgian origin, resembling a Scotch terrier.

grig (grig), n. [Origin uncertain.] A small or young eel; also, a cricket or a grasshopper; also, a cheerful, lively person.

gri-gri¹ (grē'grē), n. See greegree.

gri-gri² (grē'grē), n. Same as grugru.

grill¹ (gril), n. [F. gril, gridiron, OF. greil, grail, gridiron, grating, < L. craticulum, dim. of cratis, wickerwork, hurdle: cf. grille. Later senses of *grill*¹, n., are from *grill*¹, v.] A gridiron; also, a grill-room; also, the act of grilling; also, a dish of grilled meat, etc.—grill¹, v. [F. griller, < gril.] I. tr. To broil on a gridiron or other apparatus over or before a fire; hence, to torment with heat; fig., to subject, as a witness, to severe examination or questioning; also, to mark with a series of parallel bars like those of a grill. II. intr. To undergo broiling.

grill² (gril), n. See grille.

grill-age (gril'āj), n. [F. grillage, < grille: see grille.] A heavy framework of crossed timbers, used for foundations in soft soils or the like.

grille (gril), n. [F. grille, grating, OF. greille, gridiron, < ML. graticula, for L. craticula, gridiron, dim. of cratis, wickerwork, hurdle: cf. *grate*¹ and *grill*¹.] A grating for or openwork barrier, as for a gate, usually of metal and often of decorative design.—grilled, a. Furnished with a grille.

grill-er (gril'er), n. One who or that which grills.

grill-room (gril'rōm), n. A room or restaurant where meats, etc., are grilled and served.

grilse (grils), n. [Origin uncertain.] A salmon which has ceased to be a smolt and is ready to return, or has returned, from the sea to the river for the first time, and which subsequently develops into an adult.

grim (grim), a.; compar. grimmer, superl. grimmiest. [AS. grim = OS. and OHG. grim = Icel. grimmr, grim.] Fierce, savage, or cruel in a stern, merciless way, as persons or animals; sternly harsh, as necessity; merciless, as strife; stern or uncompromising, as determination; involving, threatening, or suggesting harshness or severity, as measures, purposes, words, etc.; also, of a fierce, stern, or forbidding aspect (as, "Or, with countenance grim, Glared on him passing": Milton's "Paradise Lost," x. 713); repellent or uninviting to the view; also, of a sinister or ghastly character or suggestiveness (as, a grim pastime; "grim jokes about graves, worms, and epitaphs," Peacock's "Nightmare Abbey," iii.).

grim-mace (grī-mās'), n. [F. grimace; origin uncertain.] A wry face; a facial contortion; hence, an affected look; affectation or pretense.—grim-mace', v. i.; -maced, -macing. To make grimaces.—grim-ma'cer (-mā'sēr), n.

grim-mal-kin (grī-mal'kin or -māl'kin), n. [Appar. for gray malkin: see malkin.] A cat, esp. an old female cat: as, "A strange grimalkin . . . clambered hastily over the fence, and vanished" (Hawthorne's "House of the Seven Gables," xix.).

grime (grim), v. t.; grimed, griming. [ME.: cf. MLG. grimet, black-streaked, spotted.] To cover with dirt; soil; begrime: as, "My face I'll grime with filth" (Shakspeare's "King Lear," ii. 3. 9).—grime, n. Dirt or foul matter, esp. on or ingrained in a surface.

grim-ily (grī'mi-li), adv. In a grimy manner.—grim'i-ness, n.

grim-ly (grim'li), adv. In a grim manner.—grim'ness, n.

grim-y (grī'mi), a.; compar. grimmier, superl. grimmest. Covered with grime; dirty: as, "In his grimy hands he held a knotted stick" (Dickens's "Barnaby Rudge," xxxvii.).

grin¹ (grin), v.; grinned, grinning. [AS. grennian, grin: cf. G. greinen and grinsen, grin.] I. intr. To draw back the lips so as to show the teeth, as a snarling dog or a person in pain; also, to smile broadly, or with a wide distention of the mouth. II. tr. To express or produce by grinning.

Grille.—San Giacomo di Rialto, Venice.

—grin¹, n. The act or an act of grinning; a broad smile.

grin² (grin), n. [AS. grin.] A snare, gin, or noose. [Archaic or prov.]

grind (grind), v.; ground, also grinded, grinding. [AS. grindan, grind: cf. L. frendere, gnash the teeth, grind to pieces.] I. tr. To reduce to fine particles, as by pounding or crushing; bray, triturate, or pulverize; also, to wear, smooth, or sharpen by friction (as, to grind a lens; to grind an ax or a knife); also, to rub harshly or gratingly; rub or grate together (as, to grind one's teeth); also, to operate by turning a crank, as a coffee-mill or a hand-organ; also, to oppress or torment (as, "Laws grind the poor, and rich men rule the law": Goldsmith's "Traveller," 386); also, to teach in a dull, laborious manner (as, "to get their living . . . by grinding Latin and Greek": Thackeray's "Vanity Fair," lvi.); study or learn by close application (college slang); also, to produce by pulverizing, turning a crank, etc. (as, to grind flour; to grind out a tune). II. intr. To perform the act or operation of grinding something (as, "Though the mills of God grind slowly, yet they grind exceeding small": Longfellow's tr. Logau's "Retribution"); also, to be or become ground; also, to rub harshly; grate; also, to work or study laboriously (colloq.).—grind, n. The act of grinding; a grinding sound; also, laborious work (colloq.: as, the grind of toil); also, a laborious student (college slang).

grin-de-lia (grin-dē'liä), n. [NL.; from D. H. Grindel (1777-1836), Russian scientist.] Any of the coarse, yellow-flowered asteraceous herbs constituting the genus Grindelia; also, the dried leaves and flowering tops of certain species of this plant, used in medicine.

grind-er (grin'dér), n. One who or that which grinds; a sharpener of tools; a molar tooth; sometimes, a tutor or coach.

grind-er-y (grin'dér-i), n.; pl. -ies (-iz). A place where tools, etc., are ground; also, leather-workers' materials, tools, etc. (Eng.).

grind-ing (grin'ding), p. a. That grinds; grating or strident, as sounds; burdensome or oppressive, as toil; excruciating or racking, as pain.—grind-ing-ly, adv.

grind-stone (grind'stön), n. A rotating solid stone wheel used for grinding, sharpening, etc.

grin-go (gring'gō), n.; pl. -gos (-gōz). [Mex. Sp. use of Sp. gringo, gibberish.] Among Spanish-Americans, a foreigner, esp. an American or Englishman.

grin-ner (grin'ér), n. One who grins.

grip¹ (grip), n. [AS. gripe = G. griff, grasp, hold, = Icel. grípr, possession; from the root of E. *gripe*².] The act of grasping; a seizing and holding fast; specif., a special mode of clasping hands, as among members of a secret society; fig., grasp, hold, or control (as, to be in the grip of poverty; to lose one's grip on some situation or affair); mental or intellectual hold (as, to have a grip of a subject); also, something which seizes and holds, as a clutching device on a cable-car; also, a handle or hilt; also, a gripsack (U. S.).—at grips, hand to hand; in close combat.—grip¹, v.; gripped, gripping. I. tr. To grasp or seize firmly; gripe; hold fast; fig., to take hold on (the mind, etc.); hold the interest or attention of (a person); also, to attach by a grip or clutch. II. intr. To take firm hold; hold fast, as an anchor; fig., to take hold on the mind; hold the interest or attention (as, a story which grips).

grip², n. See grippe.

gripe¹ (grip), n. [L. gryps: see *griffin*¹.] A griffin (fabulous monster); also, a vulture (as, "a white hind under the gripe's sharp claws": Shakspeare's "Lucrece," 543).

gripe² (grip), v.; griped, gripping. [AS. grīpan = D. grijpen = G. greifen = Icel. grīpa = Goth. greipan, gripe, seize: cf. *grip*¹, *griffe*¹, grippe, and gripe.] I. tr. To seize and hold firmly; grip; grasp; clutch; also, to clench (the hand, etc.); also, to distress or oppress; also, to produce pain in, as if by constriction. II. intr. To grasp or clutch, as a miser at gain; also, to produce pain in the bowels as if by constriction; also, to suffer pain in the bowels; naut., to tend to come up into the wind.—gripe², n. The act of gripping, grasping, or clutching; a fast hold; fig., grasp, hold, or control; also, that which grips or clutches; also, a handle, hilt, etc.; in pathol., an intermittent spasmodic pain in the bowels; naut., the forefoot; pl., lashings for securing boats.—grip-er (grī'pér), n.

grip-man (grīp'mān), n.; pl. -men. The man who works the grip on a cable-car.

grippe (grip, F. grēp), n. [F., < gripper, seize; from Teut., and akin to E. *gripe*².] Influenza.—grip-pal (grīp'-al), a.

grip-per (grīp'ér), n. One who grips; a gripping device.

grip-ping (grīp'ing), p. a. That grips; esp., that catches and holds the attention or interest.—grip-ping-ly, adv.

grip-ple (grīp'pl), a. [AS. grīpul, akin to grīpan, E. *gripe*².] Gripping; grasping; avaricious: as, "While grippe owners still refuse To others what they cannot use" (Scott's "Marmion," vi., Introd.). [Archaic or prov.]

grip-sack (grīp'sak), n. A traveler's handbag or valise. [U. S.]

gri-saille (grī-zāl', F. grē-zā-y'), n. [F., < gris, gray: see *grizzle*².] A method of decorative painting in monochrome in various shades of gray, as for representing objects as if in relief; a painting so executed.

Gri-sel-da (grī-zel'dä), n. [From Griselda, a heroine of old romance, famed for her patience under cruel ordeals imposed upon her as a wife and mother.] A woman of exemplary meekness and patience.

gris-e-ous (grīs'ē-us or grīz'-), a. [ML. griseus = F. gris; from Teut.: see *grizzle*².] Gray; esp., pearl-gray.

gri-sette (grī-zet', F. grē-zet), n. [F., a common gray fabric worn by working-girls, a working-girl, < gris, gray: see *grizzle*².] A French working-girl or shop-girl: as, "The beautiful grisette rose up . . . and, going behind the counter, reached down a parcel" (Sterne's "Sentimental Journey," The Gloves).

gris-ly¹ (grīz'li), a.; compar. grislier, superl. grisliest. [AS. grislic, horrible: cf. AS. āgrisan, shudder.] Such as to cause a shuddering horror; frightful or dreadful in an appalling or ghastly way, as a monster, demon, or specter; horrible; gruesome; ghastly; also, less definitely, terrible; formidable; grim.—gris-li-ness, n.

gris-ly² (grīz'li), a. See grizzly.

grison (grī'sōn or grīz'ōn), n. [F. grison, < gris, gray: see *grizzle*².] A carnivorous musteline quadruped, Galictis vittata, of South and Central America, having the upper surface of the body bluish-gray and the lower dark-brown.

grist (grist), n. [AS. grīst, < grīdan, E. grind.] Grain to be ground; also, ground grain; also, a quantity of grain for grinding at one time, or the meal produced from it; fig., a quantity or lot (colloq., U. S.).

gris-tle (grīs'tl), n. [AS. gristle.] Cartilage.—gris-tly (grīs'tli), a. Of the nature of, containing, or pertaining to gristle; cartilaginous.

grist-mill (grīst'mīl), n. A mill for grinding grain.

grit¹ (grit), a. Scotch form of great.

grit² (grit), n. [AS. grēot = OHG. grioz, G. griess, grit, = Icel. grjót, stones, rubble.] Formerly, sand or gravel; now, fine, stony or hard particles such as are deposited like dust from the air or occur as impurities in food, etc.; also, a coarse-grained siliceous rock, as sandstone; also, the structure of stone with regard to fineness, coarseness, etc.; also, firmness of character; indomitable spirit; pluck.—grit², v.; gritted, gritting. I. intr. To give forth a grating sound; grate. II. tr. To grate or grind (the teeth).

grith (grith), n. [AS. grith, from Scand.: cf. Icel. grídh, peace, truce, sanctuary, orig. domicile, home.] Security or protection; safe-conduct; esp., peace or protection guaranteed under particular conditions as to time, place, or person; also, a place of security or protection; a sanctuary or asylum. [Archaic or hist.]

Grison.

fat, fāte, fār, fāll, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, člet, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; tū, then; y, you;

grits (grits), n. pl. [AS. grytt, pl. grytta, gryttan, = G. grütze, grits: cf. groats.] Grain, esp. oats or wheat, hulled and often coarsely ground.

grit-ty (grit'ti), a.; compar. grittier, superl. grittiest. Consisting of, containing, or resembling grit; sandy; of the nature of or containing fine, stony or hard particles; also (colloq., U. S.), resolute and courageous; plucky.—grit-ti-ness, n.

griv-et (griv'et), n. [F. grivet: cf. F. gris, gray, and vert, green.] A small African monkey, Cercopithecus griseiviridis, with a greenish-gray back.

griz-zle¹ (griz'l), v. i.; -zled, -zling. [Origin obscure.] To show the teeth; grin or laugh, esp. mockingly; also, to fret or sulk; whine; whimper. [Prov. or colloq.]

griz-zle² (griz'l). [OF. grisel, < (OF. and F.) gris, gray; from Teut. (cf. G. grais, gray, hoary).] I. a. Gray; grizzled. II. n. The color gray; also, a gray-haired old man; a gray animal, esp. a horse; also, gray hair; a gray wig.—griz'zle², v. t. or i.; -zled, -zling. To make or become gray.—griz'zled, a. Gray; grizzled.—griz'zly. I. a.; compar. grizzlier, superl. grizliest. Somewhat gray; grayish: as, the grizzly bear (a large, ferocious bear, Ursus horribilis, of western North America, varying in color from grayish to brownish). II. n.; pl. griz-zlies (-liz). A grizzly bear.

Grizzly Bear.

groan (grōn), v. [AS. grānian; perhaps akin to E. grin.] I. intr. To utter a deep inarticulate sound expressive of grief or pain; moan; hence, to make a deep sound resembling a groan; resound harshly; also, to suffer lamentably (beneath, etc.): as, "As Atlas groan'd The world beneath, we groan beneath an hour," Young's "Night Thoughts," ii. 129; be overburdened; also, to call painfully or urgently (for: often fig.). II. tr. To utter or salute with groans.—groan, n. A groaning utterance or sound.—groan'er, n.—groan'ing-ly, adv.

groat (grōt), n. [OD. groot, lit. 'great' or 'thick' (coin).] An English silver coin, issued 1351–1662, worth fourpence.

Obverse.

Reverse.

Groat of Edward III. — British Museum.

groats (grōts), n. pl. [ME. grotes, pl.: cf. AS. grot, fragment, particle, also E. grit², grits, and grout¹.] Hulled and crushed (or whole) grain, as wheat or oats.

gro-bi-an (grō'bi-ān), n. [G., < ML. Grobianus, a fictitious personage in old German literature, < G. grob, coarse, rude: cf. gruff.] A clownish, slovenly person. [Archaic or literary.]

gro-cer (grō'sér), n. [OF. grossier, < ML. grossarius, wholesale dealer, < LL. grossus, E. gross.] A wholesale dealer; also, a dealer in general supplies for the table, as flour, sugar, coffee, etc., and in other articles of household use.—gro'cer-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). The commodities sold by grocers (usually in pl.); also, the business of a grocer; also, a grocer's shop (U. S.).

grog (grog), n. [Said to be from 'Old Grog,' the English Admiral Vernon (with allusion to his program cloak), who in 1740 ordered the mixture to be served, instead of pure spirits, to sailors.] A mixture of spirits and water; hence, strong drink.—grog'ger-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). A grogshop. [U. S.]—grog'gy, a.; compar. groggier, superl.

groggiest. Tipsy; hence, staggering from exhaustion or blows, as in a fight; shaky or unsteady. [Colloq.]—grog'-gi-ness, n.

grog-ram (grog'ram), n. [F. gros grain: see grosgrain.] A coarse fabric of silk, of silk and mohair or wool, or of wool, formerly in use.

grog-shop (grog'shop), n. A shop where grog or spirituous liquor is sold.

groin (groin), n. [Earlier gryne, ME. grynde: cf. AS. grynde, abyss, akin to grund, bottom, E. ground².] The fold or hollow on either side of the body where the thigh joins the abdomen; in arch., the curved line or edge formed by the intersection of two vaults; also, in civil engin., a structure of timber, masonry, or other material, built out into the sea from a beach or shore, for the purpose of retaining the sand, etc., washed up by the tide and raising up a barrier against the waves (as, "Our foreshore stretches far through sea-gate, dyke, and groin," Kipling's "The Dykes": also spelled groyne).—groin, v. t. In arch., to form with groins (as, "He groined his arches and matched his beams": Lowell's "Vision of Sir Launfal," ii, Prelude); also, in civil engin. (also spelled groyne), to furnish with groins, as a beach; raise groins against, as the sea.—groin'ing, n. In arch., groined vaulting; in civil engin. (also spelled groyning), the building of groins; also, groins collectively; a system of groins.

Medieval Groins, in early 12th century vaulting. — A, A, groins.

Gro-lier (grō-lyā), a. Of or pertaining to Jean Grolier de Servières (1479–1565), a French bibliophile, noted for his bindings: as, Grolier design (a style of decoration in book-binding, consisting of bold lines of gold curiously interlaced in geometrical forms and intermixed with delicate leaves and sprays).

grom-met, grum-met (grom'et, grum'et), n. [F. (obs.) gromette, var. of gourmette, curb of bridle, < gourmer, curb; origin unknown.] A ring of rope, used for various nautical purposes, etc.; an eyelet of rope, metal, or the like, as on the edge of a sail.

Gr -mmet.

grom-well (grom'wel), n. [OF. gromil (F. grémil); origin uncertain.] Any plant of the boraginaceous genus Lithospermum, comprising hairy herbs with white, yellow, or blue flowers and smooth, stony nutlets.

groot-groot (grō'grō), n. See grugru.

groom¹ (grōm), n. [ME. grom, grome, boy, man, groom; origin uncertain.] A boy; also, a man, esp. of low station (archaic: as, "What sprinklings of blithe company! Of lasses and of shepherd grooms," Wordsworth's "White Doe of Rylstone," i.); also, a man-servant, now usually one in charge of horses; also, any of several officers of the English royal household.—groom¹, v. t. To tend (horses) as a groom; hence, to tend carefully as to person and dress; in general, to make neat or tidy.

groom² (grōm), n. Shortened form of bridegroom.—grooms'-man (-mān), n.; pl. -men. A man who attends the bridegroom at a wedding.

groove (grōv), n. [ME. grofe = D. groef = G. grube = Icel. grōf = Goth. grōba, lit. 'something dug'; from the root of E. grave¹.] A pit, shaft, or mine (now prov. Eng.); also, a furrow or channel, esp. as cut by a tool; fig., a fixed routine.—groove, v. t.; grooved, grooving. To cut a groove in; channel; furrow; also, to form by furrowing.—groov'y, a. Of, pertaining to, or resembling a groove; also (colloq.), having a tendency to a routine of action or life; inclined to a narrow course of effort or thought.

grope (grōp), v.; groped, groping. [AS. grāpian, < grāp, the grip or grasp, < grāpan, E. gripe².] I. intr. To feel about with the hands; feel one's way; fig., to search blindly or uncertainly. II. tr. To feel with the hands; also, to seek or find by or as by feeling (as, "I groped my way out of the room": Irving's "Tales of a Traveler," i. 7).—grop-er (grō'pēr), n.—grop'ing-ly, adv.

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n̄, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

gros-beak (grōs'bēk), n. [F. gros-bec, 'large beak.'] Any of various finches or similar birds having a large, stout conical bill.

grosch-en (grōsh'en), n. [G., < MHG. gros, < ML. grossus, name of a coin, < LL. grossus, thick, E. gross.] A small silver coin of Germany, no longer current; also, the current 10-pfennig German nickel coin (colloq.).

gros-grain (grō'grān), n. [F. gros grain, Rose-breasted Grosbeak (Zamelodia, or Habia ludoviciana).] 'large grain': cf. grog-ram.] A closely woven silk fabric with heavy transverse threads and but little luster.

gross (grōs). [OF. F. gros, large (as n., grosse, twelve dozen), < LL. grossus, thick.] I. a. Large, big, or bulky (as, "The crows and choughs that wing the midway air Show scarce so gross as beetles": Shakspeare's "King Lear," iv. 6. 14); burly, corpulent, or fat, as a person, esp. in a coarse or repulsive way; rank, as vegetation; thick or dense, as vapor; compact or solid, as a body of troops; also, coarse in grain, fiber, or texture, as meal, sand, stone, cloth, etc.; of coarse or inferior quality, as food, dress, wares, etc.; now, of food, a feeder, etc., uncleanly or disgusting; fig., dull or stupid (archaic: as, "For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing," Mat. xiii. 15); rude, unrefined, or ignorant (archaic); morally coarse, indelicate, or indecent, as persons, manners, language, pleasures, etc. (as, "The terms which are delicate in one age become gross in the next": Macaulay's "Essays," Leigh Hunt); also, plain, evident, or palpable; glaring or flagrant (as, a gross error; gross injustice); also, whole, entire, or total, esp. without having been subjected to deduction, as for charges, loss, etc. (as, gross profits: cf. net); general (opposed to particular). II. n. The main body, the bulk, or the mass (as, in the gross, or in gross); also (pl. gross), a unit consisting of twelve dozen, or 144 (as, five gross; a great gross, twelve gross, or 144 dozen).—gross'ly, adv.—gross'ness, n.

gros-su-la-ri-a-ceous (grōs'ū-lā-rī-ā'shius), a. [NL. grossularia, gooseberry bush, < F. groseille, gooseberry or currant; from Teut.] Belonging to the Grossulariaceæ, a family of plants comprising the gooseberry and currant.

grot (grōt), n. [F. grotte, < It. grotta: see grotto.] Agrotto: as, "mermaid's alabaster grot" (Scott's "Lord of the Isles," iii. 28). [Now poetic.]

gro-tesque (grō-tesk'), [F. grotesque, < It. grotesco (as n., grotesca, grotesque decoration, such appar. as was found in ancient excavated dwellings), < grotta: see grotto.] I. a. Fantastic in the shaping and combination of forms, as decorative work combining incongruously human and animal figures with scrolls, foliage, etc. (as, "Tis grotesque painting; the fine woman ends in a fish's tail": Dryden's Dedication, in tr. Virgil's "Æneid"); hence, odd or unnatural in shape, appearance, or character; fantastically ugly or absurd; bizarre. II. n. Grotesque decorative work; a grotesque design or figure; hence, any grotesque object or thing.—gro-tesque'ly, adv.—gro-tesque'ness, n.—gro-tes'quer-y, gro-tes'quer-ie (-tes'kēr-i), n.; pl. -ies (-iz). Grotesque work; something grotesque; grotesque character.

grot-to (grōt'ō), n.; pl. grottoes or grottos (-ōz). [It. grotta, < L. crypta, subterranean passage or chamber, cave, E. crypt.] A cave or cavern; also, an artificial cavern-like recess or structure.

grouch (grōuch), v. i. [Cf. grudge.] To be sulky or morose; show discontent. [Colloq.]—grouch, n. A sulky or morose mood; also, a morose person. [Colloq.]

Rose-breasted Grosbeak (Zamelodia, or Habia ludoviciana).

Grotesque Work (Italian); 16th century.

—grouch'y, a. Sulky; morose; sullenly discontented. [Colloq.]

ground¹ (ground). Preterit and past participle of grind.—ground¹, p. a. Reduced to fine particles by grinding; also, having the surface abraded or roughened by or as by grinding (as, ground glass, which is so treated in order to destroy its transparency).

ground² (ground). [AS. grund = D. grond = G. grund, bottom, ground: cf. Goth. grundu-waddjus, 'ground-wall,' foundation.] I. n. The bottom† (as, the ground of a vessel; the ground of the heart); specif., the solid bottom underlying a body of water (now chiefly naut.: as, to strike ground in taking soundings); also, the underlying or main surface, or background, in painting, decorative work, lace, etc.; also, the foundation or basis of anything (now only fig.: as, the ground on which a theory rests); a reason or motive (as, to be dismissed on the ground of incompetence; one's grounds for an action); sometimes, a valid reason (as, to have no grounds for a statement); also, the earth as an underlying surface (as, to fall to the ground); the earth's solid surface (as, above or under ground); firm or dry land as opposed to the water or sea; land as owned, occupied, used, etc., or as having a special character (as, a tract of ground; a stretch of hilly ground); a particular portion or extent of land (as, a rising ground); a tract of land occupied, or appropriated to a special use (often in pl.: as, a house and grounds; baseball grounds); a particular tract or area on the globe (as, fishing-grounds); a space or position taken or defended (as, to hold one's ground); also, area or distance on the earth (as, to gain ground; to cover considerable ground in a search: often fig.); also, earth or soil (as, stony ground); also, pl., dregs or sediment (as, coffee-grounds); also, sing., in elect., a connection (accidental or intentional) of a conductor with the earth.

II. a. Pertaining to the ground; situated on or at, or adjacent to, the surface of the earth (as, the ground floor of a building); also, fundamental or basic (as, ground bass, in music, a fundamental bass part of four or eight bars, continually repeated throughout a whole movement).—ground², v. I. tr. To place on a foundation; found; fix firmly; settle or establish; fig., to instruct in elements or first principles; also, to lay or set on the ground (as, to ground arms); also, to furnish with a ground or background, as decorative work, etc.; naut., to run aground; in elect., to connect (a conductor, etc.) with the ground. II. intr. To have a basis; depend or rely; also, to come to or strike the ground; run aground (as, "Romero, himself, whose ship had grounded, sprang out of a port-hole and swam ashore": Motley's "Dutch Republic," iv. 1).

ground-bait (ground'bāt), n. Bait dropped to the bottom of the water to attract fish.

ground-con-nec-tion (ground'kō-nek'shən), n. In elect., a connection of a conductor with the earth; a ground.

ground-dove (ground'duv), n. Any of certain small doves or pigeons of terrestrial habits, esp. Columbigallina passerina, of the southern U. S. ground-ed-ly (groun'ded-li), adv. In a well-grounded or well-founded manner; with good reason.

ground-er (groun'dēr), n. One who or that which grounds; in base-ball, etc., a ball knocked or thrown along the ground and not rising into the air.

ground-hog (ground'hog), n. The woodchuck; also, the aardvark.—ground-hog day, a popular name for Candlemas Day, Feb. 2, in allusion to the popular belief that the ground-hog (woodchuck) first comes out of his hole after hibernation on that day, and, if the sun is shining and he sees his shadow, retires to his hole for six weeks longer, which points to so much more wintry weather.

ground-ice (ground'is), n. Ice formed at the bottom of a Ground-dove (Columbigallina passerina).

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agony, intō, unite; (obsured) errant, operā, ardent, actor, nature; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

river or other body of water: supposed to be due to excessive radiation of heat from river bottoms, etc., on cold, clear nights.

ground-i-ivy (ground/'i'vi), n. A trailing menthaceous plant, Glechoma hederacea, bearing blue flowers.

ground-lau-rel (ground/'lâ' rel), n. Trailing arbutus (see arbutus).

ground-less (ground/'les), a. Without ground, basis, or reason.—

ground/less-ly, adv.—ground/less-ness, n.

ground-ling (ground/'ling), n. [See *ling*¹.] Anything that lives on the ground; also, any of various fishes that live at the bottom of the water; also, a spectator in the pit of a theater, which formerly was literally on the ground, having neither floor nor benches† (see Shakspeare's "Hamlet," iii. 2. 12); hence, a spectator, reader, or other person of crude or uncultivated tastes; an uncritical or uncultured person.

ground-mass (ground/'mâs), n. The crystalline, granular, or glassy base or matrix of a porphyry, in which the more prominent crystals are embedded.

ground-nut (ground/'nut), n. Any of various plants with edible underground portions, as the earthnut, Conopodium denudatum, and the peanut, Arachis hypogæa, and the American climbing fabaceous vine Apios apios, which has an edible tuberous root; also, the edible tuber, pod, or the like, of such a plant.

ground-pig (ground/'pig), n. The ground-hog or aardvark; also, the ground-rat.

ground-pine (ground/'pîn), n. A European menthaceous herb, Ajuga chamæpitys, having a resinous odor; also, a club-moss, Lycopodium obscurum, or some allied species.

ground-plan (ground/'plan), n. The plan of anything as it is disposed on the ground (as, the ground-plan of a field-work); specif., the plan of the ground floor, or of any floor, of a building; fig., any first or fundamental plan.

ground-plate (ground/'plât), n. A groundsill; also, a bed-plate under railroad-ties; in elect., a metal plate sunk in the ground to form the connection from a circuit to the earth.

ground-plum (ground/'plum), n. A leguminous plant, Astragalus crassicaarpus, of the American prairie regions, or its edible plum-shaped fruit; also, any of certain related species or the fruit.

ground-rat (ground/'rat), n. Any of several large African rodents of the genus Aulacodus (or Thryonomys); a ground-pig.

ground-rent (ground/'rent), n. The rent at which land is let for building purposes.

ground-sea (ground/'sê), n.

A heavy sea or swell on the ocean, occurring without apparent cause but thought to be due usually to distant gales.

ground-sel¹ (ground/'sel), n. [AS. grundeswelge, earlier gundeswelge, appar. < gund, matter, pus, + swelgan, swallow (from its use in medicine).] Any plant of the genus Senecio, of the aster family, as S. vulgaris, a weed bearing small yellow flowers and seeds with a white pappus.

ground-sill, ground-sel² (ground/'sil, -sel), n. [See *ground*².] The lowest horizontal timber of a frame or building, lying next to the ground; the sill.

ground-squir-rel (ground/'skwur'el), n. Any of various terrestrial rodents of the squirrel family, as of the genus Tamias (chipmunks), and of the genus Citellus (or Spermophilus) (see gopher).

ground=swell

(ground/'swel), n. A broad, deep swell or rolling of the sea, due to a distant storm, gale, or seismic disturbance.

ground=tackle (ground/'tak'l), n.

Cables, anchors, etc., for securing a vessel at anchor.

ground-work (ground/'wêrk), n. The foundation, base, or basis.

group (gröp), n. [F. groupe, < It. gruppo, gropo, knot, mass, heap, group; from Teut., and akin to E. crop.] An assemblage of figures arranged together in a work of art (as, "The huddled group of those who stand most distant are admirable representations of men abashed with their late unbelief": Steele, in "Guardian," 21); also, any assemblage of persons or things; a cluster; an aggregation; also, a number of persons or things ranged or considered together as being related in some way; often, a number of persons, as in a community, united by common ties or interests, as of race, class, occupation, or the like; specif., a number of individuals ranged together as being naturally related, in scientific classification; in geol., a division in the classification of stratified deposits, usually comprising those of a given geological era; in chem., a number of atoms in a molecule connected or arranged together in some special manner; a radical.—group, v. I. tr. To arrange in or form into a group or groups (as, "On the terrace were grouped perhaps a dozen people": H. G. Wells's "Mr. Britling," i. 2. § 3); also, to place in a group, as with others. II. intr. To form a group; be part of a group.—group'age (-âj), n. Grouping; arrangement in a group or groups.

group-er (grö'pêr), n. [Pg. garupa, appar. from some S. Amer. name.] Any of various serranoid fishes, esp. of the genus Epinephelus, as E. morio ('red grouper'), an important food-fish of the southern Atlantic coast of the U. S.

group-ing (grö'ping), n.

Placing or manner of being placed in a group or groups; relative arrangement of persons, things, parts, etc., viewed or considered together.

grouse¹ (grous), n.; pl. grouse. [Origin uncertain.] A reddish gallinaceous game-bird with feathered legs, Lagopus scoticus, of the British Isles ('red grouse'); also, any bird of the same subfamily, Tetraoninae (or of the same family, Tetraonidae), including many important game-birds, as Lyrurus tetrix ('black grouse') common on British heaths, Tetrao urogallus (the capercaillie, or wood-grouse) of the Old World, Canace canadensis ('Canada grouse') of the forests of northern North America, and Bonasa umbellus ('ruffed grouse') of the eastern U. S. and Canada.—grouse¹, v. i.; groused, grousing. To hunt or shoot grouse.

grouse² (grous), v. i.; groused, grousing. [Cf. grouch.] To grumble; complain: as, "They didn't grouse an' shirk Ground-ivy. — a, a flower.

African Ground-squirrel (Xerus rutilans).

Red Grouper (Epinephelus morio).

Ground-rat (Aulacodus swinderianus).

Red Grouse (Lagopus scoticus).

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

at an hour's extry work" (Kipling's "Men That Fought at Minden"). [Prov. or slang, Eng.]—grouse², n. An act of grousing; a complaint. [Prov. or slang, Eng.]—grous'er¹, n.

grous-er² (grou'zèr or -sèr), n. [Origin unknown.] A temporary pile or iron-shod pole driven into the bottom of a stream, etc., to hold a floating object in position, esp. such a pole passing through the hull or down the side of a boat; also, one of a series of projecting pieces, cleats, or lugs attached to the surface of the endless chain or belt (track) of the track-laying type of tractor (see caterpillar, n.), to prevent slipping when mud, sand, snow, or ice is encountered.

grout¹ (grout), n. [AS. grūt; akin to grits, groats, and grüt.] Coarse meal; pl., groats; also, sing., coarse porridge; also, wort before and during fermentation (obs. or prov.); also, sing. or pl., lees or grounds.

grout² (grout), n. [Appar. another use of *grout*¹.] A thin, coarse mortar; also, a finishing or setting coat of plaster for walls and ceilings.—grout², v. t. To fill up, form, or finish with grout; also, to use as grout.

grout-y (grout'i), a. [See *grout*¹.] Dreggy or muddy (prov. Eng.); threatening, as the weather (prov. Eng.); also, sulky or surly (colloq., U. S.).

grove (grōv), n. [AS. grāf.] A small wood or plantation of trees, esp. one used as a shady resort (as, "See there the olive grove of Academe, Plato's retirement": Milton's "Paradise Regained," iv. 244); also, in the Authorized Version of the Bible, an erroneous rendering of a Hebrew word now explained as meaning a wooden post set up near the altar of a Semitic god (see 2 Kings, xxi. 7); a rendering of a Hebrew word translated tamarisk tree in the Revised Version (see Gen. xxi. 33).

grovel (grov'l), v. i.; -eled or -elled, -eling or -elling. [From groveling, adv., taken as present participle.] To lie or move with the face downward and the body prostrate, esp. in abject humility, fear, etc.; fig., to humble one's self or act in an abject manner, as in fear or in mean servility; continue, esp. willingly or contentedly, in an abject condition; take pleasure in mean or base things.—grovel-er, grovel-er, n.

grovel-ing, grovel-ling (grov'l-ing), adv. [ME. groveling, grufelynge, < grufe, as in on grufe, in a groveling position, + -ling, E. *-ling*²: cf. Icel. ā grūfu, in a groveling position, face downward, also grūfa, to grovel, cower.] Face downward, in a prostrate position (as, "Streight downe againe herselfe . . . She groveling threw to ground": Spenser's "Faerie Queene," ii. l. 45): now regarded as a predicate adjective or a present participle (see following entry).—grovel-ing, grovel-ling, a. or p. a. [Adj. use of groveling, adv., but now regarded as participial, from grovel, v.] Prostrate, with face downward; prone; having the face characteristically turned downward and the body extended along the earth, as many of the lower animals; fig., abject, base, or low; without moral elevation, dignity, or aspirations.—grovel-ing-ly, grovel-ling-ly, adv.

grove-y (grō'vi), a. Of, belonging to, or situated in a grove; abounding in groves; grove-like.

grow (grō), v. i.; pret. grew, pp. grown, ppr. growing. [AS. grōwan = D. groeien = OHG. gruon = Icel. gróa, grow: cf. grass and green.] To undergo the process of development characteristic of living plants; undergo the vital processes, or exist, as plants (as, all the herbs that grow; trees growing only in the tropics); also, to germinate, sprout, or spring, as a seed, shoot, or plant; be produced by natural process, as leaves, fruit, etc.; arise or issue as from a germ, stock, or originating source (as, the whole affair grew out of an indiscreet letter; "How grew your quarrel?" Shakspeare's "King Lear," ii. 2. 66); also, to increase by natural development, as any living organism or part by assimilation of nutriment; in general, to increase gradually, or become greater (as, a heap, flood, or sum grows; heat or sound grows; power, fame, zeal, or fear grows); increase in influence or effect (on or upon: as, a habit that grows on one; the book will grow upon you as you read); also, to become gradually attached or united by or as by growth (as, to grow fast to a thing; to grow together); also, to come or pass by degrees (with into, to, or an infinitive); come to be, or become, by degrees (as, to grow old or rich; to grow scarce).—to grow up, to spring up; arise; also, to increase in growth; advance toward maturity; attain maturity.—grow, v. t. To cause to grow; cultivate, produce, or raise; also, to allow to grow (as, to grow a beard); also, to cover with a growth (used in the passive: as, a field grown with corn).—grow'a-ble, a. Capable of being grown, as plants.—grow'er, n.—grow-ing-ly, adv.—grow-ing=pains, n. pl. Dull, indefinite pains in the limbs during childhood and adolescence, commonly associated with the process of growing.

growl (groul), v. [Prob. imit.: cf. D. grollen, grumble.] I. intr. To utter a deep guttural sound of anger or hostility, as a dog or a bear; of thunder, etc., to rumble; of a person, to murmur or complain angrily; grumble. II. tr. To express by growling or grumbling.—growl, n. The act or sound of growling; a rumbling; a grumbling or complaining.—growl'er, n. One who or that which growls; also, any of certain fishes, as the grunt; also, a four-wheeled cab (colloq., Eng.); also, a pitcher, pail, or other vessel brought by a customer for beer (slang, U. S.).—growl-ing-ly, adv.

grown (grōn). Past participle of grow.—grown, p. a. Advanced in growth; also, arrived at full growth or maturity (as, a grown man); adult.

growth (grōth), n. The act, process, or manner of growing; development; gradual increase; production; also, the condition or size attained in growth, esp. at maturity (as, to come to the full growth); also, something that has grown, sprung up, or developed by or as by a natural process (as, a growth of weeds or of hair; a growth of legend); a product; in pathol., a morbid mass of tissue, as a tumor.—growth-ful, a. Vigorous in growth.—growth-less, a. Deficient in growth.—growth'y, a. Of good growth; growing well or fast; well grown or developed.

groyne (groin), etc. See groin, etc.

grub (grub), v.; grubbed, grubbing. [ME. grubben, dig: cf. G. grübeln, grub, rake, rack (the brains), also E. *grave*¹.] I. tr. To dig; clear (ground) of roots, etc.; dig up (trees, etc.) by the roots; uproot; extract by or as by digging; also, to provide with 'grub' or food (slang). II. intr. To dig; search by or as by digging; rummage; also, to lead a laborious or groveling life; drudge; also, to take 'grub' or food (slang).—grub, n. The larva of an insect, esp. of a beetle; a worm (now prov.); also, a dull, plodding person; a drudge; a literary hack; sometimes, a sloven; also, food or victuals (slang).—grub'ber, n. One who grubs; a digger; a laborious worker; also, an implement for breaking up ground, etc.; also, an eater or feeder (slang).—grub'by, a.; compar. grubbier, superl. grubbiest. Infested with or affected by grubs or larvae; like a grub or larva; also, stunted or dwarfish (now prov.); also, dirty; slovenly.—grub'bi-ness, a.—grub'-stake, n. Provisions, outfit, etc., furnished to a prospector on condition of participating in the profits of his discoveries. [Mining slang, U. S.]—grub'-stake, v. t. To furnish with a grub-stake. [Mining slang, U. S.]

Grub (grub) Street. A London street (now Milton Street) described by Dr. Samuel Johnson as "much inhabited by writers of small histories, dictionaries, and temporary poems"; hence, petty and needy authors, or literary hacks, collectively.

grudge (gruj), v.; grudged, grudging. [Earlier grutch, < OF. gruchier, groucier, murmur, grumble; origin uncertain.] I. intr. To grumble or complain; also, to feel dissatisfaction or ill-will. II. tr. To be reluctant to give or allow (something: as, to grudge the cost of a thing); be dissatisfied at seeing (a person) have (something: as, to grudge a man his success); begrudge.—grudge, n. Grumbling or complaining; also, dissatisfaction or reluctance; also, a feeling of ill-will or resentment excited by some special cause, as a personal injury or insult, the success of an opponent or rival, etc. (as, "He ne'er bore grudge for stalwart blow, Ta'en in fair fight from gallant foe": Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," v. 28); resentful ill-will.—grudge'er, n.—grudge-ing-ly, adv.

grue (grō), v. i.; grued, gruing. [ME.: cf. D. gruven, shudder, G. grauen, feel horror, also E. gruesome.] To shudder; shiver; feel horror. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

gru-el (grō'el), n. [OF. gruel (F. gruau), meal; from Teut., and akin to E. grits, groats, and *grout*¹.] A light, usually thin, liquid food made by boiling meal, esp. oatmeal, in fat, fâte, fâr, fall, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ſlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ru, then; y, you; water or milk; hence, any similar substance. — to take one's gruel, fig., to take one's punishment. [Colloq.] — gru'el, v. t.; — eled or -elled, -eling or -elling. To 'punish,' or use severely; exhaust; disable. [Colloq.] — gru'el-ing, gru'el-ling, n. Any trying or exhausting procedure or experience; defeat, as in an athletic contest. [Colloq.]

grue-some (grö'sum), a. [From grue: cf. G. grausam, horrible.] Such as to make one shudder; inspiring horror; now, esp., revolting in a ghastly way, as the scene, evidences, or details of a brutal murder; disturbing or unpleasant from weird character or sinister suggestiveness, as shadows, sounds, places, etc.; also, ugly or hideous (Sc. and north. Eng.). — grue'some-ly, adv. — grue'some-ness, n.

gruff (gruf), a. [D. grof = G. grob, coarse, rough, rude: cf. grobian.] Coarse (now chiefly technical, as in 'gruff salt-peter'); also, rough, harsh, or surly, as persons, manner, aspect, speech, etc.; often, of voice, tone, etc., rough or harsh in sound, rather than smooth, soft, clear, etc. — gruff-ly, adv. — gruff-ness, n.

gru-gru (grö'grö), n. [Native name.] The grub of a large weevil, Rhynchophorus (or Calandra) palmarum, of tropical America, which lives in the stems of palm-trees, etc., and is regarded by the natives as a delicacy ('grugru worm'); also, any of various spiny palms of the West Indies, as Acrocomia sclerocarpa.

gru-i-form (grö'i-förm), a. [L. grus, crane, + forma, form.] Crane-like; of the crane type of birds.

grum (grum), a.; compar. grummer, superl. grummiest. [Appar. a mixture of glum and grim.] Morose; surly; glum.

grum-ble (grum'bl), v.; — bled, -bling. [Cf. F. grommeler, MD. grommelen, G. grommeln, murmur, grumble.] I. intr. To utter or make low, indistinct sounds, as persons or animals; murmur; growl; of thunder, storms, etc., to rumble; now, commonly, to murmur in discontent; complain in a sulky, ill-humored, or peevish way. II. tr. To express or utter with murmuring or complaining. — grum'ble, n. The act or sound of grumbling; a murmur; a growl; a rumble; an ill-humored complaining; pl., a grumbling, discontented mood. — grum'bler, n. — grum'bling-ly, adv.

grume (gröm), n. [L. grumus, little heap, hillock.] A clot, as of blood; clotted blood; any thick or viscous fluid.

grum-met, n. See grommet.

gru-mous (grö'mus), a. [See grume.] Containing, consisting of, or resembling grume; clotted; thick; viscous; in bot., formed of clustered grains, granules, or the like, as certain roots.

grum-py (grum'pi). [Cf. grum and glumpy.] I. a.; compar. grumpier, superl. grumpiest. Surly; ill-humored; gruff. II. n.; pl. — pies (—piz). A grumpy person. — grum'pi-ly, adv. — grum'pi-ness, n.

Grun-dy (grun'di), n. A name (commonly Mrs. Grundy) taken as representing society at large in regard to its censorship of personal conduct: from the question "What will Mrs. Grundy say?" frequently asked by Dame Ashfield, a character in Thomas Morton's play "Speed the Plough" (1798).

grunt (grunt), v. [AS. grunnetan, freq. of grunian, grunt: cf. G. grunzen and L. grunire, grunt.] I. intr. To utter the deep guttural sound characteristic of a hog; utter a similar sound; also, to grumble, as in discontent; also, to groan† (as, "Who would fardels bear, To grunt and sweat under a weary life?" Shakspeare's "Hamlet," iii. 1. 77).

II. tr. To express with a grunt. — grunt, n. The characteristic deep guttural sound uttered by a hog; some similar utterance; also, any of various chiefly marine fishes of the genus Hemulon and allied genera, which emit a grunting sound when taken from the water. — grunt'er, n. An animal or person that grunts, esp. a hog; also, any of various fishes that make a grunting noise; a grunt. — grunt-ing-ly, adv. With grunting.

Grunt (Hemulon plumieri).

grun-tle (grun'tl), v. i.; — tléd, -tling. [Dim. of grunt.] To utter a low grunt; fig., to murmur; grumble.

grutch (gruch), v. and n. Older form of grudge. [Now prov. Eng.]

Gru-yère (grü-yär) cheese. [From Gruyère, district in Switzerland.] A firm, pale-yellow variety of cheese containing many holes; Swiss cheese.

gryph-on (grif'on), n. Same as *griffin*¹.

grys-bok (gris'bok), n. [S. Afr. D. grijsbok, 'gray buck.'] A small reddish-brown South African antelope, Neotragus melanotis.

gua-cha-ro (gwä'chä-rö), n.; pl. — ros (—röz). [Sp.; prob. from native name.] A nocturnal fruit-eating South American bird, Steatornis caripensis, related to the goatsuckers: valued by the natives for the oil produced from the fat of the young, which is used as a substitute for butter.

Guacharo.

gua-co (gwä'kö), n. [Sp.; from native name.] A climbing asteraceous plant, Mikania guaco, of tropical America; its medicinal leaves, or a substance obtained from them, used as an antidote for snake-bites; also, a tropical American plant, Aristolochia maxima, also used for snake-bites.

guai-ac (gwä'ak), n. [See guaiacum.] The wood or resin of the guaiacum (tree). — guai-a'cic (—as'ik), a. Pertaining to or obtained from guaiacum. — guai'a-col (—ä-kol or —kö), n. In chem., a colorless liquid resembling creosote, obtained by distillation from guaiacum resin, and in other ways, used in phthisis, bronchitis, etc.

guai-a-cum (gwä'a-kum), n. [NL., < Sp. guayaco; from Haitian.] Any of the hardwooded tropical American trees and shrubs constituting the zygophyllaceous genus Guaiacum, esp. G. officinale, of the West Indies and South America, and G. sanctum, of the West Indies and Florida (see lignum-vitæ); also, the hard, heavy wood of such a tree (see lignum-vitæ); also, a greenish-brown resin obtained from trees of this genus, used as a stimulant and alterative, and as a remedy for rheumatism, cutaneous eruptions, etc.

Flowering Branch of Guaiacum (G. sanctum).

guan (gwän), n. [W. Ind.] Any of various large gallina-Flowering birds constituting the subfamily Penelopinae (family Cracidae), chiefly of Central and South America, allied to the curassows.

gua-na (gwä'nä), n. [For iguana.] An iguana; in Australasia, any of various large lizards.

gua-na-co (gwä-nä'kö), n.; pl. — cos (—köz). [Sp., < Peruvian huanacu.] A wild South American ruminant animal, Lama (or Auchenia) huanaco, of which the llama and alpaca are thought to be varieties.

Texas Guan (Ortalis vetula macalli).

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

gua-ni-dine (gwä'-ni-din), n. [From guanine.] In chem., a crystalline compound formed by the oxidation of guanine.

gua-nino (gwä'-nin), n. [From guano.] In chem., a white amorphous substance found in guano, the liver and pancreas of mammals, and the scales of certain fishes.

gua-no (gwä'nō), n.; pl. -nos (-nōz). [Sp., < Peruvian huanu, dung.] A natural manure composed chiefly of the excrement of sea-birds, found esp. on islands near the Peruvian coast; also, any similar substance, as an artificial fertilizer made from fish.

gua-ra-na (gwä-rä'nä), n. [Native name.] A paste prepared from the seeds of a climbing, sapindaceous Brazilian shrub, Paullinia cupana: used for both food and medicine.

guar-an-tee (gar-än-tē'), n. [Appar. for guaranty: cf. Sp. garante, one who warrants.] One who warrants, or gives a formal assurance or guaranty, as for the fulfilment of obligations; also, the giving of a guaranty; the assuming of responsibility for the fulfilment of some obligation, the truth of a statement, etc.; also, a warrant, pledge, or formal assurance given by way of security (as, goods stamped with the maker's guarantee, as for genuineness, quality, or durability); fig., something that has the force or effect of a guaranty, as for the fulfilment or realization of something (as, wealth is no guarantee of happiness); also, one to whom a guaranty is made.—guar-an-tee', v. t.; -teed, -teeing. To be or become a guarantee for, as by giving a formal assurance or guaranty (as, Russia guaranteed the treaty of Teschen, in 1779, between Austria and Prussia); warrant by formal assurance or guaranty (as, to guarantee safe-conduct, immunity, or satisfaction; to guarantee the genuineness or the durability of a thing; gloves guaranteed by the maker, being returnable if not reasonably satisfactory); specif., to make one's self answerable for in behalf of one primarily responsible (as, to guarantee the carrying out of a contract or the fulfilment of obligations by another); also, to undertake to secure to another, as rights or possessions; engage to uphold or maintain (as, to guarantee peace between nations); engage to protect or indemnify (with from, against, etc.); in general, to engage (to do something; as, I will guarantee to prove every statement); warrant (with a clause: as, I will guarantee that he is wrong); fig., to serve as a warrant or guaranty for (as, such actions guarantee his good faith).

guar-an-tor (gar-än-tör), n. One who makes or gives a guaranty.

guar-an-ty (gar-än-ti), n.; pl. -ties (-tiz). [F. garantie, OF. garantie, < guarant, warrant, warrant; from Teut.: see warrant.] The act of warranting, or giving a formal assurance or pledge (as, treaties of guaranty, whereby other powers promise to give aid to secure the carrying out of the agreement between the treaty-making powers); also, a warrant, pledge, or promise given by way of security; specif., a formal or written assurance by which one person or party undertakes to be responsible for the carrying out of a contract, the payment of a debt, or the fulfilment of some obligation, by another; fig., something that serves as a warrant (as, his character is a guaranty for his assertions); also, one who warrants, or gives a formal assurance of being responsible for something.—guar-an-ty, v. t.; -tied, -tying. To guarantee.

guard (gärd), v. [OF. garder, garder, warder (F. garder), guard; from Teut.: see ward, n. and v.] I. tr. To keep safe from harm, attack, wrong, etc. (as, "Mercy guard me!" Milton's "Comus," 695); protect or defend (often with from or against); also, to watch over in order to protect Guanaco.

(as, to guard the gates of a city; to guard a grave); attend or escort, as a guard does (archaic); also, to keep under close watch in order to prevent escape, outbreaks, etc. (as, to guard a prisoner or a madman); keep in check, as in caution or prudence (as, to guard the tongue or the thoughts); also, to provide with some safeguard, protective appliance, or the like (as, to guard the body with armor); also, to border or trim (archaic: as, "a long motley coat guarded with yellow," Shakspeare's "Henry VIII," Prologue, 16).

II. intr. To give protection (as, "Disorder wounds Where it should guard": Shakspeare's "2 Henry VI," v. 2. 33); also, to keep guard or watch; be on one's guard; hence, to take precautions (against: as, to guard against errors).

—guard, n. [OF. garde, garde (F. garde), < guarder: cf. ward, n.] Keeping† or guardianship†; also, protection or defense (as, "I was dispatch'd for their defence and guard": Milton's "Comus," 42); a posture of defense, as in fencing, boxing, etc., or the weapon or arms in such a posture (as, to beat down a person's guard); protective watch, as to detect threatened attack or danger (as, to keep guard as a sentry); vigilant care or heed, as against anything adverse (as, to be on one's guard: see phrase below); caution†; a precaution (obs. or rare); also, restraining watch, as over a prisoner or other person under restraint (as, to be kept under close guard); cautious restraint (as, to keep a careful guard over one's tongue); also, one who guards, protects, or keeps protecting or restraining watch; a sentry; a member of a guarding force, as of soldiers; one who keeps watch over prisoners or others under restraint; the conductor of a railroad-train, etc. (in British use); a person in charge of the gates or doors of a train on an elevated or subway railroad; a player holding a position of defense, as either of two, at the right and the left of the center, in the forward line in football; pl., the name of certain bodies of troops in the British army; sing., a body of men, esp. soldiers, charged with guarding a person or place from attack, acting as escort, watching over prisoners, or the like; also, something intended or serving to guard or protect; a safeguard; a contrivance, appliance, or attachment designed for guarding against injury, loss, etc. (as, a watch-guard); also, an ornamental border or trimming, as on a garment (archaic).

—National Guard. See under national, a. —off one's guard, unprepared to meet a sudden attack; unwary. —on one's guard, in a position of readiness to meet attack; also, watchful or vigilant against attack; cautious; wary. —guard-a-ble, a. Capable of being guarded. —guard-age† (-āj), n. Guardianship. See Shakspeare's "Othello," i. 2. 70.

guard-ant (gärd'ant). [F. gardant, ppr. of garder: see guard, v.] I. a. Guarding; protecting. II.† n. A guard or guardian. See Shakspeare's "1 Henry VI," iv. 7. 9.

guard-od (gärd'ed), p. a. Protected or watched, as by a guard; also, cautious; careful. —guard-ed-ly, adv. —guard-ness, n.

guard-or (gärd'ér), n. One who or that which guards.

guard-house (gärd'hous), n. A building for the accommodation of a guard; also, a building in which prisoners are detained under guard, esp. one in which soldiers are confined for misconduct.

guard-i-an (gärd'i-an). [OF. F. gardien, < garde, E. guard, n.] I. n. One who guards, protects, or preserves; one to whom the care or preservation of something is committed; in law, one to whom the law intrusts the care of the person or property, or both, of another, as of a minor or of some other person legally incapable of managing his own affairs. II. a. Guarding; protecting; tutelary: as, a guardian angel. —guard-i-an-ship, n. The position, office, or care of a guardian.

guard-less (gärd'les), a. Having no guard; unguarded.

guard-ring (gärd'ring), n. A finger-ring, usually narrow and inconspicuous, worn with another ring to keep it from slipping off.

guard-room (gärd'röm), n. A room for the accommodation of a guard; also, a room in which military prisoners are confined.

guards-man (gärdz'man), n.; pl. -men. A man who acts as a guard; a member of a guard; also, a member of any body of troops called guards; also, a member of the National Guard (see under national, a.).

fat, fâte, fâr, fâll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviârý, flect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errant, operâ, ardēt, actōr, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

gua-va (gwä'vä), n. [Sp. guayabo, the tree, guayaba, the fruit; from S. Amer. name.] Any of various trees or shrubs of the myrtaceous genus Psidium, esp. P. guajava, natives of tropical or subtropical America, which yield a fruit used for making jelly, marmalade, etc.; also, the fruit; also, any of certain other plants, as Inga vera, a West Indian mimosaceous tree used for shade in coffee plantations, esp. in Porto Rico.

gu-ber-na-to-ri-al (gū'bér-nä-tō'ri-äl), a. [L. gubernator, steersman, director, E. governor.] Pertaining to a governor or to government.

gude (güd), a., n., and adv. Sc. and prov. Eng. form of good.

gud-geon¹ (guj'on), n. [OF. goujon, < L. gobio(-), var. of gobius, E. goby.] A small European fresh-water fish, Gobio gobio, of the carp family, easily caught, and much used for bait; also, a minnow; in fig. use, one who is easily duped or cheated (as, "So golden a conjecture . . . was too tempting not to be immediately snapped at by the gudgeons of learning": Irving's "Knickerbocker's New York," i. 4); also, a bait or allurement.—gud-geon¹, v. t. To dupe; cheat.

gud-geon² (guj'on), n. [OF. goujon, pin, gudgeon: cf. gouge.] A metal pin or the like attached to the end of a wooden shaft to act as a journal; hence, a pivot; a journal; also, a socket or eye for a pivot or the like; also, a metallic pin for securing together blocks or slabs of stone, etc.

Gue-ber, Gue-bre (gē'bér or gā'-), n. [F. guèbre, < Pers. gebr, gabr, a Gueber; commonly explained as meaning 'unbeliever' (Ar. kāfir), from the Mohammedan point of view: cf. giaour.] A member of the Persian sect of fire-worshippers, the remnant in Persia of the ancient Zoroastrians. See Zoroastrian, n.

guel-der-rose (gel'dér-rōz'), n. [From Guelanders, or Gelderland, province of the Netherlands.] The snowball, a cultivated variety of the cranberry-tree.

Guelph, Guelf (gwelf). [It. Guelfo = ML. Guelphus, < G. Welf, name of the founder of a princely German family.] I. n. A member of the papal and popular party in medieval Italy, opposed to the Ghibellines. II. a. Of or pertaining to the Guelphs.—Guelph'ic, Guelf'ic, a.

gue-non (gē-nōn), n. [F.; origin unknown.] Any of the agile, long-tailed African monkeys constituting the genus Cercopithecus, as the grivet and the green monkey.

guer-don (gēr'don), n. [OF. querdon, werdoun, by alteration (prob. by association with L. donum, gift) < OHG. widarlōn, < widar, again, back, + lōn, reward.] A reward, recompense, or requital: as, "Verse, like the laurel, its immortal meed, Should be the guerdon of a noble deed" (Cowper's "Charity," 293). [Now chiefly poetic].—guer'don, v. t. To reward; recompense: as, "Him we gave a costly bribe To guerdon silence" (Tennyson's "Princess," i. 201). [Now chiefly poetic.]

guer-e-za (gēr'e-zä), n. [Native name.] A large Abyssinian monkey, Colobus guereza, having a thick growth of long white hair on the sides of the otherwise black body and on the end of the tail; also, any of several related species. See cut in next column.

gue-ril-la, n. and a. See guerrilla.

Guern-sey (gēr'n/zī), n.; pl. -seys (-ziz). One of a celebrated breed of dairy cattle, slightly larger than the Jersey, originating on the island of Guernsey, in the English Channel; also [l. c.], a close-fitting knitted woolen shirt much worn by seamen.

Section of Fruit of Guava (Psidium guajava).

Gudgeon (Gobio gobio).

guer-ril-la (ge-ril'ä). [Sp. guerrilla (F. guérilla), dim. of guerra, war; from Teut., and akin to E. war.] I. n. An irregular war carried on by independent bands (now rare); also, an independent and generally predatory fighter in a war, esp. a member of a band of such fighters.

II. a. Of or pertaining to guerrillas: as, a guerrilla band; guerrilla warfare.

guess (ges), v. [ME. gessen = D. and LG. gissen = Sw. gissa = Dan. gisse, guess; from the root of E. get, prob. through Scand.] I. tr. To judge of approximately (as, to guess the height of a building; to guess the number of people in a crowd); estimate; also, to form an opinion of at random or from evidence admittedly uncertain (as, guess whom I saw to-day; we can only guess what will happen next); conjecture; also, to estimate correctly (as, to win a prize by guessing the number of beans in a bowl); conjecture rightly (as, to guess the answer to a question by mere chance); discover by conjecture, or divine (as, to guess a person's designs); solve by a correct conjecture (as, to guess a riddle); also, loosely, to think, believe, or suppose (as, I guess I can get there in time; I guess I know what you mean: hence often used colloquially, esp. in the U. S., to soften the form of statement in cases in which no uncertainty is involved, as in 'I guess I'll go now,' for the more blunt 'I will go now'). II. intr. To form an estimate or conjecture (often with at: as, to guess at the height of a building; to guess at what a thing means); also, to estimate or conjecture correctly.—guess, n. The act of guessing (as, by guess, by rough estimate, or by conjecture); also, an act of guessing; a rough estimate; a conjecture; a supposition based on uncertain evidence.—guess'a-ble, a. That may be guessed.—guess'er, n.—guess'ing-ly, adv.—guess'work, n. Work or procedure based on or consisting in guessing; conjecture.

guest (gest), n. [AS. gæst, giest, = D. and G. gast = Icel. gestr = Goth. gasts, orig. 'stranger'; akin to L. hostis, stranger, enemy, and hospes, host, guest, stranger.] A stranger; also, a person entertained gratuitously at the house or table of another; hence, one who received the hospitality of a club, a city, or the like; also, a person entertained for pay, as at a hotel or boarding-house; also, in zool. and bot., an inquiline; a commensal; a parasite.—guest, v. t. or i. To entertain as or be a guest: as, "Be merry together . . . Guesting awhile in the rooms of a beautiful inn" (Masefield's "Laugh and Be Merry").—guest'=cham'ber, guest'=room, n. A room for the lodging or entertainment of guests.—guest'less, a. Without guests.—guest'ship, n. The position or relation of a guest.

guff (guf), n. [Origin obscure.] Empty or foolish talk; stuff; humbug; nonsense. [Slang.]

guf-faw (gu-fä'), n. [Imit.; orig. Sc.] A loud, coarse burst of laughter.—guf-faw', v. i. To laugh loudly and boisterously.

gug-gle (gug'l), v. i.; -gled, -gling. [Imit.: cf. gurgle.] To make a gurgling sound; gurgle.

guid-a-ble (gi'dä-bl), a. Capable of being guided.

guid-ance (gi'dans), n. The act of guiding; leadership; direction; also, something that guides.

guide (gid), v. t.; guided, guiding. [OF. F. guider, for earlier guier, guide; from Teut., and prob. akin to E. wit and wise.] To lead or conduct on the way, as to a place or through a region; go with in order to show the way, as a guide does; sometimes, to show the way to or for, as stars, light, etc., do; also, to lead or show (the way); hence, to direct the movement or course of (the hand, a pen, a horse, a plow, etc.); fig., to lead or direct in any course of action (as, to be guided by advice, by one's own wishes, or by prudence); determine the course or direction of (actions, events, etc.); conduct the affairs of (a state, institution, etc.); manage (property, money, etc.: now Sc.); also, to treat or use, as in a particular manner (Sc. and north. Eng.: as, "There are few—very few, either of fools or of wise men, ken how to guide a woman," Scott's "Fortunes of Nigel," xxxv.).—guide, n. [OF. F. guide.] One who guides; one who leads or conducts others on the way; one employed to guide travelers, tourists, hunters, etc.; one who directs some course of action or procedure; also, something that guides or directs; a guide-book; a book of instruction or information in an art, etc.; a mark or the like to direct the eye; a mechanical appliance or part for directing or regulating motion or action; also, guidance (now rare: as, "Give them guide to us," Shakspeare's "Timon of Athens," i. 1. 252).

Guereza (Colobus guereza).

—guide-board, n. A board, as on a guide-post, containing directions to travelers.—guide-book, n. A book of directions and information for travelers, tourists, etc.—guide-less, a. Without a guide or means of guidance.—guide-post, n. A post, as at the intersection of two or more roads, bearing a sign for the guidance of travelers.—guide-er (gī'dēr), n.—guide-rope, n. A rope used for guiding something, as one for steadying an object which is being hoisted; also, a long rope hung downward from a balloon and trailing along the ground, for regulating automatically the altitude of the balloon.—guide-way, n. In mech., a track, channel, slot, framework, or the like, on or in which a part slides or moves.

gui-don (gī'dōn), n. [F. guidon, < It. guidone; akin to E. guide.] A small flag or streamer carried as a guide by troops (as cavalry or mounted batteries of artillery), or used for marking or signaling; also, the officer carrying it.

guild (gīld), n. See gild.

gild-der (gīl'dēr), n. [For gilden.] A gulden.

guild/hall, guilds/man. See gildhall, gildsman.

guile (gīl), n. [OF. guile, guile; from Teut., and akin to E. wile.] Insidious cunning; craft; deceit; treachery; also, a stratagem; a wile. — guile, v. t.; guiled, guiling. To deceive or beguile (archaic); also, to make guileful or treacherous (as, "Ornament is but the guiled shore To a most dangerous sea": Shakspeare's "Merchant of Venice," iii. 2. 97). — guile/ful, a. Full of guile; wily; deceitful; treacherous. — guile/ful-ly, adv. — guile/ful-ness, n. — guile-less, a. Free from guile: as, "The plain ox, That harmless, honest, guileless animal" (Thomson's "Seasons," Spring, 363). — guile/less-ly, adv. — guile/less-ness, n.

guil-le-mot (gīl'ē-mot), n. [F. guillemot, appar. dim. of Guillarme, William.] Any of various birds of the auk family constituting the genera Cepphus and Uria, natives of the northern coasts and characterized by a relatively narrow bill, as Cepphus grylle ('black guillemot') and Uria troile ('foolish guillemot').

guil-loche (gī-lōsh'), n. [F. figure, summer plumage; left-hand figure, winter plumage. guillochis; origin uncertain.] A band-like ornament composed of curved lines or strands interlacing or otherwise combined in a pattern. Cf. *fret*², n.

guil-lo-tine (gīl'ō-tēn or gīl'ō-tēn), n. [F.; from J. I. Guillotin (1738-1814), French physician, who, although not the inventor of the machine adopted, urged the use of such a means of decapitation.] A machine for beheading persons by means of a heavy blade sliding in two grooved posts (as, "Louis was beheaded in January, 1793. He was guillotined—for since the previous August the guillotine had been in use as the official instrument in French executions": H. G. Wells's "Outline of History," xxxvii. § 10); also, a machine for cutting paper, etc.; an instrument for cutting the tonsils.—guil-lo-tine', v. t.; -tined, -tining. To behead by the guillotine; also, to cut, as paper, with a guillotine.—guil-lo-tine/ment, n.—guil-lo-tin'er (-tē'nēr), n.

guilt (gīlt), n. [AS. gylt, offense, crime, fault.] An offense or crime; also, the fact or state of having committed an offense or crime; grave culpability, as for some conscious violation of moral or penal law, either by positive act or by neglect of known duty; responsibility for heinous fault; criminality; also, guilty conduct.—guilt-i-ly, adv. In a guilty manner.—guilt-i-ness, n.—guilt/less, a. Free from guilt; innocent; not liable to the imputation (of: as, guiltless of evil intent); hence, having no knowledge or experience (of: as, "Such gardening-tools as art, yet rude, Guiltless of fire, had form'd," Milton's "Paradise Lost," ix. 392); destitute or devoid (of: as, a street guiltless of a footway). — guilt/less-ly, adv. — guilt/less-ness, n. — guilt/y, a.; compar. guiltier, superl. guiltiest. [AS. gyltig.] Having incurred guilt or grave culpability, as by committing an offense or crime; justly chargeable with the guilt (of: as, to plead guilty of murder); characterized by, connected with, or involving guilt (as, guilty deeds, gains, or intent; guilty love); affected with or showing a sense of guilt (as, a guilty conscience; a guilty blush); also, deserving (of) by reason of guilt (as, "He is guilty of death": Mat. xxvi. 66); also, conscious (with of or a clause: as, "Farewell, ye never-opening gates . . . And threshold guilty of my midnight moans!" Dryden's tr. Theocritus, Idyl xxiii.).

guimpe (gāmp), n. [F. guimpe, OF. guimpe, wimple; from Teut., and akin to E. wimple.] A kind of chemise or yoke of lace, embroidery, or other material, worn with a dress cut out at the neck.

guin-ea (gīn'ē), n. [From Guinea, in western Africa, the first of the coins being made of gold from Guinea and for use in African trade.] A British gold coin issued from 1663 to 1813, at first of a nominal value of 20 shillings, but from 1717 of a fixed value of 21 shillings; also, a British monetary unit equal to the value of this coin (now to 21 shillings, or $5.11), still employed in certain cases (as, a fee or a subscription of 20 guineas; a prize of 2,000 guineas in a horse-race); also, a guinea-fowl (colloq.); also, an Italian, or any foreigner of similar appearance (slang, U. S.). — guin'-ea-corn, n. Durra. — guin'-ea-fowl, n. An African gallinaceous bird, Numida meleagris, which has (usually) dark-gray plumage with small white spots, and which is now domesticated throughout the world and valued for its flesh and eggs; also, any of a group of birds of which this species is the type. — guin'-ea-grains, n. pl.

Grains of paradise (see under *grain*², n.). — guin'-ea-hen, n. The female of the guinea-fowl; also, a guinea-fowl without regard to sex; also, a courtesan. — guin-ea-pig (gīn'ē-pīg), n. [First element of name uncer-

Obverse.

Reverse.

Guinea of Charles II., 1663. — British Museum.

Black Guillemot (Cepphus grylle). — Right-hand figure, summer plumage; left-hand figure, winter plumage.

Ionic Guilloche, from a column base of the north porch of the Erechtheum, Athens.

Common Guinea-fowl (Numida meleagris).

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ȳ, then; y, you;

tain, and variously explained.] A short-eared, short-tailed rodent of the genus Cavia, usually white, black, and tawny in color, sometimes kept as a pet and much used in bacteriological experiments: commonly regarded as the domesticated form of one of the South American wild species of cavy.

guinea-worm (gin'ê-wôrm), n. A slender nematode worm, Filaria (or Dracunculus) medinensis, parasitic in man, horses, etc.: common on the Guinea coast and in other warm regions.

gui-pure (gi-pûr, F. gē-pûr), n. [F., < guiper, cover or whip with silk, etc.; from Teut.] Any of various laces or trimmings formerly in use, made with cords or heavy threads, metal, etc.; in later use, any of various laces, often heavy, made of linen, silk, etc., with the pattern connected by brides (rather than by a net ground).

gui-sarme (gi-zärm'), n. See gisarme.

guise (giz), n. [OF. F. guise; from Teut., and akin to E. wise.] Manner†, model†, or fashion† (as, "stately pillours fram'd after the Doricke guise": Spenser's "Faerie Queene," iv. 10. 6); habit† or custom† (as, "It never was our guise To slight the poor": Pope's tr. Homer's "Odyssey," xiv.); behavior† or conduct† (as, "By their guise Just men they seem'd": Milton's "Paradise Lost," xi. 576); also, style of dress, or garb (as, in the guise of a shepherdess); also, external appearance in general, aspect, or semblance (as, an old principle in a new guise); sometimes, assumed appearance or mere semblance (as, to put on a guise of simplicity or virtue); also, a disguise (obs. or prov.); a dance or entertainment in disguises, or a masquerade (obs. or Sc.).—guise, v.; guised, guising. I. tr. To dress, attire, or garb (archaic); also, to disguise (obs. or prov.). II. intr. To go in disguise; masquerade; go about as a mummer or guiser. [Chiefly Sc. and north. Eng.]—guis-er (gi'zër), n. A masquerader; a mummer. [Chiefly Sc. and north. Eng.]

Blue Guitgit.

beneath the throat of a serpent or fish.

gu-lash (gö'lāsh), n. See goulash.

gulch (gulch), n. [Origin uncertain.] A deep, narrow ravine, esp. one marking the course of a stream or torrent; a gorge. [Chiefly western U. S.] gul-den (gul'den), n.; pl.

Obverse.

Reverse.

Silver Gulden of William III., King of the Netherlands, 1867.—British Museum.

Guinea-worm.

French Guit-tar of the 17th century.

plucked or twanged by the fingers.—gui-tar'-ist, n. A player on the guitar.

guit-guit (gwit'gwit), n. [Imit. of its note.] Any of various small, usually brilliantly colored, oscine birds (family Certhidae) of the warmer parts of America, as Certhia cyanea ("blue guitgit"), a brilliant species found in Guiana.

gu-lar (gū'lār). [L. gula, throat.] I. a. Of, pertaining to, or situated on the throat. II. n. A gular plate or shield —dens or -den. [D. and G., lit. 'golden.'] Any of various obsolete gold coins of Germany and the Netherlands; also, the gold monetary unit of the Netherlands, equal to 40.2 U. S. cents; a Dutch silver coin of this value (also called florin: see cut in preceding column); also, the Austrian florin.

gules (gūlz), n. [OF. F. gueules; origin uncertain.] In her., the color red.

gulf (gulf). [OF. F. golfe, < It. golfo, < LGr. κόλπος, Gr. κόλπος, bosom, hollow, gulf.] I. n. A portion of an ocean or sea extending into the land (as, the Gulf of Mexico); also, a deep hollow; a chasm or abyss; also, any wide separation, as in station, education, etc. (cf. Luke, xvi. 26); also, something that engulfs or swallows up; a whirlpool.

II. a. Of or pertaining to a gulf, esp. [cap.] the Gulf of Mexico.—Gulf States, those States of the U. S. bordering on the Gulf of Mexico.—Gulf Stream, a warm oceanic current issuing from the Gulf of Mexico, flowing northward along the U. S. coast, and thence in a northeasterly direction toward the British Isles.—gulf, v. t. To swallow like a gulf, or as in a gulf; cast into or as into a gulf; engulf.

—gulf-weed, n. A coarse olive-brown seaweed, Sargassum bacciferum, found in the Gulf Stream and elsewhere, characterized by numerous berry-like air-vessels by which it is buoyed up; also, some related species.—gulf'y, a. Full of gulfs or hollows; also, full of whirlpools; like a whirlpool.

gull¹ (gul), n. [ME. goll: cf. ME. gull, Icel. gulr, yellow.] An unfledged bird; esp., an unfledged gosling. [Now prov. Eng.]

gull² (gul), v. t. [Origin uncertain: cf. *gull*¹, also obs. gull, to swallow, guzzle.] To deceive; trick; cheat.—gull³, n. One easily deceived or cheated; a simpleton; a dupe; also, a trick† or fraud† (see Shakespeare's "Much Ado about Nothing," ii. 3. 123).

gull³ (gul), n. [ME. gull; from Celtic.] Any of the long-winged, web-footed aquatic birds constituting the subfamily Larinæ (family Laridæ), esp. of the genus Larus, usually white with dark back and wings; also, any bird of this family, as a tern or a jäger.

gull-a-ble (gul'a-bl), etc. See gullible, etc.

gul-let (gul'et), n. [OF. goulet, dim. of goule (F. gueule), < L. gula, throat.] The esophagus, or tube by which food and drink swallowed pass to the stomach (as, "I'm going down to cool my gullet at the blessed well": Synges's "Tinker's Wedding," ii.); loosely, the throat or neck; also, something like or likened to the gullet or esophagus; a channel for water; a gully or ravine; a pass or defile; a preparatory cut in excavations.

gull-i-ble (gul'i-bl), a. Easily gulled, deceived, or cheated.—gull-i-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-ti), n.—gull'i-bly, adv.

gul-ly (gul'i), n.; pl. gul-lies (-iz). [Appar. an altered form of gullet.] The gullet†; also, a channel worn in the earth by a current of water; a narrow ravine; also, a ditch or gutter.

—gul'ly, v. t.—lied,—lying. To make gullies or channels in; also, to form (channels) by the action of water.

gulp (gulp), v. [ME. gulpen: cf. D. gulpen, gulp.] I. tr. To swallow eagerly, or in large drafts or morsels (as, "He does not swallow, but he gulps it down": Cowper's "Conversation," 340); also, fig. (often with down), to take in as by swallowing eagerly; sometimes, to repress (sobs, rage, etc.) as by swallowing. II. intr. To gasp as when taking large drafts of liquid.—gulp, n. An act of gulping; a swallow; also, the amount swallowed at one time; a mouthful.—gulp'er, n. One who or that which gulps; specif., a long-tailed deep-sea fish, Saccopharynx ampullaceus, remarkable for its powers of gulping and distention, whereby it sometimes swallows fishes larger than itself; any fish belonging to the same family, the Saccopharyngidae.

Branch of Gulfweed (Sargassum bacciferum).—a, vesicle with leaf; b, mucronate vesicle.

Gull (Larus argentatus).

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ˆ, secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

Gulper (Saccopharynx ampullaceus).

gum¹ (gum), n. [AS. gōma, palate, inside of the mouth, akin to G. gaumen, palate.] The firm, fleshy tissue covering the alveolar parts of either jaw and enveloping the necks of the teeth (when present) (often in pl.); sometimes, the portion of this tissue about a single tooth.

gum² (gum), n. [OF. F. gomme, < L. gummi, cummi, < Gr. κόμμη, gum.] Any of various viscid, amorphous exudations from plants, hardening on exposure to air, and soluble in, or forming a viscid mass with, water; loosely, any of various similar exudations, as resin, gum-resin, or the like; also, a preparation of such a substance, as for use in the arts, etc.; mucilage; chewing-gum; also, a form of dextrin produced by roasting starch ('artificial gum' or 'British gum'); also, the sticky secretion that collects in the inner corner of the eye; also, a gum-tree; also, gum elastic (see phrase below); hence, a rubber overshoe (local, U. S.).—gum ammoniac. See ammoniac, a.—gum arabic, a gum obtained from Acacia senegal and other species of acacia, used in calico-printing, in the manufacture of mucilage, ink, and the like, in medicine as a demulcent, etc.—gum elastic, caoutchouc; india-rubber.—gum², v.; gummed, gumming. I. tr. To smear with gum; stiffen with gum; fasten or unite with gum or some other sticky substance; clog with or as with some gummy substance. II. intr. To exude or form gum; also, to become gummy; also, to become clogged by some gummy substance.

gum-bo¹ (gum'bō), n. [From Angola name.] The okra plant, or its mucilaginous pods; also, a soup, usually of chicken, thickened with these pods; also, a kind of silty soil in the southern and western U. S., becoming very sticky when wet.

gum-bo² (gum'bō), n. [Appar. of some native origin.] A patois spoken by negroes and creoles of the French West Indies and Louisiana.

gum-boil (gum'boil), n. A small abscess on the gum.

gum-drop (gum'drop), n. A drop-like or molded confection of gum arabic, gelatin, or the like, sweetened and flavored.

gum-ma (gum'ā), n.; pl. gummas or gummata (gum'ā-tā). [NL., < L. gummi, E. gum².] In pathol., a kind of tumor with gum-like contents, produced by syphilis.—gum'-ma-tous (-tus), a. Of the nature of or resembling a gumma; pertaining to a gumma.

gum-mif-er-ous (gu-mif'ē-rus), a. [L. gummi, gum; see -ferous.] Producing gum.

gum-mi-ness (gum'i-nes), n. Gummy quality or state; also, gummy matter.

gum-mo-sis (gu-mō'sis), n. [NL., < L. gummi, E. gum².] In bot., an abnormal condition of certain trees such as the cherry, plum, etc., which causes the formation of gum and its exudation through the bark.

gum-mous¹ (gum'us), a. [L. gummosus.] Of the nature of or resembling gum; gummy.

gum-mous² (gum'us), a. Gummatous.

gum-my¹ (gum'i), a.; compar. gummier, superl. gummiest. Of the nature of gum; gum-like; viscid; also, exuding gum; also, covered with or clogged by gum or sticky matter; also, swollen as if by gum-like matter, as the ankles.

gum-my² (gum'i), a. Gummatous.

gump (gump), n. [Origin obscure.] A foolish person; a dolt. [Prov. or colloq.]

gump-tion (gump'shən), n. [Orig. Sc.; origin obscure.]

Shrewd, practical sense: as, "He has mair gumption in him than most people" (Scott's "Redgauntlet," ch. x.). [Colloq.]

gum-res-in (gum'rez'in), n. Any of various natural mixtures of gum and resin, obtained from certain plants.

gum=shoe (gum'shō'), n. A shoe made of gum elastic or india-rubber; a rubber overshoe.—gum'=shoe, v. i.; -shoed, -shoeing. To go softly, as if wearing rubber shoes; move or act stealthily. [Colloq., U. S.]

gum=tree (gum'trē), n. Any tree that exudes gum, as a eucalyptus, the sour-gum, the sweet-gum, etc.

gun¹ (gun). Past participle of gin¹.

gun² (gun), n. [ME. gunne, gonne, perhaps from a Scand. feminine proper name (cf. Icel. Gunná, woman's name).]

A military engine for hurling stones; also, a metallic tube, with its stock or carriage and attachments, from which heavy missiles are thrown by the force of gunpowder, etc. ('great gun'); a piece of ordnance, esp. a long cannon; also, any portable firearm except a pistol or revolver, as a rifle; hence, any similar device for projecting a missile (as, an air-gun); a device for projecting something else (see cement-gun); sometimes, a pistol or revolver (colloq., U. S.); also, the discharge of a gun, as in a salute, or as a signal; also, one who carries a gun; an artilleryman or gunner; also, a thief or pickpocket (slang).—gun², v. i.; gunned, gunning. To shoot with a gun; hunt with a gun.—gun'-boat, n. A small vessel carrying mounted guns; esp., a small, armed war-vessel of light draft, used for visiting minor ports, etc.

—gun'-car'-riage, n. The carriage or structure on which a gun is mounted or moved, and on which it is fired: as, a disappearing gun-carriage (one so arranged that the gun after being trates, as the high explosive produced by treating cotton or the like with a mixture of nitric and sulphuric acids, or the more soluble and less explosive material ('soluble gun-cotton') used in making collodion, celluloid, etc. Cf. cellulose nitrate, under cellulose¹.

Disappearing Gun-carriage with Gun in Firing Position. Loading Position being shown in dotted outline.

gun-de-low (gun'dē-lō), n. A corruption of gondola. See Whittier's "Snow-Bound."

gun-di (gun'di), n.; pl. -dis (-diz). [N. Afr.] Same as ctenodactyl.

gun-fire (gun'fir), n. The firing of a gun or guns; also, the hour at which the morning or evening gun is fired, as in the navy or the army.

gun-flint (gun'flint), n. The piece of flint in a flintlock.

gun-ite (gun'it), n. The mortar containing cement and sand which is formed by and driven forth from the cement-gun. See cement-gun.

gun-less (gun'les), a. Having no gun.

gun-lock (gun'lok), n. The mechanism of a gun by which the hammer is controlled and the charge exploded.

gun-man (gun'man), n.; pl. -men. A man who makes guns; also, a man armed with, or expert with, a gun; esp., one who is ready to use his skill with a revolver unlawfully for hire (colloq., U. S.).

gun-met-al (gun'met'al), n. A bronze formerly much employed for cannon; also, any of various other alloys or metallic substances with a dark-gray or blackish color or finish, used for watchcases, chains, belt-buckles, umbrella-handles, etc.; also, a dark-gray color.

gunned (gund), a. Furnished with guns, as a ship.

gun-nel¹ (gun'nl), n. [Origin unknown.] Any of certain blennies (fishes), esp. Pholis gunnellus, which is found in the northern Atlantic.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

gun-nel² (gun'nl), n. See gunwale.

gun-ner (gun'ér), n. One who works a gun or cannon; also, a warrant-officer in the navy having charge of the ordnance, etc., on a ship, or engaged in other duties; also, one who hunts with a gun.

gun-ner-y (gun'ér-i), n. The art and science of constructing and managing guns, esp. large guns; also, the use of guns; the firing of guns; also, guns collectively.

gun-ning (gun'ing), n. The act, practice, or art of shooting with guns; esp., the hunting of game with guns.

gun-ny (gun'i), n.; pl. gunnies (-iz). [Hind. gōnā.] A strong, coarse material made commonly from jute, used for bagging, etc.; also, a bag or sack of this material. — gun'ny=bag, gun'ny=sack, n.

gun-port (gun'pört), n. A port-hole for a gun.

gun-pow-der (gun'pou'dér), n. An explosive mixture of saltpeter (potassium nitrate), sulphur, and charcoal, used esp. in gunnery; also, any of various other explosives. — Gunpowder Plot, in Eng. hist., a plot to blow up the king (James I.) and the Lords and Commons in the Parliament House, on Nov. 5, 1605, in revenge for the laws against Roman Catholics: it was discovered in time and defeated, and its agents, Guy Fawkes and others, were put to death. — gunpowder tea, a fine variety of green tea, each leaf of which is rolled into a little ball.

gun-room (gun'röm), n. In a British man-of-war, orig. an apartment occupied by the gunner and his mates, now one devoted to the use of the junior officers; also, in a house or other building, a room in which guns are kept.

gun-run-ning (gun'run'ing), n. The practice of illegally conveying firearms and ammunition into a country. — gun'=run'ner, n.

gun-shot (gun'shot), n. The shooting of a gun; also, the range of a gun; also, shot fired from a gun.

gun-shy (gun'shi), a. Frightened at the report of a gun.

gun-smith (gun'smith), n. One whose occupation it is to make or repair small firearms.

gun-stock (gun'stok), n. The stock or wooden support in which the barrel of a gun is fixed.

Gun-ter's (gun'térz) chain. [From E. Gunter (1581–1626), English mathematician.] A surveyor's chain. See chain, n. — Gunter's scale. A plane rule containing scales of sines, tangents, etc., on one side, and corresponding scales of logarithms on the other: used for solving mechanically problems in trigonometry, navigation, etc.

gun-wale (gun'l or gun'wāl), n. [From *gun*² + *wale*²; so called because formerly guns were set upon it.] Naut., the upper edge of a vessel's or boat's side; the uppermost wale of a ship, next below the bulwarks.

gun-yah (gun'yä), n. [Native name.] A native Australian hut.

gurge (gèr'i), n. [L. gurgēs.]

A whirlpool: as, "A black bituminous gurge Boils out from under ground" (Milton's "Paradise Lost," xii. 41). [Poetic.]

gur-gi-ta-tion (gèr-jī-tā'shən), n. [LL. gurgitare (pp. gurgitatus), engulf, flood, < L. gurgēs, whirlpool, gulf.] Surging rise and fall; ebullient motion, as of water.

gur-gle (gèr'gl), v.; -gled, -gling. [Appar. imit.; perhaps orig. a varied form of gargle.] I. intr. To gargle; also, to flow in a broken, irregular, noisy current, as water from a bottle or a small stream on a stony bottom; make a sound as of water doing this (often used with reference to the utterance of birds or of human beings). II. tr. To utter with a gurgling sound. — gur'gle, n. A gargle; also, the act or the noise of gurgling; a gurgling sound. — gur'gling-ly, adv.

gur-goyle (gèr'goil), n. Same as gargoyle.

gur-jun (gèr'jun), n. [E. Ind.] A large tree, Dipterocarpus alatus, of the East Indies, valued for its balsam and wood; also, the balsam of this tree and of certain other species of the same genus, used as a medicine, a varnish, etc.; also, the wood.

Gur-kha (gör'kä), n. One of a Hindu race dominant in Nepal and noted as warriors.

gur-nard (gèr'närd), n. [OF. gornart, prob. lit. 'grunter' (from the sound made by the fish when taken out of the water), = F. grognard, grumbler, < grogner, grunt.] Any of various marine acanthopterygian fishes, esp. of the genus Trigla of Europe and the genus Prionotus of America, having a spiny head with mailed cheeks, and three pairs of free pectoral rays; any of various similar fishes (see flying-gur-nard). Also gur'net.

Gurnard (Trigla gurnardus).

gu-ru (gö'rö or gü-rö'), n. [Hind. gurū, < Skt. guru, teacher, orig. adj., heavy, weighty, worthy of honor.] In India, a religious teacher or guide.

gush (gush), v. [ME. guschen; appar. imit.] I. intr. To issue with force, as a fluid from confinement; flow suddenly or copiously; also, to have a copious flow of something, as of blood, tears, etc.; also, to express one's self in an effusive or extravagantly emotional manner; talk effusively or sentimentally. II. tr. To emit suddenly, forcibly, or copiously: as, "The gaping wound gush'd out a crimson flood" (Dryden's tr. Virgil's "Æneid," x. 1117). — gush, n. A sudden and violent emission, as of fluid; the fluid emitted; also, gushing or effusive language. — gush'er, n. One who or that which gushes; specif., an oil-well which sends out oil in abundance without pumping. — gush'ing-ly, adv. — gush'y, a.; compar. gushier, superl. gushiest. Given to or marked by gush or effusiveness.

gus-set (gus'et), n. [OF. gousset, gouchet (F. gousset): cf. F. gousse, pod, husk.] A flexible piece, as of mail, in armor, used to protect the armpit; hence, an angular piece of material inserted in a shirt, etc., at the under part of the armhole; in general, an angular or shaped piece serving to fill an opening, afford more room, adjust shape, give strength, etc. — gus'set, v. t.; -seted, -seting. To furnish or make with a gusset or gussets.

gust¹ (gust), n. [Prob. from Scand.: cf. Icel. gustr, a gust, blast.] A sudden, strong blast of wind; hence, a sudden rush of water, fire, smoke, etc.; a burst of sound; an outburst of passionate feeling.

gust² (gust), n. [L. gustus, a tasting, taste: see choose.] The sense of taste; also, individual taste or liking (as, to find a thing little to one's gust); also, relish, enjoyment, zest, or gusto (as, "He drinks his simple bev'rage with a gust": Cowper's "Table Talk," 240); also, flavor, esp. pleasing flavor (as, "The whole vegetable tribe have lost their gust with me": Lamb's "Grace before Meat"). [Archaic.] — gust², v. t. [L. gustare, < gustus.] To taste; relish. [Archaic or Sc.] — gust'a-ble. [LL. gustabilis.] I. a. That may be tasted; perceptible by the sense of taste; also, pleasing to the taste; savory. [Archaic.] II. n. Something that may be tasted; also, something pleasing to the taste; a savory food. [Archaic.] — gus-ta-tion (gus-tā'shən), n. [L. gustatio (n-).] The act or the faculty of tasting; taste. — gus'ta-tive (-tā-tiv), gus'ta-to-ry (-tō-ri), a. Of or pertaining to gustation or tasting. — gus-tatory bud or corpuscle, in anat., any of a number of small, flask-shaped bodies in the epithelium of the tongue, etc., believed to be special organs of taste.

gust-ful¹ (gust'fūl), a. Gusty; windy: as, "on a gustful April morn" (Tennyson's "Holy Grail," 14). [Poetic.]

gust-ful² (gust'fūl), a. Pleasant to the taste; palatable; hence, agreeable to the mind; also, characterized by relish or gusto. [Archaic.] — gust'ful-ly, adv.

gust-i-ly (gus'ti-li), adv. In a gusty manner.

gus-to (gus'tō), n.; pl. -tos (-tōz). [It., < L. gustus, E. *gust*².] Individual taste or liking; also, now usually, keen relish or hearty enjoyment, as in eating or drinking or in action or speech generally (as, to carry out a joke or to tell a story with gusto); zest.

gust-y (gus'ti), a.; compar. gustier, superl. gustiest. Blowing or coming in gusts, as wind, rain, storms, etc.; affected or marked by gusts of wind, etc.; windy; also, occurring or characterized by sudden bursts or outbursts, as sound, laughter, passion, etc.

Gunwale of Boat. — G, G, gunwale; K, keel; T, thwart.

gut (gut), n. [AS. guttas, pl., akin to gēotan, pour, flow, G. giessen, pour.] The alimentary canal between the pylorus and the anus, or some portion of it; sometimes, the whole alimentary canal; pl., the bowels or entrails (now vulgar, except of animals); fig., insides (slang); substantial contents or qualities (slang: as, a book or a play with no guts to it); also, sing., the intestines of animals prepared for various purposes, as for violin-strings; also, the silken substance taken from a silkworm killed when about to spin its cocoon, used in making snells for fish-hooks ('silkworm gut'); also, a narrow passage, as a channel of water or a defile between hills.—gut, v. t.; guttled, gutting. To take out the guts or entrails of; disembowel; hence, to clear or plunder of contents (as, "We gutted him [a ship] of the pearl": Defoe's "Captain Singleton," xii.); destroy the interior of.

gut-ta (gut'ä), n.; pl. guttæ (-ē). [L., a drop.] A drop, or something resembling one; in arch., one of a series of pendent ornaments, generally in the form of a frustum of a cone, attached to the under side of the mutules, etc., of the Doric entablature.

gut-ta-per-cha (gut'ä-për'chä), n. [Malay getah, gum, balsam, + percha, kind of tree producing the substance.] The concrete milky juice, nearly white when pure, of various Malaysian sapotaceous trees, esp. Palaguium gutta: variously used in the arts and manufactures, as for insulating electric wires.

gut-tate (gut'ät), a. [L. guttatus, < gutta, a drop.] In the form of drops; containing drops or drop-like masses; spotted as if by drops. Also gut-tat-ed (gut'ä-ted).

gut-ter (gut'ër), n. [OF. goutiere (F. gouttière), < goute (F. goutte), < L. gutta, a drop.] A channel at the eaves or on the roof of a building, for carrying off rain-water; also, a channel at the side (or in the middle) of a road or street, for leading off surface water (often taken figuratively as the abode or resort of the lowest class of persons in the community: as, to raise a person out of the gutter; children of the gutter; the language of the gutter); hence, any channel, trough, or the like, for carrying off fluid; also, a furrow or channel made by running water; also, any channel or groove; also, a watercourse; a brook.—gut'ter, v. t. I. tr. To furnish with a gutter or gutters; make gutters in; channel or furrow as if with gutters. II. intr. To form gutters, as water does; also, to flow in streams (as, "Their lab'ring sides Are swell'd, and sweat runs gut't'ring down in tides": Dryden's tr. Virgil's "Æneid," v. 261); also, to become channeled, as a burning candle does by the flow of the melted tallow or wax down its side (as, "The candles flickered and guttered down, and made long winding-sheets": Dickens's "Barnaby Rudge," lv.).—gut'ter-snipe, n. A gatherer of rags, paper, etc., from street gutters; also, a street child of the lowest class; a street Arab; a gamin. [Colloq.]

gut-ti-fer (gut'i-fër), n. [NL., < L. gutta, a drop, + ferre, bear.] A plant yielding gum or resin; a clusiaceous plant.—gut-ti-fer-ous (gu-tif'ë-rus), a. Yielding gum or resin; clusiaceous.

gut-tle (gut'l), v. i. or t.; -tled, -tling. [Appar. a freq. < gut.] To eat or swallow greedily or voraciously.—gut'tler, n.

gut-tu-la (gut'ü-lä), n.; pl. -læ (-lē). [L., dim. of gutta, a drop.] In bot. and zool., a small (drop-like) spot, as of color.—gut'tu-late (-lät), a. In bot. and zool., composed of, containing, or resembling small drop-like vesicles, spots, or the like.

gut-tur-al (gut'u-räl). [NL. gutturialis, < L. guttur, throat.] I. a. Of or pertaining to the throat; esp., of sounds, etc., produced, or regarded as produced, in the throat; noting any harsh or rasping vocal sound; in phonetics, formed between the tongue and the soft palate, as the sound of k, and of g in go. II. n. A guttural sound.—gut'tur-al-ize, v. t.; -ized, -izing. To utter in a guttural manner; also, to make (a sound) guttural in character.—gut'tur-al-ly, adv.—gut'tur-al-ness, n.

gut-tur-o- (gut'u-rō-). Form of L. guttur, throat, used in combination, as in gutturorlabial (involving both throat and lips; both guttural and labial), gutturoranasal (both guttural and nasal), gutturoribantal, etc.

gut-ty (gut'i), n.; pl. gutties (-iz). [From gutta-percha.] In golf, a gutta-percha ball. [Colloq.]

guy¹ (gi), n. [OF. guis, guie, a guide, < guier, guide: see guide.] A guide; also, a rope or appliance used to guide and steady a thing being hoisted or lowered, or to steady or secure anything liable to shift its position.—guy¹, v. t. To guide, steady, or secure with a guy or guys.

guy² (gi), n. [From Guy Fawkes.] A grotesque effigy of Guy Fawkes (see Gunpowder Plot) carried about and burned in England (esp. formerly) on the anniversary of the defeat of the Gunpowder Plot (Nov. 5, 1605); hence, a person of grotesque appearance; a fright; also, a fellow or person (slang: as, he's a queer guy).—guy², v. t. To jeer at or make fun of; ridicule. [Colloq.]

guz-zle (guz'l), v. t. or t.; -zled, -zling. [Perhaps connected with F. gosier, throat, gullet: cf. obs. F. desgouzziller, gulp down.] To drink greedily or to excess.—guz'zle, n. Drink or liquor; also, a drinking-bout or debauch; also, the throat (now prov.); also, a gutter or drain (now prov.).—guz'zler, n.

gwe-duc (gwē'duk), n. [N. Amer. Ind., lit. 'come deep' or 'dig deep'.] A large edible clam, Glycymeris generosa, of the northwest coast of the U. S., sometimes 3 feet or more in length with the siphons extended.

gy-as-cu-tus (ji-äskū'tus), n. [A made word, simulating Latin.] An imaginary quadruped supposed to be of tremendous size, to have the legs on one side of the body much shorter than those on the other, and thus to be able to keep its balance in feeding on the side of a steep mountain.

gybe (jib), v. See *jibe*¹.

gym (jim), n. Short for gymnasium. [Colloq.]

gym-kha-na (jim-kä'nä), n. [Appar. < gym(nastics) + Hind. kāna, house.] A building or grounds for athletic sports; also, a meeting at which such sports are held. [Orig. Anglo-Ind.]

gym-na-si-al (jim-nä'zi-äl), a. Pertaining to the gymnasia of continental Europe, or to similar educational establishments elsewhere; hence, classical, as opposed to scientific, etc.

gym-na-si-arch (jim-nä'zi-ärk), n. [L. gymnasiarchus, < Gr. γυμνασιάρχος, < γυμνάσιον, E. gymnasium, + ἀρχαίν, lead, rule.] A magistrate who superintended the gymnasia and certain public games in ancient Athens; also, a leader among athletes; also, a head instructor in a school or college.

gym-na-si-ast (jim-nä'zi-ast), n. [G.] A gymnast; also, a student in a gymnasium or classical school in continental Europe.

gym-na-si-um (jim-nä'zi-um), n.; pl. -siums or -sia (-zi-ä). [L., < Gr. γυμνάσιον, < γυμνάσειν, train, exercise, < γυμνός, naked, stripped, lightly clad.] A place or building for athletic exercises; a school for gymnastics; also (as Gr., pron. güm-nä'zē-um), in continental Europe, esp. Germany, a classical school preparatory to the universities.

gym-nast (jim'nast), n. [Gr. γυμναστής, trainer of professional athletes, < γυμνάσειν, train: see gymnasium.] One skilled in athletic exercises: as, "leaping back . . . with the speed and security of a trained gymnast" (Stevenson's "Treasure Island," xiv.).—gym-nas'tic, a. [L. gymnasticus, < Gr. γυμναστικός.] Of or pertaining to athletic exercises, as for health, defense, or diversion (as, "gymnastic feats": Du Maurier's "Trilby," iii.); athletic; also, pertaining to disciplinary exercises for the mind.—gym-nas'ti-cal-ly, adv.—gym-nas'tics, n. As pl., gym-

Guttæ in Doric Architecture. — A, form of gutta beneath regula; G, G, guttæ beneath mutules and regula.

Gweduc.

fat, fäte, fär, fäll, äsk, färe; net, mē, hër; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviäry, elect, agöny, intö, ünite; (obscured) errant, operä, ardent, actör, natüre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; y, you;

nastic exercises; as sing., the practice or art of gymnastic exercises.

Gym-nos-o-phist (jim-nos'ō-fist), n. [L. gymnosophistæ, pl., < Gr. γυμνοσοφισταί, < γυμνός, naked, + σοφιστής, wise man, E. sophist.] One of a sect of ancient Hindu philosophers who wore little or no clothing, ate no flesh, and devoted themselves to mystical contemplation.

gym-no-sperm (jim'nō-spěrm), n. [NL. gymnospermus, < Gr. γυμνόςπερμος, having naked seeds, < γυμνός, naked, + σπέρμα, seed.] A plant having its seeds exposed or naked (not inclosed in an ovary): opposed to angiosperm.—gym-no-sper-mous, a. Of the gymnosperm class; having naked seeds.

gyn-æ-ce-um (jin-ē-sē'um or ji-nē-), n.; pl. -cea (-sē'ā). [L., < Gr. γυναικεῖον, prop. neut. of γυναικεῖος, of or for women, < γυνή, woman: see quean.] Among the ancients, the part of a dwelling devoted to the use of the women.

gyn-an-drous (ji-nan'drus or ji-), a. [Gr. γυνάνδρος, of doubtful sex, < γυνή, woman, + ἀνδρ (άνδρ-), man.] In bot., having the gynecium and andrecium united in a column, as in orchids.

gyn-ar-chy (jin'ār-ki or ji'nār-), n.; pl. -chies (-kiz). [Gr. γυνή, woman: see -archy.] Government by a woman or women.

gyn-æ-ci-um, n. See gynecium.

gyn-æ-coc-ra-cy, gyn-æ-coc-ra-cy (jin-ē-kok'ra-si or ji-nē-), n. [Gr. γυναικοκρατία, < γυνή (γυναικ-), woman, + κρατεῖν, rule.] Government by a woman or women; female government; petticoat rule.—gyn-æ-co-crat'ic, gyn-æ-co-crat'ic (-kō-krat'ik), a.

gyn-e-col-o-gy, gyn-æ-col-o-gy (jin-ē-kol'ō-ji or ji-nē-), n. [Gr. γυνή (γυναικ-), woman: see -logy.] That department of medical science which deals with the functions and diseases peculiar to women.—gyn-æ-co-log'i-cal, gyn-æ-co-log'i-cal (-kō-loj'i-kal), a.—gyn-e-col'o-gist, gyn-æ-col'o-gist, n.

gyn-e-co-mor-phous, gyn-æ-co-mor-phous (jin-ē-kō-mōr'fus or ji'nē-), a. [Gr. γυναικόμορφος, < γυνή (γυναικ-), woman, + μορφή, form.] In biol., having the form, appearance, or attributes of a female.

gyn-e-oc-ra-cy, gyn-æ-oc-ra-cy (jin-ē-ok'ra-si or ji-nē-), n. Same as gynecocracy.

gyn-e-ol-a-try, gyn-æ-ol-a-try (jin-ē-ol'a-tri or ji-nē-), n. [Gr. γυνή, woman, + λατρεία, worship.] Extravagant devotion to or worship of woman.

gyn-i-at-rics (jin-i-at'riks or ji-ni-), n. [Gr. γυνή, woman, + ιατρικός, E. iatic.] The treatment of diseases peculiar to women.

gyn-o-base (jin'ō-bās or ji'nō-), n. [Gr. γυνή, woman, + E. base.] In bot., a short conical or flat elevation of the receptacle of a flower, bearing the gynecium.

gyn-æ-ci-um (ji-nē'shium or ji-), n.; pl. -cia (-shiā). [NL., orig. gynæceum (see gynæceum), but now regarded as < Gr. γυνή, woman, + οἶκος, house.] In bot., the pistil, or the pistils collectively, of a flower. Cf. andrecium.

gyn-o-phore (jin'ō-fōr or ji'nō-), n. [Gr. γυνή, woman: see -phore.] In bot., the elongated pedicel or stalk bearing the gynecium in some flowers.

-gynous. [Gr. -γυνος, < γυνή, woman.] An adjective termination involving the idea of 'woman,' 'wife,' 'female,' and hence used in botanical terms to imply 'female organ,' 'pistil,' as in monogynous, polygynous. Cf. -androus.

gyp (jip), n. [Perhaps for gypsy (gipsy).] A male college servant, as at Cambridge, England; also (slang), a swindler, as in horse-dealing; a cheat; a thief.—gyp, v. t.; gyped, gyping. To swindle; cheat; defraud or rob by some sharp practice; also, to obtain by swindling or cheating; steal. [Slang.]—gyp-per, n.

gyp-se-ous (jip'sē-us), a. [LL. gypseus.] Of the nature of, resembling, or containing gypsum.

gyp-sif-er-ous (jip-sif'ē-rus), a. [See -ferous.] Containing or yielding gypsum.

Gynœceum. — Section of gynecium of borage, enlarged, showing gynœceum (a) bearing the carpels and style.

Flower, with Gynophore (a).

gyp-sum (jip'sum), n. [L., < Gr. γύψος, chalk, gypsum.] A mineral, a hydrous sulphate of calcium, occurring in both crystalline and massive varieties: used to make plaster of Paris, as an ornamental material, as a fertilizer, etc. Cf. alabaster and selenite.²

Gyp'sy, gyp'sy-dom, etc. See Gipsy, etc.

gy-ral (ji'rāl), a. Moving in a gyre; gyratory; in anat., pertaining to a cerebral gyrus.—gy'rāl-ly, adv.

gy-rate (ji'rāt), v. i.; -rated, -rating. [L. gyratus, pp. of gyrare, turn, wheel round, < gyrus: see gyre.] To move in a circle or spiral; revolve round a fixed point or on an axis; rotate; whirl.—gy'rate, a. In bot., circinate; in zool., having convolutions.—gy-ra'tion (-rā'shōn), n. The act of gyrating; circular or spiral motion; revolution; rotation; whirling; a continually wheeling movement, as in dancing.—gy-ra-to-ry (-rā-tō-ri), a. Moving in a circle or spiral; gyrating.

gyre (jir), n. [L. gyrus, < Gr. γῦρος, ring, circle.] A ring or circle (as, "She rushing through . . . Perforce parted their compacted gyre": Spenser's "Faerie Queene," iii. 1. 23); also, a circular, spiral, or wheeling course or motion; a circular or spiral turn (as, "The lark Shot up and shrill'd in flickering gyres": Tennyson's "Princess," vii. 31); in anat., a gyrus.—gyre, v. t. or i.; gyred, gyring. To turn round; revolve; wheel. [Now chiefly poetic.]

gyr-fal-con (jēr'fā'kn or -fāl'kōn), n. See gerfalcon.

gy-ri (ji'ri), n. Plural of gyrus.

gyro-. Form of Gr. γῦρος, ring, circle, used in combination.

gy-ro (ji'rō), n.; pl. -ros (-rōz). Shortened form of gyroscope, also of gyro-compass.—gy'ro-car, n. A motor-car running on a monorail, and kept in an upright position by means of a gyroscope or gyroscopes.—gy'ro-com-pass, n. A device used like the ordinary compass for determining directions, but employing a continuously driven gyroscope instead of a magnetized needle or bar, the gyroscope being so mounted that its axis constantly maintains its position with reference to the geographical north, thus dealing with true geographical meridians used in navigation instead of magnetic meridians (which, contrary to the usual understanding, are never directly used for navigation): applied esp. to the device invented by Elmer A. Sperry.

gy-ro-cop-ter (ji-rō-kop'tēr), n. [Coined by E. Berliner, from gyro- + (heli)copter.] A form of helicopter provided with means for tilting forward, thereby causing forward flight the speed of which depends on the tilting-angle: designed by Henry A. and Emile Berliner.

gy-ro-i-dal (ji-rōi'dal), a. [Gr. γυροειδής, like a circle, round: see gyro- and -oid.] Spiral in arrangement or movement.—gy-ro-i-dal-ly, adv.

gy-ro-plane (ji'rō-plan), n. [See gyro- and plane.] A form of flying-machine employing rotating planes (horizontal or nearly so) for support and balance.

gy-ro-scope (ji'rō-skōp), n. [F. gyroscope: see gyro- and -scope.] An apparatus consisting of a rotating wheel which is so mounted that its axis can turn freely in certain or all directions, and which is capable of maintaining the same absolute direction in space in spite of movements of the mountings or surrounding parts: based on the principle that a body rotating steadily about an axis tends to resist change in the direction of the axis, and used to illustrate the dynamics of rotating bodies, to maintain equilibrium (see gyro-car and gyro-stabilizer), to determine direction (see gyro-compass), etc.—gy-ro-scop'ic (-skop'ik), a. Of or pertaining to the gyroscope.—gyroscopic compass. Same as gyro-compass.—gyroscopic stabilizer. Same as gyro-stabilizer.—gy-ro-scop'ics, n. The principles of the operation of the gyroscope.

gy-ro-stab-i-liz-er (ji'rō-stab'i-lī-zēr), n. A device for stabilizing a sea-going vessel by counteracting its rolling motion from side to side, consisting essentially of a rotating Foucault's Gyroscope.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ", secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

gyroscope weighing about 1 per cent of the displacement of the vessel: invented by Elmer A. Sperry. [Proprietary name.]

gy-ro-stat (ji'rō-stat), n. [See gyro- and -stat.] A modification of the gyroscope, consisting of a rotating wheel pivoted within a rigid case: used for illustrating the dynamics of rotating bodies. — gy-ro-stat'ic, a. Pertaining to the gyrostat or to gyrostatics; connected with the dynamic principle that a rotating body tends to preserve its plane of rotation. —

Gyrost'at.

H

H, h (äch); pl. H's, h's (äch'ez). A consonant, the 8th letter of the English alphabet.

ha (hä), interj. An exclamation of surprise, interrogation, suspicion, triumph, etc.; also, a sound marking hesitation in speech; often, when repeated (ha! ha! or ha, ha!), a word imitative of the sound of laughter.

ha-be-as cor-pus (hä'bē-as kōr'pus). [L., 'have thou the body.'] In law, a writ requiring the body of a person to be brought before a judge or court, esp. for investigation of a restraint of the person's liberty.

hab-er-dash-er (hab'ēr-dash'ēr), n. [ME. haberdassher; cf. AF. hapertas, appar. the name of a fabric.] A dealer in small wares, as accessories of dress, trimmings, buttons, pins, needles, thread, etc.; sometimes, formerly, a dealer in hats and caps; in the U. S., a dealer in men's furnishings, as shirts, collars, neckties, gloves, etc. — hab'er-dash'er-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). The goods, business, or shop of a haberdasher.

hab-er-geon (hab'ēr-jōn or hä-bēr'-), n. Same as haubergeon.

ha-bil-a-to-ry (hä-bil'ä-tō-rī), a. [Irreg. < F. habiller, to dress: see habiliment.] Pertaining to dressing or clothing: as, "habilitatory art" (Bulwer-Lytton's "Pelham," lxix.).

hab-ile (hab'il), a. [OF. F. habile, < L. habilis, fit, apt, E. able.] Fit; able; also, skilful; ready.

ha-bil-i-ment (hä-bil'i-mēnt), n. [OF. F. habillement, < habiller, to dress, < habile, fit: see habile.] Dress; attire; garb; pl. clothes or garments; accoutrements (as, "plated in habiliments of war": Shakspeare's "Richard II.," i. 3. 28). — ha-bil-i-men'tal (-men'tal), a. Pertaining to habiliments or dress. — ha-bil'i-men-ta'tion (-tä'shōn), n. Dressing or clothing. — ha-bil'i-ment-ed (-men-ted), a. Dressed; attired; clad.

ha-bil-i-tate (hä-bil'i-tāt), v.; -tated, -tating. [ML. habilitatus, pp. of habilitare, < L. habilis: see habile.] I. tr. To qualify or capacitate; also (after Sp. habilitar), to furnish money or means to work (a mine: western U. S.); also, to clothe or dress. II. intr. [Cf. G. habilitieren.] To qualify one's self, esp. as teacher in a German university. — ha-bil-i-ta'tion (-tä'shōn), n. — ha-bil'i-ta-tor, n.

hab-it (hab'it), n. [OF. F. habit, < L. habitus, condition, appearance, dress, < habere, have.] Characteristic or customary condition, constitution, or mode of being; esp., characteristic bodily or physical condition (as, to be of a delicate, spare, or apoplectic habit); the characteristic form, aspect, mode of growth, etc., of an animal or plant (as, a slender or erect habit; a twining habit); also, the mental character or disposition (as, the book reveals the habit of mind of the author); also, a disposition or tendency constantly shown to act in a certain way, esp. such a disposition acquired by frequent repetition of an act (as, "How use doth breed a habit in a man!" Shakspeare's "Two Gentlemen of Verona," v. 4. 1); a particular practice, custom, or usage (as, the habit of smoking tobacco; to fall into a habit of faultfinding); customary practice, use, or wont (as, to act from force of habit; inured by habit; to be the slave of habit); also, bearing or deportment; also, dress, attire, or garb, or a garment or robe (archaic, except as in following gy-ro-stat'i-cal-ly, adv. — gy-ro-stat'ics, n. The science which deals with the laws of rotating solids.

gy-rus (ji'rūs), n.; pl. gyri (-rī). [L.: see gyre.] In anat., a convolution, esp. of the brain.

gyte (git), a. [Origin unknown.] Crazy; mad: as, "Ye're surely gaun gyte" (Moir's "Mansie Wauch," xxvi.). [Sc.]

gyve (jiv), n. [ME. gyves, gyves; origin uncertain.] A shackle, esp. for the leg; a fetter: chiefly in pl.: as, "The villains march wide betwixt the legs, as if they had gyves on; for indeed I had the most of them out of prison" (Shakspeare's "1 Henry IV.," iv. 2. 44). [Archaic.] — gyve, v. t.; gyved, gyving. To shackle; fetter: as, "Those yron fetters wherewith he was gyv'd, The badges of reproach, he threw away" (Spenser's "Faerie Queene," v. 4. 35). [Archaic.] senses); the dress or costume proper to a particular rank, profession, etc., esp. the dress of a religious order; a woman's riding-dress. — hab'it, v. t. To dress; clothe; array: as, "I discerned Jack Waller, habited in a very accurate black frock and dark trousers" (Lever's "Harry Lorrequer," xi.).

hab-it (hab'it), v. [OF. F. habiter, < L. habitare, have frequently, inhabit, dwell, freq. of habere, have: cf. habit.] I.† intr. To dwell; reside. II. tr. To dwell in; inhabit. [Archaic.] — hab'it-a-ble, a. [OF. F. habitable, < L. habitabilis.] Capable of being inhabited; suitable for a habitation. — hab'it-a-bil'i-ty (-bil'i-ti), hab'it-a-ble-ness, n.

— hab'it-a-bly, adv. — hab'it-an-cy (-i-tān-si), n. Inhabitation; residence; also, inhabitants collectively. — hab'it-ant, n. [OF. F. habitant, < L. habitans (-ant-), pp. of habitare.] An inhabitant; also (F. pron. ä-bē-tān), a French settler, or a descendant of a French settler, in Canada or Louisiana; esp. one of the farming class.

hab-i-tat (hab'i-tat), n. [L., 'it dwells,' 3d pers. sing. pres. ind. of habitare, E. habit.] Place of abode; habitation; in zool. and bot., the locality (the geographical region or regions) in which an animal or plant naturally lives or grows; a particular spot or place where a given animal or plant is found; also, the kind of place where a given animal or plant naturally lives or grows, as warm seas, mountain-tops, fresh waters, etc.

hab-i-ta-tion (hä-bi-tā'shōn), n. [OF. F. habitation, < L. habitatio (-n-), < habitare, E. habit.] The act of inhabiting; occupancy by inhabitants; also, a place of abode; a dwelling.

hab-it-mak-er (hab'it-mä'kēr), n. A tailor who makes habits, esp. women's riding-habits.

ha-bit-u-al (hä-bit'ū-äl), a. [ML. habitualis, < L. habitus, E. habit.] Of the nature of a habit, or fixed by or resulting from habit (as, a habitual tendency or practice; habitual courtesy; a habitual smile); customary; also, being such by habit (as, a habitual theater-goer; a habitual drunkard); also, commonly used, occurring, seen, etc., or usual (as, a habitual resort; a habitual experience or sight). — ha-bit-u-al-ly, adv. — ha-bit-u-al-ness, n.

ha-bit-u-ate (hä-bit'ū-ät), v. t.; -ated, -ating. [LL. habituatus, pp. of habituare, < L. habitus, E. habit.] To accustom (a person, the mind, etc.), as to something; render used (to). — ha-bit-u-a'tion (-ä'shōn), n. The act of habituating, or the state of being habituated.

hab-i-tude (hab'i-tüd), n. [OF. F. habitude, < L. habitudo, < habere (pp. habitus), have.] Habit, or customary condition or character (as, "His real habitude gave life and grace to appertainings and to ornament": Shakspeare's "Lover's Complaint," 114); also, a habit or custom (as, "The wilderness required . . . habitudes of which they were totally deficient": Irving's "Captain Bonneville," vi.); also, relation; relationship; association or intercourse.

ha-bit-u-é (hä-bit'ū-ä), n. [F., pp. of habituare, < LL. habituare: see habituare.] A habitual frequenter of a place; also, one addicted to some habit, as the taking of a drug.

hab-ro-come (hab'rō-kōm), n. [NL. Habrocoma, < Gr. ἀβρός, graceful, delicate, + κόμη, hair.] Any animal of the fat, fäte, fär, fäll, äsk, färe; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviäry, elect, agōny, intö, ünite; (obscured) eränt, operä, ärdent, actör, natjüre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; y, you:

South American genus Habrocoma, comprising hystricomorphic rodents with fine, soft fur and large, rounded ears, as H. bennetti, of Chile.

hab-u-tai (hab'ù-ti), n. [Jap.] A soft, plain-woven Japanese silk of even texture.

ha-chure (hà-shōr'), n. [F., < hacher, E. *hatch*³.] In drawing, engraving, etc., a line used in shading or the like, esp. one of the short lines representing the slopes of mountains, etc., on maps.—ha-chure', v. t.; -chured, -churing. To mark or shade with, or indicate by, hachures.

ha-cien-da (ä-syen'dä), n. [Sp., landed property, estate, domestic work, < L. facienda, things to be done, neut. pl. gerundive of facere, do, make.] A landed estate; a farming, stock-raising, mining, or manufacturing establishment in the country; a farm-house or country-house. [Spanish-American.]

hack¹ (hak), v. [AS. haccian (recorded in the compound tōhaccian, hack to pieces) = D. hakken = G. hacken, hack.] I. tr. To make irregular cuts in or upon, as with heavy blows; cut or notch at random; cut or chop (to pieces, off, etc.); also, to roughen or dress (stone), as with a hack-hammer; also, to break up the surface of (the ground); plant (seed) as with a hoe; cut or reap, or uproot, with a hack, sickle, or the like; also, to kick the shins of (an opponent) intentionally, as in football. II. intr. To make rough cuts or notches; deal cutting blows; also, to kick an opponent's shins intentionally, as in football; also, to emit short, frequently repeated coughs.—hack', n. A tool or instrument, as an ax, hoe, mattock, pick, etc., for hacking or cutting; also, a cut, gash, or notch; a cut or notch made in a tree to indicate a particular spot or to mark a path in a forest; a gash in the skin produced by a kick, as in football; also, an act of hacking; a cutting blow; a short, broken cough; sometimes, a hesitation in speech.

hack² (hak), n. [= *hatch*¹.] A frame or rack, as for holding fodder for cattle, or for drying fish, cheese, or bricks.

hack³ (hak). [Short for hackney.] I. n. A horse kept for common hire, or adapted for general work, esp. ordinary riding; specif., a saddle-horse for the road; sometimes, an old or worn-out horse; a jade; also, a coach or carriage kept for hire; a hackney; also, a person who hires himself out for general work, esp. general literary work; a drudge. II. a. Hired; of a hired sort; also, much in use; hackneyed or trite (as, "When the old world grows dull, And we are sick of its hack sounds and sights"; Byron's "Don Juan," iv. 17).—hack³, v. I. tr. To make a hack of; let out for hire; put to indiscriminate use; hence, to render trite or stale by frequent use; hackney. II. intr. To ride on the road, or to ride at an ordinary pace, as distinguished from cross-country or military riding.

hack-a-more (hak'ä-mōr), n. [Sp. já-quima.] Any of several forms of halter used esp. for breaking horses. [Western U. S.] hack-ber-ry (hak'-

Habrocome (H. bennetti).

Hackberry (Celtis occidentalis). — 1 and 2, branches with male and female flowers; 3, branch with fruit; a, flower; b, stamen; c, fruit; d, fruit cut longitudinally; e, embryo.

ber''), n.; pl. -berries (-iz). [Var. of hackberry.] The hackberry (Sc. and north. Eng.); also, the small, edible, cherry-like fruit of American trees of the ulmaceous genus Celtis; a tree bearing this fruit. See cut in preceding column.

hack-but (hak'but), n. Same as harquebus.—hack-but-er', hack'but-ter, n. Same as harquebusier.

hack-er (hak'er), n. One who or that which hacks.

hack-ham-mer (hak'ham'er), n. An adz-like tool for dressing stone.

hack-le¹ (hak'l), n. [= heckle.] A comb for dressing flax or hemp; also, one of the long, slender feathers on the neck or saddle of certain birds, as the domestic cock, much used in making artificial flies for anglers; the neck plumage of the domestic cock, etc.; also, a kind of artificial fly for anglers; a palmer.—hack-le¹, v. t.; -led, -ling. To comb (flax or hemp) with a hackle; also, to dress (an artificial fly) with a hackle.

hack-le² (hak'l), v. t.; -led, -ling. [Freq. of hack¹.] To cut roughly; hack; mangle.—hack'ly, a. Rough or jagged as if hacked.

hack-man (hak'man), n.; pl. -men. The driver or keeper of a hack or public carriage.

hack-ma-tack (hak'ma-tak), n. [N. Amer. Ind.] The tamarack, Larix laricina, an American larch; also, its wood.

hack-ney (hak'ni). [OF. haquenee: cf. OF. haque, haquet, horse; origin unknown.] I. n.; pl. -neys (-niz). A horse for ordinary riding or (later) driving; also, a horse kept for hire; fig., a hired drudge; also, a carriage kept for hire. II. a. Let out, employed, or done for hire; also, hackneyed; trite.—hack'ney, v. t.; -neyed, -neying. To make a hackney of, as a horse; use as a hack; hence, to make common or stale by frequent use; render commonplace or trite; also, to render habituated or experienced.—hack'neyed, p. a. Made commonplace or trite; stale; also, habituated or experienced (as, "His foreign accent . . . showed him not to be a hackneyed inhabitant of Paris": Irving's "Tales of a Traveler," i. 6).

hack-saw (hak'sá), n. A saw used for cutting metal, consisting typically of a narrow fine-toothed blade fixed in a frame.—hack'saw, v. t. To cut with a hack-saw.

hack-work (hak'werk), n. Work done by a hack, esp. a literary hack.

haque-ton, haque-ton (hak'ton), n. Same as acton.

had (had). Preterit and past participle of have.—had better [a form with a personal subject substituted for the earlier impersonal form, (him, etc.) were better, 'it were better (for him, etc.)'], would find it better to; would better: as, he had better be careful; perhaps I had better go. Similarly, had liefer, and the later phrases had rather, had sooner (would preferably), and hence had liefest, had as lief, had as soon, etc.

had-die (had'i), n. Same as haddock. [Sc.]

had-dock (had'ok), n.; pl. haddocks or (esp. collectively) haddock. [ME. haddock; origin unknown.] A food-fish, Melanogrammus aeglefinus, of the northern Atlantic, allied to but smaller than the cod; also, any of various allied fishes.

hade (hād), v.

i.; haded, had-

ing. [Origin uncertain.] In mining and geol., to incline from a vertical position.—hade, n. In mining and geol., the inclination of a vein or the like from a vertical position; the complement of the dip.

Ha-des (hā'dēz), n. [Gr. ᾍδης (ǎdēs).] The lord of the lower world of Greek mythology; Pluto; also, the gloomy subterranean abode of departed spirits or shades over which he ruled (as, "the enthroned Persephone in Hades": Tennyson's "Princess," iv. 419); also, esp. in the Revised Version of the New Testament, the abode or state of the dead; also [cap. or l. c.], hell, the abode of evil and condemned spirits (colloq.).—Ha-de-an (hā'dē-an or hā-dē'an), a.

Haddock (Melanogrammus aeglefinus).

(variable) đ as d or j, ş as s or sh, ţ as t or ch, ţ as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; '', secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

hadj, hadj-i (haj, haj'ē). See hajj, hajji.

had-ro-saur (had'rō-sār), n. [NL. hadrosaurus, < Gr.

δρόπος, thick, stout, + σαῦρος, lizard.] An extinct dinosaurian reptile of the genus Hadrosaurus, of gigantic size.

hae (hā), v. Scotch form of have.

hæma-, etc., hæmato-, etc., hæmo-, etc. See hema-, etc., hemo-, etc., hemo-, etc.

ha-fiz (hā'fiz), n. [Ar. hāfiz.] A title of a Mohammedan who knows the Koran by heart.

haft¹ (häft), n. [AS. hæft = D. and G. heft = Icel. hepti, haft.] A handle, esp. of a cutting or thrusting instrument, as a knife, sword, dagger, etc.—haft¹, v. t. To furnish with a haft or handle; set in a haft.

haft² (häft), v. t. [Origin uncertain: cf. *haft*¹, v.] To fix; settle; establish. [Sc. and north. Eng.]-haft², n. A fixed or established place of abode. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

hag¹ (hag), n. [ME. hagge, hegge: cf. AS. hægtesse, G. hexe, witch.] A female evil spirit, demon, goblin, or ghost (archaic); also, a witch (as, "How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags!" Shakspeare's "Macbeth," iv. 1. 48); hence, a repulsive (and often vicious or malicious) old woman; also, any of the eel-like marine cyclostomes constituting the group or order Hyperotreta (or Myxinoidei), notable esp. for their circular suckorial mouth and their habit of boring into the bodies of fishes.—hag¹, v. t.; hagged, hagging.

Hadrosaur.

Hag (Myxine glutinosa).

To torment, worry, or harass (as, "That makes them in the dark see visions, And hag themselves with apparitions": Butler's "Hudibras," iii. 3); also, to tire; fag. [Now prov.]

hag² (hag), v. t.; hagged, hagging. [Cf. Icel. höggva, strike, hew, akin to E. hew.] To hew; chop; hack; cut. [Now Sc. and prov. Eng.]-hag², n. A hewing or cutting; a heavy cutting stroke; a notch or mark. [Sc. and prov. Eng.]

hag³ (hag), n. [Cf. Icel. högg, a stroke, hewing, gap, ravine, and E. *hag*².] An abrupt, cliff-like eminence; also, wild, broken ground; rocky moorland; also, a break or cutting in a peat-bog; a soft spot in boggy land; also, a firm spot in a bog (as, "A small and shaggy gag, That through a bog, from hag to hag, Could bound": Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," iv. 5). [Sc. and prov. Eng.]

hag-ber-ry (hag'ber'ri), n.; pl. -berries (-iz). [From Scand.: cf. Dan. hæggebær.] The fruit of a European cherry-tree, Prunus padus, or the tree itself (Sc. and prov. Eng.); also, the American hackberry.

hag-den, hag-don (hag'den, -don), n. [Origin obscure.]

Any of various shearwaters (birds), esp. the greater shearwater, Puffinus major.

hag-fish (hag'fish), n. A hag (cyclostome).

hag-ga-dah (hag'gā-dā), n.; pl. -dōth (-dōth). [Heb. haggādā, 'narrative,' < higgād, tell.] In Jewish lit., a legend, anecdote, parable, or the like; hence [cap.], the non-legal portion of rabbinical literature; esp., the free exposition or illustration, chiefly homiletical, of the Scripture. Cf. hala-

Hagden, or Greater Shearwater (Puffinus major).

kah and midrash.—hag-gad-ic, hag-gad-i-cal (hag-gad'ik, -i-kal), a. Pertaining to or of the nature of a haggadah; of or pertaining to the Haggadah.—hag-ga-dist (-dist), n. A writer of haggadoth; also, a student of the Haggadah.—hag-ga-dis-tic (hag-a-dis'tik), a.

hag-gard (hag'gārd). [F. hagard, wild (orig. of a falcon); perhaps from Teut. (cf. G. hag, hedge, wood).] I. a. Wild or untamed (used esp., in falconry, of a hawk caught after it has assumed adult plumage); also, wild-looking, as from prolonged suffering, anxiety, exertion, want, etc.; careworn; gaunt. II. n. A haggard hawk. Cf. eyas.—hag-gard-ly, adv.—hag-gard-ness, n.

hag-ged (hag'ed), a. [See *hag*¹.] Hag-like; also, haggard. [Chiefly prov. Eng.]

hag-gis (hag'is), n. [ME. hagese, hagas: cf. *hag*².] A dish made of the pluck of a sheep, etc., minced with suet and oatmeal, seasoned, and boiled in the stomach of the animal. [Now chiefly Sc.]

hag-gish (hag'ish), a. Of or like a hag; old and ugly: as, "On us both did haggish age steal on" (Shakspeare's "All's Well," i. 2. 29).—hag-gish-ness, n.

hag-gle (hag'gl), v.; -gled, -gling. [Freq. of *hag*².] I. tr. To mangle in cutting; hack; also, to harass with wrangling or haggling. II. intr. To hack; also, to wrangle, dispute, or cavil; esp., to make difficulties in bargaining; bargain in a petty and tedious manner (as, "He went marketing in the morning to haggle with tradesmen over fish . . . tapioca, and so forth": Kipling's "Light That Failed," xiv.).—hag-gle, n. The act or an act of haggling.—hag-gler, n.

hagio-. Form of Gr. ἅγιος, sacred, holy, used in combination.

ha-gi-oc-ra-cy (hā-jī-ok'ra-si or hag-i-), n.; pl. -cies (-siz). [See hagio- and -cracy.] Government by a body of persons esteemed as holy; a sacred or sacerdotal government.

Ha-gi-og-ra-pha (hā-jī-og'ra-fā or hag-i-), n. pl. [LL., < Gr. ἀγιόγραφα, < ἅγιος, sacred, + γράφειν, write.] The books which form the third of the three Jewish divisions of the Old Testament, comprising Psalms, Proverbs, Job, Canticles, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Esther, Daniel, Ezra, Nehemiah, and 1 and 2 Chronicles. Cf. law and prophet.—ha-gi-og'ra-pher, n. A writer of sacred books; esp., one of the writers of the Hagiographa; also, a writer of lives of the saints; a hagiologist.—ha-gi-og'ra-phy, n.; pl. -phies (-fiz). [See -graphy.] The writing of the lives of the saints; hagiology.—ha-gi-o-graph'ic, ha-gi-o-graph'i-cal (-ō-graf'ik, -i-kal), a.

ha-gi-ol-a-try (hā-jī-ol'a-tri or hag-i-), n. [See hagio- and -latry.] The worship of saints.—ha-gi-ol'a-ter, n.—ha-gi-ol'a-trous, a.

ha-gi-ol-o-gy (hā-jī-ol'ō-jī or hag-i-), n.; pl. -gies (-jiz). [See hagio- and -logy.] That branch of literature which deals with the lives and legends of the saints; the list and legends of the saints, and, by extension, of popular heroes; also, a work on the lives and legends of the saints.—ha-gi-o-log'ic, ha-gi-o-log'i-cal (-ō-loj'ik, -i-kal), a.—ha-gi-ol-o-gist, n.

ha-gi-o-scope (hā-jī-ō-skōp or hag'i-), n. [See hagio- and -scope.] In arch., an opening in a wall or other barrier in a church, to afford a view of the chief altar to worshipers in the chapels, side aisles, or the like.—ha-gi-o-scop'ic (-skop'ik), a.

hag-moth (hag'mōth), n. A North American moth, Phobetrus pithecium, whose larva, which has curious hairy appendages somewhat suggesting disheveled locks of hair, feeds on a great variety of trees and plants.

hag-ride (hag'rid), v. t.; pret. -rode, pp. -ridden, ppr. -riding. To ride as a hag does; oppress with or as with nightmare: chiefly in hag-ridden, pp.

hag-ta-per (hag'tā'pēr), n. [Appar. orig. Hig's or Hick's taper: see hick.] The common mullen (weed), Verbascum thapsus.

hah (hā), interj. See ha.

ha-ha (hā'hā), n. [F. haha; said to represent an exclamation of surprise at such a hindrance to passage.] A barrier consisting of a trench or ditch; a sunk fence.

Larva of Hag-moth, natural size.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒ, then; y, you;

Hah-ne-mann-i-an (hä-ne-man'i-an), a. Pertaining to S. C. F. Hahnemann (1755-1843), a German physician, founder of the homeopathic system of medicine. — Hah'-ne-mann-ism (-man-izm), n. The medical theories of Dr. Hahnemann; homeopathy.

Hai-duk (hi'dük), n. [= G. heiduck, < Hung. hajdu, pl. hajdu, prob. < Turk. haidüd, marauder, brigand.] A brigand or bandit among the Balkan Slavs; also, one of a former class of mercenary foot-soldiers of Magyar stock, distinguished for their bravery; also [cap. or l. c.], a male servant or attendant dressed in Hungarian semi-military costume; a lackey.

haik (hik), n. [Ar.] An oblong piece of cloth used as an outer garment by the Arabs.

hai-kwan (hi-kwän'), n. [Chinese.] Maritime customs in China.

hail¹ (hāl), n. [AS. hægl, hagol, = D. and G. hagel = Icel. hagl, hail.] Pellets or small (usually rounded) masses of ice falling from the clouds in a shower; also, a shower or storm of such masses; hence, a shower of anything, as shot. — hail¹, v. I. intr. To pour down hail; fall as hail. II. tr. To pour down as or like hail.

hail² (hāl), interj. [ME. hail, heyl, prop. adj., hale, sound, well, < Icel. heill, hale, whole: see *hale*² and whole.] An exclamation of salutation or greeting: used absolutely, or followed by to: as, "Hail, King of the Jews!" (Mark, xv. 18); "Hail to the Chief who in triumph advances!" (Scott's "Lady of the Lake," ii. 19). — hail², *n.*¹ [Icel. heill, good luck, happiness.] Luck; fortune: now only in the phrase 'all hail,' used in salutation. — hail², v. I. tr. To salute with 'hail!' hence, in general, to salute or greet; welcome; also, to call out to, in order to attract attention (as, "The huge Earl Doorm . . . like one that hails a ship, Cried out with a big voice": Tennyson's "Geraint and Enid," 540). II. intr. To call out in order to attract attention. — to hail from, to come from as the port of registry, or of departure on a voyage, as a ship; hence, to belong to as the place of birth or residence. — hail², *n.*² An exclamation of 'hail!' (as, "On whom the angel Hail Bestow'd; the holy salutation used Long after to blest Mary, second Eve": Milton's "Paradise Lost," v. 385); a salutation or greeting; also, the act of hailing; a shout or call to attract attention. — within hail, near enough to be hailed; within reach of the sound of the voice. — hail'er, n. — hail'-fel'low, a. and adv. On terms of familiar accost or intercourse: often in the form hail-fellow-well-met. — Hail Ma-ry (mā'ri). Same as Ave Maria, which see.

hail-stone (hāl'stōn), n. A pellet of hail.

hail-storm (hāl'stōrm), n. A storm with hail; a precipitation of hail.

hail-y (hā'li), a. Consisting of or characterized by hail.

hair (hār). [AS. hær = D. and G. haar = Icel. hār, hair.] I. n. One of the numerous fine, usually cylindrical filaments growing from the skin and forming the characteristic coat of most mammals; a similar fine, filamentous outgrowth from the body of insects, etc.; also, the aggregate of hairs which grow on an animal; the natural covering of the human head (as, "My hair is grey, but not with years": Byron's "Prisoner of Chillon," i.); cuticle; b, deeper parts of skin; c, a hair; d, erecting muscle; e, sebaceous glands. Section of Skin, showing the roots of two Hairs. (Highly magnified.) — a, cuticle; b, deeper parts of skin; c, a hair; d, erecting muscle; e, sebaceous glands.

something resembling a hair or a mass of hair; often, a hair taken to represent very small magnitude, measure, etc.; a jot or tittle; the least degree; also, sort† or kind†; character† or quality†; also, cloth made of hair; haircloth; a mat or wrapping of such cloth; in bot., a filamentous outgrowth of the epidermis.

II. a. Made of or with hair (as, hair jewelry; a hair shirt, a garment of coarse haircloth, made in the form of a shirt or a girdle, worn next the skin by ascetics and penitents); stuffed with hair (as, a hair mattress).

— hair, v. I. intr. To produce or grow hair; form hair-like fibers. II. tr. To free from hair.

hair-breadth (hār'bredth). I. n. The breadth or diameter of a hair; a very small space or distance. II. a. Extremely narrow or close: as, a hairbreadth escape.

hair-brush (hār'brush), n. A brush for dressing the hair.

hair-cloth (hār'klōth), n. Cloth or fabric made wholly or in part of hair, as of the horse or the camel; also, an article, as a shirt, made of such cloth.

hair-dress-er (hār'dres'ēr), n. One whose business it is to dress or trim the hair. — hair'-dress'ing, n.

haired (hārd), a. Having hair; covered with hair.

hair-i-ness (hār'i-nes), n. Hairy condition.

hair-less (hār'les), a. Without hair; bald. — hair'-less-ness, n.

hair-line (hār'lin), n. A line or rope of hair; also, a very slender line, as a stroke made in writing or a stripe on a textile fabric; also, a fabric woven with very fine lines or stripes; in printing, a very thin line on the face of a type; also, a style of type consisting entirely of such lines.

hair-oil (hār'oil), n. An oil or oily preparation for dressing the hair.

hair-pin (hār'pin), n. A pin used by women for fastening up the hair or adjusting a head-dress: in a common form, a slender U-shaped piece of wire, shell, or other material.

hair's-breadth (hār'bredth), n. and a. Same as hair-breadth.

hair-seal (hār'sēl), n. Any of various seals with coarse hair and no soft underlying fur: distinguished from fur-seal.

hair-space (hār'spās), n. In printing, the thinnest metal space used to separate words, etc.

hair-split-ter (hār'split'ēr), n. One who makes minute or excessively fine distinctions, as in reasoning. — hair'-split'-ting, n. and a.

hair-spring (hār'spring), n. A fine hair-like spring in a timepiece, for regulating the motion of the balance-wheel.

hair-stroke (hār'strōk), n. A fine stroke or line in writing or printing.

hair-tail (hār'tāl), n. An acanthopterygian marine fish, Trichiurus lepturus, with a silvery band-like body terminating in a hair-like tail, common in tropical and sub-tropical Atlantic waters; any fish of the family Trichiuridae.

Hairtail (Trichiurus lepturus).

hair-trigger

(hār'trig'ēr), n. A trigger that allows the firing mechanism of a firearm to be operated by very slight pressure.

hair-y (hār'i), a.; compar. hairier, superl. hairiest. Covered with hair; having much hair; characterized by hair-like growths, as a plant; also, consisting of or resembling hair.

Hai-ti-an (hā'ti-an). I. a. Of or pertaining to Haiti.

II. n. A native or inhabitant of Haiti; also, the language of Haiti.

hajj, hadj (haj), n. [Ar. hajj, < hajja, set out, go on a pilgrimage.] A pilgrimage to Mecca, as enjoined upon Mohammedans. — haj-jī, hadj-i (haj'ē), n.; pl. hajjis, hadjis (-ēz). [Ar. hajjī.] A Mohammedan who has performed his hajj (as, "I greeted him as poor Arabs in a desert village greet the Hadjī or pilgrim who returns from Mecca, and has seen the Prophet's tomb and the holy stone," G. W. Curtis's "Howadji in Syria," i. 3: often used as a title); also, a Greek or Armenian who has visited the Holy Sepulcher at Jerusalem.

hake (hāk), n. [ME. hake; origin uncertain.] Any of the marine fishes constituting the genus Merlucius, related to and resembling the cod, as M. bilinearis ('silver hake') of the New England coast; also, any of various related marine fishes, esp. of the genus Urophycis, as U. tenuis ('white hake') of the New England coast.

Silver Hake (Merlucius bilinearis).

ha-kim¹ (hā-kēm'), n. [Ar. hakim.] In Mohammedan countries, a wise or learned man; a physician.

ha-kim² (hā'kim), n. [Ar. hakim.] In Mohammedan countries, a ruler; a governor; a judge.

ha-la-kah, ha-la-chah (hā-lā'kā), n.; pl. -koth, -choth (-kōth). [Heb. halākāh, 'rule to go by,' < hālak, walk, go.] In Jewish lit., usage, custom, or tradition; [cap.] the body of traditional or oral laws of the Jews, as explained by the rabbis, supplementing or interpreting the law of the Scripture; also [l. c.], a single tradition or law; an explanation or decision by a rabbi. Cf. haggadah, midrash, and mishnah.

—ha-lak'ic, ha-lach'ic (-lak'ik), a. Of or pertaining to the Halakah. —ha-la'kist, ha-la'chist (-lā'kist), n. One who gives or renders halakoth.

ha-la-tion (hā-lā'shən), n. [From halo.] In photog., the effect of excess of light, or of adventitious reflected light, on some part of a negative, as when an interior view includes a window the light-rays from which produce a fog which spreads over the neighboring parts of the picture.

hal-berd (hal'bērd), n. [OF. F. hallebarde; from Teut.] A long-handled, ax-like military weapon in various forms, surmounted by a long point: esp. used in the 15th and 16th centuries. —hal-ber-dier' (-bērdēr'), n. [F. hallebardier.] A soldier, guard, or attendant armed with a halberd.

hal-bert (hal'bērt), n. Same as halberd.

hal-cy-on (hal'si-ŋ). [L. halcyon, prop. alcyon, < Gr. ἀλκυών, kingfisher.] I. n. A bird, usually identified with the kingfisher, fabled by the ancients to breed in a nest floating on the sea, about the time of the winter solstice, and to have the power of charming winds and waves so as to calm the sea; hence, any of various kingfishers, esp. of the genus Halcyon. II. a. Of or pertaining to the halcyon or kingfisher (see halcyon days, below); also, calm, tranquil, or peaceful.

halcyon days, days (commonly 14) of calm weather supposed by the ancients to occur about the winter solstice when the halcyon was brooding; hence, days of tranquillity or peace; a quiet, happy period.

hale¹ (hāl), v.; haled, haling. [OF. F. haler, hale, haul; from Teut. (cf. G. holen, fetch, haul): cf. haul.] I. tr. To haul, pull, or draw with force (as, "Galling His kingly hands haling ropes"; Shakspeare's "Pericles," iv. 1. 55); also, to drag along, or bring as by dragging (as, to hale an evil-doer to prison). [Archaic.] II. intr. To haul, pull, or tug: as, "A yoke of great-necked stolid oxen were patiently haling at the plough" (Stevenson's "Travels with a Donkey," i. 3). [Archaic.] hale² (hāl), a.; compar. haler, superl. halest. [AS. hāl = Icel. heill, hale, whole: see *hail*² and whole.] Free from disease or bodily infirmity, robust, or vigorous (as, "I was strong and hale of body then," Tennyson's "St. Simeon Stylites," 28; a hale old age); also, free from injury, unhurt, or sound (now Sc. and north. Eng.); also, whole, complete, or entire (now Sc. and north. Eng.). —hale'ness, n.

hal-er (hāl'ēr), n. One who hales or hauls. [Archaic.]

half (häf or hāf), a. [AS. healf = D. half = G. halb = Icel. hálfr = Goth. halbs, half.] Being one of the two equal (or approximately equal) parts into which anything is or may be divided; also, being equal to only about half of the full measure (as, half speed); hence, partial or incomplete.

—half blood. See under blood, n., and cf. half-blood.

—half, n.; pl. halves (hävz or hävz). [AS. healf = OHG. halba = Icel. hálfa = Goth. halba, side, part.] Side; part; behalf; also, one of the two equal (or approximately equal) parts into which anything is or may be divided; one of two parts or members associated together as a pair; also, a partner. —by halves, to the extent of a half only; incompletely; half-heartedly. —half, adv. To the extent or measure of half (as, a bucket half full of water); hence, in part, or partly (as, "Half inwardly, half audibly she spoke"; Tennyson's "Marriage of Geraint," 109); to some extent; also (with a negative), to a great extent (as, not half bad).

half-and-half (häf'and-häf'). I. a. Half one thing and half another; half the thing specified and half not. II. n. A mixture of two malt liquors, esp. porter and ale. III. adv. In two equal portions.

half=back (häf'bak), n. In football, etc., one of the players behind the forward line. See *back*², n.

half=baked (häf'bäkt'), a. Baked only half enough, or insufficiently cooked, as food; fig., not properly completed in the making or preparation; ill-digested or crude (as, half-baked measures or schemes); imperfectly educated; wanting mature judgment or experience (as, half-baked theorists); sometimes, half-witted.

half-beak (häf'bēk), n. Any of certain marine fishes constituting the genus Hemirhamphus and allied genera, having the long lower jaw extending far beyond the short upper jaw.

Halfbeak (Hyporhamphus, or Hemirhamphus, unjasciatus).

half=blood

(häf'blud), n. [See half blood, under blood, n.] A person whose parents are of different races; a half-breed. —half'=blood'ed, a. Having parents of different races or breeds; esp., of superior race or breed by one parent only.

half=boot (häf'büt), n. A boot reaching about half-way to the knee.

half=bred (häf'bred), a. Of mixed breed; mongrel; also, imperfectly acquainted with the rules of good breeding.

—half'=breed, n. The offspring of parents of different races; one who is half-blooded; esp., the offspring of a white person and an American Indian; also [cap.], in U. S. politics, a member of that faction of the Republican party in New York State in 1881 which opposed the Stalwarts, the faction in control.

half=broth-er (häf'bruth'ēr), n. A brother by one parent only.

half=caste (häf'kást), n. A person of mixed race; esp., one of mixed European and East Indian parentage.

half=cock (häf'kok'), n. The position of the hammer of a firearm when raised only half-way and there held by the mechanism so that the trigger will not operate. —to go off at half=cock, fig., to act prematurely; take action without due preparation or forethought. —half'=cock', v. t. To set (a firearm) at half-cock.

Obverse.

Reverse.

Half-crown of Queen Anne, 1704. — British Museum.

half=crown (häf'kroun'), n. A British silver coin of half the value of the crown, or worth two shillings and sixpence.

fat, fāte, für, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, flect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actor, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; tū, then; y, you;

half-grown (häf'grön'), a. Having reached only half the full growth; at an intermediate stage of physical development.

half-heart-ed (häf'här'ted), a. Having or showing little heart, enthusiasm, or ardor (as, half-hearted supporters or support); lukewarm. — half'-heart'ed-ly, adv. — half'=heart'ed-ness, n.

half-hitch (häf'hich'), n. Naut., a hitch formed by passing the end of a rope round its standing part and then through the bight.

half-hol-i-day (häf'hol'i-dä), n. The half, usually the latter half, of a working-day, given up to recreation; also, a day on which work is carried on only during half or a part of the usual working-hours.

half-hose (häf'höz), n. pl. Short hose or stockings; socks.

half-hour (häf'our'), n. The half of an hour, a period of thirty minutes. — half'=hour'ly, a. and adv.

half-ling (häf'ling'), I. n. A half-grown person; also, a halpenny. [Sc.] II. a. Half-grown. [Sc.] — half'ling, half'lings, adv. Half; partly, or to some extent. [Sc.]

half-mast (häf'mäst'), n. A position half-way (or a smaller distance) below the top of a mast, staff, etc.: as, a flag at half-mast (as a mark of respect for the dead, or as a signal of distress). — half'=mast', v. t. To hang at half-mast, as a flag.

half-meas-ure (häf'mezh'ūr), n. A measure inadequate for the full accomplishment of a purpose; an only partially effective measure.

half-moon (häf'mön'), n. The moon at the quadratures, when half its disk appears illuminated; hence, something of the shape of a half-moon, or, loosely, of a crescent; in fort., a demilune (as, "The half moon . . . rose before them bristling with cannon": Motley's "Dutch Republic," iii. 8).

half-mourn-ing (häf'mör'ning), n. The style of dress, esp. as to color (black with white, lavender, or gray), appropriated to the latter half of a period of formal mourning, or adopted for use less extreme than full or deep mourning.

half-note (häf'nöt), n. In music, a note equivalent to one half of a whole-note; a minim.

half-pay (häf'pä'), I. n. Half the full wages or salary; reduced pay (not literally half of the full pay); a reduced allowance paid to an officer in the army or navy when not in actual service, or after retirement at a prescribed time. II. a. Receiving, or entitled to, half-pay: as, a half-pay officer.

half-pen-ny (hä'pē-ni, sometimes häf'-). I. n.; pl. pennies (-pē-niz) or -pence (-pēns) (see penny). A British coin (at first of silver, later of copper, now of bronze) of half the value of a penny; the sum of half a penny. II. a. Of the price or value of a halpenny; hence, of trifling value, or paltry (as, "a half-penny matter": Sterne's "Tristram Shandy," i. 1).

Obverse.

Reverse.

Halfpenny of Charles II. — British Museum.

half-seas o-ver (häf'sēz ō'vēr), Half-way across the sea; hence, half-way on any course (esp. fig.); often, half drunk (humorous: as, "a quarrelsome toper . . . who, when half-seas-over, plays the very devil," Irving's "Tales of a Traveler," iv. 1).

half-shell (häf'shel'), n. One valve of a bivalve: as, oysters on the half-shell (as when served raw at table).

half-sis-ter (häf'sis'tēr), n. A sister by one parent only.

half-sole (häf'söl'), n. That part of the sole of a boot or shoe which extends from the shank to the end of the toe. — half'=sole', v. t.; -soled, -soling. To repair by putting on a new half-sole.

half-step (häf'step'), n. In music, a semitone.

half-tide (häf'tid'), n. The state of the tide when at half the height of high water.

half-tim-bered (häf'tim'bērd), a. Of a house or building, having the frame and principal supports of timber, but with the interstices filled in with masonry, plaster, or the like.

half-tint (häf'tint'), n. An intermediate tint or color; a tone intermediate between the high light and the deep shade of a painting, etc.

half-ti-tle (häf'ti'tl'), n. In printing, a shortened or short title of a book used at the head of the first page of text; also, a bastard title; also, the title of any subdivision of a book that immediately precedes that subdivision, when printed on a full page.

half-tone (häf'tōn), n. In music, a semitone; in painting, etc., a half-tint; in photo-engraving, a process in which gradation of tone, as in a photograph, is obtained by means of a system of minute dots between fine intersecting blank lines produced by a screen placed in the camera a short distance in front of the sensitized plate; a metal plate made by this process, or a print from it.

half-way (häf'wä'), adv. Half over the way (as, to go half-way to Rome); to or at half the distance (as, the rope reaches only half-way; at a point half-way to the goal); to half the full extent (as, the morning is half-way over). — half'=way, a. Midway, as between two places or points (as, a half-way house); going to or covering only half the full extent, or partial (as, half-way measures).

half-wit-ted (häf'wit'ed), a. Not having all the wits or mental faculties; mentally defective; imbecile. — half'=wit'ted-ness, n.

half-year (häf'yēr'), n. Half of a year; a period or term of six months; also, half of a school or other year, whatever its length. — half'=year'ly. I. a. Happening every half-year, or twice in each year; semiannual. II. adv. Twice in each year; semiannually.

hal-i-but (hal'i-but), n.; pl. halibuts or (esp. collectively) halibut. [ME. halybutte, appar. < haly, holy, + butte, kind of fish; perhaps so called as being eaten on holy days.] The largest species of flatfish, Hippoglossus hippoglossus, of northern seas, sometimes weighing several hundred pounds, and much used for food; also, any of various other similar flatfishes.

Halibut (Hippoglossus hippoglossus).

hal-ide (hal'id or -id, or hä'lid or -lid). [Gr. ἅλς (ál-), salt.] In chem.: I. n. A binary compound formed by the direct union of a halogen with an element or radical; a haloid salt. II. a. Of the nature of, or pertaining to, a halide; haloid.

hal-i-dom, hal-i-dome (hal'i-dŏm, -dŏm), n. [AS. hāligdōm, < hālig, holy: see -dom.] Holiness† or sanctity†; also, a holy place, or sanctuary (archaic); also, a thing regarded as holy, as a relic (archaic: formerly much used in oaths and asseverations: as, "Now sure, and by my halldome . . . Ye a great master are," Spenser's "Mother Hubberds Tale," 545).

hal-i-eu-tic (hal-i-ū'tik), a. [L. halieuticus, < Gr. ἁλιευτικός, < ἅλιευν, to fish, < ἅλς, sea.] Of or pertaining to fishing. — hal-i-eu'tics, n. The art or practice of fishing.

hal-ite (hal'it or hāl'it), n. [Gr. ἅλς (ál-), salt.] Native rock-salt.

hal-i-to-sis (hal-i-tō'sis), n. [NL., < L. halitus, breath.] Bad or offensive breath.

hal-i-tus (hal'i-tus), n. [L., < halare, breathe.] The breath; also, an exhalation; a vapor.

hall (hāl), n. [AS. heall = OS. and OHG. halla = Icel. hall, höll, hall; akin to AS. helan, cover, hide, L. celare, hide, Gr. καλύπτειν, cover: cf. hell, *helm*², and *hull*¹.] A large, roofed place, as a temple, palace, etc.†; also, the large main room in a castle, palace, mansion, or the like, devoted to common use, or used for receptions, banquets, etc.; a large room in a house, for common use (as, the servants' hall, in which the servants dine); also, the proprietor's residence on a large landed estate, esp. in Great Britain; a mansion or residence (used esp. in the proper names of residences of imposing or stately character, and in certain phrases, as 'bachelor's hall,' and 'liberty hall,' which see below; also, a large building for residence, instruction, or other purposes, as in a university or college; the occupants of such a building; in some American colleges, a room or building appropriated to the use of a students' literary or other society, or the society itself; in English colleges, a large room in which the members and students dine in common, or dinner in such a room (as, "You ought to dine in hall perhaps four days a week. Hall is at five o'clock": Hughes's "Tom Brown at Oxford," i.); also, a building belonging to a trade, guild, or society, used for the transaction of its business (as, Stationers' Hall, London: see under stationer); the society itself; also, a large public building, as for the transaction of public business, the holding of assemblies or entertainments, or other use; also, a large room devoted to such uses; an assembly-room; also, the entrance-room or vestibule of a house or building; a corridor or passageway in a building (U. S.: as, "Minnie . . . led her through the dark hall to the parlor," Tarkington's "Gentleman from Indiana," ix.).

(variable) đ as d or j, š as s or sh, ț as t or ch, ž as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; †, primary accent; †, secondary accent; ‡, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

—a hall! a hall! an exclamation formerly used to call for room in a crowd as for an exhibition or a dance, or to call people together for any ceremony or spectacle, or to summon servants: as, "A hall, a hall! give room! and foot it, girls" (Shakspeare's "Romeo and Juliet," i. 5. 28).

—bachelor's hall or bacheior hall, the abode of a bachelor, or of a man or men only: as, "A worthy fox-hunting old Baronet, who kept bachelor's hall in jovial style in an ancient, rook-haunted family mansion" (Irving's "Tales of a Traveler," i. 2). — liberty hall, a house where every one is allowed or expected to do as he likes: as, "Gentlemen—pray be under no constraint in this house. This is Liberty Hall, gentlemen. You may do just as you please here" (Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," ii. 1).

hal-lan (hal'ān), n. [Origin uncertain.] A partition between the door of a cottage and the fireplace, to keep off drafts; also, the space at the door thus partitioned off. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

hal-lel (hal'el or hā-lāl'), n. [Heb. hallel, praise.] In Jewish ritual, a hymn of praise consisting of Ps. cxlii.—cxviii.; also, another such hymn consisting of Ps. cxxxvi. ('great hallel').

hal-le-lu-iah, hal-le-lu-jah (hal-ē-lō'yā'), [Heb. hal-le-lūyāh, 'praise ye Jehovah.'] I. interj. Praise ye the Lord! II. n. An exclamation of 'halleluiahs!' also, a song of praise to God. — hal'le-lu-iat'ic, hal'le-lu-jat'ic (-yat'ik), a.

hal-liard (hal'yārd), n. See halyard.

hall-mark (hāl'mārk), n. [From Goldsmiths' Hall in London, the seat of the Goldsmiths' Company.] An official mark or stamp indicating standard of purity, used in marking gold and silver articles assayed by the Goldsmiths' Company of London; any official or authoritative mark similarly used; fig., any mark or special indication of genuineness, good quality, etc. — hall'=mark, v. t. To mark with a hall-mark. Also fig.

hal-lo, hal-loa (hā-lō'), hal-loo (hā-lō'), interj., n., and v. Same as hallo.

hal-low (hal'ō), n. [AS. hālga, < hālig, E. holy.] A holy person; a saint: now only as in All-hallows, Hallowe'en, etc. — hal'low, v. t. [AS. hālgian, < hālig.] To make holy, or sanctify; invest with a holy or sacred character (as, a place hallowed by memories or associations); also, to declare holy, consecrate, or bless (archaic: as, to hallow a church; "Sword, I will hallow thee for this thy deed," Shakspeare's "2 Henry VI," iv. 10. 72); also, to honor as holy (as, "Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name": Mat. vi. 9); keep or observe (a day, etc.) as holy. — hal'lowed, p. a. Made holy; sacred; consecrated; honored or observed as holy. — hal'lowed-ness, n.

Hal-low-e'en, Hal-low-eeen (hal-ō-ēn'), n. [For All-hallows even (eve).] The evening of Oct. 31st, the eve of All-hallows or All Saints' Day.

Hal-low-mas (hal'ō-mās), n. [For Allhallowmas.] The feast of All-hallows or All Saints, celebrated on Nov. 1.

Hall-statt-i-an (hāl-stāt'i-an), a. Of or pertaining to Hallstatt, a village in Austria; noting or pertaining to a variously dated pre-Christian stage of culture in central Europe, characterized by the use of bronze, the introduction of iron, artistic work in pottery, jewelry, etc., as shown by the contents of a burial-ground of the period found near Hallstatt.

hal-lu-cal (hal'ū-kāl), a. Of or pertaining to the hallux.

hal-lu-ci-nate (ha-lū'si-nāt), v.; -nated, -nating. [L. hallucinatus, pp. of hallucinari, better alucinari, wander in mind, dream: cf. Gr. ἀλβειν, wander in mind.] I. intr. To suffer from illusion or misconception; entertain false notions. [Obs. or archaic.] II. tr. To affect with hallucination.

—hal-lu-ci-na'tion (-nā'shŏn), n. [L. hallucinatio(n).] A suffering from illusion or false notions; an unfounded notion; a belief in an unreality; specif., an apparent perception, as by sight or hearing, for which there is no real external cause (cf. illusion). — hal-lu'ci-na-to-ry (-nā-tō-rī), a. Pertaining to or characterized by hallucination.

hal-lux (hal'uks), n.; pl. halluces (-ū-sēz). [NL., for L. allex, great toe.] The innermost of the five digits normally present in the hind foot of air-breathing vertebrates; in man, the great toe; in birds, usually, the hind toe or inner-toe. Cf. poller.

hall-way (hāl'wā), n. An entrance-hall; also, a corridor, as in a building. [U. S.]

halm, haulm (hām), n. [AS. healm = D. and G. halm = Icel. hālmr, halm, straw: cf. L. culmus, stem, stalk, E. *culm*², and L. calamus, Gr. κάλamos, reed, E. calamus.] Stems or stalks collectively, as of grain or of peas, beans, hops, etc., esp. as used for litter or thatching (chiefly Eng.); also, a single stem or stalk.

hal-ma (hāl'mā), n. [Gr. ἅλμα, a leap, < ἅλσθαι, to leap.] A game played with pieces on a special board by two or four persons.

ha-lo (hā'lō), n.; pl. -los or -loes (-lōz). [L. halos, < Gr. ἅλως, threshing-floor (on which the oxen trod out a circular path), disk, halo.] A white or colored circle of light seen round a luminous body, esp. the moon or the sun (in meteorology, restricted to circles due to the refraction produced by ice particles in the upper atmosphere, and not, as with the true coronas, to the diffraction produced by thin clouds or mist); also, a circle or disk of light represented about the head of a sacred person, as a saint; hence, an ideal glory investing an object as viewed through the medium of feeling or sentiment (as, "My head was in the clouds. I . . . fancied it already encircled by a halo of literary glory": Irving's "Tales of a Traveler," ii. 4). — ha'lō, v.; -loed, -loing. I. tr. To surround with a halo. II. intr. To form a halo, as about something.

hal-o-gen (hal'ō-jen), n. [Gr. ἅλς (āl-), salt: see -gen.] In chem., any of the elements chlorine, iodine, bromine, and fluorine, and sometimes the radical cyanogen, which form a salt by direct union with a metal.

hal-oid (hal'oid or hā'lōid), [Gr. ἅλς (āl-), salt: see -oid.] In chem.: I. a. Noting or pertaining to a salt formed by the union of a halogen with a metal, or a compound formed by the union of a halogen with a hydrocarbon radical. II. n. A haloid salt.

ha-lo-ph-i-lous (ha-lōf'i-lus), a. [Gr. ἅλς (āl-), salt: see -philous.] Salt-loving; of plants and animals, growing in or inhabiting marshes or regions abounding in salt.

hal-o-phyte (hal'ō-fit), n. [Gr. ἅλς (āl-), salt: see -phyte.] A plant growing naturally in soil impregnated with common salt or other salts, as various chenopodiaceous plants of maritime and alkaline regions. — hal-o-phyt'ic (-fit'ik), a.

halt¹ (hālt), a. [AS. healt = OHG. halz = Icel. haltr = Goth. halts, lame.] Lame; crippled; limping; as, "It is better for thee to enter halt into life, than having two feet to be cast into hell" (Mark, ix. 45). [Archaic.] — halt¹, v. i. [AS. healtian.] To be lame; walk lamely; limp; fig., to stand in doubt, waver, or hesitate (as, "How long halt ye between two opinions?" 1 Kings, xviii. 21); also, to proceed in a lame or faulty way, as reasoning, verse, rime, utterance, etc. — halt¹, n. A halting movement or gait; a limp.

halt² (hālt), n. [G. halt, < halten, hold: see *hold*².] A temporary stop, as in marching, traveling, or any onward course: as, to make a halt; to come to a halt; to call a halt (to order a halt, as by troops on the march; hence, to require the discontinuance of any proceeding). — halt², v. I. intr. To make a halt or temporary stop, as in marching, traveling, etc. II. tr. To cause to halt.

hal-ter¹ (hāl'tēr), n. [AS. hælfter = G. helfter, halter; akin to E. helve.] A rope or strap with a noose or head-stall.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry. (elect, agōny, intō, quīte; (obscured) errant, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you, for leading or fastening horses or cattle; also, a rope with a noose for hanging malefactors; hence, death by hanging. —hal'ter¹, v. t. To put a halter on; restrain as by a halter; catch with a noose; also, to hang (a person).

halt'er-2 (hál'tér), n. One who halts, limps, or hesitates.

halt'ing (hál'ting), p. a. That halts; limping; lame; fig., wavering or hesitating; also, feeble, ineffective, or faulty.

—halt'ing-ly, adv. —halt'ing-ness, n.

halve (häv or hāv), v. t.; halved, halving. [ME. halven, halfen, < half, E. half, n.] To divide into halves; share equally; give or take the half of; complete the half of; reduce to half; also, to join, as one piece of timber with another, by cutting out half the thickness of each, so that each may be let into the other; in golf, to play (a hole, match, etc.) in the same number of strokes, as two opponents.

halves (hävz or hāvz), n. Plural of half.

hal-yard (hal'yård), n. [For ME. halier, hallyer, 'that which hales or hauls': cf. *hale*¹.] A rope or tackle used to hoist or lower a sail, yard, flag, etc.

ham¹ (ham), n. [AS. hamn = D. ham = G. dial. hamme, ham.] The part of the leg back of the knee; sometimes, the back of the hock, or the hock itself, of a quadruped; also, the back of the thigh, or the thigh and the buttock together (often in pl.: as, to squat on one's hams); also, the thigh of a slaughtered animal as used for food; specif., that of a hog either fresh or salted and cured; the meat of this part.

ham² (ham), n. [Short for hamfatter.] A theatrical performer of low grade; an inferior actor. [Slang.]

ham-a-dry-ad (ham-ä-dri'ad), n. [L. Hamadryas (pl. Hamadryades), < Gr. Ἀμαδρύας (pl. Ἀμαδρύαδες), < ἄμα, together, + δρῦς, tree, oak.] In class. myth., a wood-nymph fabled to live and die with the tree which she inhabited.

ha-mal, ham-mal (hä-mäl'), n. [Ar. hammāl, < hamala, carry.] An Oriental porter; in western India, a palanquin-bearer; a male house-servant.

ham-a-me-li-da-ceous (ham-ä-mē-li-dä'shius), a. [See hamamelis.] Belonging to the Hamamelidaceæ, a family of shrubs and trees including the witch-hazel, sweet-gum, etc.

ham-a-me-lis (ham-ä-mē'lis), n. [NL., < Gr. ἡμαμηλῖς, kind of fruit-tree, < ἄμα, together, + μήλον, fruit, apple.] Any of the shrubs or small trees constituting the genus Hamamelis, as the witch-hazel, H. virginiana.

Ham-ble-to-ni-an (ham-bl-tō'ni-än), n. [From Hambletonian, a horse (foaled in 1849) said to be so named from Black Hambleton, a race-course in Yorkshire, England.] I. a. Noting or pertaining to a superior breed of American trotting-horses descended from Hambletonian (see etym.), and more remotely from Messenger, an English thoroughbred imported to America in 1788. II. n. A horse of this breed.

Ham-burg (ham'bërg), n. [From Hamburg, city in Germany.] A choice black variety of grape, well adapted for hothouse cultivation; also, a small-sized variety of the domestic fowl; also [l. c.], a machine-made cotton embroidery (edging, insertion, etc.). — Ham'burg steak. Beef chopped while raw, seasoned, and fried or broiled in cakes.

hame¹ (häm), n. [ME. hame = D. haam.] Either of two curved pieces lying upon the collar in the harness of a horse, etc., to which the traces are fastened.

hame² (häm), n. Scotch form of home.

ham-fat-ter (ham'fat'ér), n. [Said to be from an old negro-minstrel song called "The Ham-Fat Man."] A theatrical performer of low grade; a ham. [Slang.]

Ham-ite (ham'it), n. A descendant of Ham, the second son of Noah (see Gen. x. 1, 6-20); a member of any of various races of northern and eastern Africa supposed to be descended from Ham, as the native Egyptians. — Ham-it'ic (-it'ik), a. Of or pertaining to the Hamites; noting or pertaining to a group of languages of northern and eastern Africa, including the ancient Egyptian and the Coptic, Libyan, Somali, etc.

ham-let (ham'let), n. [OF. hamelet, dim. of hamel (F. hameau), hamlet; from Teut., and akin to E. home.] A small village; a little cluster of houses in the country; esp., in England, a village without a church of its own, but belonging to the parish of another village or a town.

ham-mal (hä-mäl'), n. See hamal.

ham-mam (hä-mäm'), n. [Ar. hammām, hot bath.] A Turkish or Oriental bathing establishment.

ham-mer (ham'ér), n. [AS. hamor = D. hamer = G. hammer = Icel. hamarr, hammer.] An instrument consisting of a solid head, usually of metal, set cross-wise on a handle, used for beating metals, driving nails, etc.; sometimes, a mallet or gavel, esp. one used by an auctioneer; in fig. use, an aggressive and destructive foe (as, Edward I., of England, the Hammer of the Scots; St. Augustine, the Hammer of Heretics); also, any of various instruments or devices resembling a hammer in form, action, or use; one of the padded devices by which the strings of a piano are struck; in firearms, that part of the lock which by its fall or action causes the discharge, as by exploding the percussion-cap; the cock; in athletics, a metal ball attached to a long, flexible handle, used in throwing-contests; in anat., the malleus. — ham'mer, v. I. tr. To beat or drive with or as with a hammer; also, to fasten by or as by using a hammer, as in driving nails (as, "All that long morn the lists were hammer'd up": Tennyson's "Princess," v. 358); also, to work with a hammer (often with out); fig., to contrive or work out laboriously (often with out). II. intr. To strike blows with or as with a hammer; fig., to make persistent or laborious attempts.

ham-mer-cloth (ham'ér-klóth), n. [Origin uncertain.] A cloth which covers the driver's seat in some kinds of carriage.

ham-mer-or (ham'ér-ér), n. One who hammers.

ham-mer-hard-en (ham'ér-här'dn), v. t. To harden (metals) by hammering.

ham-mer-head (ham'ér-hed), n. Any of the sharks constituting the family Sphyrnidae, characterized by a head expanded laterally so as to resemble a double-headed hammer, esp. Sphyrna Hammerhead (Sphyrna zygaena).

zygaena, a widely distributed species; also, an American fresh-water fish, Hypentelium nigricans, of the sucker family, with a curiously shaped head.

ham-mer-less (ham'ér-les), a. Having no hammer or no visible hammer; applied esp. to firearms in which the hammer or striking device is concealed.

ham-mer-smith (ham'ér-smith), n. One who works metal with a hammer.

ham-mock¹ (ham'ók), n. [Sp. hamaca; of W. Ind. origin.]

A kind of hanging bed or couch made of canvas, netted cord, or the like.

ham-mock² (ham'ók), n.

[= hum-mock.] A tract of more or less elevated, thickly wooded land within a marshy region; a wooded tract within a region of different character; common in the southeastern U. S., esp. Florida.

ha-mose, ha-mous (hä'mōs, -mus), a. [L. hamus, a hook.] In bot., hooked.

ham-per¹ (ham'për), v. t. [ME. hampren; origin uncertain.] To impede the movements of (a person, animal, etc.), or impede (movement, etc.), by means of some fastening, clog, entanglement, or the like, or as the fastening or other thing does (as, clothing hampers a swimmer); fetter; entangle; catch, or hold fast (as, "Goats . . . I made snares to hamper them, and believe they were more than once taken in them": Defoe's "Robinson Crusoe," i. 10); in general, to impede or embarrass in action or procedure (as, to be hampered by debt, ill health, restrictions, or interference).—ham'per¹, n. Something that hampers, as a shackle (obs. or rare); naut., articles which, while necessary to a ship's equipment, are in the way at certain times (cf. top-hamper).

Salter's Hammock.

ham-per² (ham'pér), n. [For hanaper.] A large basket or wickerwork receptacle, usually with a cover.

ham-shack-le (ham'shak-l), v. t.; -led, -ling. [First element uncertain.] To shackle (a horse, etc.) by means of a rope or strap connecting the head with one foreleg; fig., to curb or restrain.

ham-ster (ham'stér), n. [G.] A short-tailed, rat-like, burrowing rodent, Cricetus frumentarius (or cricetus), with large cheek-pouches, inhabiting parts of Europe and Asia; also, any of various other rodents of the same genus and allied genera; also, the fur.

ham-string (ham'string), n. In man, any of the tendons which bound the ham, or part behind the knee; in quadrupeds, the great tendon at the back of the hock.—ham'string, v. t.; -strung or -stringed, -stringing. To cut the hamstring or hamstrings of and thus disable; hence, to cripple or disable.

ham-u-late (ham'ū-lāt), a. [See hamulus.] In anat. and zool., hooked; in bot., hooked at the tip; covered with little hooks.

ham-u-lus (ham'ū-lus), n.; pl. -li (-lī). [L., dim. of hamus, a hook.] In anat., zool., bot., etc., a small hook or hook-like process.

han-ap (han'ap), n.

[OF. hanap; from Teut.] A goblet or drinking-vessel, often large and ornate. [Obs. or hist.]

han-a-per (han'a-pér), n.

[OF. hanaper, hanapier, hanap case, < hanap: see hanap.] A case for hanaps, etc.†;

a repository for treasure or money†; also, a receptacle, often of wickerwork, for holding documents; also [cap.], a former office or department of the English Court of Chancery, into which fees were paid for the sealing and enrolment of charters, etc.

hance (hāns), n. [Cf. F. hausse, a raising, rise, something serving to raise, and E. enhance.] A lintel†; in arch., the sharply curving portion nearest the impost at either side of an elliptical or similar arch; also, the haunch of an arch; naut., a curved rise from a lower to a higher part, as of the bulwarks from the waist to the quarter-deck.

Han-cock (han'kok). See John Hancock, under John.

hand (hand), n. [AS. hand = D. and G. hand = Icel. hönd (hand-) = Goth. handus, hand.] In man, the terminal, prehensile part of the arm, consisting of the palm and five digits; hence, the corresponding part of the fore limb in Common Hamster (Cricetus frumentarius).

Hanaper.

Bones of Right Human Hand. palmar surface, being the third segment of the fore limb, divided into carpus, metacarpus, and phalanges. — sc, scaphoid; l, semilunar; c, cuneiform; p, pisiform; t, trapezium; 4, trapezoid; m, magnum; 4, unciform; these being the carpal bones, in two series, proximal and distal; — *m*₁ to *m*₅, the first to the fifth metacarpals, constituting the metacarpus; — *P*₁ to *P*₅, the 14 phalanges.

any of the higher vertebrates; loosely, the terminal part of any limb when prehensile, as the hind foot of a monkey, the chela of a crustacean, or (in falconry) the foot of a hawk; hence, possession or power, disposal or control, or custody or care (usually in pl.: as, to put a thing into a person's hands); also, agency or instrumentality (as, to die by one's own hand); also, part or share in something (as, to have a hand in a matter); also, side (right, left, or other: as, on the right hand; on every hand); fig., a side of a subject, question, etc. (as, on the other hand); also, the hand as used in making a promise, taking an oath, etc., and esp. as representing a woman promised, given, or won in marriage; also, a person who does a specified thing, esp. with the hands (as, a book by several hands); also, a person employed in manual labor, as in a factory; a workman or workwoman; specif., each of the members of a ship's crew (as, all hands, the whole crew, or, by extension, all the persons of any company or number); also, a person with reference to action, ability, or skill (colloq.: as, to be a poor hand at writing letters); also, a person considered as a source, as of information or of supply (as, first-hand edge obtained at second hand; to buy goods at first hand: cf. first-hand and second-hand); also, skill or knack at doing something, whether with the hands or otherwise; also, work, execution, or touch (as, painting that shows a master's hand); also, a turn or inning of play in certain games; also, a round or outburst of applause, as for an actor; also, style of handwriting; hence, a person's signature (archaic); also, something resembling a hand in shape, function, etc.; a sign (see) used in writing or printing to draw attention to something; a pointer or index on the dial of a clock or watch; a palmate root of ginger; a bundle of tobacco-leaves tied together; one of the clusters forming a bunch of bananas, etc.; also, a lineal measure used in giving the height of horses, etc., equal to four inches; in card-playing, the cards dealt to or held by each player at one time; the person holding the cards; a single part of a game, in which all the cards dealt at one time are played.

—at hand, within reach; near by; also, near in time. —from hand to mouth, with consumption of food as soon as it is obtained; with attention to immediate wants only; without provision for the future; improvidently: hence the adjective hand-to-mouth (as, a hand-to-mouth existence).—hand and glove or hand in glove, in close relations; on very intimate terms: as, "I am sorry to say it, but you are hand and glove with a set of traitors" (J. H. Newman's "Callista," xxii.).—hand in hand, with hands mutually clasped; hence, conjointly or concurrently (as, the two processes go forward hand in hand).—hand to hand, with close approach of hands, as in fighting; in close combat; at close quarters; hence the adjective hand-to-hand (as, a hand-to-hand combat).—in hand, in immediate possession (as, cash in hand); also, in process (as, keep to the matter in hand); also, under control (as, to keep a horse, or one's passions, in hand).—off one's hands, out of one's responsible charge or care; so as to relieve or rid one of a burden, task, etc.—on hand, in immediate possession (as, cash on hand); subject to disposal (as, goods on hand); also, before one for performance or attention, as a task, duty, or engagement; also, in attendance, or present (U. S.: as, be on hand early).—on one's hands, resting on one as a burden, responsibility, or task.—out of hand, no longer in process; over and done with; also, beyond control (as, to let one's temper get out of hand); also, at once; without delay; suddenly.—to change hands. See under change, v. t.—to hand, within reach; at hand; also, into one's immediate presence or possession (as, your letter came to hand to-day).—to have one's hands full, fig., to have all one can do or manage; be fully occupied, as with a troublesome task.—hand, v. t. To grasp, touch, manage, or work with the hands (now only technical); hence, to deal with†; also, to lead or conduct with the hand (as, to hand a lady to a carriage); also, to deliver or pass with the hand or hands; fig., to pass, transfer, or transmit (as, a story handed down by tradition from generation to generation); also, naut., to furl, as a sail.

hand-bag (hand'bag), n. A bag for carrying in the hand, as a valise or a woman's small bag for carrying small purchases, toilet articles, etc.

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardēt, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

hand-ball (hand'bál), n. A game (orig. and properly played in an inclosed court) in which a small ball is batted against a wall with the (usually gloved) hand (cf. fives); also, the kind of ball used in this game.

hand-bar-row (hand'bar'ó), n. A barrow or frame with handles at each end by which it is carried; also, a handcart.

hand-bill (hand'bil), n. A printed bill or announcement, as for distribution by hand.

hand-book (hand'búk), n. A small book or treatise, properly one that may easily be held in the hand; a manual; esp., a book or treatise serving for guidance, as in an occupation or study; also, a guide-book for travelers.

hand-breadth (hand'bredth), n. The breadth of the hand; a unit of linear measure varying from 2½ to 4 inches; a palm; as, "The good sword stood a hand-breadth out Behind the Tuscan's head" (Macaulay's "Horatius," xlv.).

hand-can-non (hand'kan"-on), n. An early form of portable firearm, having the barrel mounted on a stock, and fired by means of a match.

hand-car (hand'kär), n. A light car propelled by a mechanism worked by hand, used on railroads in inspecting and repairing the tracks.

hand-cart (hand'kärt), n. A small cart drawn or pushed by hand.

hand-cuff (hand'kuf), n. [See *cuff*².] A shackle for the hand or wrist, esp. one of a pair connected by a short chain or the like; a manacle: usually in pl.—hand/cuff, v. t. To put handcuffs on; manacle.

hand-ed (hand'ed), a. Having a hand or hands; having the hands (as specified: as, empty-handed; white-handed); also, done with the hands (as specified: as, cross-handed piano-playing); played, used, etc., with a specified number of hands, or by a specified number of persons (as, a four-handed piece of music for the piano, a two-handed sword; a three-handed game at cards); also, joined hand in hand (archaic: as, "Into their inmost bower Handed they went," Milton's "Paradise Lost," iv. 739).

hand-fast (hand'fäst), v. t. [Cf. Icel. handfesta, strike a bargain by joining hands (festa, fasten, settle, pledge).] To betroth, orig. by the joining of hands (obs. or archaic); also, to take fast hold off.—hand/fast, n. A covenant or contract, esp. of marriage (obs. or archaic); also, fast hold†, or custody† (as, "If that shepherd be not in hand-fast, let him fly": Shakspeare's "Winter's Tale," iv. 4. 795).

hand-ful (hand'fúl), n.; pl. -fuls. As much or as many as the hand can grasp or contain; also, a small quantity or number (as, "All that tread The globe are but a handful to the tribes That slumber in its bosom": Bryant's "Thanatopsis"); also, a thing or a person that is as much as one can manage (colloq.: as, that child is a handful).

hand-gal-lop (hand'gal'op), n. An easy gallop, with the horse kept well in hand.

hand-glass (hand'gläs), n. A glass, or a framework of glass, placed over plants for protection, etc.; also, a small mirror with a handle; also, a magnifying glass for holding in the hand, as when reading.

hand-gre-nade (hand'grē-nād'), n. A grenade or explosive shell which is thrown by hand and exploded by impact or by means of a fuse; also, a grenade, or glass missile containing a chemical, for extinguishing fire.

hand-grip (hand'grip), n. [AS. handgripe.] A grasping with the hand; a grip of the hand, as in greeting; pl., hand-to-hand combat (as, to come to hand-grips with a person); also, sing., a handle by which a thing is gripped.

hand-i-cap (han'di-kap), n. [Appar. orig. for hand in cap.] An old sport involving the proposed exchange, with odds, of articles of different value; also, a race or other contest in which certain disadvantages or advantages of weight, distance, time, etc., are placed upon competitors to equalize their chances of winning; also, the disadvantage or advantage itself; fig., any encumbrance or disadvantage that makes success more difficult.—hand/i-cap, v. t.; -capped, -capping. To assign handicaps to (competitors); subject (a competitor) to a specific handicap; esp., to subject to a disadvantageous handicap, or penalize, as a competitor of recognized superiority; fig., to place under a disadvantage by imposing some unfavorable condition (as, such rules handicap a good worker); serve as a handicap or disadvantage to (as, his age handicaps him).—hand/i-cap per, n. One who handicaps; one employed to determine the amount of the handicaps in a contest.

hand-i-craft (han'di-kraft), n. [Earlier handcraft, AS. handcraeft.] Manual skill, as in work; skilled work with the hands; also, a manual art or occupation; also, a handicraftsman (as, "We handicrafts best love the folks we live by": Scott's "Fair Maid of Perth," vi.).—hand/i-crafts-man (-man), n.; pl. -men. A man skilled in a handicraft; an artisan.

hand-i-ly (han'di-li), adv. In a handy manner.—hand/i-ness, n.

hand-i-work (han'di-wèrk), n. [AS. handgeweorc.] Work done or a thing or things made by the hands, or the labor or action, of a particular doer or maker (as, the handiwork of man, of nature, or of God); in general, the result of one's action or agency (as, this whole trouble is his handiwork); also, work done with the hands, rather than with the head or brain; manual work.

hand-ker-chief (hang'kèr-chif), n. A small piece of linen, silk, or other fabric, usually square, carried about the person for wiping the face, nose, etc., or used as a neckerchief or a kerchief.

hand-ile (han'dil), n. [AS. handle, < hand, E. hand.] A part of a thing which is intended to be grasped by the hand in using or moving it; fig., that by which anything may be taken hold of; something that may be taken advantage of in effecting a purpose.—a handle to one's name, a title, as of honor, rank, or profession (as Lord, General, or Doctor), prefixed to a person's name. [Colloq.]—han/dle, v. t.; -dled, -dling. [AS. handliam, < hand.] To touch or feel with the hand; use the hands on, as in picking up, turning over, etc.; also, to manage in use with the hands; manipulate; hence, to manage, direct, or control (as, to handle troops in battle); wield, employ, or use (as, to handle one's fists well in a fight); also, to deal with or treat, as a matter or subject; esp., to deal with or treat in a particular way (as, to handle a case or a person with discretion); also, to deal or trade in (goods, etc.).—han/dle-a-ble, a. Capable of being handled.—han/dle=bar, n. A bar fitted with a handle or handles; esp., in a bicycle, etc., the (curved) bar in front of the rider, by which the vehicle is guided; either half of this bar.—han/dled, a. Having a handle: as, long-handled.—han/dle-less, a. Without a handle.—han/dler, n.

hand-less (hand'les), a. Without a hand or hands; also, unhandy, awkward, or inefficient (now Sc.).

hand-dling (han'dling), n. The act of one who handles; a touching, grasping, or using with the hands; manipulation; management; treatment.

hand-made (hand'mād'), a. Made by hand, rather than by machine; also, made by man, or artificial, rather than natural†.

hand-maid (hand'mād), n. A female servant or personal attendant. Also hand/maid/en. [Archaic.] hand-or-gan (hand'ór-gan), n. A portable barrel-organ played by means of a crank turned by hand.

hand-out (hand'out), n. A portion of food or the like handed out to a beggar, as at a house-door. [Slang, U. S.]

hand-pick (hand'pik'), v. t. [Back-formation from hand-picked.] To pick by hand; hence, to select carefully; often, to select for ulterior purposes, as a candidate for office.

—hand/=picked, a. Picked by hand; hence, carefully selected or chosen (often used disparagingly, as of persons

Hand-cannon, close of 15th century.

Handcuffs.

whose selection for office or duty has been made by others for ulterior purposes).

hand-play (hand'plā), n. Interchange of blows in a hand-to-hand encounter. [Archaic.] hand-rail (hand'rāl), n. A rail or railing serving as a support or guard at the edge of a gallery, stairs, etc.

hand-run-ning (hand'run'ing), adv. In unbroken succession; consecutively. [Colloq.]

hand-saw (hand'sā), n. A saw used with one hand.—to know a hawk from a hand-saw, to know one thing from another: from the use in Shakspeare's "Hamlet," ii. 2. 397, "I am but mad north-north-west: when the wind is southerly I know a hawk from a handsaw." In this the word handsaw (as also hawk) has been variously explained, commonly as meaning, not the saw or tool (although this is mentioned by Shakspeare in "1 Henry IV," ii. 4. 187), but the bird called hermshaw or heronsew (small heron).

hand-saw-fish (hand'sā-fish), n. A voracious deep-sea fish, Alepidosaurus (or Plagyodus) ferox, having a long, high dorsal fin.

hand's=
breadth (handz'- breadth),
n. Same as hand-breadth.

hand-sel,
han-sol (hand'sel,
han'-), n.
[Cf. AS.
handselen,

a giving into the hand, Icel. handsal, the binding of a bargain by joining hands, Sw. handsöl, Dan. handsel, handsel, earnest.] A gift or token for good luck or as an expression of good wishes, as at the beginning of the new year, at entering upon a new condition, situation, or enterprise, etc.; also, anything given or taken as an earnest of what is to come; a first instalment of payment; also, the first use or experience of anything; a foretaste.—hand'sel, han'sel, v. t.; -seled or -selled, -seling or -selling. To give a handsel to; also, to inaugurate auspiciously; also, to use, try, or experience for the first time (as, "He carries his griefs on a shoulder That handselled them long before": A. E. Housman's "Shropshire Lad," l.).

hand-some (han'sum), a.; compar. handsomer, superl. handsomest. Easy to handle; also, conveniently placed, or handy; also, appropriate, apt, or to the purpose, as speech or action (obs. or archaic: as, "an honest method . . . and by very much more handsome than fine," Shakspeare's "Hamlet," ii. 2. 466); proper or seemly, as dress or conduct; clever, graceful, or fine, as a speech or speaker, a performance or performer, etc. (now colloq.); gracious, generous, or magnanimous, as treatment, acknowledgments, apologies, etc.; also, considerable, ample, or liberal in amount, as a fortune, income, contribution, or price; also, of persons, of fine or admirable appearance, as from advantages of form, features, coloring, bearing, etc.; good-looking or comely, esp. in a dignified, spirited, or dashing way; in general, of strikingly fine appearance, as a horse, a tree, flowers or foliage, etc.; often, tastefully or elegantly fine, as a building, avenue, equipage, or costume, jewels, plate, furniture, etc.—hand'some-ly, adv.—hand'some-ness, n.
hand-spike (hand'spik), n. [D. handspaak, 'hand bar.'] A bar, as of wood, used as a lever for various purposes.

hand-spring (hand'spring), n. A kind of somersault in which the body is supported upon one or both hands while turning in the air.

hand-to=hand (hand'tō-hand'), a. See hand to hand, under hand, n.

hand-to=mouth (hand'tō-mouth'), a. See from hand to mouth, under hand, n.

Hand-saw-fish.

hand-work (hand'wërk'), n. Work done by hand, now esp. as distinguished from that done by machine.

hand-writ-ing (hand'ri'ting), n. Writing done with the hand; a kind or style of writing done by hand, esp. that of a particular person.

hand-y (han'di), a.; compar. handier, superl. handiest. Done by the hand; also, ready to hand; conveniently accessible; also, convenient to handle; easily manipulated or managed; convenient or useful; also, ready or skilful with the hands; deft; dexterous.

hand-y=dan-dy (han'di-dan'di). [Varied redupl. of handy for hand.] I. n. A children's game in which one guesses in which hand another holds some small object, as a pebble or a coin. II. adv. An expression used in offering the alternative for guessing in this game, and hence in general any alternative of choice. [Obs. or prov.]

hand'y-work, n. See handiwork.

hang (hang), v. t.; hung, also hanged (esp. for the capital punishment and for suicide), hanging. [In part AS. hōn (pret. hēng, pp. hengen), tr., hang, suspend, execute by hanging on a cross or gibbet, in part the derived AS. hangian (pret. hangode), intr., hang, depend; akin to D. hengen, G. hengen, hängen, Icel. hanga, hengja, and Goth. hahan.] To fasten or attach (a thing) so that it is supported only from above; suspend; specif., to suspend so as to allow free movement, as on a hinge, etc.; also, to fasten or suspend (a person) on a cross, gallows, or the like, as a mode of capital punishment, esp. to suspend by the neck until dead (as, sentenced to be hanged by the neck until dead); suspend (one's self) thus as a means of suicide (as, "Judas . . . departed, and went and hanged himself": Mat. xxvii. 5); also, to let droop or bend downward (as, to hang one's head in shame); also, to fasten in position, as the blade of a scythe; attach (paper, etc.) to walls; also, to furnish or decorate with something suspended or attached (as, to hang a room with pictures or wall-paper); also, to keep (a jury) from rendering a verdict, as one juror by refusing to agree with the others. Hang is much used in maledictions and emphatic expressions, orig. with reference to the execution of persons by hanging, and later often without definite meaning: as, go, and be hanged to you! I'll be hanged if I like that! hang the fellow, or his impudence! "Oh, hang your taboo . . . talk taboo to the marines" (H. Melville's "Typee," xxix.).—to hang fire, to be slow in firing, as a gun; fig., to hesitate or be slow in acting, as a person; be delayed, or remain unsettled or unfinished, as a matter or undertaking.—to hang up, to suspend on a hook, peg, etc.; also, to put into or hold in abeyance; keep back or delay.—hang, v. i. To be suspended; depend; dangle; specif., to swing freely, as on a hinge; also, to be suspended from a cross, gallows, etc.; suffer death by suspension by the neck, esp. as a form of punishment; also, to bend forward or downward; lean over; incline downward; also, to rest, float, or hover in the air; fig., to impend; be imminent; also, to rest for support, etc. (on or upon); be conditioned or contingent; be dependent; remain in attention or consideration, as upon a person's words; also, to hold fast, cling, or adhere; often, to cling or adhere as an encumbrance (as, "Most heavily remorse hangs at my heart!" Shelley's "Prometheus Unbound," i. 436); be burdensome, as time (as, "Several hours of the day hang upon our hands": Addison, in "Spectator," 93); also, to remain in doubtful suspense (as, "He hangs between; in doubt to act, or rest": Pope's "Essay on Man," ii. 7); be doubtful or undecided; waver or hesitate; also, to remain with motion or action suspended; remain unsettled or unfinished; sometimes, to fail to agree, as a jury; also, to loiter or linger, as in expectation (as, to hang about a place).—to hang back, to resist advance; be reluctant to proceed; be backward.—to hang out, to have one's abode, or place of customary resort, as at a particular place. [Slang.]—to hang over, to remain behind from a former period, state of affairs, etc. [Colloq.]—to hang together, to hold together; remain united (often fig.: as, "We must all hang together, or assuredly we shall all hang separately," a remark attributed to Benjamin Franklin at the signing of the Declaration of Independence); also, to be consistent (as, his statements do not hang together).—hang, n. The action of hanging; the way in which a thing hangs; also, a slope or declivity; also (colloq., U. S.), the precise

fat, fāte, fār, fāl, āsk, fāre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō, ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, ardent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; y, you;

manner of using or doing something (as, to get the hang of a tool, a process, or a trick); meaning or force (as, to get the hang of a sentence or a subject).

han-gar (hang'är, F. äñ-gär), n. [F.; origin uncertain.] A shed or shelter, as for vehicles or for an airship or aeroplane.

hang-bird (hang'bërd), n. A bird that builds a hanging nest; esp., any of the American orioles.

hang-dog (hang'dog), I. n. A degraded fellow, fit only to hang dogs or to be hanged like a dog. II. a. Of or pertaining to a hangdog (as, a hangdog look); of persons, having a mean or sneaking appearance.

hang-er (hang'ër), n. One who hangs something (as, a paper-hanger); also, something that hangs; a kind of short sword; also, something by which a thing is hung, as a loop on a garment or a shaped support for a coat or other garment when not in use; a chain or bent iron rod on which a pot or kettle is hung by means of a pothook, as in old-fashioned open fireplaces; also, a stroke with a double curve (turned reversely from the pothook), as made by children in learning to write (cf. pothook); a crooked stroke in writing.—hang'er-on', n.; pl. hangers-on. A dependent or follower; a self-seeking adherent, or parasite; a persistent frequenter of a place; one who persistently clings to a service, connection, etc.

hang-ing (hang'ing), n. The action of one who or that which hangs; suspension; capital punishment by suspension on a gallows; also, something that hangs or is hung, as a curtain or drapery, a piece of tapestry, a wall-covering of paper, etc. (usually in pl.).—hang'ing, p. a. That hangs; pendent; pendulous; also, leaning over or overhanging; inclining downward, or steep or declivitous, as ground; situated on a steep slope or at a height, as a wood, a garden, etc.; also, directed downward, as the look; downcast.—hanging indention, in printing, etc., an indention of uniform amount at the beginning of each line except the first, which is of full width.

hang-man (hang'man), n.; pl. -men. One whose office is to hang persons condemned to death; a public executioner.

hang-nail (hang'näl), n. [For agnail.] A small piece of partly detached epidermis at the side or base of a nail, as of a finger.

hang-out (hang'out), n. A place where one 'hangs out'; a place of abode, resort, or the like. [Slang.]

hang-o-ver (hang'ö'ver), n. Something that 'hangs over,' or remains behind from a former period, state of affairs, etc.; sometimes, the effects left on a person after excessive indulgence in strong drink. [Colloq. or slang.]

hank (hangk), n. [ME.: cf. Icel. hönk, hank, coil, skein.] A coil, knot, or loop (as, "A rag and a bone and a hank of hair . . . But the fool he called her his lady fair": Kipling's "Vampire"); also, a skein, as of thread or yarn; a definite length of thread or yarn (a hank of cotton yarn measuring 840 yards); also, a loop of string, wire, or the like used to fasten something or hold or hang a thing by; naul., a ring, as of iron or wood, round a stay, to which a sail is attached.

han-ker (hang'kër), v. i. [Origin uncertain: cf. D. hunkeren, dial. hankeren, hanker; perhaps akin to E. hang.] To linger about a place or person, esp. with expectation or longing (as, "We . . . hankered about the Rio de la Plata a long time," Defoe's "Captain Singleton," xi.: now prov.); also, to have an uneasy, restless, or incessant longing (often with after, for, or an infinitive: as, to hanker after forbidden pleasures; "What business had he to be hankering after this girl at all!" Galsworthy's "Patrician," ii. 6).—han'ker, n. A hankering.—han'ker-er, n.—han'ker-ing, n. An uneasy or incessant longing.

han-ky-pan-ky (hang'ki-pang'ki), n. [A made word: cf. hocus-pocus.] Jugglery or legerdemain; hence, trickery; underhand dealing. [Colloq.]

Han-o-ve-ri-an (han-ö-vë-ri-än), I. a. Of or pertaining to Hanover, formerly an electorate of northern Germany, later a kingdom, and since 1866 a province of Prussia; also, of or pertaining to the former ruling house of Hanover, to which belonged the sovereigns of Great Britain and Ireland from George I. (reigned 1714-27) to Victoria (all of them except Victoria being rulers of Hanover also, but she, as a woman, being unable to succeed to the Hanoverian throne: cf. Windsor). II. n. A native or inhabitant of Hanover; also, in Eng. politics, a supporter of the house of Hanover. Hans (häns), n. [G. and D., for Johannes, John.] A popular name for a German or a Dutchman.

hanse (hans), n. [OF. hanse = ML. hansa, < OHG. hansa = Goth. hansa, multitude, company, band.] A company or gild of merchants; [cap.] a medieval league of towns of northern Germany and adjacent countries for the promotion and protection of commerce; also [l. c.], a fee paid to a medieval trading-gild.—Han-se-at-ic (han-së-at'ik), a. Of or pertaining to the German Hanse: as, the Hanseatic League.

han-sel (han'sel), n. and v. See handsel.

han-som (han'som), n. [From J. A. Hansom, English patentee (1834).] A low-hung, two-wheeled, covered vehicle drawn by one horse, for two passengers, the driver being mounted on an elevated seat behind, and the reins running over the roof. Also called hansom cab.

Hansom.

han-tle (hän'tl), n. [Origin obscure.] A considerable number or quantity; a great deal. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

Ha-nuk-kah (chá'nük-kä), n. [Heb.] The Feast of the Dedication, a Jewish festival commemorating the dedication of the new altar on the occasion of the purifying of the Temple at Jerusalem after its pollution by Antiochus Epiphanes (see 1 Mac. i. 41-64, iv. 41-59; 2 Mac. i. 18, x. 1-8), beginning on the 25th day of the month Kislev, and lasting for eight days (mostly in December): called also 'Festival of Lights,' from the lights burned specially during this period.

hap¹ (hap), v. t.; happed, hap-ping. [ME. happen; origin obscure.] To cover or wrap. [Sc. and prov. Eng.]

hap² (hap), n. [ME. hap, from Scand.: cf. Icel. happ, hap, chance, good luck.] The chance or fortune that falls to one (as, "Hard is his hap that first falls in his jeopardy": Spenser's "Faerie Queene," ii. 4. 43); one's luck or lot; also, an occurrence, happening, or accident (as, to narrate the haps and mishaps of the day); also, good fortune or good luck; also, mere chance or fortuity (as, "Be it art or hap, He hath spoken true: the very dice obey him": Shakspeare's "Antony and Cleopatra," ii. 3. 32). [Archaic or prov.]—hap², v. i.; happed, hap-ping. [ME. happen.] To chance, occur, or happen (as, "Make yourself ready . . . for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap": Shakspeare's "Tempest," i. 1. 28); also, to have the fortune or lot (to do something); come or light by chance (on or upon). [Archaic or prov.]

hap-ax-an-thous (hap-ak-san'thus), a. [Gr. ἀπαξ, once, + άνθος, flower.] In bot., having a single period of flowering.

hap-haz-ard (hap'haz'ärd). [From hap² + hazard.] I. n. Mere chance or accident as determining events, actions, etc.: as, to proceed at, or by, haphazard. II. a. Determined by or dependent on mere chance: as, a haphazard performance; a haphazard remark. III. adv. In a haphazard manner.—hap'haz'ard-ly, adv.—hap'haz'ard-ness, n.

haph-ta-rah (haf-tä'rä), n.; pl. -roth (-röth). [Heb.] A Modern Russian Hanukkah Lights (one light being burned the first night, two the second, and so on until the eighth night, the two higher lights being additional).

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; n, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ", secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

portion of the Prophets read immediately after the parashah in the Jewish synagogue on Sabbaths and festivals.

hap-less (hap'les), a. [From *hap*², n.] Luckless; unfortunate; unlucky. — hap'less-ly, adv.

hap-lite (hap'lit), n. [Gr. ἀπλός, single, simple.] A kind of granite consisting essentially of quartz and some variety of feldspar. — hap-lit'ic (-lit'ik), a.

hap-log-ra-phy (hap-log'ra-fi), n. [Gr. ἀπλός, single: see -graphy.] The unintentional writing of a letter or word, or of a series of letters or words, but once when it should have been written twice or more; also, the resulting passage or reading: opposed to dittography.

hap-lol-o-gy (hap-lol'ō-jī), n. [Gr. ἀπλός, single: see -logy.] The utterance of only one of two similar adjacent syllables or sounds, resulting in the contraction of a word, as in idly for idley, and symbolatry for symbololatry.

hap-ly (hap'li), adv. [From *hap*², n.] Perhaps; perchance: as, "And seeing a fig tree afar off . . . he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon" (Mark, xi. 13). [Archaic.]

hap-pen (hap'n), v. i. [ME. happenen, < happen, E. *hap*², v.] To come to pass by chance or without apparent reason or design; chance; hence, in general, to come to pass, take place, or occur (as, "It hath happened all as I would have had it": Shakspeare's "All's Well," iii. 2. 1); befall or betide, as to a person or thing (as, "It was a chance that happened to us": 1 Sam. vi. 9); often, to befall with unfortunate effect (as, something has happened to the lock — the key will not turn); also, to have the fortune or lot (to do or be as specified: as, I happened to see him, or to be present); come or light by chance (on or upon: as, to happen on a clue to a mystery); be, come, or go (as specified) by some chance or casually (as, to happen in to see a friend). — hap'pen-ing, n. The process or fact of chancing, occurring, or befalling; also, something that happens; a chance; an occurrence; an event.

hap-pi-ly (hap'i li), adv. Haply or perchance (obs. or archaic); also, in a happy manner; fortunately or luckily; with pleasure or gladness; aptly or felicitously. — hap-pi-ness, n. The quality or state of being happy; good fortune, or a piece of good fortune; pleasure, content, or gladness, as from the possession or enjoyment of what is considered good; aptness or felicity, as of expression.

hap-py (hap'i), a.; compar. happier, superl. happiest. [From *hap*², n.] Coming, or happening by chance; also, characterized by or attended with good fortune (as, a happy accident or event; a happy omen); favored by fortune, as a person; fortunate or lucky; also, having a feeling of great pleasure or pleasurable content, as from a sense of good fortune, gratified desires, or agreeable conditions (as, "happy souls, that love to live." Tennyson's "Enone," 236; "How happy could I be with either, Were t' other dear charmer away!" Gay's "Beggars' Opera," ii. 2); delighted, pleased, or glad, as over a particular thing (as, to be happy to see a person); characterized by or indicative of pleasure, content, or gladness (as, a happy mood, life, or home; happy faces or smiles); also, fortunate, successful, or dexterous in performance (as, to be happy at repartee); apt or felicitous, as actions, utterances, ideas, etc. — hap'py-go-luck'y. I. adv. As luck may have it; haphazard. II. a. Taking things easily, as they happen to come; trusting cheerfully to luck.

haque-ton (hak'ton), n. See haqueton and acton.

ha-ra-ki-ri (hä'rä-kē'rē), n. [Jap., 'belly cutting.'] Suicide by ripping open the abdomen with a dagger or knife: the national form of honorable suicide in Japan, formerly practised by the higher classes when in disgrace or under sentence of death.

ha-rangue (hä-rang'), n. [F. harangue, < OHG. hring, ring, circle of people, arena, = E. *ring*².] A formal speech or address, as to an assembly (as, "Gray-headed men and grave . . . Assemble, and harangues are heard": Milton's "Paradise Lost," xi. 663); now, esp., a passionate, vehement, or noisy and intemperate address; also, any long, declamatory or pompous speech. — ha-rangue', v.; -rangued, -ranguing. [F. haranguer.] I. tr. To address in a harangue.

II. intr. To deliver a harangue: as, "He did not discourse, but harangue" (Smollett's "Humphry Clinker," June 2). — ha-ran'guer (-rang'ër), n.

ha-ras (ä-rä), n. [F.; origin uncertain.] A stud of horses for breeding purposes; an establishment for breeding horses.

har-ass (har'as), v. t. [F. harasser, perhaps < OF. harier, herier, harry, harass: cf. harry.] To trouble by repeated attacks, incursions, etc., as in war or hostilities; harry; hence, to disturb or torment persistently or incessantly, as with troubles, cares, importunities, etc., or as troubles or cares do; worry; also, to wear out or exhaust with fatigue, trouble, care, etc.†. — har'ass-er, n. — har'ass-ing-ly, adv. — har'ass-ment, n. The act of harassing, or the state of being harassed; worry; also, something that harasses.

har-bin-ger (här'bin-jër), n. [OF. herbergeor, < herberger, provide lodging for, < herberge, lodging, < OHG. heriberga: see harbor, and cf. auberge.] One who provides lodgings; also, one sent in advance of troops, a royal train, etc., to provide or secure lodgings and other accommodations (obs. or hist.); hence, one who goes before and makes known the approach of another (now chiefly fig. and literary: as, "the boding cry of the tree-toad, that harbinger of storm," Irving's "Sketch-Book," Sleepy Hollow). — har'bin-ger, v. t. To act as harbinger to; herald the coming of: chiefly fig. and literary.

har-bor (här'bör), n. [ME. herbore, herboru, hereberge, = Icel. herbergi = OLG. and OHG. heriberga, lit. 'army shelter'; from elements equivalent to AS. here, army, + beorgan, protect: see harry and bury, and cf. harbinger.] Shelter, lodging, or refuge (as, to give, take, or find harbor); also, a place of shelter, sojourn, or refuge (as, "Harbour of many a stranger, free to friend . . . O thou house": Browning's "Balaustion's Adventure"); the retreat or covert of a deer or other wild animal; esp., a place of shelter for ships afforded by a recess of the shore or by breakwaters or other artificial works; a haven; a port. — har'bor, v. I. tr. To provide with shelter, lodgings, or quarters, as troops; also, to give shelter or refuge to (now usually fugitives, offenders, etc.); give storage or concealment for (now usually smuggled or stolen goods, etc.); afford covert for (animals, vermin, etc.); fig., to entertain within the mind (a thought, feeling, design, etc., now usually one that is unfavorable or evil: as, to harbor suspicion, resentment, or malice); cherish; also, to shelter (a ship) in a harbor or haven; also, to track (a deer, etc.) to its harbor or retreat (as, "If I do know how to harbour a stag, you do know how to hunt him": Whyte-Melville's "Katerfelto," xvi.). II. intr. To take or have shelter or lodging (obs. or archaic: as, "Now, for this night, let's harbour here in York," Shakspeare's "3 Henry VI," iv. 7. 79); have a retreat or covert, as a deer or other animal; fig., to be entertained or cherished in the mind, as a thought or feeling; also, of a ship, etc., to take shelter in a harbor. — har'bor-age (-äj), n. Shelter or lodging, or a place of shelter; also, shelter for ships, as in a harbor. — har'bor-er, n. — har'bor-less, a. Without a harbor; shelterless; without a haven or port. — har'bor-mas'ter, n. An officer who has charge of a harbor or port, and enforces the regulations respecting it. — har'-bor-seal, *n.

The common (earless) seal of northern coasts, Phoca vitulina.

har'bour, etc. British preferred form of harbor, etc.

hard (härd), a. [AS. heard = D. hard = G. hart = Icel. hardhr = Goth. hardus, hard; akin to Gr. κράτος, strong, mighty.] Solid and firm to the touch; not easily penetrated, or divided, or altered in shape; not soft; specif., in coin or specie rather than paper currency, or, sometimes, in coin, bills, or actual money as distin-Harbor-seal.

fat, fäto, fär, fäll, äsk, färe; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, möve, nōr; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviärý, ēlect, agōny, intō, ùnite; (obscured) eränt, operä, ärgent, actör, natjüre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; тн, then; y, you;

guished from other property, debts, etc. (as, hard money; hard cash); also, firmly formed, tight, or not easily loosed (as, a hard knot); sometimes, capable of great endurance and exertion, as persons (as, "men, a hard laborious kind": Dryden's tr. Virgil's "Georgics," i. 95); also, difficult to do or accomplish, fatiguing, or troublesome, as a task; difficult or troublesome with respect to an action specified (as, hard to please; hard to be found; food hard of digestion); having difficulty in doing something (now only in "hard of hearing"); difficult to deal with, manage, control, or overcome (as, "I am this day weak . . . and these men . . . be too hard for me": 2 Sam. iii. 39); ir reclaimable, incorrigible, or disreputable, as persons (colloq.: as, a hard case; a hard character); difficult to understand, explain, or solve (as, a hard subject; a hard question or problem); also, difficult to bear or endure (as, to lead a hard life; to have a hard time); severe or rigorous (as, a hard winter); rude or coarse (as, hard fare); also, not easily impressed or moved, as persons; obdurate; unfeeling or pitiless; sometimes, not swayed by sentiment or sophistry (as, hard sense; to have a hard head: cf. hardhead); of a shrewd, practical nature; sometimes, not easily moved to part with money; niggardly; stingy; also, harsh or severe in dealing with others (as, a hard master; to be hard upon a person); harsh or unfriendly (as, to cherish hard feelings toward a person; to use hard words to a person, or call him hard names); severe or rigorous in provisions, etc. (as, a hard bargain); also, carried on or performed with great exertion, energy, or persistence (as, hard work; hard labor; hard study); carrying on work in this manner (as, a hard worker; a hard student); vigorous or violent (as, a hard run; a hard rain); also, harsh or unpleasant to the eye, ear, or esthetic sense (as, a hard face, or hard features; hard outlines in a painting); also, of water, containing mineral salts which interfere with the action of soap; also, acid or sour, as liquors; now, esp., strong, spirituous, or intoxicating, as liquors (U. S.); also, high and unyielding, as prices; in phonetics, having a guttural sound, as the c and g in corn and get (as distinguished from the 'soft' c and g in cite and gin); also, surd or breathed, as k, p, and t, in distinction from g, b, and d, which are soft, sonant, or voiced.—hard and fast, firm and secure; fig., strongly binding, strictly obligatory, or not to be set aside or violated (as, hard and fast rules).—hard coal, anthracite.—hard rays. See under *ray*³.—hard tube. See under tube.—hard, n. A firm beach; also, a sloping stone roadway or jetty at the water's edge (Eng.).—hard, adv. [AS. heardē.] So as to be hard, solid, or firm (as, the river is frozen hard; eggs boiled hard: cf. hard-boiled, below); also, firmly or tightly (as, "He took me by the wrist and held me hard": Shakspeare's "Hamlet," ii. 1. 87); also, with difficulty (as, "Hard his labouring breath he drew": Scott's "Lady of the Lake," iii. 11); also, harshly or severely (as, to use, treat, or press hard; taxes that bear hard upon the poor); so as to involve severity or hardship (as, to be hard put to it to keep going; it will go hard with him if he is caught); also, with great exertion or energy, or with vigor or violence (as, to work hard; to run hard; to ride hard; it is raining hard); earnestly or intently (as, to look hard at a thing or a person); also, close or near, as in place, amount, or time (as, to follow hard after a person; a town hard by; to weigh hard upon 200 pounds; to be hard upon 60 years old; it is hard upon five o'clock); naut., closely, fully, or to the extreme limit (as, hard alee; hard aport).—hard and fast, firmly and securely (as, bound, or held, hard and fast); fig., strictly or rigorously.—hard up, distressingly or urgently in want of something (with for: as, a caravan hard up for water; to be hard up for amusement); esp., urgently in want of money. [Colloq.]

hard-bit-ten (hărd'bit'n), a. Given to hard biting, as a horse; hence, unyielding; dogged.

hard-boiled (hărd'boild'), a. Boiled until hard, as an egg; hence (slang), stiff or hard (as, a hard-boiled hat, a derby or stiff hat, or a helmet); also (slang), hardened by experience, as a person; not easily impressed or moved; unyielding or uncompromising; stern, unfeeling, or pitiless; rough or tough.

hard-en (hărd'ēn), v. I. tr. To make hard or harder; indurate; make hardy, robust, or capable of endurance; make obdurate or unyielding; make unfeeling or pitiless. II. intr. To become hard or harder; become inured or toughened; become obdurate, or unfeeling or pitiless; of prices, the market, etc., to become higher; rise in price.—hard/ened, p. a. Rendered hard; indurated; inured; obdurate; unfeeling.—hard/en-er, n.

hard-fa-vored (hărd'fa'vord), a. Having a hard, unpleasant, or repellent appearance or countenance.

hard-fea-tured (hărd'fe'turd), a. Having hard or harsh features: as, "hard-featured women, weather-beaten brown" (Masefield's "Daffodil Fields," i.).

hard-fist-ed (hărd'fis'ted), a. Niggardly; stingy.

hard-hack (hărd'hak), n. A woolly-leaved rosaceous shrub, Spiræa tomentosa, of North America, having terminal panicles of rose-colored or white flowers and astringent roots.

hard-hand-ed (hărd'han'ded), a. Having hands hardened by toil; also, ruling with a strong or cruel hand; severe.—hard/=hand/ed-ness, n.

hard-head (hărd'hed), n. One who is not moved by sentiment or sophistry; a shrewd, practical person; also, a blockhead; also, any of various fishes, as a gurnard, Trigla gurnardus, and the menhaden.—hard/=head/ed, a. Not easily moved or deceived; matter-of-fact; practical; shrewd.—hard/=head/ed-ness, n.

hard-heart-ed (hărd'hărt'ed), a. Unfeeling; unmerciful; pitiless.

—hard/=heart/ed-ly, adv.—hard/=heart/ed-ness, n.

har-di-hood (hărd'di-hūd), n. Hardy spirit or character; boldness or daring (as, "With dauntless hardihood, And brandish'd blade, rush on him": Milton's "Comus," 650); audacity or effrontery; temerity or rashness; also, sturdiness or robustness, as of body.

har-di-ly (hărd'di-li), adv. In a hardy manner; with hardihood.

har-di-ment (hărd'di-mēnt), n. [OF., < hardi, E. hardy.] Boldness, daring, or hardihood (archaic: as, "Vanguard of Liberty, ye men of Kent . . . Now is the time to prove your hardiment!" Wordsworth's "To the Men of Kent"); also, a bold exploit (see Shakspeare's "Cymbeline," v. 4. 75).

har-di-ness (hărd'di-nes), n. The quality or state of being hardy; now, esp., robustness; capability of endurance.

hard-ly (hărd'li), adv. In a hard manner; harshly or severely (as, to deal hardly with a person); with trouble or difficulty (as, pleasures hardly earned); hence, barely, or only just (as, I had hardly reached there, when it began to rain); almost not (as, hardly any; hardly ever); also, not quite (as, it is hardly strong enough; that is hardly true); also, with little likelihood (as, he will hardly come now).

hard-mouthed (hărd'mouth'ed), a. Having a hard mouth, as a horse; not easily controlled by the bit or rein; hence, self-willed; obstinate.

hard-ness (hărd'nes), n. [AS. heardnes.] The state or quality of being hard; sometimes, an instance of this quality.

hard-pan (hărd'pan'), n. [See *pan*¹.] Any layer of firm detrital matter, as of clay, underlying soft soil; also, hard, unbroken ground; also, in fig. use, firm bottom or solid foundation; hard underlying reality (as, to get down to hard-pan); the lowest level (as, prices have reached hard-pan). [Chiefly U. S.]

hards (hărdz), n. pl. [AS. heordan, pl.] The refuse or coarser parts of flax or hemp, separated in hackling.

hard-set (hărd'set'), a. Firmly or rigidly set; fig., determined or obstinate; also, in a hard or difficult position; beset with difficulties; hard put to it, or finding it hard (to do something: as, "It's hard set I am to know what would be right," Synge's "Well of the Saints," iii.).

Flowering Branch of Hardhack.
a, flower; b, fruit; c, leaf.

hard-shell (hărd'shel), a. Having a hard shell (as, the hard-shell crab, the common edible crab, Callinectes hastatus, when its shell is hard: cf. soft-shell); fig., rigid or uncompromising, as in religious orthodoxy.

hard-ship (hărd'ship), n. A condition that bears hard upon one; severe toil, trial, oppression, or want; also, an instance of this; something hard to bear.

hard-spun (hărd'spun'), a. Compactly twisted in spinning, as yarn.

hard-tack (hărd'tak), n. [See tack?] A kind of hard biscuit much used by sailors and soldiers; ship-biscuit.

hard-ware (hărd'wâr), n. Metal ware or articles, as tools, locks, hinges, cutlery, kitchen utensils, etc.—hard'ware-man (-man), n.; pl. -men.

hard-wood (hărd'wüd), n. The hard, compact wood or timber of various trees, as the oak, cherry, maple, ebony, mahogany, etc.; a tree yielding such wood; in forestry, the wood of a dicotyledonous tree (or one with relatively broad leaves), as distinguished from a conifer, etc.; such a tree itself.

hardy¹ (hărd'di), a.; compar. hardier, superl. hardiest. [OF. F. hardi; from Teut., and akin to E. hard.] Bold, daring, or courageous, as persons, actions, etc.; also, unduly or unwisely bold; audacious or presumptuous (as, "Be not so hardy, scullion, as to slay One nobler than thyself": Tennyson's "Gareth and Lynette," 956); foolhardy or rash; also, strong, sturdy, or robust, as persons or animals; fitted for enduring fatigue, hardship, exposure, etc.; requiring great physical endurance, as the mode of life, sports, etc.; of plants, able to withstand the cold of winter in the open air.

hardy² (hărd'di), n.; pl. -dies (-diz). [Appar. < hard.] A chisel or fuller with a square shank for insertion into a square hole ('hardy-hole') in a blacksmith's anvil.

hare (hâr), n. [AS. hara = D. haas = G. hase = Icel. hæri, hare.] Any rodent of the genus Lepus (family Leporidae), with long ears, divided upper lip, short tail, and lengthened hind limbs adapted for leaping; esp., any of the larger species of this genus, certain of the smaller ones being known as rabbits; also, any of various other animals of the same family; [cap.] in astron., the southern constellation Lepus.—hare and hounds, an outdoor sport in which certain players known as hares start off in advance on a long run, scattering behind them small pieces of paper called scent, the other players, known as hounds, following the trail so marked in an effort to catch the hares before they reach home.

hare-bell (hâr'bel), n. [Appar. < hare + bell.] A low campanulaceous herb, the bluebell of Scotland, Campanula rotundifolia, with blue bell-shaped flowers; also, a liliaceous plant, Scilla nonscripta, with bell-shaped flowers.

hare-brained, hare-brain (hâr'brând, -brân), a. Having or showing no more brains than a hare; giddy; heedless; reckless.

hare-lip (hâr'lip'), n. A congenitally deformed lip, usually the upper one, in which there is a vertical fissure causing it to resemble somewhat the cleft lip of a hare; also, the deformity itself.—hare/lipped, a.

hare-rem (hâr'rem), n. [Ar. haram, also harîm, lit. 'forbidden place,' < harama, forbid.] The part of a Mohammedan dwelling-house appropriated to the women of the household; also, its occupants collectively.

American Varying Hare (Lepus americanus).

Harebell (Campanula rotundifolia).

hare's-tail (hârz'tâl), n. A species of cotton-grass, Eriophorum vaginatum, bearing a white cotton-like tuft ('hare's-tail rush'); also, a European grass, Lagurus ovalis ('hare's-tail grass').

har-i-cot (har'i-kō or -kot), n. [F.; origin uncertain.] A ragout of meat and vegetables; also, a plant of the genus Phaseolus, esp. P. vulgaris, the common kidney-bean or string-bean; also, its edible seed or green pod.

ha-ri-ka-ri (hâr'rē-kâ'rē), n. Erroneous form of hara-kiri.

hark (hârk), v. [ME. harkien, herkien, from an AS. verb not recorded, but implied in the derivative AS. hercnian, E. harken; from the source of E. hear.] I. tr. To listen to; hear: as, "Hark the clock within" (Tennyson's "Maud," i. 18. 8). [Archaic.] II. intr. To listen; harken: often used interjectionally, in the imperative (as, "Hark, hark! the lark at heaven's gate sings": Shakspeare's "Cymbeline," ii. 3. 21).—to hark back, of hounds, to return along the course in order to regain a lost scent; hence, fig., to return to a previous point or subject, as in discourse or thought; revert.

—hark, n. The act of harking; also, a hunters' cry to hounds (as, "With hark and whoop and wild halloo, No rest Benvoirlich's echoes knew": Scott's "Lady of the Lake," i. 3).

hark-en, heark-en (hâr'kn), v. [AS. hercnian, heorcnian, extended form of the AS. verb represented by E. hark.]

I. intr. To listen; hence, to give heed or attend; also, to seek attentively† or inquire† (as, "Hearken after their offence, my lord": Shakspeare's "Much Ado about Nothing," v. 1. 216); also, to wait attentively† (as, "They did me too much injury That ever said I hearken'd for your death": Shakspeare's "1 Henry IV.," v. 4. 52). II. tr. To listen to; hear; hence, to give heed to. [Now poetic.]—hark'en-er, heark'en-er, n.

harl¹ (hârl), v. [ME. harlen; origin obscure.] I. tr. To drag; also, to rough-cast (walls, etc.) with lime. [Chiefly Sc.] II. intr. To be dragged; drag one's self along; trail. [Chiefly Sc.]

harl² (hârl), n. [Also herl, ME. herle, = MLG. herle, harle, filament of flax, etc.] A filament of flax, hemp, etc.; filamentous matter; also, a barb, or the barbs, of a feather, much used in dressing anglers' flies; a fly so dressed.

Har-le-ian (hâr'lē-an or hâr-lē'), a. Of or pertaining to Robert Harley (1661–1724) and his son Edward (1689–1741), 1st and 2d Earls of Oxford, or their collection of books, pamphlets, and manuscripts, of which the manuscripts are now in the British Museum.

har-le-quin (hâr'lē-kwin or -kin). [F. harlequin (now arlequin), < It. arlechino: cf. OF. Helequin, Hellekin, Herlequin, name of a devil, or a troop of demons (mesnie Helequin), of medieval legend.] I. n. [cap. or l. c.] A droll character in comedy (orig. the early Italian) and pantomime, usually masked, dressed in party-colored spangled tights, and bearing a wooden sword or magic wand; [l. c.] a buffoon. II. a. Party-colored; fantastically or strikingly variegated in color (as, the harlequin duck, a sea-duck, Histrionicus minutus, of northern regions, with variegated plumage; a harlequin snake, a coral-snake); fancifully varied in color, decoration, etc., as a set of dishes; also, of furniture, ingeniously contrived to combine or conceal in one piece parts or articles for various uses (applied esp. to furniture of the latter part of the 18th century).—har'le-quin-ade (-ād'), n. A piece, or part of a piece, of pantomime or the like in which the harlequin plays the principal part; hence, any fantastic procedure; buffoonery.—har'le-quin-esque (-esk'), a. [See -esque.] In the style or manner of a harlequin; harlequin-like.

har-lot (hâr'lōt), n. [OF. arlot, herlot, rogue, knave; origin uncertain.] A rogue† or knave†; also, a buffoon†; also, fat, fâte, fâr, fâll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, êlect, agōny, intō, ûnite; (obscured) errant, operâ, ardent, actor, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

Harlequin Duck.

a lewd woman; a prostitute; a strumpet.—har'lot-ry (-ri), n.; pl. -ries (-riz). Buffoonery†; ribaldry†; also, lewdness or unchastity; the practice or trade of prostitution; fig., meretriciousness; also, a harlot.

harm (härm), n. [AS. hearm = G. harm = Icel. harmr, harm, grief.] Evil of any kind, done or suffered, that impairs soundness, health, value, quality or character, etc.; injury; whether physical or moral; mischief, damage, hurt, or wrong; a form or instance of injury (as, "diffusing blessings, or averting harms": Pope's "Essay on Man," iii. 212); also, grief or distress.—harm, v. t. [AS. hearmian.] To do harm to; injure; damage; hurt.

har-mat-tan (här-mat'an), n. [W. Afr.] A dry, parching land-wind, charged with dust, on the west coast of Africa.

harm-er (här'mër), n. One who or that which harms.

harm-ful (härm'fùl), a. Fraught with or doing harm; injurious; hurtful.—harm'ful-ly, adv.—harm'ful-ness, n.

harm-less (härm'les), a. Free from harm, unharmed, or uninjured (now rare); free from liability or loss (as, to hold or save one harmless, as by the terms of an agreement); also, having done no harm, or innocent (archaic); now, commonly, destitute of power or tendency to harm; innocuous; inoffensive.—harm'less-ly, adv.—harm'less-ness, n.

har-mon-ic (här-mon'ik), L. [L. harmonicus, < Gr. ἀρμονικός, < ἀρμονία, E. harmony.] I. a. Pertaining to or marked by harmony, agreement, or concord; concordant; consonant; also, pertaining to music; musical; now, esp., sounding together with pleasing effect; in harmony; specif., pertaining to musical harmony, as distinguished from melody and rhythm; in acoustics, pertaining to harmonics or overtones; also, in math., having relations resembling those of musical concords (as, a harmonic progression, a series of numbers the reciprocals of which are in arithmetical progression). II. n. In acoustics, one of the secondary tones (overtones) accompanying a fundamental tone, and produced by the vibration of a sonorous body in aliquot parts of its length; one of these tones produced separately, as by lightly stopping a vibrating string; in elect., a series of oscillations or waves of higher frequency accompanying a fundamental series of lower frequency, the frequency of the former being a multiple of that of the latter. See also harmonics.

har-mon-i-ca (här-mon'i-kä), n. [NL., prop. fem. of L. harmonicus, E. harmonic.] Any of various musical instruments; esp., one having a set of small metallic reeds mounted in a case and played by the breath; a mouth-organ.

har-mon-i-cal (här-mon'i-käl), a. Harmonic.—har-mon'i-cal-ly, adv.

har-mon-i-con (här-mon'i-kon), n. [NL., < Gr. ἀρμονικόν, neut. of ἀρμονικός, E. harmonic.] Any of various musical instruments, as a harmonica or mouth-organ or an orchestron.

har-mon-ics (här-mon'iks), n. The science of musical sounds.

har-mo-ni-ous (här-mō'ni-us), a. [F. harmonieux, < harmonie, E. harmony.] Exhibiting harmony; being in harmony; forming a pleasingly consistent whole; also, marked by agreement in feeling or action (as, harmonious consent; a harmonious meeting); also, agreeable to the ear; tuneful; free from discord.—har-mo'ni-ous-ly, adv.—har-mo'ni-ous-ness, n.

har-mo-nist (här'mō-nist), n. One who reduces something to harmony; also, one who makes a harmony, as of the Gospels; also, one skilled in musical harmony; a musician; a composer.—har-mo-nis'tic (-nis'tik), a. Pertaining to a harmonist or harmony; pertaining to the collation and harmonizing of parallel passages, as of the Gospels.—har-mo-nis'ti-cal-ly, adv.

har-mo-ni-um (här-mō'ni-um), n. [NL., < L. harmonia, E. harmony.] A reed-organ, esp. one in which the air is forced outward through the reeds.

har-mo-nize (här'mō-niz), v.; -nized, -nizing. [OF. F. harmoniser, < harmonie, E. harmony.] I. intr. To be in harmony, accord, or agreement; in music, to form a concord. II. tr. To bring into harmony, accord, or agreement; also, to make musically harmonious; specif., in music, to set accompanying parts to, as a melody.—har'mo-ni-za'tion (-ni-zä'shon), n.—har'mo-niz-er (-ni-zër), n.

har-mo-ny (här'mō-ni), n.; pl. -nies (-niz). [OF. F.

harmonie, < L. harmonia, < Gr. ἀρμονία, a joining, joint, frame, arrangement, concord, music, akin to ἀρμόεν, fit together, and ἀρμός, joint: see arm.] A consistent, orderly, or pleasing arrangement of parts; agreement; congruity; concord; also, accord, as in sentiments or action (as, "Harmony to behold in wedded pair More grateful than harmonious sound to the ear": Milton's "Paradise Lost," viii. 605); harmonious relations; also, a collated assemblage of passages on the same subject from different works, showing their points of agreement (as, a harmony of the Gospels); also, harmonious or musical sound; melodious sound; in music, any simultaneous combination of consonant tones, as in a chord; a concord; specif., a triad; also, the simultaneous combination of such tones; chordal structure, as distinguished from melody and rhythm; also, the science of the structure, relations, and practical combination of chords.—harmony of the spheres. See music of the spheres, under music.

har-ness (här'nes), n. [OF. harnas, herneis (F. harnais); origin uncertain.] Armor or defensive equipments for men or horses (or other animals) in war, or a suit of armor, etc. (archaic: as, "Arm, arm, and out! . . . At least we'll die with harness on our back," Shakspeare's "Macbeth," v. 5. 52; "one of the beasts [elephants], armed with the royal harness," 1 Mac. vi. 43); in general, equipments, accoutrements, trappings, or dress (obs. or rare); now, commonly, the combination of straps, bands, and other parts forming the working-gear of a horse or other draft-animal (except the ox); fig., the equipments, constraining conditions, or routine of work (as, to live or die in harness); also, the heddles and connected parts in a loom; also, the mechanism by which a large bell is suspended and rung.—har'ness, v. t. To array in armor or equip-

Horse's Harness.

1, crown; 2, cheek-piece; 3, front; 4, 4, blinds; 5, nose-band; 6, bit; 7, curb; 8, check; 9, throat-latch; 10, rein; 11, collar; 12, hame; 13, hame-link; 14, hame-strap; 15, pole-strap; 16, martingale; 17, trace-tug; 18, trace; 19, saddle; 20, terret; 21, belly-band; 22, 23, crupper; 24, 24, breeching; 25, hip-strap; 26, trace-bearer.

ments of war (archaic); in general, to equip, accoutre, or dress (obs. or rare); now, commonly, to put harness on (a horse, etc.); attach by a harness, as to a vehicle to be drawn; fig., to bring under conditions for working (as, to harness water-power).—har'nessed, p. a. Equipped with or being in harness; hence, marked with streaks of color, as if wearing a harness (as, the harnessed antelope, any of various antelopes of the genus Tragelaphus).—har'ness-er, n.—har'ness-mak'er, n.

harns (härnz), n.

pl. [Late AS.

harnes, pl.: cf.

Icel. harni, G. hirn, brain.] Brains. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

harp (härp), n. [AS. hearpe = D. harp = G. harfe = Icel. harpa, harp: cf. LL. harpa, from Teut.] A musical instrument with strings, which are commonly set in a triangular frame and plucked with the fingers (see cut on following page); also, a representation of this instrument (the national device of Ireland); hence, an Irishman (slang, U. S.); also [cap.], in astron., the northern constellation Lyra.—Æolian harp. See Æolian.—harp, v. [AS. hearpian.] I. intr. To play on a harp (as, to harp on one string, fig., to dwell persistently on one subject); fig., to dwell persist-Harnessed Antelope (Tragelaphus bor).

(variable) d as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ÷, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ', primary accent; ", secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

ently or tediously (on or upon) in speaking or writing. II. tr. To play (music, etc.) on a harp; also, to bring, put, etc., by playing on a harp (poetic: as, to harp one to sleep); also, to give voice or utterance to (archaic: as, "Thou hast harp'd my fear aright," Shakspeare's "Macbeth," iv. 1. 74). — harp'er, n.

harp-ings (här'pingz), n. pl. [Cf. F. harpe, harpon, cramp-iron: see harpoon.] Naut., the stout wales about the bow of a ship. Also harp'ins.

harp-ist (här'pist), n. One who plays on the harp.

har-poon (här-pön'), n. [F. harpon, harpoon, earlier grappling-iron, cramp-iron, < harpe, cramp-iron, cramp, < L. harpe, < Gr. ἄρπη, sickle, simitar.] A barbed, spear-like missile attached to a rope, and thrown by hand or shot from a gun, used in capturing whales and large fish. — har-poon', v. t. To strike, catch, or kill with or as with a harpoon. — har-poon'er, n. — har-poon'=gun, n. A gun for shooting a harpoon, as at a whale.

harp=seal

(härp'sæl), n. A large whitish seal, Phoca grænelandica, with a dark harp-like figure on its back, common from Newfoundland northward.

Harp-seal.

harp-si-chord

(härp-si-körd), n. [Obs. F. harpechorde, < It. arpico, < arpa, harp, + corda, string, cord.] A piano-like instrument in use from the 16th to the 18th century, in which the strings were plucked by leather or quill points connected with the keys.

Harpsichord in the Washington Mansion, Mount Vernon, Virginia.

har-py (här'pi), n.; pl. -pies (-piz). [F. harpie, < L. harpyia, < Gr. ἄρπυια, lit. 'snatcher', akin to ἀρπάσσειν, snatch, seize. [L. c. or cap.] A ravenous, filthy monster of classical mythology, usually represented as having a woman's head and body, and a bird's wings, tail, legs, and claws; fig. [L. c.], a rapacious, grasping person (as, "Those harpies . . . for the mere sake of filthy lucre, were resolved to deliver me over into the hands of my father": Irving's "Tales of a Traveler," ii. 7); also, the harpy-eagle. — har'py-ea'gle, n. A large, powerful, crested bird of prey, Thrasaetus harpyia, of South and Central America and Mexico, with strong beak and talons, rounded wings, and fan-like tail.

har-que-bus (här'kə-bus or här'kwē-), n. [F. (obs.) harquebuse, later arquebuse (forms derived through It. from Teut.), for OF. haquebute, haquebusche, harquebus; from Teut. (cf. MD. haeckbusse, MLG. hakebusse, MHG. hakenbühse), and meaning 'hook gun,' perhaps from a hook on the weapon for attaching it to a rest or support.] An old form of portable gun, provided at first with a matchlock, afterward with a wheel-lock, and superseded by the musket. — har'que-bus-ier' (-ēr'), n. [F.] A soldier armed with a harquebus.

Modern Harp.

A, pedestal; B, pedals; C, back; D, sounding-board; E, neck; F, pins to which the strings are fastened; G, pillar.

har-ri-dan (har'i-dan), n. [Cf. F. haridelle, sorry horse, jade.] A vicious old hag; a hardened, violent woman.

har-ri-er¹ (har'i-ér), n. [Appar. < hare.] One of a breed of small hounds employed in hunting the hare; also, a member of a hare and hounds team; a cross-country runner.

har-ri-er² (har'i-ér), n. [See harry.] One who or that which harries; specif., any of the hawks of the genus Circus (family Falconidae), which prey on small animals.

har-row¹ (har'ō), v. t. [= harry.] To harry; ravage; despoil. See *harrowing*¹. [Archaic.]

har-row² (har'ō), n. [ME. haru, harwe: cf. Icel. herfi, harrow, MLG. harke, rake.] An agricultural implement set with teeth, upright disks, etc., usually of iron, drawn over plowed land to level it, break clods, etc. — har'row², v. t. To draw a harrow over (land, etc.); hence, to cut, scratch, or lacerate (flesh, etc.); fig., to distress or disturb keenly or painfully, as a person, the mind, feelings, etc. (as, "Amazed I stood, har-row'd with grief and fear": Milton's "Comus," 565); work (up) to a mental state of acute discomfort or uneasiness. — har'row-er, n.

Common Harrow.

har-row-ing¹ (har'ō-ing), n. Harrying, ravaging, or despoiling: as, the harrowing of hell by Christ (according to apocryphal account) in his descent thither, after his crucifixion, in order to rescue the captive souls of the just (a familiar subject of allusion and literary treatment in medieval and later times). [Archaic.]

har-row-ing² (har'ō-ing), p. a. That harrows; keenly distressing or disturbing; heartrending. — har'row-ing-ly, adv. har-ry (har'i), v.; -ried, -rying. [AS. hergian, ravage as an army does, < here = OHG. heri, hari, G. heer, = Icel. herr = Goth. harjis, army, host.] I. tr. To ravage (places) as in war; devastate, pillage, or despoil; also, to harass (persons) by repeated attacks, forced exactions, rapacious demands, etc.; in general, to harass, trouble, torment, or worry (as, "Thou their tool, set on to plague And play upon and harry me, petty spy And traitress!" Tennyson's "Guinevere," 358); also, to carry off, as in a raid (now Sc.). II. intr. To make harassing incursions.

harsh (härsh), a. [ME. harsk: cf. Dan. harsk, Sw. härsk, rancid, G. harsch, harsh, rough, hard.] Unpleasantly rough to the touch (as, a harsh towel; fruit with a harsh rind); hence, unpleasant to other senses; rough, sharp, or acrid to the tongue, as taste, flavor, fruit, etc.; grating, jarring, or discordant to the ear, as sounds, voices, etc.; unpleasing to the eye, as outlines, colors, features, etc.; jarring upon the esthetic sense, hard, or inartistic, as contrasts, effects, etc.; also, unpleasant in action or effect; severe, ungentle, or cruel, as persons, measures, treatment, utterances, etc.; stern, grim, or forbidding, as faces, expression, etc.; rugged or bleak, as places, scenery, climate, etc. — harsh'en, v. t. To render harsh. — harsh'ly, adv. — harsh'ness, n.

hars-let (häs'rlet), n. Same as haslet.

hart (härt), n. [AS. heort = D. hert = G. hirsch = Icel. hjörtr, hart, stag.] The male of the deer, commonly the red deer (Cervus elaphus), esp. after its fifth year.

harte-beest (härt'bēst), n. [S. Afr. D., 'hart beast.'] A large South African antelope, Bubalis caama, of a red color, having a long face with naked muzzle; also, any of various allied African antelopes.

harts-horn (härts'hörn), n. The antler of the hart, formerly much used as a source of ammonia; also, an aqueous solution of ammonia ('spirit of hartshorn'); ammonium carbonate, or sal volatile ('volatile salt of hartshorn').

hart's-tongue (härts'tung), n. Any of various ferns, esp. Phyllitis scolopendrium, which has long simple fronds.

har-um-scar-um (här'um-skär'um). [Appar. from obs. hare, harry, harass, + scare.] I. adv. Recklessly; wildly. II. a. Reckless; rash. III. n. A reckless person; also, reckless conduct.

ha-rus-pex (ha-rus'peks), n.; pl. haruspices (-pi-sēz). [L., < haru (= Skt. hira), entrails, + specere, look at.] In ancient Rome, one of a class of minor priests who practised divination, esp. from the entrails of animals killed in sacrifice.

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, âsk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lûte, pûll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviâry, êlect, agôny, intô, ûnite; (obscured) errânt, operâ, ardënt, actôr, natûre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

—ha-rus-pi-ca'tion (-pi-kā'shən), n. Divination by or as by a haruspex. Also ha-rus-pi-cy (-si).

har-vest (här'vest), n. [AS. hærfest = D. herfst = G. herbst, autumn; perhaps akin to L. carpere, pick, Gr. καρπός, fruit.] The third season of the year; autumn; hence, the season of gathering ripened crops, esp. of grain; also, the gathering of crops (as, "A field Of Ceres, ripe for harvest": Milton's "Paradise Lost," iv. 981); also, a crop or yield, as of grain; hence, the product or result of any labor or process.

—har'vest, v. t. To gather, as a crop; also, to gather the crop from (as, "And, side by side . . . Harvest the fields wherein they fought": Whittier's "Snow-Bound"). —har'-vest-bug, n. A harvest-fly; also, a harvest-tick. —har'-vest-er, n. One who harvests (as, "a harvester of hay": Whittier's "Maud Muller"); a reaper; also, any of various machines for harvesting or gathering field-crops, such as grain, beans, flax, potatoes, etc.; esp., a machine for harvesting grain, often fitted with an attachment for tying or binding the grain in bundles or sheaves; also, a harvestman (arachnid). —har'-vest-fly, n. Any of certain cicadas, as Cicada tibicen ('dog-day harvest-fly'), noted for its sharp trill. —har'-vest-home, n. The bringing home of the harvest, or the time of doing it; the close of the harvesting; also, an English festival celebrated at the close of the harvest; also, a harvest song. —har'-vest-man (-mən), n.; pl. -men. A man engaged in harvesting; also, any of the arachnids of the order Phalangidea, comprising spider-like creatures with small rounded body and usually very long legs; the daddy-long-legs of the U. S. —har'-vest-moon, n. The moon which is full nearest to the autumnal equinox, esp. at and about the period of fullness. —har'-vest-mouse, n.; pl. -mice (-mīs). A very small European field-mouse, Mus minutus, which builds its nest on the stalks of growing grain. —har'-vest-tick, n. Any of various acarids in an immature stage, common in late summer and autumn, which attach themselves to the skin of man and animals.

Har-vey-ize

(här'vi-iz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. [From H. A. Harvey (1824-93), American inventor.] To harden the face of (steel armor-plate, etc.) by a process involving cementation and chilling.

has (haz), third person sing. pres. ind. of have. —has'=been, n. A person or thing that has been but is no longer, that belongs to the past, or whose period of flourishing or effectiveness is over. [Colloq.]

hash (hash), v. t. [F. hacher, < hache, ax: see hatchet, and cf. *hatch*³.] To chop into small pieces; mince; make into a hash. —hash, n. Something hashed or chopped up; esp., a dish of chopped cooked meat, and often potatoes, seasoned, and cooked again; hence, any preparation of old material worked over; also, a mess, jumble, or muddle (as, to make a hash of a matter).

hash-ish, hash-eesh (hash'esh or ha-shēsh'), n. [Ar. hashish.] The flowering tops, leaves, etc., of Indian hemp has-let (has'let), n. [OF. hastelet (F. hâtelette), roasted bit of meat, < haste, spit, < L. hasta, spear.] The heart, liver, etc., of a hog or other animal, as used for food.

(see under hemp), smoked, chewed, or otherwise used in the Orient as a narcotic and intoxicant; any of certain preparations made from this plant. Cf. bhang.

hasp (hāsp), n. [AS. hæpse = G. haspe = Icel. hespa, hasp.] A clasp or fastening for a door, window, trunk, etc.; esp., a piece of metal fitting over a staple or into a hole and then made fast. —hasp, v. t. To fasten with or as with a hasp.

has-sock (has'gk), n. [AS. hassuc, tussock of grass.] A rank tuft of coarse grass or sedge, as on boggy ground; a tussock; also, a shock of hair; also, a thick, firm cushion used as a footstool or to kneel on (as, "In order to make them kneel and join in the responses, he gave every one of them a hassock and a Common Prayer Book": Addison, in "Spectator," 112).

hast (hast), Second person sing. pres. ind. of have: now only in poetic or solemn use.

has-tate (has'tāt), a. [NL. hastatus, hastate, L. armed with a spear, < L. hasta, spear.] Spear-like, as weapons; also, shaped like the head of a spear; in bot., of a leaf, triangular, with two spreading lobes at the base. —has'tate-ly, adv.

haste (häst), n. [OF. haste (F. hâte), haste; from Teut. (cf. AS. hæst, violence).] Energetic speed in motion or action, as from eagerness, fear, urgency of circumstances, etc. (as, "The king's business required haste": 1 Sam. xxi. 8); celerity, expedition, or despatch; often, thoughtless or rash speed (as, haste makes waste; "Married in haste, we may repent at leisure," Congreve's "Old Bachelor," v. 3); hurry or precipitance; also, eager or quickened effort to do something with speed (as, to be breathless with haste; to make haste, see phrase below); also, need or sense of need of, or eagerness for, speed (as, to be in great haste; to be in no haste, or to show no haste, to begin). —to make haste, to exert one's self to do something with speed; sometimes, with adjunct, to go or proceed with haste or speed (as, to make haste to a place; to make haste to reply). —haste, v. i. or t.; hasted, hasting. [OF. haster (F. hâter).] To hasten. [Now chiefly poetic.] —haste'ful, a. Full of haste; hurrying. —haste'less, a. Without haste or hurry.

hast-en (häs'n), v. [From haste.] I. intr. To move or act with haste; make haste; go or proceed with haste (as, to hasten away; to hasten to a place; to hasten to explain); hurry. II. tr. To cause to make haste (as, "Bid her hasten all the house to bed": Shakspeare's "Romeo and Juliet," iii. 3. 156); urge or impel to greater speed; accelerate (a process); bring about (an event, etc.) more speedily. —hast'en-er, n.

hast-y (häs'ti), a.; compar. hastier, superl. hastiest. Moving or acting with haste; speedy; quick; hurried; often, unduly quick in movement or action; precipitate; rash; also, easily excited to anger; quick-tempered; passionate; also, eager† or impatient† (as, "Where now the throng That . . . hasty to depart, Look'd to the sea for safety?" Cowper's "Task," ii. 118); of fruit, etc., ripening early†; also, made, done, etc., with haste or speed (as, a hasty visit, glance, or letter: cf. hasty-pudding); often, done with or characterized by thoughtless or angry haste, as actions, words, etc. —hast'i-ly, adv. —hast'i-ness, n. —hast'y=pud'ding, n. A dish made of flour or oatmeal stirred into boiling water or milk and quickly cooked; in the U. S., usually, mush made with Indian meal.

hat (hat), n. [AS. hæt, head-covering, = Icel. hötr, hood, = Sw. hatt, Dan. hat, hat; akin to E. hood.] A shaped covering for the head, esp. one with a crown and a brim (see cut on following page); specif., in Roman Catholic use, the distinctive red head-covering of a cardinal; hence, the office or dignity of cardinal. —hat, v. t.; hatted, hatting. To provide with a hat; put a hat on.

hat-a-ble (hä'ta-bl), a. Capable or worthy of being hated.

hat-band (hat'band), n. A band or ribbon placed about the crown of a hat, just above the brim.

Hastate Leaf.

Harvest-mouse and its Nest.

Harvest-ticks, much magnified.

hat-box (hat'boks), n. A box for holding a hat; also, a small, nearly cubical trunk.

hatch¹ (hach), n. [AS hæc, gate, hatch: cf. D. and L.G. hek, fence, gate, Sw. hück, Dan. hæk, rack.] A door, gate, or wicket with an opening over it; the lower half of a divided door; also, a flood-gate; also, a cover for an opening in a ship's deck, a floor, a roof, or the like; hence, a hatchway; also, pl., a ship's deck (now only in 'under hatches,' that is, below deck).—hatch¹, v. t. To close with or as with a hatch: as, "Sleep begins with heavy wings To hatch mine eyes" (Sidney's "Astrophel and Stella," xxxviii.).

hatch² (hach), v. [ME. hachen, akin to G. hecken, Sw. håcka, Dan. hækka, hatch.] I. tr. To bring forth (young) from the egg; also, to cause young to emerge from (the egg); hence, in general, to bring forth or breed; fig., to bring into being; contrive or devise; esp., to contrive covertly or secretly (as, to hatch mischief or a plot). II. intr. To bring forth young from the egg; also, to be hatched.—hatch², n. The act of hatching; also, that which is hatched, as a brood (also fig.: as, "the hatch and brood of time," Shakspeare's "2 Henry IV.," iii. 1. 86).

hatch³ (hach), v. t. [F. hacher, chop, hash, hatch: see hash.] To mark with lines, esp. closely set parallel lines, as for shading in drawing or engraving; also, to inlay with lines or fine strips of a different material.—hatch³, n. A line or stroke, as for shading.

hatch-el (hach'el), n. [= *hackle*¹, heckle.] A hackle for flax or hemp.—hatch'el, v. t.; -eled or -elled, -eling or -elling. To hackle (flax or hemp); fig., to harass or torment.—hatch'el-er, hatch'el-er, n.

hatch-or (hach'ër), n. One that hatches, as a bird or an incubator; fig., a contriver; a plotter.—hatch'er-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). A place for hatching eggs, esp. those of fish.

hatch-et (hach'et), n. [OF. F. hachette, dim. of hache, ax; from Teut.] A small, short-handled ax for use with one hand; sometimes, a tomahawk.—to bury the hatchet, to make peace: in allusion to a practice of American Indians of burying a tomahawk upon making peace.—to dig up the hatchet, to prepare for war.—hatch'et-face, n. A sharp, narrow face.—hatch'et-faced, a.

hatch-ett-in, hatch-ett-ine (hach'et-in), n. [From C. Hatchett (died 1847), English chemist.] A soft waxy mineral substance of a yellowish-white or greenish-yellow color, consisting of carbon and hydrogen in combination, and occurring in Wales, Scotland, etc. Also, hatch'ett-ite (-it).

hatch-et-y (hach'et-i), a. Hatchet-like; thin and sharp, as the face.

hatch-ing (hach'ing), n. A marking with lines, esp. closely set parallel lines, as for shading; also, the lines made.

hatch-ment (hach'ment), n. [Corruption of achievement.] An escutcheon or armorial shield granted for some Forms of Hats worn in England in the 16th, 17th, and 18th centuries.

1, 2, time of Henry VIII.; 3, time of Mary; 4, time of Elizabeth I.; 5, 6, time of James I. and Charles I.; 7, 8, time of the Commonwealth; 9, 10, time of William III.; 11-16, 18th century.

Hatchment of an Esquire — his arms impaled with those of his wife, the wife surviving.

achievement; esp., a square tablet set diagonally, bearing the arms of a deceased person (see cut in preceding column).

hatch-way (hach'wä), n. An opening (covered by a hatch) in a ship's deck, for passage to parts below; also, a similar opening in a floor, roof, etc.

hate (hät), v. t.; hated, hating. [AS. hatian = D. haten = G. hassen = Icel. hata = Goth. hatan, hate: cf. heinous.] To regard with a strong or passionate dislike (as, "Love your enemies, do good to them which hate you": Luke, vi. 27); detest; also, in a weakened sense, to dislike.—hate, n. [AS. hete.] Hatred; also, the object of hatred (poetic).

—hate'a-ble, a. See hatable.—hate'ful, a. Full of hate; malignant; malevolent; also, exciting hate; detestable; odious.

—hate'ful-ly, adv.—hate'ful-ness, n.—hate'less, a. Free from hate.—hat-er (hät'ër), n.

hath (hath). Third person sing. pres. ind. of have: now only in poetic or solemn use.

Ha-thor-ic (ha-thor'ik), a. Of or pertaining to the goddess Hathor of Egyptian mythology, usually represented with the head, horns, or ears of a cow; esp., decorated with a face or head assumed to represent this goddess, as the capital of a column.

ha-tred (hä'tred), n. [ME. hatrede.] The feeling of one who hates; passionate dislike; detestation.

hat-ted (hat'ed), a. Wearing a hat.

hat-ter (hat'ër), n. A maker or seller of hats.—hat'ter-y, n.; pl. -ies (-iz). The goods of a hatter; also, the factory or the store of a hatter.

hat-tree (hat'trê), n. A stand with spreading arms or pegs on which hats, coats, etc., may be hung.

hau-ber-geon (hä'bër-jon), n. [OF. F. haubergeon, < OF. hauberc, E. hauberk.] A short hauberk, reaching to the middle of the thighs; hence, any hauberk.

hau-berk (hä'bërk), n. [OF. hauberc, halberc (F. haubert), < OHG. halsberg, < hals, neck, + bergan, protect.] A piece of armor orig. intended for the protection of the neck and shoulders, but early developed into a long coat of mail reaching below the knees: as, "And on the hauberg stroke the Prince so sore, That quite disparted all the linked frame" (Spenser's "Faerie Queene," ii. 8. 44).

haud (häd), v. and n. Scotch form of *hold*².

haugh (hä, Sc. häch), n. [ME. hawch, halche: cf. AS. healh, corner, nook.] A piece of low-lying, flat ground by the side of a river. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

haught (hät), a. [OF. haut, halt (F. haut), < L. altus, high.] High†; fig., exalted†, lofty†, or noble†; also, haughty (archaic: as, "the haught high-bred bearing," Browning's "Inn Album," i.).

haugh-ty (hä'ti), a.; compar. haughtier, superl. haughtiest. [Extended form of haught.] High†; fig., exalted, lofty, or noble (archaic: as, "No haughty feat of arms I tell," Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," vi. 23); also, having or showing a feeling of lofty dignity; disdainfully proud; arrogant; supercilious.—haugh'ti-ly, adv.—haugh'ti-ness, n.

haul (häl), v. t. [Var. of *hale*¹.] To pull or draw with force; move or transport by drawing; naut., to change the course of (a ship), esp. so as to sail closer to the wind; also, to cause a ship to sail closer to (the wind).—to haul over the coals, fig., to take severely to task; reprimand severely.—to haul up, to bring up, as before a superior, for reprimand; call to account. [Colloq.]—haul, v. i. To pull or tug (as, "The skipper hauled at the heavy sail": Whittier's "Wreck of Rivermouth"); naut., to change a ship's course, esp. so as to sail closer to the wind; loosely, to sail, as in a particular direction; hence, in general use, to change

Hathoric Capital.

Hauberk, 12th and 13th centuries.

fat, fäte, fär, fäll, äsk, färe; net, mē, hër; pin, pine; not, nôte, möve, nôr; up, lüte, püll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviäry, èlect, agöny, intö, unite; (obscured) erränt, operä, ardënt, actör, natüre; ch, chip; g, go; th, thin; ʒh, then; y, you;

one's course of procedure or action; make one's way in a particular direction; of the wind, to change direction, shift, or veer.—to haul off, to change the course of a ship so as to get further off from an object; hence, in general, to draw off or away; also, to draw back the arm in preparation for a blow.—to haul up, to change a ship's course so as to sail closer to the wind; also, to bring one's self to a position of rest by hauling or drawing action (as, the boat hauled up at the pier).—haul, n. The act or an act of hauling; a strong pull or tug; the draft of a fishing-net; also, the distance through which anything is hauled; also, that which is hauled; the quantity of fish taken at one draft of the net (as, "The bulging nets swept shoreward, With their silver-sided haul": Whittier's "Sycamores"); also, in fig. use, the taking or acquisition of anything, or that which is taken (colloq.: as, "That [silver] . . . would ha' been a haul for Congress, if they could ha' got hold on 't in war-time," Mrs. Stowe's "Oldtown Folks," xxvi.).—haul/age (-āj), n. The act or labor of hauling; the amount of force expended in hauling; also, a charge for hauling; also, a charge made by a railroad for the use of a line of track.—haul'er, n.

hault (hām), n. See halm.

haunch (hānch or hānch), n. [OF. F. hanche; from Teut.] The fleshy part of the body about the hip; the hip; also, a hind quarter of an animal; the leg and loin of an animal, as used for food; in arch., either side of an arch, extending from the vertex or crown to the impost.—haunch' = bone, n. The innominate bone; also, the ilium.

haunt (hānt or hānt), v. [OF. F. hanter; origin uncertain.] I. tr. To practise habitually; use habitually or frequently; also, to resort to much, or visit frequently (as, "I haunt the pine-dark solitudes," Lowell's "L'Envoi: To the Muse"; "Haunt less the plays, and more the public pray'rs," T. Parnell's "Elegy to an Old Beauty"); frequent the company of (a person: as, to haunt the rich); hence, to intrude upon (a person) continually, as memories, thoughts, cares, etc., do; recur to persistently; specif., of ghosts, etc., to visit (a place or a person) frequently or habitually, with manifested presence. II. intr. To resort habitually (as, "I have charged thee not to haunt about my doors": Shakspeare's "Othello," i. 1. 96); associate, as with a person.—haunt, n. Habit, custom, or usage (now prov. Eng. and Sc.); habitual practice (as, "Of clooth-making she hadde swiche an haunt, She passed hem of Ypres and of Gaunt": Chaucer's "Prologue to the Canterbury Tales," 447); also, the practice of resorting to or frequently visiting a place, etc. (as, "This our life exempt from public haunt Finds tongues in trees, books in the running brooks": Shakspeare's "As You Like It," ii. 1. 15); also, a place of frequent resort (as, to revisit one's old haunts); also, a ghost (local, Eng. and U. S.).—haunt'ed, p. a. Much resorted to; specif., frequented or visited by ghosts (as, a haunted room; a haunted man).—haunt'er, n.—haunt'ing-ly, adv.

hause, hawse¹ (hās), n. [AS. heals = Icel. hāls = OHG. and Goth. hals, neck.] A narrow passage between mountains; a narrow connecting ridge. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

hau-sen (hā'zn, G. hou'zen), n. [G., < OHG. hūso: cf. isinglass.] A large sturgeon, Acipenser huso, of the Black Sea and Caspian Sea and their rivers.

haus-mann-ite (hous'man-it), n. [From J. F. L. Hausmann (1782-1859), German mineralogist.] A native oxide of manganese found in Germany, etc.

Haus-mann-ize (hous'man-iz), v. t.; -ized, -izing. To remodel (a city, its streets, etc.) after the manner of Baron Hausmann (1809-91) in Paris, as by providing broad, straight thoroughfares, fine architectural effects, etc.—Haus'mann-i-za'tion (-i-zā'shən), n.

haus-tel-lum (hās-tel'um), n.; pl. haustella (-ā). [NL., dim. of L. haustum, machine for drawing water, < haurire, draw, drain.] In certain insects and crustaceans, a proboscis or organ adapted for sucking blood or plant-juices.—haus'tel-late (-te-lāt), a.

haus-to-ri-um (hās-tō'ri-um), n.; pl. -ria (-ri-ā). [NL., < L. haustor, drawer, drinker, < haurire, draw, drain.] In bot., one of the small suckers or other appendages on a parasitic plant, which penetrate the host and absorb nutriment.

haut-boy (hō'boi), n. [F. hautbois, < haut, high, + bois, wood; named with reference to its high notes.] An oboe.

—haut'boy-ist, n. An oboist.

haut-teur (hō-tēr'), n. [F., < haut, high: see haught.] Haughty manner or spirit; haughtiness.

ha-üy-nite, ha-üyne (hā'wi-nit, -win), n. [From R. J. Häuy (1743-1822), French mineralogist.] A silicate and sulphate mineral containing aluminium, calcium, and sodium, and having usually a bluish or greenish color: found embedded in igneous rocks.

Ha-van-a (hā-van'ā), n. A cigar made at Havana or in Cuba, or one made elsewhere of Cuban tobacco.

have (hav), v.; pres. 1 have, 2 hast, 3 has or hath, pl. have; pret. and pp. had; ppr. having. [AS. habban = D. hebben = G. haben = Icel. hafa = Goth. haban, have; appar. akin to L. habere, have.] I. tr. To hold or possess in ownership, or own (as, to have much property or money); hold or possess in some other relation, as of kindred, relative position, etc. (as, a man who has two sons; to have one's opponent down); possess as a part or appendage, or as the constituent parts (as, true flies have two wings; the year has twelve months); possess as an attribute, quality, right, effect, etc. (as, to have a dark complexion; to have a cheerful disposition; to have special privileges; to have beneficial results); possess by acquiring or receiving (as, to have no news); get, receive, or take (as, there are few to be had; do have one); hold in mind, sight, etc. (as, to have a journey in contemplation); entertain (an opinion, feeling, etc.: as, to have doubts); show or exhibit in action (as, to have regard, heed, a care, etc.); assert or maintain (as, rumor has it so); engage in or perform (as, to have a talk, a dance, or a party); know or understand (as, to have neither Latin nor Greek); experience, enjoy, or suffer (as, to have a pleasant time; to have a headache or bad health); undergo or encounter as an experience (with an adjunct: as, to have one's hopes fulfilled; to have one's fingers burned); hold in estimation (archaic: as, to have in reverence or in contempt); hold in one's power or at a disadvantage, as in an argument (colloq.: as, he has you there); outwit, deceive, or cheat (slang: as, a person not easily had); bring, take, or put (archaic: as, "I was had into a whole room full of women," Fielding's "Tom Jones," xvii. 3); require or cause (to do something, be done, or be as specified: as, have him saddle my horse; to have one's horse saddled; have the horse here at five); permit or allow (as, I will not have it; I would not have them lose by it); be required, compelled, or under obligation (followed by an infinitive with to: as, I have to stop now). See also had better, under had. II. intr. To get, go, or be: in archaic phrases: as, have at them! (as in attack); have with you! (on with you!); had like (was or came near: now colloq.). III. auxiliary. Used with the past participle of a principal verb to form a compound or perfect tense, sometimes with another auxiliary: as, I have, had, or shall have done it; you should or would not have gone.

have-lock (hav'lok), n. [From Sir H. Havelock (1795-1857), British general.] A white cloth cap-cover with a flap hanging over the neck, for protection from the sun.

ha-ven (hā'vn), n. [AS. hæfen = D. haven = G. hafen = Icel. höfn, haven: cf. AS. hæf, Icel. haf, sea.] A harbor or port; fig., any place of shelter and safety.—ha'ven, v. t. To shelter as in a haven.—ha'ven-less, a. Without a haven; harborless.

hav-er¹ (hav'ēr), n. One who has; a possessor: as, "Valour is the chiefest virtue, and Most dig nifies the haver" (Shakspeare's "Coriolanus," ii. 2. 89).

hav-er² (hā'vēr), v. i. [Origin unknown.] To talk foolishly; prate. [Sc. and north. Eng.]—ha'ver², n. Foolish talk; nonsense: usually in pl. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

hav-er³ (hav'ēr), n. [ME. haver = G. hafer = Sw. hafre = Dan. havre.] The oat; oats. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

have-rel (hāv'rēl), n. [See *haver*².] A foolish talker; a silly chatterer; a fool. [Sc. and north. Eng.]

Havelock.

(variable) g as d or j, s as s or sh, t as t or ch, z as z or zh; o, F. cloche; ü, F. menu; ch, Sc. loch; ñ, F. bonbon; ¹, primary accent; ², secondary accent; †, obsolete; <, from; +, and; =, equals. See also lists at beginning of book.

hav-or-sack (hav'ér-sak), n. [F. havresac, < G. habersac, lit. 'oat sack': cf. *haver*³.] A soldier's bag for carrying rations, as when on the march (as, "We bore two days' rations in our haversacks": Conan Doyle's "Exploits of Brigadier Gerard," v.); also, any similar bag used for a like purpose.

Ha-ver-sian (ha-vér'si-an), a. Pertaining to or discovered by Clopton Havers (died 1702), a London anatomist: as, a Haversian canal (a cylindrical hollow in bone, through which a blood-vessel runs).

hav-il-dar (hav'il-där), n. [Hind. havildär, < Pers. hawaldär.] In India, a native or sepoy sergeant.

hav-ing (hav'ing), n. Possession; also, that which one possesses; pl., belongings; also, now usually in pl., behavior or manners (Sc.).

hav-i-or, hav-iour (häv'yör), n. [OF. aveir (F. avoir), possession, property, orig. inf., < L. habere, have: cf. *aver*².] Possession; property; also, behavior, deportment, or, pl., manners (archaic or prov.).

hav-oc (hav'ök), n. [AF. havoc, OF. havot, a word used esp. in the phrase crier havot, 'cry havoc,' give the call for pillaging; prob. from Teut.] Orig., a word used as the signal for pillage in warfare (as, "Cæsar's spirit . . . Shall . . . Cry 'Havoc,' and let slip the dogs of war": Shakspeare's "Julius Cæsar," iii. 1. 273); hence, devastation; destructive waste; ruinous damage. —hav'oc, v.; -ocked, -ocking. I. tr. To work havoc upon; devastate. II. intr. To work havoc. —hav'ock-er, n.

haw¹ (há), n. [AS. haga.] The fruit of the hawthorn, Crataegus oxyacantha, or of other species of the same genus; hence, any of various shrubs or small trees of this genus, as C. coccinea ('scarlet haw'), of North America; also, any of certain other shrubs or trees, as Viburnum prunifolium (see black-haw).

haw² (há), n. [Origin uncertain.] The nictitating membrane of a horse, dog, etc.: formerly so called only when inflamed and then regarded as an excrescence.

haw³ (há), interj. A word of command to horses, etc., usually directing them to turn to the left. Cf. *gee*¹. —haw³, v. i. or t. To turn to the left.

haw⁴ (há). I. interj. An unmeaning utterance marking hesitation in speech. II. n. The utterance 'haw.' —haw⁴, v. i. To use the utterance 'haw,' as in hesitating speech.

Ha-wai-ian (hä-wi'yan), I. a. Pertaining to Hawaii, the largest of the Hawaiian Islands, in the Pacific, or to the whole group. II. n. A native or inhabitant of Hawaii or the Hawaiian Islands; also, the Hawaiian language.

haw-finch (há'finch), n. [See *haw*¹.] A European grosbeak, Coccothraustes vulgaris.

haw-haw (há'há'). [Cf. ha.] I. interj. A word representing the sound of a loud, boisterous laugh. II. n. A loud, boisterous laugh; a guffaw. —haw'=haw', v. i. To laugh loudly and boisterously; guffaw.

hawk¹ (hák), n. [AS. hafoc = D. havik = G. habicht = Icel. hawkur, hawk; perhaps from the root of E. heave.] Any of various diurnal birds of prey of the family Falconidæ, as the falcons, buzzards, kites, harriers, etc. (but not the eagles and vultures); esp., any of the short-winged birds of the genera Accipiter and Astur, as the European Hawfinch.

Cooper's Hawk (Accipiter cooperi).

sparrow-hawk and the goshawks; also, any of certain other birds, as the goatsucker, Caprimulgus europæus (see night-hawk); fig., a person who preys on others, as a sharper. —to know a hawk from a hand-saw. See under hand-saw. —hawk¹, v. i. To hunt with hawks trained to pursue game; also, to fly, or hunt on the wing, like a hawk.

hawk² (hák), v. i. or t. [Appar. < *hawker*².] To carry about or offer (wares) for sale in the manner of a hawker; peddle.

hawk³ (hák), v. [Imit.] I. intr. To make an effort to raise phlegm from the throat; clear the throat noisily.

II. tr. To raise (phlegm, etc.) from the throat by hawking. —hawk³, n. A noisy effort to clear the throat.

hawk⁴ (hák), n. [Origin uncertain.] A small board with a handle underneath, used by plasterers to hold mortar.

hawk-bill (hák'bíl), n. A sea-turtle, Chelone imbricata, having a mouth shaped like the bill of a hawk, and yielding tortoise-shell. —hawk'=billed, a. Having a mouth like a hawk's bill or beak.

Hawkbill.

hawk-er¹ (há'kér), n. One who hawks; a falconer.

hawk-er² (há'kér), n. [Cf. MLG. hoker, G. höker, D. heuker, retail dealer, also E. huckster.] One who offers goods for sale through the streets or country districts; a peddler.

hawk-eyed (hák'id), a. Having keen eyes, like those of a hawk.

hawk-ing (há'king), n. The practice or sport of hunting with trained hawks; falconry.

hawk-ish (há'kish), a. Resembling, characteristic of, or suggesting a hawk.

hawk-moth (hák'móth), n. A sphinx-moth: named from its flight, which resembles the hovering of a hawk.

hawk-nose (hák'nöz), n. A nose curved like the beak of a hawk. —hawk'=nosed, a.

hawk-par-rot (hák'par'ót), n. A South American short-tailed parrot, Derophtus accipitrinus (or coronatus), with a large erectile nuchal crest.

hawk's-beard (haks'bërd), n. Any of the herbs constituting the cichoriaceous genus Crepis, having yellow or orange flowers and a copious white pappus.

hawk's-bill (haks'bíl), n. Same as hawkbill.

hawk's-eye (haks'i), n. A dark-blue chatoyant stone formed like tiger's-eye by the alteration of crocidolite: used for ornamental purposes.

Hawk-parrot.

Hawk-shaw (hák'shá), n. [From Hawkshaw, a detective in Tom Taylor's play, "The Ticket-of-Leave Man" (1863).] [Also l. c.] A detective.

hawk-weed (hák'wëd), n. Any of the herbs with yellow, orange, or red flowers, constituting the cichoriaceous genus Hieracium; also, any of various related plants.

hawse¹ (hás), n. See hause.

hawse² (ház), n. [ME. halse, prob. from Scand.: cf. Icel. hals, part of ship's bow, front sheet of sail, orig. neck, = E. hause.] The part of a ship's bow having holes for the cables to pass through; hence, a hawse-hole; also, the space between a ship at anchor and her anchors; also, the situation of a ship's cables when she is moored with both bow anchors. —hawse'=hole, n. A hole in the bow of a ship, through which a cable is passed.

haw-ser (há'zér), n. [ME. haucer, hawser, < OF. haucier (F. hausser), raise, < L. altus, high.] Naut., a small cable or large rope used in warping, mooring, towing, etc. —haw'-ser-laid, a. Plain-laid; sometimes, cable-laid.

fat, fâte, fâr, fáll, ásk, fâre; net, mē, hēr; pin, pīne; not, nōte, mōve, nōr; up, lūte, pūll; oi, oil; ou, out; (lightened) aviāry, ēlect, agōny, intō. ūnite; (obscured) errānt, operā, arđent, actōr, natūre; ch, chip; ē, go; th, thin; th, then; y, you;

